Many changes greet Manchester students

By Sarah E. Hohl Herald Reporter

Fresh paint, tougher requirements and more computers were among the changes greeting nearly 10,000 public and parochial school students returning to classrooms today in Manchester.

The shine on the floor sort of matches the gleam in everybody's eye, said Manchester High School Principal Jacob Ludes. Ludes and others predicted that the spotlight cast on the quality of the district's schools last year would boost student morale this year.

Ludes said completion of the high school's $5.5 million renovation project won't hurt either. "For the first time in 3 1/2 years, we won't have workmen in the building on a regular basis," Ludes said.

"The kids will be less likely to mess the building up," MHS senior Charlene Campos said this morning. "Maybe it'll change their attitudes about this school, too."

Townwide, the enrollment outlook was mixed. School Superintendent James P. Kennedy said preliminary counts show more students than expected in junior and senior high schools.

THE TOTAL NUMBER of public school students may top the 6,979 expected and one or two teachers may have to be hired to accommodate the overflow, Kennedy said. In particular, some grade-school classes are bulging, with enrollments hovering around 30 in one first grade at Buckley School and first, third and fifth grades at Martin School.

And at Iling Junior High School, class size is "light all over," according to Assistant Superintendent Wilson E. Deakin.

American is suspect in bombing

By Nelson Wyot United Press International

MONTREAL, Sept. 4 — An American living in Canada was jailed without bond today in the bombing of Montreal's main rail station that killed three people and injured 41 others.

Canadian authorities said the suspect, Thomas Brigham, 43, is an American but they had not been able to determine his hometown. Reports, however, said Brigham was from Rochester, N.Y.

Authorities said two strange rambling letters apparently threatening Pope John Paul II — one delivered to Central Station before the Monday blast and another delivered to a hotel above the terminal shortly after the explosion — led them to question Brigham.

A coroner Tuesday ordered Brigham held without bond as a material witness and authorities said he might be charged in the bombing in Quebec City to begin at the deaths of the three people was scheduled for Monday.

Brigham, denying any involvement in the blast, also said he had 11 children.

"My dear man, I have 11 children, many grandchildren, lovely friends, I am not that person," Brigham said before entering the coroner's court when asked by a reporter if he planned the bomb in a luggage locker at Central Station.

Police said the gray haired Brigham was detained because he was suspected of writing two letters found in Montreal.

In Cleveland, lawyer James Brigham issued a statement Tuesday saying he believed his father was the man held in Montreal and noted a time and date in 1983 when he had seen him but once in the last eight years, said James Brigham of Richfield, Ohio.

James Brigham's mother, Marjorie Phipps, said she had never heard of her son until he moved to Canada in 1975. She said she found by police in the Queen Elizabeth Hotel Records at the New York County Courthouse in Fairview, N.Y. that a Thomas Brigham took a wife in 1945 and the couple was divorced in 1976. They had 11 children.

Shuttle makes perfect return

By Mark Borabok United Press International

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. — Discovery's six astronauts streaked from orbit to a picture-perfect sunrise landing today to wind up a triumphant shuttle shakedown flight that put NASA back in the space delivery business.

The nation's third and newest shuttle performed like a veteran on the blazing 17,000 mph plunge into the atmosphere despite an oxygen leak in orbit a few hours earlier. The crew was awakened early by mission control to stop it.

With commander Henry Hartsfield and co-pilot Michael Coats at the controls, the winged space freighter glided at 4.3 times the speed of sound across the California coastline. 24 miles above Point Conception, raced across the desert and made a sweeping left turn to line up with the dry lake bed runway.

The 162-ton ship touched down on time at 6:38 a.m. PDT, trailing a great trail of dust and fire. It had traveled 2.48 million miles — 96 times around Earth — in six days.

"Welcome home," said John Blaha in mission control in Houston.

"Roger," replied Coats, matter-of-factly.

Hartsfield, Coats and crew members Judy Resnik, Ellison S. Sizemore, Richard Mullane and Charles Walker had waited a long time for that moment. Their initial launch attempt was aborted a seconds before blastoff in January. With the sun shining on Discovery's black belly as it banked for home, Hartsfield made today's landing look routine.

It was the 12th shuttle landing, and the last landing planned of the show under the current shuttle program.

Several thousand people watched the shuttle as it touched down at 5:38 a.m. over the Indian Ocean.

Soviets alleged to violate arms pact

By Jim Anderson
United Press International

WASHINGTON — A member of a presidential advisory committee says evidence the Soviet Union is cheating on a wide array of arms agreements "casts doubt on the wisdom of persisting in arms control" with the Kremlin.

Cain Gray, a member of the administration's General Advisory Committee on Arms Control and Disarmament, said in an article in the forthcoming issue of Foreign Policy magazine that classified information provided to the committee proves the Soviets are violating arms agreements.

No one who saw the complete technical evidence amassed could doubt that the violations are so significant as to call into question the very notion that the superpowers retain enough common interests in arms control to warrant continuing negotiations," Gray said.

Gray writes that the administration's policy of saying nothing public about the violations "suggests that Soviet cheating is condoned."

"The administration should ... tell the American people that Soviet misbehavior has cast doubt on the wisdom of persisting in arms control," he wrote.

At the very least, Gray said, the administration should announce that it will no longer abide by the informal provisions of the SALT 2 agreement, and the 1972 treaty limiting the construction of antiballistic missile systems.

Gray lists several examples of Soviet violations of past agreements:

- The building of a new type of missile, the SS-X-25, in violation of the SALT 2 agreement. That treaty was never ratified by the United States but both sides have said they would honor it.
- The building of large phased-array radars in eastern Siberia. Powerful phased-array radars, which have no moving parts and sweep the sky electronically, are a necessary part of a new ABM system, and the location of the radars would be a violation of the treaty, which is still in effect.
- Trying to conceal some of the characteristics of the Soviet "Backfire" bomber.

Gray says Reagan should give the Soviets one last chance to clear up the record. If they do not, he should appoint a bipartisan body to consider the implications of Soviet cheating on future arms agreements. Then, if necessary, Reagan should withdraw from the ABM treaty and the informal SALT 2 agreement on limiting development of strategic missiles.

The renouncing of the ABM treaty would probably be required if the United States were to go ahead with Reagan's plans for an anti-missile system that would be based in space.

Gray is president of the National Institute for Public Policy and has written extensively in favor of a U.S. program to permit the United States to develop a weapon that would attack Soviet satellites.

The Soviets have proposed talks in Vienna to ban anti-satellite weapons, but the Reagan administration wants the negotiations expanded to include land-based ballistic missiles.

11 DOT employees share Lotto prize

HARTFORD (UPI) — Eleven engineers all working for the state Department of Transportation will split last week's $1.1 million first prize Lotto pool, the largest number to share a Lotto jackpot in the game's history.

Roger L. Peterson, 35, a Meriden resident and spokesman for the group, said Tuesday he bid the ticket in a closet upon learning Saturday he had the winning combination.

Michael J. Jylkko, 39, of Wethersfield, also an engineering draftsman, said he will use the money to finance the education of his two children.

Richard Zbrozek, 37, of Berlin, had similar plans, also with two offspring. "It's a big load off my mind," Zbrozek said.

Others sharing the prize were Brian J. Notwick, 27, of Niantic; Clifford E. McGonney, 48, of Bloomfield; Claire Michaud, 23, of Waterbury; Roger J. Levesque, 31, of Bolton; Brian T. Cunningham, 24, of Farmington; Mark Macchnick, 26, of Farmington; Vincent Vitellano, 28, of Hartford; and Thomas A. Harley, 24, of East Hartford.

The winners had to wait until Tuesday to claim their prize as state lottery offices were closed Monday because of the Labor Day holiday.

As town water department moves out — which could be Tuesday as early as December 1.

Committee members said Tuesday they expect some outcry from neighbors of the Cooper Hill Plant, which is near both Washington School and the West Side Recreation Center.

Another concern is that the town water department probably won't be able to vacate the small brick building in time to save a $33,000 state grant which hinges upon an Oct. 1 opening. A new treatment plant on Spring Street must be working without any problems for 20 days before the department will move out of the old plant, officials have said.

Shelter committee reluctantly settles on Cooper Hill plant

By Sarah E. Hail
Herald Reporter

A town committee has decided to recommend the Cooper Hill Water Treatment Plant as a night-time shelter for homeless people in Manchester — at least until a better place can be found.

"Maybe it's not all fixed up nice, but all you need are four walls and a roof," said Walter Johnson, a member of the Shelter Study Committee, which met Tuesday for 1 1/2 hours in Lincoln Center.

"It's better than nothing," said Gladys Stringfellow, another committee member.

The Board of Directors is expected to hear the committee's recommendation on Tuesday. If the board approves the site, the shelter will probably move in as soon as the town water department moves out — which could be Tuesday as early as December 1.

Committee members said Tuesday they expect some outcry from neighbors of the Cooper Hill Plant, which is near both Washington School and the West Side Recreation Center.

A new treatment plant on Spring Street must be working without any problems for 20 days before the department will move out of the old plant, officials have said.

BUT TOWN HUMAN SERVICES DIRECTOR HAMA MARCUS

With these funds, "You can always bring a building up to what you need," said Johnson, who heads the committee's special search team. "Getting the building is the main thing."

MOST COMMITTEE MEMBERS found fault with the Cooper Hill site, but all conceded that it is the only option the town has at present. Chairman John Cooney said the plant is "too far off the beaten track" and worried about baring the shelter project by not securing the "least objectionable location" possible.

"The least objectionable location is East Hartford," quipped Barbara Baker, a liaison to the committee from the Manchester Area Conference of Churches, which will run the shelter.

Johnson said that some of the fears of people in town are unrealistic. "Homeless people have no more violent or prone to crime than the general population, though they are more likely to get arrested," he said.

Johnson also predicted that many of the problems which occurred at last year's shelter, housed in the same building as the East Side Recreation Center, would not arise at Cooper Hill. Sharing a building with another agency as a far cry from sharing the same neighborhood, he said.

WHILE COONEY COMPLAINED that the treatment plant is too isolated, Johnson said its chain-link fence and forested location would help satisfy neighbors. He also said that to get to the shelter, homeless people would probably walk through the Cheney Hill district — an area in which there are few homeowners to complain.

The costs of getting the Cooper Hill plant ready for use are minimal, Johnson said. Knocking out an interior window to make more room could be done in a few hours, he said. And he claimed tenants could make do with the plant's one bathroom, at least for a while.

The committee decided Tuesday not to give up its search for a permanent shelter site. The Green Stamp redemption center on Main Street, the former Economy Electric building at 824 Main St. and the former Pinhurst Grocery Store were mentioned as possibilities.

Trash at the White House

Herald Reagan gets a whopping 10,000 gifts and letters a year — but he'll never see most of them, and some even get dumped in the White House trash.

"Because of the limitations on the president's time, the majority of the gifts don't reach him," says Michael Levine, author of the "The Address Book — How to Reach Anyone You Want." A five-member, full-time team scans the flood of often costly gifts from foreign leaders and the president's well-wishers at home. All food items from the president's trademark jelly beans to caviar flown in by foreign royalty — are tossed into the garbage.

There is just no way to guarantee that something sent by even the most well-meaning person hasn't been tampered with in transit," explains Levine.

The song must go on

Italian tenor Nazzari Todisco will sing the title role in Verdi's "Erani" Friday night at the gala opening of the San Francisco Opera fall season. He replaces Luciano Pavarotti, who caused an artistic crisis by canceling out when his youngest daughter, Giuliana, 17, became seriously ill in New York.

Pavarotti was scheduled to perform with an all-star cast that includes Montserrat Caballe, Sherill Milnes and Paul Plishka. The cancellation touched off a worldwide search for a replacement in the opera, which is infrequently performed in the United States.

Todisco is a resident of Parma known internationally for both his Erani and his Radames in Verdi's "Aida." An SFO spokesman said the U.S. embassy in Rome helped speed up the paperwork so that the tenor could fly to the United States as quickly as possible. He planned to arrive in San Francisco Tuesday.

A giant sand box

Veteran actress June Lockhart, best known as the mom in the "Lassie" TV series, joined almost 200 Labor Day beachgoers playing in the sand at Pacific Palisades, Calif. The occasion was the First Annual Del Monte Sand Sculpting Contest, where contestants created replicas of their favorites from the company's line of stuffed toys in the shape of fruits and vegetables.

"I haven't had so much fun in ages," June said, kicking up some sand. "I really like the idea of families working together building in the sand rather than having the pros take over the beach."

For contest winners Michael Ross and Andrianna Hernandez, the day at the beach proved to be more than fun. Their entry "Mt. Yum-Yum," a spedy takeoff on the famous national landmark, won them the first prize of $750.

Rock and roll rocks

LaToya Jackson, Michael's older sister, has created a flashy line of suede and leather junior fashions under the label "David Laurens for LaToya."

Michael has done something I'd like to do. He has created a style, a look for himself, and a lot of people are patterning themselves after him ... and I have to create that too," she tells the October issue of Glamour magazine.

LaToya calls her clothes her "rock and roll looks."

Now you know

According to Sapiro's Political Dictionary, a " Kangaroo ticket" is one in which the vice presidential candidate has greater political strength than the presidential candidate.

DOT official warns against Windsor suit to halt I-291

By Kathy Gormus
Herald Reporter

The state could lose about $400 million in federal highway funds if Windsor successfully sues to block two highway projects under the construction of Interstate 291 between Manchester and Windsor, a state Department of Transportation official said Tuesday.

An afternoon news conference at DOT headquarters in Wethersfield, Deputy Commissioner of Transportation William A. Lazarek said a lawsuit by Windsor could push the state beyond the 1990 deadline for seeking federal funds.

Construction on I-291 and the reconstruction of Interstate 91 are scheduled to begin in 1986, but a lawsuit could delay the start by as many as five years, Lazarek said.

Should the 1990 deadline be missed, the planned widening of I-91 from the Massachusetts line to Hartford could be jeopardized along with I-291, he said.

"A decision to sue the state, if successful, could very well result in no improvements at all," Lazarek said. "I'm afraid the whole thing could go down in flames."

Whether the town sues depends on the outcome of a referendum Tuesday in which Windsor voters will be asked if the town should sue the state if changes to the highway plans are not made.

Windsor officials have opposed construction of I-291 in the past, calling instead for a scaled-down leisure. BUT LAZAREK REJECTED that idea, saying that such a road would be inadequate to handle the volume of traffic.

"It would be foolish to attempt to create an intersection of this main link in the street system which would have to carry 30,000 vehicles per day," he said. "What could be more disruptive to a town than to have their local streets choked by through traffic?"

I-291, which would be built between I-49 near the J.C. Penney store and the construction of I-91 in Windsor, is needed to handle the increased number of commuters going from the Buckland Industrial Park in Manchester to the Bissell Bridge in Windsor. Lazarek said.

Manchester officials have said they favor the construction of I-291 with the state's share of the cost.

Windsor officials said that I-291 and agreeing to keep several local streets open. But he admitted that carrying multiple passengers, which Windsor officials want scrapped entirely from the reconstruction plans.

"There's no way we're ever going to be able to agree with Windsor on those issues," Lazarek said.

MARY K. DROST, the minority leader of Windsor's Town Council, said the DOT has made only "minor concessions" so far.

"I do think we ought to have some concessions to save our town," she said.

DOT officials are scheduled to meet with the Windsor Town Council tonight.

Lazarek said that 73 homes would have to be taken in Windsor for the two highway projects. Sixty-five homeowners have al ready been contacted and 15 people in Windsor have already been relocated, he said.

Lazarek said the 191 improvements are necessary because the area is one of the "fastest growing corridors" and the highway will soon prove inadequate to handle traffic.

"I believe we are faced now with a choice to improve or not improve I-91," he said. "A court suit by Windsor very possibly could result in no improvements at all from downtown Hartford to the Massachusetts state line. We cannot founder ahead with the deficiencies on I-91 which were apparent ten years ago and expect to continue the growth and vitality of the Greater Hartford area."

Schussler resigns over incident
Manchester High School teacher Caroline Schussler said this morning that she has submitted a letter of resignation which blames the school board and administrators for creating an "intolerable situation."

Schussler, who has taught special education at MHS for 15 years, filed a union grievance earlier this year after school Principal Jacob Ludes interpreted a Valentine note sent to her by a colleague Ludes termed the "candygram" obscene and inappropriate for duty by students running the fund-raising project. Schussler contended her rights had been violated.

The school board rejected her complaint and the Manchester Education Association decided not to bring the matter before a state arbitration panel.

"The administration and the members of the Manchester Board of Education have apparently acted in concert to deprive me of my right to be free from an invasion of privacy," Schussler wrote in the letter.

"This deprivation of my rights creates an intolerable situation," Schussler's letter states that she will retire early on Oct. 12.

"We're really sorry to lose a veteran teacher," School Superintendent James P. Kennedy said this morning. He said he disagreed with Schussler's accusations.

Apartment Buyers to pay bill

The prospective buyers of the Marilyn Court apartments on Olcott Street have agreed to pay a delinquent $146,750 water bill in full. Town Attorney Kevin M. O'Brien said today.

The purchasers, identified as a partnership called Oakland Associates, have also agreed to pay back taxes on the property totaling $48,000, O'Brien said.

Under a tentative settlement which was to have been presented to the Board of Directors Tuesday night, Oakland Associates would have paid $123,000 at the time of the sale and the remaining $23,000 over several months. The meeting was canceled after the partnership agreed to pay the bill in full, O'Brien said.

The sale was to have been closed today, O'Brien said.

The town has been trying since last year to get the back bills paid and filed liens against Marilyn Court Associates, the current owners of the 103-unit complex.

Zinsser plays senatorial football

State Sen. Carl Zinsser, R-Manchester, not to be outdone by Democratic opponent Stephen Cassano's campaign baseball cards, is distributing fliers with the complete 1984 schedule for the National Football League.

Zinsser said today the Republican State Central Committee is mailing the one-page fliers, which list facts about Zinsser as well as about the NFL, to all 21,000 households in the 4th Senatorial District.

Zinsser, a Pittsburgh Steelers fan, said he hopes his constituents find some use for the NFL schedule. "But after the first week, I'm not so sure," he said, talking about the Steelers' opening-day loss to Kansas City.

No contest plea ends Hansen trial

By Sarah Posselt
Herald Reporter

Hansen, who lives on Greenwood Drive, was charged in May 1982 with first-degree sexual assault, two counts of second-degree sexual assault, two counts of fourth-degree sexual assault and five counts of risk of injury to a minor, he said.

The defendant argued that the consent to the 10 charges he was facing was null and void.

After a morning session during which lawyers argued about whether a police officer involved in the case should be allowed to testify, Richard Hansen, 31, pleaded no contest Tuesday afternoon in court.

Hansen's attorney, Maxwell Belmont, said after the trial that he felt that Hansen had given a sincere plea to accept a no contest or guilty plea to two counts of risk

Au revoir, Trudeau era

Mulroney leads Conservative landslide

By Ken Becker
United Press International

TORONTO — Voting returns today showed Brian Mulroney's Conservative Party won a landslide victory over the Liberal Party of Prime Minister John Turner in national elections that appeared to give the Tories a historic parliamentary majority.

Early returns showed Conservative Party candidates won or led in 211 of Canada's 282 electoral districts, Liberals in 40 and the socialist New Democrats in 31. One independent was elected in Ontario.

The results will give Mulroney a historically large parliamentary majority.

The Conservatives won 56 percent of the popular vote to 28 percent for the Liberals and 18 percent for the left-wing New Democratic Party led by Ed Broadbent. Fringe parties garnered 4 percent.

Mulroney, 45, a Montreal lawyer and businessman who won his first election when he captured the Conservative leadership 15 months ago, surpassed the record 208 seats in the House of Commons gained by the late prime minister John Diefenbaker in the last Tory majority sweep of 1958.

Turner, 55, who returned from eight years in self-imposed political exile to win the Liberal leadership and succeed Trudeau 65 days ago, served the second-shortest term in Canadian history.

Mulroney, speaking to about 5,000 supporters in a hockey arena in his hometown of Baie Comeau, Quebec, said he would propose policies to combat Canada's 11.2 percent unemployment and punishing interest rates and strengthen the Canadian dollar, now valued at less than 80 U.S. cents.

"A new government will place the highest priority on attracting a new and attractive business climate for industrial, and international and domestic investment and we plan to establish a new era of confidence for risk capital where the benefit for Canadians are in job-creation and economic growth," said Mulroney, accompanied at the victory rally by his 31-year-old wife Mita.

The prime minister-elect campaigned on a promise to improve relations with the United States, often strained during Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's nearly 16-year tenure.

He has said he would relax protectionist policies that discouraged U.S. investment in Canada.

Turner, in a concession speech in a Vancouver hotel, pledged a "speedy and orderly" transition of power. He said Mulroney probably would be installed as Canada's 18th prime minister within the next two weeks.

"It's clear the citizens of Canada wanted change," said Turner, abjuring the stage with his wife Geillis and their four children. "I begin my task of rebuilding the Liberal Party."

"The completeness of the Conservative landslide was underscored by the decimation of the Liberal powerbase in Quebec, where Tory candidates took 58 of 75 seats, the worst Liberal showing in Quebec since 1882. In the last election in 1980, Liberals won 74 of the 75 seats.

Mulroney, a former Montreal lawyer, won a seat representing the Maritimes region in northern Quebec.

Broadbent, whose leftist NDP has never formed a government, was re-elected for the fifth time in his district in Oshawa, Ontario, just east of Toronto.

Judge restores woman to honor society

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — A young woman who was kicked out of the National Honor Society while she was a pregnant high school senior says her successful court fight to win reinstatement was "worth it all the time."

U.S. District Judge J. Waldo Ackerman ruled Tuesday Loretta Wort was a victim of sex discrimination when dismissed from the society 2½ years ago and must be reinstated by Brown County school officials.

"I'm just so excited, I'm just so happy," Wort, 20, said in a telephone interview from her Mount Sterling home. "It was worth it all the time. I worked 10, 11 years to get to where I was... I worked hard. They let me have it [membership in the society] and they took it away from me. I just didn't think it was right for the reason they did it."

Wort charged in a civil suit her dismissal from the society was based solely on her pregnancy.

During a bench trial earlier this year, her lawyer argued a different standard of behavior was applied to Wort than to boys because males cannot get pregnant.

Attorneys for the school district responded that Wort's declining interest in classes and school activities, in addition to her pregnancy, led to the decision to dismiss her from the society.

But Ackerman said he "must conclude that [Wort] was dismissed from NHS because of her pregnancy or the acts leading up to the pregnancy."

Under federal regulations, schools cannot discriminate against students because they are pregnant, Ackerman said, and honorary societies are not exempt from those regulations.

He also said Wort's constitutional guarantee of equal protection was violated because school officials did not prove that removing her from the society would support the "moral development" of other students.

George Lewis, a lawyer representing the Brown County school district, said Ackerman's decision will "give guidance" to the school in future situations.

He said it was doubtful the ruling would be appealed.

Wort graduated from Brown County High School in 1982, shortly after she was kicked out of the society. She gave birth to a daughter, Lacey Anne, in April 1982, six months after she married the father.

Wort testified she maintained her high grade point average and remained active in most school activities while she was pregnant. NHS membership is based on scholastic achievement.

Wort, who currently works as a waitress, says she plans to attend college and study art education.

Tass says Chernenko about

MOSCOW — President Konstantin Chernenko, rumored to have been seriously ill, appeared in public today for the first time in nearly eight weeks at a Kremlin awards ceremony honoring three cosmonauts, the official news agency Tass said.

The ceremony was not open to Western journalists and no physical description of Chernenko, 72, was immediately available. Tass promised photographs would be distributed and the event was almost certain to be the lead item on the Soviet evening news.

Tass said the Communist Party chief, last seen in public July 13, had presented awards to three cosmonauts who made a space trip in July.

"We are meeting at a joyous ceremony today," Chernenko was quoted as saying. "By good tradition we have gathered here in the Kremlin to give our cordial greetings to the three cosmonauts."

Iranians attack Swede judge

THE HAGUE, Netherlands — Two Iranian judges collided and punched a Swedish judge at a meeting of a nine-member international tribunal that is settling claims stemming from the U.S. Embassy takeover in Tehran.

Officials at the International Court of Justice where the tribunal is headquartered said Tuesday Nils Mangard, one of two Swedish judges on the panel, was not seriously hurt in the attack Monday.

But the assault drew a bitter denunciation from the U.S. Embassy at The Hague and the tribunal's scheduled monthly session was immediately canceled.

Court halts one execution

STARKE, Fla. — A federal appeals panel has stayed the execution of child killer Ernest John Dobbert Jr., who was scheduled to be hanged Thursday with another Florida murderer in the nation's first double execution in 19 years.

The 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta late Tuesday stayed the execution of Dobbert until 10 a.m. Friday "or until further notice of this court." Dobbert's death warrant expires at noon Friday.

Lawyers for condemned killer Nollie Lee Martin appealed his case in Miami to U.S. District Judge James King, who was expected to issue a ruling today.

Martin, who claims he doesn't remember his crime, is on his first death warrant and one of the seven men executed in Florida since 1976 has died on his first warrant.

Shamir, Peres resume talks

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Labor Alignment leader Shimon Peres resumed talks today and said they were close to agreement on forming a national unity government.

"Mr. Shamir and myself did overcome the outstanding issues which served as a stumbling block between the two of us," Peres said at the end of a 90-minute meeting at Shamir's home. The two were to meet again later in the day.

"We started to deal with the structure and the composition of the future government," the Labor leader said. "We shall write down the guidelines and the coalition agreement in the right language and then we shall announce it."

Shamir told reporters he did not see "any differences that will be difficult to overcome."

Study says big cars safer

WASHINGTON — A new insurance study analyzing injury and collision damage claims says full-size American cars are safer than smaller imports — particularly two-door Japanese models.

The survey released Tuesday by the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety listed Oldsmobile Delta 88, Buick LeSabre, Mercury Grand Marquis and Oldsmobile 98 as having the best insurance claim records. These models are large, four-door U.S.-built cars.

The annual study undertaken by the Highway Loss Data Institute compared injury and collision damage records of 1981, 1982 and 1983 models.

The survey found that cars with the worst overall losses included Plymouth Sapporo, Dodge Colt, Nissan Pulsar — all built in Japan — and Pontiac 1000. All are two-door, small cars.

Air Force rolls out B-1, grounds twin

By Mark Z. Borobok
United Press International

PALMDALE, Calif. — The Air Force has grounded the twin of the B-1 bomber that crashed last week, but on the same day rolled out the first production model of the plane intended to replace the nation's aging B-52s.

Before Tuesday's rollout of the $220 million swing-wing bomber at Rockwell International's plant, Gen. William Thurman announced the Air Force would ground indefinitely the lone remaining B-1A prototype. He called the move a precautionary step, pending results of an investigation into the crash last Wednesday of the other B-1A, which was ditched in the sea by test pilot Tommie Douglas Benefield, 55.

Autopsy results released Tuesday showed Benefield died of a skull fracture and compressed spine suffered when the bomber's escape capsule hit the ground in the Mojave Desert on a low-level, low-speed test flight. The other two crewmen survived and remained hospitalized.

Benefield was praised as the man who kept faith through the project's stormy 14-year progress from drawing board to flight line.

Gen. Lawrence Skantze, head of the Air Force Systems Command, said the lone remaining B-1A prototype, a camouflage-painted bomber rolled out on the tarmac Tuesday was the dead pilot's legacy.

"Doug, wherever you are, we are going to do our determination to keep freedom's lamp burning," Reagan's message said.

Reagan resurrected the B-1 program in 1981 after President Jimmy Carter killed the project in 1977 as too costly, arseless since the B-52 went into service in 1953.

The Air Force is scheduled to purchase 100 B-1Bs and spare parts at a cost of $20.5 billion, figured in 1981. The first contract in the program was awarded in 1979.

In a message read by Air Force secretary Verne Orr, President Reagan hailed Tuesday's unveiling as "a benchmark in the defense of our nation."

"The B-1B will significantly enhance our nation's deterrent strength and is a symbol of our determination to keep freedom's lamp burning," Reagan's message said.

Lebanese leader survives bomb attempt

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Former Prime Minister Selim al Hoss, a member of Lebanon's national unity Cabinet, survived a car bomb assassination attempt today that killed four people and wounded 25 others.

The Moslem leader was headed to the west Beirut apartment of Mufti Hassan Khaled, the spiritual leader of Lebanon's Sunni Moslems, when a packed car packed with explosives blew up as he passed, police said.

Hoss, the minister of education and public works, was treated at the American University Hospital for minor cuts, bruises and shock, police said. He was released after several hours.

"I am fine and thank God. I hope this is the last attack of its kind. I hope peace will be restored to Lebanon," Hoss said in a Beirut radio broadcast recorded at the hospital.

The blast killed the Moslem leader's driver, two police motorcycle escorts and a 64-year-old Lebanese woman who lived in a nearby building, police said. At least 25 people were wounded, including two other police escorts.

Witnesses said the explosion damaged a row of shops, cafes and waterfront restaurants and shattered windows in the British Embassy, housed in an apartment building a block away from the blast site.

Police sources said the explosion apparently was triggered by remote control.

Arkansas cult gets breather on eviction notice

YELLVILLE, Ark. (UPI) — Armed members of a racist religious cult, claiming "the Lord's will," told us they would delay any attempt to carry out a court order evicting them from their secluded rural encampment.

The 70 members of The Covenant, the Sword and the Arm of the Lord were supposed to have been evicted Tuesday, but authorities gave them an extra day to come up with a plan to refinance their mortgage on their 224-acre tract.

CSA spokesman Kerry Noble said the group, whose members turned out Tuesday in camouflage battle dress, was trying to come up with the money to resolve the dispute without violence.

But Noble said in a telephone interview the cult members would "go with any means that we have" to stay on the land.

"If we leave after God told us not to, then we have the wrath of God to put up with, and that's way worse than the wrath of man," Noble said.

"The Lord's told us to stay here (through) prophecies, visions, dreams, prophets coming from outside the group. We're supposed to stay here."

Hollywoood (UPI) — Two versions of Mark Twain's classic "Huckleberry Finn" are being prepared by screenwriter Guy Gallo for the Public Broadcasting System.

Gallo, who wrote the screenplay for "Under the Volcano," is providing a long version of the story and a short one, giving PBS its choice of which will work best dramatically for the tube.

PBS plans a national talent hunt for an unknown to play the title role.

to make our stand." Judge Tom Hilburn on Aug. 24 gave occupants of the camp until Tuesday to leave the land, which was sold to its former owners, the Campus Crusade for Christ, for $27,000 after the CSA failed to meet payments.

Sheriff Roger Edmondson let the deadline pass without serving eviction papers. A spokesman in his office said the group would get at least one more day to come forward with a refinancing plan.

"We've been advised that members of the cult have obtained refinancing for the loan, and we anticipate confirmation on that from plaintiffs in (the eviction) case tomorrow (Wednesday)," said the spokesman, who declined to be identified by name.

Both Noble and cult leader Jim Ellison said they were not seeking a confrontation, but would fight anyone trying to evict them.

They acknowledged members are armed with semi-automatic weapons to defend themselves and their neighbors in a race war they expect to be instigated by "anti-Christian" Jews.

The CSA considers blacks and Orientals as inferior races, but claims to hate only what Noble classified as "racial Jews."

The questions of reasoning skepticism

A year has passed since the Russians shot down the Korean airliner and the Stoliichaya brand vodka has returned to liquor store shelves. The bartenders who were photographed in full patriotic bombast pouring this Russian import into the gutters have returned to their places of business.

The incident has not been forgotten, however. Some people are saying that they believe that the airliner did have some connection with American espionage activities. It is being put forward that the plane was sent off course so that our military intelligence people could study Russian electronic and anti-aircraft response to an intruder in their air space.

Others are saying that, although they do not believe the CIA or whoever, actually sent the plane into Russian air space, they do think that our people knew it was where it didn't belong and, instead of warning it, tracked it for an hour or more and gleaned whatever they could of the Russian response until the Soviets sent its luckless occupants to their deaths.

Either way, voices are asking for a congressional investigation and it would be helpful to know what part, if any, our government had in the Russians' killing of these civilians. But why are these questions only being heard now? They were raised at the time, but with the shouting and denunciations from the patriotic pep rally leaders in the White House, only a discerning ear could hear the questions of reasoning skepticism.

REASONING SKEPTICISM isn't appreciated. It is scorned as showing lack of pride in the red, white and blue. Pride, once considered one of the seven deadly sins and a singularly unattractive characteristic, has been converted into a positive virtue. Stand tall, walk tall; it sounds good but what's the difference in gait between our tall-walking secretary of state, and a swaggar?

Get out in the crowd and chant "USA USA USA!" or be prepared to bear up under the suspicion you are, well, if not disloyal, at least leaning in that direction.

The atmospherics created by the rain makers and political meteorologists of the Reagan administration are killing off foreign policy debate. The line taken against criticism by officials like Jeanne Kirkpatrick at the Republican convention amount to little more than, "If you don't like this country, why the hell don't you go back where you came from?"

She is one of the loudest in asking why these people, i.e. the voices of reasoning skepticism, always criticize the one our country and not the Russians. That kind of speech is intimidation and it will work, as it has, in shutting people up. A few people with zealous equal and opposite to hers and the president's will take the social and financial risks of standing up in public, but most will not. For most life is too short to take on an angry, bullying woman like Kirkpatrick.

PEOPLE BEING KICKED AROUND like that can't explain, least of all in a period of steamy, contrived jingoism. Nobody will listen if they fight for the microphone to say they criticize policies of their own country because they love it, because Americans are responsible for what Russia does. For four years Ronald Reagan has berated the hell out of the Russians and what has it gotten him, us or the world? Has he gotten them out of Afghanistan, has he got one soul out of one concentration camp?

So increasingly the critics choose to let it pass and keep quiet. To see how effective her kind of verbal jackingboot can be, listen to the defensive tone of the Democratic candidates from the top of the ticket down through those running for Congress. They begin every foreign policy utterance with an apology or some kind of excessive thought, such as, "While I am second to none in believing in a strong national defense and have voted for everything the Pentagon has asked for, still I do think we have gone, just an itty-bitty-witty, teeny-weeny bit too far. But I'm not for unilateral disarmament."

When you have the money and the media support that the Reaganites do, the tools are at hand to turn individual citizens into members of the mob. They may come shamefacedly to their senses later, as they have more than once before in American history, but that avails little now. Now is when we move from crisis to precipice with no advisory voices, no messages of caution, no contrary counsel.

Justice is afraid of Vesco

WASHINGTON — Federal investigators have gathered copious information linking fugitive financier Robert Vesco to multi-billion-dollar drug-smuggling operations involving Cuban President Fidel Castro and Nicaraguan government officials.

But the Justice Department quietly killed an elaborate plan to kidnap Vesco and bring him back to face criminal charges for which he was indicted more than 10 years ago.

Evidence I've uncovered indicates that the Reagan administration like others before it — is afraid of what Vesco could disclose if he were actually to stand trial for his swindles. The elusive millionaire apparently knows too much about some well-known people in this country, both Republicans and Democrats.

My associate Corky Johnson and Jon Lee Anderson discovered the intricate kidnap scheme that was secretly developed last summer — and just as secretly squelched by Justice Department brass. The FBI's lips are sealed, but reliable sources say here's what happened and why.

FBI agents conducted several meetings last year with officials of the government of Costa Rica, where Vesco hid out for several years before taking refuge in Cuba. The first of the meetings was on July 29 in a hotel near the Miami airport. G-men from the Miami office discussed the proposed kidnapping with representatives of the Costa Rican vice president and officials of that country's national security agency.

The plan called for luring Vesco back into Costa Rica, where he owns a ranch, abducting him and turning him over to the FBI.

Coded telex messages from Miami FBI headquarters in Washington outlined the details of the plan. They indicated that the Costa Rican government was unofficially but enthusiastically behind the plan.

What would the Costa Rican government get for its cooperation? Reportedly several million dollars to be paid on to anti-Sandinista rebels whose presence in Costa Rica had become an embarrassment. The money presumably would have enabled the Nicaraguan guerrillas to carry their operations deeper inland into Nicaragua, away from the Costa Rican border.

When asked by my associate about the Vesco kidnap money, Eden Pastora, the designated rebel leader, only chuckled and said he welcomed any donation to his cause.

The kidnapers — who would not have been FBI agents — had lined up a helicopter and boats equipped with radios on which they were to communicate over special frequencies with the FBI.

But the Justice Department killed the plan. The conspirators were told by an FBI agent that the plot was aborted because any money funneled to Nicaraguan rebels had to be approved by the CIA, and the spy agency was not interested in bringing Vesco to book.

Further evidence of official U.S. reluctance is the report that the chief of Costa Rica's internal security refused to attend one meeting with the FBI, saying he knew the United States wasn't really interested in capturing Vesco. This squares with earlier information from Costa Rican police officials, who told me that U.S. authorities in the past have expressed little interest in Vesco beyond occasionally denouncing him.

Why wasn't the CIA interested? Costa Rican officials and friends of Vesco said he has told them he has had ongoing contact with the CIA and its director, William Casey. Vesco reportedly bragged that he even met Casey recently, and that Casey has helped him invest in the stock market.

Vesco has a habit of blowing hot air, but his associates say he was delighted when Casey was named head of the CIA.

Mondale tax plan will kill recovery, Regan insists

By Anne Saker
United Press International

President Reagan's campaign painting Walter Mondale as a free spender, marshalled Treasury Secretary Donald Regan to offer an analysis of the Democrat's promised tax increase. Regan dubbed it recessionary.

In a Washington news conference Tuesday organized by the Reagan-Bush '84 campaign committee, the treasury secretary said Mondale's pledge to cut the deficit by two-thirds in four years would require high tax increases, thereby choking off the recovery.

"One thing is painfully clear," Regan said. "Mr. Mondale's new realism is nothing more than more taxes — massive tax hikes that will force working Americans to empty their pocket books to pay for his expensive campaign promises."

"In short, while Mr. Mondale's talk may be cheap, his campaign promises are not," Regan said.

Through his press spokesman Maxine Isaacs, Mondale said, "First, they cooked their own figures. Now they're trying to cook mine."

"It's all designed to avoid responsibility for deficits of $200 billion and the fact that the Republican platform adds an additional $160 billion. It's time for them to come forward with a responsible and fair plan."

The president sounded other themes in Salt Lake City, where he addressed the 66th annual convention of the American Legion.

Earlier in Compton, Calif., Mondale charged Reagan wanted to approve a nationwide sales tax that would mean higher food and clothing costs for the average family.

Mondale also said he was "damn mad" about the unfairness of the administration's tax cuts.

Joan Mondale, campaigning for husband Walter, gets tour of a construction site in a new high school in Springfield, Mass. Tuesday.

Mondale's wife blasts Reagan public policy

NEW HAVEN — The Reagan administration has failed to support working women with public programs that "strengthen the family," Joan Mondale has charged during a visit to an inner-city day care center.

Mondale chatted with children and mothers Tuesday at the publicly funded New Haven Day Care Center before making a second campaign stop in the city with a brief tour of the prestigious Yale Art Gallery.

"Day care strengthens the family," said the wife of Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale. "In this way women can strengthen the family by working and knowing that their children are well taken care of."

"It's helping to build our future and children are our future," the Mondale-Ferraro (ticket) supporters day care and feels the government has a role to play. The Reagan administration does not support day care," she said.

Mondale said she and her husband would support the Equal Rights Amendment, especially provisions for equal pay, along with the arts and education.

She also praised the selection of Geraldine Ferraro as the Democratic nominee for vice president.

"She brings us strength, vitality and a toughness that really compli-

Congress in session with eye on voters

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With many of their jobs at stake this November, members of Congress today struggled back to try to enact essential money bills in a final one-month session likely to be dominated by political gamesmanship.

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass., and Senate Republican leader Howard Baker of Tennessee agreed to adjourn the 98th Congress for good on Oct. 4 — just two weekdays from its resumption today.

Congress is returning from a three-week break for the Republican National Convention and the Labor Day weekend.

But as Election Day draws near and the presidential candidates increase their attacks on each other, Republicans and Democrats in Congress are certain to play politics with much of the legislation pending before them.

Few members have the luxury of having no re-election campaign worries. All 435 House seats and 23 of the Senate seats will be decided on Nov. 6.

Despite entreaties from the leadership for full attendance, the midweek start today makes it virtually certain Congress will not accomplish a great deal this week. Absenteeism is expected to be heavy, especially by those in close races.

O'Neill and Baker insist they do not want to bring the lawmakers back after the election for a "lame duck" session. But to avoid that, Congress must resolve key issues and provide cash for the government to keep operating past Oct. 1, the start of fiscal 1985.

Automobile costs are out of hand

Want to save $34,000 over the next dozen years? Get rid of your car.

That's the advice from the Federal Highway Administration, which estimates it will cost that much to buy, run and insure a typical standard-size car during that time.

It's not good news for those of us who need a car to get around Manchester, and another report — from the ALA Auto & Travel Club — isn't any more encouraging.

The ALA, in its periodic study of car costs, has crowned the Hartford area the "New England Car Cost Capital," surpassing Boston. While insurance rates are higher in the Boston area, the taxes and fees in Connecticut tipped the scale, according to the ALA.

Both the feds and the ALA put out booklets designed to help car owners save money. The feds recommend buying a smaller car. The ALA, by offering average cents-per-mile figures, suggests taking a look at maintenance for better fuel efficiency and shopping around for insurance.

We have a couple of more ideas.

Roll back last year's increases in Connecticut's motor vehicle fees which, along with other discriminatory taxes, bring record surpluses in the state budget.

Care needed

If a car pool or bus isn't convenient, you'll have to drive. But it's that time of year again when motorists must take special care on the roads.

Schools opened today in Manchester and many other towns, and the school year has brought the usual, seasonal increase in pedestrians and bicyclists.

A few reminders: Drive slowly through school zones and intersections.

Look for children approaching on bicycles before opening your car door.

Never pass a stopped school bus.

Ferraro and abortion

By David E. Anderson

WASHINGTON — When Walter Mondale named Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, D-N.Y., to be his running mate on the Democratic presidential ticket, leaders of the flagging anti-abortion movement were given what one called "a peach of an opportunity."

Leaders of the divided and often in-fighting movement, aimed at overturning the 1973 Supreme Court decision making most abortions legal, believe that the selection of Ferraro may provide their grass roots troops with a motivation, heretofore lacking, to get to the polls.

But privately, leaders of a number of groups, wondered if just re-electing Reagan would light the fires needed to bring out the multitudes of volunteers and money the movement has so successfully mobilized in the past.

Ferraro, however, a Roman Catholic who supports the 1973 Court decision while remaining "personally opposed" to abortion, may do just that.

LAST YEAR, the movement suffered two major setbacks: a new Supreme Court decision basically reaffirming the 1973 ruling, and the defeat of its strongest ally, Sen. Alfonse D'Amico, in an amendment in the Senate overturning the 1973 ruling. The twin actions left the movement in something of a state of disarray and strategic confusion.

At its mid-summer meeting in Kansas City, the National Right to Life News devotes nearly half of its 16-page publication to aspects of Ferraro's and the Democrats' abortion views, calling her "the most devastating threat to unborn children since the Supreme Court unleashed the slaughter nearly 12 years ago."

Adds American Life Lobby: "Congresswoman Ferraro's pro-abortion record is one which anybody who reads the news would be proud of."

And the Christian Action Council, a Protestant evangelical anti-abortion group in a recent fund-raising letter, cites Mondale's selection of Ferraro to show "just how beholden he is to feminists (and) the spy agency was not interested in bringing Vesco to book."

Further evidence of official U.S. reluctance is the report that the chief of Costa Rica's internal security refused to attend one meeting with the FBI, saying he knew the United States wasn't really interested in capturing Vesco. This squares with earlier information from Costa Rican police officials, who told me that U.S. authorities in the past have expressed little interest in Vesco beyond occasionally denouncing him.

Libertarians come up short

HARTFORD (UPI) — The Libertarian Party submitted about 30,000 party signatures by a Tuesday deadline to get its candidates on the state's November ballot, but fell short in at least two races, the party's state chairman says.

Thomas S. Ross of Woodbridge said the party believed it submitted enough signatures to get on the ballot, but fell short in at least two races, the party's state chairman says.

The remainder of the 30,000 signatures were for congressional and legislative candidates, he said.

Ross said the party failed to gather enough signatures to get Larry Frank of the 6th District of Greenwich on the ballot for Congress in the 4th District and to get Dan of Cornwall, Bridge on the ballot in the 6th District.

Lawn housing a blow to historic mill area, says FitzGerald

By Kathy Gormus
Herald Reporter

The construction of houses on a portion of the Cheney Great Lawn in Manchester's historic mill area would "destroy the very purpose of the historic district," according to the chairman of the commission charged with preserving the district.

Judge of Probate William E. FitzGerald, chairman of the Cheney National Historic District Commission, said in a letter to Mayor Barbara B. Weinberg that the subdivision planned for an eight-acre portion of the lawn "will do serious and irreparable harm to the Historic District, and will destroy the last place in the nation where all of the principal elements of the mill owners' town still exist."

FitzGerald asked Weinberg to advise the commission what it can do to try to preserve the lawn, which is bordered by many of the mansions built by the former owners of the Cheney Brothers silk mills.

"I don't know that there's much that really could be done," Weinberg said today.

Attorney Wesley C. Gray and automobile dealer Michael B. Lynch, co-owners of the central eight acres of the lawn on Hartford Road, have submitted plans for a 14-lot subdivision on the parcel.

The plans will be heard by the Planning and Zoning Commission Monday. But if they conform to zoning and subdivision regulations concerning such matters as traffic and drainage, the commission has no choice but to approve them.

Two residential lots will be developed to build condominiums on the same portion of the lawn failed when the PZC refused to change the zoning of the land to permit condominiums.

Weinberg said the town could try to purchase the entire lawn or buy the development rights to it in an effort to stop development. Or, she said, a referendum could be held to see what voters wanted to do with the property.

The town had planned in 1981 to include purchase of the lawn as a referendum item along with a $750,000 bond issue for public improvements to the area. The question was withdrawn due to public opposition.

Weinberg admitted there was little that could be done if the developers are determined to go ahead and build homes on their land.

Last July the developers offered to sell the eight acres for $255,000 to a group of preservationists. However, the drive to raise the money failed.

Weinberg said she does not favor the use of public funds to preserve the lawn unless it could be used for recreational activities.

"I could not be supportive of buying grass for grass," she said.

FitzGerald said in his letter that there are only three landmark districts in the country.

"The federal government recognized the importance of this area when it registered it as a landmark district," he said. "That means the federal government places the Cheney District in the same category as the Boston Naval Yard and other nationally known historic sites."

State drops charges for DOT info

WEST HARTFORD (UPI) — The state has dropped felony charges against a contractor indicted in a Department of Transportation corruption probe, saying the state must focus on its employees in the trial beginning today.

Assistant State's Attorney Paul Murray said Tuesday in West Hartford Superior Court that the state agreed not to prosecute light company contractor Lowell Cantor in exchange for his full cooperation and testimony.

The prosecution's "principal interest here is with state employees whose job it is to be sure the state gets what it pays for ... that they not be out soliciting contracts for benefits they're not entitled to," said Murray.

Today's trial is the first of three separate proceedings to prosecute a current and former DOT employee who face charges of bribery, perjury, larceny and tampering with a grand jury.

Superior Court Judge Harry Hammer will preside over the trial and he was expected to deal with a number of defense motions to be submitted today.

The first trial is expected to concern a bribery scheme in which workers received kickbacks for a $104,000 state contract held by the Connecticut Lighting and Maintenance Service Co. of Millard, which Cantor partly owns.

William V. Carbone of Rocky Hill, former supervisor of DOT's concessions unit, will be the principal defendant in the trial. He also has been indicted in a second scheme, according to assistant state's attorney Paul Murray.

Cantor was accused in bribery charges of paying $500 directly to Carbone, 54, and also giving a $14,000 kickback through checks to Carbone's daughter.

It, having served with the U.S. Navy in the Pacific Theater.

Besides his wife he leaves three sons, Michael Kelley of Maxfield, Maine, Scott Kelley of Belmont, Mass., and Kevin Kelley of Manchester, three daughters, Kristen Kelley of East Hartford and Katy Kelley and Kimberly Kelley of Manchester, a brother, Francis Kelley of Lincoln, Maine, two sisters, Mrs. Betty Ann Colbatch of Howland, Maine and Mrs. Hope Altman of Agawam, Mass.: six grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

The funeral will be private. Burial will be in East Cemetery. There is no calling hours. Memorial donations may be made to the American Heart Association, 310 Collins St., Hartford.

Watkins Funeral Home, 142 E. Center St., has charge of arrangements.

Card of Thanks

My sons and I wish to express our sincere appreciation to those who contributed to the Beau Fund. Many thanks from the family of Richard C. Beau.

Stafford man charged in alleged sandpit rape

Police Tuesday arrested a Stafford Springs man, they believe raped a 17-year-old Windsor Locks woman in the sandpits off Parker Street last June.

Richard Loalbo, 24, was charged with first-degree sexual assault and first-degree kidnapping in connection with the June 28 incident.

Police were called to a house near the scene shortly after the alleged assault. They found the woman in tears, with bruises on her wrists and back and her clothes in disarray, they said.

Police also found physical evidence of a struggle at the scene, they said.

Manchester police worked with state police in Stafford Springs to identify the man, who had apparently told the woman what town he lived in, police said. The woman correctly identified Loalbo's photograph out of a group of photographs police gave her to choose from, they said.

Police are still looking for another man who the woman said was with Loalbo when he offered her a ride home outside the Hartford Civic Center in Loalbo's pickup truck the night of the incident.

Loalbo was released on a $5,000 non-surety bond after being booked Tuesday. He is scheduled to answer the charges next Monday in Manchester Superior Court.

Depot Street was charged Tuesday with stealing 15 of the company's payroll checks and writing himself more than $3,600 worth of checks, police said today.

John L. Antolini, 31, of East Hartford, was charged with three counts of sixth-degree burglary, three counts of third-degree burglary. Police said that when they arrested him, Antolini confessed to stealing payroll checks from the company and cashing several, including two for more than $300 each at a Windsor liquor store.

New England Sweeping owner Harry Cole reported that his bank, the Manchester Savings Bank, had received three of the checks from Hartford National Bank, each made out to Antolini for more than $1,000. The checks were signed by Cindy Cole, police said. There is no Cindy Cole working at the company or related to Barry Cole, they said.

Antolini told police he was a drug addict and could not control his stealing to finance his habit, they said.

He was released Tuesday on a $1,000 non-surety bond and ordered to appear in court next Monday.

Many changes greet Manchester students

In contrast, all three Catholic elementary schools in Manchester reported drops in the numbers of students signing up.

Sister Helen Hart, principal of St. Bridget School, said enrollment there has dropped to about 115 this year, down from 150.

"In particular, it's down in the seventh and eighth grades," Hart said. But she attributed the decline to a statewide trend, and said she was confident the numbers would rise again soon.

St. Bridget's is one of several schools expanding its computer program this year, but with a different twist. A once-a-week typing course is now mandatory for all its students, in grades four through eight, to acquaint them with the computer keyboard.

MOTHER MARIE ALBERTA, the new principal of Assumption Junior High School, said the student population there has dipped from about 170 to 138. But the school has added a French course and individualized reading program, which she hopes will attract more students in the future.

St. James School, with enrollment hovering near 500, is down about 20 students over last year — but some families are still signing their children up, according to Sister Louise Kelly, principal.

At East Catholic High School, enrollment is also down — intentionally. About 1,200 students have signed up at the school this year, about the number specified in a plan to relieve classroom crowding. A new roof, to replace the leaky old one, and a beefed-up graduation requirement demanding three years of math are other changes.

BUCKING THE PARACHUTIST SCHOOL trend is Carthart Christian School, which boasts a new ninth grade, four new teachers and about 115 students — over 30 more than last year.

At Howell Cheney Regional Vocational School, more girls than ever before are entering classes this year. Sixteen of the 182 freshman are female — "which doesn't sound like many, but we've been working like crazy to recruit females," said Guidance Coordinator Jerry Blanchard.

Cheney Tech has a school day that's 14 minutes longer this year, and more stringent graduation requirements as well. Students at MHS also face lighter graduation requirements than ever before — 21 credits, an extra year of math, and heavier demands in the ninth grade.

Mets starting to sink quickly in the East...

Darryl Strawberry of the Mets swings and misses here. He did sock a two-run homer in the first inning but it was all the firepower New York could come up with

By Ira Kaufman
UPI Sports Writer

The last 40 days have aged Dave Johnson 40 years.

The rookie manager of the New York Mets had his team perched pretty in the East July 27 with a 59-37 record, 4 1/2 games ahead of second-place Chicago. After his pitchers took their second straight Busch Stadium beating Tuesday night, dropping a 12-2 decision to St. Louis, Johnson found his club seven games back of the surging Cubs.

George Hendrick drove in four runs and Tom Nieto cracked a two-run homer to highlight a 17-hit attack as the Mets dropped to 77-41, giving them an 18-24 mark since their bulge over Chicago. The Cubs have won 28 of 39 games over the same span.

"They (Chicago) beat us seven in a row, what can't we beat them six in a row?" asked Johnson, who has two games in Pittsburgh before returning to Shea Stadium Friday night for a weekend series against the Cubs. "This one just got away and out of hand."

Danny Cox, 7-10, gave up four hits and struck out six over eight innings for the victory while Sid Fernandez, 4-1, took the loss, yielding seven hits and six runs before being knocked out in the fourth. On Monday night, the Cardinals lashed 11 hits in a 7-3 triumph over the Mets.

New York took a 2-0 lead in the first on Darryl Strawberry's 20th homer, but the Cardinals scored a run in their half of the inning on Hendrick's RBI double. Nieto homered in the second after Ozzie Smith walked and Hendrick's RBI single made it 4-2 in the third.

The Cardinals broke it open with five runs in the fourth on RBI singles by Tommy Her, Terry Pendleton, Hendrick and Ronnie Smith and a walk and pitch by Brent Gaff. St. Louis added three runs in the sixth on run-scoring singles by Hendrick and Lonnie Smith and David Green's forceout.

"I always felt that if the pitchers on our staff can keep their pitches down and hold them close, that will keep us in the game," Johnson said. "We would've liked to stay close to them. Things happen in a close game."

Elsewhere, Chicago beat Philadelphia 7-2. Pittsburgh defeated Montreal 5-3. Atlanta edged Houston 8-7. Cincinnati downed San Francisco 8-3 and Los Angeles nipped San Diego 2-1.

Pirates 5, Expos 3

At Montreal, Jason Thompson singled in two runs to highlight a three-run ninth that rallied the Pirates. Rod Scurry, 4-6, picked up the victory and Kent Tekulve earned his 12th save. Tony Peña, who capped the ninth with a sacrifice fly, hit his 13th homer.

Braves 8, Astros 7

At Atlanta, Dale Murphy's two-run homer tied in the seventh and Alex Trevino broke the deadlock with a leadoff homer in the eighth, hitting the Braves. Domie Moore, 4-2, got the victory and Frank DiPino, 4-8, took the loss. Jose Cruz blasted a three-run homer for the Astros.

Reds 8, Giants 3

At San Francisco, Eric Davis' second homer of the game, a three-run shot, highlighted a six-run eighth inning that lifted Cincinnati. Cincinnati's 4-7, struck out five over seven innings for the win and Greg Minton, 3-9, took the loss.

Dodgers 2, Padres 1

At Los Angeles, pinch hitter Eric Beaman lofted a bases-loaded sacrifice fly with one out at the bottom of the ninth for the Dodgers. Ken Landreaux, who homered in the first, led off the ninth with a walk off Andy Hawkins, 7-9. He stole second and continued to third on catcher Bruce Boyer's throwing error. After walks to Pedro Guerrero and Greg Brock, Beaman delivered his fly as Landreaux scored easily.

Tigers becoming unraveled as rest of East is gaining

By Joel Sherman
UPI Sports Writer

With three teams hunched within 1 1/2 games of each other in the American League West, hardly anyone has noticed the Detroit Tigers are unravelling in the East. Since their record-breaking 85-5 start, the Tigers have remained comfortably perched atop the standings. But what one week ago was a comfortable double-digit lead has been sliced to 7 1/2 games by the high-flying Toronto Blue Jays.

On Tuesday night, the Baltimore Orioles sent the Tigers to their sixth loss in seven games with a 4-1 victory. Meanwhile, Toronto won for the eighth time in its last 10 games, beating the New York Yankees 6-4.

The 7 1/2-game spread represents the closest Toronto has been to first since Aug. 14.

"You just never know what's going to happen," Baltimore catcher Rick Dempsey said after hitting a two-run homer to seal the Orioles' 13th win in their last 17 games. "You just don't give up. You get to playing ball in our division and it's too darn tough."

The defending World Champions are 12 games back in the East.

Mike Boddicker and Sammy Stewart combined on a seven-hit bid to keep the usually lout Tiger bats quiet.

"We're struggling," Detroit manager Sparky Anderson said. "We're not hitting. We haven't got one guy hitting. But in four of our five losses we could have won with one hit in the ninth inning."

Recently, the Blue Jays fly into Detroit for a three-game weekend series with the Tigers.

I am surprised we are this far back," said Collins. "We have played as well as they have, but their 3-5 start is the difference."

Jim Clancy, 11-13, went 7-2-3 innings for the triumph and Jimmy Key pitched the ninth for his eighth save. Mike Armstrong, 3-1, was the loser.

Royals 4, Twins 1

At Kansas City, Mo., Frank White celebrated his 34th birthday with a tie-breaking single in the sixth and Dan Quisenberry earned his 57th save to propel the Royals to within a game of the Twins. Mark Gubicza, 10-11, was the winner and Ken Schrom, 4-8, was the loser.

Mariners 6, Rangers 3

At Arlington, Texas, Al Cowens ripped an RBI double to break a 3-3 tie and the Mariners added two more runs in the 11th inning en route to their seventh straight victory in Arlington Stadium. Bob Stoddard, 5-3, got the victory and Dave Getsel registered his first save. Dave Schmidt, 6-6, was the loser.

White Sox 12, A's 2

At Chicago, Greg Walker hit two three-run homers and Tom Seaver notched his 28th career victory to lead the White Sox in a game that lasted 83 minutes at the start by rain. Seaver, 13-9, yielded six hits over eight innings. Steve McCatty, 7-13, took the loss. Walker's six RBI was a career-high.

... as Cubs continue surge

By Joe Juliano
UPI Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA — The Chicago Cubs didn't sound like the guys who had just reduced the contenders for the National League East title by one team.

But with the Philadelphia Phillies having six more games to play against the New York Mets, the last team with a shot at disrupting Chicago's Cinderella run, you could tell the Cubs didn't want to anger any of them.

"This is no time to get cocky," Scott Sanderson said Tuesday night after pitching the Cubs to a 7-2 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies from repeating as division champions.

"The Mets and the Phillies still are good teams and they'll give us competition until the end of the season. You're not going to hear any irrational statements from this club. If not think anyone on the Phillies is going to give up. They have too much talent. They've got a guy who wins the division."

If they (the Phillies) believe that (they are eliminated), that's all that really matters," said Ron Cey, the Cubs' hitting hero with three RBI. "But we're not concerned with that because we have 24 games left. We have to keep things in perspective."

From the top of the NL East, the Cubs have a perspective that keeps getting better by the day. They begin a series tonight in Montreal with a seven-game lead over the Mets and a 10 1/2-game bulge over the Phillies, and show no signs of slowing down.

With five games left on their 11-game road trip, the Cubs are 4-1. They have won't claim that their team was closing closer after back-to-back wins over the Phillies.

"I wouldn't say that. I don't want to get anybody mad at me," the Chicago manager said. "Things can happen so fast, like one or two guys getting hurt or sick. Things can turn around like that. What we have to do is mind our own business and not worry about other clubs."

The Phillies, who have 25 games remaining to 24 for the Cubs, must go 20-3 and hope Chicago loses 15-of-24 in order to tie for the division.

"My team won't give up, they'll keep battling." Manager Paul Owens said. "But the Cubs have been hot for a month and a half. They're not going to get dangerous. They've got guys who have been there before."

Philadelphia got 13 hits off Sanderson but needed an error by the 28-year-old right-hander in the ninth to push across two unearned runs. The Phillies had 11 hits and stranded 12 runners in the first eight innings.

"When we scored seven runs off (Steve) Carlton, they had to be down a little bit and it made my job easier," said Sanderson, who won his first game since July 29. "I wasn't trying to be tricky. They got the hits so it wasn't like I was fooling them. Fortunately, they didn't hit any in the gaps, down the lines or over the wall."

Sanderson struck out seven and walked one.

Cey hit his 22th homer of the season, and sixth off Phillies pitching, in the first inning of Game 11.

Dave Lopes, making his first start since being obtained last Friday from Oakland, doubled and Gary Matthews singled him home before scoring ahead of Cey's blast.

Cey added an RBI single, following walks to Matthews and Ken Marzullo, to touch off a four-run sixth. Gary Woods had an RBI double, Leon Durban a run-scoring single and Sanderson a sacrifice fly in the inning.

Dominic Squatrito to join list in sports hall of fame

By Eeri Vest
Sports Editor Emeritus

It's been 52 years since Dominic Squatrito's life was snuffed out in an automobile accident at Bolton Notch, but his memory lives as one of the greatest — if not the greatest — athlete in Manchester history.

Squatrito, who was killed a month before graduation ceremonies, completes the list of five recipients to the Manchester Sports Hall of Fame for the Sept. 28 induction dinner at the Army and Navy Club.

Honored along with Squatrito will be former boxer and current boxing referee Sam Maltampo, former American League baseball coach Wally Fortin, ex-pro baseball player Ed Wojcik, and the late Tommy Sipples of baseball fame.

Squatrito was only 18 on that eventful Friday, May 18 after playing in college.

Squatrito was rated one of the top shuttlers in the nation, and a possible USA Olympian in that specialty.

Football was the sport Squatrito attracted the most attention. He was a pile-driving fullback, a good passer, a rough tough defensive performer, and capable of going all the way into the end zone when his play was called. He also handled the extra point attempts via placekicks.

In baseball, Squatrito, when not busy with the track team, played catcher for the Manchester High. While he couldn't find time to play tennis in school, Squatrito was also a better than average player and a strong swimmer, often exhibiting his talents in town swim competition. A certified lifeguard, he also was a brilliant gymnast.

The class of 1932 dedicated its annual home yearbook issue to Squatrito, the first time a student was ever honored.

Squatrito was full testimony of his impact on the community. St. James Church was filled to capacity and the funeral procession led up Main Street, with traffic for more than a half hour.

Dorn Squatrito was a legend in his time and his name, and feats on the athletic field remain part of Manchester. He was a super athlete whose potential had barely surfaced when death came prematurely.

Sports In Brief

Pistons retain Tripucka

PONTIAC, Mich. — Forward Kelly Tripucka and backup guard Vinnie Johnson had big smirks today with Tripucka saying he felt like he had just won the lottery.

The two free agents Tuesday inked contracts with the Detroit Pistons, who dug deep into their pockets to match a 7-year, $6.3 million offer Tripucka had received from the Cleveland Cavaliers and the 3-year, $1.5 million New York Knicks offered Johnson.

The Pistons had until the end of this week to match the offers.

Cowboys lose Hill

DALLAS — Dallas Coach Tom Landry said Tuesday wide receiver Tony Hill, who separated his right shoulder during the Cowboys' 20-13 victory over the Los Angeles Rams Monday night, would be lost to the team for from four to six weeks.

Having traded away veteran Butch Johnson during the offseason and having lost Drew Pearson to retirement, the Cowboys now have just one wide receiver — Doug Donley — who played for the club in 1983.

The only other healthy wide receivers now on the roster are veteran Mike Renfro, obtained from Houston in the trade for Butch Johnson, and free agent rookie Kirk Phillips.

La Vie Claire signs LeMond

PARIS — American cyclist Greg LeMond has signed a $1 million three-year contract to ride for the La Vie Claire team next season, team owner Bernard Tapie said Tuesday.

LeMond, the 1983 world road race champion who finished third at this year's Tour de France for the Renault team, was the first of several top cyclists reported to have been offered lucrative contracts by La Vie Claire, a French health food producer.

Hamsko now an American

NEW YORK — Mustafa Hamsko, who will fight champion Marvelous Marvin Hagler for the world middleweight championship at Madison Square Garden on Oct. 19, Tuesday was sworn in as an American citizen.

Hamsko, who will be 31 on Oct. 10, came to the United States at the age of 17 from his native Syria.

Ripken Player of Week

NEW YORK — Cal Ripken Jr. of the Baltimore Orioles has been named American League Player of the Week for the period of Aug. 27-Sept. 2, it was announced Tuesday.

Ripken had 12 hits in 22 at-bats, including four homers and two doubles, and compiled a batting average of .545 and a slugging percentage of 1.182. It marked the second time this year that Ripken has been named Player of the Week honors.

Runners-up to Ripken in the voting were Buddy Bell of Texas, who hit .450, and George Bell of Toronto, who batted .444.

Ozzie Smith suspended

ST. LOUIS — Shortstop Ozzie Smith of the St. Louis Cardinals has been fined and suspended 10 games and suspended 30 days for bumping umpire Steve Rippley in last Saturday night's game with the Houston Astros.

Smith has appealed the suspension but no date has been set for the hearing. Smith is allowed to continue playing until his appeal is heard.

The incident occurred as the Cardinals were coming off the field in the seventh inning of their 8-4 loss to the Astros. Smith said something to Rippley, who then ejected the shortstop. Smith charged Rippley and bumped the umpire, knocking him to the ground.

Falcons revise roster

SUWANEE, Ga. — The Atlanta Falcons placed three players on injured reserve Tuesday and added three other players to the roster following their 36-28 victory over the New Orleans Saints Sunday.

Placed on injured reserve were linebacker Dave Levenick, running back Richard Williams and center Dan Dufour. Levenick and Williams suffered hamstring injuries and Dufour sustained a groin injury.

The Falcons signed running backs Rodney Tate and Cliff Austin and offensive lineman Joe Pellegrini. Tate was the Bengals' fourth round pick in 1982. Austin was the Saints' third pick in 1982. Pellegrini played with the New York Jets in 1982 and 1983.

Millions raised by torch relay

LOS ANGELES — Nearly $11 million was raised for charity by the cross-country Olympic torch relay that brought Americans from their homes to flag-waving positions alongside the nation's roads, officials said Tuesday.

The chief beneficiaries of the 82-day run to benefit the nation's youth were the YMCA, Special Olympics, and Boys and Girls Clubs of America.

Mets recall Mitchell, Gardner

ST. LOUIS — The New York Mets Tuesday recalled third baseman Kevin Mitchell and pitcher Wes Gardner from Tidewater, their Triple-A affiliate in the International League.

Both will be activated in time for Tuesday night's game with the St. Louis Cardinals. Mitchell batted .244 for the Tides this season. Gardner, who played in 13 games for the Mets this season, made 52 appearances for Tidewater with the 1-1 record. The right-hander also led the IL with 20 saves. Gardner was 1-1 with one save in a brief stint with New York.

Carr to sign with Hawks

WICHITA, Kan. — Antoine Carr, a former Wichita State basketball star, Tuesday said he plans to sign with the Atlanta Hawks in two or three days.

Carr was drafted by the Detroit Pistons in 1983. But he and the club could not agree on a contract and Carr played in the Italian League during the 1983-84 season.

New GM for Expos

MONTREAL — The Montreal Expos will have a new general manager within two days, GM John McHale said Tuesday night.

McHale confirmed a story published Tuesday in the Montreal Gazette that said he would relinquish his post by the end of the week.

Canada Cup tournament international hockey getting closer

By Randy Storkman
UPI Sports Writer

If the first two rounds of the Canada Cup tournament are any indication, the gap is closing between hockey's superpowers.

Practical powerhouse Soviet Union edged Sweden 3-2 in Calgary, Alberta Tuesday night, while heavily-favored Czechoslovakia had to rally from a 2-0 deficit to salvage a 4-4 tie with West Germany in their game at London, Ontario.

The games, following a 4-4 deadlock Monday night between Canada and the underdog United States, seem to indicate a trend toward parity in international hockey.

"In this tournament, all teams are at a strong level," said Soviet coach Victor Tikhonov. "The score of the Czech-German game might have been because of a psychological factor."

The Soviets are the only team to win both their games of the round-robin event. Canada and the U.S. are tied for second at 1-0-1. West Germany and Czechoslovakia are deadlocked for fourth at 0-1-1, while Sweden is last at 0-2.

In third-round action Thursday night, Canada faces Sweden in Vancouver, British Columbia, the Soviets play West Germany in Edmonton, Alberta and the Czechoslovaks meet the U.S. in Buffalo, N.Y.

The Czechoslovaks, who have led the tight confines of the North American rink extremely stilling, will get little respite at Buffalo's Memorial Auditorium, an arena not known for its spacious ice surface.

"Now, we play the U.S. in Buffalo. It's the smallest ice in the NHL," said Czechoslovakian coach Ludek Bukac, whose club dropped two pre-tournament games to Canada and Sweden.

"We must be able to play on a small rink, as well as a big rink. If we want to be in the semifinals, we have to beat the U.S. and Canada," said coach Vladim Burda.

Bukac felt the size of the surface at London Garden played a large factor in Tuesday night's game.

"The smaller ice is a big advantage to West Germany," he said. "They can't skate with us. We're the only team to play West Germany in London."

The West Germans, who lost star centerman Erich Kuhnsackl and ace defenseman Harold Krets to injuries before the series began, were expected to go pointless in their first Canada Cup tournament. They were thumped 7-2 by Canada in their opening game.

But sparked by Helmut Steiger's two goals and Karl Friesen's dazzling play in the nets, West Germany shocked Czechoslovakia in jumping out to a 3-0 lead in the first period.

After Czechoslovakia rallied to tie it, the West Germans took a 4-3 lead on a power play at 14:17 of the second period. Ernst Huftner, who assisted on both of Steiger's goals, converted a deft passing play with linemate Franz Reindel. However, the Czechoslovaks scored with 1:36 remaining to earn the tie. Peter Rosol, stationed to the right of the net, deflected a shot in mid-air by defenseman Eduard Uvira into the top corner past Friesen.

At Calgary, forward Sergei Svetlov scored twice to lead the Soviet Union to victory.

"This was one of the hardest games for us," said Tikhonov. "I am satisfied with the score but not of the team. It was a very difficult game for us as Sweden played with emotion."

"It was a very good game from their forwards and defense. Sweden performed very good but we had more luck."

Swedish coach Leif Borevic made a differing view.

"I'm satisfied with the play of my team but not the result. Emotionally, we deserved a point," said Borevic, whose club was bounced 7-1 by the U.S. in their series opener.

Jam session

Want strawberries on toast in February? It's easy but act now

By Barbara Richmond
Herald Reporter

I love a good jam session — in the kitchen kind, that is, with bowls of fruit and berries and sterilized jars.

I can't resist making a batch of jam or marmalade whenever I find myself with enough fresh fruit on hand. My freezer is full — I make mostly freezer jams because they retain the full flavor of the fruit, as well as maintaining the natural color.

Of course, there's another reason I like freezer jams: there's no stirring over a hot stove and no paraffin wax to melt and pour.

The common strawberry, raspberry and peach jams are always good. I struck gold this year when a friend of the family let me loo-see in her raspberry patch. At the price raspberries were selling on the stands, I figure I picked about $20 worth in less than an hour.

The peaches are especially good this year. There too, I'm fortunate in having a peach orchard practically in my back yard.

Every year I try to make at least a couple of new and different jams or marmalades.

One I tried for the first time this year is for three-fruit citrus marmalade. It doesn't call for any fruit pectin and only calls for one and a third cups of sugar. This can be kept in the refrigerator for up to six weeks or can be frozen for longer storage. It's the perfect topping for toast, biscuits or English muffins. It's even good on ice cream. The food processor comes in very handy for chopping the fruits, skin and all.

Although the fresh chutney season has gone by, don't forget to make some chutney jam next year. Combined with orange, raisins, and some spices, this is ideal to use as an accompaniment with poultry, lamb, ham or fish. It also keeps in the refrigerator for several weeks.

A couple of other new ones I've tried recently are ginger grapefruit marmalade and peach-orange conserve.

These tasty treats are used for gifts at Christmas and throughout the year as hostess gifts.

To go with the jams I've made a big basket full of pretty cellophane "bites" to put on the jars. They're almost as much fun to make as the jam. Make and enjoy some of the following favorites — your friends and family will love you.

Strawberry-Orange Marmalade

1 pint ripe strawberries
2 medium oranges
2 cups water
3½ cups sugar
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 pinch fruit pectin

The prepared fruit should measure 2½ cups. Stem and thoroughly crush the strawberries, one layer at a time, and measure 1 cup. Section 2 medium oranges, reserving 2 cups. Peel, dice sections and measure 1 cup. Peel off and discard about half the white membrane from orange peel; slice very thin with sharp knife or scissors. Place sliced peel and ¾ cup water in small saucepan. Bring to a boil; reduce heat, cover and simmer for 15 minutes. Combine peel with liquid, the orange sections and strawberries in large bowl. Thoroughly mix the sugar into the fruit. Let stand 10 minutes. Add lemon juice to fruit pectin in small bowl. Stir into fruit. Continue stirring for 2 minutes. A few sugar crystals will remain. Ladle quickly into sterilized containers. Cover at once with tight lids. Let stand at room temperature for 24 hours and then store in freezer. Makes about 6 jars of marmalade.

Peach-Orange Conserve

1 orange
1½ cups prepared peaches
2 tablespoons finely chopped nuts
3 tablespoons chopped maraschino cherries
2 tablespoons lemon juice
¼ cup sugar
1 box powdered pectin

Grate 2 teaspoons rind from 1 orange. Section orange, dice the sections and measure ¼ cup. Peel, pit and grind or finely chop about ¼ pounds peaches. Measure 1½ cups into large bowl or pan. Add orange rind and sections, nuts, cherries and lemon juice. Thoroughly mix sugar into fruit mixture. Let stand 10 minutes. Mix water and

Three-Fruit Marmalade

2 medium oranges
¼ medium grapefruit
1 medium lemon
3 cups water
1 and one-third cups sugar
Wash and quarter fruit.

College football poll

Miami vaults into the lead

By Dave Roffo
UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK — The defending champion Miami Hurricanes, who knocked off two ranked teams within six days last week, vaulted three places into the No. 1 spot in the UPI Board of Coaches' ratings.

Miami received 30 of a possible 35 first-place votes and 513 points to take a comfortable lead over No. 2 Nebraska (415), No. 3 Texas (437), No. 4 UCLA (430) and No. 5 Clemson (311).

Nebraska received four first-place votes. Teams receive 15 points for first-place votes, 14 for second, etc.

Miami claimed the top spot after running its non-leading winning streak to 18 games with victories over pre-season No. 1 Auburn and Florida. The Hurricanes edged Auburn 20-18 and topped Florida, ranked 14th in pre-season, 32-20.

Auburn fell to sixth in the ratings, followed by No. 7 Penn State, No. 8 Ohio State, No. 9 Michigan and No. 10 Oklahoma.

Rounding out the Top 20 are No. 11 Alabama, No. 12 Brigham Young, No. 13 Arizona State, No. 14 Iowa, which received one first-place vote, No. 15 Notre Dame, No. 16 Boston College, No. 17 Southern Methodist, No. 18 Washington, No. 19 Florida State and No. 20 Pittsburgh.

Boston College scored four spots after a 44-24 win over Western Carolina. Miami and Clemson, a 40-7 winner over Appalachian State last Saturday, each jumped three places. BYU, unranked in pre-season, vaulted to 12th after a 20-14 upset over Pittsburgh. Florida State also crashed the ratings this week following a 48-17 blowout of East Carolina.

Pitt took the biggest fall, slipping 13 spots from its No. 7 pre-season rating. Florida dropped out of the ratings along with several others, which was 19th in pre-season and hasn't played yet.

In games pitting ranked teams against each other this week, Michigan host Miami and Alabama meets Boston College at Birmingham. Alabama will be Miami's third game against a ranked team in 12 days.

Including Michigan and Alabama, 11 Top 20 teams open their seasons this Saturday. Nebraska hosts Wyoming, UCLA visits San Diego State, Penn State hosts Rutgers, Ohio State hosts Oregon State, Oklahoma hosts Stanford, Arizona State hosts Oklahoma State, Iowa hosts Iowa State, Notre Dame plays Purdue at Indianapolis and Washington hosts Northwestern.

Also, Clemson visits Virginia and Brigham Young hosts Baylor.

The Pac-10 and Big Ten are the most well-represented conferences in the Top 20 with three teams each. UCLA, Arizona State and Washington represent the Pac-10 while Ohio State, Michigan and Iowa are from the Big 10. Miami is one of six independents in the ratings.

Spinks title bout can't be saved

RENO, Nev. (UPI) — Those looking forward to a rematch between light heavyweight champion Michael Spinks and Dwight Muhammad Qawi will have to wait longer.

Efforts to salvage Friday's title defense for Spinks fell through Tuesday when promoters could not line up a substitute fight because of television commitments.

Promoter Butch Lewis said KATZ television network could not work out arrangements in such a short span with network affiliates and sponsors. Television would have produced a major share of the revenue for the promotion.

Qawi pulled out of the fight after complaining he aggravated an old shoulder injury. He flew back to Camden, N.J., without taking the required physical examination last week.

Lewis had tried to line up No. 2 challenger Willie Edwards of Detroit, who had a 18-1 record with 11 knockouts. Edwards had been scheduled to fight on the undercard.

Fight officials said putting in a substitute would involve considerably less revenue guarantees for the fight. It also would require reprinting of tickets, refunds, and leave the financial base of the fight up in the air.

Lewis said the substitute was acceptable to the Nevada Athletic Commission "but there was simply not time enough to make the arrangements."

Sam Macias, chairman of the Nevada Athletic Commission, said he would recommend to all world boxing federations that Qawi be suspended and dropped from the ratings.

"He (Qawi) failed to take the required physical so I feel he should be suspended and removed from all ratings," said Macias. He said the commission will meet the week of Sept. 20 and "I expect the commission will go along with my recommendation."

Lewis agreed with Macias that Qawi should be suspended.

The actions of Qawi are unheard of and inexcusable. He should be suspended and removed from the world ratings.

"There will never be a Spinks-Qawi number two fight," said Lewis.

Celebrations at a minimum in NFL thanks to new rule

By Joel Sherman
UPI Sports Writer

While the NFL rule change receiving the most notice this year is the prohibition of on-field celebrations, another new rule could provide more reason for offensive jubilation.

Referees will be accessing five-yard penalties for every "California Quake" and "Fun Bunch" shimmey performed in 1984. But no longer will they be dropping yellow flags when offensive players extend their arms on running plays.

These are two of nine rule changes being implemented in 1984.

"This is going to mean that you can be in good position to make a tackle and a guy can just push you," Edwards said. "It's going to lead to a lot of fights. When you're going to help up with something to help us poor defensive players? Bring back the head slap."

Additional rule changes for 1984: — allow linebackers to wear jersey numbers in the 90s. — make it illegal for defenders to take a running start from beyond the line of scrimmage to block an extra point or field goal.

— penalize a punter, kicker or holder for unsportsmanlike conduct for faking being tugged.

In this domain Aunt I didn't want the easygoing, unassuming cook sharing the territory with me. I mean, I was facile. It's a recipe called Campbell's tomato soup. I was afraid to buy the Shop-Ette brand."

FOR TUNNEL, she was more comfortable with her role by the time David, now a junior at Wesleyan University, started asking questions.

"He always wanted to know just what I was doing and I always told him. Pretty soon he was helping with the chopping and then, in his last years of high school, he was doing a lot of the cooking," she said.

David credits his mother with kindling some of his cooking enthusiasm, but he also gives credit to the home economics course he took at Fillingimor High School. "I chose cooking and all of a sudden, I was doing cakes for all sorts of occasions," David said.

As a college student he has little time for cooking, but he still enjoys baking grainy breads. Meanwhile, his 14-year-old sister, Linda, has taken over the chef's role and chopping board.

"She amazes me because she's another one of these intuitive cooks," Mrs. Gorman said. "She will depart from a recipe, she will combine two recipes, and she will come up with something entirely new. She's now the primary recipe collector in this family. She makes a beeline for the Wednesday newspapers, so she can see the recipes. She's one of those people who can read through a recipe and know if the family will enjoy it or not."

Linda herself was remarkably quiet during this monologue, looking down in embarrassed silence at her plate of chine date cake.

Advice

White weddings are sins and salvation for readers

DEAR ABBY: I was disappointed in your answer to "Perplexed," who refused to be her friend's maid of honor because she didn't approve of her friend's lifestyle.

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

Why did you have to go and say, "Church weddings are not for virgins only?" I think it's terrible the way some girls sleep with every Tom, Dick and Harry, then get married in white wedding gowns and veils.

AN INDIANA CHRISTIAN DEAR CHRISTIAN: I'm sure there are many who would agree with you, but here's a Christian who does not.

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from "Perplexed." She didn't want to be maid of honor at her best friend's wedding because the friend wanted a church wedding with all the trimmings and she was presently living with her fiancé.

Be sure there's no chance before you stop the Pill

DEAR DR. LAMB - I am 50 and resumed taking birth-control pills three years ago. They never bothered me before, but now my periods have been getting closer and closer and I get more migraine headaches at the end of each period.

Your Health Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

My doctor says I must get pregnant, so I keep taking the Pill. This is a second marriage and I have never been pregnant. My first marriage was not sexually satisfying, but this one really is. I am not in a position to support a child and, at 50, do not wish to become pregnant anyway.

headaches and take birth-control pills do not prove that the pills cause them. Of course, this can be the case - but migraines are frequent enough and the use of the Pill common enough that a woman may have both, even if they aren't related.

Supermarket Shopper

It may be just 'bad buy' but write to the company

By Martin Sloane United Feature Syndicate

The supermarket freezer cases are bursting with new deluxe main dishes and dinners and the colorful photos on the packaging make them very tempting. But what would you do if the Classic Lite Dinner you purchased didn't contain any of the croccoli it was supposed to?

This is exactly what happened to Irene Mattson of Jacksonville, Fla., and she decided to write. She told the Armour Co. how disappointed she was and said she wouldn't buy the dinners again until they improved.

It didn't take long for Armour to respond. "Comments from users of our products, favorable or otherwise, are always helpful," wrote Mary Webber, Armour consumer representative.

There are occasions when a product comes with something that is more than you bargained for. Eva Harriman of Kodak, Tenn., says she opened a can of Star-Kist tuna and spotted a large, flat bone chip.

Eva felt this was a problem that the company should know about, so she wrote to the Star-Kist people even though her husband told her the letter would probably not be read.

I sent my letter to the address on the label. I explained the problem. I was straightforward, yet polite. Imagine my surprise when, three weeks later, I received a letter of apology. Attached to the letter was not one, but two coupons for free cans of Star-Kist tuna. It's great to know that manufacturers really do care about consumers. I will always use Star-Kist," says Eva.

The two wire rings that Linda Dziuban of Poughkeepsie, N.Y., found in her Swift Premium turkey roast weren't intended as a bonus. They weren't supposed to be there at all, and Swift responded to Linda's letter with an apology, a coupon for a free turkey roast and a check for $4.50.

DEAR DR. LAMB - Several years ago I had a growth cut off my lower lip. Since then, I have occasionally had a little white spot an inch or so from the growth. It appears in a few days. Lately it comes more often and doesn't go away for long. The doctor says it is leukoplakia and wants to remove it with surgery. I suggested burning it off, but he said, "Then we wouldn't know what it was." Do you think it would hurt to remove it by burning it off?

DEAR READER - Your doctor is right. A leukoplakia is a white spot that is precancerous. They are tricky. It is very important to establish the diagnosis in order to provide the proper treatment. What looks like a leukoplakia may already be a cancer. In that case, you need to be sure that all of the area is adequately removed. Your doctor could biopsy the area, but then you would still have to do something about removing the rest of it, and since it is small, surgery is probably wise.

You should ask why these are occurring. Irritation from ill-fitting dentures can be a factor. So can poor oral hygiene, but, if you are a pipe smoker, if there is an identifiable factor, it should be eliminated, particularly with your history.

Thoughts

In yesterday's thought column, I drew some parallels between breaking ground for planting and supporting new life and the "brokenness" that we experience in our daily lives. To continue this parallel between the cycle of growth for plants and the cycles of our lives, I would like to look today at the next step of the process, the planting.

A few years ago, a farmer friend of mine commented that if corn prices did not change during the coming year, he would only break even on his crops after paying for seed, fuel for his equipment, irrigation, and that was not providing that it was a good year for his crops with none of the major weather problems that always break ground for planting and supporting new life and the "brokenness" that we experience in our daily lives.

Henry Chung says chow mein isn't that hard to make

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Voronovitch of 38 Liberty St. enjoy the shrimp chow mein at the House of Chung for some time, but they hesitate to try making such a complicated dish at home.

Today's Special

Nancy Pappas

Here is the House of Chung's shrimp chow mein recipe. The quantities of vegetables - and even the varieties chosen - can be changed based on what is in season.

Shrimp Chow Mein

- 1 cup mung bean sprouts, cleaned
1 cup sliced onion
1 cup sliced celery
1 to 2 cups chopped bok choy or nappa (see note below)
1 cup cleaned fresh snowpeas
1/2 cup sliced water chestnuts
1/2 cup sliced fresh mushrooms
1 pound shrimp
3 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 clove garlic, pressed

- Salt and pepper to taste
1 to 1 1/2 cups chicken broth
1/2 cup cornstarch dissolved in 1/2 cup water
2 tablespoons sesame oil (optional, see note below)
2 to 3 tablespoons soy sauce, or to taste
Prepare all vegetables as indicated on ingredient list and set aside on a work tray.

Clean shrimp. Heat oil in a very large skillet or in a wok. The oil must be extremely hot for successful Chinese cooking - preferably just below the smoking stage.

Add the shrimp. If the oil is hot enough, you'll hear a tremendous amount of noisy sizzling. Stir fry for about a minute - that means flipping with a spatula, so that all parts of the shrimp come into contact with the hot surface of the pan. Add all the vegetables. Ideally, the sizzling would continue, but in truth this quantity will slow down the cooking, since you're going to be using a domestic stove.

In a restaurant, the heat can be turned up so high that even this great a quantity of vegetables will not cause the temperature of the pan to lower significantly.

Stir and flip the vegetables a few times, continuing to use a spatula. Add the cornstarch, cook until everything is as tender as you wish, but do not overcook. This is Chinese food, not a vegetable soup, that you are preparing.

Give the cornstarch-and-water mixture a big stir and pour it into the pan. Cook until the mixture comes to a boil and clears - about three minutes. Season to taste with the sesame oil and soy sauce. Go easy on the soy sauce, says Chung. It's not only very high in sodium, it also darkens the dish.

Serves three, with rice. This should really be served as soon as it's prepared. Note: Mung bean sprouts and fresh snowpeas are now available in the Oriental areas of many supermarkets fruit pectin in small saucepan. Bring to a full boil and boil 1 minute, stirring constantly. Stir into fruit. Continue stirring for 3 minutes. A few crystals will remain. Ladle quickly into scalded containers. Cover at once with tight lids. Let stand at room temperature for 4 hours; then store in freezer. Makes about 5 1/2 cups or about 6 containers.

Now is the time for a jam session

Ginger Grapefruit Marmalade

- 3 medium white grapefruit
6 cups water
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1 medium lemon
2 cups sugar
1/2 teaspoon ground ginger

Cut the peel on one grapefruit, into quarter sections and carefully remove without breaking sections. Set grapefruit aside. Cut peel sections in half, crosswise. Pack into bottom of food chure of processor, cut side down. Position disc in bowl with slicing side up. Slice the peel. Repeat with remaining pieces.

Transfer to heavy 8-quart pot. Stir in 3 cups of the water and the baking soda. Cover and simmer for 20 minutes. Drain and return peel to the pot. Peel the other two grapefruit and the lemon. Discard the peel. Break grapefruit (all of them) into sections. Remove seeds and excess membrane. Quarter and seed lemon. Position knife blade in processor bowl.

Add 1 cup grapefruit, process to chop finely. Add to pot and repeat with remaining fruit. Add the other 3 cups of water, 3 cups sugar and the ginger to the pot and stir to mix. Bring to a boil over medium heat. Do not cover pot. Boil, stirring frequently, until thickened, about 1 hour.

Test fruit mixture to see if it is thick enough by adding 1 teaspoon to small custard cup. Place in refrigerator to cool for 3 minutes, then check. Marmalade should be jelled and clear. Pour into hot

Rhubarb Conserve

- 1 cup walnuts
6 large stalks rhubarb
Boiling water
1 medium orange, cut into 8 pieces
1/2 cup raisins
2 cups sugar
1/2 cup white vinegar
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon ground cloves

Position knife blade in processor bowl. Add nuts; pulse to chop medium fine. Transfer to small mixing bowl. Still using knife blade, slice rhubarb. As the fruit reaches the fill level, empty into heavy 6-quart pot. Cover rhubarb with boiling water; allow to stand for 3 minutes. Drain and return to 6-quart pot. Using knife blade in bowl, add orange pieces and raisins. Process to chop, about 15 seconds. Add to rhubarb. Add the sugar, vinegar, cinnamon and cloves to rhubarb. Stir together.

Simmer, stirring occasionally, until thick, about 50 minutes. Stir in nuts. Will keep several weeks in refrigerator.

Freezer Strawberry or Raspberry 2 cups crushed fresh strawberries
4 cups sugar
1/2 teaspoon grated lime peel
2 tablespoons lime juice
1/2 bottle liquid pectin

Wash, drain and hull and crush the strawberries or fresh red raspberries; add the sugar and lime peel, mixing thoroughly. Let mixture stand at room temperature for 10 minutes. Combine fruit juice with liquid pectin; stir into fruit mixture, continuing to stir for 3 minutes. Pour into clean containers; cover with tight-fitting lids. Let stand at room temperature for 24 hours. If jam doesn't set, refrigerate until it does and then store in freezer. Fresh peaches may also be substituted. Remove skins before crushing peaches.

Lime chicken is a delicacy from the tropics

By Aileen Claire NEA Food Editor

- 1 lemon, lime and other citrus fruits have been used in cooking for generations by those in southern climates and the tropics.
1 teaspoon flour
1/2 cup water
3 tablespoons freshly squeezed lime juice (about 2 limes)
1/2 teaspoon sugar
1 lime, thinly sliced

Wash chicken and pat dry. In large skillet, heat oil. Brown chicken pieces well on all sides, turning often. It will take about 30 minutes over medium heat for well-cooked chicken.

Search ends for Sound pilot

BRIDGEPORT — The U.S. Coast Guard has suspended the search for the pilot of a small airplane which crashed in Long Island Sound while enroute from Palm Beach, Fla., to Connecticut.
The Coast Guard Tuesday called off the search for August H. Massey, 51, of Lantana, Fla., the owner of Bridgeport Flight Service, who was flying from Palm Beach, Fla., Monday to Sikorsky Memorial Airport in Stratford, officials said.
Massey was presumed dead, officials said.
The aircraft was reported missing about 8:14 p.m. Monday, when it dropped off radar eight miles outside of Bridgeport on its approach to Sikorsky.
Debris, believed to be remains from the plane, was found by searchers shortly after 10 p.m.

State sets reward in slaying

HARTFORD — The state is offering a $20,000 reward for information leading to the killer of a Seymour woman whose body was found last month in a Southbury lake, the governor's office said today.
Gov. William A. O'Neill authorized the reward in the death of Joyce Stochmal, 19, whose body was found Aug. 7 in the upper end of Lake Zoar. The chief state medical examiner's office ruled the death a homicide.
Waterbury State Attorney John A. Connelly, in a letter to O'Neill, said he had discussed the case with state police and they agreed a reward should be offered.

Boy missing; foul play unlikely

GREENWICH — Police say they don't believe foul play was involved in the disappearance of a 13-year-old boy dependent over the recent death of his grandfather.
Police said Tuesday Matthew Margolis, who was last seen Friday fishing near a stream next to his home, may be hiding in the woods.
"There's nothing new that would indicate the boy ran away, or was abducted or was drowned," Capt. Albert Barclay of the Greenwich Police Department said Tuesday. "There's nothing to indicate foul play."
Police Monday called off ground searches near the youth's home after some 40 police and volunteers using dogs and divers combed the Byram River area where Matthew was seen fishing, but found no trace of the youth.

Baby's progress 'remarkable'

HARTFORD — Doctors say a 16-month-old baby who underwent a second liver transplant in 12 days was making "remarkable" progress in her uphill battle for recovery.
Laura Lebel was in critical but stable condition at Hartford Hospital where on Sunday she received the liver of a Miami, Fla. child who died of head injuries from an accident.
"She had a really good night," said hospital spokesman James D. Battaglio. "The physicians are pleased with the stability even though she is still critical," he added.
Laura's doctors described her progress as remarkable but were concerned about a bacterial infection she had developed. "She is a fighter," Battaglio said Tuesday.

Delays continue at bridge

NORWALK — Morning rush commuters and truckers today endured a second day of detours and delays of an hour and more as crews worked to reinforce weakened hangers on a busy Connecticut Turnpike bridge.
The traffic nightmare, caused by the restriction of traffic to two lanes in each direction of the Yankee Doodle Bridge, began Tuesday after a relatively congestion-free Labor Day holiday.
Trucks, banned entirely from the 900-foot long bridge, were detoured at Exit 13 onto Route 1 where they were virtually parked for several hours, state police said.
Auto drivers found a little better but still dragged for miles as they crept over the span, allowed to bypass the 35-cent toll at the Norwalk plaza in each direction.

More arrests in 1984

Police praise holiday crackdown

By United Press International
State police say a crackdown on reckless and drunken drivers during the Labor Day holiday paid off with more arrests this year compared to last year.
Officials said Tuesday 994 motorists were arrested and 224 warnings were issued from 8 p.m. Friday through midnight Monday. Of the total, 484 were for speeding and 80 were for drunk driving.
There were 203 motor vehicle accidents in addition to the three fatalities including a New York state trooper.
During the 1983 Labor Day weekend, only 51 motorists were arrested on drunken driving charges.
Southbury state police said Michael D. DeRosa, 54, was struck by a car Saturday night on Interstate 84 outside of Cheshire just after he finished changing a flat tire on his car.
Police said DeRosa, of Newburgh, N.Y., died of his injuries in a Waterbury Hospital after being struck by a car driven by Gary

Justice initiate bid for new trial

Supreme Court rules a new trial

HARTFORD (UPI) — The state Supreme Court has ruled a Superior Court must decide if a new trial will be given to a man convicted of killing a policeman because the jury had been discussing the evidence to refresh their memories, a new trial would not be necessary.
The justices Tuesday unanimously found the jurors in the case of Gary G. Catonyan must be questioned to find out whether their discussions during the course of the trial resulted in an opinion on the evidence.
The state must determine whether the discussions were "harmless beyond a reasonable doubt" or whether a new trial is required, the justices said.
The court ruled that if the jury had been discussing the evidence to refresh their memories, a new trial would not be necessary.
Catonyan was arrested and tried on charges of killing Plainville Police Officer Robert M. Holcombe on November 21, 1977. Holcombe had responded to a call and was found later with

Tips about shooting keep police busy

Police say they will continue to follow up on a barrage of telephone tips about the third shooting

STRAFORD (UPI) — State police say they will continue to follow up on a barrage of telephone tips about the third shooting incident on the Connecticut Turnpike in the last month.
Sgt. Ed Dailey said Tuesday officials were canvassing the nearby Stratford neighborhoods in an attempt to find the 1983 or 1984 Ford van carrying the three passengers believed to be involved in the incident.
A Bridgeport motorist and his wife, whom police would not identify, had car trouble Monday night on the right shoulder of the southbound lane when the brown van sped past, police said. The motorist told officials he saw one of the passenger's point a revolver from the van.
The motorist said he dived to the ground. His wife said she heard the shot, but did not see the incident because she was looking away.
The shooting was the second in two days on the turnpike and the third in less than a month.
Dailey said police do not believe the three incidents were related.
On Sunday, a 44-year-old Bridgeport man was struck in the leg by a bullet while driving on I-95 in Fairfield.
And on Aug. 5, also a Sunday, Nathaniel Young Jr., a staff aide to U.S. Rep. Stewart B. McKinney, was shot in the head and killed while driving on the highway through Stamford.
A bullet lodged in Young's brain and could not be removed, and doctors declared him dead the following day.

Four building projects head for Nov. 6 ballot in Bolton

By Sarah Passell
Herald Reporter

BOLTON — Townspeople voted Tuesday night to put four long-discussed building projects on a referendum ballot Nov. 6.

If all four are approved, they are expected to cost the town at least $2.19 million. They would be financed by a long-term bond issue. The proposals are to renovate Community Hall and to build a new high school library, a new public works garage and a new firehouse.

The town meeting vote to go ahead with the referendum was not a vote in favor of any of the projects. Some of those at Tuesday's special meeting voiced reservations about the projects. Two town leaders voted against putting any of the projects on a referendum in November. About 40 people attended the meeting.

Former finance board Chairman Raymond A. Ursin and former Public Building Commission member John Sambogna were the only two at the meeting who voted against submitting any of the projects to a vote on the November ballot. A third voter joined them in opposing placement of the firehouse on the ballot.

"I believe putting them on November referendum is premature," Ursin said.

"I'm for moving it forward," he said after the votes. "But I would much rather wait until May."

Ursin said townspeople do not yet know enough about the need for and scope of the projects to make a decision, but he does not expect Sambogna said he did not believe the cost estimates provided by the Board of Selectmen and Board of Education are reliable.

"All the townspeople should have an idea what the cost is going to be," Sambogna said.

"The town can't handle all four projects at once," he said after the meeting. "Who's going to oversee them?"

Sambogna later asked if the referendum question on the proposed high school library will link approval of the project to a state grant to cover more than half the cost. The school board has applied for a grant to cover nearly 60 percent of the estimated $819,000 cost, but the board does not expect to hear whether the grant is approved until March or April 1985.

Selectmen told Sambogna that townspeople will have to vote on the project without a guaranteed grant. The project includes plans for a computer center within the new library.

School Superintendent Richard E. Packman said the library-computer center would put Bolton High School "at the forefront" of computer education in Connecticut.

The chairman of the Republican Town Committee attacked the school board's proposal for the library, which school officials have dubbed the "LMC." Republican Chairman Mark Johnson charged the need for a central main-frame computer, which school officials have proposed to buy Johnson said it would be far cheaper to buy several personal computers for the school and link them through a single personal computer.

There will be a separate referendum question for each project, each with an estimated cost that the town may not exceed. Town officials will decide the method by which the town would finance the projects after they know how many projects have been approved.

If all are approved, selectmen expect to issue long-term bonds. If only one or two are approved, they may choose short-term financing or use of regular tax revenues.

After Tuesday's special meeting, selectmen set public hearings on each of the projects. The first hearing on the proposed public works garage is set for Sept. 25. The Board of Education's proposed LMC will be the topic on Oct. 1.

Community Hall renovations will be the topic for Oct. 9 and the firehouse will be discussed on Oct. 15. A final hearing to answer questions on all four projects is scheduled for Oct. 30.

All hearings are to begin at 8 p.m. at the Community Hall.

Judge won't close pretrial hearings in murder cases

By Margaret Jackson
United Press International

NEW LONDON — A Superior Court judge ruled pretrial hearings against murder suspect Michael Ross would remain open to the media and public despite objections from defense attorneys.

Judge Seymour L. Hendel also ruled Tuesday the state had proved enough evidence to try Ross on eight counts of capital felony murder in four New London County slayings.

"If there's a particular piece of evidence we should close the hearing," said Hendel. "It's hard for me at this point to decide everything should come out — that's letting the cat out of the bag."

He explained the case had received unprecedented publicity in the area already, and it would be difficult to find potential jurors who had not heard of the case and those found would be simply ignorant.

"Finally you get people who don't read the paper, listen to the radio or listen to the TV," he said. "Is that the type of jury we should have — a jury who doesn't care what's going on and is completely uninformed?"

Ross, a 25-year-old from Jewett City, faces eight counts of capital felony murder in New London County for the deaths of Robin Stavinsky, 19, of Columbia, April Brunas, 15, and Leslie Shelly, 14, both of Griswold, and Wendy Baribeault, 17, of Lisbon.

During Tuesday's proceedings, 13 family members of the victims sat in the jury box after State's Attorney C. Robert Satti received permission to let them move to the

Coventry accounts 'a mess'

By Tracy L. Geohegan
Herald Reporter

COVENTRY — The Town Council voted Tuesday to spend about $2,000 to hire extra personnel temporarily to straighten out insurmountable bookkeeping problems.

The move was recommended by two representatives from the town's auditing company who said they are still unable to close Coventry's 1983-84 accounts because they were left unbalanced for much of the year.

"It blows my mind. You have the records but they're so poorly maintained it's frightening, really," said Joseph Golec, managing partner of the Wethersfield accounting firm of Kircaldie, Randall and McNab.

Ruth Benoit, town treasurer, has been working overtime for several months to put the books back in order, but she said she cannot afford to spend the time any longer.

Golec said that when people from his company tried to compute Coventry's books for last year, they found that the town's checking account was "a mess" and the payroll account had not been balanced all year.

Golec said he believed the main cause of Coventry's bookkeeping confusion should be placed "at an upper administrative level" rather than on the computer system or the bookkeeper.

Both the bookkeeper and her superior, former Town Manager Charles McCarthy, resigned several months ago.

Extra hands will balance books

Town officials said they are confident there will be no problems with this year's books, because personnel changed and errors were discovered. But the job of reconciling the long-ignored 1983-84 accounts has proved too time-consuming a job for regular staff to handle, officials said.

The Town Council plans to bring in two people to re-check all the town's figures, Golec estimated that the job should take no more than two weeks. He promised his firm would carefully direct the work on how to straighten out the books.

"We'll give you good figures once the problems are located," Golec said. "And we'll tell you, in writing, how you can avoid this kind of thing in the future."

"It's not the system or the mechanics that need attention," Golec said. "It seems to me that some person must have stopped bothering to do the job. Nobody wanted to find out if the town was $200,000 overdrawn or not."

At the council's last meeting, a representative from the firm that serves as consultant for the town's computer system made a similar appeal for Coventry's bookkeeping problems.

Faith Pearson of Management Information Systems and Training Inc. said poor training on computers and bad management on the part of town administrators were at the root of the dilemma.

"At that time, the council discussed, but did not act, on a proposal to bring MIST people in to train employees how to use the computers."

Historical projects advance

COVENTRY — Two long-talked-about historical projects have moved a few steps forward, the Town Council learned Tuesday.

Members of Nathan, Hale Fives and Drums Inc. have revived their efforts to build headquarters on land they own next to the Nathan Hale Homestead.

And Acting Town Manager Michael Cleary has been coordinating the efforts of several groups to help turn an empty brick building on Main Street into a tourist information center.

Cleary said he had already interested members of the Coventry Historical Society and the Coventry Jaycees in the tourist center project.

The tiny building, next to Sanborn's Police Station, served as the town's first post office when it was built in 1876. "It's a beautiful little building and it really is," Cleary said. "I would like to see us do something with it."

Cleary said David Eddy, of the Jaycees, has agreed to try to get his group to volunteer to paint the interior of the building, which is owned by the town.

The historical society, Cleary hopes, will agree to staff the center and provide displays of historical information.

Judy LeDoit, curator of the building, said she and her husband, the corps' land is located between the property of the Nathan Hale Homestead and of the Coventry Historical Society's Sprague House.

Architectural plans for the building were drawn up in 1976, but the project was laid aside when the nation's economy took a turn for

Zinsser sets Troop K tour next Tuesday

State Sen. Carl A. Zinsser, R-Manchester, has invited state and local town officials to tour the Troop K State Police barracks in Colchester on Tuesday.

The tour was arranged as a follow-up to a meeting in May in Bolton in which the troop's problems, problems with a staff shortage and covering a large geographical area were discussed. Troop K covers three towns in Zinsser's 4th Senatorial District: Bolton, Columbia and Hebron.

"It is my hope that this follow-up meeting will leave us all with a better comprehension of the task facing our state police and open up better lines of communication that can only benefit all townspeople who depend on the Troop K barracks for their public safety needs," Zinsser said.

Six state representatives, two state senators and town officials from each community have been invited on the tour.

The tour begins at 10 a.m.

BUSINESS

High quality at good prices Eyewear users have prescription options

More than 113 million Americans wear eyeglasses or contact lenses. If you are among them, you face a key decision in where and how to have your vision prescription filled. You have this choice:

- You can have your prescription filled at the optometrist's office, if that is where you had your examination; or you can go to an optician, a technician who fills lens prescriptions provided by an optometrist (a doctor of optometry) or an ophthalmologist (a doctor of medicine).
- In having your prescription filled, you must investigate eye-care and eye-wear providers for the most reasonable price. According to Michael Simons, O.D., Director of professional services for Pearle Vision Centers, here are valuable guidelines:
- Look for an eye-wear provider with a convenient location and hours and a broad selection of frames in both price and style.
- Shop for eyeglasses that carry a one-year guarantee for repairs and damage. You should be able to replace or repair your eyeglasses within one year of purchase with the proper guarantee.
- Inquire whether prescriptions are sent out to manufacturers. Some eyeglasses are sent out to manufacturers for fabrication, while others are made at your eye-wear provider's in-store lab. In either case, a qualified professional in your doctor's office should verify that the eyeglasses are correct.
- Comfort is an issue. The optician or doctor should properly fit your eyeglasses. Don't hesitate to return to the dispenser if adjustments are required.
- Don't have new eyeglasses mailed to you unless it is an emergency. You should try them on for proper adjustment when you pick them up.
- The eye-wear provider should offer a full spectrum of state-of-the-art eyeglass corrections, including bifocals, trifocals, invisible bifocals, scratch-resistant plastics, photography, ultraviolet-absorbing lenses and the like.
- Consider buying a spare pair of eyeglasses so that you are prepared in the event your eye wear is lost or damaged. Also, your work and lifestyle may involve specific tasks requiring special eye wear.
- If your need is for contact lenses and the doctor has determined that you can wear them, you may have the prescription filled by an ophthalmologist or an optometrist. In some states, opticians are permitted to fit contact lenses. A practitioner that is still controversial.

What about prescription sunglasses? Don't compromise. They should be quality products, able to screen out 75 percent to 98 percent of available light. They may be of medium or dark gray or green tint, and should be large enough to keep light from getting around them. Frames should be sturdy and comfortable, with sidebars that do not interfere with your side vision. If you work outdoors or on or near water or snow, you will need the type of tinted glass lenses that screens out both ultraviolet and infrared rays.

In sum, plan your family's eye care. Follow these guidelines to assure that you and your family receive care of the highest quality.

Contact lens wearers should have a spare pair of contacts or a pair of eyeglasses in case of an emergency. Contact lenses may irritate or infect your eyes and, therefore, a pair of eyeglasses may be essential.

Region's top execs receive hefty raises

BOSTON — Senior executives at small-to-medium-size companies are receiving their largest inflation-adjusted salary increases of the 1980s this year and having more of their raises pegged to the success of the firm, a survey says.

The fifth annual Officer Compensation Report by Growth Resources Inc. of Peabody, Mass., was based on information from 600 companies on the way they pay more than 2,300 executives.

The report, being sent out this week, expects those executives to receive a 12.5 percent pay increase and anticipate a 4.2 percent hike in the Consumer Price Index.

The survey has reported higher pay growth in other years — as high as 13 percent in 1980 — but the spread between compensation and inflation has never been greater. This decade, last year had been the best of the 1980s for real growth, when pay went up 6.4 percent, and the CPI rose 3.9 percent, according to the survey.

Growth Resources also charted bonus activity in relation to a company's profitability, finding big jumps among high-profit organizations.

Average bonuses are up 20 percent from $60,000 to $72,000 among companies whose after-tax return on invested capital is expected to be 20 percent or more.

The bonuses were up 17 percent in companies whose ROIs were 5-20 percent. Bonuses this year are expected to be up from $16,500 to $17,600 on average this year among executives at companies whose return on invested capital is less than 5 percent.

"The movement in general in the small business sector and in the U.S. overall is that high compensation is more and more linked to performance, and base salary movement is no where as dramatic as bonus movement," said Richard J. Brunstein, president of Growth Resources.

"The high profit businesses that have very substantial returns on their invested capital tend to pay their executives some times as much as three times as much as the same kind of company in a low-profit performance situation," Brunstein said.

Growth Resources also found executive perks to be a significant part of compensation packages, as usual. The most common perk is a company car.

Dollar sets new record

LONDON (UPI) — The dollar soared to a record opening in Zurich, Paris, Milan and Brussels today, dealers said. Market confidence in the strength of the U.S. economy and predictions that American interest rates will remain high.

The gold price weakened in Zurich and London.

In London, the British pound dipped to an all-time low, opening trading at $1.2845, more than half a cent weaker than the overnight close of 1.2915. Dealers said Tuesday's failed attempt to negotiate an end to Britain's 6-month-old coal miners' strike contributed to sterling's weakness.

In Paris, the dollar broke through the nine-franc barrier, opening trading at a record high, 9.6212 French francs, against Tuesday's final 9.5792.

The dollar, trading at an 11½-year high in Frankfurt, opened at 2370 German marks, nearly 2 pennings stronger than the previous 2310. The West German Bundesbank was reported to be selling dollars heavily to stabilize the mark.

The dollar hit a record high at the opening in Belgium, against the 99.755 Belgian francs, against the previous 99.37.

Witness puts Aillon at death scene

By James V. Heollon
United Press International

NEW HAVEN — A witness has testified that Guillermo Aillon came through a stop sign near the North Haven home of his estranged wife and her parents like a "bat out of hell" the night the three were stabbed to death.

Corvette is thieves' choice

NEW YORK (UPI) — The sporty Chevrolet Corvette is popular with car thieves and Boston is tops for cities where autos are most likely to be stolen, a consumer magazine says.

Ms. Petrillo said it appeared Aillon was driving with his headlights out. She said she made an intense effort to look at him closely in the early morning hours of Aug. 14, 1972 after the near-miss collision close to Crestview Drive where the wealthy victims lived.

"I was so angry I wanted to see who the person was who could have killed me," said Ms. Petrillo.

Maria Petrillo, an attorney for the city of Philadelphia testifying for the prosecution, identified Aillon as the driver of the car she almost "broadsided" during testimony Tuesday in Aillon's third trial.

Motorists who like to see their cars where they left parked them may want to invest in the Subaru DL and the Pontiac Phoenix. Other makes with a slim chance of being stolen are the Ford Fairmont, Honda Civic and the Toyota Corolla, the magazine said.

"He just seemed so large to me," she said of the 6-foot-6-inch Aillon. The mother and daughter got separated at an intersection when the mother made the light and the daughter didn't. When she got home, Mrs. Petrillo asked her what kept her.

"I can't tell you right now," she testified. But soon she was yelling about the driver who drove like a "bat out of hell."

The witness estimated the time at 12:30 a.m., which the defense showed was inconsistent with the time she estimated at Aillon's second trial. Aillon was stopped perhaps 15 minutes later but a burglary resulted in a second stop at 1:19 a.m.

Public Defender Donald Dakers challenged the witness on her contention Aillon's lights were out. He noted she didn't testify to that effect at Aillon's retrial in 1979. She said she realized they were not on when she thought about it the day after she testified. But she conceded she didn't notify the prosecution.

1978 statement she gave police. She admitted saying then she was too busy preparing for classes at George Washington University.

But she told Markle Tuesday her father, based solely on "fathery concern," and no specific knowledge of the case, suggested if she stepped forward as a witness in 1972 and went off to school there was nothing he could do to protect her.

Aillon, 46, was convicted in 1973 but retried because a judge erred in talking to a juror during deliberations. His 1979 retrial ended in a deadlocked jury. He has been free on $225,000 bond.

Markle returned to the lights through Detective Pasquale Natale who said he was on road patrol in Hamden on that morning 12 years ago and responded to a burglary alarm at 12:50 a.m. He saw a suspect in a car going in the opposite direction on State Street with its lights out. In his rearview mirror, he saw a North Haven cruiser pull out and chase the driver. He then identified the car as Aillon's.

Speck looks for parole approval

CHICAGO (UPI) — Every time mass murderer Richard Speck comes up for a parole hearing, John Matusek is there.

"I got caught (killing Speck), they would probably burn me right away. But I don't have to worry about that because I've had so many people, friends and non-friends, tell me if I ever got out they'd take care of me," Matusek said.

Speck, 42, has his fifth parole hearing Thursday at the Stateville Correctional Center in Joliet, where he has been behind bars for 18 years.

"I've gone to every one of his parole hearings," said Matusek, 77, whose daughter, Patricia Ann, was killed along with seven other student nurses.

Speck, an itinerant merchant seaman, got drunk, then with knife in hand broke into the townhouse where the student nurses lived. He bound each one with strips of cloth torn from a bedsheet and then killed them. Days later Speck slashed his wrists in a skid row rooming house. He was arrested when a doctor at Cook County Hospital recognized the "born to raise hell" tattoo on his arm that the sole surviving nurse described to authorities.

Speck was sentenced to death, but the U.S. Supreme Court overturned the death penalty in 1971. He was resentenced to serve eight consecutive 50- to 156-year prison terms for the murders.

Attorney Casimir R. Wachowski was multimillion-dollar judgments against Speck on behalf of the victims' parents to keep Speck from ever profiting from the murders.

"I feel that Speck should never be released," Wachowski said. "You cannot have a man out who, if he should take a drug or drink, turns into a maniac." The star prosecution witness was Corazon Amurao.

8th District set to buy firehouse

By Alex Girelli
Herald Reporter

An agreement to buy Keeney's Garage for a second Eighth Utilities District firehouse was signed by the district directors Wednesday night at a special meeting called to consider the purchase.

The $85,000 purchase is contingent on voters' approval of the proposal at a meeting set to coincide with the district directors' meeting Sept. 17.

Terms of the agreement call for a $2,000 deposit, an $18,000 payment when the property is transferred on about Dec. 1, and two payments of $22,500 each on July 1, 1985, and Jan. 1, 1986.

While the description of the property at 1083 Tolland Turnpike on land records does not contain dimensions, it has about 60 feet of frontage on Tolland Turnpike and is about 230 feet deep. The L-shaped piece also has about 155 feet along the old line of Buckland Road, which has been moved westward because of realignment of the intersection.

The sale hinges on whether Manchester zoning regulations will permit a firehouse on the site. Part of it is in a residence zone and part in a Business Zone.

A firehouse is clearly permitted in a residence zone, but there is some question about the business zone. Eighth District attorney John D. LaBelle Jr. told the directors Wednesday night.

Zoning Enforcement Officer Thomas O'Marra has been asked to determine whether enough of the land is in the residence zone to permit conversion of the auto repair garage to a firehouse.

Garage owner Richard Keeney is being represented by attorney Wesley Gryk in the transaction.

Eighth District President Walter Joyner has been unsuccessful in negotiating with the town government to buy the Buckland firehouse, which the town built farther west on Tolland Turnpike. After the town built its station, a state Supreme Court decision held that district, not the town, has the right to provide fire protection in the area surrounding the station.

Since then the district has tried without success to buy or lease the station from the town to house its volunteer fire department.

Town officials have taken the position that the town needs the station to serve about 75 percent of the area it intended to serve when the station was built.

Joyner, who succeeded Gordon Lassow as district president in July, made the latest attempt to reopen the question of buying the town firehouse. At the same time, the district began investigating possible sites a new district firehouse.

While the firehouse agreement was the only question acted on formally Wednesday night, the directors also discussed converting the former district public works garage on Fleming Road to a meeting room and possibly offices for the tax collector.

The result of the discussion was that Directors Samuel Longest and Lorraine Boutin will make some drawings of how the garage might be converted. But no formal action will be taken until budget-making time for 1985-86.

Joyner wondered about using excess funds for the purpose. But Director Thomas Landers said there is no way to determine this early in the budget year whether there will be any surplus.

Director Joseph Tripp said that if the former garage were used as meeting room, more space would become available in the office of the tax collector at the existing firehouse on Hilliard Street.

Bucks Reagan remarks Ford enters fray on religion issue

By Mark A. Duputs
United Press International

WATERBURY — Former President Gerald Ford today defended President Reagan's stand on politics and religion and charged that Democrat Walter Mondale had misinterpreted the president's words.

Ford, campaigning for Republican Congressional candidate John G. Rowland, also said he believes religious people should be involved in government but not organized religious groups.

"I'm very much opposed to organized religion getting involved in government," Ford said. "I don't hear Mondale complaining about that."

"But that doesn't mean individuals who have faith can't participate in government," Ford added. Ford said he knew from personally speaking with Reagan that the president strongly supports the principle of separation of church and state but believes religious individuals can be active in government.

Ford said Mondale had misinterpreted statements Reagan made on religion and politics, which in turn prompted the president to try to clarify his position.

"I am a little surprised that Mr. Mondale would even attack President Reagan. Who interpreted religion the most in 1976? It was his running mate, Jimmy Carter."

Ford also said he, like Reagan, supports a constitutional amendment allowing silent prayer in public schools because it would not violate the constitution's ban on government establishment of religion.

"Prayer in itself is not denominational," he said.

Ford was in Waterbury to speak at a $250-a-plate breakfast for Rowland, a two-term state legislator challenging veteran Democrat Rep. William H. Hatchford in Western Connecticut's 5th District. At the breakfast, Ford attacked Carter-Mondale economic policies and Hatchford for voting for those policies.

He said inflation and interest rates rose sharply after he left office in 1976 and Carter and Mondale took over. "All I'm saying is by any statistical analysis Carter and Mondale were a disaster economically."

And he said Hatchford had gone along with those policies and should be replaced by Rowland. "When that choice is put right on the table there's no doubt in my mind who is the better person," Ford said.

About 100 people attended the breakfast fundraiser.

Number of first-day pupils a surprise to administrators

By Sarah E. Hall
Herald Reporter

For the second year in a row, opening-day enrollment in the Manchester public schools has been greater than expected, Superintendent James P. Kennedy said today.

"The biggest surprise to me is in the secondary schools, where we had expected enrollment to begin to drop," he said. Instead, 22 more students than last year reported to classes Wednesday in the town's junior and senior high schools.

Birth statistics for children now in grades seven through 12 show an overall drop in that particular school-age population. So Manchester's increase "has to mean that we're drawing some students," the superintendent said.

"There's no migration, and yet I don't see any evidence of substantial housing development in town."

In all grades combined, nearly 160 more students than administrators had planned for showed up for the start of school on Wednesday. Last September, the pupil tally was 60 more than they had predicted.

The news is encouraging at a time when many schools nationwide are being closed for lack of students to fill them, Kennedy said.

In contrast, fewer students than expected showed up on the first day of school each year from 1978 to 1982, Kennedy said.

This year's total enrollment — at about 7,130 — is still down 100 students from last year's tally. Despite the drop, Kennedy said he expects the school board will hire two extra teachers to accommodate an overflow of students in the first grades at Buckley and Martin Schools — where class size is hovering around 30.

Kennedy said teacher aides will likely handle a pupil surplus in the third and fifth grades at Martin School, which is the smallest in town. Martin, Buckley and North Hale Schools are currently housing 195 students from Highland Park School, which shut down in June because of declining enrollments.

Not counting the transferred students, the biggest single jump in enrollment — 29 students — 3,326 elementary school pupils, 3,382 in the secondary schools, 128 in town-run special education facilities and about 100 in High Start, for a total of more than 7,130.

School, it is up by one.

Kennedy said he attributes some of the rise at High Start to the opening of the Oakland Heights low-income housing complex, which is that school district.

Early Wednesday, one High Start was overcrowded by the time it made its second stop. Kennedy said planners erred in drawing up the list of students on that day, and that another run will have to be scheduled.

Otherwise, there were "the usual bus troubles" Wednesday, according to Kennedy.

"In total, I'm very pleased," he said. He stressed that all enrollment figures are preliminary and may include some students who have moved away. In addition, more pupils will probably register at the high school by the end of the month, Kennedy said.

"It does look to me like enrollment is going to go above the acceptable projection error of 1 percent," Kennedy said. He expected 6,979 students while tallies made Wednesday showed 3,326 elementary school pupils, 3,382 in the secondary schools, 128 in town-run special education facilities and about 100 in High Start, for a total of more than 7,130.

Poll says Americans think nuclear war is unwinnable

By David E. Anderson
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Americans no longer believe nuclear weapons serve the cause of peace, reject the idea of anyone winning a nuclear war but hold contradictory views on many aspects of the arms race, a new survey showed today.

"Whatever way the questions were asked, the answers came back unequivocally: nuclear war is unwinnable, horrible, unsurvivable," said the Public Agenda Foundation, a non-partisan research organization that did the survey.

The survey data is contained in a new publication, "Voter Options on Nuclear Arms Policy: A Briefing Book for the 1984 Elections," published by the foundation and the Center for Foreign Policy Development of Brown University. Pollster Daniel Yankelovich is president of the foundation and former Secretary of State Cyrus Vance serves as chairman.

Advisers to the project included both liberal and conservative spokesmen and the publication is intended to present opinions on nuclear arms and national security to the voters for public debate in the 1984 campaign.

The survey said there has been profound changes in public attitudes in the four decades since the dawn of the nuclear age.

"In the early fifties," the survey said, "91 majorities of Americans believed that nuclear arms serve the cause of peace and lessened the dangers of war. Today's weapons have the opposite effect: the U.S. and Soviet accumulation of nuclear weapons is eroding the survey's sense of security."

According to the report, there is a clear public consensus on the dangers of nuclear war. It found:

- By a margin of 96 percent to 4 percent, Americans assert "picking a fight with the Soviet Union is too dangerous in a nuclear world."
- By 89 percent to 9 percent, Americans agree "there can be no winner in an all out nuclear war, both the United States and the Soviet Union would be completely destroyed."

By 83 percent to 13 percent, Americans conclude a limited nuclear war would quickly turn into an all out nuclear war.

By 76 percent to 23 percent, the public rejects the suggestion that it is a "wild exaggeration" that all life on earth could be destroyed in a nuclear war.

And the public, by a margin of 68 percent to 20 percent, rejects the concept the United States could fight and win a nuclear war against the Soviet Union.

The survey also found many Americans are misinformed about actual U.S. nuclear policy, with 69 percent mistakenly saying it is not current U.S. policy to use nuclear weapons to resist a Soviet invasion of Europe or Japan with conventional forces.

"Virtually all Americans — 81 percent — mistakenly believe it is our policy to use nuclear weapons if, and only if, the Soviets attack the United States first with nuclear weapons," it found.
