Colonel arrives for maneuvers

By Frederick Klei
United Press International

The American commander for U.S.-Honduran military maneuvers has arrived in Tegucigalpa, a Honduran officer said Friday. In Guatemala, the government said a top guerrilla leader was killed, probably by another rebel faction.

Col. Arnie Schossberg, in charge of joint military maneuvers between Honduras and the United States, arrived in Tegucigalpa Thursday and was traveling Friday to Palmerola, where the maneuver headquarters will be, Honduran army Chief of Staff Col. Jose Abdenego Bueso Rosa said.

Bueso Rosa told UPI that "the maneuvers pose no threat to any country, but benefit the country that carries them out."

Ruling leftists in neighboring Nicaragua have charged the maneuvers could be a prelude to an invasion of their country.

The Tegucigalpa newspaper La Tribuna said that 740 U.S. troops had arrived in Honduras so far, and that the number will reach 3,000 by the end of August.

In Guatemala, the army announced that Commander Camilo, a top leader of the Guerrilla Army of the Poor, the largest rebel group, was shot to death Sunday in Guatemala City.

Police reported that he was shot seven times by gunmen in a passing car as he stepped out of an automobile.

A police communique said that another insurgent faction may have killed him, citing a letter found on his body.

"The breaking of the organization is a fact," said part of the letter, according to the police communique. It did not say if Camilo wrote the letter or received it.

Also in Guatemala, political parties set a meeting Friday to try and decide on a common front toward the new government.

Two previous meetings set for Wednesday and Thursday were canceled, fueling speculation of a split among the parties on how to view Gen. Oscar Humberto Mejia's regime, which took power in a coup Monday.

Salvadoran government warjets Friday made a rare raid near San Salvador, bombing a volcano just three miles northwest of the capital.

The bombing raid on the San Salvador volcano by U.S.-made A-37 "Dragonfly" warjets occurred between 5 a.m. and 5:30 a.m.

Military sources declined to comment on the nature of the raids, which were in apparent response to a detected movement of guerrillas on the volcano.

The army maintains units atop the peak to guard communications radio towers and other installations that could be targets of rebel sabotage.

In the eastern combat zone of San Vicente and Usulután provinces, military authorities reported three soldiers were killed and five wounded in the latest combat.

Both provinces are the scene of a government pacification program to drive guerrillas out and bring peasants back to the land they abandoned because of the violence.

In another development, U.S.

Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., left Nicaragua Friday where he exchanged harsh words with Sandinista leader Daniel Ortega over elections.

Wilson said Central American leaders "have no reasonable expectation of a lasting peace without open and honest elections in Nicaragua."

"We believe our internal problems are our business," Ortega said.

He said attacks by U.S.-funded rebels, the presence of U.S. warships off the Pacific coast of Central America and the announced sending of several thousand U.S. ground troops to neighboring Honduras for military maneuvers all threaten peace in the region.

Reagan calls Cuba a 'basket-case'

By Norman D. Sandler
United Press International

TAMPA, Fla. — President Reagan, courting Florida's Hispanic community, derided Fidel Castro's Cuba Friday as an "economic basket-case" where people have neither political freedom nor economic opportunity.

"The Cuban government sells its young men as Soviet cannon fodder in exchange for a massive subsidy without which it could not survive," Reagan said. "The only things abundant there today are slogans, weapons, repression and shortages."

Reagan's comments came in a speech prepared for delivery to Tampa's Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, dominated by Cubans who fled to Florida since Castro began his communist regime in 1959.

His stop at the bustling party city, the largest cigar manufacturer in the nation, was the first on a three-week trip at winning Hispanic support. Advisers see that support as crucial to winning a second term if Reagan decides to run for re-election in 1984.

Reagan defended his Central American policy, saying "too much politics has been played" on the issue, to the group before moving on to tough talk about communism under Castro.

"No better example exists than Cuba," Reagan said. "Under Castro's rule Cuba has become the economic basket-case of the hemisphere."

"The Cuban people have been betrayed," he said. "They have neither freedom nor material goods."

Reagan said U.S. involvement in Central America is a matter of security, and "those who suggest otherwise are courting disaster."

"A far away totalitarian power has set its sights on our friends and neighbors in Central America and the Caribbean. If we don't meet our responsibilities there we will pay dearly for it," the president said.

He said, contrary to his critics' claims, that the United States is balancing its military support with economic assistance.

"As far as I'm concerned, too much politics has been played with what should be our role in Central America," he said. "When it comes to keeping our country safe, there must be no Republicans and Democrats, just Americans."

From Florida, Reagan travels to El Paso, Texas, where he will spend two nights and address the GI Forum, a veterans organization whose membership is 90 percent Mexican-American.

He will fly to La Paz, Mexico, Sunday to talk with President Miguel de la Madrid about a number of issues, including Mexico's financial troubles and differences in the U.S. and Mexican approach to strife in Central America.

Reagan's trip will end in California, where he plans several days of vacation time at his Santa Barbara ranch. He will return to the White House on Labor Day after a stop in Miami.

Khaddafy denies Libya attacks Chad

NDJAMENA, Chad (UPI) —

Libyan bombers hammered the eastern oasis strongholds of Oum Chalouba and Kalait Friday and Chad's President Hissene Habre appealed to France and the United States to intervene in the fighting.

"The Libyan bombing has led to the occupation of the entire north of our country. We urgently appeal to our allies France and the United States to intervene directly to stop this Libyan aggression," Habre said.

In an interview the ABC-TV, Libyan leader Moammar Khaddafy denied his forces were involved in the Chad civil war.

"We are not interfering with Chad at all. We are sorry to see other parties like America and Zaire and so on profit in this civil war."

"We have no soldiers there, military action in the air or on the ground at all. Our borders are closed completely a long time with Chad ... We have nothing to do in this civil war," Khaddafy said.

Khaddafy called for a peaceful settlement in Chad to be arranged by the Organization of African Unity.

On Thursday President Reagan ruled out the possibility of U.S. military intervention, saying Chad was in France's sphere of influence.

Habre also called on the Organization of African Unity, meeting this weekend in Brazzaville, Congo, to stop "the Libyan aggression against Chad."

His office said Libyan planes bombed Oum Chalouba and Kalait and unconfirmed reports reaching the capital said Libyan aircraft also attacked the village of Koro Toro 350 miles north of Ndjamena Friday morning.

The town is the regrouping point for the retreating government garrison overrun at Faya-Largeau by rebel troops loyal to ex-President Goukouni Weddeye.

No details of the bombing were available immediately.

Earlier, Chad's Information Minister Soumaila Mahamat said government troops, who fled Faya-Largeau under nonstop aerial and artillery bombing, scored a victory at Oum-Chalouba earlier this week before the new bombardment started.

The government troops captured 600 Libyan and Chadian rebel troops at Oum-Chalouba and seized "important" military material, he said.

In Ndjamena, President Hissene Habre's cabinet held a day-long emergency meeting to plan strategy to regain control of northern Chad.

Teletrack scheme called unproven

NEW HAVEN (UPI) — Electronics experts warned races shown at Teletrack in New Haven may have been delayed in a betting scheme, but the state's gaming chief has downplayed the allegations, a published report said Friday.

The Journal-Courier of New Haven said consultants last November told A.W. Oppenheimer, executive director of the state Division of Special Revenue, that "illegal action is occurring" at the theater-like facility.

"No malfeasance has been in any way proved whatsoever," Oppenheimer said Thursday. "I don't think you can in any way quote him (a consultant) verbatim; if you do, you run a risk."

State police have been investigating Teletrack since August 1982 and spokesman Adam Berluti said Thursday the criminal investigation "is ongoing."

Investigators are reviewing the case to determine "whether they can apply for an arrest warrant or if they have sufficient evidence for an arrest," Berluti said.

But Oppenheimer said "I don't expect any arrests" as a result of the state police investigation of alleged "past-posting" schemes at Teletrack. He also referred to the consultant who wrote the report, Dr. Phillip J. Sleeman, as "a rather emphatic gentleman."

Sleeman, who has headed the University of Connecticut's Telecommunications Center for 10 years, was selected by Oppenheimer to run a check on Teletrack security.

Oppenheimer said Sleeman and the other consultant who compiled the November 1982 report, Dr. Farhad Saba, also a UConn professor, are now working to help install new security devices at Teletrack.

The state police probe involves allegations of delayed race showings at Teletrack in what is termed a "past-posting" scheme that would allow informed bettors to place sure wagers.

Races at New York race tracks are supposed to be telecast almost simultaneously at the state-licensed facility in New Haven. Delayed showings could allow bettors to learn results and place a bet before wagering was halted on the race at Teletrack.

William Drew, general manager of Teletrack, said the consultants made a mistake in their calculations and claimed the consultants used the wrong computer tapes to reach their findings.

'No progress' seen as nationwide phone strike drags on

By United Press International

Nearly 700,000 striking telephone workers stayed off the job for a sixth day Friday with no indication that serious negotiations with American Telephone and Telegraph Co. will resume until at least next week.

Sporadic incidents of vandalism and picket line violence were reported as company managers and supervisors filled in for the strikers. Consumers encountered delays on calls requiring the help of an operator.

"No progress," said AT&T spokesman Charles Dynes. "A long way to go."

The assessment was the same at the Washington headquarters of the Communications Workers of America, which represents 525,000 of the strikers.

"The sides are still as far apart as when the strike was called Saturday night and there has been no movement through the week," said union spokesman Duayne Trecker.

In Boston New England Telephone Co. officials and union leaders held their first formal talks on local contract issues Friday since the nationwide walkout of 700,000 workers began seven days ago, idling 40,000 employees in New England.

The six-hour bargaining session in Boston centered on "nuts and bolts' local contract issue including working conditions, in-company promotions, use of part-time workers and transfers, said Ron McDougall, business manager of Local 2222 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

"We didn't actually settle any issues but it was probably the best day of dialogue since local bargaining (before the strike)," said McDougall, whose union represents some 25,000 workers in New England.

Ed McGann, a negotiator for the Communications Workers of America, said the talks, which were to resume Tuesday, while not unproductive, were "not what I would call a fruitful session."

Telephone companies apologized in recorded messages for delays in operator assistance. A call to long-distance information for New York City was answered with this recording in a male voice:

"I'm sorry, but due to a work stoppage we are unable to give normal directory assistance service. If your call is urgent and you have no other way to get the number, please stay on the line and an operator will help you."

Scattered incidents of sabotage and violence were reported. In Portland, Maine, a striking New England Telephone Co. employee was charged with malicious mischief for allegedly jumping on the hood of a car driven by a company employee trying to maneuver through a picket line to go to work.

Authorities said Patrick Harmon, 36, smashed the car's windshield and damaged a rear window Thursday with a ball bat, but claimed he had been struck by the vehicle.

Southern Bell officials at Charlotte, N.C., said Friday 50 pay phones were vandalized by jamming coin slots or cutting telephone cords, but the company said it "has no reason to believe the incidents are related to the strike."

A federal mediator called into separate talks between the 50,000-member Telecommunications International Union and AT&T made further contacts Friday, but with no report of any breakthrough.

The Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service has not been asked by the two largest unions — the CWA and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, which represents about 100,000 Bell System workers — to enter their bargaining, but chief federal mediator Kay McMurray was in contact with officials for AT&T and the unions.

Contract talks on wages and fringe benefits remained stalled on the national level and were not expected to resume over the weekend, said NET spokesman Chuck Reardon.

12 — MANCHESTER HERALD, Friday, Aug. 12, 1983

PEOPLE PHIL ROURA - TOM POSTER EXCLUSIVE!

Eddie Fisher and Elizabeth Taylor, back when they were still on speaking terms.

Is Fisher, 54, a 'comeback kid'?

Can a 54-year-old former drug addict who used to be married to Debbie Reynolds, Elizabeth Taylor and Connie Stevens make a comeback? Eddie Fisher lost his voice during his 10 years on drugs and found it tough to get any work at all, but he has finally quit drugs and is battling for recognition.

"For 15 years I couldn't even get a song. Composers, musicians, recording companies, everybody looked the other way," said Fisher. "Something happened, though, and now people are discovering me again. I'm doing country and western songs, all new, but in my own style. I feel better now than I can remember when I used to be called the Coca-Cola kid, and now I guess I'm the comeback kid."

Fisher started in South Philadelphia when he was 14, and was an international star by the time he was 17. He is the only male singer to record the old German song, "Oh, My Papa," in English. "I don't know why no one else copied it, and I find it hard to believe that I'm the only one who did it."

His boyish looks may have been wiped away by drugs, but his sense of humor is intact. He doesn't push himself anymore, walks as he can, and tries not to pick fights with his ex-wives.

Of Debbie, he says, "She still has hostile feelings towards me, so we don't talk." Of Elizabeth: "I want to know why she barred me from her testimonial dinner. I wouldn't go if invited, but why bar me?" Of Connie: "We get along real well. But only since the divorce."

Fisher is, however, friendly with his four children, who have been raised by their mothers, Reynolds and Stevens. "I'm so proud of my kids, and with good reason. Carrie's a star in her own right, and Todd was just ordained a minister in California. With Carrie having 5 percent of the 'Star Wars' films and Todd a minister, I should worry!"

'Flashdance' star still with her old boyfriend

Super stardom hasn't spoiled Jennifer Beals, the unknown who skyrocketed to fame with her frenetic role in "Flashdance." Nothing will keep Jennifer from going back to college (Yale) next month. Nor, said a close friend of Jennifer's, will she give up her boyfriend, Yale classmate Robert Simonds.

Her sudden stardom has, however, made things a bit easier for Jennifer. She can splurge on shopping sprees, and her work hasn't required long separations from Simonds. When she was shipped off to Europe to promote her film in London, Paris and Copenhagen, Jennifer was permitted to bring along her boyfriend, and the movie producers picked up the tab. They'll return for a brief business stay in Los Angeles before heading off for another promotional tour of Japan.

Beals and Simonds will also get a chance to visit their home town of Chicago before they return to their studies in New Haven, Conn. By then, Vogue and Harper's Bazaar may be on the newsstands with Jennifer in her first role as a cover girl.

Just don't ever call Jesse James a horse thief

You could call him a bank robber, a train robber or even a killer. But Jesse James would never stand for being called a horse thief.

He was so angered by the allegation that he stole a man's horse that he wrote to the man who accused him to protest. The letter, written in Jesse's uneducated cursive, was recently auctioned off for $20,000.

The letter was written to a "Mr. Floyd" in Lexington, Mo. Mr. Floyd apparently accused Jesse of stealing a horse from the doctor who was treating James' mother. In his note, Jesse said he and his brother, Frank, despised horse thieves.

"There are no men in Mo. [Missouri] who horse horse thieves more than I do. If we were free men we would do all we could to put them down," he wrote.

In conclusion, James said, "If you value your life you better retract your slander."

I recently watched "The Sins of Dorian Gray" on TV. As I recall, the original movie was "Portrait of Dorian Gray," and the main character was a man... K.F. O'Neill, Neb.

You're absolutely right. That's the way they do things in T-V land. The movie, which came out in 1945, starred Hurd Hatfield. The television version, which was seen recently on ABC, starred Belinda Bauer.

Is Mickey Gilley married? What's his home state?—P.C., Rochester, Ind.

Gilley, who gained fame with Gilley's—his massive saloon in Pasadena, Texas, which was used in John Travolta's "Urban Cowboy"—is married and is the proud papa of two boys. Although he was born in Louisiana, Mickey and wife Vivian now live with their sons, Mike and Greg, in Pasadena. Incidentally, seems to run in Gilley's family. His cousin is Jerry Lee Lewis.

Who starred in the "Return of the Saint" on TV? Was it Ian Ogilvy or Tristan Rogers?—D.E., Perryopolis, Pa. It was Ian Ogilvy.

Robert Simonds and Jennifer Beals: Still the same

But neither acting nor modeling will keep Jennifer from starting her sophomore year in September when Simonds starts his junior year. His goal? To be a movie producer. Well, he already knows the right people.

Fetus develops hiccups in labor

NEW YORK (UPI) — A Los Angeles obstetrician reports that a fetus developed hiccups during labor and made medical history by having it all recorded electronically.

Birth was seven hours away when the fetus developed hiccups. Every time he went through a hiccup, his heart slowed down. This is believed to be the first time fetal hiccups were detected and recorded electronically, according to two doctors and two nurses reporting in Obstetrics & Gynecology, the journal of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists.

The fetus happened to be monitored at the time via a tiny electrode attached to his scalp. The medical team said the heart rate pattern observed in the hiccupping fetus may resemble that of fetal gasping.

If additional observations confirm this pattern is associated with fetal gasping, the doctors and nurses said it should enhance the ability to detect fetuses in trouble. "The ability to indirectly determine fetal gasping would likely prove to be of major importance," they said.

Dr. Frank C. Miller, Felipe Gonzalez and nurses Ernie Mueller and Dorothy McCurt, of the University School of Medicine, Los Angeles County-USC Medical Center said the hiccupping fetus was found as a nurse felt the baby move as he was being monitored.

The report said the nurse believed the movement was caused by hiccups and an examination by an ultrasound scanner, a device that probes the body with sound waves, confirmed the fetus was hiccupping. "During this time the fetal heart rate tracing reflected sharp, abrupt decelerations of a few seconds' duration that seemed to coincide with the fetal hiccup," the report said.

"The deceleration patterns began suddenly, occurring several times per minute. The hiccupping episodes gradually diminished in frequency over the next 18 minutes and were noted to occur infrequently later during labor."

Repossession car burns in holding lot
A 1978 Corvette reposessed from a Coventry man caught fire under suspicious circumstances at about 9:31 Friday night, according to Deputy Fire Chief William D. Griffin of the Town Fire Department.

The car, reposessed from Joel Greene of Coventry, burned under circumstances described by Griffin as potentially "malicious."

It was located in a holding pen behind the Carpet Center at 311 Main St.

Griffin said a section of the fence had been cut near the car. "It looked like somebody tried to get it out and maybe got frustrated and set it on fire," Griffin said.

He said it took about 10 minutes for firefighters to put out the blaze.

Consumer counsel says cable hike unjustified

By James P. Sacks
Herald Reporter

NEW BRITAIN — One of Connecticut's official consumer watchdogs said Friday that over five hours of cross-examination of the cable television company serving Manchester didn't convince her of its need for a 26-percent rate increase.

On the other hand, said Assistant Consumer Counsel Valerie Bryan at the close of a two-day Department of Public Utility Control public hearing, Cox Cable Greater Hartford Inc. deserves credit for "seeing the writing on the wall that they'd have to wire 100 percent of their franchise by 1984."

In an interview at the close of the proceeding, Ms. Bryan accused Cox executives of "seriously understating revenues" in their testimony.

As represented by Consumer Counsel Barry Gtzar earlier this week, representatives of Cox's Hartford-area subsidiary and its Atlanta-based parent corporation faced some rough questioning about company accounting practices at the second session of a two-day public hearing on a $1.6-million rate increase the company wants later this year. They were also asked by the consumer counsel about Cox's procedure for recording consumer complaints, its general quality of service, and its method of depreciating assets.

If approved, the rate hike would mean an increase for the 35,000 subscribers in six area towns who get Cox's basic 35-channel cable package from the $5.95 per month they are currently charged to $11.95. Cable outlets for a second TV requiring a converter would rise 90 cents from the current $2.50 charge, while those not needing converters would stay the same.

ON THE AVERAGE, the parent company's secretary said after studying his calculator for several minutes, the proposed rise in rates would increase the average consumer's actual monthly bill from $17.80 to 20.81. That's because, in addition to the basic cable package, most cable subscribers take premium services offered by Cox, which include Home Box Office and the Playboy Channel, among others.

In addition to the rate increase, Cox wants DPUC approval to begin charging $500 for non-returning converters on the assumption that they're stolen. Company representatives testified that a theft-of-service problem leads to high income losses and that the charge would serve as a deterrent to would-be thieves.

That charge, however, isn't likely to win the consumer counsel's backing. She said the policy amounts to assuming customers who are non-returning converters are generally going to turn over to collection agencies — are criminals.

Cox representatives responded to that by saying the police can't prove the theft under the present laws. Gov. William O'Neill recently vetoed a bill making it easier to prosecute the crime, they said.

After some contention, Cox agreed to produce a written policy as one of 20 late-filed exhibits confirming that customers whose converters are burned up in a fire or who can prove they were stolen will be charged the real replacement cost of the unit, which is often under $50. Robert McGill, who oversees all eight Cox systems in the Northeast, testified that Cox accepts such explanations already.

THE SPARSELY-attended hearing Friday was held at the DPUC offices in downtown New Britain. The hearing opened Thursday at Wethersfield Town Hall with testimony by Cox Vice President Sebastian J. Listro, who manages the Manchester-based Greater Hartford company, and several other company executives, including D. Neal Barrington, secretary for Cox Communications Inc. of Atlanta.

They were questioned by DPUC Accounts Examiner Gilbert J. Malone and Senior Examiner David S. Mallo. The hearing was monitored by hearing officer Margaret Girard, who must recommend to the DPUC commissioners whether or not to grant the increase. A decision is required on Cox's application, filed in May, by late September.

According to testimony by Barrington, Cox Communications owns 99.9 percent of Cox Cable Greater Hartford Inc. and operates seven other cable systems in the Northeast. Barrington said the rate-increase is needed because of a low rate of return on company assets.

But Ms. Bryan, who as a representative of the consumer counsel commonly acts as an intervenor in rate-increase hearings, said she's not ready to accept Cox Cable's statements of its debt-equity ratio. Nor is she willing to concede that the service provided by Cox in the public-access-area is good enough.

The consumer counsel's office has Cox's profits on equity figured at above 40 percent so far this year. Ms. Bryan said, and the company carried over 23 percent in 1982. Barrington said the 41.5 percent figure, when adjusted, is more like 14 percent. He said the company considers 23 percent a "fair return" on equity.

RESPONDING TO CHARGES made Thursday by a Wethersfield resident, George Odell, that Cox has failed to live up to its 1972 promise of 12 public-access channels and now only provides one, Regional Manager McGill said the system was consolidated as a result of microwave technology. While the original system called for three transmitting stations, each with two public access channels, the microwave system is more centralized, McGill said.

McGill said more channels would require a prohibitive investment by the company. He added that the one public-access channel provided isn't fully used. Odell had testified on Thursday that potential users were discouraged by the location of the studio in Manchester.

Cox has "more than faithfully lived up to its obligations to the state and to its subscribers," he said. "We were able to build a system that was state of the art and of significant benefit to all subscribers."

A company engineer said Cox has less than five miles left to wire in Manchester, Glastonbury, South Windsor, Rocky Hill, Wethersfield, and Newington.

Manchester In Brief

Swimming pools much used

Manchester's public swimming pools have been feeling the heat so far this summer, along with the rest of the town's residents. According to Recreation Director Robert S. Thomason, combined attendance at all five town pools is up by almost 40,000 swimmers for the first two months of the summer compared to last summer.

The total number of swimmers for the period this year was 92,409, up 37,793 from last year's 54,616.

Globe Hollow drew over 30,000 swimmers in July, topping the Recreation Department's two-month tally. The pool drew 44,865 swimmers during June and July.

Following were Saugerties with 12,365; Verplanck with 12,084; Waddell with 11,610; and Swanson with 11,484.

Murphy to be honored

At the same time the Horace F. Murphy Skating and Recreation Area is dedicated in Center Springs Park Aug. 23, Murphy himself will be named Superintendent Emeritus of Parks and Recreation.

The ceremony will be held at the park Aug. 23, beginning at 4 p.m., according to a recent news release by town General Manager Robert B. Weiss.

A resolution adopted by the Board of Directors in July notes that Murphy provided "exemplary and devoted service to the citizens of the Town of Manchester for thirty-nine years to make Manchester a better and more attractive place to live."

According to the resolution, Murphy, who served as parks superintendent from 1928 until 1964 and was named Manchester's first superintendent of parks and recreation in 1964, "conceived and developed many of the excellent park facilities" in Manchester.

Murphy, a native of Manchester, served for a time as acting general manager and is a retired Lieutenant Colonel in the Connecticut National Guard.

Man who fell still critical

Herman Reed, 55, a construction worker who fell off the Buckland Street bridge over Interstate 86 Friday morning, was still in critical condition Friday night, according to a Hartford Hospital spokesman.

Reed, a Windham resident employed by the Burnall Construction Co. of Southington, fell 25 feet from the bridge and struck his head on a steel rod or on the abutment itself.

The accident occurred at around 9:30 Friday morning and Reed was saved by quick action by the Manchester Paramedics squad, according to EMS Coordinator James Clark. Police and the Eighth District Fire Department also went to the scene.

Reed was on top of a bridge abutment helping two other workers unload a bucket of concrete when he broke through a wooden barrier and struck his head.

Town teenager charged in burglaries

A Manchester teenager was charged Thursday with seven counts of third degree burglary, four counts of sixth degree larceny and one count of fifth degree larceny in connection with a rash of recent burglaries in the Adams Street area, police said Friday.

Police first arrested William Peterson July 12, following a burglary that day at Acu-Tek Inc., 259 Adams St., police said. Williams later confessed to the break-in at Acu-Tek as well as several earlier break-ins in the neighborhood, including two at Manchester Sand & Gravel Co., 60 Adams St., police said.

Police charged Peterson in the July 12 incident with second degree criminal mischief, attempted sixth degree larceny and two counts of third degree burglary.

Warrants charging Peterson in a total of six burglaries were served Friday in Manchester Superior Court, where Peterson was already scheduled to appear on charges lodged in the Acu-Tek incident.

Police said Peterson, 17, told them he had been living in a shed behind his brother-in-law's house at 131 St. John's St., within walking distance of the six places he is accused of breaking into.

In the shed police found various items identified as belonging to some of the victims, according to police reports, including silverware from an Adams Street antique shop and a wallet apparently taken from the home of Robert Benito of 32 Deerfield St. Peterson is also charged in connection with a break-in at 259 Adams St., the offices of RTG, Inc.

Benito reported a burglary at his house on July 1, police said.

Following the first Adams Street break-in, a young man fitting Peterson's description came to the Savings Bank of Manchester with a key marked "coin collection" and tried to gain access to a safe-deposit box held in the name of a Manchester Sand & Gravel employee, police said. Bank employees refused to grant him access and notified police, according to the report.

Peterson is accused of taking empty soft-drink cans and $1.80 in change from Manchester Sand & Gravel in two break-ins in May and June. He apparently entered the office each time through an unlocked window, police said.

Peterson was held at Hartford State Jail in lieu of a $17,000 bond. His case was continued to next Thursday.

A Manchester man turned himself in to the police Thursday after they found five plants that they suspect were marijuana growing inside his Sycamore Lane house, police said Friday.

Armed with a search warrant, six officers entered the vacant house at 111-C Sycamore Lane, home of Francis Helfrich, chairman of the board of directors of Crossroads, according to the police report. A field test to determine whether the plants were marijuana yielded positive results, police said.

Police left a copy of the warrant at the house when they left the scene, they said. Apparently Helfrich found the warrant when he returned home and called police headquarters.

The plants were sent on to the state toxicology lab for further tests, according to police.

Colley was charged with cultivating marijuana and possession of drug paraphernalia and released on a $2,500 non-surety bond. He was ordered to appear in Manchester Superior Court Monday.

Crossroads gives town painting

A painting by five youths conceived in the Crossroads youth counseling center was unveiled in brief ceremonies Friday in Lincoln Center. It hangs in the prominent position of the place at the north end of the first floor corridor.

Mayor Stephen T. Penny and Dr. Francis Helfrich, chairman of the board of directors of Crossroads, conducted the ceremony.

When they pulled away the veil they revealed a large abstract work done in a conscious effort to suggest Jackson Pollock.

The artists are William Turrell, Kevin Volaine, Robert Grover, Tony Colon, and Kim Pascarelli.

The painting was one of several done under a grant designed to encourage work in behalf of the community and to stimulate youths to work together toward a joint goal.

Street building that was formerly the House and Hale store.

General Manager Robert B. Weiss said at the ceremony that the prominent position of the painting in the annex of town hall indicates the esteem in which the town holds the Crossroads program, a counseling program for youths.

Lynn Haberern, administrative and educational coordinator for Crossroads, said that the artists had become disaffected with their work at one point. They covered it with white latex paint and began again on what was to become the final version.

Dr. Helfrich said the name of the building, Lincoln Center, indicates an interest in the arts.

He referred to New York City's Lincoln Center and said that aside from the United Nations, it brings more money into New York City than any other complex.

He said art is a wonderful way to express feelings, including hope and endurance. He said that the artists had become disaffected with their work at one point. They covered it with white latex paint and began again on what was to become the final version.

Northeast seeks another $6.2 million

By Dennis Milewski

HARTFORD — Northeast Utilities sought an additional $6.2 million from customers Friday to cover higher state corporate taxes, bringing its entire rate hike request for next year to $167.4 million. The state's largest utility filed revisions to its rate application with the state Department of Public Utility Control, which is scheduled to hold hearings on the request in September and in December when the new rates would go into effect.

Soldiers fire into homes

Violent protests worry Chile's junta

By Daniel Drosodoff
UPI Senior Editor

SANTIAGO, Chile — Chile's military regime, rocked by four months of protests that left 25 people dead, met in emergency session Friday to quell rising opposition.

In special session in June, the Legislature approved a hike in the Connecticut corporation business tax from 10 percent to 11.5 percent and made the change retroactive to Jan. 1.

Chief opposition leader Gabriel Valdes accused the regime of President Gen. Augusto Pinochet of using unnecessary force with soldiers firing into homes on Thursday — the most violent national protest day yet against military rule.

Eight people were killed in the previous three anti-government protests — one in each of the previous three months. Another 128 were reported arrested and 42 people were wounded, he said.

As the protests quieted Friday morning, Pinochet met with his newly appointed interior minister, Sergio Onofre Jarpa, who is charged with opening a dialogue with opposition politicians and Maj. Gen. Osvaldo Hernandez Pederos, chief of the State of Emergency zone.

Hernandez said security forces shot only in self-defense, when they were "violently attacked by subversives."

But Valdes, leader of the Christian Democratic Party — Chile's largest political organization, blamed the Pinochet government for deploying "an unnecessary and unusual amount of soldiers," some of whom, he said, "were shooting at people inside their homes."

He said Pinochet, who will celebrate his 10th anniversary in power on Sept. 11, mobilized the army Thursday to enforce a dusk-to-dawn curfew because "he realized that he only has the support in the army. He wanted to show he is firm because he lacks public support."

Pinochet personally gave the 18,000 troops in the city "get tough" orders as the protest began Thursday.

Heavy machine gun and automatic rifle fire erupted throughout the city as soldiers with orders to shoot curfew violators on sight tried to enforce a dusk-to-dawn curfew.

In some areas protesters set fire to street barricades. But most anti-Pinochet protesters remained peaceful, banging for hours on pots and pans as called for by opposition political parties.

On the political front, Jarpa — appointed only two days — for the first time opened the possibility that Chile might set up a congress before 1988, the date taxes, since "you can have retroactive taxes, but you can't have retroactive collections from customers."

"We are living in such volatile times that the cost picture changes each year," he said.

The rate request for expenses in 1984 breaks down to $159.9 million, or a 12.6 percent hike, from electric customers, up from the original $154.3 million.

Northeast is seeking an additional $7.5 million from gas customers, or 3.3 percent, instead of the original $6.9 million request.

"They will be going over this (request) with a fine-tooth comb over the next several months. But I hope it's very clear that this is not something just added to this rate request," Forde said.

Northeast serves more than 150 of Connecticut's 169 towns and is among the top 10 taxpayers in each community, Forde said. The utility pays more than $150 million each year in local and state taxes, he said.

missing relatives. Human rights organizations say 750 persons have disappeared in 10 years of military rule.

previously announced.

Jarpa told reporters Thursday, however, that the notion that Pinochet himself would step down before the end of his 18-year term, provided by a constitution adopted in 1980, was a "fantasy."

Connecticut In Brief

Dog deaths anger town

THOMPSON — The discovery of the mutilated carcasses of five dogs has shocked and saddened residents of the small rural town in northeastern Connecticut.

"We are getting a lot of calls from animal lovers who are indignant about what has happened. We are also getting calls from people who are frightened something like this could have happened in their neighborhood," First Selectwoman Ruth Barker said Friday.

"We are all offended by the idea that people would torture and injure innocent animals," she said.

The carcasses of the five dogs — including one found bound, gagged and hanging from a tree — were discovered Monday in a large open field off Messier Road by a crew of youths clearing a 70-acre parcel of land owned by the town as part of a federally funded summer jobs program.

Dog Warden Albert Fougere said it was the worst case of animal abuse he has seen in his seven years as dog warden. Fougere said the scene was grim.

The worst sight by far was the remains of a 90-pound half husky and German shepherd dog found hanging from a tree with a cloth stuffed in his mouth, his throat slit. Other signs of torture also were apparent.

Fougere said the dog had apparently been killed Friday night or Saturday. Nearby another dog's skeleton hung from a low branch. Scattered throughout the area were the bones of at least three more dogs. Those remains were taken to the University of Connecticut for autopsy.

Nadolny pens cartoons

HARTFORD — A Catholic priest with a penchant for raising money for the poor is using cartoons to convince people who shun attending church that Scripture can be a modern weapon against drug abuse and nuclear war.

The Rev. Edmund S. Nadolny, director of the Office of Radio & Television for the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Hartford, has begun peddling "Scriptures" to newspapers around the state.

His "good news" messages also will be heard on 1,000 radio stations throughout the nation on a major network, which has agreed to air the spots as a public service.

"The church, in the eyes of people today, is really obsolete," Nadolny said Thursday. "People don't need the church. They need God, but not the church. They don't have a need for community worship anymore. We're trying to show the Bible still applies to contemporary life."

The flamboyant priest is best known for his fundraising ventures to help the poor, minorities and the church. One scheme involved loaning $20,000 to complete strangers. When nobody paid back the money, Nadolny took in $60,000 from sympathetic supporters.

Exhaust overcomes nine

CANTON — Police say seven children and two adults were treated and released for carbon monoxide poisoning after they were overcome while riding in an 11-year-old vehicle apparently equipped with a faulty muffler.

The 1972 station wagon, heavily loaded with luggage, passed the state vehicle emission testing program in April, police said.

The vehicle's driver, Barbara A. Hicks, 30, of Torrington, collapsed at a Canton gasoline station, leading police to check the eight passengers inside the vehicle, all apparently suffering from carbon monoxide poisoning.

Police were called to the station on Route 44 about 9 p.m. when Mrs. Hicks walked from her car to the station attendant to pay for gasoline and collapsed. She was given oxygen by police and initially wanted to continue on her way, police said.

But police officer Lowell Humphrey examined the car and found eight other passengers inside, all appearing to suffer from carbon monoxide poisoning. He said two of the seven children were unresponsive and appeared to be in convulsions.

Complaint filed vs. O'Neill
HARTFORD — A formal complaint was filed Friday with the state Freedom of Information Commission over Gov. William O'Neill's refusal to make public a preliminary state police report on the Milvus River bridge collapse.

John W. Reed of the Associated Press filed the complaint shortly after 4 p.m., said Karen Haggert, a commission spokeswoman.

"We believe the FOI compels the governors office, which ordered the investigation and report, to make the report available to the public. Because of the nature of the report we respectfully ask the commission to expedite consideration of this complaint," said Ms. Haggert, quoting the complaint.

She said it would be reviewed by a commission attorney and if applicable, the governor's office and the complainant would be notified of a hearing.

Ms. Haggert said the complaint may be the first of several. "We've gotten quite a few calls on this," she said.

The report was submitted to the governor Tuesday by state police investigating the collapse of a 100-foot section of Connecticut Turnpike bridge in Greenwich which killed three people.

Parker claims backing

HARTFORD — State Treasurer Henry Parker said Friday the National Association of State Treasurers supported his resolution on companies doing business in South Africa.

The resolution urged those companies to sign the Sullivan Principles, a set of standards drafted by Philadelphia minister Leon Sullivan, calling for equality in hiring, equal pay for equal work, integrated plant facilities and black labor organizations.

Parker said the association's endorsement this week "represented the first statement by a major organization responsible for public investments that there should be a yardstick for corporate social conduct in South Africa."

OPINION

Too much help can be crippling

By William A. Rusher
Syndicated Columnist

NEW YORK — Perhaps the most difficult single problem for conservatives, in the ongoing national dialogue over social policy, is to convince their liberal opponents that conservatives are not just a teensy bit colorblind about the plight of the poor. The liberal knows very well that he himself cares deeply; if a conservative disagrees with his proposals for assistance, therefore, doesn't it follow as the night the day that the conservative doesn't care—at least, not so deeply?

No, it doesn't. There is at least one other possibility: The conservative may sincerely believe that the liberal's plans for aiding the poor will actually make the plight of the poor substantially worse, rather than better. An illustration of this, so dramatic as to be downright shattering, has just come to hand.

THE CENTER for the Study

In 1960, the median income of American blacks was only 55 percent that of American whites. In 1981, it was — 56 percent. Or, in other words, for all practical purposes, unchanged.

Let us remember that improving the economic status of America's black citizens has had a high priority among our national goals for many years, and that with Lyndon Johnson (under the name of the War on Poverty) it became our No. 1 priority.

During and after the Johnson administration, welfare expenditures of all sorts replaced defense as the largest single items in the federal budget. To be sure, the focus was on poverty wherever it occurred; but poverty was proportionately far commoner among blacks than whites, and welfare assistance became an imposing factor in the budgets of millions of black families.

By Raymond J. Donovan

The United States faces an unprecedented challenge from our foreign competitors in the world marketplace. From autos and steel to shoes and appliances, American-made goods are being pushed aside by exports from other countries that have gained an edge on our industrial efficiency and product quality.

Failure to meet this competition has caused a decline in our manufacturing base and many lost jobs for American workers. More losses will occur if we fail to make dramatic shifts in the way we address productivity issues in the workplace.

To realize the full advantage of the economic recovery now under way and keep in step with changing social and economic realities, we must do away with outdated and wasteful practices.

Offshoot from Abscam

WASHINGTON — Penthouse magazine publisher Bob Guccione is preparing to file a multimillion-dollar lawsuit against ABCAM "sting man" Mel Weinberg and several FBI agents for what he says was a concerted effort to destroy him financially after he refused their repeated efforts to lure him into criminal activities.

Guccione decided to take his case to court after a Senate select committee on FBI misconduct in ABCAM concluded that Guccione was "targeted" by Weinberg and "became a victim of undue interference in his business associations, unjustified manipulations of his business prospects" after he "resisted all inducements and pressures to engage in criminal activity."

Guccione told his associate Indy Badwar: "I'm looking for a lawyer like Edward Bennett Williams to file my lawsuit. The government — the FBI — targeted me and deliberately damaged me. I draw no distinctions between Weinberg and the FBI. Weinberg was the FBI's man. He was on the FBI's payroll."

WEINBERG was the "scout" who brought politicians to a fictitious Arab sheik who offered to buy their influence. Eighteen persons, including seven members of Congress, were convicted in the ABCAM operation.

Here's what happened to Guccione, as pieced together from newspaper files and interviews with the publisher and his executive vice president, David Myerson: In 1978, Guccione bought property in Atlantic City to put up a hotel-casino. In 1979, Weinberg and FBI agents, posing as representatives of "Abdul Enterprises" — the phony sheik's investment company — contacted Guccione and discussed financing the Atlantic City project and helping him obtain a casino gambling license.

Promised $100 million from Abdul Enterprises, Guccione began pouring money into the casino. He invested more than $70 million of his own funds between 1978 and 1980.

"WE HAD NO reason to believe that Abdul was not a real company," Myerson said. "Because of the financial bait they kept dangling before us, we were forced to put in more and more of our own money in anticipation of their investment. They precluded us from turning to other, legitimate financial institutions."

According to the Senate report, "Weinberg expressly conditioned approval of a loan upon Guccione's agreement to include in criminal activity... (and) continued to insist that Guccione agree to participate in bribery ever after Guccione explicitly rejected the suggestion."

NBC News revamps programming for the fall season

By Julianne Hostinos

NEW YORK — NBC News is revamping its programming from sunrise to sunset, changing names, juggling programs and even redefining a net, in an all-out assault on some problems that NBC chief Grant Tinker says go back a long way.

Yes, the news magazine "Monitor" with Lloyd Dobyns will be around next season. NBC News likes it so well it's putting it right up against CBS' ever-popular "60 Minutes" at 7 p.m. ET Sundays.

Edwin J. Griswold
Edwin J. Griswold, 77, of 71 Crestwood Drive, Manchester, died Friday at Manchester Memorial Hospital. He was the husband of the late Evelyn Hoyle Griswold. He was born in Chicopee, Mass., on July 9, 1906, and had lived in Springfield, Mass., before moving to Manchester in 1940. Before retiring in 1968, he was a general foreman with Pratt & Whitney, East Hartford, and had been with the company for 23 years. He was a member of the South United Methodist Church. He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Robert (Jean) Walker of Longmeadow, Mass.; a brother, Myron Griswold of Greenfield, Mass.; three grandchildren, and a great-granddaughter. Funeral services will be Monday at 11 a.m. at the Holmes Funeral Home, 400 Main St., Manchester. Burial will be in Hillcrest Park Cemetery, Springfield, Mass. Friends may call at the funeral home Sunday from 2 to 4 and 6 to 8 p.m. Memorial contributions may be made to the American Heart Association, 310 Collins St., Hartford 06105.

Erwin Beyer
Erwin Beyer of 133 E. Center St., Manchester, died Friday at Manchester Memorial Hospital. He was the husband of Eleanor White Beyer. He was born in Germany and had lived in Manchester for 45 years. Before retiring he was employed with United Technologies Corp., East Hartford, for many years. Besides his wife, he is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Thomas (Doris) Tedford of East Hartford, three grandsons, and a brother and several nieces and nephews in Germany. Private funeral services and burial will be held at the convenience of the family. There are no calling hours. Memorial donations may be made to the charity of the donor's choice. The Holmes Funeral Home, 400 Main St., Manchester, is in charge of arrangements.

Soviet teen's runaway sparks diplomatic furor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Soviet teenager's decision to run away from his diplomat father's Washington-area home and letters stating his desire to remain in America Friday touched off a high-level diplomatic tug-of-war. The State Department said it is insisting that U.S. authorities have an opportunity to interview the boy, said to be back in Washington with his parents, before he leaves country. A State Department spokesman said that Secretary of State George Shultz was personally involved and stayed late at the State Department Thursday night working on the case. The White House confirmed that a letter from the boy had been received and that the President was aware of it. The story began Wednesday when the Soviet embassy notified local police that the Andrei Berezkov, 16, and his father's car were missing, and an all-points bulletin was issued. The State Department at that point treated the incident as a routine police matter. Berezkov is the son of Soviet diplomat Valentin Berezkov, 67, a first secretary at the embassy and career diplomat. Thursday, it became known that The New York Times and the White House had received letters in which "Andy Berezkov" announced that he hated the Soviet Union and its rules and wanted to stay in the United States because "I love your country." When the State Department became aware of two letters the routine police matter became an incident between the major powers. The letter to the Times, signed "Andy Berezkov," began, "I'm a Soviet kid. My father works at the Soviet embassy. He is the 1st secretary."

Dear Mr. News
I'm a Russian and my father works at the Soviet Embassy. He is the 1st secretary and he is a very good man. I want to stay here because I love your country and it's rules and I want to stay here. I hope he will help me. I hope you understand me. We can't say anything about my country in school and anything when our country is having you are a free press. I hope you will help me. You'll help me too.
Thanks for reading my letter.
Andy Berezkov

The text of a letter Andrei Berezkov allegedly wrote to the New York Times.

"and it looks like a provocation to us." A U.S. spokesman said: "We want to talk with him. We presume he wrote the letters. If there is a question that the letters are forgeries that's a good reason to talk to him." By Friday afternoon the interview between the Soviet teenager and U.S. authorities had not been arranged. But State Department spokesman John Hughes said, "We continue to insist that he doesn't depart prior to an interview."

Spanish sailors, state man saved by Coast Guard

BOSTON (UPI) — In two separate operations, Coast Guard officials Friday pulled 20 Spanish sailors from life rafts after their trawler ran aground and rescued a vacationing Connecticut man whose boat sank, forcing him to cling to a seat cushion for 12 hours. Coast Guard spokesman Craig Wellman said the sailors were rescued from life rafts after their fishing trawler, the 123-foot Spanish trawler, the Tearte, ran aground between Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket shortly before midnight. No one was injured and the Coast Guard was investigating why the vessel ran aground. Cosgrove had taken a 12-foot aluminum skiff out early Thursday into Cape Cod Bay for a solo-fishing trip, but suffered engine trouble. When seas got rough the boat sank, forcing him to cling to a cushion seat until he was rescued about 4 miles northeast of Cape Cod Canal. "His body temperature was low from the exposure but he's a healthy meal now — his first in more than 24 hours," said a spokeswoman at Falmouth Hospital, where Cosgrove was treated. "He told us after he had the engine trouble he dropped anchor because the tide was going out and he wanted to wait to take the tide when it came back. But then seas got rough and he got stuck in the boat so he tried to cling to the boat but it went down and he instead just clung to the life preserver." "He said he never gave up hope, and was yelling for help and crossing his arms for warmth. He's quite hoarse."

Reagan gets high marks
HARTFORD (UPI) — President Reagan gets good marks from Connecticut residents for his handling of the economy and generally is in a good position to mount another campaign should he seek reelection, a new poll shows. "Since last summer, the public feels there has been good deal of progress," said G. Donald Ferree Jr., director of the Center for Social Inquiry at the University of Connecticut. "President Reagan's ratings for handling the economy are not only higher than they were (a year ago), but also match his general job performance rating," he said. Forty-nine percent of the 500 people surveyed at random rated Reagan as excellent or good in handling economic problems, compared with 22 percent in a similar poll conducted a year ago. Only 17 percent gave Reagan a poor rating, a sharp decline from 37 percent a year ago.

Love after 50

It's not without tangles. But it's worth it, couples say.

"You have someone to go places with. And at weddings, you have the old myth." This is the widespread belief that the elderly are too set in their ways to adjust to anything new, such as a new wife or husband. This is a lifelong personality trait, not a condition of aging, she says. "You don't have problems unless you look for them," says Mrs. Feeney. She says both she and her husband try not to dwell on problems. Mrs. Tedford says she and her husband had to make some minor adjustments but not many. She says the old myth really didn't apply to them. "We felt like we've been married all our lives," she says. Mrs. Feeney contends that older people are less anxious and more open and flexible than the young. That's because they're more experienced. Mrs. DuPont agrees. "Marriage is easier when you are older. You become more patient and less hasty in making decisions," she says. Felix Davis, the director of Manchester's Pastoral Counseling Center, says marrying in later years can lead to problems. "Lifelong habits might get in the way," he says. Lifelong habits — overdrinking the checking account, playing the television during dinner, nail biting — can become a source of irritation when a couple marry late in life. There can be other problems, too.

AT A TIME when most married couples feel the security of those early years of marriage behind them, the Feeneys and the DuPonts and others are just starting out. Their success, however, at meeting someone late in life is testimony to the fact that love is ageless. Ask Betty Heiss. She has her master's degree in social work and a private counseling practice in Storrs. She says that people in their 50s, 60s and 70s marry for the same reasons that any 20- or 30-year-old would — namely for love, companionship and security. Mrs. Feeney divorced her first husband after 15 years of marriage. "Marrying Francis just felt like the natural thing to do," she says. Feeney was married for 41 years. "I had to marry her," he replies jokingly. "All our dating was costing me too much money."

Mrs. DuPont, a widow, says when she met her future husband, things just clicked. "We knew marriage was right for us," she says. "People are happier when married because they don't feel alone, she says. "You have someone to go places with. And at weddings, you have a partner to dance with instead of waiting indefinitely to be asked," she says. She says their marriage even inspired some of their widowed friends to marry. "I would recommend marriage to any person who was living alone," she says. Clifford and Marietta Hammond of 53 Perkins St. are another couple who remarried at the age of 70 after years of widowhood. Mrs. Hammond says they had planned to be just friends until the ice storm of 1973 separated them for a couple days. "During that time, she worried about his gas stove blowing up, and he worried about her freeing to death. They realized then how much they cared for one another and decided to marry."

Widower Harold Tedford, 68, and a former Manchester resident for 54 years, says he's known his future second wife, Rose, 64, since 1931. Tedford says his first marriage was a successful one. "When you have a good first marriage and then become widowed, you are anxious to remarry," he says. Perhaps Barbara Gallatin Anderson, an authority on the subject, sums it up best in her book "The Aging Game." (McGraw Hill, 1979) "The years after 60 are not a time to be alone, especially if a man or woman has little practice at it. Isolation, too, easily finishes the dehumanizing action society has already begun," she writes.

MRS. HEISS EAGERLY debunks what she calls

Sister Elizabeth Delree, director of St. Joseph College's gerontology program for the past eight years, says family problems can follow a late marriage. Children, she says, can be a problem. Although all the couples interviewed found family and children supportive of their marriages, Sister Elizabeth warns that the issue of inheritance can trigger some unexpected bitterness. She gives an example. Daughters, she says, who may have been anticipating ownership of their mother's belongings such as jewelry, may find competition from their new stepmother. TO AVOID such hassles, Sister Elizabeth says couples often seek legal advice. The couples interviewed had the foresight to do just that. Both husbands and wives made separate wills, keeping possessions acquired by their first families in that family. Distribution of items purchased during the second marriage are the couple's responsibility. Mrs. Hammond says she and her husband wanted to start fresh and sold most of their possessions to antique dealers or gave them to their own children. This was 10 years ago, she says, and today they can relax, knowing that all this is behind them. The limited income of a couple in their later years, and on Social Security can be another disadvantage. Sister Elizabeth says many couples, to keep both Social Security checks, will decide to live together rather than marry.

YES, THERE ARE positive sides to marrying late. There are no young children to raise, for instance. Mrs. Tedford says when you marry late, you are more settled. There are no children, no mortgage bills to pay, and the couple has retired, no job or time pressures. "As far as I'm concerned, there are no drawbacks," she says. And, though the topic is a delicate one, those who marry late can still enjoy an active sex life. Mrs. Heiss

Airline workers on strike

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The union representing 2,000 Continental Airlines mechanics and other workers said Friday that contract talks with the airline had failed and announced the union would go on strike at 12:01 a.m. EDT Saturday. Jim Conley, communications director for the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, announced at 8 p.m. EDT that talks with the Texas-based airline had broken down and the strike called. The company made what they said was their final offer. "We're sorry," Conley said. "It wasn't even as good as the last offer," Conley said. Bruce Hicks, spokesman for Continental at its Houston headquarters, insisted negotiations were continuing.

Honda gets 172 m.p.g.

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. — You won't find Jim Sawyer's 172 mile-per-gallon experimental car in any showroom and he is not about to disclose the secret of his auto's outstanding fuel economy. Sawyer's converted 1972 Honda 400, shown to reporters Thursday, is the result of 10 years of work that began in the midst of the energy crisis of the early 1970s. The 1-year-old engineer said he has spent over $100,000 on the project. The key to the high mileage figures are the car's aerodynamic qualities, which were developed from his experience as an aircraft designer. The auto has a drag coefficient — the chief measure of aerodynamics — of .26. The typical American car has a drag coefficient of around .30 or more.

The resulting car, at first glance is reminiscent of the "future cars" designers came up with in the 1950s. It has a rounded, sloping nose, curved back and what looks like fins protruding from the rear end. Results from the FBI lab in Washington, D.C. — the police spokesman said. He said police also were studying items seized from Wells' car, which included a variety of cocaine paraphernalia.

Convicted killer released

HOUSTON (UPI) — A man convicted of attempted murder of his comatose father was sentenced Friday to 30 days in jail but was freed three hours later by an appeals court that will decide whether the jail term is valid.

Billy Ray Clure, 26, accompanied by his mother, brother and two sisters, reported to Harris County Jail to start serving his sentence but was freed by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, which will decide whether a lower court judge had the authority to sentence him to jail. State District Judge Ted Poe imposed the jail term earlier Friday and also ordered Clure to donate 25 hours a month to picking weeds and removing trash from a Harris County pauper cemetery. A judge sentenced him to three years probation last month.

Clure was convicted last month of attempted murder of his father, Robert, 63, while he was in a nursing home bed. The father had been in a coma for four months and suffered from kidney and heart disease. He died two weeks after the shooting and a medical expert said his death was not caused by gunshot wounds.

Nearly 800 Poles freed

WARSAW, Poland — Nearly 800 people — half of them Polish — have been pardoned and released from prison some two-thirds of the way through a scheduled 30-day amnesty period, the Justice Ministry said Friday. The amnesty, which began in the midst of the energy crisis of the early 1970s. The 1-year-old engineer said he has spent over $100,000 on the project. The key to the high mileage figures are the car's aerodynamic qualities, which were developed from his experience as an aircraft designer. The auto has a drag coefficient — the chief measure of aerodynamics — of .26. The typical American car has a drag coefficient of around .30 or more.

Most of those who turned themselves in were motivated by a wish to return to normal life, convinced by the hopelessness of their roles underground amid evident signs of progress towards stability in the country, PAP said.

Preparing the evidence

Anthony LoGrasso prepares Friday for critical guests from Hartford Superior Court at his pizzeria, Tony's Cuisine, in the K-Mart Shopping Plaza. Tony was miffed a week ago to learn that the court workers had 'superior' pizza delivered from Chicago and challenged them to try his. The workers' verdict: Tony wins.

Police silent on cocaine angle

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — Police Friday said they had no additional evidence to proceed into the shotgun slaying of Sidney Wells, boyfriend of actor Robert Redford's daughter, despite allegations the victim was a cocaine dealer. Detectives refused comment if their investigation was centered on medical reports that trace of the narcotic were found in the body of Wells, 22, who was found shot to death Aug. 1 at his luxurious condominium near the University of Colorado where he was a student. Miss Shauna Redford, whom Wells dated the past three years, lived one floor below that of Wells. David Grimm, Boulder police spokesman, also refused to say whether Thayne Smika, 24, a roommate of Wells, was a suspect in the case. Detectives seized a "freshly cleaned" shotgun from Smika's home in Akron, Colo. Tests have indicated that the weapon used to kill Wells was a 20-gauge shotgun. "We have asked Mr. Smika to make himself available to the continuing investigation, to stay in touch," Grimm said. "He is free to do what he wants." "We simply don't have enough evidence in the case to proceed further," he said. Boulder County Coroner Ronald Ahlberg said Thursday "Cocaine was found in the body. It's hard to say how much was present or how long it had been in there." He said the county's pathologist was expected to obtain additional information from laboratory tests Friday. Smika has contended Wells was a marijuana dealer. Grimm said drugs "may be one of the avenues we are investigating. It'd be unfair to say that this is a drug case if it's only one of those avenues we're exploring." Grimm said the shotgun, which had been recently cleaned and oiled, was recovered two days after Wells' death at the home of Smika's mother. Police seized the weapon after Mrs. Smika contacted investigators and gave them consent to search the house. "We're awaiting test

Court puts end to pot luck for prisoners
LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The former paint shop foreman at the Terminal Island Federal Prison has been accused of smuggling marijuana to prisoners.

Donald Carllock was indicted Thursday by a federal grand jury on charges of conspiracy and introducing contraband into a prison. The indictment charged he offered to sell marijuana to inmates for $60 an ounce.

FBI agents investigating corruption at the prison said Carllock smuggled the marijuana into the shop and distributed it to inmates who sold it to fellow prisoners. Carllock was also charged with smuggling food and liquor to prisoners who paid him.

Senior citizens

There's time to get in on summer trips

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the Manchester Senior Citizens Center. It appears in the Manchester Herald Wednesdays and Saturdays.

By Jeonette Cove
Center Director
It's not too late to get in on the tail end of summer trips at the center. Fliers with detailed information for the Cape Cod trip are available at the center. If you are interested in this or any of the other trips, call Daniels at 646-3012.

Aug. 20 - Hartford Stage Company, "Anything Goes" at 8 p.m.
Aug. 30 - Gillette Castle with lunch at the Gelston House, $16.

Sept. 9 - Dinner at Wright's Chicken Farm and tour of LaSalette Shrine, $16.

The center is still looking for volunteers to assist in painting and cleanup during the two-week closing period. I am sure that all seniors who frequent the center can take pride in the manner that the center is maintained. If you can help, please call the office. Ladies can be instrumental in helping with the crafts and ceramics routine.

The Manchester Health Department will begin the operation of the Geriatric Clinic on Aug. 25 at Mayfair Gardens, 910 11a.m., and Westhill Gardens, 1 to 4 p.m. If you have need to see the nurse, call the Health Department at 647-3173. A detailed schedule will be available shortly.

On Thursday, Aug. 18, at 5 p.m. the last evening picnic for the summer will be held, with Lou Joubert and the Senior Center Orchestra entertaining. If you need a ride, call the center at 647-3211.

Seniors are reminded that the center will be closed for activities Aug. 22 to Sept. 5. However, the office will be open for golf cards, and business. The weekly shopping trip on Tuesdays will still run at its regular scheduled time. Bingo and pinocle has been extended to Sept. 6 when the center reopens to make up the time lost on Labor Day.

Don't forget the Golf Tournament on Aug. 29. You may sign up with one of the league officers. The starting times will be announced as soon as the roster has been completed.

Items can still be donated for the Tag Sale to be held on Sept. 18. We thank all seniors who have brought in such nice usable items.

A hearty hello goes to Bernice Martin whom we have not had the pleasure of her presence for a long time. Get well and hurry back. Warm regards also are extended to Gertrude Herrman and Bert Loughrey who are in Manchester Memorial Hospital.

Schedule for week
Monday: 7:30 a.m., golf league at MCC, 10 a.m., bingo; 12:30 p.m., pinocle games. Bus pickup at 8 a.m., return trips at noon and 3:15 p.m.

Tuesday: 8:15 a.m., women's golf league; 9 a.m., shopping bus; 12:30 p.m., bus returns from shopping.

Wednesday: 10 a.m., Friendship Circle, pinocle games; 12:30 p.m., bridge games; 1 p.m., arts and 3:15 p.m.

Thursday: 10 a.m., orchestra rehearsal; 5 p.m., picnic - bus will pick up.
Friday: 9 a.m., registration for Cape Cod at center; 10 a.m., bingo; 12:30 p.m., setback games. Bus pickup at 8 a.m., return trips at noon and 3:15 p.m.

The Rev. Don Volk performed the double ring ceremony. Timothy Swain of Portland was organist. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

Recognize this location?

This picture was taken around 1896 at 52 Main St. where the Carlyle-Johnson Machine Co. is today. It was Goetz bakery and ice cream parlor, which was destroyed by fire about 1900. The photo was loaned to the Manchester Herald by Roger A. Luce of 48 Steep Hollow Lane. The photo, in a wooden frame, somehow made its way to a Northford flea market, where Luce snapped it up about eight years ago. Note the dapper way the delivery wagon drivers are dressed.

Advice

Affair was fertile grounds for court action

DEAR ABBY: I had an affair with a man I work with. I'm well over 21 and should have known better, but he told me he was "fixed" (vasectomy), so I

Well, he wasn't as "fixed" as he said he was because I turned up pregnant. When I told him, he didn't believe me, but after I showed him the lab report and my doctor's bill, he believed me. Besides, he is twice-divorced and says he will never marry again.

He went back to the doctor who performed his vasectomy and had some tests made that proved his vasectomy didn't hold. He's considering suing the doctor. In the meantime, I had an abortion, which cost me $200.

DEAR ABBY: I know you asked to hear from men on the subject of whether the woman should call the man, or wait for him to call her, but I hope you will find the following gathered from my own experience worth sharing with your readers:

When I give my phone number to a man, I always ask for his because it's a very easy way to separate the married men from the single ones.

Men who have something (or "someone") at home to take care of flushed out quickly, as they either refuse your request or give you a phony number.

DEAR TAKING: Right? (And neither can a man.)

DEAR ABBY: My father is in a wheelchair (spinal cord injury) and will never walk again. I am being married and would like to have my father "walk" me down the aisle and give me away in marriage, which presents a problem.

Would it look funny if Dad accompanied me down the aisle in his wheelchair? He can operate it himself, so it's not as if I would have to push it. He's not sensitive about being in a wheelchair and says he will do anything I want him to do. Has anybody ever done this? I'm afraid it would look a bit weird.

Could I have my older brother walk me down the aisle and have my father waiting for me to give me away in marriage? Could I walk down alone and have my father waiting for me? Please give me some ideas. I sent for your booklet on how to have a lovely wedding. It was very helpful, but it didn't cover this.

Thank you.
DECEMBER BRIDE

DEAR BRIDE: Any of the options you mentioned is perfectly acceptable. Do whatever is comfortable for you and your father. It's your day. Good luck and God bless.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am writing to you about a worldwide problem. All my life I never had a vasectomy problem. I could indulge without the bulge. Sometimes I would lose five pounds and not realize it.

As soon as I got to age 17 the pounds came so quickly. Within six to eight months I went from 107 to 120 pounds. A couple of months after I started gaining I panicked and went to doctors. They all said that there was nothing wrong with my metabolism.

I've cut out all luxuries in eating. I drink diet drinks instead of milk. I follow the Scarsdale diet and exercise but still can't look halfway as good as I used to look.

What could have happened? Could my metabolism have shut down that much?

DEAR READER: You didn't tell me how tall you are. You may not be as heavy for your height. You may simply be maturing to your normal adult weight.

There are two things that happen at around that age: First you stop growing. You probably realize that during the growing phase youngsters can eat everything in the refrigerator and ask for more. That is because as muscles, develop, you must manufacture proteins. Each time one amino acid is hooked to another amino acid in the process it takes energy to unite them. As long as you are growing, you need another form of estrogen. In short, body fat has an endocrine function. Now you are wise to avoid becoming overweight, but don't confuse that problem with the normal body fat you need for health.

And I don't like any of the very low carbonyl "rate diets. So I'm sending you The Health Letter 4-7, Weight Lossing Diet, to give you a more sensible plan that will not injure your health. Others who want this balanced diet can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me. In care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Bobbed hair comes back
ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Bobbed hair — short styles of the 1920s — is making its strongest fashion comeback in years, says Sam Cappelletti, the styling director of the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association.

Association says the current versions include blunt and layered cuts. Cappelletti says permitting techniques to add volume are designed to move hair away from the head.

DEAR ABBY: I was advised to see him for leading me to believe that I was safe from him. The question: Can I sue him? And can he sue his doctor?

LEARNED THE HARD WAY
You can sue anyone you want to sue. And so can he. Whether you or he can collect is another matter. There's a valuable lesson here. In matters as serious as contraception, leave nothing to chance. Assume that the responsibility is all yours — because it usually is.

Thoughts
I remember reading a wonderful book called The Ministry of the Child. It was not the ministry for the child, or the ministry to the child, but the ministry of the child. Throughout the book there were examples of the ways small children comforted a big person, or brought reconciliation to fighting parents, or on an occasion when a little person said something funny that broke the ice and led a hurt between two big persons.

When children are baptized we welcome them into the household of faith and welcome them to share with us the priesthood of the Body of Christ. So often, however, we think that children have nothing to offer us, they can only be receivers, not givers. They have many excellent examples to the contrary.

With that attitude firmly implanted, we will not be sharing any healing and comforting priesthood with children. When we don't look for how children can heal and help us, we won't see those times when they have. But when we look for such occasions to occur, they will happen more and more.

At these places in your community of faith where children are welcomed to be givers of themselves to the big people?

DEAR DR. BLAKER: Our 13-year-old daughter has graduated from high school and is working at a job. She can't earn money for college.

We never used to have any problems with her but lately she has been coming in at 2 and 3 o'clock in the morning. When we try to talk to her about it, she says she is old enough to make her own hours.

My husband and I think that it is the influence of her boyfriend that is changing her like this. She has been going with him for almost two years and they are very close. Do you think we should insist that they break up?

I don't know how else we can control her behavior. We aren't able to get any sleep at all.

DEAR READER: Insisting that they break up will not help, that's for sure. And I'm not as certain as you are that it is her boyfriend's influence that is the main problem. As teenagers grow up, they become more independent and that's natural. They begin to actively resist parental control.

Isn't it possible that your daughter is merely growing up? As long as she is holding down her job in a responsible manner, try negotiating some reasonable hours. Ask her, in return, to have the courtesy to come in quietly so as not to disturb your rest.

For Marty, parenthood looks just so appealing

Editor's note: Marty is a composite character, based on clients who have come to Project Genesis for help...

By Elaine Stoncliffe, Project Genesis Director

During the first three months that Marty and Lynn were together, they conscientiously kept their appointments with their therapists and the psychiatrists who prescribed their medications...

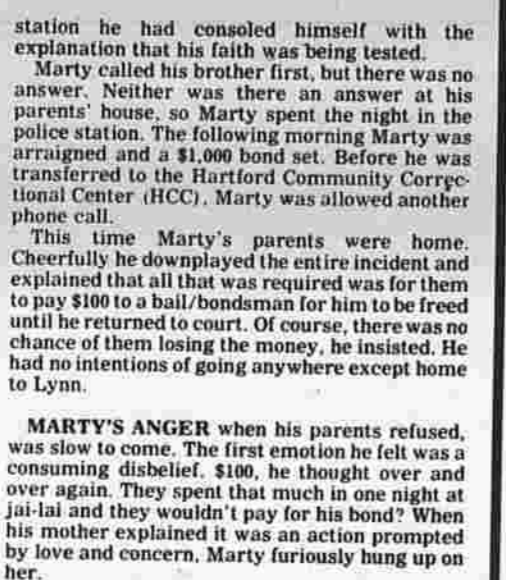

They corresponded with another patient who was still at Norwich and invited Ben to visit them when he was discharged...

It was during this time that Marty began following newspaper and television reports about a man who was arguing his case for marijuana in the courts on the basis that it was necessary to his religion...

Without medical coverage, Marty could no longer attend his therapy sessions or have his prescriptions renewed. Without Marty's help, his company on the long walk, Lynn quickly lost interest as well...

When Ben found his own room and moved out, Marty and Lynn unhappily found themselves short of funds to support the habit that was now seen by Marty as nothing short of a religious experience...

Marty's purchase was in excess of four ounces, so the charge was intent to sell rather than the lesser charge of possession...

Marty called his brother first, but there was no answer. Neither was there an answer at his parents' house...

This time Marty's parents were home cheerfully and downplayed the entire incident and explained that all that was required was for them to pay $100 to a bail bondsman for him to be freed...

Marty's cell had been designed many years before to house one prisoner. It was half the size of the small bedroom in his and Lynn's tiny apartment...

Sports In Brief

McCrory, Jones fight again

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — It will be a rematch of the boxer against the slugger Saturday when Milton McCrory of Detroit meets Colin Jones of Wales to fill the vacant World Boxing Council welter-weight championship.

The 17-round exhibition title, left open by the retirement of Sugar Ray Leonard, was supposed to be filled March 19 in Reno, Nev., but McCrory, 21, and Jones, 24, fought to a 12-round draw.

WBC President Jose Sulaiman said this week there would be no draw this time around in the televised 12-round bout between McCrory, the WBC's No. 1 contender, and Jones, the WBC's No. 2 contender.

"There will be no draw," said Sulaiman. "If there is a split decision and a draw situation, we will go to the judge who called it a draw and he will select a winner."

Future of Jets bleak

WINNIPEG, Manitoba — The future of the financially ailing Winnipeg Jets is bleak unless the National Hockey League team gets a new downtown arena, team president Barry Shenkerow said Friday.

Team officials had hoped their proposed $25-30 million "omniplex" arena would be included in the findings of a tri-level government task force on re-developing downtown Winnipeg. Those hopes were dashed Thursday when the committee unveiled a $280 million plan that omitted the arena.

The Jets' present arena, located in the western part of the city, is totally inadequate, Shenkerow said. It lacked adequate seating, air conditioning, parking, and decent acoustics, he added.

Russians in U.S. Open

NEW YORK — Russian players have entered the U.S. Open tennis championships for the first time since 1976, the United States Tennis Association announced Friday.

Svetlana Cherneva and Larisa Savchenko are entered in the women's singles and head an entry of five Russian players, Cherneva, who is ranked third in women's singles in the Soviet Union, partnered with Savchenko and reached the semifinals at Wimbledon this year.

The contingent will be accompanied by Olga Morozova, who along with compatriots Alex Evtel and Natasha Chmyreva played in the 1976 U.S. Open. Morozova reached the third round in the women's singles while Chmyreva lost in the quarterfinals to Chris Evert Lloyd.

Yanks bring up LaRoche

NEW YORK — The New York Yankees have purchased the contract of veteran left-handed pitcher Dave LaRoche from Columbus of the International League, the team announced Friday.

To make room for LaRoche, the Yankees optioned pitcher Carl Kaufman to Columbus. Kaufman had agreed in one game and had no record with a 4.91 ERA.

LaRoche, who was released by the Yankees in spring training, signed a contract with Columbus on July 27. He appeared in four games with the Yankees, pitching 3.23 innings with no decisions, two saves and a 4.91 ERA.

Ornest loses Quinn

ST. LOUIS — Barry Ornest, the new owner of the St. Louis Blues, was unable to reach an agreement with former Philadelphia coach Pat Quinn to become coach of the Blues, Ornest said Friday.

Ornest said the two had met for about five hours Saturday and had discussions on the telephone from Tuesday through Thursday but could agree on terms of a contract.

Ornest has been searching for a coach and for a roster of hockey operations since the purchase of the team was completed three weeks ago. He said he hopes to make an announcement on at least one of the jobs this weekend, but he has missed several other target dates in the past.

Red Wings sign Mio

DETROIT — The Detroit Red Wings have signed goaltender Ed Mio to a multi-year contract, the team announced Friday.

Mio, 24, who played for the New York Rangers on June 14 along with right wingers Ron Duguay and Ed Johnston in exchange for defenseman Willie Huber and wingers Mark Osborne and Mike Buissonell.

Mio, 23, a native of Windsor, Ontario, had spent the past two seasons with the Rangers. In 41 games last season, he posted a 16-6 record with two shutouts and a 3.45 goals-against average.

Ricky Bell retires

SAN DIEGO — San Diego Chargers running back Ricky Bell, weakened by a muscle disease, announced his retirement Friday.

Bell was stricken with polymyositis, a painful disease that causes muscular inflammation, shortly after being traded to the Chargers. The ailment caused pain and swelling and Bell's weight dropped from 225 to 198 pounds. It also caused his joints to swell and ache.

Charger officials said Bell had started to recover from the disease when he announced his retirement. He was on the reserved list since the end of 1982.

A runner-up to the Heisman Trophy balloting to Tony Dorsett in 1976, Bell led the USC and the nation in rushing the previous year with 1,875 yards. He was the first player chosen in the 1977 draft and spent five years with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

Bell's best year as a pro was in 1979 when he gained 1,263 yards and led the lowly Buccaneers to the NFC championship game against the Los Angeles Rams.

McNamara rehired

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Manager John McNamara, who has watched his California Angels slide from first place to fourth in the American League West, has been rehired for the 1984 season, team owner Gene Autry announced Friday.

McNamara, 51, replaced Gene Mauch, who resigned at the end of last season after being criticized by Angels' players and team management for his decisions in the best-of-five AL playoffs, which California lost to Milwaukee after winning the first two games.

The Angels led the AL West through most of the first half of the season but hit the skids after losing the AL Star break and trailed the first-place Chicago White Sox by eight games entering Friday night's action.

Canadian Open

Lendl, Connors move to semi showdown

MONTREAL (UPI) — Second-seeded Ivan Lendl continued his affinity for Canadian soil and Jimmy Connors exacted a measure of revenge Friday to set up a semifinal showdown at the $450,000 Canadian Open Men's Tennis Championships.

Lendl, in reaching the semifinals of the event for the fifth straight year, needed only 54 minutes to polish off Johan Kriek of the U.S., 6-1, 6-0. Connors posted a 6-3, 7-5 victory over South African Kevin Curran, who had upset the 30-year-old American at Wimbledon last month.

In later singles matches, top-seeded John McEneaney was slated to play fellow American Brian Teacher and Peter Fleming was scheduled to open against Sweden's Anders Jarryd. Wins by McEneaney and Fleming were the longest of the week, as long-time doubles partners against one another in the other semifinal Saturday.

Using his overpowering serve and array of passing shots to good advantage, Lendl had his easiest match of the week-long event as he forced his opponent to make several mistakes.

"I was served well today," said Lendl. "He hit hard but made a lot of errors and I took advantage of them. Just the same, the match was not as easy as the score made it look. But I've had a lot tougher."

Lendl, who has won the tournament two of the last three years and lost to Vitas Gerulaitis in last year's final, was hard pressed to pinpoint the reason for his success at the event.

"I don't know what it is, but I always play well here in Canada," he said. "That's why I keep coming back."

Connors had his opponent down 5-3 in the second set, but the sixth game went to deuce five times before Curran took advantage of it. Curran closed the gap to 5-4 when, after a volley, Connors rammed the ball out of the court. A superb, off-balance return at the net allowed Curran to the even the score at 5-5.

After breaking Curran's serve, Connors was down 6-4 in the deciding set before bouncing back to avoid a tie-breaker.

Lendl, Connors move to semi showdown.

Even though he had lost two important matches to Curran before coming to Montreal — the other coming at the Belgian tennis championships — Connors felt extra-motivated.

"Those past matches don't even go through my head when I'm playing. I play every match like it's the finals of the U.S. Open, because as far as I'm concerned that's the most important title to match against," he said.

Connors said the balls caused him several problems.

"I found them heavy and difficult to control, but I was hitting pretty well tonight and really wanted to win at 5-3. The big point for me was when I broke his serve at 5-5."

For his part, Curran said he wasn't nervous.

"I may have been tentative, but I wasn't nervous," he said. "I knew a lot of serves would come back. But as I got into the flow of things, I started to make the score a lot closer. I threw everything I had at me, but he just threw more back at me."

Sheehan tops in Henredon

HIGH POINT, N.C. (UPI) — Patty Sheehan shot a 2-under, par 70 Friday to maintain a two-stroke lead in the $180,000 Henredon Classic over veteran Kathy Whitworth, whose hole-in-one was cancelled by a subsequent double-bogey.

Sheehan's second straight sub-par round left her at 9-under, par 135 after the second round at the 6,017-yard Willow Creek Golf Club course.

Midway through the 72-hole tournament, Whitworth was 7-under with a 137 total.

Anyt Ben, who qualified for the tour earlier this year, was third, three strokes behind Sheehan. Ben carded a 4-under, par 68 Friday.

One stroke behind Ben in fourth was Donna White, who also had a second round 68. Tied for fifth at 4-under for the tournament were defending champion JoAnne Carner and Charlotte Montgomery.

Sheehan carded her first two bogeys of the tourney in the second round.

"I started out really well," said Sheehan, who began her second round on the back nine. "But when I got to 18, things kind of fell apart. I misclubbed No. 18 and made a bad shot on No. 2."

Sheehan, winner of two tournaments this year, bogeyed both holes, missing a 15-foot putt on No. 18 and two-putting on No. 2 after landing in a bunker.

Whitworth's ace was her sixth overall, third in competition, in the first in the High Point tournament. Her hole-in-one, which she described as "an accident," was the tour's 13th this season and the third in recent weeks. Jane Lock and Pat Bradley each hit a hole-in-one two weeks ago at the U.S. Women's Open.

Ironically, Whitworth's shot has never felt as good as the par-3, 173-yard eighth hole which produced her eagle.

"I'm not a good long iron player," the LPGA Hall of Fame member said.

Whitworth's winner of one tournament this year, used a 4-wood to make the hole-in-one. She said the ball hit the green about a foot from the cup and rolled in.

But a poor shot resulted in a double-bogey on 12 and took the sting out of her game.

"I just made a lousy swing," Whitworth said. "There was no excuse for hitting that shot the way I did."

Martina wins easily

MANHATTAN BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Top-seeded Martina Navratilova and No. 3 seed Pam Shriver, who form the No. 1 seeded doubles team, posted straight-set singles victories Friday to advance to the semifinals of a $128,000 tennis tournament.

Navratilova, 26, the world's No. 1 ranked women's player, played up to that rating for the fourth consecutive match, routing unseeded Wendy White of Atlanta, 6-0, 6-1, in just 45 minutes.

Shriver, 31, of Lutherville, Md., engaged in a tough serve-and-volley match before defeating No. 12 seed Alycia Moulton of Sacramento, Calif., 6-3, 7-6 (7-3).

In another quarterfinal match, unseeded Kate Latham of Mountain View, Calif., advanced to the semifinals with a 6-3, 4-6, 6-2 triumph over Elise Burgin of Baltimore. She will face the winner of Friday night's fourth quarterfinal match between No. 2 seed Chris Evert Lloyd and No. 8 Jo Durie of Great Britain.

Navratilova, playing under bright sunshine in her first tournament since winning her fourth Wimbledon crown last month, said she wanted to end the match quickly, and she did. The left-hander put pressure on White in the opening set and won it in just 17 minutes.

White, who had upset No. 5 seed Wendy Turnbull of Australia in the first round, held serve in the first game of the second set to

Aoki takes lead in Buick Open

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (UPI) — Iaso Aoki of Japan carded a 6 under par 66 Friday to take a two-stroke lead over six other golfers after two rounds of the $350,000 Buick Open.

Hayne Levi leapt apart the 7,001-yard Warwick Hills course with a tournament record 64 that gave him a share of second place at 136.

First round co-leaders Calvin Peete (a 70 Friday) and D.A. Wehring (70) were also in the six-player defending champion Jim Kite (68), Jack Renner (69) and John Cook (69).

Aoki, who will be 41 at the end of the month, is looking for his second tournament victory ever on the PGA Tour after winning the Hawaii Open earlier this year. His winnings of $94,367 this year are more than doubled his three-year total on the Tour.

"I went home to Japan to play and won two tournaments and had two medals," Aoki said. "I was looking for a long shot but didn't have any rhythm and could not make the cut."

"It might be jet lag but my game itself was just sour," Aoki said, adding this is his 12th tournament on the Tour this season. He played in only 15 events in 1982.

Aoki, despite his limited Tour play, is the No. 9 driver in terms of accuracy and is second in putting among his fellow pros.

Because of the rain yesterday, which made the greens soft, Aoki's hole-in-one could be very significant. "My good iron made it possible."

Aoki carded eight birdies to offset two bogeys and used his iron as a wedge to get himself in position for a birdie putt of three, two, three, 15, feet, and four inches.

The four-inch putt was all that kept Aoki from making a hole-in-one on the three 11th hole, where he used a five-iron to cover the 191 yards. His shot went by the right side and he brought it back for his birdie.

Peete birdied the first two holes but couldn't continue that success.

"I was off to a terrific start but it ended up just a ho-hum round. My caddy and I just didn't have a putt," Peete said. "I had seven putts inside 12 feet, but didn't get one. The greens didn't break as much."

The sun, not a factor in Thursday's rainy opening round, came out for the second round to dry out the greens and give players noticeably higher than the 94 sub-par opening round.

Tom Purtzer had the day's second best round, a 7-under 65, to join a group of five at 137 that included defending champion Lynn Wadkins, David Graham and Dave Barr.

Trying with 49ers

By Susan Ruehl
UPI Sports Writer

ROCKLIN, Calif. — Last month, Darryl Wong was calling his bid to become the first Chinese-American in the National Football League "a long shot" but life at the San Francisco 49ers training camp has boosted his morale.

"I think it's the stereotype of football being brute force that dissuades many Asians from playing," said Wong. "Nobody likes to get hurt. To really play, you need quickness and thinking."

The bootcamp-like schedule at the deer training camp seems to agree with Wong, who says "I don't get out much, but I'm not complaining."

Daily practice sessions in the mornings and afternoons, followed by meetings at night leave little time for anything but football and a half of free time a day, time most rookies and free agents spend studying the playbook or "going as much rest as they can," Wong says.

"I eat, football, sleep, eat, sleep," he says.

Years of practice, including his experience at Lowell, where he was the "biggest guy" on the team, and Dartmouth, where he was an undergraduate, paid off for Wong. He applied to the 49ers and the Los Angeles Rams last spring and was offered a free agent contract by 49ers assistant coach George Seifert.

Chinese-American quarterback a longshot

But "nothing has been said" about Wong, but he is "really picky" and would accept offers from other teams if the 49ers cut him from the roster.

"None of the free agents or rookies know what's going to happen. It's a day-to-day thing, trying to perform well each day of practice," Wong says.

He'd be willing to take any position. Wong says, adding that "once you get in, you can start something off and get the ball rolling for yourself."

The 49ers are his first choice, Wong says, but he is "a real picky" and would accept offers from other teams if the 49ers cut him from the roster.

"The waiver system in the NFL is such that you can be cut by one team one day and picked up by another team the next day," he says.

Wong is unsure if he would be willing to go through all the agony again next summer, if he doesn't make it this year.

Simms airs Giants win

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Phil Simms, playing for the time since tearing up his knee a year ago, passed for 116 yards and a touchdown and rookie All-Haji Sheik kicked five field goals Friday night to lead the New York Giants to a 22-13 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Simms, who missed the entire 1982 season because of a knee injury suffered in an exhibition game, completed 10-of-15 passes, including an 11-yard scoring toss to rookie wide receiver Ernie Ladd.

Haji Sheik, a ninth-round draft pick from Michigan, kicked field goals of 42, 23, 23, and 26 yards to help the Giants' pre-season record reach 2-4.

The Steelers, 2-1, made New York's job easier by turning the ball over seven times, six by fumbles and once on an interception. New York also blocked a punt.

Pittsburgh scored on a 4-yard pass from Cliff Stoudt to veteran receiver John Stallworth, who ended a holdout on Tuesday, in the second quarter, and a 17-yard pass from Earl Morrall to Greg Garrity in the third period.

Before the game, the Giants announced All-Pro linebacker Adam Carlin would be on an interception holdout and will join the team in training camp Sunday.

Carlin was suspended from the team because of his pushing veteran Joe Daniele for the kicking job, missed one field goal, a 36-yarder that was wide left early in the fourth quarter.

The Giants also had a touchdown called back late in the second quarter because Simms' quarterback crossed the line of scrimmage

Terry Cummings ready to test heart in comeback

By Jeff Hosen
UPI Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Terry Cummings is both a basketball player and an ordained minister. He is not one without the other.

"My life belongs to the Lord," Cummings said recently after a practice at the Southern California Memorial Hospital in Evanville, Ill.

"While I was in the hospital, I didn't want to play again," Cummings said. "They (doctors) told me I had a 90-10 percentage of playing again. I was never one who plays that way." He didn't play to his ability, he didn't play for himself. The doctors were fine and dandy, but I didn't want to play because I believed in the Lord."

Cummings said his heart problem was caused by abuse of his body, not by any genetic defect. "I changed my diet and now I eat up," he said. "I'm staying healthy. I'm on pork and rich foods."

After 1 1/2 months of inactivity, Cummings has begun training for the upcoming season. The first step was shooting baskets, then pickup games in his hometown of Chicago.

Cummings came to Los Angeles to participate in the Clippers' final week of summer league play. He also came to have some questions answered.

A heart monitor was strapped to Cummings' body on his return to what he called a "game-type situation."

Cummings said he passed the test.

"I feel pretty good," he said. "They're going to monitor me on an out. I'm not going to rush it. I'm going to take it a little bit by a little bit."

Cummings is playing for a new coach, Jimmy Lynn, a former assistant for Jack Ramsay at Portland, has replaced Paul Silas.

"There's a pretty good rapport between us," Cummings said. "He knows I'm a 9-5 worker — I come to work. He knows when I say I can't do that I won't try to force it. I'm getting older."

Simms airs Giants win

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Phil Simms, playing for the time since tearing up his knee a year ago, passed for 116 yards and a touchdown and rookie All-Haji Sheik kicked five field goals Friday night to lead the New York Giants to a 22-13 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Simms, who missed the entire 1982 season because of a knee injury suffered in an exhibition game, completed 10-of-15 passes, including an 11-yard scoring toss to rookie wide receiver Ernie Ladd.

Haji Sheik, a ninth-round draft pick from Michigan, kicked field goals of 42, 23, 23, and 26 yards to help the Giants' pre-season record reach 2-4.

The Steelers, 2-1, made New York's job easier by turning the ball over seven times, six by fumbles and once on an interception. New York also blocked a punt.

Pittsburgh scored on a 4-yard pass from Cliff Stoudt to veteran receiver John Stallworth, who ended a holdout on Tuesday, in the second quarter, and a 17-yard pass from Earl Morrall to Greg Garrity in the third period.

Before the game, the Giants announced All-Pro linebacker Adam Carlin would be on an interception holdout and will join the team in training camp Sunday.

Carlin was suspended from the team because of his pushing veteran Joe Daniele for the kicking job, missed one field goal, a 36-yarder that was wide left early in the fourth quarter.

The Giants also had a touchdown called back late in the second quarter because Simms' quarterback crossed the line of scrimmage

Terry Cummings ready to test heart in comeback

By Jeff Hosen
UPI Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Terry Cummings is both a basketball player and an ordained minister. He is not one without the other.

"My life belongs to the Lord," Cummings said recently after a practice at the Southern California Memorial Hospital in Evanville, Ill.

"While I was in the hospital, I didn't want to play again," Cummings said. "They (doctors) told me I had a 90-10 percentage of playing again. I was never one who plays that way." He didn't play to his ability, he didn't play for myself. The doctors were fine and dandy, but I didn't want to play because I believed in the Lord."

Cummings said his heart problem was caused by abuse of his body, not by any genetic defect. "I changed my diet and now I eat up," he said. "I'm staying healthy. I'm on pork and rich foods."

After 1 1/2 months of inactivity, Cummings has begun training for the upcoming season. The first step was shooting baskets, then pickup games in his hometown of Chicago.

Cummings came to Los Angeles to participate in the Clippers' final week of summer league play. He also came to have some questions answered.

A heart monitor was strapped to Cummings' body on his return to what he called a "game-type situation."

Cummings said he passed the test.

"I feel pretty good," he said. "They're going to monitor me on an out. I'm not going to rush it. I'm going to take it a little bit by a little bit."

Cummings is playing for a new coach, Jimmy Lynn, a former assistant for Jack Ramsay at Portland, has replaced Paul Silas.

"There's a pretty good rapport between us," Cummings said. "He knows I'm a 9-5 worker — I come to work. He knows when I say I can't do that I won't try to force it. I'm getting older."

U.S.-Italy pasta war threatens to boil over

BY Cynthia Plechowik
UPI Business Editor
PITTSBURGH — America's pasta industry is boiling mad over imports. Like others faced with a sticky problem, it is appealing to the federal government for protection.

U.S. pasta producers complain that European competitors are hawking low-priced spaghetti, macaroni and egg noodles in American supermarkets with the aid of illegal government subsidies. The Europeans — mainly Italians — say government aid just makes up for duties on American wheat and their market share is too tiny to threaten American manufacturers.

"The Silk Stocking District is finding pasta to be very fashionable, where before it was seen as a blue-collar belly-filler," said Anthony Gioia, president of Buffalo-based RHM Macaroni Inc.

By imports. But they are quick to add that their industry differs from those of silk stockings.

"The truth is that imported pasta constitutes only a percent of the huge pasta market," said Michael Karas, president of Foodworld Sales Inc., a Buffalo importer. "What we're doing is giving Mrs. Consumer the best pasta at the most reasonable price."

Imported brands are no threat to American jobs, Karas said. In fact, he said, purchasing Italian pasta is no less patriotic than buying American.

"Importers are American too, and employ American citizens and pay taxes," he said. "Even if it wins the trade dispute, the U.S. pasta industry faces another problem — the glamorous aura surrounding imports from auto to apparel."
