SATs up 36 points at MHS

By Sarah E. Hall Herald Reporter

The school board learned Monday that average Scholastic Aptitude Test scores for the Class of 1984 at Manchester High School have climbed 36 points over last year — when a 50-point drop in scores shocked school administrators and led them to question scoring accuracy.

It's a pleasure for me to be here tonight, by contrast," MHS Principal Jacob Ludes told the board. He received the new information, which corroborated figures his own staff prepared last week, in Monday's mail.

The new mean scores are all at least 14 points above state, regional, and national means — which also rose considerably this year.

WHY NEWSPAPERS?

Reach the voters with newspaper advertising!

Newspapers provide the ideal climate for political advertising because newspapers are in the business of keeping readers, of whatever political persuasion, informed on all aspects of politics.

Newspapers have a tremendous value for the candidate and are the obvious medium for political advertising because the various sections of the newspaper are devoted to the dissemination of political news and views.

Newspapers rank high in creating name identification. Newspapers rank high in believability. And newspapers rank high in providing the lowest cost per voter means of communicating and getting your message across.

This election year, perhaps more so than ever, people have a watchful eye on critical, crucial issues. Your job is to tell them about yourself, about the issues, explain your solutions to the problems that affect your community.

OPINION

About Reagan, GOP goals, and the campaign

"That man was terrific," J. Winthrop Porter told fellow members of the Republican Town Committee Wednesday night. He was talking of former President Ronald Reagan. Porter was one of the Manchester residents among the throngs at Waterbury who had seen and heard the president earlier that day. And taking a paragraph from the president's script, Porter likened the visit to one by former President John F. Kennedy. Porter was he had seen Kennedy 22 years ago in New Haven and wondered then if the Republican Party would ever have a candidate with the same appeal. He concluded that Reagan fills the bill. "That guy knows how to impress a crowd," said Porter.

The main emphasis of the Manchester GOP meeting, however, was not on how great the Republicans think Reagan is. It was how dangerous it will be to Reagan's popularity to carry the day Nov. 6. "The president is not our meat ticket," said Kevin Norige of East Hartford, the Republican candidate for representative in the heavily Democratic 9th Assembly District. And Curtis Smith, Republican town chairman, made it clear he is looking for money and a big effort to enroll new voters and get the old and new voters to the polls on Election Day. He said the party will spend twice as much as it usually does.

The Republicans this year will put a lot of stress on getting absentee ballot applications into the hands of the voters. Smith said the expectation is that 15 percent, not the usual 10 percent of the vote, will be by absentee ballot. That's because a change in the law provides that to qualify for an absentee ballot, a voter has only to indicate that he will be out of town on election day, not that he will be out of state.

Smith has a favorite story about Manchester Democratic headquarters. Smith and his daughter passed the large old house at 290 Main St. where Democrats have been conducting a campaign for well over a week. She told him the kids call it the haunted house. He says he feels the kids are very perceptive because he's sure the house is indeed haunted by four years of Carter-Mondale.

When the story gets to Ted Cummings, Democratic town chairman, he will surely have some rejoinder ready for the right moment.

If the campaign in Manchester is going to get bitter, there is no sign of it so far, and most political observers don't foresee any acrimony. That may come as a disappointment to some, but I

Agency ready for a takeover in case of national emergency

WASHINGTON — Civil defense has come a long way, baby, since the World War II, when volunteer air-raid wardens would ring neighborhood doorbells to report cracks of light showing during blackouts.

The successors to the friendly air-raid wardens want nothing less than the control of the lines of a military dictatorship in case of an emergency.

Federal Emergency Management Agency Director Louis Giffirda, who would presumably delegate his authority to Gen. Giffirda and his glorified air-raid wardens.

French Smith. Giffirda's proposal to give FEMA authority over every other governmental agency in a crisis will make him an "emergency czar," Smith wrote.

The idea of the little-known head agency running the country in times of war or natural disaster "is funny as it sounds. Certainly it's being taken seriously at FEMA. I don't see any delays," Goldberg and Indy Badwar have obtained FEMA's blueprint for the takeover: a draft of "standby" legislation "to provide the Executive Branch with the authorities necessary to meet various conflict contingencies."

Titled "The Defense Resources

look forward to it. Normally my respect for politicians, even those I think are wrong most of the time, is quite high. But at election campaign high season, when the charges and countercharges fly, I begin to sour on even those I think are right most of the time.

At a recent meeting a politician who got up to speak extemporaneously, asked before he started, "Is the press here?" "Yes," I said boldly. He gave his talk. I have no way of knowing what he did not say, of course.

Six local candidates will speak individually at separate meetings of Kiwanis. I do not expect any of them to ask if the press is represented. If I am there and any of them does ask, however, I will boldly say "No," notwithstanding the fact that all of them would probably recognize me on sight.

I'm looking forward to learning what they have to say and I don't want my education spoiled by the condescension of my presence.

The homeless problem: What are the causes?

Editor's note: This is the second in a series of guest columns prepared for the Herald on the problem of the homeless.

By Thomas J. Conklin, M.D.

The long-term change in the national policy for dealing with the mentally ill has had a great impact on the homeless population. A little more than 20 years ago, state and county mental institutions began releasing large numbers of patients, many of whom suffered from severe mental illnesses.

This policy, labeled "deinstitutionalization," was ill-intentioned and perhaps even an enlightened reform, but it has not proceeded according to the original plan. The first step has been accomplished: The patient population at state and county mental hospitals is now less than one-fourth of its 1955 peak level of 559,000 patients.

However, the various levels of government have not taken the second step. They have not provided enough places, such as halfway houses or group homes, for discharged patients. Many feel that deinstitutionalization has been a failure, and has simply moved unwanted patients from "the back ward and placed them into the back alley."

THE POLICY OF DEINSTITUTIONALIZATION was partially based on the concept that long-term hospitalization, in facilities that provide little more than custodial care, resulted in a state of institutional dependence and social isolation, called "a social breakdown syndrome."

It was anticipated that treating psychiatric patients in the community, with short-term hospitalization in community hospitals when needed, would prevent such dire consequences and ease the patient's reintegration into the community. The data seemed to show that the dependency and social isolation of these deinstitutionalized patients could be residual deficits of illness rather than the consequences of institutionalization.

Discharging patients from chronic care facilities into communities with minimal resources has not reversed the process or improved the quality of life for the sub-group. Resources, services and money did not accompany patients from institutions into the community. Less than half of the community mental health centers needed to cover the U.S. population have been built.

INADEQUACY OF CARE available to deinstitutionalized patients is characterized by large increases in the rate of admissions and readmissions to state hospitals, and by the fact that the growing majority of admitted patients have been hospitalized before.

Between 1955 and 1982, state mental institutions shrank by more than three quarters, from 559,000 patients nationwide to only 123,200. That downward shift is mirrored in Connecticut. In the mid-1970s, Connecticut had more than 8,000 state hospital beds for the mentally ill. Since then, the number of beds in Connecticut has been declining, and now about 2,000 beds are available to take care of the indigent mentally ill.

The deinstitutionalization movement was accompanied by the introduction of effective antidepressant and anti-psychotic drugs, which offered the real possibility of rehabilitating psychotic people within a community setting, under better living conditions, and with greater respect for their civil rights. It was also thought that the community mental health approach would be cheaper than operating large state hospitals. That movement was launched in 1963 when Congress passed a law promising federal funds for construction of community mental health centers.

IN THE MID-1970S, deinstitutionalization still seemed like a good idea. Many of our state mental hospitals were overcrowded. New drugs offered a humane control of psychotic symptoms. In the late 1950s and 1960s, the nation's mental hospitals began releasing patients in unprecedented numbers.

At the same time, the Supreme Court began to look at the civil rights of many disadvantaged groups, including migrant farm workers, blacks, Hispanics and the mentally ill. Liberals applauded the new civil rights granted to the nondangerous mentally ill, and conservatives were happy to find a seemingly compassionate way to cut state budgets.

Between 1955 and 1982, the number of beds available in state mental institutions had been slashed by 75 percent, and their inhabitants discharged to the community.

Today, there is widespread agreement that the efforts to deinstitutionalize mental patients have backfired. While some patients are able to adjust successfully, tens of thousands end up homeless — not right away, then after a few years of bouncing among families, institutions, and the street.

At the same time, it has become nearly impossible to get all the nondangerous mentally ill admitted to state asylums, or to keep them there long enough to get a grip on themselves. In California, for instance, the median stay in a state mental hospital is now just 16 days. In Connecticut, the median stay is nine days.

A MAIN REASON why mental health care has left so many homeless is that the funding did not follow the patients from the hospital to the community. A 1953 national goal to start 2,000 community mental health centers by 1980 is still 1,283 mental health centers short.

After two decades of deinstitutionalization, it has become clear that what is needed is a vast expansion of community housing, including shelters and other psychological services, as well as a changing of the mental health care system to meet the needs — care, support, and stability — of the chronically mentally ill within the community who are homeless.

Several other factors must be considered to understand how homelessness has developed among psychiatric patients. Social deficits and inability to tolerate frustration and cope with stress are well documented consequences for patients with chronic, severe, emotional disorders.

Bureaucracies like the Social Security Administration and welfare agencies can frustrate the average individual, for patients with psychiatric impairment, such bureaucratic may seem overwhelming. Therefore, these people frequently are deprived, by the illness itself, of the few community resources that are available.

WHAT THE HOMELESS NEED FIRST, experts say, is a simple place to stay and some supervision by compassionate people. And so, for an increasing number of homeless individuals, a shelter's function is to provide basic food, clothing, and a bed.

Many are too weary or too detached to engage in conversation, and go directly to sleep. Typically, the dormitory is a barren, auditorium-sized room with rows of cots, army blankets, and no pillows. Lights are turned out by 11 p.m., and the next morning guests are awakened early, given coffee and a doughnut, and sent out even if the temperature is below zero.

Although physical comforts are limited, the shelters do provide a sense of warmth and welcome. They try to treat their guests with dignity and respect, asking few questions and attaching no strings to the help they offer.

American society is now trying to solve the problem cheaply, giving the homeless an emergency refuge at best and, at worst, no refuge at all. The question raised by an increasing number of homeless people is basic: Are Connecticut citizens willing to consign a broad array of disabled people to a lifetime of degradation, or will they make the commitment to give such people the care they need and deserve?

As George Bernard Shaw said, "The worst sin towards our fellow creatures is not to hate them, but to be indifferent to them. That's the essence of inhumanity."

Removal of Bolton asbestos goes to voters next week

By Sarah Passell Herald Reporter

BOLTON — The Board of Selectmen Monday overruled the Board of Finance and voted to ask townpeople to approve a $54,040 plan to remove dangerous asbestos insulation from two schools.

"You're going to get mud on your face," Deputy First Selectman Douglas T. Cheney warned fellow selectmen during discussion of the stalled building project. Cheney was the only selectman to vote against the proposal to seek Bolton voters' approval for the project at a town meeting next week.

The selectmen's 3-1 vote came after the Board of Finance refused to endorse the plan earlier Monday. Townpeople will make the final decision next Tuesday.

First Selectwoman Sandra Pierog said after the selectmen's meeting that the school board had urged the selectmen not to overrule the rezoning request, would be the final decision next Tuesday.

Pierog said that although the school board hoped to get the project completed during Christmas vacation this year, school officials did not want to defy the finance board's authority by taking the issue to voters without its approval.

When it met Monday, the finance board rejected the selectmen's request for a special appropriation of $14,040 to supplement the $40,000 already set aside for asbestos removal at Bolton Center School and Bolton High School. Both the Board of Selectmen and the Public Building Commission have recommended hiring the Dec-Tam Corp. of Tewksbury, Mass., which offered to remove exposed asbestos insulation from the common areas in the two buildings for $54,040.

After rejecting the request Monday, the finance board asked the Board of Selectmen to come up with project specifications and invite new bids on the project. "I will not have that project rebid," building commission Chairman Ronald Heim told the Board of Selectmen Monday. "I will not have that project rebid."

The selectmen last summer gave the building commission permission to waive bidding procedures and instead to seek proposals from selected companies, allowing the companies to decide which they wanted to bid.

Dec-Tam offered a plan that called for removing asbestos from more rooms than the other offer. Heim said he would not refuse to rebid the project if ordered to do so by the selectmen.

The vote was 3-1 because the Board of Selectmen is one member short since the death of First Selectman Henry P. Hyba earlier this month. Pierog was appointed last week to fill Hyba's post for the remaining eight months of his two-year term. Pierog was sworn in Monday night.

With the encouragement of First Selectwoman Pierog and selectman Carl Proulx, the building commission, who also met Monday, voted to refuse the finance board's request for new bids.

Heim said he would not refuse to rebid the project if ordered to do so by the selectmen. Heim said he would not refuse to rebid the project if ordered to do so by the selectmen.

Members of the finance board objected to the way the proposals were sought because the building commission accepted estimates endorse that recommendation because of confusion among building officials over the details of the repair plan. After the architect invited bids for the work, structural engineer Galilee Architects of Manchester told the architects, Galilee, Schoenhardt and Baier of Simsbury, that the repair plans called for a roof heavier than the building structure can support.

According to Public Building Commission Chairman Ronald Heim, the architects reduced the amount of insulation to be put on the roof and notified builders of the change by telephone rather than by letter. Heim said the architect was trying to speed the repair as he recommended repairing only that south wing roof, the worst section, to keep the cost nearer $30,000.

Advice

Woman's telephone manners ring rudely in friends' ears

DEAR ABBY: A friend of ours (we'll call her Joan) telephoned her mother, Mrs. A, long distance. A gentleman answered Mrs. A's telephone. Joan did not identify herself as Mrs. A's daughter, so the gentleman asked Joan, "Who is calling, please?"

Joan responded, "Who are you?" The gentleman replied, "My name is Paul."

Then Joan said, "Well, Paul, please put Mrs. A on the phone." Joan believes that Paul was rude to have asked who was calling, as it was none of his business. We believe it was an appropriate question. We would like your opinion.

FRIENDS OF JOAN

DEAR FRIENDS: It was not rude of Joan to have asked who was calling. (Perhaps Mrs. A had instructed him to inquire.) Joan should have immediately identified herself as Mrs. A's daughter.

And speaking of rudeness, I think Joan was rude to demand that Paul identify himself, as it was none of her business.

DEAR ABBY: I wrote to you a few weeks ago telling you that I worshipping him and would do anything in the world if I could meet him, and you wrote me back a crummy letter full of put-downs.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

You gave me no hope at all. Instead you told me that thousands of girls felt the same way about Michael, and I didn't have a chance of meeting him in person. Abby, I turned to you hoping you would give me some advice, and I can't believe how bad you made me feel.

EX-READER
DEAR EX: Sorry I let you down but I gave you the best advice I had to offer. Celebrities like Michael Jackson hire a retinue of bodyguards to protect them from all the admirers who want to meet him personally. I would have been even more unkind to have given you false hope.

DEAR ABBY: Here is one older widow who elects to be called by her Christian name. I deplore being called "Mrs." anyway. How can "Missus" be abbreviated Mrs.? There is no "r" in Missus. I can only presume we get a Mrs.

when we marry because we become a plural of a Mr. or perhaps in some bygone era the apostrophe was deleted and we then belonged to a Mr., as in Mr.'s. I will accept the unpronounceable "Ms." (Mizz) when men are addressed as Mr. with no vowel sound or as Merr—since we really can't pronounce either without a vowel. When will we delete the absurd labels, which mean nothing?

I am even occasionally addressed as "Miss" with three children, 13 grandchildren and a great-grandchild! Considering that record, "Miss" is absurd. With no husband, "Mrs." is most absurd. And "Ms." is the most absurd of all.

When John Doe can be just that, and no one asks if he is single or married, why do women clamor to have their status cluttered with some meaningless title? Like my name, and I want to be called...

MARGARET
CONFIDENTIAL TO J.D. IN SAN ANTONIO: People who demand respect rarely get it. Respect must be earned.

Vertigo means a lot more than simply feeling dizzy

DEAR DR. LAMB: I have had vertigo at different times since 1963. I do not have it often, but it is very severe when it does occur. I had tests performed by an ear, nose and throat specialist, who found no inner-ear problem.

In 1947, I had a blood clot and was treated. My left side was affected similar to a stroke, but it was not diagnosed as a stroke. I have overcome most of the numbness in my left side, but I wonder if this could be the cause of the vertigo. I am 73.

My doctor and other doctors who have seen since 1947 do not seem to think this is important.

DEAR READER: The first point to settle in vertigo is whether you have vertigo or dizziness. Vertigo is the illusion of motion. You feel either that your body is moving when it is not, or that your environment is moving when it is not. Dizziness is like an impending faint without the illusion of motion.

Both vertigo and dizziness are symptoms that can be caused by many different things. These include medicines that people take on their own or that have been prescribed. A good example is the faintness people sometimes feel when their blood pressure falls. That can happen if you are taking medicines to control high blood pressure.

Yes, a lot of cases of vertigo, particularly in people older than 50, are caused by some problem in circulation to some part of the brain. There are other diseases that can affect the brain and also cause vertigo. I have discussed the causes of vertigo and dizziness in a new issue of The Health Letter, Special Report 33, Understanding Dizziness and Vertigo, which is an exciting read. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1051, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10101.

The positive aspect of your story is that you have had only occasional attacks for more than 20 years. That certainly justifies your doctor's apparent belief that they do not indicate a serious health problem. If you have attacks that are severe enough or frequent enough, your doctor may be able to give you some medicine to minimize them.

Your health

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am afraid I will get herpes from using a public laundry room in the basement of our apartment complex. What if someone uses my herpes to use the washing machine before I use it? Will I get herpes? When I wear it, will I get herpes? Just how sanitary are public laundry facilities?

DEAR READER: If you get herpes in the laundry room, it will not be from washing your underwear. Most germs, including viruses, cannot survive the hot water and detergent. They are less likely to survive if a little chlorine bleach is used. Tests of adequately chlorinated swimming pools prove that herpes cannot survive the treated water. The herpes virus cannot withstand a dry environment very long. It must have a moist surface. It follows that the dryer will kill it if any virus did survive. And if, by some miracle, a virus survived all this, it would live only minutes on an hour when stored dry.

Finally, the way the herpes virus spreads is through the surface area. Friction enables this to occur; hence, sexual contact. The presence of a live virus is the usual method of transmitting genital herpes.

Suds dirt away from screen or try several other methods

DEAR POLLY: How should one clean door and window screens? Surely there's a way, but I don't know it.

GOLDIE
DEAR GOLDIE: While the screens are on the windows, you can brush them occasionally to rid them of dust, dirt and cobwebs. A long-handled broom is useful for first floor windows that are just a bit too high to reach from the outside.

For more thorough cleaning, before putting them up each spring, the screens can be laid out on the ground or lined up against a wall and washed with a long-handled floor mop and sudsy water. Rinse thoroughly with a hose and let dry quickly in the hot sun before putting them up. A reader once suggested taking screens to a do-it-yourself carwash where one can line them up and use the powerful hoses and sprayers to do a quick thorough cleaning job.

DEAR POLLY: To reheat muffins without heating the oven, split the muffins in two, spread with a little butter, put the buttered side down in a frying pan and turn the burner on low. In just a few minutes, the muffins will be just like fresh-baked. Be sure to cover the pan while heating.

I leave all the boiling broth from ham when I cook one. Then, when I make bean soup or cook green beans, I just add some of the ham broth. It makes the beans taste as though they were cooked with a ham. If I have a little leftover ham, I might add that, too.

If you buy in bulk as I do, you need a quick way to fill jars. Cut the bottom out of a plastic milk jug and turn it upside down on the opening of the jar so that the mouth of the jug fits into the jar. Hold onto the handle of the jug and pour your large bag of nuts or grains down in a frying pan and turn the burner on low. In just a few

Hispanics barely represented on prime time TV shows

By Vernon Scott
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD — At the end of the last TV season there was only one identifiable Hispanic actor in a regularly scheduled prime time series — Rene Enriquez of "Hill Street Blues."

As Lt. Ray Calletano in TV's best cops and robbers show, Enriquez was the lone representative of an estimated 21 million American Hispanics, counting just those with legal U.S. residence.

That means the approximately 10 percent of Americans of Cuban, Puerto Rican, Mexican, Central and South American heritage are invisible on the tube.

Not that Hispanics were ever in danger of taking over TV.

Ricardo Montalban vanished last season with the demise of "Fantasy Island." The 18 cast members of "Mork & Mandy" but the unemployment lines when that Norman Lear sitcom about a Los Angeles Mexican-American family bit the dust.

So it's up to heavy-set, shiny-pated, mustachioed Enriquez, a native of war-torn Nicaragua, to carry the banner.

"I try to play down the wimp elements by but to increase the number of Hispanics on the air through the National Hispanic Arts Endowment, which he founded and to which he contributes generously.

slow process of educating producers and casting directors.

"We are lobbying and making enough noise to bring attention to the fact that we are being denied our rights as actors. This is an election year and the more attention we can focus, the better.

Since the last national election, more than 2 million new Hispanics have registered. The candidates are paying more attention to our voters and leaders. I wish the same could be said for the TV networks."

Enriquez is proud of "Hill Street Blues," which hires more Hispanics than any other top series, although they are often seen as criminals or members of street gangs.

This season Trinidad Silva, who plays ex-gang leader Jose Martinez, will be seen more often in his role as a paralegal working with the system. Viewers will see more of Lieutenant Calletano, too, and hopefully in a better light. In years past Calletano usually whined around the precinct about not being promoted to captain.

Truth to tell, Calletano is often a wimp — something no one would accuse Enriquez of being. "I try to play down the wimp elements by but to increase the number of Hispanics on the air through the National Hispanic Arts Endowment, which he founded and to which he contributes generously.

Enriquez is proud of his heritage, his race and his honor.

He is also frustrated so few Hispanics are seen on TV and often angry at the stereotypes employed when they are portrayed, as in "Mork & Mandy," despite Lear's good intentions.

"I think maybe TV is beginning to see the light," Enriquez said a few days ago, "but it is a

He thinks that image is as important as his off-screen battles.

Travel In Brief

Whale migration coming

NEW YORK — For the fifth consecutive year whale-watchers will be able to witness the annual migration around the Baja California peninsula, according to Special Expeditions, the company that offers the tours.

"Despite its proximity to the United States, Baja California is an area known to only a handful of people," said Sven-Old Lundblad, president of Special Expeditions, who described the region as "one of the world's best kept secrets."

The 15-day voyages aboard the Pacific Northwest Explorer provides 46 passengers with a view of gray, humpback and occasional blue whales in lagoons along the Pacific Coast.

The ship will make six voyages, beginning in January 1985, from San Diego and Los Angeles. Prices start at $2,980. For further information, contact Special Expeditions, Inc., 133 East 55th Street, New York, N.Y. 10022. Call toll-free (800) 762-0003.

How to pick a package

NEW YORK — Vacationers who are ready to head off into the sunset on a wonderful journey, but have no idea where to go, now can use a booklet called "How to Select a Package Tour."

The brochure, available free of charge from the United States Travel Operators Association, a non-profit trade organization, acquaints travelers with the scope and benefits of various types of tours, and gives basic guidelines for selecting a reliable organization and choosing the right tour.

To acquire the brochure, write to USTOA, 211 East 51st Street, Suite 4B, New York, N.Y. 10022.

Flights can be taxable

NEW YORK — The Internal Revenue Service will no longer allow free airline service to go tax-free, a travel journal reports.

Beginning in 1985, the IRS will consider "frequent flier" fringe benefits, such as discounts or bonus flights, as taxable income.

A tax law signed last month by President Reagan will lead to enforcement of tax rules applying to these benefits, according to government officials. The law, which becomes effective Jan. 1, 1985, includes guidelines on fringe benefit taxation policy.

Tax counselors at IRS said some companies permit employees to receive bonuses in business flights, which results in a fringe benefit.

"Clearly, that's income and an example of the 'underground economy,'" a congressional tax aide said.

A business may have to pay taxes on the benefits if the firm utilizes it instead of the employee. Theoretically, if someone gets one of these coupons as a citizen on a vacation flight, it could be considered income, an IRS spokesman said.

Booklet translates jargon

WELLESLEY, Mass. — Travelers who find themselves constantly adrift in the sea of professional travel jargon now have access to a booklet that explains and defines confusing words.

The Institute of Certified Travel Agents is offering a glossary of terms that details nuances in a long list of catch phrases.

For example, the glossary will point out the difference between a share fare and a joint fare, and a corporate rate. It also will explain such terms as "add-on," "head tax," "ITX," "open jaw," "rack rate" and "shoulder."

The glossary compiled by travel agents who daily use this language.

To obtain a glossary, contact the Institute of Certified Travel Agents, 148 Linden Street, P.O. Box 56, Wellesley, Mass., 02151. Or call (617) 237-0280.

China opens Tibetan town

KATMANDU, Nepal — China has agreed to open Khaxa, a Tibetan hamlet, to foreign tourists wishing to visit Tibet from Nepal, according to the department of tourism.

Under the terms of an accord between Tibetan and Chinese authorities, China will accept up to 200 tourists a year beginning this year.

In a small border town northeast of Kathmandu, is connected with the Nepalese capital by a 100-mile mountain highway. The highway, damaged by a flash flood three years ago, is to reopen in 1984.

Chen Bing, deputy director of the Tibetan foreign office, said China had decided on an open-door policy for Tibet and said Lhasa as well as the towns of Shigatse and Tsunji would gradually be opened for tourists traveling from Nepal.

Nepal has proposed that China open Tibet for overland tourists and groups trekking over the Himalayas, and an air link between Lhasa and Katmandu.

Thoughts

Cast your bread upon the waters, for you will find it after many days. Ecclesiastes 11:1.

Odd, isn't it? You cast bread upon the waters and it will return to you. Wouldn't the bread get soggy, sink, or disintegrate?

In a society whose income was based on fishing, there was no problem understanding this simple law of return. When you cast bread upon the waters, it does not return to us as bread, but as fish.

Fact one is that whatever you give will return to you in many ways. If the bread you cast upon the sea of life is love, enthusiasm, hate, greed, apathy, or anything else, there will be a return appropriate to that which was cast.

Fact two is that the return will be at any time for an America's oldest fair, an annual fly-in, a "Mum fest," a bantjo contest and a fall foliage antique show and sale. New England's events are recommended by the ALA Auto and Travel Club for the weekend of Sept. 29-30.

In Topsfield, Mass., final preparations are being made for the 160th annual Topsfield Fair, America's oldest continuous country fair. The 18-day event will run from Saturday, Sept. 29, through Monday, Oct. 8.

The theme for this year's fair is "Our American Heritage."

In preparation for thousands of visitors, the cattle barn will sport a new roof, a new ticket office is being installed at the Maple Street gate and roads leading to the fairgrounds have been hot-topped.

Daily features will include a Farmer's Market in the poultry building.

Resorts recall graceful colonial summer respite

By Marie Gottschalk
United Press International

MUSSORIE, India — When the sun never set on the British Empire, the rulers of colonial India fled north each summer to the cool of the Himalayan foothills to escape the heat and dust of the plains.

Today the sanctuaries are no longer the playground of crisp British officers on polo horses and Indian princes living in huge hillside palaces reminiscent of English country homes.

India's well-to-do and its small middle class have become the latest to share the region's charms and holy men whose caves and huts still dot the hillsides.

They go to resort towns such as Mussoorie, known as the "Queen of the Hill Stations," to escape the sweltering plains and crowded cities.

Mussoorie, a town of about 20,000 people some 130 miles northwest of New Delhi, rules over the plains and muddy Ganges to the south from its cool perch in the Himalayan foothills.

The beautiful Doon Valley, at whose mouth Mussoorie sits, was discovered by a British captain who stayed into it with his hunting party in 1827. That same summer he erected the town's first building, which still stands as a hotel.

Until the first car arrived in 1920, Mussoorie could only be reached by a 7-mile trek from the nearest station on horseback or aboard porters' shoulders.

Today, a quick flight or overnight train from New Delhi goes as far as Dehra Dun, 22 miles from Mussoorie. From there it is a 90-minute bus ride up a winding road.

As the bus climbs to Mussoorie's 6,000-foot altitude, at each curve the air becomes noticeably cooler and cleaner.

During monsoon season, patches of fog and mist roll in and out of the valley, covering the hills and cloaking again the hillside terraces of bright green paddy.

Except for that and the occasional grazing cow or goat, the hills are too steep for farming.

Monkeys sit on crumbling stone walls along the side of the twisting road. The walls are to keep vehicles from straying into oblivion but serve as grim reminders of those who ignored the "Better Late Than Never" warning signs.

Although the British have long since yielded their hill stations to Indian aristocracy, vestiges of the imperial past both haunt and enliven Mussoorie.

The plushiest places to stay remain hotels with names like Savoy, Riviera, Paramount and Broadway. The ballrooms and billiard tables still in use at the Savoy and Hackman's Grand Hotel have a beat-up charm.

Elizabethan architecture is common. Burnt orange roofs and stone churries stand out among the tall pine trees.

Men wear cardigan sweaters and oxford shoes to stroll in the cool, damp air along roads lined with moss-covered trees. Schoolgirls in v-neck sweaters, gray flannel skirts and bright red socks walk to class under big, black umbrellas.

India's elite are not the only refugees in Mussoorie, evidenced by "Georgy Porgy's" Chinese and Tibetan Restaurant, which serves steamed dumplings called Mo Mos and "chang," the rice and barley beer for which Tibetans are famous.

The resort has a thriving community of Tibetans who sell their traditional handicrafts, as well as down jackets, windbreakers and athletic bags, at roadside tables. At its closest point, Tibet is only 15 miles away.

At dusk, the trumpets of the monks mingle with the calls of the monkeys and the birds in the trees.

RICKSHAWS, each pulled by two men, are the major form of transportation. In the off-season, groups of men, young and old, stand idly by their vehicles.

But all is not placid as it seems. Along with its old world charm, Mussoorie has a modern struggle with the pressures of commercialization.

Huge billboards promise hotels with "all modern facilities." Young Indian boys and girls in blue jeans stand mesmerized before video games.

Cubs have 'wonderful day'

By Mike Tully
UPI Sports Writer

The fans gathered in John Dillinger's old watering hole and cheered a team that shot holes in a 39-year-old tradition.

"We haven't had a winner in 39 years, and we're really excited about this," shouted Jim Murphy, 35, owner of the Bleachers Saloon.

He brushed off his 20-win season, as nothing special.

"Really, all that is immaterial," Sutcliffe said. "The main thing is we are going to San Diego. That's the whole ball of wax. A lot of guys win 20 games but not everybody gets to go to the playoffs."

Ryne Sandberg, the Cubs' leading candidate for Most Valuable Player honors, led the offensive effort, collecting two doubles and scoring two runs.

"I had a beautiful day! A wonderful evening!" shouted Manager Jim Frey, a pennant winner with Kansas City in 1980. "And the Cubs won! Wooooooooooooo!"

Sutcliffe, acquired last June in a seven-player deal with the Cleveland Indians, raised his record to 1-1, flourishing with a 4-5 record and suffering from "rool" canal water that caused him to lose 15 pounds at the time of his trade.

Sutcliffe righted himself upon his arrival in Chicago.

Mets proud of strides made in 1984

NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Mets can now officially talk about next year. But they still enjoy talking about this one.

"We did as well as any young team could," New York manager Davey Johnson said Monday night after the Mets were eliminated from the National League East race. "We are not there yet. We have a couple of moves to make to gray flannel skirts and bright red socks walk to class under big, black umbrellas.

Memories still recalled of Sipples, Squatrito

Membership in the Manchester Sports Hall of Fame will be increased by five Friday night at the fifth annual induction dinner at the Army and Navy Club.

Two of the five are deceased — Don Squatrito and Tommy Sipples — but their accomplishments on the athletic fields are still fresh in the minds of many.

Feats of both are often brought into conversations with old timers about the good old days when Manchester was a City of Village Charm.

Sipples, during his 25-year baseball career, earned the label as the best semi-pro baseball player in Connecticut. He will join two of his former teammates in the local shrine, Jerry Fay and Sam Massey being earlier honorees.

Two of his imported stars from Manchester who worked at Manchester High when he was in high school, and catcher Woody Wallitt.

When Bill Savitt of Hartford started up his Savitt when it was discovered that he could throw harder than any of the pitchers in the area he was converted into a moundman.

When Manchester rounded up a talented town team which attracted crowds in the thousands, Sipples made his debut as a pitcher but because of his hitting prowess, was shifted to the outfield.

Glancing at clippings from the 1920s and 1930s, Sipples was the big gun, the fourth name in the batting order, the power hitter with averages ranging from .30 to .50 in several leagues.

"Playing professionally had no attraction for Sipples who turned down several offers and was content to stay near the home fires.

Name lives on

Time has a way of diminishing exploits of an athlete but this wasn't the case with Dominic Squatrito. He was a legend in his time.

Actually, he was just finishing a fantastic athletic career as a schoolboy at Manchester High when he was killed in an auto accident several weeks before graduation in 1932.

It is hardly likely that the name Squatrito will ever be forgotten in Manchester.

While football was considered his greatest sport, he was the closest to a one-man team in track history

Padres 7-8, Giants 1-6

At San Francisco, Greg Harris allowed two hits over five innings and helped himself with a double and a single to pace a 17-hit attack for the West Division champion Padres in the opener.

Ramirez singled home Bobby Brown in the 11th inning to give the Padres their victory in the nightcap. The double loss sent the Giants reeling to their 92nd setback of the season. A San Francisco franchise record for futility.

Expos 2, Cardinals 1

At Montreal, Tim Lincecum singled home pinch runner Miguel Dilone with the winning run with one out in the sixth for the Expo. Reliever Neil Allen dropped to 8-6, and Jeff Reardon won to even his record at 7-7.

Blue Jays hang on, beat Sox

BOSTON (UPI) — Even when they were up 7-1 Toronto outfielder Jessie Barfield wasn't sure the Blue Jays had the game sewn up. It was only when Toronto had won 9-8 that it was over.

"They've really got some power and a lead like that is never safe in this park," said Barfield, who homered Monday night to help Toronto to victory.

He called it "a crazy game" marked by "a lot of errors."

Jim Clancy, 13-15, pitched 6 2/3 innings, allowing nine hits while walking two and striking out five to pick up the victory. Jim Key, making his 67th appearance of the season, 2 Blue Jays returned followed Clancy but was replaced in the ninth by Ron Musselman, who got the last two outs for his first save.

"You've got to give Musselman a lot of credit," said Barfield. "He came out and did a great job."

"He throws strikes, and his ball really has movement," added Toronto manager Bobby Cox.

But it wasn't a clear-cut win, especially when Boston came back from the 7-1 lead, he said. "It's typical of Fenway, especially with their hitters. They've really got hitting right through to the bottom of the order."

The Blue Jays grabbed a 1-0 lead in the fourth on Johnson's 14th homer, but Boston tied it 1-1 in the fourth when Jim Rice doubled and scored on Mike Easter's double.

Toronto made it 2-1 in the fifth when Alfredo Griffin reached on an infield hit, went to second on shortstop Jackie Gutierrez throwing error, moved to third on a groundout and scored on a single by Mosby.

The Blue Jays chased Bruce Hurst, 12-11, in the seventh, by sending nine men to the plate and scoring five runs to grab a 7-1 lead.

Full lineup

The full lineup of inductees includes former boxer Sam Montemurro, Wally Fortes, who made history coaching American League baseball, and Ed Wojcik, the first Little League graduate to captain a major college team. Notre Dame, and then play minor league ball. Maltempo held both the state middle-weight and light heavy weight boxing titles during his active days and today is rated the No. 1 ring referee in Connecticut. Fortin is best known for coaching baseball but he steered championship basketball teams in Rec Department Midget, Junior and Intermediate League play. There will be no main speaker this year, the recipients will have that honor, along with Fred Nassif, first winner of the Friend of Sport Award, Charlie Graf will receive the Young Athlete Award for his many contributions to youth programs in Manchester the last quarter century.
