Reagan signs order for Marine pullout

By Ira R. Allen
United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Reagan today signed an order for the withdrawal of U.S. Marines at Beirut International Airport and his spokesman said the pullout would start this weekend.

Spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters, "The president has given final approval" to a plan that would remove most of the troops within 30 days from today, starting this weekend.

A senior administration official, who spoke to reporters Thursday on condition he not be identified, said the Marines could be removed sooner if security conditions deteriorate and that all but about 500 servicemen will return to ships in the 6th Fleet offshore.

Left behind would be about 200 Marines on regular duty protecting the U.S. Embassy and the home of Ambassador Reginald Bartholomew and as many as 300 soldiers training the Lebanese army and providing support.

The official said the 1,400 Marines sent as peacekeepers almost 17 months ago are "politically vulnerable and possibly militarily vulnerable" because of the deterioration of the Lebanese government and army in the face of attacks from Moslem rebels, who have made steady gains in Beirut and have surrounded the Marines.

The official maintained that the Marines, once aboard their ships, will continue to function as part of the multinational force dispatched on a permanent basis Sept. 29, 1982.

The Italian, French and British governments already have announced a pullout of their troops. In announcing the departure of Italian troops Thursday, Defense Minister Giovanni Spadolini said, "There are no winners in Lebanon, only losers."

Since they came to Lebanon, first to shepherd the Palestine Liberation Organization out of the country then to provide psychological support for the shaky government of President Amin Gemayel, 264 Marines have been killed.

The senior official first said the Marines were in danger because of their position at the Beirut airport and later that they were not in danger, due to "an informal arrangement" with the rebels surrounding the base allowing them unimpeded movement.

"It is a little ambiguous," the official conceded, explaining that Gemayel wanted the Marines out so he would face one less problem as he tries to formulate a power-sharing scheme among religious and political factions opposing him.

"If you were in the government of Lebanon, you would want as few issues each day in your in-basket as possible," said the official, referring to the Marine presence.

Reagan announced the decision to pull most of the Marines back to the ships last week at the start of a five-day vacation at his California ranch.

The policy shift was announced in a written statement, putting the responsibility for developing a withdrawal plan on Weinberger. Since then, Reagan has not appeared before the public to explain the new action or answer questions about it.

U.S. shells missed targets

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The massive barrage against Syrian-controlled Lebanese territory of about 300 rounds of 16-inch shells laid down by the battleship New Jersey last week hit nothing of military value, Pentagon and other defense sources say.

The nine-hour bombardment with 1,900-pound high-explosive shells came less than 24 hours after President Reagan announced a shift in U.S. policy Feb. 7.

The policy change included a withdrawal of the U.S. Marines at Beirut International Airport and the use of naval gunfire "against any units firing into Beirut."

But the bombardment failed to strike any gun emplacements, bunkers or other targets of military value because there were no observers on the ground or in the air who could spot where the shells were landing or direct the fire more accurately, the sources said Thursday.

The account by the sources was contrary to a report saying the barrage killed Syria's commanding general in Lebanon in his bunker, which Pentagon officials have been unable to confirm. The sources said the report originated with the Lebanese army.

"The New Jersey hit nothing of military significance," one source said. "There was nobody doing any spotting, and the shells could have been five miles wide, and nobody would have known. There were a lot of empty holes."

The "battle damage assessment," as the after-action report on bombing or shelling is called, was conducted by Lebanese army soldiers and relayed to the Americans, said the sources, who requested anonymity so they could speak openly about the subject.

Although one source acknowledged there were civilian casualties and damage to civilian property because of the shelling, the sources said they had no indication of the extent.

News dispatches from the scene of the shelling said damage to civilian areas was far less extensive than reported by representatives of the Syrian-backed Moslem militia in Damascus.

Pentagon spokesmen, who said the New Jersey fired 290 shells Feb. 8, asserted they could not comment on the assessment because they had not seen it.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Gen. John Vessey, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, were briefed on the results of the bombardment Friday, another source said.

"Weinberger got upset," he said, because the bombardment did not achieve military results despite its volume.

Israelis cover retreat of Lebanese Army troops

By Philip Williams
United Press International

BEIRUT — Israeli army patrols moved northward to within 20 miles of Beirut today, offering Christians a safe retreat as Druze rebels poised for a new push against the shattered Lebanese army, Beirut radio said.

The Syrian-backed Druze, buoyed by a string of victories over the army, were regrouping to attack the last government stronghold protecting the palace of President Amin Gemayel, reports said.

The radio of the Christian Phalangist militia said Thursday that Druze gunners already had begun a bombardment of Souk el Gharb, which lies on a mountain ridge 3 miles from Gemayel's suburban east Beirut palace.

Druze villages near the Souk el Gharb army outpost were being shelled from army positions, the Druze militia's radio said. Other Lebanese radio reports said the Druze fighters were concentrating for an all-out push on Souk el Gharb.

The report of the Israeli move north of its Awali River line into an area near the Druze-held coastal town of Damour came as militia pressure forced Gemayel to offer to cancel the Lebanese-Israeli peace agreement signed last May 17.

Political sources said Gemayel, while accepting an eight-point Saudi plan, was withholding an official announcement pending assurances from the nation's warring factions.

Despite Gemayel's decision, which was confirmed by a U.S. official in Washington Thursday, Druze Moslem leader Walid Jumblatt still demanded the resignation of the Christian Lebanese president.

The abrogation of the treaty was part of an eight-point Saudi peace plan Gemayel agreed to. The plan makes major concessions to his Shiite Moslem and Druze opponents and their Syrian backers, state-owned Beirut radio said.

The Saudi peace plan also calls for a U.N. peace-keeping force to replace the Syrian and Israeli troops now occupying large areas of Lebanon.

The plan hinged on an offer by Gemayel to dump the May 17 agreement, which provided for an Israeli withdrawal from south Lebanon but also provided for Israeli security patrols in the region and normalized relations between the nations. The conditions are bitterly opposed in Damascus.

Israel has already warned that the abrogation of the agreement with Lebanon will lead to unspecified Israeli measures to "protect south Lebanon."

State-owned Beirut radio said an Israeli army unit crossed the Awali today and moved 6 miles north into the Christian coastal village of Jiyeh, calling on the local population to leave the region. Since late last year, Israeli occupation forces have generally stayed south of the Awali river, some 25 miles south of Beirut.

Using loudspeakers, the Israelis told the local population that they were prepared to provide them the necessary security to leave the region, even with their household belongings," the broadcast said.

At the AM-PM Mini-Mart at 288 W. Middle Turnpike, regular gasoline was going for 99 cents a gallon today.

99-cent gas is back

By Adele Angle
Focus Editor

John Donahue of Coventry got a pleasant surprise this morning. She drove her Ford Maverick into the ARO station on West Turnpike and found regular gasoline at 99 cents a gallon.

"But is this going to last?" she asked. "Sure," said William L. Luettgens, the owner of the Turnpike AM-PM Mini-Mart at 288 W. Middle Turnpike.

On Thursday his regular was $1.029. Just a week ago it was $1.04. Luettgens said he expects the price at the ARO station may go even lower. "It's a good chance," he said.

He said gas supplies today are plentiful, which is the reason his supplier has lowered his prices. The 55-mph speed limit and today's smaller cars have resulted in the rosy picture, he said.

At the nearby Texaco Tire Country — where regular gas was $1.029 a gallon — the station owner said he might follow suit. He said he was calling his Texaco supplier to see.

He called ARO's new lower prices "just a gimmick."

"They'll raise them in a few days or so," he said.

Luettgens disagreed. "There's a lot of gas around right now," he said. "The price has been coming down a little bit at a time for the last six months," he said.

He said he thought other station owners would probably follow suit. But he said he didn't think his 99-cent prices would mean the beginning of a gas war in town. "These days are gone, he said. 'It was mostly the independents who did that,' he said, and most of those stations have gone out of business in the last three years.

O'Neill: Remove pike tolls

By Mark A. Dupuis
United Press International

HARTFORD — Gov. William O'Neill today reaffirmed his support for removing tolls from the Connecticut Turnpike and three Hartford-area bridges, but said he thinks tolls on two "historic" parkways should stay.

O'Neill, speaking at a news conference, also said he would have to look at plans for a new legislative office building now that the estimated price of the structure has risen to $50 million or more.

O'Neill rejected calls in the Legislature for repealing a law passed last year that requires the removal of tolls from the Connecticut Turnpike and three bridges in the Hartford area.

O'Neill rejected arguments by some lawmakers that tolls must remain to help pay for road and bridge repairs. Instead he again called on lawmakers to support his plan for financing a $5.5 billion, 10-year transportation program.

O'Neill's plan is built around higher gasoline taxes and higher license, registration and other motor vehicle fees, which he said were more equitable than continued turnpike and bridge tolls.

However, the governor said he

John Glenn had to learn about politics the hard way

By Tom Watson
Correspondent Quarterly

WASHINGTON — John Glenn's transformation from pilot to politician has been a long and complicated one. He began considering a career in politics almost as soon as Friendship 7 splashed down in the Atlantic Ocean in 1962. But it can not be said that he cruised effortlessly into national office.

Twelve years and three campaigns went by before Glenn won his first election to the U.S. Senate. Lacking campaign experience and virtually devoid of contacts within his own party, Glenn had to learn about politics the hard way — by trying, failing and trying again.

Since coming to Washington late in 1974, he has had to struggle to make himself at home in the legislative process. He has demonstrated the same stubborn persistence in building a Senate career that he demonstrated in Ohio politics.

Glenn's political education in Ohio owed little to the leaders of organized labor and the state Democratic Party, whose support traditionally has been tantamount to victory in statewide Democratic primaries. He made it to the Senate largely without their help.

AS HE PURSUED his 1984 presidential candidacy, the former astronaut finds himself in a similar situation. Former Vice President Walter Mondale has already won the endorsement of the AFL-CIO and has an edge in enlisting support among Democratic Party leaders and elected officials across the country. It remains to be seen whether Glenn will be able to build a victory at the national level the way he rose from defeat in Ohio.

The crucial event in Glenn's post-Mercury career was his 1970 primary campaign for the Senate. That unsuccessful lesson taught him his hardest lesson in politics. Party leaders were laced with a choice between Glenn and Howard M. Metzenbaum, then a milinnaire businessman and labor lawyer. Glenn's relations with the party hierarchy were strained further by rumors that he had met with state Republican officials shortly before leaving the space program.

He's not Lyndon Johnson," said Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., a Foreign Relations Committee colleague who has endorsed Glenn for president. "He doesn't slap backs and twist arms."

Glenn's attitude buttresses his reputation for impeccable integrity. But in an institution that places a premium on negotiation and compromise, his tendency simply to explain the facts and hope they will prove persuasive sometimes costs him votes.

HIS LEGISLATIVE CAREER has been highly specialized, more reminiscent of the typical House career than the normal Senate pattern of involvement in a wide range of issues, focusing almost exclusively on Foreign Relations where he has served since 1977.

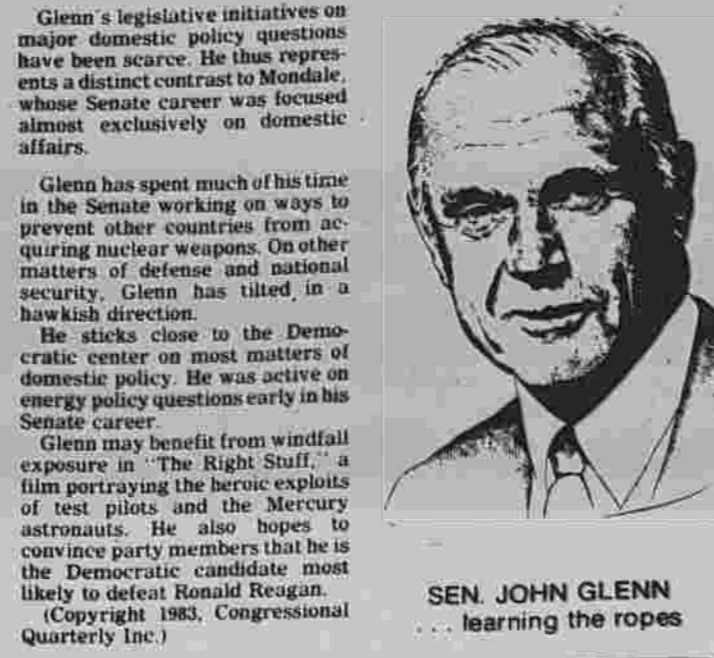

Glenn's legislative initiatives on major domestic policy questions have been scarce. He thus represents a distinct contrast to Mondale, whose Senate career was focused almost exclusively on domestic affairs.

Glenn has spent much of his time in the Senate working on ways to prevent other countries from acquiring nuclear weapons. On other matters of defense and national security, Glenn has tilted in a hawkish direction.

He sticks close to the Democratic center on most matters of domestic policy. He was active on energy policy questions early in his Senate career.

The MIS vocational education program will benefit from windfall exposure in "The Right Stuff," a film portraying the heroic exploits of test pilots and the Mercury astronauts. He also hopes to convince party members that he is the Democratic candidate most likely to defeat Ronald Reagan.

Samantha turns reporter

There's a new political reporter on the scene — Samantha Smith, 11, the Manchester, Maine, girl who wrote to the late Premier Yuri Andropov and was invited to the Soviet Union.

She has been interviewing Democratic presidential hopefuls for Disney Channel cable TV. Samantha told UPI she talked to all except Walter Mondale and Gary Hart, who couldn't fit her into their schedules.

"I'm not saying who I'd vote for," she said, "but Jesse Jackson was the one I enjoyed interviewing the most. He was a lot of fun to interview. He kept saying I was intimidating him."

Did she like being a reporter? "It was a lot of fun, but it's tiring, and it gets sort of boring at times."

State worker wins jackpot

A state worker from Hartford won $100,000 Thursday night in the Connecticut Lottery's weekly Lumberjack draw.

James Cavanaugh, 38, said he plans to save most of the money for education of his three children but will take a trip to Hawaii with his wife Linda.

The winning combination was W-yellow-660. Cavanaugh didn't win the $40,000 jackpot pool, which increases to $80,000 for next week's drawing.

Quote of the day

Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole was the speaker at a lunch in New York City Thursday, celebrating the 10th anniversary of Glamour magazine's annual list of outstanding working women.

She told the group: "You, too, can be treated the same as a man — so long as you outperform him. Much of society continues to perceive women as consumers instead of producers. Too many employers regard working women as pursuers of pin money and pay them accordingly — about three-fifths, on the average, of a man's salary — despite identical educational and professional backgrounds."

Gloria decides to talk

When Barbara Goldsmith wrote "Little Gloria... Happy At Last" several years ago, the real Gloria Vanderbilt refused to help. The book, published by Alfred A. Knopf, became a best seller and a TV mini-series.

Now Miss Vanderbilt has decided to write her own book and has a contract with none other than Knopf.

Robert A. Gottlieb, president and editor-in-chief of Knopf, said, "It really is the first time in her life that Gloria ever has spoken about the dramatic events of her childhood. The book will cover the first 16 or 17 years of her life... It's personal, full of feeling, very powerful." He expects the book to be out in about a year.

Miss Vanderbilt was the central figure in a sensational custody trial that pitted her mother, Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, against her aunt, Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney.

Tree warden considers plea

Mr. and Mrs. Louis M. Terzo, of 148 Kennedy Road, urged Tree Warden Robert Harrison Thursday to try to relocate a proposed parking lot for the Kennedy Road soccer complex in such a way that it will be screened from the road by existing trees.

Harrison took the request under consideration. The Terzos officially were protesting the proposed removal of trees, but they made it clear their primary objective is to prevent the parking lot for 100 cars from being exposed to view to the extent that it would appear to be a "tin city."

They would like the lot moved farther away from the road than is now planned and, if possible, somewhat behind a stand of trees. They would also like the trees to create an adequate screen between the lot and the street either by leaving as many trees as possible there or by planting.

They also asked Harrison, who is park superintendent as well as tree warden, to suggest that some shrubbery be planted among the trees between Kennedy Road and the soccer fields themselves.

Tax assistance available

Anyone planning to visit the VITA site should bring with them their tax package, their prior-year tax return, forms W-2, and all other tax records concerning income and deductions.

Near-crash leads to driver's arrest

Police charged a Manchester man with drunken driving Tuesday after his car nearly collided with another on East Middle Turnpike, forcing the driver of the other car to swerve into a curb parked on the side of the road, police said.

No one was injured.

The accident occurred after Charles J. O'Brien, 71, of 234A N. Main St., drove out of the Veterans' Memorial Veterans Drive just as another car, driven by Charles E. Aves, 21, of 96 Tolland Road, Bolton, was passing, police said. Witnesses told police O'Brien's car pulled far into the right westbound lane.

Aves swerved to the right to avoid hitting O'Brien's car and went up over the curb on the opposite side of the street, crashing into a parked car and wrecking the front end of his own car, police said.

O'Brien was later released on a promise to appear in court next Tuesday.

Administered sobriety tests, which O'Brien failed, police said.

O'Brien was later released on a promise to appear in court next Tuesday.

Manchester women in politics

There's still a gap despite the progress

By Kathy Gormus
Herald Reporter

Women have the potential to be a potent political force, but must work to break through the barriers that have excluded them from political decision-making roles, four women who are active in Manchester politics told an audience of about 30 at Manchester Community College Thursday.

"For many years, women have been the backbone of both political parties," said Donna R. Mercier, a Republican member of the Board of Directors. "Their voice today has a greater impact than ever before."

As evidence that women have made strides in the political arena, Mrs. Mercier cited the appointments by President Reagan of three women to cabinet-level positions and, on a local level, the election of three women to the Board of Directors in November, including Manchester's first female mayor.

"I personally have not seen evidence of a gender gap," she said. "In my opinion, politics is a matter of timing, whether you're a man or a woman."

But Mayor Barbara B. Weinberg, a Democrat, said that while women are becoming more active in politics, they are still largely excluded from the key decision-making positions within the political parties.

"There are still the small conversations that women are excluded from," she said.

Many women find moving through the party ranks difficult because they lack access to the corporate power structure, Mrs. Weinberg said. Such access is required to fund increasingly costly political campaigns, she said. "I think we have a long way to go," she said.

Mrs. Weinberg also said that women tend to be more sensitive than men on issues concerning war and peace, but do not make single-issue candidates.

"We are always concerned about a multitude of issues," she said. Eleanor D. Coltman, a Democratic member of the Board of Directors, agreed.

"There are no issues that are specifically women's issues," she said. "Every issue is a woman's issue."

Mrs. Coltman, citing the results of a poll published in Newsweek in September, said that the differences between the way men and women vote — the so-called gender gap — are not attributable to issues of sex discrimination but rather economic and defense policies.

Betty Sadloski, a Republican Town Committee member who appeared on behalf of Rep. Elsie L. Swenson, R-Manchester, said that because women outnumber men, their political power rests with their degree of involvement.

"Now it is a question of getting involved and diluting the power of men," she said.

The four women, who appeared as part of a panel discussion entitled "Women in Politics: The Gender Gap," agreed that women must work harder than men to attain political power, but none said she felt being a woman was a handicap in her political career.

"I never felt that being a woman would stop me from running for anything I wanted to," Mrs. Coltman said, adding with a laugh that "I'm more worried about not being taken seriously because of my gray hair."

Mrs. Weinberg said determination is also necessary to survive the defeats which usually face the political newcomer.

"You have to be a little pushy," she said. "Don't take the first turn-down and walk away — you've got to fight."

Mrs. Sadloski urged women to speak out on the issues that concern them. And, in response to a comment by a woman in the audience who said the roles of women who choose to be mothers should not be demeaned, Mrs. Sadloski said women do not have to be active in a political party to have an effect.

Women can exercise political power just by voting, she said.

When the panel was asked by one man in the audience what they thought of President Reagan's record on issues which especially concern women, Mrs. Weinberg said "he's very delugant in that area." However, she predicted that he would be hard to beat in the November election.

"He has the ability to be perceived as having the answer to everything," she said.

But Mrs. Sadloski defended Reagan's record and said that media distortions were to blame for any public perception that Reagan is insensitive to women.

Curriculum study limited to major topics

By Sarah E. Hohl
Herald Reporter

After two hours of hot debate Thursday night, the ad hoc Citizens' Committee on school curriculum decided to cut its lengthy task to manageable size and concentrate on major subject areas: math, science, social studies, language, arts, and secondary school electives including vocational education.

Earlier, members of the committee had warned the group that reviewing the entire curriculum from kindergarten through grade 12 would be "too tall an order."

Richard Coode, another member, suggested that dividing the work by subject would be best, so members could see where gaps between grades be. "When you drag things out, you end up with big piles of nothing," he said, urging the group to move quickly.

But Gwen Brooks, vice principal of Manchester High School, who opened the meeting with a report on the work of a faculty curriculum committee there, said that "for too long, we've been taking Band-Aid approaches. We've got to look at the whole picture."

"Too often, we come out with conclusions too quickly and try to change everything all at once," she said.

More than one member complained that recent national reports calling for school reform are too general to be of much help. Coode predicted that the committee will find they don't always apply to Manchester. "We'll probably be looking down at them, not up," he said.

Which courses to kick out, as well as which to keep was a matter of discussion. Member John Tuve spoke of eliminating the "soft, non-essentials," and complained that his own junior high school daughter spent one-seventh of her class time making a clay pot.

Making the test tougher would deny less capable students the opportunity for a high school diploma, she said.

"Both Dr. Brooks and curriculum director Allan Chesterton assured members that Manchester schools are already excellent, although there's always room to improve. Dr. Chesterton is directing by asking the committee to 'strengthen, revitalize, and renew' the existing curriculum, taking care not to do a rush-job."

To some of us, that seems absurd," he added. He said his major worry was not the high achievers — who without a swift kick in the rear, and a lot of direction and guidance are not going to achieve.

Dyer, too, asked why teachers could not hold students to a higher standard than they wanted to be held to.

But Robert J. Smith, another committee member, said top students are at a disadvantage because they take difficult honors courses — and risk getting lower grades in them than average students taking easier courses. "The honors level is not given enough weight in comparison to the others," he said.

OPINION

Iowa debate offered more than answers

Jack Germond and Jules Witcover
Syndicated columnists

DES MOINES — A good debate, like the one here the other day among the eight Democratic presidential candidates, is like a game of chess. The moves of the players — the candidates' answers — are at least as interesting for the strategy they reveal as for their substance.

Each candidate came into the Iowa debate with a clear objective. For front-runner Walter Mondale it was to retain his position and to ward off the predictable attempts to cut him down by the rest of the field. For each of the others, it was to somehow set himself apart from the pack as the Mondale alternative — by going after his vulnerabilities directly if necessary.

Using this chess-game yardstick, it seems clear that three candidates emerged from the debate having maintained or advanced their position, at least with those political junkies who watch such debates and weigh the choices carefully.

Pentagon still high on lemons

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon is stuck with still another high-priced lemon: The Navy's F/A-18 fighter-attack plane.

You can round up the usual suspects to share blame for this multi-billion boondoggle: brass hats who kept adding on too many expensive extras, bureaucrats who have a professional stake in continuing the half-baked project, and influential members of Congress who want lucrative Defense contracts for their home-state factories.

The younger Shillinsky was arrested during the shooting and charged with murder. He has been in jail awaiting trial for 13 months and implicated his father on Tuesday, the eve of the start of his trial.

His father and another man, Ronald Guerin of Bristol, were arrested Wednesday night.

Connecticut In Brief

EDB found in brownie mix

HARTFORD — State officials say a box of IGA Fudge Brownie mix has been found to contain 47.5 parts per billion of EDB, the highest level detected so far in food products in Connecticut.

The level of the pesticide found in IGA Fudge Brownie Mix, Code DA October 0948D, is well below the tolerance guidelines recommended by the federal government, Consumer Protection Commissioner Mary Heslin said Thursday.

The state has temporarily adopted those guidelines.

The federal Environmental Protection Agency set a standard of 150 parts per billion in foods that require cooking. In a previous series of tests in Connecticut, the highest level of EDB found was 16.3 parts per billion.

Ms. Heslin said she will release the complete results of the latest round of state testing after she meets with officials from the state Department of Health Services.

Son killed to pay debt

HARTFORD — Scott Shillinsky, 21, killed his father's business partner in exchange for his father's promise to forgive a $3,000 debt, including a $2,000 college loan, court records show.

In return for the Jan. 11, 1983, killing of John Garret, the affidavits said Shillinsky's father, Joseph, also promised to make his son a business partner in two businesses.

The affidavits released Thursday contain accounts of Scott Shillinsky's statements this week implicating his father in what police said was a murder-for-hire scheme engineered by a man in financial trouble and suspicious of his business partner.

The younger Shillinsky was arrested during the shooting and charged with murder. He has been in jail awaiting trial for 13 months and implicated his father on Tuesday, the eve of the start of his trial.

His father and another man, Ronald Guerin of Bristol, were arrested Wednesday night.

Witness: Trucker 'slumped'

BRIDGEPORT — A Massachusetts truck driver says Charles Klutz was slumped at the wheel of his tractor-trailer before the rig slammed into the Stratford Tolls and killed seven women and children.

Charles Medeiros, 43, of Bedford, Mass., testified in Superior Court Thursday that Klutz appeared to be unconscious, with his head hanging down on his chest, arms stretched with his hands on the wheel. "I thought he (Klutz) had passed out or had had a heart attack," Medeiros said.

Klutz, 36, of Coolemeec, N.C., was charged in the deaths of seven women and children in a fiery crash Jan. 19, 1983, at the Connecticut Turnpike toll station. He is charged with seven counts of misconduct with a motor vehicle and faces a maximum five years in prison and $5,000 fine if convicted.

Wash to get speedy hearing

BRIDGEPORT — A Superior Court judge has backed up demands for a speedy hearing on charges against Police Superintendent Joseph A. Walsh with a court-imposed deadline.

Superior Court Judge Robert J. Berdon had warned Wednesday he would not stand for delays in the hearing on charges against Walsh, 67, which include allegations of racial discrimination raised by a federal judge.

Berdon has set a 45-day deadline and told lawyers for both sides in chambers that he would prefer to see the matter concluded within 30 days. Attorneys met Thursday to discuss an impartial "tribunal" to hear the case.

The city police board was prohibited from hearing the charges after Berdon ruled the panel showed prejudice against Walsh when it forced the 42-year police veteran to retire in December.

Meanwhile Thursday, Capt. Patrick J. Dolan, a 25-year police veteran, assumed the duties of acting police superintendent the police board unanimously appointed him to Wednesday night.

Car tampering suspected

BRIDGEPORT — The FBI found evidence the car of former Acting Police Chief Thomas Thear might have been sabotaged when brake fluid was replaced with crude oil, published reports said.

The Bridgeport Post reported Thursday Thear was told by the FBI that crude oil in the brake system of the city-owned car would cause a vacuum in the brake system.

The problem was discovered before Thear drove the car, but he said he was told the oil had caused brake failure. "It could have been an error, but it's highly unlikely," Thear said.

Hearing set on Seabrook sale

HARTFORD — A legislative committee has voted to hold public hearings on a bill designed to get United Illuminating Co. to work harder to sell its share in the Seabrook II nuclear power plant.

The bill approved for hearings Thursday would prohibit United Illuminating from charging higher rates to pay for its share of the Seabrook I plant in New Hampshire before the plant goes into service unless UI ends its involvement in the second reactor.

Trucker dies after crash

BRIDGEPORT — A Tennessee truck driver whose rig plunged off the rain-slick Connecticut Turnpike and into a factory died from his injuries, authorities said.

Garry Knowles, 35, of McMinnville, Tenn., was apparently trying to avoid a collision with another truck in the westbound lane of the highway when the accident occurred in heavy rain at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday, police said.

The second truck, driven by William O'Malley, 30, of Clinton, also swerved off the turnpike, traveled down an embankment and overturned on Cherry Street after first colliding with a car.

Both O'Malley and the driver of the car, Santa Ayala, 35, of Bridgeport, were treated and released for cuts and bruises, police said.

Radio manager leaves job

HARTFORD Connecticut Public Radio's station manager, who helped boost the station's audience and balance its budget, has resigned to join the financially shaky National Public Radio in Washington, D.C.

Midge Bowen Ramsey, 46, of West Hartford, will become NPR senior vice president for representation, working for the 281 member public radio stations that shape NPR policy.

Legislators delay action on offices

By Mark A. Dupuis
United Press International

HARTFORD — A committee of lawmakers delayed action on a bill to authorize bonding for a new legislative office building as legislative leaders moved forward with plans for it but some Republicans questioned the price.

The Finance, Revenue and Bonding Committee Thursday agreed to delay a vote on the bond authorization after closed caucuses where members asked for more information on what the project involved.

Legislative leaders of both parties, sitting as the Legislative Management Committee, want to build the 200,000-square-foot building and a 1,000-car parking garage adjacent to the Capitol.

Leaders say the building is needed to relieve cramped conditions and allow for renovation of the 185-year-old Capitol building, which has outdated elevators and does not comply with fire safety codes.

The Finance Committee will meet next week with members of the Legislative Management Committee, the construction manager for the project and others to get more information about the proposed building and Capitol renovation.

Meanwhile Thursday, the Legislative Management Committee moved forward with planning for the $11 million office building project and $9 million renovation of the Capitol interior.

The committee voted to build the new structure and renovate the Capitol at the same time in an effort to keep down costs while allowing legislative business to continue.

Temporary offices will be built outside the Capitol to house some workers during interior reconstruction and renovation expected to take 30 months.

They have been given support for the new structure, though Thursday some Republicans questioned the $11 million cost estimate, which was increased from an earlier estimate of $8 million.

"Unanimity is falling apart," said House Minority Leader R.E. Van Norstrand, D-Darien. "I'm not convinced this is the way to go."

Deputy House Majority Leader Timothy Moynihan, D-Sterling, supported the new building at the higher estimated price, saying the existing Capitol was too cramped to allow full access to the public.

"You would build a government once or twice in a century and if there's one place you ought to do a quality job it's your seat of government," Moynihan said.

James A. Pennypacker of Deep River, who wrote the song "We're Proud of Connecticut," appears before lawmakers in Hartford Thursday. The song is being considered to replace the current state song, "Yankee Doodle Dandy."

Key lawmaker joins battle for new Connecticut song

By Bruno V. Ranniello
United Press International

HARTFORD — An elderly tunesmith and a powerful Democrat legislative leader joined in an effort to adopt "Yankee Doodle Dandy" as the state song.

O'Neill, then House majority leader, led a band marching to "Yankee Doodle Dandy" before the same committee to get his point across.

Scheller was backed Thursday by the 35-member Senior Citizens of Rockville, which gave a lusty rendition of "We're Proud of Connecticut" in the Hall of Flags, where a number of other songs were submitted.

Sen. John Daniels, D-New Britain, committee co-chairman, asked Scheller for a sample of the song but meticulously withdrew his request before Scheller had a chance to time up.

Pennypacker said adopting "Yankee Doodle Dandy" as the state song "was one of the worst judgments ever made by the Legislature. It's a splendid song but it belongs to the original colonies and Connecticut has no claim to it," he said.

"My song not only describes the state of Connecticut, but also its accomplishments," he said.

"Connecticut has stolen my heart and I belong to the heart," said the Haddonfield, N.J., native who moved to Connecticut two decades ago.

Scheller was backed Thursday by the 35-member Senior Citizens of Rockville, which gave a lusty rendition of "We're Proud of Connecticut" in the Hall of Flags, where a number of other songs were submitted.

Sen. John Daniels, D-New Britain, committee co-chairman, asked Scheller for a sample of the song but meticulously withdrew his request before Scheller had a chance to time up.

Pennypacker said adopting "Yankee Doodle Dandy" as the state song "was one of the worst judgments ever made by the Legislature. It's a splendid song but it belongs to the original colonies and Connecticut has no claim to it," he said.

"My song not only describes the state of Connecticut, but also its accomplishments," he said.

"Connecticut has stolen my heart and I belong to the heart," said the Haddonfield, N.J., native who moved to Connecticut two decades ago.

Rescuers find bodies of miners

COMMODORE, Pa. (UPI) — Rescue workers early today located the bodies of three miners killed in an explosion and fire in a methane-filled mine shaft in western Pennsylvania's coal country.

The search for the bodies had been hampered by the methane fumes and Barry Novotny, a spokesman for Pennsylvania Mines Corp., which owns the mine, said the bodies would not be recovered until the fumes had been vented.

The three miners were killed and 10 were injured early Thursday in an explosion and flash fire apparently triggered by a methane buildup. Four of the injured were admitted to a hospital with burns, while the other six were treated and released.

The dead men were found shortly after 5 a.m. EST in the area where they had been pumping water out of the mine, Novotny said.

He said the area was full of water because it had been mined out. The bodies were to remain in the shaft until the fumes, which he said would require 14 hours, are fully ventilated. It was speculated that could take as long as a day.

O'Neill: Remove pike tolls

did favor keeping tolls on the Merritt and Wilbur Cross parkways. He said parkway tolls were needed to maintain the roads, which he described as "historic."

Although opposing keeping the turnpike and bridge tolls, O'Neill again stopped short of saying he would veto legislation to repeal last year's toll removal plan citing the bottom-line need to finance road and bridge repairs.

On another topic, O'Neill said he would have to look closely at plans for a new legislative office building now that the cost has risen to $30 million from an earlier estimate of $30 million.

O'Neill said any legislative office building would have to be "first class" and blend in with surrounding buildings, including the historic 165-year-old Capitol, which stands adjacent to the site of the proposed building.

"If $30 million is the number, so be it..." O'Neill said, adding that much money was needed for the structure, which would help ease crowded conditions in the Capitol.

A 54-year-old Rockville man was charged with driving while intoxicated and evading responsibility Thursday after he lost control of his car and struck a tree on Parker Street, police said.

According to police, Warren W. Webster, of 28 Fox Hill Drive, Rockville, was driving north on Parker Street when he struck a curb and lost control of his car. He crossed the southbound lane and drove onto a lawn at 488 Parker St., striking a tree, police said. Despite heavy damage to his car, Webster lost control of the vehicle.

Right-to-die case said unique

A lawyer for Manchester Memorial Hospital, where officials have refused to let a comatose woman die despite requests from her parents, said this morning that the case could set a statewide precedent.

The new twist in this, the latest of three right-to-die cases in Connecticut, is that the woman's brain is still functioning, said hospital attorney John Q. Tilson of New Haven.

"There was at least one situation in Connecticut where the respirator was turned off in a brain-dead case. If this were a brain-dead case, I don't think we'd be in court," he said.

While Tilson said Manchester Memorial Hospital has no policy on the particular sort of situation that surrounds 42-year-old Sandra Foody, a South Windsor woman and multiple sclerosis victim who is comatose but whose brain is still functioning, he said he assumes the hospital has "do-not-resuscitate" policies for other cases where death is more imminent.

Hospital officials, he said, do not oppose turning off Ms. Foody's respirator but they want guidance and protection from possible lawsuits.

Andrew Beck, hospital spokesman, said this morning that the hospital has no policy covering the Foody case. He said he does not know if there are any other policies dealing with different situations where requests to let patients die might be made.

A hearing is scheduled Tuesday in Hartford Superior Court on Kenneth and Ann Foody's request to allow their daughter to die.

Weicker discounts 'coattail' voting

HARTFORD (UPI) — Sen. Lowell Weicker Jr., R-Conn., said today Connecticut Republicans should not rely on President Reagan's popularity in the state to sweep them into lower offices in November.

"There will be no coattails in Connecticut," Weicker said at a Capitol news conference. "Anyone in euphoria thinking the president is going to do it for them can forget it. This is a tough Democratic state."

Connecticut's senior senator also said he doubts anything can be done about the Pratt & Whitney Group's 25 percent share of a one-year Air Force contract for jet engines.

"In the first year, there's not much chance of changing that. There's a good chance of change for the second year," said Weicker, second-ranking Republican on the key Senate defense appropriations subcommittee.

Weicker said an evaluation by the General Accounting Office will show if politics was involved

Whaler goalie Ed Stanowski makes a glove save on a shot by the Devils' Rick Meagher in first-period action. Stanowski, unfortunately, wasn't as proficient later as Devils' scored game-winner with six seconds left in overtime.

Ludvig's good luck spells woe for Whale

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (UPI) — From Jan Ludvig's point of view, it was more luck than skill. Yet, his goal Wednesday night enabled the New Jersey Devils to record their first overtime victory of the season.

"It's a lucky play, really," said Ludvig, who drilled in a 50-foot slapshot with just six seconds left in overtime lift the Devils to their second straight triumph, a 6-5 victory over the Hartford Whalers.

"I played brutal all night," Ludvig said, "and then I get the overtime goal. It was my first overtime goal ever. Oh, maybe I scored one in juniors but (this) was the biggest goal of my life."

Ludvig, a native of Czechoslovakia, got his 18th goal of the season when Mel Bridgman won a faceoff and kicked the puck out to Ludvig in the slot near the blue line. The shot beat Whalers goalie Ed Stanowski's frantic attempt at a kick save to give the Devils their first overtime victory in 11 overtime attempts.

Bridgman made the play by winning a faceoff from Mike Watt after the Whalers' had tied the puck.

"Zuke's an excellent faceoff man," said Bridgman, "and I was playing his stick. If there wasn't a false faceoff first, I might not have won it."

As it was, Bridgman didn't win the draw cleanly. "I just hit it a little bit," he said, "and then when I turned around, I got my body between him (Zuke) and the puck and I hit back to Jan." "Fighting back twice and then losing in the last nine seconds," said Whalers coach Jack Evans, "that's tough. It just caught the inside of the post. It's unfortunate that we lost the draw, but it was a good shot."

Hartford had erased a pair of two-goal deficits after the Devils had gone in front, 3-1, after two periods and then 3-1 midway through the third.

Mark Paterson had capped a four-goal third period comeback by the Whalers with his second goal of the season to enable the Whalers to tie the score 5-5 and force the overtime. Paterson's score enabled the Whalers to overcome a 5-3 New Jersey lead established when Gary McAdam and Tim Higgins scored 36 seconds apart earlier in the third.

McAdam's goal, his seventh of the season, came at 8:50 on a rebound after Stanowski stopped a breakout by Aaron Broten. Higgins scored his second goal of the game and ninth of the season at 9:26 on a breakout by Ed Stasiowski.

Higgins, acquired from the Chicago Black Hawks, has now scored seven goals in his last 11 games and has eight of his nine this season for the Devils.

Bob Crawford scored his second goal of the game and his 26th of the season at 13:50 of the final period to pull the Whalers to within 3-4 before Paterson fired in a 40-footer to force the overtime.

Murray Brumwell, Pat Verbeek and Higgins had scored earlier for the Devils, who took a 3-1 lead after two periods. Ray Neufeld's 22nd goal, at 19:26 of the first period, was the first Whaler score. Crawford and Chris Kotsopoulos scored early in the third period to make it 3-3.

New Jersey is now 1-5-5 in overtime this season while the Whalers are 1-2-4.

Hartford is on the road again this weekend, Saturday at Toronto and Sunday at Buffalo.

Magoni slalom champ, Hamilton gets his gold

By Mike Tully
UPI Sports Writer

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia — Italy's Paolina Magoni, her way cleared by the spills of American contenders Tamara McKinney and Christina Cooper, today captured the women's slalom at the Winter Olympics.

Cooper also missed a gate and went out while Dorota Tialka of Poland lost control on the lower section and slid off into the crowd.

Perrine Pelen of France won the silver and Ursula Konzett of Liechtenstein won the bronze.

"I'm very disappointed that I didn't get a medal at the Olympics," McKinney of Squaw Valley, Calif., said. "Sometimes everything fits together and it's easy. That's the way it was last year with me. But this year, I'm a bit frustrated."

"It was a matter of less than half an inch. I hooked the gate with my ski tip. But if you want to win, you have to ski aggressively and such a little difference can throw you out."

Cooper, who finished second to gold medal-winning teammate Debbie Armstrong in the giant slalom, had very little to say.

"My legs got locked together," the resident of Sun Valley, Idaho, explained. "I sat back and the skis just lifted and went off course. That was the problem."

In the only other medal event of the day, the Soviet Union continued its domination of the biathlon relay, winning the gold medal for the fifth straight time since the sport was introduced at the 1968 Olympics. Norway won the silver and the bronze went to West Germany.

The Olympics wrap up with five medals Saturday and three more on Sunday and the big one as far as the United States is concerned is in the women's figure skating Saturday night.

If Rosalynn Summers can receive a fairly even split, she could join Bill Johnson and Scott Hamilton in the last lane at the Olympics.

Between gold medals by Johnson in the downhill and Hamilton in men's figure skating Thursday, Summers flubbed a required double axel in the short program, dropping her behind East Germany's Katarina Witt.

Summers needs a strong free skating program Saturday night to complete America's first double in figure skating in 24 years. Hamilton set up the first half of the program by holding off the dynamic challenge of Canadian Brian Orser Thursday night to win the men's title.

"It's been a long wait," Hamilton said. "I wanted a long time for this. I was a little disappointed in the score. I didn't feel real solid but I'm glad it was enough to come out with the gold. I've been losing it a bit."

"I didn't see the rest of the competition so I don't know what everybody else got. I just went for everything. I just stopped two jumps, that's all. I was a little embarrassed about it. It was good enough to win and I'm happy with it. And I guess I earned it."

The three-time world champion became the first American since 1960 to win the Olympic gold medal. His triumph, expected to be routine, was not without a bit of suspense.

Hamilton had a solid free skating performance but received rather low marks and finished second to Orser in the free skating phase. But Hamilton had built such a lead over the compulsory and short program that Orser, who entered the finals in fifth place, was unable to overtake him despite the fact that he won both the short program and free skating phases.

Nor were East Germany's Rudi Cerne or Czechoslovakia's Josef Sabovcik, who went after the Denver resident, able to catch him. Sabovcik won the bronze. Brian

America's Rosalynn Summers makes a clumsy landing from a double axel during the short program of the women's figure skating event. Summers fell into second place going into Saturday's long program.

Boitano of Sunnyvale, Calif. had a strong free skating performance to finish fifth behind Cerne.

In a race that had been postponed three times because of inclement weather, Johnson edged Switzerland's Peter Mueller by 27-hundredths of a second, with Austrian Anton Steiner third, and he broke the Olympic downhill record with a time of 1 minute 45.39 seconds down the 1.8 mile course.

It was the first gold medal ever by an American man in any Alpine event, and as Johnson pointed out, "There's been a dry spell — like the last 14 Winter Olympics."

Indeed, since Alpine events were added to the Olympic program in 1936, U.S. men have garnered a slim total of four medals.

Despite her flub, Summers believes she can still capture the gold.

"I feel good being in second because the long program is my strong point," said the 19-year-old resident of Edmonds, Wash. "I wasn't nervous and I felt very confident out of a Mueller by 27-hundredths of a second, with Austrian Anton Steiner third, and he broke the Olympic downhill record with a time of 1 minute 45.39 seconds down the 1.8 mile course.

Interest in Canada Cup should be perked up

When the fabled Brooklyn Dodgers were making a habit of losing the World Series to the New York Yankees in the late 1940s and early 1950s, the cry of the faithful at historic Ebbets Field was, "Wait til next year." Those hockey enthusiasts disappointed by the American team's poor performance at the Winter Olympics in Sarajevo do not have to wait even that long.

A prediction that can be made with some confidence is that the hockey team's failure to win a medal will increase interest in the 1984 Canada Cup, the true world championship of ice hockey. The lineup for that tournament, which will take place in September in a group of Canadian cities not yet determined, was announced this week in Sarajevo.

The tournament, the third of its kind, will pit teams from Canada, the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, Sweden, West Germany and the United States. All teams are open to professionals. In the Olympics, only the eastern European teams are open to professionals.

The host country won the first Canada Cup competition in 1976. The Soviet Union took the Olympic teams, those who passed up a chance at the Olympics and professional stars who never got an opportunity to play in the Games is certain to attract a good deal of media attention. In September, it is difficult to take the collective mind of the American sporting public away from the baseball pennant races. The Canada Cup has the makings of an event which could do just that.

For the first time, the United States may be able to field a team which can challenge Canada and the Soviet Union. A decade or so ago, there were only a handful of Americans playing in the National Hockey League. Today, about a quarter of the league's players are Americans.

In goal, the U.S. Canada Cup team could field the old and the young of the NHL. The likely starter is Buffalo Sabres' rookie Tom Barraso, the teenager who passed up an opportunity to be a member of the United States team at the 1980 Winter Olympics. The other American goalies will probably be two of the NHL's most experienced veterans, Tony Esposito of the Chicago Black Hawks and Glenn Resch of the New Jersey Devils. Both are naturalized American citizens from north of the border.

The possibilities for defense include the Washington Capitals' Rod Langway, who won last year's Norris Trophy as the NHL's top defenseman; Mark Howe of the Philadelphia Flyers, who was born in Detroit while his father was becoming a living legend with the Red Wings; Ken Morrow of New York Islanders, who won both an Olympic gold medal and a Stanley Cup ring in 1980; and Phil Housley of the Sabres, who went straight from high school to the NHL All-Star team.

Candidates for the forward line include current Olympians Pat LaFontaine and David A. Jensen, the Minnesota North Stars' Pat Lawton, who phased up a ticket to Sarajevo; and 1980 Olympians Mark Johnson of the Whalers and Mark Pavlich of the New York Rangers.

Unquestionably, the United States — along with Canada, the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia — is now one of the top four hockey-playing nations in the world. Where it ranks among those four was not decided in Sarajevo. Wait til September.

FOCUS / Weekend

Romantic non-celebs have day

The contest is over. The judges have made their decision. Today's column features the most romantic non-celebrities in America.

THE MOST ROMANTIC MAN IN AMERICA
"My husband, Otha B. Lewis, is the most romantic man in the world," writes Carolyn Lewis from Churubusco, Ind. And, without hesitation, our Romance! panel agrees. We Romance!

Langdon Hill
Syndicated Columnist

think you will, too. Mrs. Lewis writes: "We married when I was 15 and he was 18 in spite of dire warnings of failure from everyone. 'He won't be able to find a job to provide for you,' they said. (He had lost his leg in a crash at age 15.)
"But Otha did get a job and still works for the same company today. In the first five years of marriage, we had four children. It was a struggle, but we were happy. He would manage to take me out on a 'date' once a week and occasionally bring me little gifts even though money was always scarce in the early years.

He was always happy to watch the kids for me so I could go window shopping or something when I needed a little while away. He was an excellent father and still is. All our children grew up healthy and happy and we have seven wonderful grandchildren. Otha was always there for them, and to me it made him so much more romantic because he is a warm and loving man, not only to our children, but to the rest of my family.
"This year, he had flowers sent to me every single week of the year. That was his 29th anniversary present to me. He calls me from work every day just to say he loves me and is thinking of me. He tells me I'm beautiful even though I'm fat and over 40, and when he says it he looks at me with so much love in his eyes he makes me believe it. It's been a 30-year honeymoon because of this wonderful man and that's why I hope you will choose him."

THE MOST ROMANTIC WOMAN IN AMERICA

Picking the winner from the nominations for the "Most Romantic Woman" was the most difficult of all. However, there was one letter that stood out. It's short and simple, but it is a powerful reminder that romance is the little things you do to show you care.
The letter submitted by Joy Bloom of Willowick, Ohio, reads: "My nomination—Mary Lou Beers (Mrs. Jim Beers). Since Jim's illness several years ago, he is totally dependent upon Mary Lou and their children. When asked how she gets him upstairs to bed each night, she said, 'No problem — we sit on the bottom stair with our arms around each other and bump up the stairs, one at a time.'
"To see Jim and Mary Lou together — at church or walking with him in his wheelchair, you know that there is a very special romantic love. What an inspiration they are!"

THE MOST ROMANTIC COUPLE IN AMERICA

The nominations for the "Most Romantic Couple" came from just about everybody: children, parents, neighbors, friends, coworkers. But the winning nomination came from a very special source: a grandchild. Deone Sottosant from Tucson, Ariz., wrote: "The most romantic couple I know are my grandparents Mike and Leona Chesnik.
"As a young child, I delighted in stories of their courtship and marriage. Their romance has endured 54 years. Every Saturday night in recent years they had their own 'party for two' at home, complete with cocktails, dancing and lots of cuddling. 'Mona Lisa' is their song and Grandpa once painted a breathtaking rendition of the Mona Lisa for Grandpa.
"Grandma has been ill lately and every day Grandpa travels to the hospital to be with his 'bride.' They exemplify true love and romance to me."
Along with the congratulations and best wishes from millions of romantics from coast to coast, each winner will receive an engraved "Romantic of the Year" trophy, a box of completely romantic chocolates and a dozen roses.

Tavern owner Otto Weber displays sign that reminds patrons of the "I'm Smart" alternative to drinking and driving. The service will get a customer home in his own car with a sober driver at the wheel. Some 65 bars and taverns in Onondaga County have joined the program.

Get smart

Chauffeur service for drunks is a hit in Upstate New York

By David Armon
United Press International
SYRACUSE, N.Y. (UPI) — More and more Syracuse area residents are waking up after a night of too much drink, confident in the knowledge that they had a safe drive home in their own car — but never touched the steering wheel.
They are opting for a service known as "I'm Smart," which will get them and their family sedans home with a sober driver at the wheel for between $18 and $30. Some 65 bars and taverns have joined the program.
The model program has gained some impressive supporters since Martin Yenshew, owner of Syracuse's only major ambulance firm, began offering the service in December 1982.
"Do you know how many kids are more concerned about dad's car getting home safely than themselves?" asked Yenshew's wife, Linda.
With the sight of mangled bodies at alcohol-related crashes fresh in their minds, the husband-wife team decided to try to prevent accidents rather than just transport victims to hospitals and morgues.
"We see the most tragic side of drunken driving," Yenshew said. "It just seemed to me that we could do something about it. Being a business man, it also made sense."
Officials with the state Department of Motor Vehicles have joined judges, local law enforcement agencies and tavern owners in hailing the project as one of the few real alternatives to drinking and driving.
"It gives people a responsible outlet," said Syracuse Court Judge Jeffrey Merrill. "There are really no excuses left for people to drink."
One of the program's strengths, said Merrill, is the Yenshews' decision to fund "I'm Smart" through Eastern Ambulance, rather than through the public sector.
"I didn't think it was appropriate to use taxpayers' money," said Syracuse Court Judge Jeffrey Merrill.
"I'm Smart" relies on revenues from bars and restaurants, each of which pays $200 annually to become a member of the service. In exchange, the drinking establishments are included in "I'm Smart" advertising, and their patrons enjoy discounted rides home.
"I'm Smart" currently is the only user-fee only comprehensive alternative to drinking and driving that's operated nightly in the state of New York," said Yenshew.
ONE OF THE KEYS, he said, is the strict confidentiality his employees afford customers. No names are recorded, and all "I'm Smart" personnel drive unmarked cars.
"The people are very grateful. They're very pleased with the alternative to driving drunk," he said. "There's a sense of self-satisfaction."
Customers who choose to use the service tend to be 25- to 35-year-old professionals who simply can't afford — professionally, socially or economically — an alcohol-related offense.
A heightened awareness by bartenders and

Weekenders

Get rid of your papers
While you're out doing your errands this weekend, why not help out the Boy Scouts by dropping off your old newspapers.
Troop 126 will have a truck parked at Lydall Inc. on Parker Street all day Saturday and Sunday. So clean out those back issues and bring them all down.

Feast on pancakes
Love pancakes but hate to be bothered making them?
The Bolton St. Maurice Knights of Columbus will come to the rescue. They'll serve a pancake breakfast Sunday from 7:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the church parish center.
Besides the pancakes, you'll get a choice of topping, either blueberry or syrup, sausage, coffee, tea, Sanka or juice, and all for $2.50 an adult. Kids are $1.50, and if you've got a big family, you're in luck. You'll be able to treat them all for just $5.

Outwit Uncle Sam
If tax time has you singing the blues, help it at hand. On Sunday at 9 a.m. at Temple Beth Shalom, 400 E. Middle Turnpike, Richard Morgenstern will speak at corporate financial planning for Ford Motor Company and the Fafair Division of Texton.
Bring your questions. There will be time to ask Morgenstern for advice on taxes.

Take a river stroll
Get yourself out of the mid-winter doldrums by taking a brisk walk along the Hockanum River on Sunday. Hikers will meet at Economy Electric on Oakland Street at 1 p.m. and walk on down the Steak Out in Talcottville. The Hockanum River linear park committee is sponsoring the event.
If all that exercise makes you ravenous for a bit of lunch, there will be a stop at Strokes, Courthouse One, before the return trip. Or walkers may also proceed directly home.
The committee says the river is particularly pretty at this time of the year. Rain date is Feb. 26.

Don't cook on Saturday
You won't have to cook dinner on Saturday if you take in the country-style supper at the Hilltown grange, 617 Hills St., East Hartford.
The menu will feature ham and beans and even dessert. Everything will be home made. Price is $4.75 for adults and $2.50 for children.

Manage kid stress
Children and stress will be the topic of a television program Sunday night on WHTV. Among the speakers will be Dr. Richard Godwader, school psychologist for the town of Manchester.
Dr. Godwader will explore the causes of stress among children, and explain how parents can recognize the symptoms.

It was challenge to make Kate human Cannon fires broadside

By Vernon Scott
 United Press International

HOLLYWOOD — Barbra Streisand's one-woman triumph as writer, producer, director and star of "Yentl" has kindled hope in the breasts of other actresses who would like to follow suit.

One such is Dyan Cannon, who was nominated for an Academy Award a half-dozen years ago for her production of the short subject, "No. 1."

Most actresses with aspirations for making their own films are ignored or considered unqualified to make movies.

Studios and banks are reluctant to entrust $10 million to a woman for that purpose. They don't blink when Warren Beatty, Clint Eastwood or Don't Binkman Starline show up.

But no man ever wrote, directed, produced and starred in a movie musical.

Streisand did.

"I applauded her for that," Dyan said the other day in her Malibu beachfront home.

"I hope Yentl" encourages a lot of actresses to make their own films. I think it was an incredible thing she did.

"IT'S NOT that doors are shut to women. I've turned down offers to direct seven pictures. But they haven't been right — not enough time involved or they wanted to do them very quickly. I feel the time is right now."

"It's a big chunk to bite off. Instead of looking at just one facet of the painting, you're looking at the entire canvas. You go in before conception and stay with it after the fact."

Dyan has no formal training for producing a film from scratch. Probably no one does. But she did take part in the directing workshop for women at the American Film Institute where Joanne Woodward, Lee Grant and others produced short films.

Dyan says she has produced in movies for 20 years and has kept her eyes and ears open, getting on-the-job training of a sort.

"Everywhere I went, other actresses told me they had wanted to play Kate. I was surprised. It never crossed my mind to seek it."

Dyan said she worked 12-18 hours a day, six days a week, without rehearsals, on locations in London, New York and Paris.

The series was shot out of chronological order. One day she would appear as a 70-year-old next as an 18-year-old and the next as a 45-year-old Kate.

"They were in a big hurry," Dyan said. "We worked with two separate directors during the four-month shooting schedule. One day I'd work with one and then next day with the other. It wasn't easy."

"But it encouraged me to do more television in the future because TV is where you find romantic scripts. Movies seem to require nudity, violence and car crashes. Not my cup of tea."

But acting alone is not enough anymore. It doesn't provide the challenges unless it's a really hairy role. And my needs have changed from approval and applause. I don't need them like I did.

I want to see the whole blank canvas and fill it with things that interest me."

Dyan feels that Streisand can do it, so can she.

Melba Moore in 'Purlie' on PBS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Singer Melba Moore will be seen on PBS in a repeat performance of her part in the Broadway hit musical "Purlie," a role she played after Miss Moore had left the cast — and later toured in the national company.

The play is about a Southern youth who is abused by police. Davis once said in an interview that he had initially planned to do a serious drama, but then decided satire, rather than direct assault, might be more powerful.

Miss Moore said that when she took the part in "Purlie," she really didn't try to interpret the play in terms of social issues, nor did she think about the idea of a successful black play existing on Broadway.

"I wasn't taking a risk career-wise, but to be sure I didn't know what I was getting into. I didn't know whether the play was good or bad or indifferent. To be honest, I didn't care. I wanted to get some experience. Originally, I thought, 'When I read the play, I thought, Gee, this is kind of old hat. This is kind of Uncle Tom. I felt we were being kind of type cast.'"

But she took the part and magic happened.

Besides the Tony, the music teacher-turned nightclub singer whose only previous theatrical experience had been a stint in "Hair," won a New York Drama Critics Award, a Theater World Award and a Drama Desk Award.

Davis won a staunch admirer.

"Having had the experience of playing in front of a wide variety of audiences and seeing what their response was, I could tell it (Purlie) had many messages for many people. Not always the same message. Very often the same line would take on a totally different meaning."

'Terms of Endearment' leads Oscar picks

By Vernon Scott
 United Press International

HOLLYWOOD — "Terms of Endearment" with 11 Academy Award nominations, but several highly touted contenders, notably Barbra Streisand and "Yentl," were knocked out of key Oscar categories by British imports.

The box-office smash "Terms of Endearment," revealing several decades in the lives of a Texas widow and daughter who love each other but can't always stand each other, won nominations for best picture, direction and screenplay.

Its quartet of stars also won acting citations — Shirley MacLaine, for her role as a dizzy, domineering mother, Debra Winger, who plays her stalwart daughter, Jack Nicholson, who appears as Miss MacLaine's ex-astronaut boyfriend, and John Lithgow, who has a tender affair with Miss Winger.

"The Right Stuff," a look back at the heroic origins of America's space program, won eight nominations, including best picture, followed by six for Ingmar Bergman's "Fanny & Alexander." Bergman's story of the travails of a Swedish family, Bergman said it was his last movie.

Also nominated for best picture were "The Big Chill," "The Dresser" and "Tender Mercies." "The Dresser" and "Educating Rita," both British entries, captured key nominations while the highly touted "Yentl," written, directed, produced and starred in by Miss Streisand, failed to win mention in those key categories.

"Yentl" received five nominations, two of them in the best song category.

Also nominated for best actress were Jane Alexander, who starred in "Testament," a film about nuclear holocaust; two-time Oscar winner Meryl Streep, who played a contaminated nuclear plant worker in "Silkwood"; and newcomer Julie Walters, who portrayed an ambitious student in "Educating Rita."

Nominated for best actor were Peter Yates for "The Untouchables," Bergman for "Fanny & Alexander," Mike Nichols for "Silkwood," Bruce Beresford for "Tender Mercies" and Brooks Williams for "The Right Stuff," who made his film directing debut for "Terms of Endearment."

In addition to Nicholson and Lithgow, other nominees for best supporting actor were Charles Durning as the Nazi officer in the comedy "To Be or Not to Be," playwright-actor Sam Shepard for his portrayal of test pilot Chuck Yeager in "The Right Stuff," and Rip Torn for "Cross Creek."

Cher won a nomination for best supporting actress in her first dramatic role in "Silkwood." Other nominees were Linda Cuse for "The Big Chill," Linda Hunt who played a man in "The Year of Living Dangerously," Amy Irving in "Yentl," and Alfre Woodard for "Cross Creek."

Advice

A million thanks may, in fact, be a few too many thanks

DEAR ABBY: I usually agree with you. However, I did a double take when I read the following item: "Dear Abby, I recently celebrated an 'important' birthday and received many lovely cards. "A friend casually mentioned (on seeing the stack of cards) that I would be very tired by the time I had written thank-you notes for all those cards. "Abby, does a person have to write thank-you notes for cards? - WRITER'S CRAMP

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR CRAMP: No one has to acknowledge anything. But those with the best manners acknowledge everything - cards included. Come on, Abby, you must be kidding. I hope you remembered an "important" birthday with a card showing your answer. I can see it now. "Thank you for the birthday card." Then the recipient sends a card saying, "Thank you for your card thanking me for my thank-you card." Then a card in return. "Thank you for the thank-you card thanking me for my thank-you card. I think I will go out and buy some stock in Hallmark Cards. V.T. MOON, DUARTE, CALIF.

DEAR MR. MOON: You are right, of course, but I can't say I wasn't warmed. My editor suggested that I rethink my stance, but I held firm in the belief that those who remembered an "important" birthday with a card should be thanked along with those who had sent a costly gift. ("It's the thought," that counted.") Bear in mind, I was alluding only to "important" birthdays - not to ordinary birthdays, Christmases, anniversaries, get-well cards, etc. But had I thought it through (which I did not), even acknowledging cards for "important" birthdays needs some qualification. For example, Cary Grant, that magnificent living legend who recently celebrated a well-publicized "important" birthday, must have received 50,000 cards from well-wishers around the world. Obviously, Cary Grant cannot thank everyone who sent him a card - so there goes my logic. Let's just say that I was wrong. So if anyone out there sends me a "condolence" card for this colossal gaffe, don't expect a thank-you card from me.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to hear from women who have had babies in their 40s. How do they handle it when strangers say to their child, "I'll bet Grandma spoils you?" They take us for grandmas. I like the looks on people's faces when I tell them I'm the mother. They always say, "Oh, I'm sorry!" Well, I'm not. My baby was no accident. She's a gift - like the rest of my children. PROUD MAMA (AND GRANDMA, TOO)

CONFIDENTIAL TO 'UNLUCKY' IN SPRINGFIELD, VA.: "Luck is a well-planned accident." (Charles Nelson Reilly) (Every teenager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. Your husband's bad breath may be sign of a problem

DEAR DR. LAMB: My husband used to have sweet breath but for the last few years it's been terrible. He doesn't realize it and I don't want to hurt him by telling him, unless it can be helped. He doesn't drink much and never smokes. He sometimes coughs up a curd-like substance he thinks comes from his throat, tonsils, nasal passages. He rarely has colds or sinus infections. Do you have any suggestions?

Your Health

Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR READER: Tell him you'll be doing him a favor. The way to start on a breath problem is with the dentist because diseases of the gums are often a factor. Good dental hygiene is important. Since some dentists fail to tell their patients to brush their tongue, he should know he needs to brush his tongue every time he brushes his teeth. The next step is to see the ear, nose and throat specialist. Tonsils are rarely a cause of bad breath, but diseased ones with food particles in the crypts can be a source of bad odor. Even a chronic lung infection can cause bad breath. After seeing the ear, nose and throat specialist, the next step is to see a specialist in internal medicine. Odors from medical problems or anything that affects body chemistry are exhaled from the lungs. So a person with a liver disease may have bad breath. You'll want to read the Health Letter #4, Halitosis: The Breath Problem and What to Do About It, which I'm sending you. Perhaps you can use it to talk to your husband. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of the Manchester Herald, P.O. Box 1351, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. DEAR DR. LAMB: I recently had stomach surgery because of ulcers. It was explained to me that I had something called the "dumping syndrome." What is this? DEAR READER: The stomach is a large food pouch or reservoir. It stores the food, churns, liquefies and empties it into the small intestine. It also sorts out part of the slushy material into the small intestine at regular intervals. This way only a small portion of the food you've eaten enters the small intestine at any one time. After stomach surgery the food residue may be as large and dumps large amounts of food directly into the small intestine. That's why it's called the "dumping syndrome." This excessive amount of food entering into the small intestine may overload it to the point that digestion doesn't proceed normally. This in turn may cause absorption of fluid from the bloodstream into the small intestine, which can cause fainting and diarrhea. A person also may not absorb all of the necessary calories, which leads to weight loss. Such dumping syndromes may be minor or severe, but in most instances the symptoms gradually subside before surgery is necessary. You can help prevent adverse reactions by avoiding concentrated sweets and starches.

Parodies of popular shirts get maker into a legal bind

By Mark Lozenby United Press International RICHMOND, Va. - The man who outraged America's preppy establishment with knit shirts bearing emblems of dead alligators is at it again, courtbound and unrepentant in defense of his latest preppy parody. This time, Barry Gottlieb's target is Ralph Lauren polo shirts, sportswear distinguished by an emblem of a polo player astride a charging horse. Gottlieb's version shows the haughty polo player being dragged behind the galloping horse with his leg stuck in the stirrup. He calls it "The Horse Shirt." Gottlieb, president of Mad Dog Productions Inc. of Richmond, said the production and sale of the shirts are part of his right "to make a living and have fun doing it." The spokesman for Polo Fashion Inc. declined to comment because the case is going to court. The spokesman said the suit itself should demonstrate the seriousness with which the company views the matter. The suit against Gottlieb, filed in a New York federal district court, contends Gottlieb and Mad Dog Productions violated the company's trademark. Gottlieb said the suit also seeks a court order to prohibit him from distributing any more of the shirts and seeks at least $300,000 in damages. GOTTIEB'S ATTORNEY filed a response last month to the company's federal lawsuit. "What they're trying to do is put us out of business," Gottlieb said. Gottlieb said his attorney's response focused on his right to make the shirts because the polo emblems have become "preppy symbols." Being a symbol, he said, makes the shirts "subject to social statement, commercialism and parody."

U.S./World In Brief

Gulf war heats up

LONDON - Iran reported it killed or wounded more than 1,000 Iraqis and seized strategic territory in an offensive to "settle" the Persian Gulf war. Iraq said today an Iranian attack on a border town killed 14 civilians and wounded 12 others. Iraq reported two Iranian jets struck the town of Ah Garbi about 20 miles inside Iraq's eastern frontier. The report by the official Iraqi News Agency, monitored in London, said the raid at 10:15 a.m. (2:15 a.m. EST) "targeted residential areas in the town and led to the death of 14 civilians and 12 wounded, the destruction of 11 shops and damage to four cars." The Iraqi report gave no other details but it followed Iranian claims its troops had launched a "victorious" new offensive that would "settle" the war.

Africans agree on cease-fire

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa - South Africa and Angola, in a move to end a 17-year bush war, have agreed to allow a commission to monitor a cease-fire along the northern Namibian border. The commission could include Americans. "Angola wants peace, the Southern African states want peace, South Africa wants peace. We have taken a very important step on that road," South African Foreign Minister Riebel Botha said Thursday after talks in Lusaka, Zambia which included U.S. representatives. In a statement released in Lusaka, negotiators said South Africa and Angola had agreed to set up a joint commission to monitor a South African troop withdrawal from southern Angola.

Kennedy faces heroin trial

RAPID CITY, S.D. - Robert Kennedy Jr.'s future as a lawyer could be on the line in his trial on a charge of heroin possession but authorities say he probably would spend no time in prison if convicted. Kennedy, 30, waived his right to a preliminary hearing and was to appear before Circuit Judge Marshall Young today to plead innocent, his attorney said. A felony conviction or a guilty plea to a felony charge automatically would disbar him in New York, where he passed the bar exam Dec. 9, Joseph Lucchi of the New York Bar Association said. But Lucchi said a suspended sentence might not affect a lawyer's license. Kennedy, son of the late U.S. attorney general, refused medical attention after becoming ill aboard a Republic Airlines flight to the Black Hills five months ago.

Parents halt nurse sentence

GEORGETOWN, Texas - The parents of a child killed with a drug injection by nurse Gene Jones say the 96-year prison sentence she received will help ease the memories of their daughter's death. A seven-woman, five-man jury deliberated about four hours before assessing the maximum sentence against Ms. Jones, who must serve at least 20 years before being eligible for parole. "The 33-year-old mother of two, who sat red-eyed and stunned as the punishment was pronounced, was convicted after a five-week trial Wednesday of injecting 15-month-old Chelsea McClellan with a lethal muscle relaxant in a Kerrville, Texas, pediatric clinic on Sept. 17, 1982.

Smoking, birth weight linked

BALTIMORE - A 2 1/2-year study has shown that cigarette-smoking women who quit or cut down during pregnancy give birth to healthier infants, researchers say. The study, conducted on 933 pregnant women in the Baltimore area, showed newborns of mothers who cut back on smoking were significantly heavier and longer than newborns of mothers who continued smoking. The results showed that among single, live births, the infants born to mothers who quit or stopped smoking had a mean birth weight of 3,278 grams - 92 grams heavier than the infants born to mothers who continued the habit. Babies also were 0.6 centimeters greater in length. Researchers said Thursday the study provided the first clinical evidence that cigarette smoking is harmful to newborns.

Hottline gets VDT complaints

NEW YORK - A national hotline on video display terminals has received more than 6,000 calls about eye strain, stress and muscle disorders in less than a year, a national women's organization says. The study also showed that since 1979, 50 percent of the women telephone sales representatives working on VDTs at United Airlines in San Francisco have had abnormal pregnancies. The VDT Hotline began last May by the National Association of 9 to 5 Working Women recorded complaints of severe eye strain, stress and muscle disorders by more than 6,000 callers, who were given health history surveys to complete. The 873 surveys filled out by callers showed the average respondent was a clerical female who worked six to eight hours daily on a plastic-cased VDT, her eyes 10 to 20 inches from the screen, without rest breaks other than those given all other workers.

Filipino candidate is detained

By Fernando Del Mundo United Press International

MANILA, Philippines - Military authorities today detained a prominent opposition leader at Manila's airport hours after he announced an election challenge to the government of President Ferdinand Marcos. Former Sen. Salvador Laurel, 54, was detained for allegedly concealing a gun in his luggage moments before his scheduled departure for the United States for meetings with members of the U.S. Congress and anti-Marcos groups. His detention came hours after his powerful coalition of 12 opposition parties rejected calls for a boycott of crucial May parliamentary elections and announced it would field candidates.

Cars swept from a parking lot by a massive ice jam illustrate the problems caused by weather in the mill city of Claremont, N.H., on Thursday. Flood waters from the Sugar River forced scores of residents from their homes until a large crane helped clear the jam, ending the flood danger.

Huge ice jam floods town

Flood waters 8 feet deep surged over the banks of the Sugar River, derailing several freight cars, made a dent in the state's important ski industry and sent maple sugarcroppers scrambling to tap trees flowing with sap because of warm temperatures. Claremont police said a flood emergency was declared shortly before 8 a.m. in the Beargard Village area and the Dartmouth Woolen Mills, where flood waters swept cars up to 15 feet away from parking spaces. The second shift at the mill was canceled. Elsewhere in the nation, an "exceptionally heavy" snowstorm centered on Utah plowed through the Western mountains today and forecasters warned it could unload 2 feet of snow before moving on. Flooding eased in Pennsylvania, where more than 150 people had fled the rising Susquehanna River. The Western storm brought snow early today from western Montana across Idaho, western Wyoming, Utah and Nevada. The National Weather Service said early today Lander, Wyo., had 20 inches of snow on the ground, Pocatello, Idaho, 11 inches, and 3 inches had fallen in six hours at Salt Lake City.

Gorbachev contender in U.S.S.R.

MOSCOW - The youngest member of the Soviet Communist Party's ruling Politburo has emerged as a possible candidate for the presidency, the Kremlin's second most important position. The publication Thursday of a speech by Mikhail Gorbachev, 52, revealed he played a key role in the emergency party Central Committee meeting that resulted in the election of Konstantin Chernenko as party general secretary after the death of Yuri Andropov Feb. 9. In the months before Andropov's death, Gorbachev and Grigory Romanov, 60, were both seen as strong candidates to assume the Kremlin leadership as part of Andropov's campaign to reform the country's economic and political systems. Gorbachev was secretary of agriculture but had been given additional responsibility under Andropov. Not until the day after Andropov's death did it become clear that Chernenko, a protégé of the late Leonid Brezhnev, had been tapped to succeed him. Andropov himself held the triple crown of Soviet power - general secretary of the Communist Party, the top post in the Kremlin, president and chairman of the Defense Council. Under Brezhnev, however, the title of president was held by two other men, Nikolai Podgorny and Alexei Kosygin. Chernenko was nominated by Prime Minister Nikolai Tikhonov, but Gorbachev chaired the crucial meeting.

Israel, Syria won't go along with Saudi plan

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — President Amin Gemayel agreed under rebel pressure Friday to a peace plan that cancels the Israeli-Lebanese troop-withdrawal accord but needs the unlikely support of Israel and Syria to succeed.

Syria and Israel, both with veto power over the plan, expressed opposition.

I am confident this initiative will lead to national reconciliation and the withdrawal of foreign forces from our country," Gemayel said of the eight-point peace plan sponsored by Saudi Arabia.

But, he added in an interview with American television networks at the presidential palace in suburban Baabda, "If this plan does not succeed, we will try another one."

More fighting was reported with Syrian-backed Druze militiamen shelling Lebanese army troops at the Shouf mountain town of Souk El Gharb, which guards the approaches to the capital. The town is the army's last outpost outside Beirut.

Gemayel said he had not heard from either Israel or Syria, but "if I have to choose between the (Israeli-Lebanese troop withdrawal) agreement and national unity, for sure I prefer, I choose, national unity."

Gemayel's Druze Moslem and Shiite Moslem foes had long called for cancellation of the treaty with Israel. But Druze leader Walid Jumblatt said that irrespective of the fate of the treaty, Gemayel would have to resign for peace to return to Lebanon.

As Foreign Minister Elie Salem outlined the eight-point Saudi peace plan, the sound of Lebanese army artillery roared near the presidential palace.

Christian Phalange radio reported heavy shelling aimed at troops at Souk El Gharb, the last army post in the

No one hurt in rollover

Town firefighters wait for a tow truck after a rollover during rush hour Friday at Center and Parker streets. Vernon resident Margaret Blynn wasn't hurt and was able to crawl out of her car after it hit an embankment on the side of the road and flipped over. According to police, Miss Blynn was traveling east in the right-hand lane when she was forced off the road by another car. The second car did not stop and police said they have no clues to the name of its driver.

Economy leveled off as '83 ended

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. economic growth leveled off in the final quarter of 1983 to 4.9 percent because of the trade deficit, but the decline was less precipitous than earlier estimates showed, the government said Friday.

The latest economic report also demonstrated that a long awaited business spending boom had finally occurred, setting a record-high level for investment in modernization and expansion.

"It's just fantastic," senior Commerce Department economist Theodore Torda said. "We have a real boom on our hands."

Many analysts, reviewing this week's exceptionally strong reports on January sales, production and housing starts, expect the current quarter to turn out better than the final months of 1983.

It is clear to us that the nation is set on a strong economic course for 1984," White House spokesman Larry Speakes said. "We are poised for economic expansion of the kind that puts people permanently back to work and sets the country on a proper economic course."

Jerry Jasinowski, chief economist of the National Association of Manufacturers, said, "We are currently projecting growth in the 6 percent range for the first quarter. The economy continues to grow stronger even though growth in the fourth quarter of 1983 was somewhat slower than expected due to a drop in net exports."

The Commerce Department originally said growth in the gross national product adjusted for inflation was 4.5 percent during the final three months of 1983, compared with the previous quarter. In its routine revision, based on recent statistics on sales and the trade deficit, the department revised the final quarter GNP to 4.9 percent.

Economists generally consider a 4 percent pace for GNP sustained over several quarters, to be the "break-even" point above which the unemployment rate improves and below which it gets worse.

In dollars not adjusted for inflation, the nation's goods and services earned $3.310 trillion in all of 1983.

The bargains are coming

After "riding" through the streets of Manchester warning residents that the bargains are coming, Main Street merchants regrouped at the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce to prepare for today's Presidents Day sale.

The merchants hope to attract a army of people to Main Street with history-making low prices. The sale is being sponsored by the Downtown Merchants Association.

Winter storm is moving east

A vigorous winter storm Friday barreled through Utah, leaving a foot and a half of snow behind, and charged into Colorado. Residents along Illinois' swollen Rock River kept a wary eye on the muddy banks.

Dense fog covered parts of the Mississippi Valley and was blamed in a fatal Iowa traffic accident Thursday. In Michigan, a man was killed when his car hit a patch of ice and skidded into a tree.

Winter storm warnings were posted over all of Colorado and the northern third of New Mexico for 6 to 12 inches of snow and 50-mph winds and storm watches were issued for parts of Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

Six inches of snow blasted Monticello, Colo., in two hours as the storm moved east.

Up to 18 inches of snow hit the Utah mountains. The Alta ski resort got a fresh 16-inch snowcover and Tootsie reported 12 inches before the storm charged on.

Roads in Utah and Colorado were slick and dangerous to travel.

"We're going to go to sleep for a couple of hours, let the sun come out and let the people go to work," trucker George Webster during a stop in Salt Lake City.

U.S. Highway 666 was blocked for two hours 10 miles north of Gallup, N.M., when at least eight tractor-trailer trucks jackknifed on the slick road.

Officials briefly closed Little Cottonwood Canyon near Salt Lake City while avalanche crews lobbed explosives at the mountainsides to bring down potential slides. The canyon was re-opened.

"Stay home," was the advice Utah Highway Patrol Dispatcher Patty Coon gave motorists in the Salt Lake City area.

Teton County, Wyo., authorities were investigating the death of a skier caught in an avalanche Thursday near Jackson.

Pierre Muhme, 27, Jackson, Wyo., was skiing in an avalanche path, Sheriff Roger Millward said.

"He went down about 30 feet. The snow fractured away and carried him down the slope, some 300 yards through the trees. He sustained multiple injuries from the debris and from the trees as he was carried down the mountain."

The springlike temperatures that bathed the Midwest this week combined with rainfall to send streams and rivers over their banks.

Residents along the Rock River Friday paid close attention to the water.

Ice jams caused some flooding in Rock Island County Thursday and three families were evacuated by boats.
