Reagan taps Meese for Smith's post

By Helen Thomas
United Press International
WASHINGTON — President Reagan announced today that Attorney General William French Smith has resigned from the Cabinet and he will nominate White House counselor Edwin Meese to take over the top Justice Department post.
In an exchange of letters, Reagan accepted Smith's resignation with "deepest appreciation and regret."
In announcing Meese's appointment, Reagan said, "While I deeply regret the resignation of a close friend and long-time adviser who has served as one of the nation's very finest attorneys general, I am delighted to be able to nominate Ed Meese as his successor."
"Ed is not only my trusted counselor, he is also a person whose life and experience reflect a profound commitment to the law and a consistent dedication to the improvement of our justice system," Reagan said. "I know of no one better able to continue in the fine tradition so well represented by the service of Bill Smith."
In his letter to Reagan, Smith said it is "time for me to return to private life" — his lucrative law practice in Southern California. But he also said he wants to take part in Reagan's re-election campaign, and would not be able to do so as a government official.
Smith, 66, told Reagan that he has a "strong conviction that the interests of the country require that he run and be re-elected."
"I have been involved in that process since 1966, and I do not want 1984 to be an exception," Smith said, alluding to his close personal and political association with the president, dating from Reagan's campaigns for governor of California. "This would not be possible in my present position."
Meese, 52, is a former prosecutor and longtime friend of Reagan's. He has served for three years as counselor to the president and is perhaps the most trusted member of Reagan's inner circle of advisers.
Meese was in Santa Barbara, Calif., delivering a speech to the University of California group, and unavailable for immediate comment.
White House spokesman Larry Speakes said that Meese's job at the White House would not be filled and indicated the positions of others on the domestic staff would be enhanced. Deputy chief of staff Richard Darman was expected to assume a greater policy role.
Filling the counselor's post would establish chief of staff James Baker as the unchallenged top official. Meese, a major White House link to the conservatives, has frequently been at odds with Baker and their squabbles have caused some internal dissension in the White House. Baker is viewed as more moderate politically and a pragmatist.
Disclosure of the impending shakeup came Sunday as Reagan was wrapping up a weekend at Camp David. He shrugged off questions from reporters as he returned to the White House by saying the only thing on his mind was the Super Bowl.
After Reagan told him he "could stay as long as he wanted," one official said, Smith waited two days before signing a letter of resignation on Friday — the same day Reagan celebrated his third anniversary in office.
The sources said Smith "thought it was time to leave" and "felt it was time to return to Los Angeles."
Smith, 66, became the sixth member of the original Reagan Cabinet to leave.

It's getting warmer
Milton Borsc of 91 Chestnut St. is bundled up against the morning cold as he takes his daily walk on Main Street today. He said he's enjoying today's weather, which was the beginning of a warming trend that is expected to continue through the week. Today's forecast-called for sunny skies with highs 25 to 30. Sleet and freezing rain were forecast for tonight. The freezing rain was expected to change to all rain Tuesday morning with temperatures rising to the 30s and 40s.

Weather relieves New England, floods Idaho

By United Press International
Winter withdrew its deadly cold from all but the upper Northeast today after a parting blast that dropped New England temperatures to 40 below zero. But warm weather brought a fear of more flooding in Idaho and broke a large icicle that ruptured a chemical tank near St. Louis.
An arctic air mass that has locked Connecticut and the rest of New England in a deep freeze since last week was slowly moving out to sea giving way to warmer temperatures today.
The Connecticut forecast for today called for sunny skies with highs 25 to 30. Sleet and freezing rain were forecast for tonight. The freezing rain was expected to change to all rain Tuesday morning with temperatures rising to the 30s and 40s.
The warming trend will continue through the week.
The Arctic cold, ice and snow were blamed for at least 46 deaths in the nation since last Tuesday, among them nine people killed on a Montana highway when a school bus returning from a wrestling meet slammed head-on into a tank truck that had jackknifed on an icy road near Glacier National Park.
The National Weather Service said northern New England and northern New York would drop to the 5-15 below zero range early today, but most of the rest of the nation should be above zero. Unseasonable cold lingered across much of the Atlantic Coast, with while preventing heavy snowmelt that would increase flooding.
About 250 people still were homeless as the worst flooding in a century ran up a million-dollar damage toll.
Wyoming authorities said flooding on the ice-jammed Shoshone River at Byron and Lovell was "getting better." Floodwaters were kept out of Lovell by an ice dike built Friday night to keep the river out of a canal.
Chester, Mass., was the coldest place in the nation Sunday with an unofficial reading of minus-40. It was an official 36 below zero at Canaan, Vt., and Old Forge, N.Y.
Flood-plagued Salmon, Idaho, hoped for warm days and cold nights to keep the ice jam on the Lemhi River from getting worse.

Cheney closing may delay mill conversion

By Kathy Gormus
Herald Reporter
The plant, which employs 140 people, is heated and powered by steam generated in the boiler room of the Clock Mill building. It has suffered declining profitability in recent years because of the decreased use of velvet fabrics in the garment industry.
Because of the uncertainty of the plant's future, the developer wants a firm commitment from Cheney Brothers on a closing date before work can begin on the Clock Mill building, Richardson said.
"If the velvet mill continues to operate beyond June, GBC Development would probably have to alter its plans for 185 apartments in the Clock Mill building," Richardson said.
"It's not as if we couldn't go ahead," he said.
However, changing the plans would be costly and would delay the project even further because new approval would have to be obtained from the Connecticut Housing Finance Authority, Richardson said.
"Since if the closing is so imminent for Cheney, it doesn't make sense," he said.
Richardson said GBC Development has been discussing Cheney Brothers' vacating the boiler room in the event the plant stays open longer than June. The company has been cooperative, he said.
"We didn't want to try to force them out," he said. "They've been helpful to us."
Richardson stressed that any delays in the project would not be because the developer does not want to go ahead with the project. "We'd like to start as soon as possible and we're ready to start," he said.
California officials argued the Constitution does not require a proportionality review before execution.
The state's death penalty law has enough safeguards to make it constitutional, they said. Adding a new procedure to assess whether death sentences are proportionate would only be "frosting on an already constitutional cake."

Court permits execution

By Spencer Sherman
United Press International
WASHINGTON — The U.S. Supreme Court cleared the way today for California to proceed with its first execution in 20 years, rejecting 7-2 arguments from death row inmates that state law did not provide sufficient constitutional safeguards.
The justices reversed a federal appeals court ruling in a California case that said state courts must compare every capital punishment case with every first degree murder case in the state to see if the death penalty is being meted out fairly.
The ruling clears the way for California to proceed with the execution of double murderer Robert Alton Harris, who would become the first inmate in that state executed since the high court approved use of capital punishment in 1976.
The ruling clears up potential problems with the capital punishment law in Texas, which also does not require a review. The state has been unable to execute any inmates while the court considered the Harris case.
The issue before the court is known as "proportionality" review, which Justice Byron White, writing for the majority, said is not necessary to make a death penalty law constitutional if it has other safeguards.
"Proportionality review was considered to be an additional safeguard against arbitrarily imposed death sentences, but we certainly did not hold (in prior cases) that comparative review was constitutionally required," White said.
In other actions today, the court: — Ruled 5-4 a federal court overstepped its bounds in ordering as many mentally retarded patients as possible moved from Pennsylvania's troubled Penhurst State School.
— Held, 6-3, that federal arbitration law generally bars California courts from undoing judicial claims settled by arbitration.
— In a separate 6-3 decision, ruled against a Texas man who argued he had a constitutional right to defend himself in court.
Dissenting from the high court's decision in the death penalty case, Justice William Brennan said lower courts must be required to review capital cases to assure the law treats all inmates equally, removing some of the "irrationality" that currently infects imposition of the death penalty by the various states.
"Disproportionality among sentences given different defendants can only be eliminated after sentencing disparities are identified. And the most logical way to do so is for a court of statewide jurisdiction to conduct comparisons between death sentences imposed by different judges or juries within the state," Brennan said.
The most compelling reason for requiring proportionality review, Brennan said, was that 30 of the 38 states with capital punishment laws already require some sort of comparative review in their death penalty laws.
Justice Thurgood Marshall joined in the dissent.
Harris was convicted of kidnapping two 16-year-old boys from a hamburger stand in July 1978, stealing their car and fatally shooting them at a secluded lake outside San Diego.
His sentence was upheld throughout the state courts and the U.S. District Court. But on review, the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals bounced the case back to the California Supreme Court to decide whether Harris' death penalty was in line with punishment meted out to other state criminals.
California officials argued the Constitution does not require a proportionality review before execution.
The state's death penalty law has enough safeguards to make it constitutional, they said. Adding a new procedure to assess whether death sentences are proportionate would only be "frosting on an already constitutional cake."

Tax can be deferred

Home sale rules allow flexibility

By Robert Metz
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.
(Fifth of 14 articles)

For the average individual, nothing will have as profound an impact as the taxes paid on personal residences. And here there is much room to maneuver for temporary and even permanent avoidance.

If you sold a home in 1983 and replace it within two years with a home costing as much or more, the tax on the profit is deferred. Remember, though, the tax is not forgiven.

You can keep deferring the tax on your gain by buying costlier homes. If you sell out and move to an apartment after you reach age 55, you may permanently avoid capital gains taxes on profits up to $125,000 — a nest egg for your retirement years.

In broad outline, that is how tax deferral works when you sell your home. How much gain do you have? It depends.

Improvements add to the cost basis of a home and thus reduce the accumulating capital gain. But there is a distinction between improvements and repairs. Repairs maintain a home but do not add to its value. Improvements, on the other hand, add to a home's value, prolong its life or adapt it to new use.

Painting your home, for example, is repairing it. Adding a finished recreation room or a new bathroom is an improvement.

The initial investment plus improvements and fix-up expenses immediately prior to selling is called the "cost basis" of the home.

Because you can recapture such investments at the time of a sale, it is important to keep all receipts and maintain careful records. How long should you keep them? As long as you own your home, whether it be five years or 20 and then for an additional three years after you sell.

CUT YOUR OWN TAXES AND SAVE

TAX TRAP: This can be a lifelong chore. Each house in the capital gains cycle may be improved and thus will affect cost basis.

There are also subtractions from the selling price.

Selling expenses typically include the realtor's commission on the sale, advertising and legal expenses, escrow fees and charges. When the total of such charges is deducted from the selling price, you have the adjusted sales price, which is the important consideration for tax purposes.

The adjusted sales price minus the cost basis is your actual capital gain.

If you do not buy another home when you rent an apartment, for example, you would report that capital gain on Form 1041 and on line 10, Schedule D. (Only 40 percent of a long-term gain is taxable.)

But now let's say you are buying a replacement home. If you buy a higher priced replacement home, the cost of the new home, minus your deferred gain, equals the adjusted cost basis of your new home. It is this figure which will be considered the base line for your gain when you sell this home in the future.

In the future, if you sell this home for more than that, you'll have a capital gain. But the tax on that gain can be deferred again.

A taxpayer aged 55 or older can avoid accumulated capital gains taxes arising out of home ownership of as much as $125,000.

To do this, you must meet the following conditions:

- You must be at least 55 years old before the date of the sale.
- The home being sold must have been owned and occupied as your principal residence for at least three of the five years immediately preceding the sale.
- This is a once-in-a-lifetime privilege. For married couples filing jointly, both spouses must agree to using the privilege. Once they use it, neither can use it again.

TAX TRAP: A serious problem can arise for a home sale by a married couple when only one spouse is 55. The law treats both spouses as qualifying if they own their residence as joint tenants, or tenants by entirety, or as community property. But the exclusion does not fully apply if they hold property as tenants in common, a prevailing practice in many states. When a property held by a couple as tenants in common is sold and only one of the spouses is 55 or older, only one-half the gain is subject to the exclusion.

The remaining portion of the gain is subject to tax if a new residence is not purchased within two years before the sale or two years after the sale.

The problem could be avoided if the parties convey their title from a tenancy in common to a joint tenancy, or to a tenancy in the entirety. Before making such a transfer, you should seek the advice of competent legal counsel.

TAX TIP: Taxpayers over 54 who are planning to marry should keep the exclusion in mind when they are thinking about where they will live together. If both own homes, they should consider selling both before the marriage to double the exclusion up to $250,000. If one has already used the exclusion, perhaps with a former spouse, the other should consider a sale before marriage because he or she will not be able to claim the exclusion after the marriage.

TAX TRAP: Since the $125,000 exclusion can be used only once in a lifetime, it should be used carefully. For example, a 55-year-old property owner might not be advised to pay the tax on the $10,000 profit on a home sale. The remaining $115,000 exclusion possibility would be lost forever. Such a homeowner might be better advised to pay the tax on the $10,000 profit. At a 40 percent capital gains rate, that would only be a tax on an additional $4,000 of income. He should reserve the exclusion for when he might have a larger gain.

Next: Capital gains and losses.

Ski movies hot genre

Mike Marvin may be responsible for a whole new wave of movies — the beach blanket flick transported to the ski slopes. Marvin thought up, wrote and co-produced "Hot Dog," the ski movie that grossed $4 million in its first three days. He denies his film is a surfer epic on skis. "I've heard people call it 'Animal House on the mountain,'" he said. "But he added, "We already have found out we're being copied. Two more ski pictures went into production almost immediately. There'll probably be a surfer copy on skis and a motorcycle copy. That's the nature of the business."

He calls "Hot Dog" a "youth oriented movie" that is "fun and escapist," which is what he says kids want. "I don't think 'Terms of Endearment' is drawing a great 14-year-old audience," he said.

Too many facts of life

Lisa Whitchel, star of the NBC sitcom "Facts of Life," thinks sometimes the facts of life are too large a part in the show's story line. Most recently, she objected to a show in which the character Blair and her steady boyfriend consummate their relationship.

"A lot of our audience is made up of young girls," she said. "I don't believe in premarital sex, and I don't want to condone it. I don't want any young person who's watching it to be responsible."

Quote of the day

Madeline Kahn, star of the TV sitcom "Oh Madeline," told Fred Robbins of Mutual Radio's "Assignment Hollywood" about TV series: "You have to really like what you're doing because if you're not, you will be doing a lot of it, so you have to like the character that you're playing... like the one I do in 'Oh Madeline.'"

"I play a lot of characters in films that I don't like very much, but fortunately it's over quickly so — a big deal! You play a lot of roles as an actress where you don't want to be that person and while you're playing the role you may be rather cranky and deal with all sorts of feelings you don't particularly like in an effort to do this character."

But then it's over. On television, you have to live with her a long time, hopefully.

Highland Park on agenda

At the tonight's Board of Education meeting, School Superintendent James P. Kennedy will discuss his proposal to close Highland Park School. A week from tonight, the school board is scheduled to vote on the controversial issue.

Board Chairman Leonard E. Seader asked Kennedy last week to address the closing before the vote is taken. Seader called for the special report to better inform the public about the closing, and suggested that Highland Park PTA members may want to attend.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. in Washington School.

Crystal ball foresees nukes

Kristina Harrison's pencil drawing of a crystal ball recently won the Nathan Hale School student a top place in Hartford Magazine's "Visions of '84" contest.

The drawing, one of three winning entries published in the magazine's January issue, showed nuclear weapons, an aging populace, a cleaner environment and scientific discoveries inside the crystal globe.

The contest was open to adults and children, with no prizes other than publication. Miss Harrison, a sixth grader, lives at 32 Linden St. with her mother, Liga Jahank, and stepfather, Leonard Jahnke.

Fuel savings disappointing

After extensive insulation work at Manchester High School, heating costs are still not as low as expected, School Superintendent James P. Kennedy said at the last school budget workshop.

There have been some savings in the oil and gas bills at MHS, he explained, but not enough to make a big difference in next year's budget projections.

However, fuel savings of 10 to 20 percent are expected in the elementary schools — most of which get new oil burners this year — business manager Raymond Demers said.

Kennedy's proposed budget sets fuel costs for the 1984-85 school year at $425,195, down $13,000 from this year. But electricity is budgeted at $27,453, up nearly $25,000 from this year — due to an anticipated increase in utility rates, Demers said.

Leeway in capital outlay

The proposed $107,550 school budget for capital outlay — including new doors at Bowers School, a new roof at Iling Junior High School and new pavement at several schools — is also a sort of contingency fund for 1984-85, Superintendent James P. Kennedy said last week.

There has to be some flexibility in a school system, and this is where we get it," he told participants in Thursday's school budget workshop. With a real estate holding as large as the school board's, some of the funds earmarked for building improvements may end up used for emergency repairs, he said.

Flexibility is hard to achieve in a budget in which 80 percent of expenditures are locked in by the teachers' contract, he added.

School 'late bus' proposed

A "late bus" to serve junior high school students who stay after school for sports, club meetings, or extra studying is the one new proposal in School Superintendent James P. Kennedy's recommended transportation budget for 1984-85.

The late bus would cost $4,000 — a small portion of the proposed overall transportation budget increase of $97,134. At the last budget workshop, school business manager Raymond Demers said that most of the increase is used to purchase new buses and vans under a contracted agreement with a transportation company.

More than $2,000 of the increase is needed for buses to transport children in the Head Start program, Demers said. He said a federal grant which helps pay for children's transportation has not kept pace with inflation, so the school board must provide the added funds.

Business classes at MCC

Manchester Community College officials have announced that six off-campus courses in small business operation are open for registration. None of the courses runs longer than eight weeks, and all cost from $26 to $44.

Topics include record keeping, retailing, tax management and supervision. Upon completion of a required selection of these courses and others, students are eligible for a certificate of completion in the small business program.

Most classes are held at the Adult Business Career Development Center at Bennet Junior High School. Call 646-2137 for more information.

Main St. plan under study

The latest plan for reconstruction of downtown Main Street is still being studied by the engineering staff of the state Department of Transportation and the technical study is expected to continue for another couple of weeks, according to William Gintner, the DOT's engineer for municipal systems.

The plan was submitted by Fuss and O'Neill, a Manchester engineering firm.

The key to the DOT's consideration is how much parking will be permitted on Main Street, and whether the town will be permitted to include an access road east of Main Street as part of the contract.

Gintner said today it appears most the major differences between the DOT and the town have been worked out.

The latest plan would eliminate about 110 parking spaces on the street and replace all but 20 of them in off-street parking lots.

An earlier plan was rejected by the state on the basis of cost and the elabornateness of some of its provisions.

Ultimately the new one will be subject to a public hearing.

PZC will hear arguments against granite curb rules

By Kathy Gormus
Herald Reporter

Developers who oppose the town's regulation requiring granite curbs in new subdivisions will have a chance to argue their case before the Planning and Zoning Commission tonight at a public comment session.

Because granite is the most expensive curbing material, many developers have argued in favor of changing the regulation to permit either concrete or asphalt curbs. Requiring granite curbs significantly increases the prices of homes in the subdivisions, developers have said.

George A. Kandora, town public works director, has estimated that granite curbing costs $14 to $20 per foot. Poured or precast concrete curbing costs from $10 to $15 per foot and asphalt curbing costs only $2.25 to $3.25 per foot, he has said.

"That means that a granite curb in a residential lot with a 120-foot frontage would cost $1,680 more than an asphalt curb and $1,000 more than a concrete curb. Town Engineer Walter J. Senkow has estimated.

But despite the increased cost of granite, both Kandora and Senkow have recommended that the granite curb requirement be retained.

"Although granite curbs have the highest first cost of the three types discussed, its life expectancy and next-to-nothing maintenance cost render it the choice of this writer," Kandora wrote in a memo to Alan F. Lamson, former director of planning.

"Use of granite curbs from the viewpoint of the taxpayer is a clear-cut economy," Kandora said.

Senkow said that granite curbing is the choice of most New England cities because of its durability. Unlike the other types of curbs, granite curbs can withstand the blades of snowplows without breaking apart, he said.

"Its durability and beauty are legendary. If bedded correctly and pointed, its lifetime of service is well over 100 years," Senkow wrote in a memo to Kandora.

Senkow said that the low cost of asphalt curbing was offset by its lack of durability. Asphalt curbs, particularly curves or cul-de-sacs, are very susceptible to damage from vehicles, particularly in the summer when temperatures soften the material, he said.

The average life expectancy of asphalt curbs is about 10 years, Senkow said, and may be a year or less in cul-de-sacs. However, asphalt curbs are relatively easy to replace, he said.

Although poured concrete curbs have a life expectancy of about 40 years, incorrect mixing of the cement can cause the curbs to break apart under freezing and thawing conditions, Senkow said.

"Once the surface of a concrete curb is damaged or chipped, it will deteriorate rapidly and must be replaced," he wrote.

Stone curbing represents beauty and permanence for the homeowner, little or no need to fund tax dollars for replacement or repairs in the Town Public Works budget, and a burden to be paid for by the developer when making the initial installation," Senkow concluded.

The PZC's public comment session will begin at 7 p.m. in the second floor conference room at the Lincoln Center.

Vote won't be tonight on rezoning requests

Two controversial zone change requests on tonight's Planning and Zoning Commission agenda will not be decided because some of the PZC members, who originally heard the proposals will be absent, Carol A. Zebb, acting planning director, said.

Gerald Investments' application for a zone change from Rural Residence to Planned Residence Development for 29 acres on Kenney Street will probably be decided at the PZC's Feb. 6 meeting, Ms. Zebb said, although a special meeting could be scheduled if necessary. The PZC has until Feb. 16 to act on the proposal after developers last month granted the commission a 30-day extension.

At the public hearing on the proposal, area residents vigorously opposed the zone change, claiming the 57 single-family homes proposed by the developer would be too dense and would pave the way for further development of the area.

Action on the request of Highland Park Market owner Timothy J. Devanney to change the zoning of portions of two adjacent lots from Residence AA to off-street parking also will be deferred. Ms. Zebb said.

At a public hearing, neighbors of the market spoke in opposition to the change because they said the additional parking would allow for further expansion of the market and would brighten the neighborhood.

The PZC meets tonight at 7 p.m. in the second floor conference room at the Lincoln Center.

Sadloski likes initiative, referendum

Elizabeth Sadloski, president of the Manchester Property Owners Association, sees a legislative initiative and referendum as the best weapon citizens have to keep their legislators from acting in behalf of special interest groups.

Mrs. Sadloski, one of the panelists at a recent political forum, argued in favor of statewide initiative and referendum, and complements the representative form of government and the elected legislators' input of effort in the governmental process.

Congress has hot agenda for election-year session

By Don Phillips, United Press International

WASHINGTON — Congress returns from a two-month recess today to struggle with some touchy election-year issues, ranging from U.S. troops in Lebanon to the Equal Rights Amendment and budget deficits.

The second session of the 98th Congress convenes at noon with the Senate taking up a bill to block a $2-a-month access charge for long distance phone users. The House was to adjourn immediately for the day in respect for Rep. Clement Zablocki, D-Wis., who died during the recess.

President Reagan will give his State of the Union address Wednesday, and his fiscal 1985 budget will reach Capitol Hill on Jan. 31. A major Reagan request, the power to veto individual items in spending bills, is expected to be turned down.

The lawmakers will return to a Capitol under tight tighter security, caused by the bombing of a Senate hallway several months ago. Individual items in spending bills, including the recommendation of the Kissinger Commission that aid be tied to progress on human rights, Reagan opposes that plan. An effort also is expected to be made to restrict the 18-month limit on the presence of U.S. Marines in Lebanon, granted by Congress last year before more than 240 Marines were killed in a truck bombing at their headquarters near the Beirut airport.

Action is expected later in the year on the ERA, which barely failed to gain the necessary two-thirds vote last year in the House. Another sensitive social issue — immigration — is likely to be considered early in the year when the House takes up a bill to tighten restrictions on foreigners entering the United States illegally.

The federal deficit, now projected at more than $160 billion for fiscal 1985, which begins Oct. 1, will be another much debated topic, but it is doubtful that much will be done to lower it.

Reagan is expected to send Congress a $924 billion spending plan for fiscal 1985 that includes a 13 percent increase in real defense spending, several billion dollars in proposed domestic spending cuts and no major tax initiatives except for the closing of some tax loopholes.

Nine dead in crash

Students must serve
BALTIMORE — Maryland high school students may become the first in the nation required to complete 100 hours of community service to graduate.

David Hornebeck, the state's superintendent of schools, said he will propose the community service requirement at a meeting of the Board of Education Wednesday.

"This would give students a sense of responsibility beyond one's self," Hornebeck said over the weekend. "It has to do with citizenship and values."

Hornebeck said students would be able to choose locations for performing the community service, but the work would have to be non-paying and serve the interests of something in which it's possible to think about the notion of service, the ethic behind performing a service for someone."

Rebel: Oust government but not Gemayel

By Hala Khoury, United Press International

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Rebel leader Walid Jumblatt threatened to tear Lebanon apart with renewed civil war unless the minority Christian-dominated government resigned. But he denied today calling for the resignation of President Amin Gemayel.

"We will not stop fighting this time unless and until the Gemayel government resigns, even if this means the complete destruction of Lebanon," Jumblatt said in an interview published Sunday by the Amman-based Jordan Times.

But today, a spokesman for Jumblatt's Syrian-backed Druze militia, said the remarks were misinterpreted. "We are calling for the resignation of the Gemayel government but not for the resignation of President Amin Gemayel himself," said Marwan Hamza, a former Lebanese cabinet minister, in a telephone conversation.

Warzan, on previous occasions, has expressed readiness to step down and allow for a broad-based national coalition cabinet. Gemayel has turned down the Warzan offer.

On the ground, Druze militiamen clashed intermittently with Lebanese army units on the hills overlooking the capital. Military sources said the skirmishes were brief and, unlike previous clashes, did not spill outside the battle zone.

Pro-lifers rally vs. abortion at Capitol

By David E. Anderson, United Press International

WASHINGTON — Opponents of the 11-year-old Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion hope a meeting with President Reagan today and a protest at the high court will help unify the movement and mark a new drive to reverse the ruling.

Reagan planned to greet leaders of the anti-abortion movement at the White House before they lead the first march ever on the Supreme Court. Demonstrations at the court have been illegal in the past, but a ruling last year now allows such protests.

Anti-abortion leaders are openly disappointed with the president for not making abortion one of his key issues. Reagan aides recently said he intends to "redouble" his efforts to place restrictions on abortions.

Rally organizers are making no predictions on the turnout for the 11th annual rose-festooned March for Life but say they hope it draws more than last year's claimed 20,000 people — one of the lowest turnouts since the protests started.

The National Organization for Women also planned demonstrations today in support of the court's Jan. 22, 1973 ruling, and against Reagan's anti-abortion stand.

"Since his election, President Reagan has launched a major assault against women's rights to decide when and whether to have children," said NOW President Judy Goldsmith. "He seeks to return to a time when even rape or incest victims had to bear unwanted children, when hundreds of women died each year from botched abortions."

Jean Doyle, president of the largest grassroots anti-abortion group, the National Right to Life organization, Sunday called for unity in the movement.

In an interview with the Catholic newspaper "Our Sunday Visitor," she said the movement needs to "coalesce all groups on the issue that human life is sacred."

"We simply have to start calling people on the phone and asking for cooperation," Mrs. Doyle said. "We've already had excellent results."

Inmate hopes execution will be stopped

STARKE, Fla. (UPI) — Attorneys for Anthony Antone, at 66 the oldest man on Florida's death row, hope a federal judge will block Tuesday's execution of the convicted killer who is concerned electrocution will upset his passage to an afterlife.

Antone insists he is innocent of the 1975 gangland murder of former Tampa vice detective Richard Cloud and was convicted only because he is Italian.

"I have never killed anyone," he said. "Being an Italian and Sicilian, they always put the stigma of Mafia on me. I don't know why."

Tom McCoun, Antone's attorney, said Sunday he would seek a reprieve today from U.S. District Judge George Carr at a hearing in Tampa. He said he has also made provisions to file for a stay with the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta and the Supreme Court, if necessary.

Antone, who came within a day of being executed in 1982 before a stay was granted, once said waiting for death has been the worst part.

Court backs Connecticut evidence ruling

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court today let stand a Connecticut court decision suppressing evidence against an alleged drug ring because police who tapped a public phone with court permits improperly monitored hundreds of private conversations.

The justices refused to disturb the state court ruling banning use of the evidence against four alleged drug dealers because the police abused the warrant issued to tap a public telephone.

The ruling prevents the prosecution of alleged members of a Connecticut drug ring suspected of trafficking in Mexican heroin in the Terryville, Plainville, and Burlington areas.

The men were arrested by police after a wire tap was installed on a public telephone at the Austin House Hotel in Terryville to monitor calls made to or by a man who sold heroin to police undercover agents.

Police obtained a warrant to tap the phone because they believed the man at the hotel — an addict who did not have large amounts of money — was not the main source of the drugs.

"The wire taps led agents to the men who were later indicted for selling the heroin. The evidence against them, however, was suppressed by the trial judge who ruled agents violated the terms of the warrant."

The judge said it was improper for agents monitoring the public phone to listen in on calls that did not involve the drug dealer. He also held it was improper for agents to monitor calls made to or by the drug dealer when those calls were of a personal nature and were not germane to the investigation.

On appeal, the state supreme court rejected prosecutors' claims that only private discussions improperly monitored, not talk of drug-smuggling among alleged members of the drug ring, should have been suppressed.

The state high court held that barring trial use of only the improperly monitored conversations would "remove the incentive (of police) to call for line-item veto authority."

State prosecutors argued the restrictions placed on them were unreasonable because with many of the calls it was impossible to quickly determine whether a call was innocent or not.

"It was not possible to detect the callers' identities and, therefore, anticipate their conversations, and, in other cases, the conversation did not last long enough to be deemed innocent before it concluded," the state said.

Feds may challenge equal-pay decision

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Reagan administration is moving to challenge a major sex discrimination ruling ordering Washington state to pay millions of dollars in back pay to women paid less than men in state jobs of "comparable worth." The Washington Post reported in Monday editions.

Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds, head of the Justice Department's civil rights division, said he is displeased with U.S. District Judge Jack E. Tanner and expected to announce soon that the administration is challenging the ruling.

He and other administration officials told the Post they would press for such a move despite a likely election-year upsurge. The administration could intervene in the case or file a brief supporting the state's appeal.

The decision is likely to be made by the White House because of its political sensitivity, several officials said. Reynolds' proposal would go first to Solicitor General Rex E. Lee, who is expected to support it.

Tanner's decision was one of the first to do more than require equal pay for equal work, as set forth in a 1963 federal law, and to call for equal pay for men and women in different jobs deemed to have the same value, or "comparable worth."

It was hailed by labor union leaders and women's groups. Three Democratic presidential candidates have endorsed the idea behind the ruling.

Tanner found that state jobs held predominantly by women drew 20 percent less pay than jobs of comparable worth by men.

But the ruling does not answer the "threshold question" of whether discrimination caused the pay disparities, Reynolds said.

Four Europeans are killed in Uganda

KAMPALA, Uganda (UPI) — Suspected anti-government guerrillas went on a shooting spree on the outskirts of Kampala, killing four Europeans and critically wounding another. Western diplomatic sources said today.

The attackers were believed to be members of the National Resistance army, which is fighting to overthrow Ugandan President Milton Obote, diplomats said.

The sources said the shootings were probably an attempt by rebels to wreck a conference of nations assisting Uganda, scheduled to be held Tuesday in Paris, by making it appear that Europeans were unsafe in the East African nation.

The sources said apparently the same gang of at least ten gunmen stopped two cars at separate locations Sunday afternoon.

Two Swiss agricultural experts and two unidentified Europeans driving to the Kasi Sailing Club, located on the shores of Lake Victoria about 5 miles south of Kampala, were stopped by the gunmen and told to get out of their car.

The gunmen, armed with automatic weapons, then shot the Swiss nationals in the head and in the back, shot a third European in the stomach and the fourth in the head, the sources said.

The sources said three of the men died instantly and the man shot in the stomach was taken to a Kampala hospital, where he was in "very critical" condition, authorities said.

The gunmen struck one hour later about 3 miles away on the same road, stopping another vehicle and shooting and killing another European, the sources said.

Diplomats in the Ugandan capital said the names of the victims would not be released until next of kin were informed. There was no immediate reaction from the Ugandan government.

Mondale is leading Glenn, survey of Democrats shows

By Clay F. Richards, United Press International

WASHINGTON — Former Vice President Walter Mondale has a strong lead in the race for the first 164 delegates to the Democratic National Convention who will be picked this week by House Democrats, a United Press International survey shows.

The survey of the 272 Democrats in the House showed that 83 — 34 percent — support or lean to Mondale, while 29 — 11 percent — back Sen. John Glenn of Ohio.

Next in line is Sen. Alan Cranston of California with 14 supporters, or 5 percent, followed by former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew with 10 supporters, or 3.7 percent. Jesse Jackson will have eight, or 3 percent — and Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado and Ernest Hollings of South Carolina each with four supporters or 1.5 percent.

Former Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota had no House supporters. Rep. Morris Udall of Arizona, running as a favorite son, has one home state supporter.

Most of the 119 other Democrats in the House did not state a preference and a few could not be reached.

Although the delegates can choose to be personally committed to a candidate, they are unpledged under the rules, which gives them the freedom to switch their affiliation before the convention.

Not all of these members, of course, will be chosen as delegates, but all will cast votes under new rules that will send three-fifths of the House Democrats — and 27 senators to be chosen later — to the convention in San Francisco July 16-19.

House delegates will be chosen in committees this week and ratified by all House Democrats next week.

The survey shows that most of the presidential candidates have regional or special interest strength, while Mondale is strong across the board and even cuts into the home bases of some of his rivals.

For example, 12 of Cranston's 14 supporters come from California. Mondale has 11 supporters in California. Jackson depends largely on members of the black caucus for his House support, but Mondale also has members of the black caucus, such as Rep. Mickey Leland of Texas.

Mondale has even cut into Glenn's home state of Ohio, where he is backed by Rep. Tony Hall. Glenn, however, has not cut into Mondale's home state support in Minnesota.

"I think this delegate selection process this week is going to be significant for two reasons," said Richard More, an attorney who led the 16-month campaign to win congressional support for Mondale.

"The Congress will pick nearly 200 delegates — larger than all but three states will send to the convention — and it's the first real test of strength among the candidates where real delegates are at stake," he said.

WASHINGTON — Political grants used to roam the corridors of the U.S. Senate, and politics ebbed and swirled around men like Lyndon Johnson, Everett Dirksen, Hubert Humphrey, J. William Fulbright, John Sparkman, Richard Russell, Russell Long, James Eastland and John Stennis.

In recent years, however, being a U.S. senator has become more and more of a chore. The power has shifted across the Hill to the best potential challengers to incumbents have declined to run, almost guaranteeing an incumbent's return.

BOTH PARTIES have been affected by this phenomenon. In state after state, those judged to be the best potential challengers to incumbents have declined to run, almost guaranteeing an incumbent's return.

For the Democrats, regaining control of the Senate carries a priority slightly lower than that of capturing the presidency. The GOP holds a 53-45 margin, following the special election victory of Don Evans in Washington to succeed the late Henry Jackson. Therefore, to accomplish their goal, the Democrats must gain six Senate seats.

Thirty-three Senate seats will be contested this November, of which 19 are now held by the GOP and 14 by Democrats. Now that the November contests are set in most states, the experts say that 19 of the 33 are really not worth worrying about. In many cases, these races are situations in which the strongest available challenger has decided to pass up the contest. The parties now controlling these seats will retain control unless something extraordinary happens — a major blunder by the incumbent, the sudden emergence of a very strong challenger or a landslide victory by either presidential contender. Any other result would be a major upset.

INCLUDED IN this group are 11 of the Democratic seats and eight of the 19 GOP seats. The "safe" Democrats include Sens. Paul Tsongas of Massachusetts, Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island, Bill Bradley of New Jersey, David Pryor of Arkansas, Joseph Biden of Delaware, Howell Heflin of Alabama, Sam Nunn of Georgia, James Exon of Nebraska.

In Kentucky, Huddleston is facing Republican Mitch McConnell, who is believed to have the fundraising ability to stage a major campaign. There's some question as to the depth of Huddleston's power base, but the Democratic Party showed considerable strength in Kentucky's 1983 gubernatorial race, which was won by Democrat Martha Collins.

In Montana and Michigan, the Republicans have not yet chosen candidates. It's believed that both Baucus and Levin might be vulnerable if the GOP fielded its strongest possible

Bennett Johnston of Louisiana and David Boren of Oklahoma. In addition, it's assumed that West Virginia Gov. Jay Rockefeller, who is running for the Senate seat now held by Jennings Randolph, will hold that seat for the Democrats, since former Republican Gov. Arch Moore has decided not to run.

The remaining three Democratic seats running for re-election in 1984 are Sens. Walter Huddleston in Kentucky, Max Baucus in Montana, and Carl Levin in Michigan. All three are favored to win re-election, but many party proponents stop short of putting them in the safe category.

OF THE 19 up-for-grabs seats now held by Republicans, eight are considered "safe" because of the incumbent's strength or the lack of a strong opposition candidate. The eight "safe" GOP incumbents are Sens. James McClure of Idaho, Nancy Kassebaum of Kansas, Ted Stevens of Alaska, Mark Hatfield of Oregon, Larry Pressler of South Dakota, Pete Domenici of New Mexico, Alan Simpson of Wyoming, and William Armstrong of Colorado.

This means that the fight for control of the Senate will occur primarily in the remaining 11 GOP states. To retain control of the Senate, the GOP, assuming it doesn't dislodge any Democrats, will have to win six of these contests.

WASHINGTON — I have been investigating the Latin American "death squads," which practice politics by assassination. Not only do they belong to a subterranean network of right-wing groups that cooperate across international boundaries, but they reportedly are connected to a political "front group" that retains some respectability.

THE LEAGUE is an ultraconservative worldwide organization, founded in Taiwan in 1967. It operates in the open and holds annual conferences at its affiliated groups. In recent years, league watchers have noted the inclusion of known neo-Nazi, white-supremacist groups in the organization. There is concern that the World Anticommunist League was taken over by fascist elements in the 1970s. El Lobo's information now gives credence to this concern.

El Lobo identified the group as the Latin American Anticommunist Confederation, which is a member of the World Anticommunist League.

Connecticut In Brief

Man jailed for contempt

HARTFORD — A New Britain man has been jailed for refusing to testify before a grand jury investigating gambling and organized crime in central Connecticut.

Thomas Anderson was found in contempt of court for refusing to testify and was sentenced Friday to six months in prison.

Rockville Superior Court Judge Arthur L. Spada said Anderson will be released from the Brooklyn Correctional Center if he agrees to testify before the one-man grand jury.

Anderson claimed his Fifth Amendment right against self incrimination, but still refused to testify after being granted immunity.

Teens face rape charges

BETHEL — Police Chief John Basile has recommended first-degree sexual assault charges be lodged against three 14-year-old youths accused of assaulting a 14-year-old girl with a broom handle.

Police said two of the Bethel High School students allegedly held the victim while a third assaulted her with a broom stick last Sunday.

The names of the victim and her alleged assailants were not made public by police.

Detectives had considered third-degree sexual assault charges but Basile said he decided on the more serious counts after reading the full report of the investigation.

Driver ignored signals

DARREN — Railroad officials say a 28-year-old New York man apparently ignored traffic signals and drove across railroad tracks where his car was struck by a Metro-North commuter train.

Thomas Cafferty of Mahopac Falls, N.Y., was killed in the accident at 7 p.m. Friday, a Metro-North spokesman said.

Cafferty "apparently crossed right through the signals" at the crossing fitted with lights, but no barrier, said police Detective Fred Komm.

The empty four-car train was heading south to Stamford from the New Canaan branch of the Haven Line, when it struck and dragged the car one-quarter mile, officials said.

Fires kill two in state

A cigarette was blamed for a condominium fire that killed an 82-year-old West Hartford woman, one of two victims of weekend fires in the Hartford area, fire officials said.

Nellie Buist, 82, of West Hartford, was found dead in her second-floor condominium on Bishop Avenue about 12:15 p.m. Saturday. The blaze apparently was caused by careless smoking. Fire Chief Robert Romanski said a cigarette probably ignited a chair.

At Hartford, Elmer Wood, 87, was killed when a fire damaged his apartment in a 2½ story building on Hillside Avenue around 1:20 a.m. Saturday. There were no other injuries reported and the fire was under investigation.

Youth charged with murder

NEW HAVEN — The 17-year-old son of a deceased New Haven police officer has been charged with murder and three indictments of aiding and abetting murder for the fatal stabbing of Anthony Greco, 21, of New Haven.

Greco was found lying near the intersection of Grand Avenue and Alister Street early Saturday after witnesses reported seeing him fighting with three men.

Witnesses took Greco to the Hospital of St. Raphael around 5 a.m. He was pronounced dead around 5 a.m. from a stab wound to the chest.

Edward Napolitano was charged with murder and released on $35,000 bond. The suspect is the son of the late New Haven police officer Edward Napolitano.

Charged with aiding and abetting murder were Albert Bellucci, 17, and Neil Rao, 17, both of New Haven and Ernest Mongillo, 17, of North Haven. Bellucci and Rao were released after posting $20,000 bail. Mongillo was still in custody.

Children are arsonists

NEW HAVEN — City fire investigators said fires set by children, whether accidental or intentional — have become a serious problem, causing deaths and hundreds of thousands of dollars in damage.

Fire Capt. John Horke, head of the Fire Investigation Unit, said the problem was acute in 1983 when 16 juveniles between the ages of 8 and 15 were charged with arson fires in the city.

Another 30 children under age 8 used matches or cigarette lighters to set fires that got out of their control, about double the previous high in recent years.

Also, children may be responsible for many other fires listed as suspicious. Rourke said. There were 172 arson fires reported in the city last year.

Bald eagles being harassed

HARTFORD — Connecticut's bald eagles have not been injured by hunters as in neighboring states, but conservation officers were worried about reports the majestic birds were being harassed in the western part of the state.

Two bald eagles have been struck by shotgun pellets in Massachusetts and Rhode Island since Jan. 7. The birds suffered broken wings requiring veterinary attention, but were expected to recover.

"We, luckily, haven't had that happen," said Rita Maronecchi, a wildlife biologist in charge of the Connecticut eagle program. But she said complaints have been received about people throwing rocks at the birds in the western part of the state.

Eagles, along with hawks and owls, are protected by state and federal laws. Disturbing or killing an eagle in Connecticut is punishable by a $100 fine, 30 days in jail or both. Federal law carries fines or civil penalties of up to $10,000.

Motorcycle deaths tallied

WETHERFIELD — Figures compiled by the state Department of Motor Vehicles show the 21 state and 22-year-old age groups had the largest number of fatal motorcycle accidents in 1983, with 13 fatalities in each of these groups.

The MVD said figures compiled by the Traffic Records Unit showed there were multiple fatalities (operator and passenger) in three of the 84 fatal motorcycle accidents in 1983.

Total motorcycle fatalities declined from 109 in 1982 to 84 in 1983.

State GOP hoping for Reagan boost

By Mark A. Dupuis

HARTFORD — President Reagan may be the key factor in deciding the makeup of Connecticut's next congressional delegation and state Republican leaders are looking to the president to help them break even with Democrats.

Only one congressional contest shows signs of a possible close race this time, though Democrats concede they could have problems in at least one other district, depending on Reagan's coalition.

Republicans have re-elected only one person to a statewide office in the past quarter century, maverick Sen. Lowell Weicker Jr. But they have fared well in presidential races, carrying Connecticut in the past three elections.

Reagan, who captured the state in 1980, has a comfortable lead in the polls so far this time around.

Without a U.S. Senate or gubernatorial race to provide the possibility of in-state coalitions, Reagan's performance could play a significant role in the state's Democratic Party agenda.

The closest race appears to be shaping up in the New Haven area's 3rd District, where liberal Rep. Bruce A. Morrison, D-Conn., is facing a rematch with Republican Lawrence J. DeNardis, whom he ousted by 1,887 votes in 1980.

"The 3rd one appears to be the race with the most sex appeal," said Peter Gold, executive director of the state GOP.

DeNardis faces a possible primary challenge from the state's House Democratic Leader Thomas Scott of Milford, but should easily take the nomination.

"We've been working with him all along in any way we can to help him," Gold said.

Donald Melke, executive director of the state Democratic Party, agreed a close contest was likely, but said Morrison had done a good job in his first term.

"I think it's obviously going to be a hard-fought rematch," Melke said. "The only way DeNardis can oust him is if he has a major assist from the top of the ticket."

"Everything depends on the top of the ticket," Melke said. If the assumption is that Reagan is going to win Connecticut then the question is who is the most vulnerable.

Gold agreed Reagan would be a key factor in the state's House race.

Cohen tells launch crowd Soviet subs threaten U.S.

By Earl F. Flowers
United Press International

GROTON — The Soviet Union has developed five new classes of submarines in an apparent attempt to challenge the U.S. Navy's ballistic missile submarines, "whenever they see it expedient to do so," says Sen. William S. Cohen.

Cohen made the disclosures, including previously classified information, Saturday at Electric Boat shipyard during a launching ceremony for the August 21, 1984, nuclear-powered attack submarine.

"It's clear that the Soviets are building a blue-water navy in order to project power to distant lands and to be in a position to challenge our naval capability whenever they see it expedient to do so," Cohen said.

"Our intelligence sources expected to see two or three new classes of (Soviet) submarines. Three new classes did appear — the Oscar, the Alfa and the Typhoon — but they were surprised by the unexpected early appearance of two additional new classes, the Mike and the Sierra," Cohen said.

Cohen, a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee who is facing re-election for a second term, said "the Mike appears a follow-on to the Sierra."

"The New Haven Register said Sunday information supporting the allegations would come out in school about a long distance call to Dallas, charged to his phone on a calling card number."

The Register quoted sources as saying Krupnik notified Krupnik in early November about the phone call Schuss allegedly billed to his room. The Schuss family worshipped at Young Israel.

Law enforcement officials said the youth confessed his crimes to Krupnik, who discussed the matter with Schuss' parents. West Hartford lawyer John Droney was contacted and arranged for his surrender.

The first representative I had was that (Schuss) turned himself in to the rabbi," said Hartford State's Attorney John M. Bailey.

Enjoying the cold

The cold that hit Connecticut during the weekend also struck other parts of New England, including New Hampshire, where ice fisherman Tommy Sharpe found a way to make the best of things. Sharpe, of Salem, holds up a yellow perch he caught Sunday while fishing on Lake Winnepesaukee. The fisherman divides his time between the outdoors and the ice-fishing house behind him, which has a hole through which he can fish and at the same time watch the flag outside.

Lawmakers, CCLU study reversing NOW ruling

HARTFORD (UPI) — Several legislators and the Connecticut Civil Liberties Union may seek changes in the law or state constitution to reverse a state Supreme Court decision limiting freedom of speech on private property.

In a 3-2 decision Tuesday, the Connecticut Supreme Court ruled the National Organization for Women had no right to collect petition signatures or distribute information in the privately owned "Westfarm Mall" without the owner's permission.

Rep. Richard D. Tulisano, D-Rocky Hill, said the issue is being researched to determine whether a new law or amendment to the state constitution is needed to lift the restriction.

Tulisano, ex-chairman of the Legislature's Judiciary Committee, called the court's decision "crazy."

"Can you throw out a tenant just because you don't like something they said? They're just like any other landlord — but bigger," Tulisano said.

Sen. Howard T. Owens Jr., D-Bridgewater, and Tulisano's counterpart on the Judiciary Committee, said "the mall has become quasi-public" and NOW's rights to freedom of speech should allow it access to the mall.

The justices said the state constitution did not extend the right to freedom of speech to public property. While the constitution protects the right from infringement by government, it does not apply to infringement by private interests or individuals — such as the mall owners, the justices said.

William Olo, director of the CCLU, which represented NOW in the suit, said the state Supreme Court will be asked to rehear the case. Meanwhile, the CCLU will help draft corrective legislation. Olo said.

"We feel very strongly, the general public is with us," said Peter Hollis, vice president of the Tamkang Co. in Detroit, the mall's managers. "The voice of the people has become the modern shopping center is not open to political activists groups that can disrupt shoppers."

Johnny Weissmuller's wife, Maria, brushes away a tear at the funeral for the former movie Tarzan and Olympic swimming champion at an Acapulco, Mexico, cemetery Sunday. Weissmuller died at age 79.

ACAPULCO, Mexico (UPI) — Johnnie Weissmuller, Olympic swimming champion and the best-known movie Tarzan, was buried in a marble tomb at a funeral attended by scores of Mexican fans and a chimpanzee. Weissmuller, the winner of five gold medals in the 1924 and 1928 Olympic Games, died Saturday at age 79 from a lung blockage, his doctors said. An estimated 1,500 people, many of them children, gathered at the downtown Acapulco funeral home Sunday as the funeral cortege, escorted by six police motorcycles, set off on the 12-mile journey north to the Valley of Light cemetery. About 1,000 of the mourners followed the cortege on foot or in buses as it proceeded slowly to the cemetery where Weissmuller's body was interred in a marble tomb. A few American tourists were among the crowd, but none of the Hollywood celebrities. Weissmuller worked with present residents said. A chimpanzee, like Tarzan's movie companion Chetah, accompanied the procession. The chimp, named Samanta — Spanish for Samantha — is the mascot of Acapulco restaurant owner Jose Rodriguez. Jose Estrada, who worked as Weissmuller's double in a Mexican-made Tarzan movie, was also present. Weissmuller's wife, Maria, appeared grim and upset, and refused to talk to reporters.

Weissmuller, the winner of five gold medals in the 1924 and 1928 Olympic Games, died Saturday at age 79 from a lung blockage, his doctors said. An estimated 1,500 people, many of them children, gathered at the downtown Acapulco funeral home Sunday as the funeral cortege, escorted by six police motorcycles, set off on the 12-mile journey north to the Valley of Light cemetery. About 1,000 of the mourners followed the cortege on foot or in buses as it proceeded slowly to the cemetery where Weissmuller's body was interred in a marble tomb. A few American tourists were among the crowd, but none of the Hollywood celebrities. Weissmuller worked with present residents said. A chimpanzee, like Tarzan's movie companion Chetah, accompanied the procession. The chimp, named Samanta — Spanish for Samantha — is the mascot of Acapulco restaurant owner Jose Rodriguez. Jose Estrada, who worked as Weissmuller's double in a Mexican-made Tarzan movie, was also present. Weissmuller's wife, Maria, appeared grim and upset, and refused to talk to reporters.

Manchester police roundup

Police hunt man in armed holdup

Police are searching for an unidentified man, spotted Sunday night driving a car with New York license plates, in connection with an armed robbery early this morning at Burger King on Center Street, Manchester police said today.

The amount of cash taken is still undetermined, police said. Officers in both the East Hartford and Manchester police departments reported giving a man of similar description directions Sunday night shortly before the robbery, police said.

According to police, a Burger King employee left the back of the building to dispose of some garbage around 2 a.m. Just outside the door he encountered a man armed with a revolver and carrying a blue laundry bag, police said.

The employee later described the man as Hispanic and sported a moustache, police said. He wore a homemade cloth mask and was dressed in a green army jacket, blue jeans, dark gloves, blue sneakers with a yellow closing and white socks, police said.

The man forced the employee back into the building after rounding up two other men who were working inside, he ordered all three to kneel on the floor with their heads down, police said.

The man then stuffed the day's receipts, which were laid out on the counter for counting, into his laundry bag, police said.

The man pulled two phone lines out of the wall before leaving, police said. When he was gone, two employees managed to break loose. One ran across the street to use his home phone and the other called the police.

Police wired all Connecticut police departments to stop and question the occupants of an orange, two-door, 1977 Buick with New York registration 7489-A. The officers who said they spoke to the driver earlier in the evening got into the Super Bowl against them and then proved what we felt all along — that we were better than they were.

"I think we were playing against a better team than we were three years ago (when the Raiders beat Philadelphia in the Super Bowl)," said quarterback Jim Plunkett. "We dominated a great team, offensively and defensively."

The Raiders were ahead 14-3 with time running out in the first half when Jack Squirek intercepted a screen pass from Joe Theismann intended for Joe Washington at the Redskins' 54 yard line.

"When he picked that one off, I felt pretty good about things," said

Raiders just super in whipping 'Skins

By Ivo Kaufman
UPI Sports Writer

TAMPA, Fla. — For two guys who supposedly hate each other, Pete Rozelle and Al Davis sure shake hands a lot.

The NFL Commissioner has been repeatedly beaten in court by Davis, the maverick owner of the Raiders in the franchise shift from Oakland to Los Angeles and an admitted animosity has grown between the two. On Sunday, for the second time in four years and the third time in eight, Rozelle had to maintain his composure while handing Davis the Super Bowl trophy emblematic of NFL supremacy.

Behind a record-setting rushing performance by Marcus Allen and a star-studded defense that shut down the most prolific offense in league history, the Raiders humiliated the Washington Redskins 38-9 Sunday in the most lopsided Super Bowl in the 12-game series.

Davis, basking in the glory of embarrassing a field goal favorite to become just the second club to win three Super Bowls, used the occasion to applaud his silver and black champions.

"Not only in my opinion are you the greatest Raider team of all time," he said, "but I think you rank with the great teams of all time to have ever played any professional sport."

Allen, who followed a disappointing regular season by rushing for 121 and 154 yards in the Raiders' decisive playoff victories, shredded the league's most grudging run defense for a Super Bowl record 191 yards on 20 carries, including a record 74-yard touchdown run on the final play of the third period. He was a unanimous choice as the game's Most Valuable Player.

"It was a foul-up to be honest with you," said Allen of his dazzling scoring scamper, in which he broke off a sweep to the left, reversed his field, eluded strong safety Ken Coffey and turned up the middle all the way. "Instead of going inside (right guard) Mickey Marvin I went outside and then I had to cut back to the middle where I saw some space."

"They said I wasn't fast enough," said Allen of the scouting reports which dropped his draft selection in the '82 draft despite a Heisman Trophy season. "They said I couldn't do it. Thank God I had the strength and the endurance."

Allen also had a 5-yard scoring run midway through the third period to stifle a Washington comeback bid and his 38-yard dash set up Chris Bahr's 21-yard field goal for the game's final score. Jim Plunkett, MVP of the Raiders' 27-10 triumph over Philadelphia in Super Bowl XV, played a smart, error-free game, completing 16-of-25 passes for 172 yards, his 80-yard bomb to Cliff Branch set up a 12-yard TD pass to Branch & 54 of the second period that put Los Angeles ahead 14-0.

"We dominated them from the beginning of the game to the end of the game," said Raiders' line

Allen runaway MVP pick

By Les Kios
UPI Sports Writer

TAMPA, Fla. — Last year, Marcus Allen had a great rookie season but brooded over why he lasted so long in the draft before he was picked as the 10th selection overall by the Los Angeles Raiders.

After all, he had won the Heisman Trophy in his senior year at Southern California.

Then, earlier this year he was unhappy about not getting the ball enough after his performance as a rookie.

But he put all that behind him in Sunday's 38-9 Super Bowl victory over the Washington Redskins. Allen was so spectacular President Reagan was joking that the Kremlin was calling him a "secret weapon" that should be banned.

He also was the hands-down choice for Most Valuable Player. Allen ran for touchdowns of 54 and 74 yards while rolling up 191 yards on 20 carries. The 74-yarder was the longest run from scrimmage ever in a Super Bowl and the 191 yards broke John Riggins' record of 183 set last year when the Redskins won the Super Bowl.

Allen also set records for highest average gain rushing at 9.55 and most combined yards at 200, which includes 18 in pass receptions.

"I just got a call from Moscow and they said he was a secret weapon and we should dismantle it," Reagan told Raider coach Tom Flores.

The second-year running back said he did not hear Reagan, but "if that's the case, that's a very nice thing for the President to say."

Allen said the thrill of winning the game and the Most Valuable Player Award topped anything in his career, including winning the Heisman Trophy for Southern California.

"This is a different level. This is number one. This is an extravaganza," he added. "Records are made to be broken, but I'm going to enjoy these for awhile."

Early in the year Allen was disappointed he wasn't getting to carry the ball as often as he wanted and complained to Raiders owner Al Davis. But he found little sympathy and Davis told him to run some extra laps after practice.

Soon after that, Allen said, "I just started to relax a little bit and everything came together. I wasn't having the year I wanted to but I hung in there."

He also said the success made up for the disappointment of being drafted 10th in 1982.

"They said I wasn't fast enough," said Allen, who was recruited by USC as a fullback. "They said I couldn't do it. Thank God I had the strength and the endurance. I feel I've matured as a running back. You have to understand this is only my fourth or fifth year playing the position."

But Allen said the biggest play of his biggest game began as a mistake. Allen described the long touchdown as a play to the left called "17 Block Trail." He said the tackle and tight end double-teamed the defensive tight end while the guard, Mickey Marvin, pulled out.

Allen said he was supposed to cut inside of Marvin but for some reason did not.

"It was a foul-up to be honest with you. Instead of going inside Mickey I went outside and then I had to cut back to the middle where I saw some space."

"I felt someone grab me from behind, but I pulled away and then there was an alley," he said.

Allen cut to the right then angled to the middle and ran in untouched

Martin of a crashing blow administered by the Raiders' reserve linebacker in the final seconds of the first half. "Theismann didn't anticipate a guy being out there on that play."

Theismann's intended screen pass to Washington in the left flat was picked off by Squirek, who went in for the score from five yards out to put the Raiders ahead 21-3 with seven seconds remaining in the half.

"I didn't see the linebacker covering Joe," said Theismann, who completed just 16-of-35 passes and suffered two interceptions and six sacks. "This is probably the first time since Joe Gibbs has been here that anyone has contained this offense the way the Raiders did tonight. But the thing you have to consider also is our inability to run the football — we're basically a running team."

The Redskins' formula for success calls for fullback John Riggins to wear down a defense running behind the "Hogs" of the offensive line. But Riggins, who had a post-season record of six straight 100-yard rushing games, averaged just 2.3 yards on his 26 carries as the Raiders' front seven dominated the Redskins' offensive. After Theismann found Charlie Brown for 23 yards to trigger a 70-yard march with the second-down, Riggins carried four straight times from the 13 and plunged over from a yard out to pull the Redskins within 21-9.

Reserve tight end Don Hasselbeck then blocked Mosley's extra point attempt.

Rocket screen proved costly

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — Washington quarterback Joe Theismann summed up the Redskins' 38-9 drubbing by the Los Angeles Raiders in Super Bowl XVIII in two sentences.

"We just did not play good football and the Raiders played great football," a dejected Theismann said Sunday. "They beat us in every facet of the game."

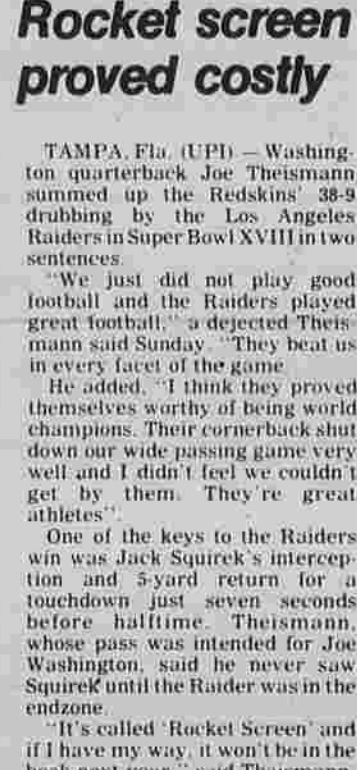

He added, "I think they proved themselves worthy of being world champions. Their corner back shut down our wide passing game very well and I didn't feel we could get by them. They're great athletes."

One of the keys to the Raiders' win was Jack Squirek's interception and 53-yard return for a touchdown, just five seconds before halftime. Theismann, whose pass was intended for Joe Washington, said he never saw Squirek until the Raider was in the endzone.

"It's called 'Rocket Screen' and if I have my way, it won't be in the book next year," said Theismann, who completed 16-of-35 passes for 183 yards Sunday. "It's a hard play. It was terrible execution. I take full responsibility. I didn't see the linebacker."

"We expected zone coverage because we had three wide receivers to the other side. It's sort of a take of a Hail Mary play. But they played Joe man-to-man and had a guy right there that I didn't see."

"The flaw in the play was in the execution," said Theismann. "I take full responsibility for it."

Redskins' John Riggins is left on his knees in the wake of the total destruction of his team in Super Bowl XVIII. Big fullback was held to 64 yards in 26 carries by hard-hitting Los Angeles defense.

No. 1 line powers MHS to ice win over Windsor

BOLTON — With the first line of Galen Byram, Eric Trudon and Bobby Blake accounting for all of the goals, Manchester High overcame Windsor High 9-3, in ice hockey action Saturday night here at the Bolton Ice Palace. The victory was the 11th in as many outings for the Silk Town team, while the setback drops Windsor to 6-8 for the season. Byram, senior left wing, had six goals to bring his total for the season to 31. He has scored 15 goals in his last three games. He also assisted on the other three Indian tallies, all by centerman Trudon, to bring his total in that department to 32. Blake had five assists as the line accounted for 18 points. One negative point, however, was that Manchester coach Wayne Horton wished he received some scoring elsewhere. "I was real happy the way the first line played but I'm upset the

No justice in world as East icemen fall

By Rich Cahill Herald Sports Writer South Windsor coach Vin Russo agreed in part, but said his team deserved the victory. "We were outplayed, but the scoreboard displays the score only," Russo said. "I was really proud of the kids," he said. "They had a lot of heart." The Bobcats, 8-2, needed all the heart they could muster to stave off East. The game was an important one for the Eagles because South Windsor defeated them three times last year — twice in the regular season and then in the semifinals of the state Division II tournament. Saturday's match had the atmosphere of a tournament game, with the sellout crowd cheering the Eagles from the opening faceoff. East came out slightly flat, however, and South Windsor took a 2-0 lead before eight minutes had been played. At the 5:15 mark, Bobcat left wing Alan DeBessa scored, assisted by Robbin and Kevin Sullivan. A little more than two minutes later, South Windsor's Chris Kishewitz scored on an assist from John Willoughby. From that point, the Eagles took almost total control of the game. They outshot the Bobcats, 14-9, in the first period, but were unable to score. East, 0-2, returns to the ice Wednesday night at the Bolton Ice Palace against Gastonbury High at 8:30.

'Hail Mary' Blucher shots makes Huskies a winner

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — Coach Dom Perrone called it a case of perseverance by Larry Blucher, who hit three jump shots down the stretch to lift the University of Connecticut to a 76-67 Big East win over Providence College. "I hadn't given Blucher that much playing time since the UMass game (Dec. 19)," said Perrone. "It's a case of his hard work and perseverance paying off. He's hardly a 50 percent shooter, let alone better than that. It was one of those 'Hail Mary' don't shoot it, good shot kind of deals." The third of Blucher's three shots from the field Saturday night, a 16-footer with 34 seconds left, put UConn ahead for good, 66-67. Blucher, inserted for defense against Providence's Otis Thorpe in the middle, found a favorite spot from the outside and hit three jumpers as the Huskies prevailed despite the absence of leading scorer Earl Kelley. Kelley is sidelined with a sprained ankle and when he'll be back in the lineup is uncertain. In the interim, the underdog Blucher, who was four-for-13 from the field in limited action, was perfect from the field as Connecticut topped the Friars, 76-67. Providence coach Joe Mullaney said his players lacked poise. "We didn't show the patience we

HARTFORD (UPI) — Hartford Whalers coach Jack Evans was looking for someone to pick up the slack from leading scorer Mark Johnson after watching his team give up its first home shutout since falling to Washington in 1981. "It's a struggle not scoring goals," said Evans. "The Johnson line has been in a drought and nobody is picking them up." Doug Keans posted his second straight shutout to spark the Boston Bruins to a 2-0 win over Hartford Saturday. Keans, who now owns the lowest goals-against average in the NHL, made 32 saves. He was coming off his 300th shutout Monday against the New York Islanders, which was his first career shutout. Keans said he had plenty of help

What a difference after Super blowout

By Don Cronin UPI Sports Writer Tampa, Fla. — Wasn't it just a few weeks ago that the Washington Redskins were being accused of building a dynasty, and Coach Joe Gibbs was tagged as the NFL's newest strategic genius? What a difference a day makes. Sunday, trying to win a second-straight Super Bowl, the Redskins were thrashed in record fashion, 38-9, by the Los Angeles Raiders. Realistically, the Redskins never were a factor. From the time Los Angeles backup tight end Derrick Jensen eluded Otis Womley to block Jeff Hayes' punt and recover in the endzone for a touchdown with the game less than five minutes old, the Redskins were dominated. "I never saw (Jensen) coming until I dropped the ball (to punt)," said Hayes. "I knew it would be tough to get it off, but it was too late

Lesser known Raiders were vital ingredients

By Orval Jackson UPI Sports Writer Tampa, Fla. — Reserve tight end Derrick Jensen blocked his first punt of the year and backup linebacker Jack Squirek intercepted his first pass. Both went for Los Angeles touchdowns and, at least for one game, the better-known Lyle Alzado, Howie Long and Lester Hayes had to take a back seat to the Raiders' subs. Jensen not only blocked a punt by Jeff Hayes, but recovered it in the endzone in the first quarter to open the flood gates for the Raiders' 38-9 Super Bowl victory over the Washington Redskins. Then with the Raiders holding a 14-3 lead with just 12 seconds to go in the first half, Squirek stepped in front of Joe Washington, intercepted a Joe Theismann pass at the 5-yard-line and went untouched to give the Raiders a 21-3 halftime cushion. Boston's Dennis Johnson (3) is triple teamed by Milwaukee's Bob Lanier (16), Marques Johnson and Paul Presley (25) under the basket at Boston Garden.

Maxwell unsung hero for Celtics in turning tide against Milwaukee

BOSTON (UPI) — If Robert Parish was the acknowledged star of the game, then Celtics forward Cedric Maxwell was the official unsung hero.

Maxwell's 15 points didn't top all scorers Sunday in Boston's 109-88 romp over the Milwaukee Bucks. But the forward, nicknamed "the inside man," chipped in with five assists and seven offensive rebounds — the bulk of those coming during an 18-2 third period spurt that tied the game for Boston.

"Max was awesome," said Parish, who scored 22 points and pulled down 15 rebounds.

"He (Maxwell) has been playing phenomenal basketball," said coach K.C. Jones. "He gets into the game's high score every night and a lot of the things he does don't get recognized. But he understands and he wants to be part of a winning system."

"And we needed a good game from him today because Larry (Bird) couldn't do much because he had someone draped over him all day.

Bird only managed 16 points.

Milwaukee coach Don Nelson also credited Maxwell with turning the game around.

"I'd say he was the key player during that spurt. He controlled the offensive boards and he can beat you in so many ways," said Parish, who scored six points and stole the ball once during the third-quarter rally, also credited Maxwell with keeping the drive going.

"He's our real inside man," said Parish. "He kept the ball alive, scored a few points. He's not afraid to get in there and use his body. He does so many things that don't show up in the stats."

The Celtics had opened a 46-25 second quarter lead, but quickly under shooting by Milwaukee's Junior Bridgeman and Marques Johnson brought the Bucks to within 58-56 at the half.

Johnson led all scorers with 26 points and 13 rebounds. Milwaukee's first-half attack.

The Celtics, who lost to the Bucks last Sunday 106-87 in a dual in the third quarter when, with 4:34 left, guard Dennis Johnson stole the ball and fed Parish at the top of the key to start an 18-2 Celtics surge.

Parish credited Maxwell for his work under the boards as the Celtics outbounded the Bucks 69-37 and cooled down Bridgeman and Johnson. The Bucks only managed 16 third quarter points.

"I don't know if you shut down a Bridgeman or a Johnson," said Parish. "But Max sure kept them under control."

"If you look at what they did, they beat us in every phase of the game," said Nelson. "We double-teamed them, they took bad shots, but they kept the ball back to back.

"They have big guards, so when they shoot, they send five guys to the boards," said Parish. "We did a great job keeping them off the boards, and we wound up with a lot of three-on-twos and two-on-ones, and got some easy baskets."

Nelson — no stranger to the Celtic style of basketball, having played in Boston during the late 1960s through mid 1970s — wasn't about to use Johnson's steal as any turning point.

"I don't know about turning points or anything like that," said Nelson. "I know they (Celtics) were doing what they do best — transition game. They made some good decisions on the fast break and they kept getting the ball back."

East's Kelly honored

HARTFORD — Jude Kelly, who led East Catholic to the Class MM state football championship in 1983, will be one of three men who will receive outstanding coach awards Wednesday night from the Northern Connecticut Chapter of the Football Foundation and Hall of Fame. The awards will be given at the Tower Suite building of the Hartford Insurance Group.

Kelly, who's team completed a 10-1 season with a few details remaining to be seen at the completion of the season, will be honored along with Joe Larden of Kingswood Oxford School and Bruce Kosenetz of Torrington High.

BALTIMORE — Robert Irsay, the embattled Colts owner who protests he has done nothing to move the team from its current home, ordered reservations on five moving vans for a Super Bowl weekend end run, it was reported Sunday.

Bill Shover, director of community services for The Arizona Republic, was quoted in Sunday's edition of the Baltimore Sun as saying preparations to move the Colts were nearing completion — including reservations placed on five moving vans.

Purzer takes Phoenix Open

PHOENIX, Ariz. — It was a shot familiar to weekend golfers — coming out of the dreaded sand trap.

Tom Purzer swung and the ball exploded from the sand. It was still picking up speed when it sailed over the green. Purzer and other pros call it "putting the ball in a little hole."

Most golfers call it "a screamer."

That was Friday, and when it happened hundreds of golfers of the weekend variety smiled knowingly.

"I consider myself a good bunker player, regardless of what the newspapers said the other day after I slashed that one over the green," Purzer said.

Sunday, when it really counted, Purzer was true to his word. Faced with a 30-foot bunker shot on the 18th hole in the final round of the $400,000 Phoenix Open, Purzer nailed it. It stopped a scant two feet from the pin and he rolled in the heroic putt.

Today, Purzer is $72,000 richer for his brilliant sand trap shot.

The birdie gave Purzer only his second victory in his nine years on the PGA Tour, and ended the dreams of young Corey Pavin.

Eagleon raises the stakes

TORONTO — Like a skilled poker player, Canada's chief international hockey negotiator Alan Eagleon keeps raising the stakes in an escalating battle between the American and Canadian Olympic teams.

Eagleon, who earlier in the week threatened the U.S. with exclusion from the prestigious Canada Cup hockey tournament, said Sunday some American players may have to return their hockey gold medals won at the 1980 Olympics.

Eagleon said the ever-increasing possibility of a U.S. protest over the eligibility of three Canadian Olympians who may have signed NHL contracts was ludicrous, considering the American squad may have been guilty of the same practice four years ago.

Louisville didn't waste any time

By United Press International

Louisville decided not to waste any time. The Cardinals started to a 14-4 lead in the opening three minutes of their upset of No. 11 UCLA Sunday, putting the Bruins into a state of shock from which they never recovered.

"In my experiences at UCLA, I've never seen a team start as fast as this Louisville team did," said UCLA coach Larry Farmer, who has been with the Bruins' varsity staff since 1979 and led coach since 1981. "I've never seen a team do this."

Louisville played at a level that surprised even its home court fans. Charles Jones dominated the game, scoring a career-high 27 points and grabbing a game-high 19 rebounds in the 88-78 upset at Louisville, Ky.

"I thought Charles Jones was just awesome today," said Louisville coach Denny Crum. "I thought anyone played well the first half, but he played superb the entire game."

Louisville had three other players in double figures with 17 points. Billy Thompson with 17 and Manual Forrest 11.

The Cardinals are now 11-4 overall and 4-0 in the West Conference. The game was considered a conference game for Louisville since it does not play North Carolina.

An elevated Crum now has his sights on bigger conquests, smiling at the mere thought of beating No. 2 DePaul in their upcoming game.

"We were especially happy to win, since this game counted as a conference game for us," Crum said. "If we can do that same in our other designated conference game at DePaul I'll be tickled."

The Bruins, 11-3, were led by Kenny Pridem with 25 points, Ralph Jackson with 19 and Stuart Gray with 20 points and 12 rebounds.

In games Saturday involving the top 10 teams, No. 1 North Carolina defeated Wyoming 69-66. No. 4 Texas-Est. Pass defeated Wyoming 54-46. No. 6 Georgetown walked No. 16 St. John's 83-61. No. 7 Maryland topped Old Dominion 69-58. No. 8 Nevada-Las Vegas edged No. 15 Fresno State 64-62. No. 9 Illinois whipped No. 14 Purdue 76-52 and No. 10 Oregon State lost to Washington 72-62.

Wildcats' 7-foot forward, grabbed 18 rebounds.

"We don't have as many big boys as I put in there as the West Conference," Louisville coach Joe Lewis said. "If you have two 7-footers to put in there against one 7-footer the intimidation ought to work out to about two to one."

The Cardinals' 18-2 win at Louisville was their eighth in the last nine, with the first in 3:01 left in the half.

Alvin Franklin led Houston, 16-3, with 25 points and Michael Young added 11.

"To come back like we did took a lot of pain," said Kentucky coach Joe B. Hall. "I thought we played with tremendous aggressiveness. We really came through the way a good team should."

Deregulation has helped both airlines and consumers

Air-fare wars again are breaking out in this, the fifth year of airline deregulation — and while not of the scope of the great transcontinental fare war of 1983, the bargain fares are welcome news to business and vacation travelers alike. This is particularly so on the New York to Miami route.

Your Money's Worth
Sylvia Porter

Most recent headlines about deregulation have been prompted by the well-publicized difficulties of Eastern, Continental, TWA and Air Florida. Underneath the headlines, if you read carefully, you can even detect scattered cries for re-regulation of the industry. Some airline executives have complained that deregulation has eroded profits and services, and they want to see the introduction of a floor price on fares.

While it's true that individual airlines have been hit by big losses and some have failed in the past few years, it's equally true that others have prospered. This group includes not just some of the upstart carriers, but old, well-established ones as well. Also, 1984 appears slated to be a year of increased passenger load and record profits.

THE CIVIL AERONAUTICS BOARD, scheduled to go out of existence at the end of this year (if Congress permits this to happen), soon will issue its report on deregulation's first five years. Favorable conclusions are expected, along with a recommendation that deregulation be continued.

Even without the report, some results of deregulation are clear. So far, the passenger ranks as the No. 1 winner in the battle of deregulation. When Congress passed the Airline Deregulation Act of 1978, it anticipated that fierce competition among the airlines would result in more efficient operations, a wider variety of passenger choices and a menial fares. These are, in fact, the consequences.

Overall, fares have increased (what has not become more expensive?), but the intense competition on certain routes has invited heavy discounting. This has benefited the traveling public and, on most flights, a range of fares is offered. If you, the passenger, can be flexible about plans, you can save substantially.

IN ADDITION TO FARE WARS, the real cost of travel has been distorted by the airlines themselves through flying too many planes with too many empty seats. The number of passengers flying on reduced fares shot up from 7 percent in 1980 to 78 percent in 1982 to 85 percent in the first six months of 1983. The spurt of 14 new carriers as a result of deregulation has contributed to bargain travel, too. The new airlines account for 2.4 percent of passengers, says the Air Transport Association, but their major impact has been on fares. Their lower operating costs have permitted them to charge less, and on many routes, they've helped push down fares.

Passengers from small communities probably have been most affected by deregulation. The days before deregulation were severely ideal, though, as the Aviation Consumer Action Project points out. Between 1960 and 1977, the CAB permitted airlines to pull out of 179 communities.

Today, airlines — usually small commuter ones — are paid a subsidy for serving small, money-losing destinations. The Airline Deregulation Act requires that service be provided for 555 communities that merit airline service before 1978.

THE RESULTS HAVE BEEN MIXED on all sides. Some communities have lost service; others have gained. In some cases, commuter lines have been able to provide more daily service than the larger carriers that formerly serviced the community. The "adventures of the industry" can all be blamed on "deregulation." The doubling of air prices in the 1970s, the upsurge in interest rates, back-to-back recessions — all came on top of the airlines' buying spree of the last decade in anticipation of big increases in passenger travel.

The carriers were struck with an overload of giant new jets when passenger traffic topped out in 1979 with 317 million paying passengers and then tumbled to 293 million by 1982.

Any of these adverse events of the late 1970s — and would have pinched traffic and profits. But they occurred just when deregulation took place.

If 1984 turns out to be the good year for the airlines that is expected, the benefits of deregulation will emerge clearly at last.

In spite of competition, small banks will stay around

By Gail Collins
United Press International

NEW YORK — Banks need not have a fear of brokerage houses bearing checking account services, according to a Robert Lader, a behavioral scientist who recently completed a survey of new bank consumer products.

"Banks and thrifts can clatter brokerages," he said. Lader, president of Behavioral Sciences Research Corp. in Minneapolis, surveyed 337 banks and 337 various sizes around the nation to find out what new products they were planning to offer in 1984.

The results, he said, showed consumers should expect a wave of new financial products within the next few months.

Only 15 percent of the banks and thrifts surveyed, however, offered consumer cash management accounts. But 63 percent said they were interested in offering them.

The cash management accounts were pioneered by brokerage houses that have begun offering combined checking, credit card, savings and brokerage programs. They promise to keep their customers' excess cash earning money. As banks develop their own cash management programs to counter the trend, Lader suggested, they should remember the brokers designed their system to encourage trading.

"You could literally buy a $30,000 car with your credit card," he said. There are still parities of the contest to Lader's critics, where customers do not seem to be offered such innovative programs and "people are excited if they can end up owing the banks more than they are worth."

Other banks have come up with "banker's" cash management accounts, that take advantage of a bank's capacity to lend," he said. "They reduce the reliance on stocks and bonds and increase the cash management aspects, as well as increasing consumer credit. It puts individual consumers in the position of having a diverse line of credit and the capacity to invest."

By combining all of a customer's assets in one account, he said, the banks should be able to find innovative ways to give their clients easy access to as much credit as possible. He cited one bank that worked out a system that gave customers access to loans on their home equity through their credit cards.

"You could literally buy a $30,000 car with your credit card," he said. There are still parities of the contest to Lader's critics, where customers do not seem to be offered such innovative programs and "people are excited if they can end up owing the banks more than they are worth."

endangered species, Lader said. In fact, he believes smaller institutions can outmaneuver their big competitors when it comes to innovative products.

"I bank with a little dinky one-horse, one-branch, $60 million local bank," he said. "The reason is they can give me two things I never could get at a bigger bank. I know my officer by name. I go to church with him. He's never going to leave that bank, and if he does I'll go with him because he knows me."

Besides the personal touch, smaller banks with aggressive management can offer a more flexible approach to devising new products, Lader said. One advantage for a small bank, he noted, is the lack of branches that have to be taught to adapt to a new program.

"If Bank of America announces, it has to do it 1200 times," he said. "That's a lot of paperwork if you're going to bring out a new product."

Somebody to market his idea. "The baseball cap seemed to be the most practical to manufacture and the most marketable," he said. The first 16,000 capabrellas recently arrived from a factory in Taiwan, and are already on sale in several Maine stores.

Trudeau said he'd like to see his invention to Broc-World Enterprises Inc., in exchange for a 7 percent royalty. That will bring him about $500 for each 1,000 capabrellas that are sold.

He went through a patent process, took on a partner, and found major league baseball star Lou Brock.

"I never came on anything until it happens, but all indications are it's going to take off," Trudeau said.

Trudeau, a 33-year-old pastry salesman from Portland, was looking at the option of supplementing his income with a hot idea when he remembered the bill he first developed three years ago.

He went through a patent process, took on a partner, and found

'Capabrella' could make rainy days fun

Portland, Maine (UPI) — Dave Trudeau was hoping to make some extra money by opening a hot dog stand when he got a better idea — "capabrella."

The capabrella is a full-sized umbrella with a brim that makes it look exactly like a baseball cap. That handle resembles a baseball bat.

It will be featured on a mail-order form to be included in bills sent out by Sears, Roebuck and Co. It will be produced and marketed by a company owned by former Declining interest rates tempt you to refinance a home mortgage. It may pay to refinance when interest rates drop three points below your current rate. Consider as well the prepayment penalty clause. It could cost as much as 3% of the loan balance to refinance. Also, be aware that you are almost assured of being charged "points," equal to 1% of the loan or more, for a new mortgage. Costs may be boosted further by your current rate and fees for a re-appraisal and the lender's legal expenses. However, front-end costs may not seem as high when you consider that points are tax deductible. Carefully weigh the plus and minus.
