Rowny says U.S. is ready to cut arms

By Mark Schacter United Press International

LONDON — The United States is ready to offer a cut in its missile and bomber arsenal as well as discuss controls on "Star Wars" satellite weapons for similar concessions by the Soviet Union, a top U.S. official said Friday.

"We are ready to reduce the number of planned bombers and air-launched cruise missiles if the Soviets will reduce their ballistic missiles and their capability," Ambassador Edward Rowny, the chief U.S. nuclear arms negotiator, said Friday.

"Informal contacts through diplomatic sources" indicated the Soviets would be receptive to negotiations on those lines, he said at a news conference at the U.S. Embassy.

Rowny, who led the U.S. delegation to the Geneva Strategic Arms Reduction Talks (START) that were broken off by the Soviet Union late last year, said the United States wanted a new round of bargaining.

"The United States is ready to resume negotiations at any time without preconditions on nuclear arms reductions. The time for political posturing is over. We have wasted valuable negotiating time," Rowny said.

"The U.S. is ready to discuss satellite proposals. Plans are still in the formative stage. It isn't known yet how a comprehensive satellite treaty could be verifiable," he said.

Rowny said Moscow's current ballistic arsenal gave it the advantage over the United States of a nuclear first-strike capability.

"We don't have one (a first-strike capability), and have no intention of developing one," Rowny said.

The United States would lack a first-strike punch even if the Reagan administration eventually gained agreement from a reluctant Congress for plans to deploy 100 MX missiles at sites in the western United States, Rowny said.

He said Soviet leader Konstantin Chernenko appeared less intent than his predecessor Yuri Andropov on splitting the United States from its European allies by demanding the removal of NATO medium-range Pershing 2 and cruise missiles from western Europe.

In a public address in London Thursday, Rowny had said "The Soviets are clearly testing Western resolve."

"I am convinced that their own self-interest will eventually impel the Soviets to return to the table," he said.

During a visit by French President Francois Mitterrand, Chernenko said Thursday in Moscow that the Soviets would not return to the Geneva-based arms negotiations until NATO withdrew all new nuclear missiles it had deployed in Europe.

The Soviets walked out of the talks last November when the deployment began.

Vermont refused detention order

Children released after commune raid

By Kevin Goddard United Press International

ISLAND POND, Vt. — State efforts to obtain a blanket detention order to examine more than 100 children for abuse were flatly rejected Friday — and officials were forced to begin busing the youngsters and their families back to their communal church.

The first busload of Northeast Kingdom Community Church members left a Newport armory about 8:45 p.m. — more than 12 hours after they were routed from their homes in the largest roundup in Vermont history.

Eighty state troopers swooped down on the religious commune and picked up 112 children in the climax of a two-year probe into charges of child abuse and neglect at the controversial fundamentalist settlement.

Court proceedings last late into the evening, as District Judge Frank Mahady processed the families one by one. Members of the secretive sect had little to say about the roundup.

But one bearded man, who did not identify himself, said: "We feel like any other American would feel if it happened to them."

Acting on persistent complaints about excessive discipline of children within the secretive commune, the troopers converged on 20 church-occupied homes shortly before 6:30 a.m.

The children, accompanied by their parents, were taken by chartered buses to an armory in nearby Newport.

Neither parents nor church members resisted.

The children had been put into "protective custody" while authorities sought court orders to detain them for up to 72 hours so physical and psychological exams could be conducted.

But teams of doctors, public health nurses and other medical officials who waited all day at nearby Burke Mountain Ski area lodge to examine the youngsters for physical abuse were sent home Friday evening.

Mahady had imposed a gag order on issues surrounding the massive roundup, and it was not clear whether further action would be brought against the families released.

Criticism of the unprecedented raid came quickly.

"What you have here is something that is equivalent to what went on to the Jews in the ghettos of Poland," said Newport lawyer Duncan Kilmartin, who has represented church members in a variety of legal disputes.

"This is a day of infamy in Vermont. I weep for the children and I also weep for the state," said Kilmartin, who promised to seek a federal grand jury investigation into the conduct of the roundup.

Scott Skinner of the Vermont branch of the American Civil Liberties Union called said he was especially concerned no names were on the warrants.

"The whole principle of our judicial system is individualized suspicion," he said. "(This) obviously raises enormous concerns. I don't know of anything that is comparable to this."

The roundup was approved in advance by Gov. Richard Snelling and supervised by several top state officials. Gubernatorial aide David Dillon said it was authorized only after less drastic measures to probe complaints of child abuse in the two-year investigation proved unsuccessful.

Charles Wiseman — a leader of the sect which moved from Tennessee to Island Pond six years ago — is scheduled to go on trial in August on charges he used a rod during a seven-hour beating of the daughter of another church member.

Reports that police seized a variety of rods and switches in Friday's roundup could not be confirmed.

Water bill may lead to eviction

By Nancy Griffin United Press International

AUGUSTA, Maine — A severely handicapped 21-year-old man said Friday he and his bedridden 84-year-old grandmother could face eviction from their modest home over an unpaid water bill unless government agencies intervene.

"I can't afford to lose my home," said Ralph Record of Winthrop. "If I do, my grandmother would be put in a home and I would be put somewhere, too."

The Winthrop Water District placed a $642 lien on the property when the pair failed to pay sewer bills dating from 1981 that officials said totaled $1,942. Water District Superintendent Rodney Cumber said the trustees voted Thursday against initiating foreclosure proceedings, at least until the Social Security Administration can complete an investigation.

SSA officials said they think Record and his grandmother, Gertrude, might be eligible for increased benefits.

Record and his grandmother now live on a fixed income of $350 a month plus food stamps, and the allotment doesn't always stretch to the end of the 30-day period, he said.

"By the end of the month, we go hungry," Record said. He's unable to work because he suffered severe brain damage in a hit-and-run accident with a motorcycle when he was nine years old.

Record explained that his mother abandoned him after the accident and his grandparents raised him. When his grandfather died, Record said his grandmother paid the bills until she became bed-ridden.

"I thought the sewer bill was being paid. I just didn't understand," Record said. Pine Tree Legal Associates, a group that provides legal aid to low-income people, wrote asking the water district to take steps other than foreclosure.

State law says residents have 18 months to pay their bill after a lien is imposed. Cumber said placing a lien represents standard water company procedure when bills are long overdue. Record receives $150 per month from the rental of an apartment in the house, while Mrs. Record receives $192 in monthly Social Security payments.

Hart blasts Reagan, says he'll press case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Gary Hart, in a speech closely watched by Walter Mondale, launched an all-out attack Friday on President Reagan's "integrity gap" and said he will keep on battling for the Democratic nomination.

The senator from Colorado, making one of his infrequent appearances since the end of the primaries, devoted his speech at the National Press Club to an attack on the Reagan administration. But then he was peppered with questions about his role as a candidate.

"The presidential nomination race is not over," Hart said. "We will continue to press our case. I can't do that if I'm on the sidelines." Hart's responses indicated that the 47-year-old challenger, who trails Mondale by about 800 delegates, is sticking with his original plan to keep in the race right through the convention and remain flexible on challenging large blocs of Mondale delegates. Mondale's campaign manager, Jim Johnson, said Thursday Hart's remarks would be watched closely for signals that the senator is ready to sit down and end the confrontation between the two Democrats. Johnson said Mondale is waiting for such signs before meeting with Hart.

"We want confidence that we will have a productive meeting," Johnson said.

Mondale, meanwhile, spent a leisurely day at his suburban home in Oak Park, Minn., was briefed by a number of economists and prepared for meetings with two potential vice presidential candidates Saturday.

The former vice president, who already has interviewed Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley as a prospective running mate, scheduled separate sessions with San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas.

Jesse Jackson, who also plans to go to the convention in San Francisco July 18 as a candidate, prepared to embark on another overseas mission, this time to Central America and Cuba.

Jackson, whose foreign travels have taken him to Syria and Mexico since the campaign began, arranged to leave early Saturday for Panama, El Salvador, Cuba and Nicaragua on the five-day trip. He plans to meet with top-level government officials, including Fidel Castro and Salvadoran president Jose Napoleon Duarte, as well as rebel groups.

"We are going to Central America because there seems to be an escalation of war activities in that area that could spell disaster for the American people," Jackson said Friday. "The hostilities in Central America could be more devastating than the war in Vietnam, and we need to prevent war in that area."

In his Press Club speech, Hart blasted what he President Reagan's "integrity gap" and said the administration is "routinely contemptuous of facts and ethics."

Hart said more than 50 high-ranking officials have been accused of criminal wrongdoing, unethical behavior or abuses of power.

"Finally, there is President Reagan's problems with facts," Hart taunted.

This course churns out budding wine connoisseurs

By David Walsh
Pawtucket Valley Daily Times

WEST WARWICK, R.I. — Larry Nocera raises a glass of Chardonnay to eye level and inspects its color, swirls it gently to release its bouquet, and rolls a sip over and under his tongue.

They used to drink. "A little bit of knowledge goes a long way," he said. Paul and Guin Gosciniak of West Warwick have been interested in wines for years and wanted to learn more about them and experiment with different bottles.

"You learn to appreciate them for what they are," Paul said. "At least you don't feel totally lost when you're reading a wine list." For other students, the course promotes understanding of wine preferences.

"Before you weren't sure why you liked something," Robert Kasper of East Greenwich said. "Now you find out why you like it." The real test of the wine, though, is tasting, Nocera said, pointing out the life of a bottle wine is like that of a person.

Proper grapes, soil and climate are among the myriad of decisions facing winemakers, along with harvesting, fermentation and aging processes. Aging in oak barrels, for instance, softens sharp, newly fermented wines into more appealing and refined flavors, Nocera said.

Oaks from warmer, milder climates are slightly looser-grained and add character more quickly than tightly-grained oaks from cooler climates, he said. French, Yugoslavian and American oaks differ greatly, he said.

Hail lashes Midwest. Eighty mph winds and hail the size of golfballs Friday lashed the Midwest, reeling from non-stop rain that was accompanied by 7 million acres of prime farmland and cost the agriculture community more than $1 billion in lost crops and washed-out acres.

South Dakota Gov. Bill Janklow said 2 million acres were under water in the state, causing up to $100 million damage, and trying to compare this week's floods with those of the past was impossible.

"Everything is relative," he said. "It's like trying to determine which headache is the worse when you've ever had. Usually it's the last one you had."

Hail the size of golf balls fell as thundershowers rushed through the Great Plains, S.D. area and a special shipment of sandbags was rushed to the Sioux Falls emergency command post. A flood watch was issued for the eastern part of the state.

Heavy rain and 80 mph winds screamed through the North Dakota cities of Jamestown and Medina, scattering tree limbs and knocking out power.

"These branches have an unwritten rule that they have to take down power lines with them," said Otter Tail Power Co. spokesman A. D. Millard.

Cease-fire violations are reported

By Solid Rizvi
United Press International

ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates — Iran accused Iraq Friday of massive troop attacks on civilian areas in the last 11 days. Both sides, however, charged enemy forces had shelled civilian targets in violation of the truce.

Both Iraq and Iran also reported combat on the border, with Iraq saying it killed or wounded 15 Iraqi troops and Iraq reporting eight Iraqis killed in the southern and central sectors, news agencies of the two nations said.

Iranian artillery hit a residential district in the southern Iraqi city of Basra Thursday night and a nearby village Friday, an Iraqi military spokesman said.

The spokesman, quoted by the official Iraqi news agency INA, did not mention any casualties.

Iran said Iraq violated their U.N.-sponsored agreement not to attack cities "in several instances, with its shelling of the southern Iranian city of Abadan," Iran's official news agency IRNA said.

Both news agencies were monitored in Abu Dhabi.

Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz sent a message to the United Nations Thursday charging Iran was massing troops in the Iranian border cities of Abadan and Kharranbar, refusing entry to U.N. truce observers.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein warned that the United Nations must take measures to ensure the protected cities were not built up militarily.

U.N. observer teams were permitted by Iraq, but not Iran, and Aziz argued the refusal was proof Iran wanted to conceal its troop deployments in the border cities.

The 11-day-old truce, arranged by U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, banned attacks on civilian targets. It did not affect shipping, although there have been no new reports of such attacks in the Persian Gulf.

In London, Lloyds of London said two weeks of relative calm in the Gulf War has produced an easing of insurance rates on oil cargoes from Iran's Kharg Island terminal.

Spokesmen said it was the first time in at least two months that Gulf insurance rates were going down rather than up.

Gulf governments summoned an emergency meeting of their chiefs of staffs to decide on contingency plans to defend their shores and sea lanes.

The military chiefs from Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Bahrain, Qatar and Oman, who together export some 7.7 million barrels of oil daily, will meet in the Saudi capital of Riyadh Saturday, officials said.

Some 40 attacks on tankers, freighters and other ships by Iran and Iraq have added to the fear the Gulf states may be forced to defend their oil lifelines.

Troopers say capture was 'instinct'

By Jacqueline Huard

CONCORD, N.H. — A detective wounded in the capture of accused sex-slaver Christopher Wilder said Friday he spotted the fugitive playboy in a remote northern New Hampshire town by "just being a curious cop."

State Police detective Leo "Chuck" Jellison said he and Trooper Wayne H. Fortier saw Wilder's gold and platinum car when he had a tan and had recently shaved. Wilder was slain in the April 13 capture in Colebrook, less than 10 miles from the Canadian border.

"It just fell in from there," Jellison said. "It was just being a curious cop."

He said the capture of the Florida contractor was a combination of training, years of experience, and instinct.

"We don't have time to think about the book," Jellison told reporters after he and Fortier received an armful of framed awards and commendations from the governor, state police, and the FBI at a Statehouse ceremony.

Wilder died from two simultaneous gunshot wounds from his own .357 Magnum revolver during a struggle in his car with Jellison. His death ended a nationwide sex-slavery ring in which Wilder allegedly abducted 11 women and killed at least four women.

Calling his actions instinct, Police Detective Leo Jellison and Trooper Wayne Fortier were honored by the governor of New Hampshire on Friday.

Jackson ban is protested

FOXBORO, Mass. — Threats and tears of disappointed Michael Jackson fans will not change the minds of officials who banned an appearance by the pop superstar's Victory Tour at Sullivan Stadium, the town administrator said Friday.

"At this point, I don't think the board is going to change its decision at all," said administrator Andrew Gala. "I think they're firm."

Fans and radio disc jockeys across New England vilified the 30 vote by the town's selectmen to deny a permit for Michael Jackson and his singing brothers to perform at the stadium, 30 miles south of Boston.

But Gala said town officials — concerned about crowd control and security arrangements — were unmoved by the pleas of fans or the threats of a Boston lawmaker to lead "hundreds of thousands" of people in a protest march on the town if the decision was not reversed.

Meanwhile, sentiment in the rural town of 14,000 was running in favor of the selectmen's decision. A talk show host at rural station WJCC-AM in Norfolk — only a mile from the stadium — said Friday telephone calls were running 20 to 5 in favor of the ban.

Soviet explosion detailed

A massive explosion at a major weapons depot that services the Soviet Union's Northern Fleet destroyed stockpiles of missiles and killed a number of technicians, defense sources said Friday.

The explosion in mid-May at the Severomorsk facility, located on the frigid Barents Sea 900 miles north of Moscow, was detected by a U.S. spy satellite, the sources said.

The explosion occurred, but the Pentagon declined to comment and details of the incident were sketchy. "There was a fairly substantial explosion in that area," one said.

In Mons, Belgium, a spokesman for NATO's European Command said reports about the explosion were "substantially accurate," but he declined to provide details.

The destroyed facility was a maintenance depot for the Northern Fleet, the Soviets' biggest, where a variety of surface-to-air, surface-to-air and, possibly, cruise missiles were stockpiled for deployment aboard Soviet warships, the sources said.

Mitterrand plea for Sakharov

MOSCOW — French President Francois Mitterrand declaring the world has a right to speak out on human rights in the Soviet Union, urged the Kremlin Friday to wet in "good faith" toward Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov.

Mitterrand, a frequent critic of Soviet human rights policies and Kremlin foreign policy, met with President Konstantin Chernenko twice in two days to discuss bilateral and international relations.

Discussing the Nobel prize-winning physicist at a news conference following the latest meeting, Mitterrand said he had no intention of interfering in Soviet affairs, but "human rights are a universal property."

Sakharov, exiled to the city of Gorky which is closed to foreigners, reportedly began a hunger strike May 2 to persuade Soviet authorities to allow his wife, Yelena Bonner, to go to the West for medical treatment.

Soviet officials, however, have said repeatedly that he and his wife are eating well and in good health. Sakharov has not been seen in public since he began the fast.

Dade County, Fla. is battling medflies

UPI

A helicopter sprays pesticide and a medfly attractant near the downtown district of Miami on Friday to prevent the dreaded fruit flies from moving north into Florida's citrus crops.

MIAMI (UPI) — A helicopter sprayed pesticide over Miami's Little Havana neighborhood Friday in an attempt to eradicate the Mediterranean fruit fly, but officials feared up to 1,000 of the crop-ravaging pests may be living in Dade County.

Five medflies have been found in the area since Tuesday. Officials were trying to prevent the pest from being transported out of Miami to Florida's vast orange and grapefruit groves, which produce about $1 billion worth of fruit annually.

"With the five we've found already, an educated guess is there are 600 to 1,000 medflies out there," said Ernest Collins of the Florida Department of Agriculture.

A Korean War-era Huey helicopter sprayed a mix of the pesticide Malathion and a medfly attractant over about 6,000 acres of central Miami in the first aerial spraying since four medflies were found in Little Havana. Residents took little notice of the spraying.

"What spraying" asked a receptionist at Clinica Cubana, a health maintenance organization.

"Most everybody pretty much ignored it," said Jose Pene, short order cook at La Esquina de Tejas restaurant in the heart of Little Havana. "As far as I could tell, most people didn't even know it was going on."

But Pene said he followed officials' advice and rinsed off his car after the chopper passed over to ensure the pesticide did not take off paint.

Authorities also advised residents to keep pets and small children indoors during the three-hour spraying period.

Officials asked motorists to stay out of the 9-square-mile area in the heart of Miami that was sprayed, but a police spokesman said traffic patterns were virtually unchanged. Agriculture officials also reported little public reaction.

"The phone has been silent," said Jack McClusky of the Florida Department of Agriculture. "That's what I'm sitting here trying to figure out. There hasn't been one single phone call."

"We've had no problem whatsoever," said McClusky, who earlier described the situation as potentially "volatile."

The spraying is to continue one morning a week for two months. Another month of spraying is planned if officials are not absolutely sure the pest has been eradicated.

Agriculture Commissioner Doyle Conner ordered another 800 bait traps set out around Miami after the fifth fly was found, bringing the total number of traps in the area to more than 4,000.

Residents were asked not to take fruit or vegetables out of the city. Officials said there would be no danger to citrus unless the flies are transported out of the Miami area. If that happened, they could attack oranges and grapefruit next fall and winter when the fruit ripens.

Female medflies lay eggs in fruit, causing it to rot quickly as it is eaten by the larvae. About 260 plants act as hosts to the pest.

Peace-package optimism is marred by skirmish

By David Zenon
United Press International

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Sniper fire wounded three government troops in Beirut Friday amid reports of tension in northern Lebanon despite Cabinet promises that agreement was imminent on an accord to end nine years of civil war.

State-run Beirut radio said a delegation from Byblos visited Nabih Berri, a Moslem Cabinet minister and Shiite militia leader, to complain of "harassment, detentions and even sniping" by "forces who maintain hegemony over the area."

The radio said the delegation included representatives from a handful of Moslem villages around Byblos, a coastal resort 19 miles north of Beirut deep inside Christian militia-held territory.

Christian militia officials were not available for comment and the Byblos delegation gave no further details of their complaints.

The reports of Moslem grievances coincided with sniper fire wounding three Lebanese soldiers in Beirut, and came hours after Berri issued an optimistic statement on Lebanon's search for peace.

The Christian U.S. of Lebanon radio blamed Moslem militiamen for the shooting, and also accused them of starting an hour-long sniping with government troops across several sections of the Green Line, which divides Beirut into Christian and Moslem sectors.

Police and militia sources also reported nighttime intermittent fighting along sections of the Green Line. "For the first time, we feel that the countdown for ending the Lebanese crisis may have begun," said Berri, who serves as justice minister in the 10-member Christian-Moslem coalition government of pro-Syrian Prime Minister Rashid Karami.

The Beirut newspaper An Nahar said Berri made his remarks late Thursday after a meeting with President Amin Gemayel and Moslem Druze militia leader Walid Jumblatt.

Subway worker's life savings help anti-Arab Jewish settlers

By Wesley G. Pipperit
United Press International

JERUSALEM — A retired New York subway worker said Friday he has given his life savings of $10,000 to help Jewish settlers accused of belonging to an anti-Arab terrorist underground.

Max Hersh, 73, said that when he read in the newspaper that Rabbi Moshe Levinger had been held for questioning about the Jewish underground, "I decided he needed help."

"I did not see why he should be arrested for doing the same thing the Arabs are doing. Tit for tat and an eye for an eye," he said in an interview.

Hersh, who said he was a retired signal railroad maintainer for the New York subway now living in Albany, N. Y., brought two $5,000 bonds to Israel and gave them to the Gush Etzionim movement of Jewish settlers.

Sweeney's new CDBG view significant

Joseph Sweeney's latest remark on the town's possible re-entry into the Community Development Block Grant program is the most significant development since the town first started to consider the possibility.

He said he could be persuaded to support re-entry into the program if the town, in the Housing Assistance Plan II must file as part of the grant application, puts zeros in the blocks listing the number of housing units it feels need to be built or converted for rent to low-income people.

Townsmen withdrew from the program in 1979 and in 1980, voting overwhelmingly in favor of giving up the grants.

Since then, opponents of the program have insisted the withdrawal came about generally because the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development attached too many strings to the program.

MORE SPECIFICALLY, Sweeney, who was a leader of opposition to the grants, says the town's commitments in the grant program gave regional planners the vehicle by which to press upon Manchester a disproportionate share of the burden of rental housing for low- and moderate-income people, housing he says traditionally brings a demand for costly services.

He has argued that Manchester was uniquely vulnerable to have a heavy burden thrust upon it. And he cited the Area Housing Opportunity Plan of the Capitol Region Council of Governments as evidence of that. It allotted to Manchester 8.1 percent of the vacant development land in the 29-town Capitol Region. Some of those who favored remaining in the grant program accused its opponents of being motivated by racial or ethnic bias, an accusation that was vehemently denied. The town refused in a court trial the claim of plaintiffs that their civil rights had been violated as a result of the withdrawal.

Some citizens may not have agreed with the conclusion of the court. Some may not agree with the listing of zero as a housing goal.

IF THE VOTERS ARE ASKED in a referendum to vote to rejoin the grant program as an affirmation or a reaffirmation of their social enlightenment, the effort is doomed to failure. The reaction will be negative from most of the voters. Most of them will feel, rightly or wrongly depending on your individual view, that Manchester does not need to vindicate itself on the question.

If they are asked to vote to rejoin because it is in the best interest of the town, including its low and moderate income residents, the result probably will be different. If the majority of voters feels that Manchester faces little real risk of being unfairly burdened economically as a result of commitment to the grant program, they may see it as in the town's best interest to re-ent. The change in Sweeney's assessment of the situation — and it does represent a change despite the fact that it is consistent with what he has previously said — should go a long way toward reassuring people whose doubts about the grant program linger.

THE BIGGEST ARGUMENT against re-entry should disappear with a zero commitment for rental housing for lower-income persons (low- and moderate-income). Some will argue that such a zero goal amounts to a civic cop-out.

But West Hartford and East Hartford, both grant recipients, both have successfully listed that very zero goal.

The fact that those towns, and some others in the state, have been receiving grants with no indication of having been burdened by them is being cited by grant proponents as evidence that Manchester has nothing to fear from HUD.

Further, it is being said that some of the money now going to West Hartford and East Hartford is the money that should be coming to Manchester in grants. Anyone who advances such pragmatic arguments for rejoining the grant program, should not object to the zero housing goal advocated by Sweeney.

The president's disenchantment with Synfuels is welcome, if belated. For months, the Synfuels board has lacked a quorum because so many members have resigned under fire. Scandals and bickering have led to the departure of five of the board's seven members, which means Synfuels can't legally approve alternate fuel projects. Yet this is its sole reason for existing.

Though the president's suggested $10 billion cut would effectively put Synfuels out of its misery, it is far from certain that Congress will approve the merry killing. For though corporations' custody of a $15 billion pot barrel has not only its own influential friends, both Republicans and Democrats, on Capitol Hill.

An outrageous example of Synfuels' operations is the proposed "Scrubgrass" synthetic fuel project near Pittsburgh. This has the ardent support of Rep. William Clinger, R-Pa., in whose district it would be built. Even though the Scrubgrass request for $900 million has been rejected four times, two Synfuels officials flew to Pittsburgh to meet with the project's sponsors to help them fill out the forms for a last attempted raid on the Treasury.

My associates John Dillon and Corky Johnson have checked into the Scrubgrass project and uncovered information that casts serious doubts on the legitimacy of its claims to public funds. For examples:

• The president has recently indicated that Synfuels projects produce fuel that will be priced competitively with oil. Scrubgrass sponsors say they have no idea whether the fuel they hope to produce will cost.

• The directors of the chief sponsor, AC Valley Corp., have virtually no experience in synthesizing fuels. They include a waitress, a minister and a schoolteacher.

• Behind the facade of a locally owned company with few tangible assets is a German name: Krupp. Gismark's munitions maker from Bismarck to Hitler. Krupp-GKT, which will provide the gasification technology for Scrubgrass, is a wholly owned subsidiary of Friedrich Krupp GmbH, which is 25 percent owned by Iran. So American taxpayers would be indirectly subsidizing the Ayatollah, Khomeini.

He cited rebel groups in the former Portuguese colony of Mozambique, Jewish forces that fought British occupation of Palestine, and black Africans opposed to the white minority government of South Africa, as well as the Palestine Liberation Organization and the CIA-backed contras in Nicaragua.

"I would have real problems with legislation that made it legal for Americans to provide advice and training to the government of South Africa, but made it impossible for Americans to provide such aid to the African National Congress," Solarz said.

RICHARDS SAID he had "no information that the contras are practicing terrorism." He said the African National Congress is a complex organization with some extreme elements. "The bottom line is that the distinctions involved in this problem are very difficult to make," he acknowledged.

Richards said the legislation does not propose labeling groups as terrorist or non-terrorist, but would be triggered by "certain categories of behavior," such as kidnapping, bombing, and airplane hijacking.

Synfuels surviving, still trying

WASHINGTON — In a series of columns last year, I exposed the extravagance of the U.S. Synthetic Fuels Corp. as it has squandered the taxpayers' money but has yet to produce its first erg of energy from alternative sources.

I reported in depressing detail how Synfuels executives had searched for a petroleum substitute at golf courses, sauna baths and nightclubs around the world. The officials indignantly denied my charges that they were wasting the $13 billion Congress has authorized for this gigantic boondoggle.

Not less than President Reagan has now complained about Synfuels' wasteful ways. He has told Congress he wants to cut about $10 billion from the corporation's budget.

The president's disenchantment with Synfuels is welcome, if belated. For months, the Synfuels board has lacked a quorum because so many members have resigned under fire. Scandals and bickering have led to the departure of five of the board's seven members, which means Synfuels can't legally approve alternate fuel projects. Yet this is its sole reason for existing.

The problem of terrorism

By Robert Shepard
United Press International

WASHINGTON — In most members of Congress agree international terrorism is — the words of one congressman, "one of the scourges of our time," but it is unlikely that Congress will be able to do much to ease the threat.

Terrorism reached into the halls of Congress itself last year in the form of a bomb explosion outside the Senate chamber. That led to much tighter security around the Capitol, but those responsible for the bombing have not been caught.

The Reagan administration responded to the problem of terrorism at home and abroad by proposing a package of new laws intended to thwart terrorist groups and those supporting them. People in Congress and out praise the goals of the administration plan, but fear it could endanger constitutional rights.

That concern alone would be enough to doom the legislation, but the package faces the additional problem of time. Congress will be in recess much of the time during the next few months for the political conventions and the election campaign and will have little inclination to resolve the controversial anti-terrorism legislation.

Administration officials insisted they would not be covered, but the deputy assistant attorney general Mark Richards said he had no question about the broad immunity provisions... but do not recall any accusations that these groups were engaged in terrorism. They were in active insurgency, and that distinction is terribly important.

Solarz followed by asking if modern day groups might qualify as terrorists and trigger the ban on aid from U.S. citizens.

He cited rebel groups in the former Portuguese colony of Mozambique, Jewish forces that fought British occupation of Palestine, and black Africans opposed to the white minority government of South Africa, as well as the Palestine Liberation Organization and the CIA-backed contras in Nicaragua.

"I would have real problems with legislation that made it legal for Americans to provide advice and training to the government of South Africa, but made it impossible for Americans to provide such aid to the African National Congress," Solarz said.

RICHARDS SAID he had "no information that the contras are practicing terrorism." He said the African National Congress is a complex organization with some extreme elements. "The bottom line is that the distinctions involved in this problem are very difficult to make," he acknowledged.

Richards said the legislation does not propose labeling groups as terrorist or non-terrorist, but would be triggered by "certain categories of behavior," such as kidnapping, bombing, and airplane hijacking.

Who seeks peace, and who blocks it?

It is illogical, insane and immensely sad — but it is nonetheless true — that some people in this country see President Reagan as a greater threat to peace than his Soviet counterparts.

In the past two years Mr. Reagan has made more than a dozen proposals to reduce the danger of conventional and nuclear war — but still the image of warmonger persists.

During that same period the Soviets, who have rejected every offer out of hand, appear to be regarded as the injured party — although it was their deployment of SS-20 missiles aimed at our Western European allies, which had none, which spawned the stalemate that now is so great a peril to the people of the world.

Yet the record of Mr. Reagan's attempts to reach a peaceful compromise with Russia is clear, and we are convinced, admirable. While the two-branched nuclear arms reduction talks were under way in Geneva, U.S. negotiators made seven proposals to the Soviets. But after some minor moves toward compromise, each one was quickly rejected — despite our prior notification that unless significant progress was made we would have no choice but to deploy Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Europe, as our allies had requested.

Since that deployment prompted the Soviets to stalk out of the talks, the president commendations to mutually reduce the number of missiles and warheads on both sides of the Iron Curtain. To each, the Soviets said "no."

Several weeks ago, in Geneva, Vice President George Bush submitted a proposed draft agreement for a global ban on chemical warfare weapons. Against the Russians refused to even consider it. At almost the same time, in a meeting in Vienna, they rejected a proposal to mutually reduce the size and strength of conventional military forces in Europe.

It must be noted that the Soviets have been urging at the Conference on Disarmament in Stockholm that all 39 nations attending it, including the U.S., pledge not to use military force in Europe. Just a promise, mind you, without any means of making it effective.

But as soon as Mr. Reagan told the Irish Parliament he'd be willing to discuss that if the Soviets would agree to a specific program for making it work, they said nothing doing.

So the conflict of global nuclear conflict continues, and the leader who has made the greatest effort to ease it is labeled as an enemy of peace, while the government which has been consistently and unyieldingly negative escapes blame or responsibility for what it has done.

If that is not illogical, insane and immensely sad, we don't know what is.

Berry's World

On June 12 my husband, myself and our German shepherd were involved in a tractor trailer accident at exit 98 in Manchester. Fortunately, no one was hurt badly. My husband and I would like to thank people of Manchester for helping us in our time of need. Everyone, including those at the hospital, ambulance, paramedics and firemen were terrific. We would also like to send a special thank to the dog pound and police for helping us with our dog.

It sure is nice to know there are people in this world that still care. Thank you, everyone.

Center Street cavern

A gaping hole about five feet long began appearing Friday after a sanitary sewer ruptured under the busiest part of Center Street, causing traffic to go around it. But late Friday, town sewer workers appeared on the site — near the Broad Street intersection — and were expected to work through the night repairing the broken line.

State reaps millions more from Lotto

NEWINGTON, Conn. (UPI) — The tempting thought of becoming a millionaire in the state's new weekly lottery has seduced bettors into buying tickets for all games and boosted revenues to record levels, officials said Friday.

Connecticut collected a record $148 million in gambling revenue for fiscal 1984 to date, about 20.8 percent more than last year's earnings. Officials say the boom was prompted by the weekly Lotto game.

"At first glance, you might think (Lotto) might detract from other games," said J. Blaine Lewis, Jr., chief of the state's lottery. "But actually we've attracted a new clientele."

Lotto accounted for $18.7 million in gaming revenues, compensating for sagging sales in Off Track Betting, jai alai and the weekly Rainbow Jackpot lottery, said gaming director Alfred F. Oppenheimer.

He said a report to the state Gaming Policy Board says revenues for fiscal 7-month-old Lotto game have surpassed official expectations of $6.3 million three-fold and officials project an even bigger take next year.

He said if the popularity of Lotto continues, the state's gambling take could reach $170 million in fiscal 1985 beginning July 1 and top $200 million the following year.

Lotto is designed to award a $1 million pot to anyone who picks the exact six numbers drawn by a computer every Friday night.

When Lotto first began in November, the prize pool sank to $1 million or so, zoomed when nobody won the top prize for weeks at a time and the prize pool steadily increased.

The pool peaked in March 23 when Dennis Duceman, 31, a night shift worker at Sikorsky Aircraft, beat the 2 million-to-1 odds and won a $7.8 million jackpot. Since then, the game has taken off and the most recent sales have been averaging between $18 million and $20 million a week.

Lewis said lottery officials do not decide how to allocate the gaming revenues, but they are returned to a general fund to be allocated by the legislature.

The settlement announced this week was far less than the $125,000 in back pay and Ms. Dove sought when negotiations with the school board began in April. Attorney Beverly Hodgson said her client was seeking reinstatement and at least $125,000 in back pay and legal fees.

Discrimination suit settled

NORTH HAVEN — The Board of Education has agreed to pay $50,000 to a former teacher who filed a federal lawsuit accusing the board of violating her civil rights in 1977.

Elaine Dove of Hamden claimed she was the victim of discrimination because the board refused to rehire her after she took time off to care for a newborn child.

The settlement announced this week was far less than the $125,000 in back pay and Ms. Dove sought when negotiations with the school board began in April. Attorney Beverly Hodgson said her client was seeking reinstatement and at least $125,000 in back pay and legal fees.

Heroin seized in Bridgeport

BRIDGEPORT — Police seized two pounds of brown heroin worth an estimated $500,000 and arrested an alleged major drug dealer in what officials Friday called the largest heroin bust in city history.

Carlos Guadalupe, 38, of Bridgeport was arrested Thursday after his car was stopped in an investigation of a shooting incident earlier this week.

Brown heroin, which police said was almost pure and worth up to $500,000 on the street, was found in the vehicle, a spokesman said. Also seized were two loaded handguns and $2,500 in cash.

Police said Guadalupe had been suspected for some time of being a major heroin supplier to Bridgeport's West End neighborhoods.

He was charged with possession of narcotics with intent to sell, possession of narcotics paraphernalia in a factory situation, criminal attempt to commit murder, carrying weapons in a motor vehicle and carrying a dangerous weapon.

Discharges still serious

NORTH HAVEN — State Department of Environmental Protection officials have scheduled talks with Upjohn Co. to improve the company's waste treatment and consider possible changes in its discharge permit.

Despite improvements in treatment facilities, waste water discharged by the company into the Quinnipiac River continues to exceed chemical concentrations allowed under a federal permit, said Richard Mason of the DEP water compliance division.

The meetings will determine whether the system can be made more efficient or whether standards need to be relaxed, he said.

DEP inspectors are most concerned about Upjohn's violation of its monthly average concentration for 3,3-dichlorobenzidine, a suspected carcinogen known as DCB, Mason said.

Federal flood centers open

HARTFORD — More than 120 people visited the five federal disaster assistance centers opened Friday to assist Connecticut residents whose homes and businesses were damaged by flooding three weeks ago.

"The turnout was steady and about the same rate in all five centers," said Barbara Yagerman, a spokeswoman for the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

President Reagan Monday declared six counties in Connecticut disaster areas making residents in those areas eligible for federal disaster assistance.

The centers, in East Hartford, Middletown, Oxford, New Milford and Enfield will assist residents applying for housing assistance and small business administration loans to repair damages caused by the worst flooding in Connecticut in 50 years.

House majority leader seeks re-election

By Mark A. Dupuis

United Press International

HARTFORD (UPI) — House Majority Leader John G. Groppo, D-Winsted, said Friday he will seek re-election in November and predicted Democrats will retain control of the lower chamber where he has served 26 years.

Groppo, dean of the 13-member House, said he was thinking about retiring but decided to run again in part because of concerns among House allies about the chamber's future leadership.

He said some of his colleagues were concerned about the House leadership falling to House Speaker Irving J. Stolberg, D-New Haven.

"I just think of us who have served there and served the state well will show them they can't control the House," he said, adding he felt Democrats had built a good record that voters would recognize as the campaign develops.

There will be a change of leadership at the top of the Senate regardless of the outcome of the elections, Senate Majority Leader Richard F. Scheller, D-Exeter, has announced he will not run for re-election.

Groppo said he had spoken with O'Neill and while the governor said he would like him to run again said he would abide with whatever decision the majority leader made.

O'Neill, speaking with reporters before Groppo disclosed his plans, praised the veteran legislator.

"John Groppo is a man certainly with his own mind and a very good one and a very strong one," said O'Neill, who served in the House with Groppo. "If the state will be very, very happy."

In Connecticut, toxic chemicals other than the potentially cancer-causing ethylene dibromide, or EDB, have been found to contaminate water supplies in Montville, Manchester, Haddam, and East Granby.

Officials said among 696 wells tested by June 15 for EDB, 131 private wells and 23 public wells were found contaminated with the tobacco fumigant.

Dangers may lurk in toxic bath water

HARTFORD (UPI) — Bathing in water contaminated by toxic chemicals may be as dangerous as drinking it, and health agencies should consider providing standards to fight the problem, a new study reported Friday.

Although state health officials are aware of chemicals being absorbed through the skin, they are taking a wait-and-see approach before adopting new standards.

"At this point we're not going to make any changes. We don't have enough knowledge right now," said Bob Weinstein, assistant director of the preventive diseases division of the state Department of Health Services.

The study was based on some theoretical assumptions that may be valid," she said. "We're assuming that people are not getting a significant dose from bathing as opposed to drinking," she said.

HARTFORD — Gov. William A. O'Neill predicted Friday a special legislative session Monday will return the nine vetoes he cast against bills adopted during the Legislature's regular session.

"Well, you never know until you have the votes but I don't know that there's any movement about that," said O'Neill. "I have the two-thirds vote needed in each chamber to override a veto."

O'Neill spoke with reporters after a ceremony where he announced $10,000 state scholarships for 10 students studying in high technology fields.

The $100,000 annual scholarship program was enacted by the 1983 Legislature as part of a $17 million program advanced by O'Neill to foster the growth of high technology industries in Connecticut.

O'Neill said expansion of the program to more than 10 students a year would depend on its success. "It depends how successful it becomes. I would hope it would be expanded," the governor said.

This year's scholarship recipients are Eben Cobb of North Granby, Dawn Gabriel of Fairfield, Terrell Hewston of Stafford Springs, Deborah Kerwood of Middletown and John Nornack of Middletown.

Also, Carl Lawton of West Hartford, James Lobbie of Middletown, Roger Marks of New Haven, Gerald Pogachnik of Storrs and Eric Soulbay of Storrs, were named on its success.

Six of the 10 are studying for doctorate degrees at the University of Connecticut in Storrs, while three are studying at Wesleyan University in Middletown.

The centers, in East Hartford, Middletown, Oxford, New Milford and Enfield will assist residents applying for housing assistance and small business administration loans to repair damages caused by the worst flooding in Connecticut in 50 years.

The meetings will determine whether the system can be made more efficient or whether standards need to be relaxed, he said.

DEP inspectors are most concerned about Upjohn's violation of its monthly average concentration for 3,3-dichlorobenzidine, a suspected carcinogen known as DCB, Mason said.

UConn prof is on his third Fulbright

The Staves will trade Coventry for Beijing

By Tracy L. Geoghegan Herald Reporter

COVENTRY — Bruce Stave and his family will soon embark on another international adventure. Stave, a professor of American history and director of the Center for Oral History at the University of Connecticut, was recently awarded his third Fulbright. He'll spend the next academic year teaching in the People's Republic of China.

After an orientation in Washington D.C. late this month, Stave, his wife Sandra, and 14-year-old son Channing will leave in mid-August. For the next year they will trade their spacious home on Broadway in Coventry for a two-room apartment at Beijing University in Peking.

"I understand the quarters are relatively sparse, but they're good by Chinese standards," Stave said. "Probably some Americans would find them wanting."

Stave said he and his family will try, as much as possible, to live as the Chinese do. "That's the best way to learn about the culture," he said.

Stave said they do not expect the adjustment to be easy, but they have learned from experience such challenges yield rewards.

"There aren't a lot of bourgeois entertainments like you have in a western city. But when you think about it, how much is there in a rural town in Connecticut compared to the capital of a country?"

Stave said they have heard their travel to other parts of China may be severely restricted. They also may have to ride bicycles, and coffee may be difficult to find.

STAVE WILL teach American history, in English, with the help of an interpreter. "I received a cable from them that said I should be ready to talk slow," he said, with a laugh.

He said he will be free to teach whatever subject matter or ideologies he wishes "within the limits of common sense."

"On other Fulbrights, I've never had any political pressure what-

"I never knew until I got there if I would be lecturing to seven people or to 300, or if they'd be the leading scholars of the country or freshmen," he said.

"But I get the feeling this one is better planned out. I don't expect we'll face that sort of thing."

THE FAMILY is busy studying conversational Chinese with a graduate student at UConn from the People's Republic. "It's difficult because of the four tones," Stave said. "The same word 'ta' can mean mom, hemp or a curse, depending on what tone you use."

"The Staves hope knowing a bit of the language will help them assimilate better. Sandra and Channing both want to learn Chinese cooking while they're there."

Mrs. Stave, who is a freelance writer and coordinator in the Eastern Connecticut Library Association, is hoping she will be able to find an editing job, involving translations from Chinese into English, in Peking.

STAVE HAS learned from his other two Fulbright professorships that he can never be too sure what a country, or a job, will be like until he gets there, he said.

He said initially it was difficult to adjust to the poverty, when he was in India on his first Fulbright in 1968. "The poverty is something on a level most Americans — fortunately — don't understand. "It's just a very different culture in terms of their value systems," he added.

"We didn't live like Westerners. We think we became part of the community."

In 1977, he held a regional Asia Fulbright to Australia, New Zealand and the Philippines. "We thought we would be staying in one place for two or three months at a time, but I actually lectured at four or five different schools in New Zealand, 20 in Australia and 20 in the Philippines."

"I never knew until I got there if I would be lecturing to seven people or to 300, or if they'd be the leading scholars of the country or freshmen," he said.

After one year, these spent hens get laid off

This morning, driving to work, I became aware of something white flying around in the air. A mile further along, I could see that whatever it was, came from a huge truck up ahead of me. As I got closer to the truck, I realized it was a gigantic tractor trailer loaded with hundreds of crates of chickens.

Andy Rooney Syndicated Columnist

As I passed the truck, I noted the name painted on the door of the cab: DeCoster Egg Farm, Turner, Maine. Turner, Maine, according to my map, is about 360 miles from where I saw them, so the feathers had been flying for at least seven hours.

I estimated that each crate held 12 chickens. The crates were stacked five high and five across and from one end of the truck to the other, I think there were 20 crates. It's hard to count when you're driving the car and passing a truck.

If my figures are accurate, there were 6,000 chickens on board.

Now, I'm not unnecessarily sentimental about chickens, but I can't get the birds in the crates on the bottom out of my mind. It seems to me they must have suffocated to death before they arrived at their destination. Many of the birds in the crates on the outside had their heads stuck, half in and half out,

WEST HARTFORD (UPI) — A jury again recessed for the weekend on Friday after seven days of weighing Steven J. Wood's claim he was insane or emotionally disturbed when he killed his ex-wife and three other people.

Just before 5 p.m. the jury, which could impose the death penalty, asked that on Monday morning Judge Harry Hammer read them the possible verdicts in the case for the third time.

Hammer agreed and dismissed the jury for the weekend, reminding jurors not to discuss the case with anyone.

Assistant State's Attorney Herbert G. Appleton said he believed the jury would return a verdict Monday.

"They've asked for the possible verdicts. That will be the last thing they need. Wouldn't that make sense?" he said.

Defense attorneys have declined comment on the proceedings.

The jury has spent nearly 30 hours weighing the 48-day trial, which included 235 exhibits and testimony from 76 witnesses.

It deliberated less than an hour Friday morning, then broke for lunch, then heard a court stenographer read trial testimony from a former busness associate of both Wood, 44, and his former wife, Rosa Wood.

Roads with wide shoulders made it easy — for a while

Monday 6:54 p.m.
Blackwoods Campground, Acadia National Park.

On Saturday, I left camp at 8:28, and continued north on U.S. Route 1 to Belfast, which I reached at 9:45.

From the bridge, I enjoyed a fine view of the wharfs and of Penobscot Bay. A few miles out of Belfast, I stopped at Moose Point State Park, where I met another biker. He is from Bangor and was getting income training miles on his racing bike in preparation for a cross-country trip on the Bikenational route.

I was apprehensive about riding at all on Saturday, since I've always found the traffic on the first day of a long holiday weekend very heavy. However, the ride was enjoyable because there is an eight-foot-wide paved shoulder almost all of the way to Ellsworth.

There are places, most notably towns and cities where there isn't a shoulder, or where the shoulder is loose, rough gravel, but those places are generally short and few in number. The traffic was not heavy, but as long as we had our shoulder, the traffic didn't exist as far as I was concerned.

Just about all the way along U.S. Route 1, the natives were having fun with their cameras and displaying antiques. It reminded me of the route to the Grand Canyon, where the Navajo Indians peddle merchandise from roadside stands. It's the same junk that the merchants at the trading posts won't buy.

While approaching Bucksport, I stopped at a scenic overlook to photograph the Penobscot River and the graceful Waldo-Hancock suspension bridge which crosses it. My biker friend caught up to me there, and suggested that I visit nearby Fort Knox. Since he has never been out West, I recommended several places that he should see.

At Ellsworth, we took Route 3 south to Trenton over seven of the most horrible miles I've ever biked. Not only did the shoulder disappear completely, but the traffic got awfully heavy late in the afternoon as everyone got the same idea to camp (or whatever) on Mount Desert Island. The worst part, however, are the crack-bumps every 20 feet.

After a long day on the road, and with the threat of increasing rain, I stopped at the first campground that I saw, Frenchman's Bay Campground. One of those horrible places which I try to avoid, but the lure of a shave and especially of a hot shower was overwhelming.

ONCE CAMP WAS set up, there wasn't much to do during the rain, so I looked at maps of Mount Desert Island and chatted with Pam, the girl at the reception desk.

She just graduated from University of Maine at Farmington, which she described as a "nothing town."

There's only one little movie theater in town, and it shows the same movie all week," she said with a sigh. "Once you've seen it — that's it. I guess the town's all right for old people, but I wouldn't live there. I don't know how I made it through four years."

I came back later, did some writing, and then some guys came in and started playing rock music on the juke box and feeding quarters into the video games. That's when I left for the quiet of the shower room.

Advice Balding causing young man to lose more than his hair

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My problem may seem silly to many people, but it is having a devastating effect on my life. I am an intelligent, average-looking 22-year-old male whose hair has been constantly thinning since I was 17 years old.

I know this has happened to other men, but for some reason I am unable to fully accept it. It is psychologically devastating to my happiness and productivity. Some mornings I don't even want to get out of bed and look at myself in the mirror.

I've lost all my confidence and zest for living, and I'm depressed most of the time. I have one year of college left, but no desire to finish now. I feel that a part of me is slowly dying day by day.

I have spent a fortune on so-called "hair-restoring" products, but none have been of any help. Is there anything I can do to save the rest of my hair? Here are some questions you can give me on hair replacements: Please don't suggest counseling because the money might be better used in retraining my condition. Please answer honestly.

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for two years on the side, but I feel good reason. Very few people are able to share the one they love with another.

Seek counseling to help you accept this condition. When a man reacts so strongly to the loss of hair, there is usually more involved psychologically than meets the eye.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I have fibroids in my uterus. They were first diagnosed when I was 35 and now I'm 43. The doctor wants to remove the uterus, but I don't want to. I've heard that a hysterectomy can cause early menopause. Is this true? Can I have my uterus removed without losing my ovaries?

Thoughts

Recently, in the midst of my daughter's confirmation celebration, one of my pastors reminded me of the treasure hunt for our gifts is often very difficult. We can more quickly identify things about ourselves we don't like, but more difficult seeing and appreciating our good gifts.

So this week I invite you to join me on a "treasure hunt."

Sixth, now that we have followed the encouragement to seek with positive expectations our own hidden treasures, now that we have dug around patiently, examined them with kindness, and asked others to help us appreciate what we ourselves could not see — it's time for a party!

Bishops' statement 'too liberal'

Lay Catholics panel plans to examine U.S. economy

By David E. Anderson
United Press International
A group of prominent lay Roman Catholics, most of them conservative, plan to issue a statement on the U.S. economy that parallels a pastoral letter being written by the nation's Roman Catholic bishops.

expected to be released after the November elections. Simon, who will head the newly formed commission, said it "will give lay Catholics who have a practical approach of the economic affairs an opportunity to contribute their hard-won experience and knowledge to the religious and lay community."

circulated critique of "The Challenge of Peace," the bishop's pastoral letter on nuclear issues, in which he defended U.S. reliance on nuclear deterrence.

planning, job creation, adequate income for the poor and international trade and development. The bishops' pastoral, even though it has not yet been drafted and is certain to go through extensive rewriting before being finally voted on, has already come under fire from Fortune and Business Week magazines which claim the bishops do not have the expertise to discuss the economy.

American swimmers want to reap harvest of medals

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — The Soviet-led boycott will dilute swimming competition at the 1984 Olympics almost beyond recognition, but U.S. swimmers are determined that their performance in Los Angeles won't be watered-down.

"I felt sorry for them and really bad about it," said Michele Richardson, a 15-year-old distance swimmer.

"But my goal is to break a world record, and that's what I'm going to do — with them or without them."

Swimming may be the sport hurt most by the Iron Curtain boycott, which is keeping medal centers from the Soviet Union and East Germany out of the pool along with other world-class competitors from Czechoslovakia and Hungary.

East Germans turned in the fastest times worldwide last year in 11 of 14 women's Olympic events, and the second-best clockings in the other three. On the men's side, Soviets or East Germans were top or second in six events and second in five others.

In nearly every event, at least one American has a solid chance to step to the top of the medal awards stand in place of the boycottees.

"There's not much our kids can do," said Ray Essick, executive director of U.S. Swimming, the American governing body in the sport. "They feel so badly for the swimmers in the countries that are boycotted."

But Essick insisted that the increased U.S. medal haul will result from the absence of the Soviet-bloc nations won't be tainted.

"You'd like to swim against the best," he said. "But you're still an Olympic champion. There's no asterisk in the record book."

Charlie Hodgson, who coaches Richardson and 13 other Olympic Trials qualifiers in the Hurricane Swim Club out of Miami, said the boycott has not curbed their enthusiasm or desire.

"It didn't affect any of my swimmers," he said. "I didn't see any lapse in training. It was like, 'Too bad, I wish they would be here, because we want to be there.' But there was no effect on any of them."

Still, the boycott will hurt the quality of competition in Los Angeles immeasurably.

The boycotting nations have promised alternative competitions to divert swimmers' attention from the boycott during a month-long training camp.

"It's just as soon speak that," said Coach Don Gambriol. "That's not what we are trying to talk about to our athletes. First, there are trials, then an intense preparation for the games."

But the boycott and its effects on swimmers and their sport cannot truly be far from the minds of the competitors, including world-record freestyler Rowdy Gaines.

Gaines — at 25, the 'old man' of swimming — is back for another shot at the Olympics after the disappointments of the U.S. boycott four years ago, when he was designed to pin the Soviets for their invasion of Afghanistan.

"We sacrificed so much," he said. "Think about it. Who did it accomplish?"

Michelle Richardson, 15, says the boycott is unfortunate but U.S. swimmers will be out to win medals at the Summer Olympic Games in Los Angeles this summer.

Wimbledon championships begin Monday

McEnroe, Martina favorites

LONDON (UPI) — The numbers are impressive in the Wimbledon tennis championships opening Monday but the one that really counts is the smallest — McEnroe's.

Total prize money for singles, doubles and mixed doubles is $2.1 million. The men's singles winner receives $140,000, the women's $138,000. Wimbledon officials, eager to preserve the peace on court, are backed up by $1.4 million in insurance with Lloyd's in case any disqualified player decides to sue for loss of earnings.

— Those are the big numbers, but No. 1 is what it's all about and for now the No. 1 is all-lander John McEnroe, 25, and Martina Navratilova, 27, defending champions, leading money winners for 1983 and favorite to repeat.

— McEnroe's first opponent in his drive for a third Wimbledon crown in four years is Paul McNamee of Australia, who beat him in the 1980 French Open and is at home on grass surfaces. Martina, seeking her fifth title since 1971, has a lesser first round foe in Marcie Louie of San Francisco.

Chief obstacles to McEnroe's path are No. 2 Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, who won the French Open with a heroic comeback in five sets to beat McEnroe his only defeat in 48 matches this year; No. 3 Jimmy Connors, twice champion; No. 4 Mats Wilander of Sweden — and McEnroe, himself.

Up to now, it has been "unthinkable" to disqualify a star player for outbursts such as McEnroe's during his recent unup in the Stella Artois final at Queen's club when he called the umpire "a moron" and said the two senior officials were like "two bumps on a log."

It's McEnroe's style, to keep a cool, adrenalin flowing, but Wimbledon officials promise to take a hard line in dealing with the behavior of any and all competitors.

McEnroe's 17-year-old brother Patrick, who failed to qualify for Wimbledon singles but made it into the doubles draw through a qualifying tournament with Tom Cain as partner, is placed by comparison but defends John's actions.

John has been working out quietly at Queen's Club.

"I'm in pretty good shape now and getting my mind set for Wimbledon," he said. "I can handle it," he said.

As Wimbledon's seeding committee sees it, the semifinals would see McEnroe vs. Wilander and Connors vs. Lendl, McEnroe vs. Lendl in the final July 8.

Seeded players in McEnroe's first quarter of the draw are No. 8 Jose-Luis Clerc of Argentina, No. 14 Bill Scanlon and No. 15 Vitas Gerulaitis, Wilander heads the second quarter which includes No. 6 Andres Gomez of Ecuador, No. 9 Henrik Sundstrom of Sweden and No. 11 Kevin Curren of South Africa.

In the third quarter, Connors' path was eased when No. 7 Henrik Noal of France withdrew because of injury. Remaining are No. 12 Johan Kriek and No. 16 Tim Mayotte. Lendl's fourth quarter has No. 5 Jimmy Arias, No. 10 Anders Jarrod, Sweden, and No. 13 Tomas Smid, Czechoslovakia.

Navratilova and No. 4 Pam Shriver are seeded to meet in the upper half semis, with No. 2 Evert and No. 3 Mandlikova in the lower half.

In Martina's first quarter are No. 7 Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria, No. 11 Lisa Bonder and No. 16 Carling Bassett of Canada. Shriver's second quarter has No. 8 Kathy Jordan, who beat Evert in the final tuneup at Eastbourne; No. 9 Wendy Turnbull of Australia and No. 13 Barbara Potter.

In the third quarter with Mandlikova are No. 8 Kathy Jordan, No. 10 Jo Durie of Britain and No. 14 Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia. In the fourth quarter, Lendl's No. 11 Zina Garrison, No. 12 Claudia Kohde-Kilsch of West Germany and No. 15 Andrea Temesvari of Hungary.

FOXBORO, Mass. — Offensive lineman John Hannah, just one year after being coaxed out of retirement by the New England Patriots, has signed a series of four one-year contracts with the National Football League club.

Team officials announced the signing Friday, but declined to release terms of the agreements.

Hannah, considered by many to be the premier offensive lineman in football, will be starting his 26th season with the Patriots. The 6-foot-3-inch 285-pound guard was the team's number one draft choice in 1972 from the University of Alabama, and has been selected to play in the pro-bowl seven times, which stands as a team record.

Bulls owners to pay

CHICAGO — A federal judge Friday ordered the owners of the Chicago Bulls to pay more than $17 million in damages to a group of businessmen who unsuccessfully tried to purchase the NBA team in 1972.

Pohlad assumes ownership

MINNEAPOLIS — Local businessman Carl Pohlad Friday signed a letter of intent to assume ownership of the Minnesota Twins, ending the Griffith family's 65-year control of the club.

Twins owner Calvin Griffith said during a news conference he would remain with the club as an advisor, calling his new role that of a "good time Charlie."

Prices rise 0.2 percent in May

Reports show inflation rate still down

By Dennis G. Gulino
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Consumer prices inched up 0.2 percent in May, keeping the annual inflation rate below 5 percent with lower food prices and only slightly higher housing costs, the Labor Department said Friday.

The new Consumer Price Index figure came on the heels of two other government economic reports that also portrayed inflation as barely visible.

The latest report on wholesale prices showed no change in May or April. And Wednesday's Commerce Department projection of current economic performance saw brisk growth but the lowest inflation rate since early 1987 — 2.8 percent.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said that amounts to "a sweep of the triple crown of low inflation." The month's economic news "shows the economy is creating jobs without creating inflation," he said.

The department said the inflation rate for January through May is running at 4.6 percent when figured annually. May alone would make an annual inflation rate of only 2.4 percent if repeated another 11 months.

However, the spending power of the average blue-collar worker took a dive in May, only the second drop in six months.

The separate report showed inflation-adjusted earnings went down 1.3 percent because hourly pay and the number of hours a week worked both dipped. Yet the worker's earnings over the last year are still ahead of price hikes by 1.8 percent.

Georgia State University economist, Donald Ratajczak, said inflation may be on a downward spiral instead of an upward one for a change.

"This kind of report kills the inflationary spiral," he said. "We know that wage rates are coming in at the 4 percent to 5 percent range; with inflation coming in below that, it suggests we may be able to keep wage rates lower."

The May increase was less than half of April's 0.5 percent jump, slipping back to March's slow rate of growth.

The Consumer Price Index for May was 399.7, equivalent to a cost of $399.70 for the government's sample market basket of goods and services that cost $100 in 1967. Expressed another way, the purchasing power of the 1987 dollar is now 22.2 cents.

Groceries fell 0.7 percent in price, pulling down the overall food and beverage index including restaurant meals by 0.2 percent. There was no increase in food prices in April and a slight decline in March.

Overall energy costs rose 0.2 percent, although the actual increase was greater as gas pumps and in electricity bills before being smoothed out by the government's seasonal adjustment process.

Seabrook owners meeting today to consider startup, reorganization

WESTBORO, Mass. (UPI) — The New England utilities that own the Seabrook, N.H., nuclear plant meet Saturday to consider a restart date for the stalled first reactor and possible reorganization of the plant's ownership.

The 16 utility owners are expected to consider a July construction date for Seabrook's first nuclear reactor, where work was halted April 18 in one of several desperate moves by its principal owner, Public Service Co. of New Hampshire of Manchester, to avoid bankruptcy.

The meeting will be at New England Power Co., which owns a 16 percent share in Seabrook.

The owners' meeting comes several days after the sale of $90 million in short term notes by Public Service Co. The sale is one facet of the "Newbrook" plan to revive the first reactor by the Merrill Lynch brokerage.

The plan, which is being developed by Robert

Hildreth Jr. of Merrill Lynch, also includes undisclosed provisions to reorganize the ownership structure and the financing of the Seabrook Station.

Details on these areas were to be worked out at the Saturday session.

A spokesman for one owner said there was a "50-50 chance" a restart date would be announced for the first unit, estimated to cost $4.5 billion.

Hildreth, who could not be reached for comment Friday, has said work could begin as soon as July on Seabrook I. Work on the second reactor, rated about 23 percent complete, was halted last fall and the unit has been virtually canceled.

Public Service Co. has been driven to the brink of bankruptcy by its 35.6 percent share in the twin-reactor plant. The financial burden of a plant estimated to cost anywhere from $6.5 billion to $10 billion became too great for the New Hampshire utility to carry.

Several owners contacted Friday could not provide additional details on the meeting. "There's nothing that is worth commenting on at this point. It's still in the development stage," a spokesman said.

Public Service Co. has instituted extraordinary measures to stave off a filing under the U.S. Bankruptcy Code to seek protection from a growing list of creditors. Chief among them was an abrupt work halt at the first Seabrook unit, but it also has withheld dividend payments to stockholders, cut executives' salaries and scaled back coal-conversion projects. At least several other Seabrook owners have also felt the crunch under the growing financial weight of Seabrook.

Coffin warns of dangers to small law firms

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — Small private law practices could face extinction in the decades ahead because lawyers' salaries are soaring in tandem with their fees, U.S. Circuit Judge Frank M. Coffin said Friday.

Coffin, former chief judge of the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston, said he considers these to be the best and worst of times for young lawyers who are finding their jobs have high salaries and exhausting drawbacks.

High salaries and benefits for lawyers, $50,000 to start in some firms, plus exciting legal issues make law an appealing career, Coffin told the Rhode Island Bar Association's annual meeting. But drawbacks are clients are more demanding, the workload mounts, and time for family and recreation is scant, he said.

Coffin said job burnout and missed promotions can frustrate young attorneys. "A partnership is a ship that never reaches the port for some aspirants," he said.

Coffin recalled that when he began practicing law in Maine in the 1950s, the work was similar to his grandfather's practice in early 1900s — one lawyer handling several clients in a local office.

"I'm afraid the solo practitioner may be going the way of the dodo bird," he said.

Changing times now require record-conscious firms to keep abreast of the latest high-tech and computer developments, and some big city firms now hire hundreds of lawyers and paralegals, Coffin said.

"Deep-pocketed" clients with big cases demand that a team of lawyers be assigned to their cases, and "the old school tie goes only so far," Coffin said. "The client is only too willing to shop around."

Coffin told the bar that Rhode Island, because of its size, has maintained a recognizable legal community of lawyers and judges.

Chief Justice Joseph A. Bevilacqua of the state Supreme Court told the bar association he too is concerned with the future of the legal profession.

"I'm not speaking solely of the judiciary, because we are indeed a very small part of the profession," Bevilacqua said, "but particularly the young lawyer who must cope for many years to come with increasingly complex questions of ethics and practice as he or she attempts to combine a successful career in the law with the high standards of integrity which our profession must have to survive."

Small company buys independence

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — A home, outdoor and automotive supply company that began 66 years ago as a one-store operation in Okmulgee, Okla., is growing into a subsidiary of a New York corporation, and buying back its independence.

Tulsa-based OTASCO, Inc., which has 3,300 employees and annual retail sales of $350 million, recently signed a letter of intent to acquire 100 percent of its own common stock through a leveraged buyout from parent company Rapid-American Corp.

The price tag is "in excess of $120 million," OTASCO chief executive officer Jerry L. Goodman said.

Employee response was "very enthusiastic" when workers were asked last month if they were interested in pursuing the employee buy-back, Goodman said.
