Jury clears Lorber in murder case

By Sarah Passell Herald Reporter

HARTFORD - Lorian refugee Lorna Lorber burst into tears Friday afternoon when a four-man, eight-woman jury announced it had acquitted her of murdering Linh Phommahaxay, after deliberating almost nine hours over two days.

The tears were Lorber's first outward expression of emotion in court since the trial began five weeks ago. The jury reached its verdict only minutes after hearing Superior Court Judge Thomas H. Corrigan repeat the legal definition of self-defense.

ON JULY 8, 1982, the morning of the fatal assault, Phommahaxay had chased Lorber's van down Walnut Street, according to testimony during the trial.

Fish shortage boosts inflation. WASHINGTON (UPI) - Wholesale prices rose a moderate 0.5 percent in March, the Labor Department said Friday, and a fish shortage coupled with the broad-based nature of the hikes suggests worse inflation ahead.

Reagan dips into Pentagon budget for El Salvador. By Robert Shepard United Press International. WASHINGTON - President Reagan, unable to get lawmakers approval for $62 million in emergency military aid for El Salvador, has decided to bypass Congress and take the money from the Pentagon budget, a key House chairman said Friday.

Here's a real logjam. The Hockanum River Canoe Race on Sunday might be a lot more crowded if it weren't for the efforts all week of Lee Watkins, in the background, and a team of half a dozen volunteers, including Gregory Barber. They donned wet suits to clear logs from the chilly waters of the Hockanum Friday afternoon.

Nabbed by New Hampshire police Playboy sex-slayer kills himself

By Jon Fleming United Press International

COLEBROOK, N.H. - Christopher Wilder, wanted in eight states in the sexual-torture slayings of four young women, killed himself with his own gun Friday as police attempted to arrest the millionaire playboy 10 miles from the Canadian border.

Wilder killed himself with his own .357 magnum after a struggle with police, Assistant Attorney General Michael Pignatelli said. Wilder lunged into his car as two state policemen approached his gold-colored sports car.

At this point, state trooper Leo Jellison was out of the police cruiser and chased Wilder. Pignatelli said Wilder "jumped in the car. A struggle ensued. A shot was fired from a 357 magnum revolver, which Wilder either had on his person or had in his car."

Long said the president's decision to use emergency Pentagon funds instead was a signal to Congress to "go work your head off, but if we don't get exactly what we want we'll bypass you."

Jellison did not have his gun drawn, but the other trooper had pulled his gun. He did not fire a shot, Pignatelli said. Jellison did not leave Wilder's car during the struggle, Pignatelli said, contradicting an earlier account that had Jellison rushing back to his car to radio for assistance.

Wilder, 39, considered "the most wanted man in America" by the FBI, was suspected in the slaying of four women and the disappearance of five others. Two other women survived attacks and one of them positively identified Wilder as the man who lured her into his car and stabbed her.

Wayne DeLong, an attendant at the Getty gas station where Wilder stopped, said he heard one, possibly two, shots as Jellison approached the car. "I didn't see much. I was inside. There was a lot of commotion," DeLong said. "I heard Jellison started hollering and I called down to the police station. The state trooper was hollering that he'd been shot."

Speakes indicated earlier that whatever the stopgap plan, Reagan still wants the full amount he requested. "We're going to continue our push for funding for El Salvador. It's as important as it's ever been," he said.

The FBI had been concentrating its search in upstate New York and New Jersey, following the discovery in upstate New York of a car Wilder allegedly stole in Texas. He was last seen in New York state driving a gold metallic Pontiac firebird with New York plates and a blackbird painted on the hood, the FBI said.

One of the young women Wilder was accused of kidnapping is Elizabeth Kenyon, 23, a Coral Gables, Fla., teacher and Orange Bowl princess who vanished on March 5. The woman is still missing. "We don't know how we're going to find our daughter now," said Kenyon, of Pompano Beach, Fla. "We were hoping and praying they wouldn't kill him."

Wilder's death Friday followed one of the largest manhunt ever organized by the FBI. Wright's comments Thursday night came shortly after the House requested. "We're going to continue our push for funding for El Salvador. It's as important as it's ever been," he said.

Reagan has repeatedly warned Congress the Salvadoran forces are in danger of running out of supplies. "The alternative for the administration was to wait for Congress to return April 24 and press its request for the full $62 million. The Senate bill also included $21 million for the anti-Sandinista forces in Nicaragua, but the House leadership was adamant in refusing to approve the money. Reagan cannot use the military drawdown to provide that money."

At Mt. Washington Observatory

50 years ago, the winds hit 231 mph.

By Milly McLean
United Press International

MOUNT WASHINGTON, N.H. — It started as a skiing expedition for Arthur Griffin, then a 30-year-old artist. When it was all over that week 50 years ago, an unusually vicious early spring snowstorm made him part of the hardy crew that clocked the highest wind speed ever recorded in the world—231 mph.

The old shack had three big chimneys around it to keep it from blowing off. "It was a quaking ice-encrusted cabin on Mount Washington where the record wind was recorded April 12, 1934, at the National Weather Service station on the summit.

It was actually going up and down. If it didn't have the chains around it, I would think it would have been blown off. Everything was banged off the shelves," he said. Alexander McKenzie, another member of the crew, believes it was the thick blanket of blue, feathery ice that built up layer upon layer on the shack that kept them from blowing off the cloud-covered peak in the "super hurricane."

The northeast's highest peak is not hospitable to human beings. Five of them were there during the week the massive snowstorm started brewing on the 12,808-foot mountain. Three, including McKenzie, were full-time weather observers on the mountain. Two, including Griffin, were unexpected guests who got trapped after hiking the steep 8-mile climb to go hiking.

MCC conference focuses on subtleties of interaction

By Kathy Gormus
Herald Reporter

The next time the boss calls you into his or her office, take notice of the furniture arrangement — it could tell you whether you are about to be reprimanded or praised, a psychologist told an audience at Manchester Community College on Thursday.

Richard T. Day, a professor of psychology at MCC, told about 60 people at a conference titled "Communicating Effectively in the Workplace" that interpersonal communication is a continuous process that is often achieved through nonverbal means.

Day said, "The nonverbal elements of communication are powerful."

Day was one of two speakers featured at the conference, which was sponsored by the MCC chapter of the Administrative Management Society. Ned A. Whalley, president of the Hartford-based Professional Management Institute Inc., also spoke. He discussed how to cut meeting time in half.

Within executive offices there are distinct environments, including a "semi-social area usually containing a sofa and table and a 'pressure area' containing the executive's desk."

Whalley told the audience that desks act as barriers to more personal conversation, placing the person sitting behind one in a position of authority or dominance. A seating arrangement in which the visitor's chair is pulled alongside the desk implies "less power and more concern," Day contended.

A side-by-side seating arrangement should be used for cooperative tasks, he said.

Day related the story of one manager who, when interviewed as a candidate for employment, purposely sat the visitor's chair 10 to 12 feet from his desk. If the interviewee did not take the initiative to move the chair closer, he or she was considered a poor candidate by the manager, Day said.

Whalley added that 46 percent of management's time is spent in meetings.

"The key is to make those effective and cut the time back," he said. "The greatest illusion about communication is that it's been achieved."

Whalley added that 46 percent of management's time is spent in meetings.

It's a barber's birthday

Dominic Recchia, the barber whose shop is above 843 Main St., had a little surprise party sprung on him Friday afternoon. The occasion: Recchia's 50th birthday. Those who work in the building, along with a few tenants — 15 people in all — attended the party for the Italian barber who has worked in Manchester for half a century. Here Maura Lucius, a legal secretary for the law firm of LaBelle, Rothenberg & LaBelle, also at 843 Main St., presents Dominic with a birthday cake.

WINF to become country station

On or about May 1, Manchester radio station WINF will change from its "middle-of-the-road nostalgia" format to "contemporary country," station manager Jay Epstein said Friday.

There will be a change in call letters, too, from WINF (for Information) to WKHT (for "Country") hits, Epstein said.

Currently, the 1,000-watt AM station plays big-band sounds and songs by artists such as Perry Como and Frank Sinatra. Nashville tunes by likes of Willie Nelson, Waylon Jennings and Tammy Wynette appear slated to replace them.

"We'll be the only full-time radio station with a contemporary country format in the Greater Hartford area," said Epstein.

"The change of format was made because we felt there was a need in this area for this kind of programming," he said.

But he claimed there will be no change in the station's news and public affairs coverage, except, perhaps, to go more in-depth.

Likewise, there will be no forced changes in personnel, he said.

The station, which will remain at 1230 on the AM dial, has been under new ownership since November. Stamford lawyer Daniel Konover and his associates bought the station for more than $300,000 from the Broadcast Management Corp. of Ohio, which had filed for protection from creditors under federal bankruptcy law.

The change in format was "not directly" due to the sale, although a subsequent analysis of the music market called for a new programming approach, Epstein said. At the time the transaction closed, he had said there would be no change in the station's format.

Milton Bradley for two years until 1979, will share the nearly $1 million payoff with Roger Burton, 41, of Newport, R.I. An eight-member federal jury in Providence awarded them the money after a two-week trial.

According to testimony by the two men, they tried to sell a game called "Triumph" to Milton Bradley in 1980. The game featured a rotating control unit in the middle of the board, similar to the one in the "Dark Tower" game unveiled by the toy company a year later.

Connecticut In Brief

Walsh: No cops at brothel
BRIDGEPORT — Ousted Police Superintendent Joseph A. Walsh denied Friday that two police officers lived in a city apartment house at the time it was raided in an FBI investigation of alleged prostitution.
Walsh, 68, took the stand for the first time in Superior Court, where he faces a disciplinary hearing into dozens of charges including mismanagement and racial discrimination.
Walsh said then Lt. Arthur Buchanan lived in an apartment house on Ellsworth Street in Bridgeport before it was converted into an alleged brothel. When asked how he knew, Walsh responded, "Because he (Buchanan) told me, sir."
Allegations that a second Bridgeport police officer lived in the apartment house were false, Walsh said.
The alleged prostitution ring was broken up in July 1981 following a raid by the FBI under direction of prosecutors for the U.S. Justice Department's Organized Crime and Racketeering Strike Force.

Baby all set to go home
NEW MILFORD — A 7-month-old Mexican baby brought to the United States to correct severe deformities that initially caused confusion about her sex will return home to Mexico Saturday to be reunited with her parents.
The baby, Michele, was treated at the University of Connecticut Health Center for an exstrophy, or an inside-out bladder, a condition that afflicts only about 100 babies in the U.S. each year.
"She had a kidney scan on her last visit to make sure everything was okay and everything was clear," said Linda Youngman of New Milford. She and her husband Bruce have been foster parents to the child.
Michele, who was treated as an outpatient at the Farmington health center, is all set to go home, Mrs. Youngman said.

Panel hears about children
HAMDEN — There is not enough quality child care available in Connecticut for the children of working parents, a professor of pediatrics at the Yale Child Study Center told a congressional committee Friday.
"Many families cannot afford it, and do not have access to it," Dr. Martha Leonard told the House Select Committee on Children, Youth, and Families in a hearing at the Children's Center.
Ms. Leonard said licensing of child care facilities is based on minimal standards and unlicensed facilities are likely to have inexperienced adults, overcrowding and inadequate attention to health, nutrition and safety.
Sixty-seven percent of women with children 6 to 17 years old were working outside the home in Connecticut in 1980, up from 54 percent in 1970, according to statistics from the State Permanent Commission on the Status of Women.
The congressional committee also heard testimony that economic pressures have made it mandatory that certain parents with preschool and school age children be given flexible working hours.

CRRA says pullout won't harm project

HARTFORD (UPI) — A decision by four communities not to join in a long-planned garbage-to-energy plant will not affect the success of the project, the Connecticut Resources Recovery Authority said Friday.
Lynn Healey, special assistant to the authority's president, said the planned mid-Connecticut plant could run on the 660 tons per day of trash committed by seven other towns in central Connecticut.
Officials from New Britain, Berlin, Plainville and Southington decided Thursday not to go ahead with participation in the project and instead turn to the private sector to develop their own garbage-to-energy plant.
New Britain Mayor William J. McNamara said a study for the towns by a Boston waste-management consulting firm found there were ways to handle needs "better and cheaper."

"This is one of the terrible decisions public officials have to make. We think we're doing the right thing," said McNamara, whose city is the largest of the four moving from under the wing of the state-backed authority.
The quasi-public CRRA was created to bring towns together to build regional plants that turn garbage into energy.
"As it stands each town is responsible for the solid waste generated in its own boundaries," said John W. Anderson, deputy commissioner of the state Department of Environmental Protection.
"The state has come up with a plan we think will work," he said, but if the individual towns choose not to go into it, "That's their prerogative."
Anderson said he was pleased at least the towns chose resource recovery.

"That's what we think is the only way since we can't site landfills anymore. We at least agree on that. The disagreement is on size and administration," Anderson said.
Ms. Healey said the defection of the four towns was "a disappointment because we think mid-Connecticut is the best solution for all the towns we've targeted."
But she said the authority still expected to get more commitments from central Connecticut towns by the May 15 deadline to come for the project at $25 per ton or under in 1987 dollars.
She said the mid-Connecticut plant would have 2,000-ton-a-day capacity, but would be able to operate on only 660 tons if the trash is mixed with coal.
John Weichsel, town manager in Southington, said the four communities were not enthusiastic about CRRA and were looking for a trash-burning plant with capacity to burn about 360 tons of trash a day.
Weichsel said the most fundamental issues were total private development and operation of the project and a fixed price per ton for trash sent to the plant to be used to generate energy.
McNamara said the four towns were looking to site their garbage-to-energy plant on land owned by his city in Berlin.
Weichsel also said Southington officials were concerned that the CRRA did not commit itself to a fixed price for handling refuse. "If they have had luck," the towns would pay more, he said.
He said the four towns were looking for a plant where "we commit tonnage and they commit price."
McNamara said the four towns would leave it up to the developer of their plant to find a buyer for its energy.

Towns seek aid for ex-patients

HARTFORD (UPI) — Leaders of five Connecticut municipalities said Friday they need more state funds to deal with the problem of housing people released from state mental institutions.
The mayors and selectmen said the municipalities need more state assistance to cope with the growing problem of former mental patients, who have no place to go or need treatment.
"The major problem is discharging without planning, there is no monitoring and the patients are literally dumped on the street," said Norwalk Mayor William Collins.
The leaders spoke outside the Capitol after bringing their appeal to lawmakers.
Stamford Mayor Thom Serrani said the human element in deinstitutionalization has been pushed aside by financial limitations and the communities have been forced into an unbearable caretaker role.
Dr. Leonard Gold, chief of psychiatry at Stamford Hospital, said the communities were feeling the effects of a 30-year plan to move mental patients out of institutions.
Middletown Mayor Sebastian Garafalo said his community, in which the state's Connecticut Valley Hospital is located, "has been particularly affected by mental patients cast on their own and unable to survive."

Middletown Mayor Sebastian J. Garafalo and other mayors of towns belonging to the Connecticut Governor's Conference of Municipalities urge the state to provide more aid to mental institutions at a Hartford news conference Friday. Gov. O'Neill

Police planes to watch for dangerous drivers

HARTFORD (UPI) — The state plans to buy two airplanes to help state police crack down on speeding and drunken driving on Connecticut highways, Gov. William O'Neill announced Friday.
Bids have been put out for the single-engine planes, which are expected to cost about $200,000 and hopefully will be in the air by the Fourth of July, O'Neill said.
The governor said there is renewed concern over a recent increase in traffic deaths attributed to speeding, even though the number of highway deaths in Connecticut last year was down from the previous year.
"The addition of aerial surveillance is absolutely essential to make our enforcement program even more effective," O'Neill said.
The planes would be purchased by the state police from federal money supplied by the National Highway Administration through the state Transportation Department.

Col. Lester J. Forst, the state police commander, said the planes are less costly to operate and maintain than helicopters and provide more flexibility in air-to-ground surveillance and contact with cruisers on the ground.
"They're much cheaper to keep in the air than helicopters," said Forst, who noted similar airplane patrols have been successful in Maine, New Hampshire and Maryland.

Forst said the plan would not cost the state any money.
Initial plans call for the patrolling of sections of highways known for chronic speeding.
The governor cited Interstate 95 in Westport, Guilford and Stonington; Interstate 91 in North Haven and Wallingford; Interstate 84 in Danbury and Newtown; and Route 8 in Litchfield.

Hart working for comeback in the West

By Arnold Sowlisok United Press International

Sen. Gary Hart, working to ignite a Western comeback that could pull him at least even with Walter Mondale by mid-June, campaigned Friday among his kind of folks in Arizona and headed for the delegate goldmine in California.

Mondale passed up the last chance to pitch for the 33 delegates at stake in Arizona caucuses Saturday and concentrated on California, where the Big Daddy of delegations — 306 — will be chosen June 5.

Jesse Jackson, looking for more immediate results, concentrated on Ohio and its May 7 primary reward of 154 delegates.

In Tucson, Hart told a cheering crowd of University of Arizona students he wanted the money for education instead. "Let's take some money from the fat cats in this country and feed our children," he said.

High school course teaches its students to deal with stress

By Don Susman
United Press International

WYOMING, Ohio — One myth says carefree high school years are chock full of adolescent frivolities such as beach parties, class plays, harmless pranks and hamburgers.

In fact, says Wyoming High School teacher Kathy Ryan, they're filled with pressure to get good grades, strained relationships with peers and family, doubts about the future and worries about college.

Ms. Ryan and several other teachers and school administrators in this Cincinnati suburb have established a 10-session, non-credit course in stress management for all of the school's freshmen.

Each week, small groups meet with a teacher to discuss such topics as communication and coping techniques, the biological effects of stress, self-esteem, school and family issues and peer relationships.

"Part of it is that you may be under stress and you're not recognizing it," Ms. Ryan said. "You may be slamming doors at home. You may be kicking the dog."

Students are taught techniques for easing stress and calming down. In one, they lie on their backs on the floor while soft music plays. They spend about 15 minutes in that position and then relax small groups of muscles from their feet to their heads.

In another, mental rehearsal, students tell themselves they can endure stress, and then envision themselves in stressful situations.

In countdown breathing, they consciously slow their breathing to slow their heartbeat.

"One girl just wrote a letter to tell us about her problems," Ms. Ryan said. "Before the recital she did the countdown breathing technique. Before that she was shaking. But the technique calmed her."

Biology teacher Marie Johnson instructs a group of high school freshmen on the physical effects of stress during a class at Wyoming High School in the Cincinnati suburb of Wyoming.

estem and felt in better control of themselves than those who didn't," she said.

"IT APPEARS to be a big hit with the 220 freshmen who have taken it," David Herd, student editor of the school newspaper, said many upperclassmen at first scoffed at the course as unnecessary.

Ms. Ryan said the growing number of teaching aids on the subject reflect increasing societal interest in controlling stress.

"We couldn't find material on the subject to save our souls two years ago. Now there are at least 15 titles for classroom use," she said.

Cheating heart begins to skip beat

DEAR ABBY: First, I know that I am a very mixed-up person. I'm 36, have two children, and I'm on my third husband. I believe in God and know there is a hell, but for some reason I'm not afraid of going there even after all the bad things I've done.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

I started making love to almost every man I dated when I was 15. I cheated on all my husbands, including the one I'm now married to. I don't know why, because basically most men are alike. None of them do very much for me, so I know I'm not a nymphomaniac, if there is such a thing.

I'm currently involved with a man much younger than I am. He's married, too. I think I love him, but I've decided not to see him anymore. My feelings might be hurt for a week or two, but I'd find someone else to take his place.

"What in the world is the matter with me? I think I need a psychiatrist, but I can't afford their prices. Please don't put it off. The longest march in the world starts with one step. God bless and good luck."

DEAR CONFUSED: You have been using sex to fill an unmet emotional need that's been gnawing at you since you were very young.

There is an excellent mental health clinic in your area. Look in your phone book under Mental Health or County Health Services. Call and make an appointment. You will be charged only as much as you can afford to pay.

DEAR ABBY: I am 27 years old and planning to ask a young Christian lady to be my wife. We are very much in love and committed to each other. There is one problem. I am bisexual. Will marriage cure my bisexuality? And do you think I should reveal this to my fiancée before I propose marriage to her?

OKLAHOMA BISEXUAL: DEAR BISEXUAL: Bisexuality is not a "disease" for which one must seek a "cure" in order to eradicate. One can control his (or her) sexual behavior but not his sexual urges.

And yes, I think you should tell your fiancée before proposing marriage.

CONFIDENTIAL TO HEARTBROKEN IN TULSA: My condolences. I know how you feel. I lost my beautiful mother in 1945. (She was only 57). And a few years later I lost a wonderful father. (He was 62). Not a day goes by that I don't think of God for letting me have my parents for as long as I did. I know many who were not nearly as blessed as I. And when I think of those who have survived a far greater tragedy — losing their children — it makes me ashamed for feeling cheated because I still have my parents longer.

DEAR READER: Whether it will hurt or not may depend on how hard you bump. I doubt you are bumping hard enough to injure yourself, but that issue is not likely to help you in any way. You can't lose body fat unless you decrease your calorie intake in relation to your exercise, and then you will lose body fat all over, not just over your hips.

A better solution would be real bumps and grinds. Then the exercise will tighten the muscles in the pelvic area and that may help. I mean the classic rotation of the hips, first in one direction and then in the other, and the backward and forward pelvic thrust. Using the muscles over the hips and buttocks will help lighten them and that may be all you really need.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am 22 years old. I had two sons born 11 months apart. Now the younger son is 4 years old. I weigh 110 pounds and after he was born my hips looked wider.

I started bumping my hips and legs against the wall, 100 times on each side. Will this hurt my hips or my bones? Does it really reduce my size?

Letuce get together?

URBANA, Ill. (UPI) — Gardeners who consider their gardens a labor of love are closer to the truth than they realize, says a University of Illinois agronomist who has been studying the historical link between lettuce and love.

The Egyptians considered lettuce a potent aphrodisiac, said agronomist and National Academy of Sciences member Jack Harlan.

Pharmacological studies show children's bodies process ethanol more rapidly than adults and are thus more susceptible to its effects.

The committee said it also was concerned with the long-term use of such medications but had insufficient evidence linking chronic alcohol ingestion to harmful blood ethanol concentrations in children.

The committee has made the following recommendations to the Food and Drug Administration:

• Over-the-counter liquid preparations should be limited to a maximum of 5 percent ethanol.

Product helps those allergic to milk

Dear Dr. Lamb:

I read a column you wrote about milk allergies. My husband had the symptoms you mentioned so we sent for The Health Letter. Sure enough, after eliminating milk and milk products, his chest and such, my husband and 4-year-old son are 98 percent better. Our 15-month-old son also cannot tolerate milk and he is still on formula.

You mentioned in your column a product you could add to milk to break down lactose but I didn't copy down the name or how to get it. I'm finding it very frustrating to cook and bake now that I cannot use milk. I never realized how much we really used.

DEAR READER: The product is Lact-Aid and you can get it or find out more about it on SugarLo Co., P.O. Box 111, Pleasantville, NJ 08222. It is an enzyme and digests the lactose in the milk if you leave the milk standing with the enzyme in it. It literally replaces the action of enzymes in the digestive system which normally does the same thing to cook and bake now that I cannot use milk. I never realized how much we really used.

Lactose intolerance is not an allergy. It is caused by an enzyme deficiency. Many adults have it and it often causes gaseous distention, diarrhea and digestive complaints. People who do not have enough lactase enzyme cannot digest lactose. Then the undigested sugar ferments, causing these symptoms.

Adults are particularly prone to lactose intolerance. But infants and young children may be allergic to milk. Adults can be, but that is rare compared to lactose intolerance. Children or adults who have an actual milk allergy cannot use milk which has been treated to break down the lactose. They are usually allergic to the protein in the milk, not the lactose sugar.

I'm glad you were helped by The Health Letter. • Milk Products: Good and Bad. Others who want this issue check 78 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of the Manchester Herald, P.O. Box 151, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am 22 years old. I had two sons born 11 months apart. Now the younger son is 4 years old. I weigh 110 pounds and after he was born my hips looked wider.

I started bumping my hips and legs against the wall, 100 times on each side. Will this hurt my hips or my bones? Does it really reduce my size?

DEAR READER: Whether it will hurt or not may depend on how hard you bump. I doubt you are bumping hard enough to injure yourself, but that issue is not likely to help you in any way. You can't lose body fat unless you decrease your calorie intake in relation to your exercise, and then you will lose body fat all over, not just over your hips.

A better solution would be real bumps and grinds. Then the exercise will tighten the muscles in the pelvic area and that may help. I mean the classic rotation of the hips, first in one direction and then in the other, and the backward and forward pelvic thrust. Using the muscles over the hips and buttocks will help lighten them and that may be all you really need.

DEAR DR. BLAKER: About a year ago, the school psychologist sent me a letter saying that my son had a learning disorder called dyslexia. I was shocked by this because to me my son has always seemed to be such a bright student. I never contacted the psychologist because I was afraid I would be blamed.

Lately I have begun to wonder what is going on at that school. Since the psychologist's letter, my son's grades have never been better. His teachers consistently send him home with the most complimentary remarks. He is even on the dean's list.

Could that letter have been a mistake?

DEAR READER: Most certainly. They could have switched names on the letter or there might even be two children by the same name in your son's school. Another possibility might be that the psychologist made a clerical error in diagnosis.

Whatever the cause, your son's performance makes one immediately suspicious about that letter. Call immediately and make an appointment with the psychologist. See if you can straighten this out. Even if your son did have a learning disorder, I would advise you in the same way. Trying to cover up the problem will only hurt the child.

DEAR DR. BLAKER: My friend and I are both divorced and work together in the same insurance agency. Two years ago he took my girlfriend away from me. It was a bad situation but we talked it out and our friendship survived.

Now I have fallen for a new beautiful woman. Because I talk about her so much, her requests have me very upset. I know it is utterly irrational, but I am afraid the same thing will happen again. He is a very handsome man and I can't hold a candle to his seductive ways. What if I lose her to him?

I could never keep him as a friend. I would also probably have to leave my job because I couldn't stand to see him every day.

DEAR READER: Your fears may not be entirely irrational. While he might not go after your new

Genesis has helped those who need rebirth

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Area Conference of Churches.

By Nancy Carr, MACC Director

Genesis - beginning of life (creation blossoming under the hand of the Creator) - hope regenerated by the promise of new opportunities to be and become. All these aspirations and hopes were entwined in our decision to name our program to help mental health patients return to their community - Project Genesis.

Now, counseling isn't therapy and it isn't treatment. Counseling, Genesis style, involves everything from explaining what resources are available in the community to the client in carefully suggesting that you may have a much better chance of finding a job if your face is washed, clothes cleaned and hair combed.

abandon our open-door policy. Doesn't that mean that we just take in more people but help each of them less? Yep! That's about what it means. But it also means that there is a place for isolated and shaky men and women to go.

What kind of services do our Genesis coordinator, Elaine Stancliffe, and new case worker, Linda Thompson, provide? A lot of counseling for a time. Seven hundred and thirty five hours last year to be exact, and Linda was only with us the last two months of the year.

For some clients, counseling may be as direct as sitting side-by-side with the newspaper. "How does that look? Now when the landlord answers the phone, what are you going to say? I'll be the landlord and you call me - Brriing!"

However, when resources aren't there, no amount of networking will fill in the gap. Although Elaine was able to secure permanent housing for two of her clients last year, all too many ended up in the shelter, or when the shelter wasn't open, on the street.

For that matter, all too many clients end up back in the hospital - the revolving door we've heard about. In fact, several of the clients were in and out of the hospital every three months or so, and each time they were discharged, they were back in the same boat with the same large hole in it - no place to live, no place to go, no money to live on.

Just a reminder that the Hunger Walk, being sponsored by the Bolton Ecumenical Council, will start from the town green tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 p.m. The Bolton Ecumenical Council is made up of the four major Bolton churches: St. George Episcopal, Bolton Congregational, Bolton United Methodist and St. Mary's Roman Catholic.

Rose joins Ty Cobb in 4,000-hit club

MONTREAL (UPI) - Pete Rose got the 4,000th hit of his career Friday - a fourth-inning double - to join Ty Cobb as baseball's only players to reach that figure as the Montreal Expos went their home opener 5-1 over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Rose, who will celebrate his 33rd birthday Saturday, doubled off losing pitcher Jerry Koosman (1-1) to reach the 4,000-hit mark. It was exactly 21 years ago, on April 13, 1963, that Rose got his first major league hit, a triple off Pittsburgh's Bob Friend.

In the fourth inning, winning pitcher Charlie Lea (2-1) led off with a single, Rose, who failed to reach the 4,000-hit mark in his hometown of Cincinnati on Wednesday, lined an opposite field double to right, putting runners at second and third. One out later, Tim Lincecum hit a bloop single to shallow center field scoring Lea and Rose and giving the Expos a 4-1 lead.

Montreal went ahead 5-1 in the seventh inning on a triple by Andre Dawson and double by Gary Carter.

Rose, who got a standing ovation from the crowd of nearly 50,000 fans after his hit, needed three at-bats to reach the 4,000-hit mark. He grounded out to second base on his first appearance and was safe on an error by Koosman in the second inning. The double was his only hit in four at-bats.

Rose, who had a lifetime average of .306 entering this season, is now 191 hits behind Ty Cobb's all-time mark of 4,191.

Glenn Wilson hit one-out double in the fourth inning and scored on a single by Bo Diaz for Philadelphia's only run. Philadelphia loaded the bases in the ninth before Gary Lucas relieved Lea and got pinch-hitter John Wockenouts on an infield out to end the game.

Cubs 11, Mets 2 At Chicago, Larry Bowa and Ryne Sandberg lined two-run singles in a five-run fourth inning to lead the Cubs to a 11-2 victory over the New York Mets in the Cubs' home opener, snapping the Mets' six-game winning streak.

Steve Trout, 1-1, allowed seven hits in pitching the first complete game of the season for Chicago. Bowa ended an 0-for-13 slump by lining an opposite field, bases loaded single off Dwight Gooden, 1-1, who was making his second major league start. Chicago had loaded the bases when Cey and Mel Hall walked and Davis reached on a wind-bloop single with none out.

Cey and Hall scored on Bowa's single after Rose had unsuccessfully tried to execute a squeeze bunt. Trout reached on a bunt single to again load the bases and Bob Dernier forced Trout, scoring Davis. Dernier set second - one of four Chicago stolen bases in the game - and Sandberg's single scored Bowa and Dernier.

Trout hit a grand slam and walked home in pitching the first complete game of the season for the Cubs. Chicago took a 1-0 lead in the first when Sandberg doubled and scored on Matthews' single. Chicago added another run in the sixth when Matthews walked and scored on a triple by Leon Durham.

Cardinals 4, Pirates 1 At St. Louis, Ozzie Smith hit a two-run homer with two outs in the seventh inning to lead a 1-1 tie and spark the St. Louis Cardinals to a home opening 4-1 triumph over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

WINDSOR LOCKS - Tommy Milton won seven of eight games Friday evening at the Bradley Bowl, to move into first place entering this afternoon's final round of the Professional Bowlers Association's Greater Hartford Open.

Milton, who lost the tournament lead Friday morning, stormed back into the top spot, rolling a 219 average in the eighth game. He will need to win only one match this afternoon to capture the tournament championship and his 4,000th career hit.

Today's final will be televised nationally by ABC (Channel 8 in New Haven) beginning at 3:30 p.m. The competition will feature the five bowlers with the top scores in eight games Friday by averaging 208. In third place is local favorite Jimmie Fritts of Lowell.

Kalur's overtime goal gives Isles series tie

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (UPI) - Anders Kalur, dressed because of an injury to Bob Bourne, scored at the end of Friday night to help the struggling New York Islanders even their Stanley Cup playoff quarter-final series with the Washington Capitals.

Kalur's goal evened the series at one victory apiece and sent the Islanders avoiding going to Washington for Games 3 and 4 with a 2-2 tie.

Dave Langevin started the play in the Islanders' end, passing up to center ice to Mike Bossy, who skated to the blue line and sent the puck into the Washington zone. Kalur entered the zone, picked up the puck which he threw an 80-foot wristshot high past goalie Pat Riggin.

The Islanders are bidding to join the 1984 Montreal Canadiens as the only teams to win five straight Stanley Cups.

They entered the game without forwards Brent Sturtevant and Bourne, both injured in the series opener against Washington. Sutter, who has a bruised left knee, is on a day-to-day basis. Bourne, with a mild Grade 1 separation of the left shoulder, is expected to miss 5-to-7 days. After trailing 3-0 and 4-2, the Capitals rebounded and eventually tied the score late in the third period on Mike Gartner's power-play score at 12:55 of the third period.

Gartner picked up the rebound of a shot by Dave Christian that beat New York goalie Billy Smith and bounced off the post into the back. The Washington wing then backhanded the puck 10 feet for the tying score.

It was Washington's fourth power-play score in the contest, compared to one for New York. At 8:32 of the third period, referee Bryan Lewis' apparent check which blew dead on the Islander goal by the Islanders' Gerry Gilbert. Lewis thought that goaltender Riggins had covered the puck but it was still loose.

New York's fatigue became evident as Riggins had covered the puck but it was still loose. New York opened last, scoring four goals in the first period, but also allowed two first-period power-play goals by Bengt Gustafsson 42 seconds apart in the sixth of the second period. Steve Stevens pulled Washington winning 4-3 in the second period.

Butch open-ended the scoring at 4:43 of the first period, converting feeds from Clark Gillies and Kalur 12 feet out in the slot.

Black scattered five hits over seven innings to join Detroit's Jack Morris with a 5-0 record. He also walked two and struck out two before giving way to ace Dan Quisenberry, who picked up his fourth save.

Twins 4, Mariners 3 - At Minneapolis, Tom Brunansky singled home the game-winning run over a drawn-in outfield with one out in the ninth inning to cap a two-run rally that gave the Minnesota Twins a 4-3 victory that snapped the Seattle Mariners' five-game winning streak.

Blue Jays 3, Rangers 2 - At Arlington, Texas, Dave Collins' two out RBI single drove home the go-ahead run in the top of the ninth inning to lead the Toronto Blue Jays to a 3-2 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Damazo Garcia reached base in the ninth on a throwing error by Texas shortstop Curtis Wilkerson and advanced to second on a sacrifice bunt by Dale Garg. Garcia reached third when Lloyd Moseby bounced out. After Willie Upshaw was intentionally walked, Collins, who pinch ran for Cliff Johnson in the eighth, ripped a line drive past Ranger third baseman Buddy Bell to score Garcia.

Ten found sauntered in Brooklyn

By Frank Spinits United Press International

NEW YORK - A baby girl found crawling on the bloody floor was the only survivor of the worst massacre in city history where 10 people - seven of them children - were shot to death in a barren Brooklyn apartment.

It was a horror picture. That's what it was like, said Carmine Rossi, owner of a bakery next door to the murder scene.

Seven victims were found in the living room, where the television was still on. Six victims were found seated on a couch and two chairs around the television and another body was on the floor.

Two other bodies were in a bedroom and the 10th was discovered in a second bedroom. Police said they had no weapon or motive. Autopsies were scheduled for today.

Each of the seven children and three women was shot in the head and when police first entered the five-room apartment the surviving baby was so covered in blood they thought she too was a victim. The child was examined at a hospital and then turned over to the city's Office of Special Services for Children.

The seven dead children ranged in age from 2 to teenagers. Four were boys and three were girls. No identities were immediately available, but the victims were Puerto Rican, Sgt. Ed LeSchack said.

Canoeists brave the rapids

By Charles Mowand Special to the Herald

For all the over-achievers who didn't have a Mount Everest to climb or a Boston Marathon to run, there was the canoe race.

A course record was established by a team in the mixed event. Sue Andrette of Mansfield Center and Scott Olsen of East Providence, R.I. recorded a time of 58:32, breaking the old mark by 48 seconds.

THE REAL TEST came behind Economy Electric where the most formidable rapids of the Hockanum awaited the canoeists. Before the race, coordinator Lee Watkins warned the canoeists to stick to the right of the rocks and an obtrusive concrete structure. Most of them did, although the more experienced ones took the left and still beat the rapids.

Even still, enough entrants found the water too much to handle and capsized in the chilly river, floating not so merrily down the stream. Others simply avoided the current by winking their canoes around the swift waters.

Here's why Lotto spreads out prize

By Bruno V. Ronniello United Press International

HARTFORD - So you've won a million dollars in the state lottery and you want to know why you can't collect the whole thing right away instead of 30 years.

After all, why should the state collect the interest over 30 years on the money you've won. Right? Wrong.

Gambling fever has been running high in Connecticut since an aircraft swing-shift worker recently won $7.8 million in the state's Lotto game, which has drawn in thousands of people who never laid a bet before.

The would-be millionaires have been asking how the state pays off and in particular, why they can't collect all of their instant bonanza in a lump sum.

Not to worry, says L. Blaine Lewis Jr., lottery unit chief in the state Division of Special Revenue, which oversees the lottery and other legal gambling in Connecticut.

There are two reasons the state spreads out large winnings over 20 years, Lewis said in an interview.

First, if a winner receives $1 million in one sum, Uncle Sam will be right behind him collecting almost half of it for taxes. "The person is better off because it protects him or her from a large tax bite," said Lewis.

Secondly, the state doesn't have that $1 million you won, at least up front. But don't panic.

Winnings are actually paid through annuities, which the state 'buys' from financial institutions that submit the lowest bid," Lewis said.

Lewis said the state has carried out the practice since lotteries began in 1973. "We annuitize large prizes, anything from about $75,000 up."

The purchase of an annuity for $1 million over 20 years may cost the state from $300,000 to $400,000, Lewis said.

The annuities are bid on by numerous firms, including insurance like Prudential and Travelers, along with Canadian companies. The annuities are paid to the state, which in turn makes the winners their yearly checks.

In the case of the $7.8 million jackpot, a bid of 2.8 percent was accepted, which means it cost the state approximately $2.1 million, Lewis said.

As for the Lotto game, sales have surpassed all expectations, Lewis said.
