NEW HAVEN (UPI) — The Armstrong Rubber Co. Thursday reported strong third quarter results that led to new records for earnings and sales in the first nine months of the year. The 1983 figures include an extraordinary third quarter income of $6.6 million, or 68 cents per share, compared with $4.7 million, or 58 cents per share, the same quarter last year. Sales were up to $179.6 million from $154.7 million.

UTC income up 21%, sales up 12%

HARTFORD (UPI) — United Technologies Corp. has announced second quarter earnings reflecting a 21 percent rise in net income on sales up 12 percent over the second quarter of last year. Net income was $168 million, up from $140 million for the comparable quarter in 1983, said Harry J. Gray, chairman and chief executive officer, in an announcement Thursday. He said sales totaled $4.1 billion compared with $3.7 billion in the second quarter a year ago and primary earnings per share were $1.29, up from $1.23. Gray credited the commercial and industrial areas of the corporation's business for the second quarter results. "In particular, Carrier air conditioners and our automotive products contributed to the robust growth," he said, noting profit margins continued to improve, reflecting higher volume and successful cost-reduction programs.

For the first half of this year, net income was $302 million, a 21 percent increase over the first six months of 1983, Gray said. Sales for the first half of this year totaled $8 billion, compared with a $7.2 billion figure for the first half of last year. Gray said Pratt & Whitney's commercial and general aviation engine businesses were up over last year's second quarter, but revenues declined in Pratt & Whitney's military engine business.

Workers OK new contract

WATERBURY (UPI) — Workers who went on strike a week ago at the state's largest brass company voted Friday to accept a new contract without a wage hike in the first year. The strike by 1,300 employees at Century Brass Products Inc. ended at 6:45 p.m. when the rank and file of United Auto Workers local 1604 followed the recommendation of the union leadership. The employees return to their jobs Monday. Some employees said they voted "yes" but did not feel the provisions were ample. Workers approved the contract by a 4-to-1 margin. "We got bonuses" instead of wage increases in the first year of the three-year contract, said Local 1604 President Attilio D'Agostino. "It's not the best contract we ever had, but it's not the worst," he added. The union leaders had said earlier they would not sign another contract without a first year wage increase, but company negotiators insisted they could not afford it. Frank Santaguida, the company's chief negotiator, said the pact gives workers a bonus in its first year. Depending on the length of service, Santaguida said the bonus would range from $100 to $200 and would be issued in December. D'Agostino said the wage increases come in the second and third years. Santaguida also noted health and life insurance benefits will be restored to the employees and more than 1,900 retired brass workers as soon as the employees return to work. The company cut benefits to retired employees, and the union filed a complaint with the National Labor Relations Board. The strike started July 6, and Gov. William A. O'Neill and State Labor Commissioner P. Joseph Ferraro intervened Monday. Worker's at Century's New Milford plant also went on strike. UAW business representative Richard Cardinal described the agreement as an "equitable" one. "designed for the times within the brass industry," Century President Lewis Segal said the company has gone through difficult times, but "the future is better and more promising" than it has looked in the past four years. "Three years ago local 1604 went on strike for four days before it agreed to the three-year contract that expired in June. During that strike, company officials threatened to liquidate the company unless the union gave up some of its benefits. The union agreed to a one-year wage freeze. The union leaders had said earlier they would not sign another contract without a first year wage increase, but company negotiators insisted they could not afford it. Santaguida also noted health and life insurance benefits will be restored to the employees and more than 1,900 retired brass workers as soon as the employees return to work. ## Reagan rips new ticket

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, bracing for an election billed as the showdown at gender gap, met with Republican women at high noon Friday and hinted Walter Mondale's choice of a woman running mate smacks of tokenism. Reagan predicted that one day a woman will be president, "and she is going to be a Republican." At the same time, he took a backhanded swipe at both Mondale's moves in picking Rep. Geraldine Ferraro for the No. 2 spot on the Democratic ticket and Ms. Ferraro's qualifications for the job. "The women who have advanced in our party — and who are coming up through the ranks today — are doing it by merit. And the American people recognizing this, will support such a woman when she runs," he told 70 Republican women at a White House luncheon. "The Conservative Party of Great Britain chose Margaret Thatcher as their leader not because she was a woman but because she was the best person for the job," Reagan said. "There was no tokenism or cynical symbolism." She became leader of her party — and prime minister of Great Britain — because she was judged by her peers to be a superior leader. And that is how the first Republican woman president will do it. An aide said later that Reagan had no intention of denouncing Ms. Ferraro. "The president had no intention of reflecting on Mr. Mondale's vice presidential choice," said deputy White House press secretary Martin Fitzwater. "Those comments related entirely to the election of Mrs. Thatcher."

Ferraro asks debate with Bush

ELMORE, Minn. — Geraldine Ferraro, on her first day of campaigning as Walter Mondale's vice presidential choice, Friday challenged Vice President George Bush to a debate to "let the people decide." Following an ebullient visit with Mondale to his boyhood home, Ms. Ferraro told a news conference she is pleased that a number of people have been comparing her with Bush since Mondale announced her selection. "I should think we should have a debate or two ... and we'll let the people of America decide whether I can keep up with George Bush," she said. Please turn to page 10

Selective Service looks for compliance

HARTFORD — The Selective Service will devote extra attention to Connecticut in an effort to improve the state's poor rate of compliance with draft registration, the agency's director said Friday. Thomas K. Turnage, a retired National Guard major general, said Connecticut stands 49th in terms of compliance among the 55 states and territories where young men are required to register for a possible draft. Turnage said 94 percent of the young men required to register in Connecticut have signed up, compared to a national compliance rate of 97 percent. Turnage, in Hartford to address the American Legion's state convention, said the vast majority of young men who don't register think they don't have to sign up. In Connecticut, he said, about 10,000 young men are believed to have failed to register while another 160,000 have complied with the law. Turnage attributed the state's low ranking for compliance to language problems and mobility, including the large number of young men who come to the state for college. He said urban areas have lower compliance than rural areas because of the number of people moving in and out and difficulties in getting the word to urban residents. He said the Selective Service has targeted Hartford and Fairfield counties for extra attention in an attempt to improve compliance. The efforts include broadcasting announcements on the law, cooperating with veterans organizations, using speakers and dealing with school counselors to inform young men that they must register. Turnage said most young men do not register because they don't have to and will sign up when contacted by the Selective Service.

Trustees approve new plan

GROTON (UPI) — Students hoping to attend the University of Connecticut will face stiffer competition for admission from out-of-state residents under a plan the trustees approved Friday. The plan would nearly double the number of out-of-state undergraduates, to 15 percent, and require all students to take courses in humanities, social science and science. During the monthly meeting at the Avery Point campus, the trustees also approved a higher operating budget of $125 million for 1985-1986, a 9.3 percent hike over anticipated expenditures for 1984-1985. The budget now goes to the Board of Governors of Higher Education. The trustees also voted to increase in-state tuition by $8 a year and $20 for out-of-state students. The trustees set goals of raising standards, improving the university's reputation as a research facility and concentrating resources on its strongest programs, such as the schools of business, law and engineering. "If we place ourselves in a strategic position with a streamlined curriculum and higher demands on students, we may make this a more desirable place," said Andrew J. Canonetti, trustees chairman. The goal is to make an undergraduate degree "more marketable" and make the university "more respected nationally," said Anthony T. DiBenedetto, vice president for academic affairs.

Iraq hits two naval targets

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Iraq said its warplanes bombed two "large naval targets" Friday near Iran's Kharg Island oil terminal in the third reported attack this week on shipping in the Persian Gulf. "Both targets suffered direct hits and the Iraqi planes returned to their bases safely," an Iraqi military statement said. Past Iraqi reports of attacks on "large naval targets" have referred to oil tankers. Iran had no immediate comment on the latest Iraqi claim and there was no independent confirmation of the attack, the third reported this week on Persian Gulf shipping. Iraq, armed with French-built Super Etendard fighter jets and "Exocet" missiles, has carried out most of the attacks as "part of a campaign to disrupt Iranian oil exports."

Hart, Jackson prepare quixotic last stand at convention

By Clay F. Richards
United Press International

SAN FRANCISCO — Sen. Gary Hart and Jesse Jackson prepared Friday for a last stand in their seemingly impossible quest for the Democratic presidential nomination while Walter Mondale was writing his acceptance speech. Mondale, with more than the 1,872 delegates needed for a first-ballot victory firmly in hand, flew to Lake Tahoe with his chosen running mate, Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, for a weekend of plotting strategy for the Democratic National Convention, which opens Monday.

As the Democrats converged on San Francisco, humorous and on-stage protesters protesting the Moral Majority's conference already in the city threw rocks and bottles and scuffled with police Thursday night near the hotel where the meeting was held. Eight were arrested. Before leaving for Tahoe, Mondale and Ferraro made a nostalgic trip to his boyhood home of Elmore, Minn., and received an enthusiastic welcome from the farm area residents. ### What people are saying

"While millions of American mothers are waking up this morning trying to figure out how to feed their children another week and people are trying to get a job — we're spending $80 billion to get that thing up in space — so we can put weapons up there to blow other people up."

— Charles Hald, the actor who plays Renko on TV's "Hill Street Blues," on U.S. expenditures for the space shuttle.

"I'm a reformed person. The president is on his own."

— George Will, columnist, who says he won't coach Ronald Reagan in 1984 as he did before the 1980 presidential debates.

"Michael Jackson sent out the word to stop fighting and start dancing."

— Leona Schwartz, a 10-year-old from Houston who has been learning how to break dance from public school kids who attend Hebrew classes at his Jewish day school. (Newweek)

"There is a side of me that wouldn't mind if one day everything did fall apart. Then viewers could get a good, clear idea of what their terror looks like."

— Linda Ellerbee, co-anchor of the new NBC-TV news program "Summer Sunday, USA."

"One more year of fat and I could have paid off the mortgage."

— Joan Rivers, comedian, on Elizabeth Taylor's recent weight loss. Miss Rivers is known for poking fun at the actress.

"William Shakespeare wrote for the masses. I think if he were writing today he'd be producing the chief scriptwriter on 'All in the Family' and 'Dallas'."

— Rupert Murdoch, newspaper publisher, who says he isn't degrading journalism by catering to the masses.

"I must have asked her a thousand questions, and the answers that with eloquence, taste, flickers of irony, flashes of passion and a subtle feminine intelligence that again and again made me feel blunt and clumsy."

— Brad Darrach, recalling a 1955 interview with Marilyn Monroe. He is movie reviewer for Time magazine. (People)

"It was truly one of the sweetest things that ever happened in my life. We were both unattached, free to be nuts about each other."

— Kate Capshaw, actress, on falling in love with director Armaan Bernstein during the shooting of her most recent film, "Windy City." (Seventeen)

"I saw this head in the commode. I thought I was dreaming," she said. "Then I turned on the light and looked again. He stuck his tongue out at me."

By the time a neighbor came to the rescue the reptile had vanished, so Ms. Andrew dumped a potent drain cleaner into the bowl and flushed the toilet. It promptly overflowed.

Police in Orem, Utah, believe a disgruntled businessman has been destroying trees planted by the state along Interstate Highway 15 so motorists can see his establishment.

But since a half-mile stretch of trees has been destroyed, they don't know which businessman has been doing it.

Detective Ron Allen said Thursday that more than 30 pine trees had been topped to stunt their growth and that rings had been cut around numerous elm trees to kill them, resulting in an estimated $20,000 damage.

Allen said officers were questioning owners and employees of businesses in the three-block area in an effort to identify a suspect.

Showers brought flash flood warnings to parts of the Southwest with heavy rain scattered over Utah, Arizona, southeast California and southern Nevada.

Friday the 13th ushered in unseasonably warm temperatures for much of the nation. Highs ranged into the upper 90s in the northern tier of states and the 100s in the Southwest.

A line of severe thunderstorms that included at least one tornado rumbled through the Syracuse, N.Y., area but there were no reports of injuries. The twister touched down one mile north of the village of Deansboro and cut a one-mile swath 50-100 wide.

Man is charged with sex assault

A 16-year-old Hebron man has admitted to sexually assaulting a young Bolton girl some months ago, according to records filed in Rockville Superior Court recently. Christopher Mayhew of 37 Jan Drive in Hebron was charged June 21 with sexual assault and risk of injury to a minor and released on a written promise to appear in Rockville Superior Court July 17. Both Richard Walsh — who, as Bolton's resident state trooper, is handling the case — and state police spokesman Kenneth Kirschner verified the arrest this week.

The incident occurred while the girl's parents were visiting with the Mayhews upstairs at their Hebron home. Walsh said in the court affidavit.

According to court records, Mayhew allegedly asked the girl, then 4 years old, to go down to the basement to look at his cat.

After Mayhew led her to his basement bedroom, he pulled down his pants and asked her to perform oral sex on him.

Walsh also said he listened to the child's version of the story, as she was interviewed at Manchester's Community Child Guidance Clinic by a psychiatric social worker May 15.

According to Walsh's report, the girl said she tried to call her mother during the alleged incident but could not because Mayhew put his hand over her mouth.

If found guilty of either of the felony charges, Mayhew could face up to 10 years in prison, a state police spokesman said.

The father of the girl called the Manchester Herald this week. Asking to speak to reporters, he said it was time someone spoke out on a problem which is on the rise nationwide.

He did not ask for anonymity. However, because the Herald does not print the names of sexual assault victims, his name is not being used.

The alleged incident occurred

'Michael ban' is DJ's brain child

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (UPI) — Disc jockeys Steve Reynolds and Kevin Silva say their listeners are sick and tired of hearing about pop music star Michael Jackson, so they've sworn not to mention his name on the air again.

"The man is a mega-talent and we're not trying to take anything away from him," Reynolds said Friday.

"But we're just tired about hearing everything about him, including his coming and goings and when he goes to the bathroom. Enough is enough," he said.

Reynolds and Silva, partners on WMAS-FM radio's Morning Show, took an informal telephone poll of their listeners during their show Wednesday and came up with a 4-3 vote in favor of banning

Man drowns trying to rescue his dog

WILBRAHAM, Mass. (UPI) — A Ludlow man drowned Friday while attempting to rescue his pet black Labrador retriever from the fast-moving waters of the Chicopee River, police said.

Robert A. Charron, 56, was found dead about 2:15 p.m. in about 15 feet of water 40 feet from shore by police divers called to the scene by three fishermen, according to police Sgt. Matthew Geboskie.

Witnesses said Charron was standing on the shore in the Red Bridge recreation and fishing area near the Ludlow town line about 12:15 p.m., throwing sticks into the water for his dog to retrieve, Geboskie said.

"The dog looked like it was confused or in trouble and he went into the water in an attempt to rescue the dog," said Geboskie. "And then he started to yell for help."

The three fishermen started into the water to help Charron, but headed back to shore when Charron, who was about 150 feet away, yelled that he was all right. They

Russian roulette play leads to con's death; 3 guards suspended

CRANSTON, R.I. (UPI) — Three guards involved in a Russian roulette incident in which a state prison inmate was fatally shot Tuesday by a guard were suspended without pay Friday.

Corrections Director John Moran said the suspensions of officers Stephen R. McGill, Kenneth Kaplan and Daniel T. Malone III were ordered at a disciplinary board hearing and will remain in effect until after grand jury action in the case. Originally, the three men were suspended with pay.

On Thursday, state police charged McGill, 28, of Cumberland with second-degree murder in the shooting of inmate Roger W. Alessio, 21, of Westerly. McGill allegedly was playing Russian roulette with Kaplan's gun in the reception area of the High Security Facility when it went off.

Alessio, 21, serving a 2-year term for burglary, was pronounced dead of a head wound at Rhode Island Hospital shortly after 10 p.m. Wednesday after doctors disconnected a life support system.

According to investigators, Kaplan was returning from "perimeter" duty at the High Security Facility around 4 p.m. Tuesday and left a .38-caliber handgun on the desk to be locked away in the reception area. Alessio had completed his work in the facility's kitchen and was waiting in the line to be escorted back to the minimum security building where he lived.

Attorney General Dennis J. Roberts II said McGill emptied the weapon of all but one live round and was "dramatizing if you will, his recollection of the movie 'The Deer Hunter' which has a Russian roulette scene."

Yale has new studies

NEW HAVEN (UPI) — Yale University and the New York Botanical Garden have announced a joint program in ecological studies, providing doctoral candidates at Yale with a new opportunity for training and research.

The program will be operated jointly by the Institute of Ecosystem Studies at the garden's Mary Flagler Cary Arboretum in Millbrook, N.Y., and Yale's school of forestry and environmental studies and the biology department.

Up to five graduate students will be supported annually as fellows, with full tuition and a stipend provided for up to three years.

New England In Brief

State probes well problem

NORTH HAVEN — The state Department of Environmental Protection tried Friday to determine why six wells may be polluting auxiliary water supplies at the Pratt and Whitney plant.

Meanwhile, on orders from the state Health Department, signs have been posted above sinks at the plant warning employees not to drink the water.

Robert Rivard, the health department's principal sanitary engineer, said the wells were tested late last month and a dozen solvents were found in the water. One of them, tetrachloroethylene, tested far above the standard for drinking water. The chemical is a common industrial cleaning solvent.

The state tested the wells after employees complained about water used in washup sinks and showers. Analysts found tetrachloroethylene in the wells in amounts as high as 390 parts per billion. The standard for it is 20 parts per billion.

Cianci's battle nears end

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Ex-Mayor Vincent A. Cianci Jr.'s lawyer conceded Friday the battle to get his client back on a July 31 special election ballot may be over.

U.S. District Judge Francis J. Boyle denied Friday a request to block week-old state Supreme Court ruling that quashed Cianci's candidacy for the election which resulted from his forced resignation in April.

The only option was a direct appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court, where a favorable decision was unlikely, said Cianci lawyer John A. O'Neill Jr., who said the final decision was up to Cianci.

O'Neill claimed Cianci's federal constitutional rights to run for office were violated by the state court. He asked Boyle to block the election until at least 72 hours after the state Supreme Court issued a written decision fully explaining its July 6 order.

That opinion has not yet been issued, and a court spokesman said Friday it could be "any time between now and September."

Granby man charged

HARTFORD — A Granby man charged by San Jose, Calif., police with killing his wife who disappeared last Friday is awaiting extradition.

Mark Christopher Crew, 28, is suspected of killing Nancy Jo Andrade, 33, last seen Aug. 23, 1982 when the couple left San Jose for South Carolina. Her body has not been found.

Crew's stepfather, Bergrin Moses Masteller, 45, of South Carolina, has been charged as an accessory to murder.

Crew was arrested June 6 by Granby police and the FBI at a rented house where he had lived with another woman for six months using the alias Robert Ellis. He was accused of selling property belonging to his wife by forging her name on bills of sale.

She was reported missing by her parents who said their daughter met Crew after her first marriage ended. Ms. Andrade reportedly withdrew $12,000 from her bank account, packed up her valuables and headed east with Crew.

Ratchford collecting funds

DANBURY — A recent report to the Federal Elections Commission showed the Ratchford for Congress Committee has collected more than $125,000 in contributions.

The report, for April 1 through July 30, showed the committee raised $66,591 and spent $68,000. The committee had $54,751 in cash at the end of the reporting period, with no outstanding debts, obligations or loans.

"We're very pleased with our success so far in raising funds for the upcoming campaign," Ratchford said. He estimated his campaign will need between $300,000 to $350,000.

Plant snafu causes water contamination

DURHAM, N.H. (UPI) — A malfunction of the University of New Hampshire water treatment plant pumped unchlorinated water into the system, forcing 5,000 residents Friday to boil their water.

The plant draws water from the Oyster River in southeastern New Hampshire and treats it for town residents and the campus.

The malfunction apparently occurred sometime between 4:30 p.m. Thursday and early Friday, causing unchlorinated water to be pumped into the system, said CATH news bureau.

The water is treated with chlorine to kill bacteria and virus.

Ms. Wolff said residents should boil any water and dispose of ice cubes made since 4:30 p.m. Thursday. Tests take 24 hours to determine if any contamination occurred, and it takes an equal amount of time to flush the system, she said. The flushing had begun Friday.

Workers contacted at the plant refused to comment on their progress.

The water treatment plant is not staffed during the night. Normally there is no pumping of water during the night, but a broiler and pumped water to replenish supplies, Ms. Wolff said.

Bernard Lucey of the state Water Supply and Pollution Control Board said the agency has been concerned with the aging treatment plant because of similar problems in the past, the most recent being earlier this year.

"We have been after the university to put in automated equipment so when they leave at night (the plant is monitored)," Lucey said. "We have had a very difficult time."

Lucey said an August hearing was planned before the board, at which the agency was to demand that the plant be monitored 24 hours.

However, Ms. Wolff said, UNH plans to install a 24-hour monitoring device at the plant August 1.

"My hope is that they will come to that meeting indicating that equipment has been installed," Lucey said. "Then it would be a moot issue."

Town and state health officials have been notified. Residents were also alerted.

Patriarca funeral expected this morning

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Raymond Patriarca's lawyers and associates were filmed by police and journalists Friday as they paid last respects to one of America's last old-time Mafia godfathers.

Patriarca, 76, was scheduled for burial Saturday morning after a private prayer service at Berarducci & Sons funeral home in Providence. He died Wednesday of an apparent heart attack which ended a 40-year grip over the New England mob.

Every person entering the mortuary for Friday's wake by either the front door or a rear entrance was photographed by state, local and federal agents who stood alongside TV and newspaper photographers.

"Leave 'em, alone, you a—," a blonde woman shouted from a porch across the street "as reporters and photographers grouped up the sidewalk as Patriarca's family was whisked from the mortuary in a limousine.

Earlier in the day, two top-level investigators for the Providence Police Department reportedly checked the body to verify it was that of Patriarca.

A police source said Maj. Milton R. Wilson and Det. Lt. Richard S. Tamburini decided to visit because no law enforcement people actually had seen the body to identify it as that of Patriarca, who was facing murder conspiracy and racketeering charges.

Burial was expected Saturday morning at Gate of Heaven Cemetery in East Providence in a mausoleum alongside the remains of Patriarca's first wife, Helen, who died in 1965.

The gray marble tomb is the size of a one-car garage, with neatly manicured and carefully tended grounds. Carved in a massive slab over the doorway is a kneeling figure of a woman tending flowers, beside her is carved in bold letters: PATRIARCA.

Law enforcement agents said it would be unusual if members of the organized crime hierarchy do not attend the funeral, despite a family statement it would be a private event.

"We expect some of the hierarchy from the New England organized crime and New York people to arrive in Rhode Island to provide their last respects," said Tamburini, head of the Providence Police intelligence unit. "We will know just how big Raymond Patriarca was by who comes."

On Thursday, a number of visitors arrived at the side door of Patriarca's modest home in Johnston, where he had moved from the Providence East Side four years ago.

Police said some of the visitors arrived in Cadillac and Mercedes, many of them rental vehicles or showing automobile dealers' plates, which cannot be traced to any one individual.

Are rock 'n' rollers Satan's messengers?

NORWALK (UPI) — Rock 'n' roll stars spread a message of sex, drugs and violence and then "ride away in their Cadillacs," leaders of a fundamentalist prayer group said Friday.

The idea of the group is to reveal the deceptive, harmful and occult symbolism — the satanism involved in music today that is harmful to the kids who listen," said Fran Fraleigh, pastoral leader of the St. Philip Prayer Community.

"These rock stars ride away in their Cadillacs. They live in mansions. The almighty buck certainly has a hold on the influence of greed, of course," said the mother of two.

The prayer group, part of a worldwide Pentecostal-like movement called Catholic Charismatic Renewal, plans a presentation for parents and teenagers July 26 at St. Philip Church in Norwalk.

"Don't sell your soul to rock 'n' roll," is the theme of the program presented in cooperation with the Full Gospel Businessmen's Fellowship, whose members belong to various Christian denominations.

"We're not condemning all music," said Mrs. Fraleigh, whose own children, aged 7 and 10, are not permitted to listen to such groups as AC-DC and Boy George. Television rock videos also are forbidden in her home.

"The point is to open up the eyes of some of the young people and their parents to the dangers involved," she said. "We have had young teenagers go home and throw out the albums that promote violence and so forth."

The prayer group does not support record boycotts or public demonstrations, she said, but rather tries to offer "alarming insight" into some rock lyrics they feel are blasphemous and may even promote teenage suicide.

"It is a matter of Christian values. I'm not going to hang anybody over the head," said Mrs. Fraleigh. "I believe censorship should only come from our own conscience. We should be strong enough in our faith to know what is right and what is wrong."

Police nab suspect

BETHEL (UPI) — Police Friday charged Jeffrey M. Rollinson, 22, of Bethel, in the murder of an elderly woman, one month after another man was acquitted of the slaying.

Rollinson was charged with murder in the beating and strangulation of Hazel Clinkard, 78, in her Danbury boarding house last March.

Another Bethel man, Raymond Panozzo, who lived in the home of the victim, was originally charged with crime. But he was acquitted last month when a surprise witness testified he heard Rollinson admit

Command responsibility not a movie myth

I spent Tuesday at Camp Edwards where the 43rd Brigade of the Connecticut Army National Guard is undergoing two weeks of infantry training and I came away impressed.

The marksmanship of Gov. William O'Neill as a grenadier did not impress me.

He consistently fell short of the target.

The governor, himself, decided after the day was over that his marksmanship "has not improved one iota" in the many years he has been reviewing the Guard on its annual extended training. Except for the grenades, I thought he was a little hard on himself. I don't think he did so badly with other weapons.

It was not the sophistication of new infantry weapons that impressed me, though they are certainly better than the ones I had to use so many years ago.

He was not the easy hospitality of the Guard that impressed me. I've been a civilian guest of the armed services before and I guess I take for granted the way they make you feel at home without the slightest effort to pamper you.

It was not the dedication of the guardsmen as a whole that impressed me. I'm sure they are dedicated people, but you can't really tell that from observations you make in a few hours during the part of a day of fine weather when you are being comfortably taxed by helicopter from one firing range to another in the 14,700-acre camp on Camp Cod.

To appreciate the dedication you have to get rained on in the dark a few times while you are trudging through the mud loaded down with heavy gear.

And you have to suffer a few frustrations, because I'm sure that one thing has not changed. Things don't always go right in the army.

The thing that did impress me, even in the brief contact, was the attitude of the officers of all ranks toward the young enlisted men over whom they had

Danger follows Laotians

WASHINGTON — Catastrophe and conflict have become commonplace in Laos, a faraway land abused by the communists who rule it. Thousands of Laotians, most of them Hmong tribesmen from the hills, risk their lives to escape across the Mekong River into Thailand.

Many of the people are persecuted because they were U.S. allies during the Vietnam War. Their trail is described in a secret cable from the U.S. Embassy in Vientiane.

With characteristic diplomatic understatement, the cable states that "many people in this country have had a pretty rough time."

This has caused a surreptitious flight from the country by Laos and others who feel themselves threatened by the communist regime or who see grim economic prospects under it.

Not early in this flood of human misery is likely, according to a Defense Intelligence Agency report, because "the Laotian communists are determined to pacify the Hmong and integrate them into the new order."

But the spokesman, who vehemently protests to maintain their way of life free of government interference.

My associate Dale Van Atta visited Thailand recently and spoke to Laotian refugees who have reached the dubious haven of Thai refugee camps and detention centers. They had harrowing tales to tell.

The stories most deeply etched in the hearts of the escapees involved babies — those who were born along the escape trail and died during their rigors, those who were killed by government soldiers and those who died from inhaling too much opium smoke, blown in their faces to calm them down and prevent crying that could betray the whole party to communist troops.

Van Atta's interpreter, Pongkarn Sunuwakoon, told about a refugee mother he had interviewed. Her baby began to cry as they were stealing into a raft to cross the Mekong. Afraid the Pathet Lao soldier patrolling the river bank heard the crying, she put her hand over the baby's mouth. But in her panic the mother covered the infant's nose as well, and by the time the raft reached the Thai side of the river, the baby was dead.

World Bank sexism: For the past five years Susana Mendora has been fighting a lonely, losing battle against sex discrimination at the World Bank, which is headquartered in Washington. She is an Argentine, 40 years old, who worked as a researcher at the agency for two years. She was recommended for promotion to consultant at a salary of $100 a day.

She is working very competently at the level of a full professional and dealing with professionals as peers," her supervisor wrote on June 15, 1978.

In February 1979, Ms. Mendora was transferred to the Latin American division of the bank at the urging of the division chief, who was impressed with her work. She was sent to Mexico with a World Bank team for appraisal of a regional development project.

But this apparent step up proved to be her downfall. Instead, she was told to stay in her hotel room. Bank officials, who do not relate to some of her essential charges, said the meetings were too "delicate."

When she complained, her supervisor suggested in a "joking and friendly manner" according to the bank — that she undergo a sex-change operation. Ms. Mendora also charges she was verbally and physically harassed by a male consultant on the trip. The bank denies this.

When she complained, she was abruptly let go. She filed a complaint with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, which said it lacked jurisdiction because the bank is an international agency. A suit in U.S. District Court met the same fate.

Manchester Spotlight

Alex Girelli
Herald Reporter

Gen. Throwe, of South Windsor, is assistant division commander of the 26th Infantry Division of which the 43rd Brigade is a part.

Most of the men and officers the governor saw Tuesday were of the 102nd Infantry from the New Haven and Waterbury areas.

Maj. Salka told me his battalion of the 169th was going through the same kind of training, however, with rifles, mortars, grenade launchers, and on the battle course, that rough reminder that it is infantrymen ultimately who "take the land."

He said training had been going well with morale very high. The guardmen had been on night training six times. That means the day lasted from 5:30 a.m. to 11 p.m.

I asked him what affect the rigorous training had on the guardmen.

He said the more active it is, the better they like it. "The troops don't like to hang around," he said. "They'd rather be busy."

"The kids like to come," he concluded.

The battalion has about 500 officers and enlisted men, about 66 percent of its authorized strength. Recruiting for the infantry is somewhat harder than for some other Guard units.

In civilian life, Maj. Salka, of Plainville, is a director of data processing for Branson Ultrasonics Corp. in Newtown.

On the "we didn't have them in my day" list, I would have to put earplugs as the biggest nuisance. I'm sure they are important, but they didn't seem necessary for rifle fire.

And for the "things haven't changed list, I would put stacked rifles at the top. Three M-16-whatevers linked together in a tepee look very much like three World War II M-1s, a little less graceful maybe.

I had been half noticing it as the day went along and it came into sharp focus when I spoke with Maj. Robert V. Salka, commander of the 1st Battalion of the 169th Infantry. The battalion is headquartered at the armory in Manchester with companies in Manchester, New Britain, Hartford, Enfield and Rockville.

Maj. Salka, in answer to some questions I was asking, kept referring with obvious respect and concern to "the kids." He was talking about the young guardsmen.

Later I approached Brig. Gen. James Throwe privately. I asked him if it was common for an officer to develop a kind of paternal attitude toward the young guardmen.

"Yes, it is," he said. "They call them 'the kids'" he said by way of illustration, almost as though he had read my mind.

Gen. Throwe said the knowledge that the safety of the soldiers in combat would be in the hands of commanders accounts for the outlook those commanders develop.

Wrong solution for America

It is obvious that this nation has completely lost control of its borders. Our population is being doubted by an illegal underground of foreign-seeking, vulnerable, law-breaking people. There are those who simply would declare amnesty for these people. This is the same type of logic that says, "I know he beat his grandmother to death, but the poor fellow was desperate, which is reason enough to set him free."

The present, so-called Immigration Reform Bill, sponsored by the House of Representatives, is, however, no solution. It would have result in a national disaster. It is the creation of those who would make a bitter joke out of a bad situation and it is fostered by those who would go along with the gag for the purpose of getting Hispanic votes.

It would become a bureaucratic nightmare that would be impossible to enforce. We are speaking of 4 million to 10 million illegal aliens. If they could not be counted now, how could they be processed to determine the exact date they crossed the border? The manpower needed to enforce the legislation would easily fill another Pentagon building.

Economically, these people, because of their present financial state, as citizens would immediately become eligible for every welfare dollar available to citizens.

Also, as citizens, they would be legally able to bring family members into this country. Another 4 million to 8 million people for the United States support, another $2 billion-plus of taxpayers' money.

The worst aspect of the proposed immigration reform bill is that it is basically immoral. It discriminates against those newer citizens who have properly immigrated to this country. It rewards those who break the law. It sends a signal that if wrong is not controlled, it can be made right simply by changing the law.

The House bill on immigration reform is the wrong answer for this nation. It is too easy to sneak into this country. The border patrol needs added support to do its job. Law breaking, either by those who come across the border or those who welcome them as tools for financial gain, must be called just what it is — law breaking — and it must be dealt with properly.

Let's not let Uncle Sucker be taken advantage of once again. Rather, in decency, let's see control put into effect. Limit the human tragedy of the desperate and at the same time the American spirit from being further diluted by giving amnesty to lawbreakers.

Some laws hinder justice

The purpose of law enforcement guards and the courts is to prevent crime. Any law which hinders law officers or hinders the courts in their ability to curb crime, it does not make sense to enact evidence when it is found. It is difficult to imagine how any method of finding the truth about a criminal act could be illegal. Finding the truth cannot violate the rights of the innocent. The guilty have lost their rights. The exclusionary rule which allows the guilty to go free should be wiped out. The guilt of a person depends only on his own actions not on the police, the lawyer, the jury or the judge.

The Miranda law which compels the police to advise a suspect of his rights to remain silent may reduce our ability to get at the truth. Only recent suspects have rights. So the advice is not necessary. The Fifth Amendment is clear. It says the no person shall be compelled to be a witness against himself. Such a confession is not evidence. It would be better to advise all suspects, innocent and guilty, that at this point they are innocent until the truth is known and ask their cooperation. Those who are not guilty might help.

One important principle that has not been brought up at this time is that we are all morally bound to prevent crime. The laws protect all of us. We are all including the defense lawyer bound to find the truth. In my opinion any lawyer who hides the truth to free the guilty should be disbarred.

Eighth District did a great job

We wish to thank the Eighth District firemen for the wonderful job they did in putting out the fire at our home early Friday morning. The lightning had struck just after midnight right through the attic roof and started a fire that burned and smoldered for 1 1/2 hours. The windows on the second floor were all closed because of the rain, except for one back window. A guest from out of state woke up to find smoke pouring in the window. He assumed a neighbor's house must be on fire and woke up everyone. There was no indication at all on the second floor of any other smoke or fire.

They went outside to check houses on either side and out back, and were heading down the driveway to check the houses across the street, when they discovered the smoke pouring out of the attic roofline of our own house.

We called the fire department and by the time we had turned on outside lights and opened the front door, the first firemen were coming through it and the stairs were lit with fire hoses. Ladders were up inside in minutes, putting out the fire along the roof line.

Publisher listed as stable following motorcycle crash

KALISPELL, Mont. (UPI)—Malcolm S. Forbes, 64, multimillionaire publisher of Forbes Magazine and well-known sportsman, was seriously injured in a motorcycle accident Thursday in Glacier National Park, authorities said Friday.

He was listed in stable condition at Kalispell Regional Hospital. Glacier National Park spokeswoman Karen Foreman said Forbes was riding a motorcycle along a scenic roadway in the park when the bike went out of control and overturned.

"He was travelling with three companions, including his personal physician, Dr. Jan Engelzels," Ms. Foreman said. "Forbes was initially taken to St. Mary's Hotel at the east edge of the park after Engelzels determined he had suffered a mild concussion and needed rest. Forbes was later flown by helicopter medical team to the Kalispell hospital after he experienced additional pain.

A spokesman at Forbes Magazine in New York said the publisher was being treated for a collapsed right lung, broken ribs, concussion and abrasions.

Forbes was expected to be flown back to his New Jersey estate once doctors were satisfied that treatment of his lung was successful, the magazine spokesman said.

Forbes began his motorcycle journey from his ranch in Colorado last Sunday. He toured three Forbes ranches in Colorado, Wyoming and Montana and spent

Who would bribe a clown?

Pie prank leads to arrest

FAIRFIELD (UPI)—Town officials said Friday they hope pranksters will be discouraged by the arrest of a lawyer and his wife accused of trying to bribe a clown to throw a pie in the face of a school official.

"The individuals involved (school officials) certainly have a right to press for justice," said Donald Houston, assistant town attorney.

"They should be entitled to legal redress if somebody walks up to them and assaults them. Hopefully in the future this will discourage similar incidents from happening," he said.

Attorney James Diorio, 43, and his wife, Mary, 36, were arrested for conspiracy to commit bribery. Diorio also was charged with tampering with a witness, police said.

The Fairfield couple were released on written promises to appear Aug. 1 in Bridgeport Superior court and called the charges "a wild fabrication."

"I did not try to bribe him at all," Diorio said. "I'm sure through the legal process the truth will come out."

Police charged the Diorios tried to bribe Robert Fuller, co-owner of the Fun Factory in Fairfield, with $10,000 in an alleged attempt to stop him from talking about a June 25 incident at Tomlinson Junior High School when a pie was hurled in the face of school administrator Dean William Stanfield during eighth-grade graduation ceremonies.

Diorio refused comment on whether he paid Fuller $34.95 to stage the prank and a lawyer representing the Fun Factory also declined to discuss the case.

Mrs. Diorio, who said she was active as a school volunteer, claimed she tried to discuss the incident with School Superintendent Charles Fowler the day after graduation but he declined to meet with her until August.

State prosecutors said they will ask the Chief State's Attorney's Office to appoint a prosecutor for the case to avoid any possible conflict of interest because of Diorio's law practice.

An unrelated school incident in Fairfield June 25 led to the arrest earlier this week of a Fairfield pilot accused of hazing the high school graduation so a passenger could drop confetti on the crowd.

Londy Gambino, 29, a past graduate of Roger Ludlowe High School, was charged with first-degree reckless endangerment and disorderly conduct for flying his airplane a few hundred feet above the ceremonies.

Militias clash in Lebanon

By David Zenlon
United Press International

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Fierce clashes between pro-Syrian militias in north Lebanon Friday and a new wave of kidnappings in Beirut jeopardized efforts to unite the nation and end nine-years-of civil war.

Fifteen civilians were killed and 20 others wounded in artillery, rocket and machine gun battles in north Lebanon, bringing the casualty toll in three days of fighting in the area to 27 dead and 60 wounded, a police spokesman said.

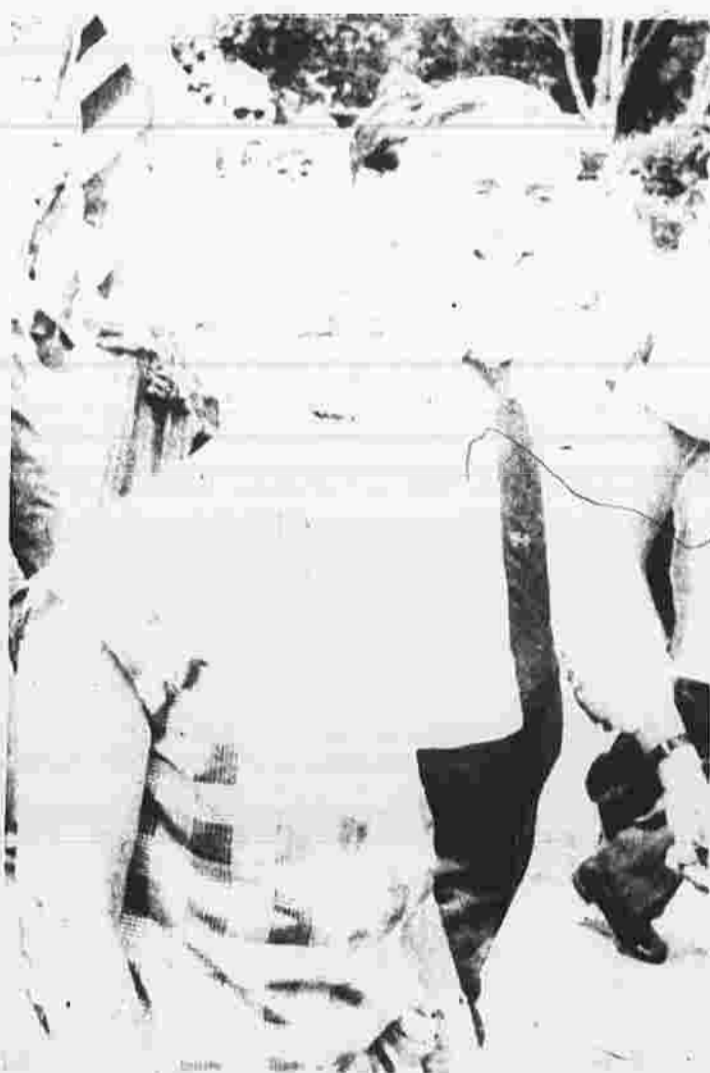

Authorities said the total casualties were probably higher because officials were unable to determine how many militants had been killed or wounded.

"The militia casualties must also be very high, but we are not in a position to gather specific details. They are treating their own casualties," the spokesman said.

The fighting between the 1,000-member Marada Brigade, the private army of former Christian President Suleiman Franjeh, and the Christian-Muslim forces of the Syrian Social Nationalist Party erupted Wednesday when Franjeh's militia stormed the SSNP's bases in the hilly Kurra district, 40 miles north of Beirut.

Both groups are Syrian-backed, but Syrian attempts to mediate an end to the clashes have failed.

The fighting has engulfed 19 Christian villages in the rich olive-growing area inhabited mainly by Greek Orthodox Christians.

Democratic Presidential candidate Walter Mondale and his new running mate Geraldine Ferraro stroll down East Mondale Street from Mondale's childhood home en route to their press conference at a homecoming celebration Friday.

Ferraro seeks debate

Questioned about her stand on abortions in light of her strong Catholic upbringing, Ms. Ferraro defended her position that she personally opposes abortion but believes it is a matter of personal choice.

At the same time, she said she feels strongly about her religion.

"In Washington, President Reagan hinted in remarks to Republican women that he thinks Mon-dale's choice of a woman running mate smacks of tokenism.

He predicted that one day a woman will be president "and she is going to be a Republican."

"The women who have advanced in our party — and who are coming up through the ranks today — are doing it by merit. And the American people, recognizing this, will support such a woman when she runs," he told 70 Republican women at a White House luncheon.

Mondale brings ticket mate home to meet the family

By Drew Von Bergen
United Press International

Elmore, Minn. — The band played "New York, New York" when Walter Mondale brought his running mate, Geraldine Ferraro, to his boyhood home Friday.

The former vice president and the congresswoman from Queens received an enthusiastic welcome from the farm area residents as they stood on the back steps of the white frame home on East Mondale Street.

The only sour note on the sentimental journey came from about two dozen peaceful demonstrators expressing opposition to both Mondale and Ferraro because of their stands on the abortion issue. A garbage can containing mutilated baby dolls with red paint spilled over them was near the rally.

Signs held by the demonstrators read "Vote Reagan — Stop killing our nation's babies," "Mondale supports abortions" and "Catholics against Ferraro."

Ms. Ferraro defended her stand on abortion — that she personally opposes it but believes it is a matter of personal choice for others, adding that she feels very strong about her Catholic religion.

"The president goes around calling himself a good Christian," she said. "I don't for one minute believe it because the policies are so terribly unfair. They are discriminatory. They hurt a lot of people in this country and I think we have an opportunity come November to make a change in that policy."

Mondale attempted to compare his hometown area with that of Rep. Ferraro's blue-collar neighborhood in New York City.

"If Gerry and (husband) John lived in Elmore you'd love them," he said, saying they had the same values.

"This community reflects so much of the strengths of America," Mondale said.

The pair later flew to Lake Tahoe for several days of mapping strategy and speech writing for next week's Democratic National Convention in San Francisco.

Standing in shirt sleeves, under a warm sun, Mondale introduced members of his family and that of his running mate to the crowd of several hundred, and received a proclamation from Elmore Mayor Roger Garmann naming this Walter Mondale week in the small community of about 900 residents adjacent to the Iowa border.

Mrs. Parker has served four terms in the House and is a former co-chairman of the Regulations Review Committee.

After 64 years, Mary Rota is going home

By Tracy Geoghegan
Herald Reporter

In August Mary Rota will make her first trip back to her birthplace in Italy in 64 years.

The 84-year-old Eldridge Street resident has not seen the town of Lu, or her relatives in northern Italy, since she came to this country with her husband in 1920.

Although Mrs. Rota happily calls America her home, she has not left her native land totally behind.

After all these years, she still speaks with a heavy accent. She reads an Italian-language newspaper daily, and she has also maintained an intimate correspondence with a handful of relatives in Italy. She's anxious to see them again.

She's eager to return for other reasons, as well.

"It seems to me there the food tasted better than here," she said. "And the flowers, they smelled better. Here they don't smell at all. There you smell them before you see them."

She said she'd also like to see Pope John Paul II while she's in Rome. "Even if he's not Italian, he's a smart man," she said. "I think everybody like him. He knows what he's doing."

MRS. ROTA will travel with her granddaughter, Nancy Bolster, her granddaughter's husband, Keith Bolster, and their son Erik, age 13, all of Old Lyme.

"I speak Italian. Maybe that's why they want me to go," Mrs. Rota said with a shrug.

"When Keith call me up, I thought he was kidding. He said, 'You want to go to Italy, Grandma.' I didn't think I'd ever go back."

"I don't think she believed she would actually get there until we said, 'You're going for your passport and we're buying the tickets,'" Mrs. Bolster said. "She's really excited now. She hasn't been there in 60 years."

"She's never had the opportunity to go back," said Bolster, a salesman who works out of Manchester.

"We're going to find out about our roots, but the real reason we're going is to give her a chance to go back. She hasn't seen many of her relatives for 60 some years," he said.

The Bolsters are also looking forward to meeting their Italian relatives for the first time, and Mrs. Rota is the only one in the family who has kept in touch with them.

"She's going to be our interpreter," Mrs. Bolster said. "They say they're not at all worried that Mrs. Rota's health won't hold out during the trip."

"She's in very good shape," Mrs. Bolster said. "As a matter of fact I think she could probably walk my legs off. She's always on the go."

MRS. ROTA's home in Italy was a small and quite poor farming community.

She has never been to Rome. And she has only been to Alessandria — the nearest major city to Lu — a handful of times.

For the most part, she spent her youth confined to the farm in Lu.

"There used to be 5,000 people there — now there are only 2,500 left," she said. "People move. Mostly they go to Australia. I don't know why, but they go to Australia."

Mrs. Rota's family in Italy grew grapes for a living. They also raised pigs, grew peaches and other fruit for their own consumption.

Her family couldn't afford a truck.

It seems to me there the food tasted better than here. And the flowers, they smelled better.

"You couldn't sell the other fruit because you had to have something to take them to the city in. We didn't have nothing," she said.

Relatives who had already settled in Glastonbury convinced the newly married Rotas that life was better in America. So they came over with 2,000 others on a tramp steamer in 1920. It took eight days to cross the ocean.

LIKE MANY immigrants, the Rotas arrived at Ellis Island, N.Y. "We were scared and sick," she said.

"We had to stay there for 29 days on the boat because we were sick. Everybody was sick from the ride over."

Eventually they made it to Connecticut and Mrs. Rota's husband, the late John Rota, soon had a falling out with the family in Glastonbury.

"They wanted us to work on their farm," Mrs. Rota said. "My husband said, 'If I want to work on the farm, I'd have stayed in the old country.'"

"What could I do? I had to stay with my husband."

John Rota got a job doing alk at the Cheney Mills. The Rotas moved to Eldridge Street, and it has been home ever since.

MRS. ROTA will be seeing very soon how 64 years has changed her homeland.

"My friend says it's better than it used to be. The roads are better — they pave them. People change too," she said.

"But I'm happy I came here. I got good family. Many of them got education. If I'd stayed there, I couldn't afford it."

Mary Rota of Eldridge Street will visit her birthplace in northern Italy next month. Mrs. Rota, 84, left when she was 20, and hasn't been back since.

When a doll came to call, aunt got nervous

The two of them were hard at work on what they usually do on Sunday afternoons.

The cat was sound asleep on the New York Times Book Review section. The woman was sound asleep on the couch.

Then the phone rang.

The niece, who is 5, sounded unusually excited. The aunt suddenly remembered she'd promised to see her that afternoon. The niece was bringing her brand new adopted relative over to meet the aunt.

"Two?" the niece asked.

"As long as that's OK with your father," the aunt said.

This is the aunt's standard opening line with the niece.

You see, when you're an aunt, you don't just agree on these things with the small relative. You first check with the big relative.

In Focus Adele Angelo Focus Editor

It's in the small print in the aunt-niece contract. Along with the birthday present clause and the water on school plays:

THE NIECE DRAGGED the father to the phone.

"Two," the father said.

Then the anxious wait began.

You see, the aunt had never entertained the niece's adopted relative before.

Oh, sure, the Chatty Cathy Fingernail Polish Set had come over for a visit. So had the Chitty Chitty Bang Bang game. And Candyland Bingo.

And the Barbies. Heck, all the Barbies had visited several times, in fact. There was the Barbie with the leg that kept falling off and there was the long-haired blonde Barbie with her own prom dress, and the naked Barbie.

But this was going to be different. This was family.

The aunt felt a little nervous. She didn't know what the adopted relative would think of her apartment. She wasn't sure if her niece expected she should make coffee cake or what.

Maybe the adopted relative would find a dust ball or something. Think she was a slob.

AND, WELL, there was another complication. Last year the aunt became one of the most hated souls in Manchester for suggesting that Cabbage Patch dolls should be hung upside down from chimneys. And she still thought the dolls were pretty ugly.

But, thank god, the niece hadn't read that particular issue of the Manchester Herald. Nor had she come across the "Cabbage Patch Doll Chainsaw Massacre" T-shirt a friend had picked up for her aunt as a joke.

The doorknob rang. The niece stood at the bottom of the stairs, holding the new relative.

One could tell from the look in her eyes that she was, at that moment, one of the proudest adoptive mothers on the planet.

"Gosh, she looks just like you, Monique," the aunt said. "Just like you!"

Monique beamed.

News for Senior Citizens
Picnic will be entertaining for kids and grandkids, too

By Joe Diminico, Acting Director. Greetings. The senior center has scheduled an evening picnic for July 26 beginning at 5 p.m. The picnic format will be a "kids and grandkids" picnic. The menu will consist of hot dogs and assorted salads. For entertainment, we will have the students of Ellen Chen for a piano recital in the auditorium. Rumor has it that "two clowns" will be present to entertain the grandkids. I hope all seniors will join in this affair not only for the fun but also to give their families an opportunity to view the center. Since we expect a large crowd I would appreciate all attending who will be bringing relatives to notify the center as to how many. I had a nice chat with Leona Juras in reference to establishing a "Dry Flower" class this fall at the center. She mentioned to me in addition to cultivated "everlastings" that there are numerous types of wild flowers and weeds that can be harvested and used in dried center menus. Any individuals familiar with any of the "wild" types who have the time for 15 minutes and prize like to donate them to the center will certainly be greatly appreciated. Also in place at Manchester Country Club, $5.00 includes the time for 15 minutes and prize like to donate them to the center will certainly be greatly appreciated. Should a mother stay mum about her transvestite son?

DEAR ABBY: I would like your opinion as to whether I should do anything about this matter or just keep quiet. My son recently announced his engagement. I have met his fiancée and they seem very much in love. My son has lived away from home for the last 10 years, but when he lived at home I learned that he was a transvestite. I have no idea whether he has pursued this activity or not. Should something be said to his fiancée regarding this, or should the entire matter be forgotten on my part? I am also wondering if this characteristic is inherited, as they have already stated that they want a family soon. I do not want anything to come between them, so hurry your advice and sign me... WONDERRING MOM. DEAR WONDERRING: If your son is an active transvestite and hasn't told his fiancée, he should, in any case, stay out of it, unless he is a doctor or nurse. As for "compulsive cross-dressing and impersonating the opposite sex," this is not a characteristic of transvestitism. Dr. Paul Walker of San Francisco, an authority on transvestitism, informs me that it is not an inherited characteristic. DEAR ABBY: If a strange man

Nine months after a cold taste, smell haven't returned

DEAR DR. LAMB - Nine months ago I came down with a bad cold. I had several bad sinus headaches and a cough. I lost my sense of taste and smell with a plugged-up nose. I thought this would only be temporary, as it has happened with other colds. But after five weeks I still cannot taste or smell. My cold and cough are gone. I took antibiotics for 10 days. One of the most common causes for a loss of taste is a previous virus illness. Why this is true is not clear. I like patients who have a loss of taste or smell, or both, to undergo a complete medical evaluation. Often the loss is related to a sinus deficiency, but that may be from a tumor that traps available zinc. A surprising number of patients who lose their taste do have underlying medical problems. Now I have two more. My 30-year-old son got one under his nose last spring and now he has another one. Give me ears to hear your voice in every human plea and to bear through those tangled tones the potential harmony. Give me thoughts that bear me up above the loud strife, bringing me nearer to the meaning of the Mystery of life, and your peace that is beyond my understanding. In Jesus' name, Amen. Rev. ## The Interfaith Day Camp still needs a part-time nurse

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Area Conference of Churches.

By Nancy Carr
MACC executive director

Thanks to you and 45 wonderful Manchester teenagers, the annual Interfaith Day Camp is in full swing.

The response from our teenagers was so tremendous that Jackie Morelewicz, our tennis-champion assistant director, has accepted 50 children referred by local social workers. There are a few children on the waiting list but Jackie has managed to find places for most of the youngsters.

Pat Getting (remember Pat from Seasonal Sharing?) has volunteered to work with Jackie as camp coordinator. Earl Yost, retired Manchester Herald sports editor, is in charge of the outdoor games. His wife, Adele, is directing the arts and crafts program with the help of her niece Barbara Norris.

This is the Yost's second year at the camp and they are bringing along family to help this year. Bliss them.

Anna Tremantano is back for the sixth year as kitchen manager. Planning two snacks and a lunch every day for more than 100 people is a real challenge and Jackie says Ann is indispensable. The food is donated by MACC churches, which also send along four ladies to help Ann with preparation and clean up.

DESPERATELY NEEDED
Everything is going so well except nursing staff. We are in need of a camp nurse for Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday. Nurses are required to be at camp from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. Necessary they can leave at noon. Please call the MACC office at 647-1114 for more information or call Jackie Morelewicz directly at the camp 649-9349.

The Manchester Recreation Department has been most cooperative in lending us volleyball, badminton and street hockey equipment along with the balls and bats.

Laura Dunfield and Robin at the rec also provided ideas for some with leftover arts and crafts supplies. A big boost from the Rec. Many thanks to all you who are sponsoring a youngster for one of the camps. We are in need of one thanks to Beatrice Pearson, Barbara Connor, Maureen L. Massara, Misses Mary and Elizabeth Kinnearcy, Frances R. Idzikowski.

Medics come all the way back in tourney

Capture Town Little League championship with 7-5 win over Moriarty's

By Bob Papeth
Herald Sports Writer

It was a classic finale to what was aptly termed the "town championship" — Moriarty's, more than made up for matters in the playoffs.

The Medics staged another comeback clinic just when it appeared all vital signs had left them.

Exploding for six runs in the bottom of the fifth inning, the Medics erased a four-run deficit to win the Town Little League championship, 7-5, over Moriarty Brothers Friday night at Waddell Field.

The Medics, who also won it all last season, defended their title with resolute determination. After having lost the opener, they won the double-elimination tourney a week ago, the Medics rebounded to reach the finals and then had to rally from behind to triumph on two consecutive nights against National League rival Moriarty's.

An error, a single by winning pitcher Chris Conklin and a fielder's choice then loaded the bases before Gleason ripped a two-run single to the gap in right center to knot the score. Talaga struckout the numbers eight and nine batters but Carroll then delivered a rope up the middle to put the Medics ahead, 6-5. An earned-run error on extended the score to 7-5.

Moriarty's plated three in the third and counted single tallies in the fourth and fifth. RBI singles by Chris Turkington and Talaga and an outfield error accounted for the third inning markers.

Other key heroes for the Medics were Jim Carroll, Pat Dwyer and Pat Gleason.

The Medics, limited to just three hits in the first four stanzas by losing pitcher Mike Talaga, came alive in the fifth, sending two batters to the plate. Dwyer led off the winning rally with a single and Campbell then rocketed his second round-tripper of the game to leftfield to close the gap to 6-3. A Campbell solo shot had given the home team a brief 1-0 lead in the first frame.

Dave Campbell (second from right), Brothers, winning the Town Little League Tournament championship in the process. Medics to 7-5 win over Moriarty.

Petersen paces Legion to 5-4 win over Enfield

With a major contribution from Chris Petersen, who had three of his four hits, drove in three runs and scored the game-winner on what started out as a stolen base, Manchester Legion slipped Enfield, 5-4, in Zone Eight baseball action Friday night at MCC.

The win moves the Legion to 10-21 in the Zone and 20-6 overall. Manchester has won four in the zone and is unbeaten in its last five.

Petersen drew an RBI single in the first inning after Bill Masse reached on an error and then stole second base. Petersen, after Andy DiFazio singled in the third inning, ripped an RBI triple. Masse drew a Ken Krawick sacrifice fly.

Petersen drew a one-out walk from losing pitcher Todd Archambault in the fourth. After counting one tally via a Keith Wolff run-scoring single, Moriarty's proceeded to load the bases with only one out. But Conklin, who won two and lost one in the tourney, then induced three-four batters. Ryan Barry and Turkington to pop up to end the threat.

Enfield scored its final run in the sixth when centerfielder Mike Fanelli's return pop up to the stands, Petersen came home with the game-winner.

Pete Frankovitch was the winning pitcher for Manchester. He scattered seven hits, walked four and struckout 11.

Moriarty Brothers' Sean Risley (2) paces from going into centerfield. Risley later into second base ahead of the slug as scored in inning in Twilight League action Friday night at Moriarty Field. Clarke has to leap high to prevent throw.

AL roundup

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mike Pagliarulo and Oscar Gamble each hit two-run homers to lead the New York Yankees to an 8-1 victory and a Friday night doubleheader sweep of the Kansas City Royals.

Don Baylor ignited a four-run sixth inning with an RBI single to carry the Yankees and Ron Guidry to a 7-1 victory in the opener.

Marty Byström, 2-0, went seven innings for New York, allowing just five hits and one unearned run.

Yankees sweep Royals

White Sox reliever Ron Reed, 0-4, gave up a pinch hit single to Wayne Gove leading off the 11th. Reed then bobbled Tony Solby's sacrifice bunt for an error, putting runners on first and second. Floyd Rayford, who led the score the ninth with a homer, sacrificed the runners over.

Ripken then belted a 1-0 pitch off Reed over the left-center field fence to make a winner of Tippy Martinez, 4-5.

MB's bow to Imagineers

By Bob Papeth
Herald Sports Writer

Everyone knows that Friday the 13th is notorious for bringing back a bad omen.

New York took a 1-0 lead in the third off starter Bert Sabersberg, 3-4, on an RBI single by Dave Winfield.

The Yankees added two more runs in the fourth when Steve Kemp led off with a single and Pagliarulo hit his first major-league home run, into the right-field stands.

Imagineers' bow to Moriarty Brothers baseball team in its Twilight League contest against the Imagineers Friday night at Moriarty Field.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

Eugene Brewer

It is incredible that people who are attempting to worship a common God, to follow a common Savior, and to be imbued with a common Spirit should be splintered a thousand ways. There are many excuses but no reason for this shameful division. Its resolution ought to have the highest priority among such people.
