Water boss calls plant a 'bargain'

By Kathy Gormus
Herald Reporter

The word "bargain" might sound like a contradiction when used in connection with a seven-digit figure. But Robert J. Young, water treatment manager, does not hesitate to use the word in describing the town's new $6 million water treatment plant on Spring Street.

Once it is started, the plant will centralize operations that until now have been scattered throughout town and will bring taste and odor problems under control, Young said.

"We're literally taking the system up into the '80s," he said last week while overseeing finishing touches on the plant.

The new plant will have nearly triple the capacity of the old Cooper Hill treatment plant, he said.

Water is expected to begin flowing through the plant within the next couple of months, Young said. Once it is in full operation, the plant will be opened to the public, an action Young said should eliminate some of the criticism directed at the water improvement project that included the plant.

THE PLANT WAS PART of a $20 million project authorized by voters in a referendum last year. Some residents have complained that they have nothing to show for the money, Young said.

"It's difficult for people to conceptualize that much money under the ground," he said, pointing out that the bulk of the $20 million was spent replacing or cleaning water lines.

Young said he doubted the skepticism would continue after people see the plant.

"We think it's a building townspeople will be proud of," he said.

Although the cost of the plant went from $9 million the first time the town put the project out to bid to its current $6 million price tag, Young said quality was never sacrificed.

The plant is being built by Fred Brunoli & Sons Inc. of Simsbury. Construction on the plant, which has a "footprint" of 33,000 square feet and sits on a six-acre site, began in June 1982, Young said.

A similar plant could not be built for anywhere near $6 million today, he said.

AT THE CORE of the plant is a computer that will monitor all treatment steps and can control the levels of the four town-owned reservoirs, Young said.

Czech poet wins Nobel

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (UPI) — Czechoslovak dissident poet Jaroslav Seifert, whose non-conformism was belatedly accepted by the Communist regime, today won the 1984 Nobel Prize for Literature, the Swedish Academy announced.

Seifert, 83, a signatory to the Czechoslovakian dissident manifesto Charter 77, is the first Czechoslovak writer to win the Nobel Literature Prize since its inception in 1901.

The Swedish Academy cited Seifert "for his poetry which endowed with freshness, sensuality and rich inventiveness, provides a liberating image of the indomitable spirit and versatility of man."

Lars Gyllenstein, the academy's permanent secretary, said the institution's 18 members had limited knowledge of the Czech language but had read some of Seifert's 30 works in English translation. He declined to praise any single work.

During the "Prague Spring" of 1968, Seifert worked for the rehabilitation of persecuted authors. The "Prague Spring" reform movement led by Alexander Dubcek, which lasted barely eight months, angered the Kremlin with its abolition of censorship and moves toward a multi-party system.

Seifert later condemned the August invasion of Czechoslovakia by Soviet-led troops that ended the reforms.

Elected chairman of the Czechoslovakian writers association in 1969, Seifert was deposed by the government of President Gustav Husak, which has only gradually accepted his non-conformism, the Academy said.

"Of course, there may be political aspects of any nominee to the prize ... but our main concern was a literary one," Gyllenstein said.

The Czech government in 1979 began permitting Seifert's works to be published in his home country. His most recent work is a memoir, called "Viecky Krasny Sveta" ("All the Beauty in the World").

Seifert was one of 150 candidates for the prize, although only a half dozen remained in the final round, Gyllenstein said.

Weary Congress looks to adjourn

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A weary 98th Congress packed its bags to go home and face the music of the electorate a week later than planned today now that it will be tidying up the session's last legislative details.

The chief housekeeping left was Senate approval of a catchall spending bill and a new debt limit. Senators also planned to discuss today a resolution on a genocide treaty members decided Wednesday to put off until next year.

With a golden-orange harvest moon hanging over the white Capitol dome, a deadlocked conference committee with members edgy to get out of Washington settled its differences Wednesday night on a $270 billion catchall bill.

The agreement, quickly ratified 252-80 by the House, dropped out 51 water projects — 10 of them sought by the administration — and banned covert aid to rebels fighting Nicaragua's Sandinista government until at least March when Congress will vote on whether to free up $14 million for the rebels.

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, said President Reagan will sign the "continuing resolution" but removal from the bill of administration-sought projects is not a loss for the president and it's not a win for the president."

House Democratic leaders early in the day said they would take out 30 projects worth about $100 million and authorization for $18 billion more in later years. Some termed that a capitulation to White House veto threats.

However, had Reagan vetoed the bill, members of Congress could have said Reagan vetoed it and thus shut down the government because he wanted money for the not-so-secret covert war against Nicaragua.

Trying to hold on to several important projects, chief Senate negotiator Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., tried twice to talk the White House into accepting his counterproposals but failed.

Hatfield displayed his irritation with the White House, annoyed with increasing Pentagon spending in contrast to the denial of what he wanted amounting to "not even petty cash at the Pentagon."

Wednesday's settlements wipe out the possibility of a post-election "lame duck" session, something members desperately hoped to avoid. They had planned to adjourn Friday but snags developed on the spending bill.

Mondale camp looks to Gerry for momentum

By Clev F. Richards
United Press International

PHILADELPHIA — Vice President George Bush and Democratic challenger Geraldine Ferraro face off today in their sole debate — a contest Republicans say will not change many votes but Democrats hope will give them a boost.

Democrats want a win by the first woman vice presidential candidate to go along with Walter Mondale's strong showing against President Reagan in their debate in Louisville, Ky., Sunday.

Such a one-two punch would show the Reagan-Bush team as losers, Mondale-Ferraro strategists believe.

The television networks estimate as many as 50 million Americans may watch the vice presidential clash, which will be broadcast live starting at 9 p.m. EDT.

League of Women Voters President Dorothy Ridings said Wednesday the panelists for the debate would be John Mashek of U.S. News & World Report, Robert Boyd, Washington bureau chief of Knight-Ridder Newspapers, Jack White of Time Magazine and Norma Quarles of NBC News.

Bush, 60, spent the day in his vice presidential office next door to the White House studying his black three-ring briefing notebook.

He planned a third mock debate with Rep. Lynn Martin, R-Ill., standing in for Ferraro.

"He thinks this is an important event in the campaign, one of many important events in the overall campaign," spokeswoman Shirley Green said, adding Bush still believes the outcome will not make much difference in the voting for Reagan or for Mondale.

"He will try to keep the focus on the top of the ticket" by attacking

Mondale, Green said, adding that Ferraro has so far been delivering "unremitting attacks on the president." Ferraro, a three-term congresswoman who represents Queens, N.Y., spent all day Friday preparing for the debate, part of Saturday and half the day Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

She staged mock debates in an independent television studio in Manhattan with Washington attorney Robert Barnett, a Mondale issues adviser, standing in for Bush.

Ferraro, 49, also looked at the videotapes of Bush debating in the 1980 primaries and watched a playback of her performance against Barnett so she could see how she came across on television.

Polls show many voters remain unconvinced Ferraro, a relative newcomer to politics with six years in Congress, has the experience to be president if necessary.

Bush's campaign plays up his experience as U.N. ambassador, liaison to China, CIA director, two terms in the House and four years as Reagan's vice president as making him well qualified for the top spot.

In announcing the debate panelists at a news conference, Ridings said White House chief of staff James Baker and James Johnson, Walter Mondale's campaign manager, would be joining with her to resolve the question of panelists for the second debate between the presidential candidates in Kansas City Oct. 21.

Scores of reporters proposed by the league for Sunday's debate were rejected by both campaigns. Four reporters were chosen, but one withdrew.

Ridings declined to say what specific changes would be made in the process for selecting the panelists.

Sullivan's her name

Shuttle astronaut has historic walk

By William Harwood
United Press International

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Shuttle astronaut Kathy Sullivan left the safety of Challenger's cabin today making the first spacewalk by an American woman in two decades of astronaut excursions in the vacuum of space.

Before Sullivan and astronaut David Leestma donned their $2 million spacesuits for the 3½ hour spacewalk, mission planners said Hurricane Josephine was no longer considered a serious threat to Challenger's planned landing Saturday at the Kennedy Space Center.

Leestma and Sullivan planned to remain roped to Challenger at all times as it cruised 137 miles above Earth at 17,500 mph.

The spacewalkers connected a hose-like tool between two tanks at the rear of the 66-foot-long payload bay to allow volatile hydrazine rocket fuel to flow from one to the other to show how satellites can be refueled in the weightlessness of space.

While mission planners expected the refueling operation to go smoothly, flight director John Cox said the process was complex.

"I don't think we ever do anything in space in a routine manner," he said. "It's not like driving up to your gas station and getting a hose out and sticking it in. There are more pieces to that tool operation than you can imagine."

The actual flow of hydrazine through the hose will be conducted Friday by remote control from the crew cabin.

Leestma and Sullivan also were told to make sure a broken radio antenna can be properly stowed for Challenger's searing glide back to Earth. If necessary, they could lash the 3-foot-wide dish in place with tethers.

A Russian cosmonaut was the first woman to walk in space earlier this year but since 1965 and astronaut ED White's stroll in orbit, American spacewalkers have made up an all-male club in 18 missions that included six trips to the moon.

Crippen, pilot Jon McBride and crew members Sally Ride, Leestma, Sullivan, Paul Scobee-Power and Canadian Marc Garneau awakened for their seventh day in space at 4:03 a.m.

The crew remained scheduled to end their mission back at the Kennedy Space Center on Saturday.

Mission planners tracking the northward progress of Hurricane Josephine were "cautiously optimistic" the storm would not be a threat to the shuttle's landing but they kept their options open and said the flight could be extended an extra day if bad weather fanned.

"If we're lucky and keep our fingers crossed, we may have a chance to sneak into the cape either Saturday or Sunday," Cox said.

The refueling experiment has proceeded well throughout the mission. Before the spacewalk today, four hydrazine transfers between the tanks were safely conducted by remote control through a built-in system of pipes and valves.

The experiment could pave the way for routine refueling of satellites. The first actual satellite refueling is tentatively scheduled for January 1987 with a Landsat Earth-resource spacecraft.

Sullivan's spacewalk originally was scheduled for Tuesday but was postponed two days because of a series of problems that have hampered the record seven-member crew throughout the flight.

C'est si bon for Eartha

Eartha Kitt swung through Paris Tuesday on a week-long concert tour in the country where she made her debut as a solo performer more than 30 years ago.

It was only after her purring delivery and all-to-the-hips pop as "drew kings and millionaires into her circle of fans that she returned to New York and wowed audiences in a Greenwich Village nightclub and in the show "New Faces of 1982."

Kitt's French itinerary calls for her to play Paris, then head south to Lyon and the Riviera, promoting her latest album of rock-tinged dance music, "Where Is My Man."

Kitt, who Orson Welles called the world's sexiest woman, will likely dip by St. Tropez, her agents said, where she has entered her latest video clip in the International Video Clip Festival.

Is it all that jazz?

Keith Jarrett opened his first-ever classical music tour of Europe in Stockholm, bringing a captivated audience at his Stockholm Concert Hall premiere to its feet.

Jarrett, who chose to open in Stockholm because he became entranced by the hall's piano and acoustics last year, was brought back for two encores.

"When I played jazz and did improvisation, some reporters would say it was not jazz at all," Jarrett said. "I was not in the ranks of the jazz pianists. But now that I've changed course, I'm suddenly known as the jazz pianist who changed style."

Burton's last film opens

The late Richard Burton's final movie, "1984," had its world premiere in London this week and a star-studded evening it turned out to be, Burton's widow, Sally, was escorted to the Monday premiere by John Hart, co-star of the new movie version of George Orwell's famous book.

Sing of the pop group Police turned up in shoulder-length hair, grown for his role of Frankenstein in a movie coming out this summer. Nick Rhodes of Duran Duran brought his wife, Julie Anne, to the movie and a champagne, smoked salmon and strawberries party at Maxim's afterward.

"I am delighted with the film," Hart said. "Richard, who was always so critical of his own work, would have loved it, too."

Workers are putting final touches on the new Spring Street water treatment plant and water should be flowing through it within a couple of months, according to Water Treatment Manager Robert J. Young. At left, one of two sand-and-charcoal filters that water will pass through during treatment. The bridge across the top will move along the filter, cleaning it, Young said. At right, pumps will take treated water from two wells to the customers.

Water plant called 'bargain'

Two cathode ray terminals at the computer console can display graphics of the water-distribution system, he said.

The computer, he said, "is the guts of the entire water system." It will enable plant operators to become aware of problems such as water main breaks even before the customer is aware of them, he said.

A personal computer in the plant's laboratory will be connected to the main computer so that state-required laboratory reports can also be generated.

THE LABORATORY at the new plant will be more sophisticated than that at Cooper Hill, Young said. In addition to having two to three times the space, the lab will have a piece of equipment — known as an atomic absorption unit — that will allow technicians to test some water samples that previously had to be sent to outside laboratories.

A 950-horsepower, V-12 diesel generator can run the entire plant in the event of a power failure, Young said.

"It's much more sophisticated and there are more back-up systems," Young said of the plant. The plant is designed to be energy-efficient and as mechanically trouble-free as possible, he said.

The plant will treat about 6 million gallons of water a day, but has a peak capacity of 12 million gallons, he said.

Young said he expects water quality in town to improve once the new plant goes into operation. A pilot model tested at town reservoirs before the plant was designed brought water well under state standards for color and cloudiness, he said.

Young could only shake his head when making comparisons between the Spring Street plant and the old one.

"It's primitive," he said of Cooper Hill.

Appeals court hears arguments in police retirement dispute

By Sarah Possell Herald Reporter

The Manchester Police Union got its day in court Wednesday in a dispute with the town over when police may take early retirement.

Attorneys for the town and the union argued their cases before a three-judge panel in the state appellate court when that new court consisted of presiding Judge T. Clark Hall, Judge John J. Daly and Judge David M. Borden.

Arguments Wednesday centered on whether town documents have set the normal retirement age for officers to retire with full pension benefits as early as 50.

The union is claiming in its court fight that the 1976 change gave police officers the right to retire early and collect partial benefits 10 years before reaching 25 years of service and age 50.

The town has maintained that an officer may not take early retirement until 10 years before he becomes 60, which is the age at which a town ordinance says Manchester police must retire.

The dispute began in 1980 when Police Sgt. Raymond Matzone, then 46, made plans to take early retirement and was told he would not be eligible for benefits for four years. Now 49, Matzone has been on the force for 22 years. He will be eligible for full retirement benefits when he turns 52.

By the town's calculations, that means he will not be eligible to take early retirement until he is 59.

The union lost the first round of its fight when Superior Court Judge Allen Smith ruled against it in a 1982 civil suit. The union appealed to the state Supreme Court. The case was referred to the appellate court when that new court was established in 1983.

Assistant Town Attorney Barry Botticello told the panel that the 1976 agreement only gave police the option to retire early at age 50.

"Nowhere in the agreement does it state that it's going to reduce normal retirement," Botticello said.

He argued that without specific approval from the directors to change the official normal retirement age, no such change is valid.

"The town seems to feel now that its agreement may be imprudent and is trying to avoid the impact of it," Lynch told the panel.

Lynch said after the hearing that he doubts the state Supreme Court would agree to hear the case if another state tries to appeal the appellate court's decision.

The mandatory retirement age of 60 in the town ordinance conflicts with federal law, which prohibits a mandatory retirement age younger than 70. That conflict is the subject of another lawsuit an ex-police officer has brought against the town in federal court.

The officer, James McCue, was forced to retire as community relations officer two years ago at age 60. His case is still pending.

Manchester In Brief

Police endorse incumbents

The Connecticut State Police Union Political Action Committee has endorsed several area incumbents seeking re-election in the Nov. 6 election.

Endorsed for the state House of Representatives were Democratic Rep. James R. McCannagh of Manchester, Republican Rep. Elsie L. Swenson of Manchester, Republican Rep. J. Peter Fusco of Marlborough and Democratic Rep. Donald F. Bates of East Hartford.

The union did not endorse either of the state senate candidates in the Fourth Senatorial District.

Jerry Herskowitz, president of the union, said the endorsements were based mainly on the candidates' support for law and order issues and their positions on legislation affecting organized labor.

Mercier opposes mandates

Jonathan L. Mercier, the Republican candidate for the state's 12th Assembly District seat, said he would not support state mandates on towns unless some funding was provided to carry out the orders.

"For all too long the state Legislature has been willing to impose new, costly requirements on our towns, without providing any funding to help defray the associated costs," he said in a news release.

Mercier said he is afraid meetings of a liaison committee would become "just a place to sit down and fight."

"It just gets too emotional," he said. Mercier said she has asked General Manager Robert Weiss to include the question of a liaison committee on the agenda for the directors' November meeting.

"She voted 'no' Tuesday when the directors voted to suggest again to the town to fight fires in the Buckland area. That suggestion has already been rejected by district officials."

The town has rejected a district suggestion that the district buy the firehouse from the town. The town cannot provide fire protection in the area around the firehouse because a state Supreme Court decision held that only the district has that right.

Fund-raiser scheduled

A steak barbecue fund-raiser for Democratic state Senate candidate Stephen T. Cassano will be held Saturday at 452 Tolland Turnpike.

Tickets may be obtained by calling Francis Maffe at 823-3308 or Democratic Headquarters at 647-7994. The cost is $10 per person.

Senior citizens may obtain tickets at the Senior Center for $5 each. The barbecue will run from 1 to 4 p.m.

ECHS announces winners

Twelve seniors at East Catholic High School have been named Commencement Students in the 1985 National Merit Scholarship Program.

Principal William Charbonneau announced this week the twelve placed in the top five percent of over one million participants in the 30th annual competition and will receive a letter of commendation citing their promise for future academic success.

The students are Dean Alderucci, Michele R. Boscik, David W. Buckley, Marcia E. Buckley, Christopher Dickinson, Yetaid Figueredo, Matthew D. Gilmond, Mark V. Grabski, Laurel C. Groody, Henry J. Pawlowski, Robert D. Phillips and Thad Terzo.

Town man wins $3,000

William Earl Patterson of 89 Bigelow Street won $3,000 last Thursday on the Connecticut Lottery's Rainbow Jackpot show.

A custodian in the Bolton Public Schools, Patterson was one of five finalists in the running for a top prize of $100,000.

"The top prize went to the Rev. Augustine Gusemi, pastor of St. Ann's Church in New Britain. He got on the show through a ticket he found in a Sunday collection basket," attributed his victory to his choice of the color blue — associated with the Virgin Mary — while competing on the show.

Mercier's point on liaison panel insults Faucher

Robert Faucher, who has recommended formation of a broad-based committee to study joint use by the two fire departments in Manchester of the town-built Buckland firehouse, took exception today to an observation by Republican Director Donna Mercier that such committees are "well intentioned" but that "participation in them has never been based on objectivity."

Mercier called Wednesday for reinstating a liaison committee with representatives of the town's Board of Directors and the Board of Directors of the Eighth Utilities District.

At Tuesday's meeting of the town directors, Faucher told the board, "It's time to quit playing games." He repeated his request that the directors take steps to form a committee made up of citizens from both the north and south sections of town, town officials, firefighters from both the town and district departments, and attorneys for the town and district.

This morning he said he has served on such committees and feels insulted by Mrs. Mercier's characterization of their role.

Faucher said the liaison committee did not work well when it was in operation and probably would not work now.

"The committee was discontinued several years ago when it got mired in controversy," Faucher said. He said he is afraid meetings of a liaison committee would become "just a place to sit down and fight."

"It just gets too emotional," he said. Mercier said she has asked General Manager Robert Weiss to include the question of a liaison committee on the agenda for the directors' November meeting.

"She voted 'no' Tuesday when the directors voted to suggest again to the town to fight fires in the Buckland area. That suggestion has already been rejected by district officials."

Ludes among 52 honored in nation

For the second time in less than a year, Manchester High School Principal Jacob Ludes III has been cited in a national program to honor outstanding educators.

Ludes was named one of 52 secondary school principals to participate in a new program — "In Honor of Excellence" — sponsored by the National Association of Secondary School Principals and Burger King Corp.

"It was a complete surprise," Ludes said. "And it was doubly nice being chosen by my peers."

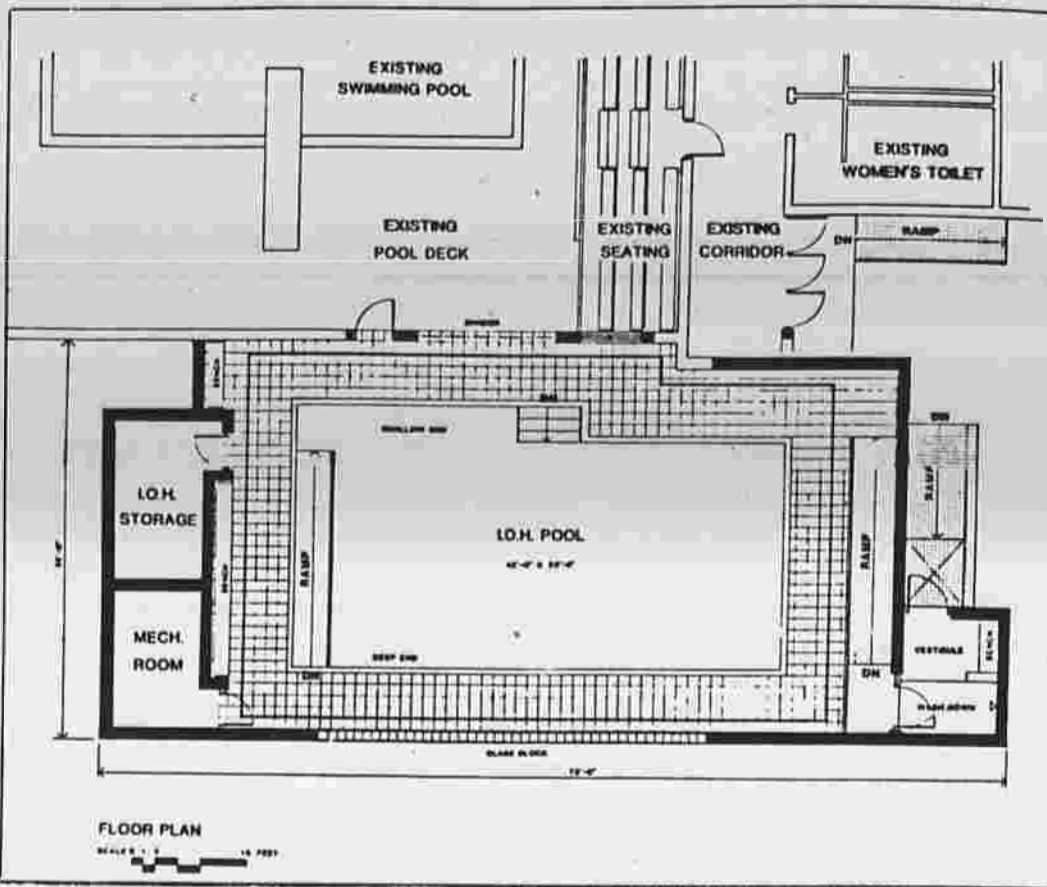

A special committee of school principals who plan to retire in June and the staff of the Connecticut Association of Secondary Schools made the selection.

All winners are invited to a five-day conference in Florida in early December, where experts in learning, technology, and futuristics will speak. Ludes said he plans to attend.

"The excellence movement will focus and strengthen then community attention on schools and all education in general," he said. "That focus will provide new strength, and hopefully, more substantial resources within the foreseeable future. The excellence movement will also attract talented young people who recently have dismissed education as a career choice."

Ludes became MHS principal six years ago, after working for 13 years in other schools. He received both his bachelor's and master's degrees from the State University of New York at Fredonia.

In May, he was named a special fellow of the Institute for the Development of Educational Activities. He attended the institute's conference at the University of New Hampshire during the summer.

IOH pool plans

A floor plan of a proposed pool for the handicapped at Manchester High School reveals how the facility would look. Manchester's Instructors of the Handicapped — a non-profit corporation made up primarily of high school students who offer swimming lessons to the mentally and physically handicapped — will present the plan to the Board of Education's building committee Monday. The pool would measure 42 by 23 feet, have special ramps, and be waist-deep.

Youth sentenced in break-in

One of five Squire Village youths arrested last summer on burglary charges has been given a year's suspended sentence and a year's probation for his part in the alleged break-ins, Manchester Superior Court records show.

Derek Goddard, 16, pleaded guilty to four counts of sixth-degree larceny. In return, the state's attorney agreed to drop four counts of third-degree burglary and one count of third-degree criminal mischief.

Police alleged that Goddard, of 34N Channing Drive, participated in break-ins last February at Spencee Street restaurants, including the Bonanza Sirloin Pit, Friendly's and the Ponderosa Steak House.

Another suspect in the apartment and automobile break-ins, Anthony Hollis, 17, was sentenced last month to three years in prison. He pleaded guilty to three counts of third-degree burglary.

The cases of the others arrested in connection with the 11 break-ins are still pending. Three boys under 16 also believed to have been involved were referred to juvenile court, police said.

Two Manchester residents charged last spring with seven counts each of first-degree criminal mischief have been granted a special probation that, if completed successfully, will clear their records within a year, Manchester Superior Court records show.

David Ostuni of 27E Esquire Drive was granted accelerated rehabilitation last week for his part in the opening of nine fire hydrants in Manchester May 28, according to police and court records. Daniel Breer of 76 Princeton St. has also been granted accelerated rehabilitation in connection with the alleged series of incidents, records show.

Police said the man, later identified as Mullins, followed the couple a convenience store on Main Street.

Mullins, 27, was charged with soliciting prostitution. He was granted accelerated rehabilitation in Manchester Superior Court.

Manchester police said the Connecticut Motor Lodge robber was described as 5 feet 9 inches, 160 to 180 pounds and clean-shaven.

Police said the description of the gunman in each case was similar: a white man about 20, wearing a gray sweatshirt with the hood pulled up.

The man entered the Connecticut Motor Lodge on Tolland Turnpike about 10 p.m., police said. He tried to force the night clerk to give him money but fled on foot after the clerk threw an ashtray at him, police said.

The Dairy Mart store in the Post Road Plaza on Route 30 in Vernon was held up about an hour later, police reported. The gunman made off with an undisclosed amount of money.

Police said the incidents Wednesday are similar to Sept. 27 armed holdups reported at the Essex Motor Inn on East Center Street in Manchester and the Colonial Inn on Kelly Road in Vernon.

Police would not say if they have leads in any of the cases.

Vernon police said the Dairy Mart robber was described as 6 feet tall, 160 to 170 pounds, wearing a tan ski mask, jeans and a gray sweatshirt.

Manchester police said the Connecticut Motor Lodge robber was described as 5 feet 9 inches, 160 to 180 pounds and clean-shaven.

Administration accuses Soviets of treaty violations

By Norman D. Sandler
United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, for whom arms control has been an elusive goal and a troublesome political issue, yielded to conservatives in Congress by releasing a report on 25 years of suspected treaty violations by the Kremlin.

The report, prepared by the bipartisan Advisory Committee on Arms Control and Disarmament, said the same thing Reagan has said for much of his first term: that history shows the Soviet Union's commitments to arms control cannot be trusted.

But instead of seizing on the report as new evidence to buttress his arguments, Reagan toned down his rhetoric in sending the document to Capitol Hill Wednesday and was careful to avoid ruing any election-year atmosphere of good intentions created by recent talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

Prepared by a 12-member panel of defense experts and lay members established in 1961 to advise the president on arms control, the report was to have been released last month. However, the White House ordered the document withheld until after the Sept. 28 Reagan-Gromyko meeting to avoid embarrassing the Soviets.

With conservatives in Congress eager for a public airing of the treaty violations and the White House reluctant to do anything to set back Reagan's recent overtures to Moscow, the study assumed added importance.

With its abundance of classified information edited out of the version released by the White House, the report concludes the Soviets violated arms control agreements in 17 nuclear and non-nuclear areas between 1958 and 1983.

During the same 25-year period, the advisory committee found 15 areas of Soviet activity "that raise suspicion of further material breaches" of existing agreements or commitments.

"The Soviet Union's actions since 1958 concerning arms control agreements demonstrate a pattern of pursuing military advantage through selective disregard for its international arms control duties and commitments," the report said.

Among the possible Soviet motives, the committee said, are: indifference to U.S. protests, attempts to gauge the effectiveness of verification measures, tests of U.S. willingness to push the non-compliance issue or attempts to "raise the level of U.S. confusion in order to hide more serious covert activities."

Many of the suspected violations were covered in a Jan. 23 presidential message to Congress in which Reagan called Soviet non-compliance "a serious matter" that "increases doubts" about Soviet credibility and "damages the chances for establishing a more constructive U.S.-Soviet relationship."

At the time, Reagan said the administration had determined the Soviets had violated the Geneva Protocol on Chemical Weapons, the Biological Weapons Convention, the Helsinki Final Act on notification of military exercises, and two provisions of SALT II. He also pointed to probable violations of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty, two additional provisions of SALT II and the Threshold Test Ban Treaty.

Senate grapples with 35-year-old headache

By Robert Shepard
United Press International

WASHINGTON — When the new Congress convenes in January, the Senate will find a 35-year-old issue still waiting to be resolved: whether to ratify a 1949 U.N. treaty that declares genocide a crime under international law.

Caught between the threat of a filibuster and the push for final adjustment, Senate leaders Wednesday gave up efforts to reach a vote on the treaty, which President Reagan says should be ratified.

Instead, Senate Republican leader Howard Baker urged approval of a non-binding resolution declaring support for the principles expressed in the treaty and calling for the Senate to "act expeditiously" on the treaty next year.

A vote on the resolution was expected today.

The development marked the latest setback in the 35-year history of the treaty, which has been opposed from the start by conservatives who fear it would undermine U.S. sovereignty.

Treaty supporters backed the compromise, but expressed disappointment that the treaty will not be ratified this year.

Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., said he would "prefer ratification," but called the compromise "a significant step forward" in the treaty's history.

In 1949, the only other time the treaty was debated by the Senate, a weeklong filibuster blocked a final vote and the treaty was withdrawn.

The treaty was drawn up after World War II in response to the slaughter of 6 million Jews by Hitler's Nazi Germany.

Conservatives opposed the treaty because it demands that each signatory pass laws governing genocide and they say that will violate U.S. sovereignty and the rights of states.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., a leader of the opposition, said the treaty — "a noble gesture" — would not have prevented any of history's genocide cases.

Critics of the treaty "are trying to make certain the sovereignty of the Constitution and the American people are not violated," Helms said.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., read the same statement of opposition that he made in 1974, saying the treaty threatened U.S. sovereignty.

Sen. John East, R-N.C., said the treaty would not be ratified this year.

OPINION

'Tale of Two Firehouses' seems unreal

If readers have the impression that the "Tale of Two Firehouses" being told in Manchester now is some unreal story about a never-never land, they are not alone. Some of us who are trying to tell the story sometimes have the feeling we are not dealing in realities.

Is this ongoing saga, as they say of the soaps, a fairy tale in which some fairly godmother we don't yet know is going to come on the scene and get everybody out of trouble, leaving the characters to live together happily ever after?

Or is it more like a Greek tragedy in which the actors are drawn inevitably toward community self-destruction with the taxpaying chorus wailing "woes" at the end?

It is, maybe, a mystery story in which nothing you read can be taken at face value and the true story is unfolding beneath the surface of the words on the pages?

Manchester Spotlight
Alex Girelli
Herald Reporter

You will answer, "Manchester."
"Isn't that the town with two firehouses?"
You will try to explain.

A tragic interpretation of the drama is uncomfortable. The mystery story analogy is more satisfying. It's more pleasant to think that somehow things are not what they seem, that someone with the power and the wisdom to do so is steering events away from the ridiculous toward the sensible.

THERE IS ONE CHANGE in atmosphere that may give rise to hope.

The latest developments in the dispute have not provoked leaders of the district or leaders of the town to revile each other publicly. The same kind of developments a while ago would have provoked invective.

A town official made a decision on a zoning question that limits the options the district has in establishing a firehouse on land it proposes to buy. No one publicly accused the town of rigging the decision.

Columbia faces a tough choice

Residents of Columbia must decide by tonight if they will agree to a state order to increase the municipal school budget by $225,000 or forfeit $460,000 in grants from the State Board of Education.

Many townspeople and officials—including the school superintendent—are opposed to the increase because they say Columbia cannot come up with the money. The state has a minimum spending requirement of $1.7 million and Columbia fell short by $225,000.

We sympathize with Columbia residents, and people in other small towns like Andover or Coventry must feel the same way at times. Education funding accounts for a huge chunk of a municipal budget. Small towns with a limited tax base and tight resources are strapped when they have to come up with the funds to pay for state mandated programs and requirements. Special education is the most recent example.

While these towns have limited resources to foot school costs, affluent suburbs with more people and perhaps some light industry find it easier to fund both the educational curriculum they want and the state mandates.

Glastonbury, for example, has a history of restoring money cut from an education budget after highly publicized protests by citizens.

The state appears to be repudiating the whole argument behind the Horton vs. Meskill case by forcing Columbia to pay the additional $225,000.

The idea behind the Guaranteed Tax Base was to give the state more responsibility for funding education and alleviate the hardships of the smaller, less affluent towns. The state has argued in court about the exact costs it must bear, but hasn't really balked at assuming more responsibility for education in the long run.

If Gov. O'Neill and other officials can argue with some justification—that the costs of meeting court-ordered requirements under the GTB formula are too costly for the state, why can't the same argument be made for Columbia? Town officials have estimated the additional $225,000 would increase the average taxpayer's bill by $200. Even last winter's heating bills didn't get such a jolt.

Every town wants the best possible education for its children, but we're not sure the disputed $225,000 would really make a difference in Columbia. Not even the school superintendent there believes so.

The state of Connecticut has made some good and at times innovative decisions on education. This time it has erred. Hopefully, Columbia can muster some powerful support for its cause in its battle with the state.

Cassano's efforts go beyond politics

To the Editor:

Searching out fact from fantasy becomes more difficult for the voter as election campaigning reaches a fever pitch. Simply stated, Manchester has in Steve Cassano a man who has made significant contributions to this community. These efforts go beyond the political offices he has held in town government since 1977.

This is the man responsible for Manchester's Sports Hall of Fame (an event which enjoyed record attendance this September). This is the individual who founded Manchester's Organization for the Physically Handicapped. This candidate helped lay the groundwork for Manchester's food pantry. Here is the person who has been responsible for the Volunteer Action Program at Manchester Community College since its inception in 1972.

This is the town director who has extended himself to represent our town through his involvement in Connecticut's Conference of Municipalities (presently serving as its secretary), and in the National League of Cities.

The fact is that this candidate has a record of contributing to and representing Manchester beyond its borders. He can continue this dedication for us at the state level if we give him the opportunity.

Cassano's record can't prove claim

To the Editor:

I was interested in Mr. Cassano's ad in the Sept. 29 edition of the Herald. At the bottom it said, "Elect Steve Cassano - He'll Work for You."

Let's examine his record as chairman of the Board of Directors' Real Estate and Budget committees, and see if that claim will hold up.

1. Buckland School - The initial offer was about $235,000, and because Mr. Cassano was new to real estate, the District Counsel John D. LaBelle Jr. said, in fact, that it contained no surprises.

It became public knowledge that General Manager Robert Weiss had let the state Department of Transportation know the town may be interested in buying land the district would like to own to increase the size of its firehouse site.

Briefly, District President Walter Joyner labeled the inquiry a town effort to thwart the district. Later, he softened his position, acknowledging that the inquiry may have been an independent administrative act by Weiss and not part of group strategy against the district.

DOES THE MODERATION of rhetoric indicate a desire to avoid confrontation or does it simply mean that opposing strategies, whatever their direction, do not include a public exchange of charges?

In any event it seems incredible that the district will actually build a firehouse so close to an existing town firehouse and the town will actually remain intransigent to the end about retaining its Buckland firehouse for itself.

Both the town and the district have interests to protect, and neither wants to do anything to the other if it can avoid doing so.

But if the leaderships of the two governments do not do something to avoid carrying the dispute to the point of having two costly monuments to their separate interests, maybe the people of the community—or of the community—will step in somehow.

CONGRESSIONAL INVESTIGATORS and attorneys on the case have already heard testimony that Vice President Bush had some knowledge of, and some contact with, the investment house, which was a CIA front operating with the full knowledge of agency officials.

The CIA declined to comment on grounds that the matter is now in litigation. It'll reveal the bizarre twists and turns in future columns. Here's the bare-bones outline, drawn from interviews and confidential documents:

At center stage is Ronald Ray Rewald, currently facing federal and state criminal charges stemming from his operation of a Honolulu investment firm called Bishop, Baldwin, Rewald, Dillingham and Wong. Rewald claims he was a covert agent for five years, running the firm for the CIA.

More than a month ago, a federal grand jury handed up a 129-count indictment charging that Rewald diverted to his own use some of the $22 million in investors' money "by means of false and fraudulent pretenses ... and omissions of material facts."

A year earlier, in response to complaints from investors and the Securities and Exchange Commission, as well as a bankruptcy petition lodged against BBRD&W, a federal judge froze the firm's assets and placed it in trusteeship.

Rewald was arrested and jailed by Hawaiian police. When the agency disowned him he fled a confidential, 40-page affidavit with 99 exhibits giving details of the BBRD&W operation—as well as several other CIA activities in the Orient.

HERE ARE SOME of the charges he made in the affidavit:

- 1. Rewald, who had worked as a CIA informer on anti-war demonstrators during his school days in Wisconsin, said he was introduced by CIA operatives in 1976 to Honolulu station chief Eugene Welch. Rewald said it was Welch who suggested setting up BBRD&W as a CIA front; and it was Welch who arranged a phony pedigree and $150 million net worth for the company and fake credentials for Rewald.
- 2. Rewald stated that Welch OK'd the hiring of a former National Security Agency employee to work full time for BBRD&W, and that at least 10 CIA agents worked for the company, including Welch's successor as station chief, John C. Kindschi.
- 3. From 1980 to 1982, the CIA used BBRD&W to gather intelligence on Japan, Indonesia and the Philippines; as a conduit for funds used in covert operations; and as a shelter for well-connected foreign diplomats and businessmen who wanted to export cash to the United States, Rewald stated.

THE CRUCIAL QUESTION,

of course, is whether Rewald is telling the truth in his affidavit. Confidential documents and transcripts of secret taped conversations appear to bear out parts of Rewald's story.

Footnote: The federal indictment against Rewald acknowledges that Welch was the CIA's Honolulu station chief, but accuses Rewald of having perjured himself when he claimed that Welch helped establish BBRD&W and its phony history.

CIA tied to swindle in Hawaii

WASHINGTON — At least one CIA agent was fired and several others disciplined when it was revealed that they were part of a Honolulu-based investment scheme that swindled private investors of millions.

The agency at first denied involvement, but has now admitted at least some connection to the swindle in confidential affidavits filed in federal court.

Intelligence sources told my associates Indy Badwar and Dale Van Atta that the CIA's inspector general investigated the investment operation and found the agents guilty of "poor trade practices," but concluded that they did not act illegally.

But the sources suggested that the internal investigation, which left a handful of agents hanging out to dry, may be just the tip of the iceberg. Still submerged, they say, is a massive scandal—a story of deception and betrayal that has the intelligence community watching nervously to see where the trail leads.

The Business Week-Harris poll found Mondale also received a higher rating on the question of which candidate was more truthful on whether taxes would have to be raised, with 50 percent favoring the challenger and 48 percent for the president.

Among young voters, those ages 18 to 29, Reagan's lead was cut by the debate from 66 percent to 29 percent, to 47 percent to 39 percent, the poll found.

White House sources said a 129-count indictment charging that Rewald diverted to his own use some of the $22 million in investors' money "by means of false and fraudulent pretenses ... and omissions of material facts."

A year earlier, in response to complaints from investors and the Securities and Exchange Commission, as well as a bankruptcy petition lodged against BBRD&W, a federal judge froze the firm's assets and placed it in trusteeship.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Voters overwhelmingly named Walter Mondale the debate victor over President Reagan, with the win translating into major gains for Mondale in the polls, new surveys show.

In an ABC survey of more than 1,000 voters conducted after the nationally televised debate Sunday night, Mondale was pronounced the clear winner by a 3-1 margin, the network said Wednesday.

"Basically, the survey shows that Mondale is trailing Reagan less," an ABC spokeswoman said.

But a Boston Herald poll published today showed Mondale has gained ground in Massachusetts since the first presidential debate Sunday and is tied with President Ronald Reagan.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Convicted killer Linwood Briley waited in a windowless cell near Virginia's electric chair today while attorneys and religious leaders made final appeals to stop his scheduled Friday execution.

Defense attorneys have asked the Supreme Court to stop the execution of the leader of the nation's largest death row escape, but the court has refused on three previous occasions, including last Tuesday, to hear his case.

Briley's lawyers claim the jury that convicted him was biased because death penalty opponents were excluded. They also say the death sentence was applied in a discriminatory fashion because Briley, a black, killed a white man.

Briley, 30, was sentenced to death for the 1979 murder of Richmond county western disc jockey John "Johnny G" Gallaher. Briley claims he is innocent.

Embassy jitters in Lebanon

BEIRUT — Lebanese police and Christian militiamen today tightened security around the French consulate in a resort town north of Beirut after reports of a possible terrorist attack, a police spokesman said.

"We cannot go into details, but we had to take extraordinary security measures around the French consulate in Jounieh after receiving reports of a possible terrorist attack," the spokesman said.

Jounieh is a Christian coastal resort town 12 miles north of Beirut. The mission was set up to handle the scheduled landing of the French presidential plane in the Christian eastern half of the capital for security reasons two months ago.

Heavy security is already in place around the semi-private French Embassy in west Beirut.

Wife won't give up hope

MECHANIC FALLS, Maine — The wife of Maine state Sen. Bill Dunlop has announced a fund-raising campaign to pay for a search for her husband, who is missing at sea in his attempt to circle the globe in a bathtub-sized sailboat.

Dunlop, who left Portland last year in his 8-foot boat, Wind's Will, was due in Australia 10 months ago but never showed up. Dunlop was last seen when he left the Cook Islands on June 23. His estimated arrival in Brisbane, Australia, was Aug. 11.

Some papers balk at Reagan train ride

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Some Ohio newspapers have decided not to ride along on President Reagan's whistle-stop train tour through the state Friday because the White House is charging more than $1,000 for each reporter.

"It sounds like the great train ride is turning into the Great Train Robbery," said one editor, who asked not to be identified.

White House officials said the total cost for reporters accompanying the president on the train would be about $200,000, with $150,000 of that in telephone hookup costs.

"We were telling people it could exceed $1,000," said Billy Dale of the White House transportation office, adding that about 200 reporters, photographers, TV cameramen and technicians were expected to ride the train.

Girl abducted, raped
FAIRFAX, Va. — A 15-year-old girl was abducted from a high school parking lot last week and raped repeatedly in a boys' bathroom while 10 other boys looked on and jeered, county police said today.

Fairfax County police spokesman Warren Carmichael said the incident occurred at about 9:30 p.m. Oct. 3 at Fort Hunt High School, near Alexandria, while two junior varsity football games and a PTA meeting were under way.

Police said they did not learn of the incident until the next day, when friends of the victim and members of the Fort Hunt football team reported it to school authorities.

The victim was dragged from the school parking lot into the bathroom by a man who had approached her earlier in the evening, Carmichael said. A number of individuals who were standing in the parking lot followed them into the bathroom, where the suspect shoved the girl into a stall, pulled her clothes off and raped her, Carmichael said.

Carmichael said at least 10 others watched the assault, some of them laughing and jeering. One other person also raped the girl, he said.

Hurricane watchers fear Josey could get stronger

MIAMI (UPI) — Hurricane Josephine drifted off the Atlantic coast today and forecasters said the storm's 85 mph winds could strengthen during the day.

The season's third hurricane pushed gales up to 250 miles from its center and was located at 6 a.m. EDT near latitude 29.4 north, longitude 72.5, about 450 miles south-southeast of Cape Hatteras, N.C.

"The hurricane is drifting toward the north at 5 mph and this motion is expected to continue today," the National Hurricane Center in Miami said in an advisory.

"Maximum sustained winds are 85 mph," said some forecasters and Josey could strengthen during the next 24 hours.

Josephine shifted late Wednesday from a northwesterly to a northerly course, turning away from a direct aim at the Carolinas.

Forecasters Miles Lawrence said, however, that Josephine's course still was uncertain.

Westmoreland libel trial begins after jury picks

WESTMORELAND, 70, claims he was libeled by the 1982 documentary "The Uncounted Enemy: A Vietnam Deception," which accused him of playing down enemy troop strength to deceive Congress, President Lyndon Johnson and the nation about the progress of the war shortly before the communist's 1968 Tet offensive.

The general, who commanded U.S. forces during the crucial escalation of the war between 1964 and 1968, denies any deception and said CBS' libel suit up to "severe contempt and ridicule."

On Wednesday, CBS' correspondent Mike Wallace, who narrated the documentary and is named as a defendant in the suit, appeared in court.

Also present were the two other defendants, CBS Producer George Crile and former CIA analyst Samuel Adams, a consultant on the program.

AT&T ANNOUNCES PLANS TO CHANGE RATES ON YOUR INTERNATIONAL LONG DISTANCE CALLS.

AT&T has filed a plan with the Federal Communications Commission to restructure rates for International Long Distance Service, excluding Canada, Mexico, and Cuba. The restructure will be effective in 45 days and will result in rate decreases and increases that bring more closely in line the price of international calls and the cost incurred for the service. The new rates are the result of the filing in order to provide price incentives that will increase customer calling during off-peak usage periods, thereby encouraging better utilization of international telephone network capacity.

HERE ARE THE PROPOSED CHANGES IN INTERNATIONAL LONG DISTANCE SERVICE:

- Establish 13 country specific rate schedules to be added to world region specific rate schedules that already exist.
- At present, rate schedules are daily, semi-daily, or weekly.
- Eliminate one of the world region rate structures, reducing the number from 9 to 8.
- Introduce new off-peak, discount prices to selected countries and regions.
- Reduce the hours for peak and off-peak rates to selected countries.

| Region/Country   | Rate Levels | Initial Proposed Rate |          |          | Additional minutes | Days/Hours                                     |

Woman fears 2nd marriage will bring one child too many

DEAR ABBY: I have a sticky situation I could use some help with. I'm divorced with three kids - 18, 17 and 11. I've raised them with no child support for the last eight years.

I want to marry a nice guy I'll call Sam. He was also married before and has two kids, now 11 and 12, by Doris, his ex-wife. Doris is married again and has a 3-year-old daughter (Suzy) by her present husband. She's expecting another baby any minute.

Bad breath can be caused by lungs, teeth, other things

DEAR DR. LAMB - My son has a problem with bad breath. I can stand five feet away from him and still smell his breath. His health is good and he makes regular visits to the dentist. He says he practices good oral hygiene.

Your Health Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB - My 16-month-old great-grandson weighs 30 pounds. His father lifts the child by his arms. I think that 30 pounds is too much weight on his little arm joints and I'm afraid he is being hurt. Please advise.

I believe the area that has been neglected by physicians is bad breath caused by dental problems. Those can usually be treated and often require repeated dental treatments to correct such problems as periodontal disease. Even good regular dental hygiene at home will not cure such problems without a dentist's help.

An old-fashioned rose jar will make home smell fresh

DEAR POLLY: For a long time, I have been unable to find a pine room-deodorizer. The ones available have a cloyingly sweet smell that I find unpleasant. I am housebound and cannot keep the windows open in either very hot or very cold weather, so the house seems stuffy.

Polly's Pointers Polly Fisher

I tried crushing mint in alcohol. That didn't work. I was going to try an old medicine vaporizer, but I think a part of it is missing - and, of course, I can only have fresh mint during the summer. What can I do to make my house smell good?

DEAR VIRGINIA: Here are several things to try: Make an old-fashioned rose jar or herb potpourri. For a rose jar, spread freshly picked rose petals in a thin layer in a large shallow cardboard box, on a wooden tray or on a drying screen such as an old window screen. Sprinkle the petals lightly with table salt. Put the tray of petals away for several days in a cool, dark, dry spot until they are completely dry and crisp. Then shake off the salt and pack the petals in a covered jar. Leave them in the jar for two or three weeks before opening for the first time. If you like, you may mix the petals with other spices or herbs, such as cinnamon or mint, to make a blended potpourri.

The same technique can also be used with fresh herb leaves. When you want to add a gentle fragrance to the air, simply open your rose jar for an hour or so and enjoy. Other measures: Place several spoonfuls of sweet spices such as cinnamon, cloves or allspice in a shallow pan and place in the oven on low heat. As the spices brown

DEAR POOR LOSER: You tried and lost, which is nothing to be ashamed of. There are no good losers - just good actors. Keep practicing and try again. Maybe next year you'll get the jump on the competition.

Friends honor Eleanor

By Andrew Blum
United Press International

HYDE PARK, N.Y. — Friends and family of Eleanor Roosevelt honored the former first lady at a wreath-laying ceremony today on the 100th anniversary of her birth.

At a graveside ceremony at the Franklin Delano Roosevelt home, the couple's three surviving sons — Elliott, James and Franklin Jr. — joined about 300 people. Seven wreaths were laid near the grave, including one from Jacques Onassis and the family of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

The Rev. Gordon Kidd, Mrs. Roosevelt's former rector, recited a prayer for her, saying, "We remember her as a woman at the people who reached out to thousands."

Kidd told the celebrants that Mrs. Roosevelt had "courage, humanity, humility, compassion and intelligence."

Her cottage at Val-Kill, where she entertained royalty and plotted strategy with women reform leaders, is to be dedicated later today as a national historic landmark.

The birthday celebrations culminate weeks of activities in honor of the woman who influenced American policy and thought, both as the wife of President Franklin D. Roosevelt and as an activist and diplomat after his death.

Val-Kill, 2 miles north of the Roosevelt mansion and 40 miles north of New York City, was considered home by Mrs. Roosevelt. She lived there for 17 years after her husband's death in 1945, retreating there for privacy.

"Val-Kill is where I used to find myself and grow," she once said. "Val-Kill is where I emerged as an individual."

It was at Val-Kill that Mrs. Roosevelt entertained King George and Queen Elizabeth by serving them hot dogs. Winston Churchill swam in the backyard pool.

She also brought leaders of the women's reform movement to Val-Kill for strategy sessions. The Park Service spent roughly $1.2 million to restore her Val-Kill site, which was vacant for years.

Although a wing of the FDR library at the mansion is dedicated to her and she is buried in its rose garden next to FDR, she never considered herself at home there.

In contrast to FDR's home, her cottage at Val-Kill looks comfortable, filled with faded silhouettes where 103 photos hung on paneling in her living room, amid warm furniture.

Mrs. Roosevelt's public activities continued after FDR's death. President Truman appointed her to the U.S. delegation to the United Nations. She pushed through the General Assembly, with Soviet approval, the Declaration of Human Rights.

A White House ceremony honoring her Tuesday erupted into political spat with feminists and Democrats charging the Reagan administration is eroding rights for which she fought.

Gehrig's disease might be new category of illness

By Gino Del Guercio
United Press International

BOSTON — University of Chicago researchers studying Lou Gehrig's disease say they think the killer of the famous first baseman Gehrig and actor David Niven may represent a new category of disease.

Victims of Lou Gehrig's disease have an antibody that when injected into mice causes nerve cells in the brain and spinal cord to stop branching to replace damaged cells. Antibodies are proteins, which normally attack only foreign matter, such as bacteria.

Researchers think the effect is the same in humans. Neuroscientists have been looking for a "disease of nerve growth factor," but the attempts up to now have failed.

"These new figures reflect our progress while maintaining the high standards of quality care Americans have come to expect of their health care system."

Health costs have been rising faster than overall consumer prices for several years, prompting government and private industry to tighten their belts. But recent figures from the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics indicate medical prices are running about even with other prices this year. The health cost figures include spending for hospital bills, doctors, nursing homes, research, construction and administration and other goods and services. The total includes funds from direct patient payments, government programs, private insurance and philanthropy.

The figures show: Government health spending totaled $148.4 billion, up from 1982's $135.8 billion. Of that, Medicare and Medicaid spent $91 billion, up from $83 billion in 1982.

The nation's hospital bill was $147 billion in 1983, up 9.1 percent, and more than a third — $45 billion — was spent by Medicare and Medicaid.

Americans spent $69 billion on doctor services, up 11.7 percent from 1982. Aside from doctor and hospital bills, the nation spent $42 billion on research, construction and administration, $29 billion on nursing homes, and $68 billion on other services such as eyeglasses, dentures, prostheses, drugs and dentists.

Seventy-three percent of personal health care costs were paid for by government, private insurance or other third parties, with 27 percent — $85 billion — paid directly by patients and their families.

For a while, it looked like the only thing that would be going to Detroit with the Padres was despair.

The first three Tigers singled off starter Ed Whitson and the score was 3-0 almost before the marching band had finished the national anthem.

out to cover for cells that die. The study's principal author, Mark E. Gurney of the University of Chicago, said his evidence indicates ALS victims have an antibody that prevents the growth of their nerve cells. But recent figures from the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics

Nearly half of the 27 samples taken from ALS victims showed the tendency to retard nerve cell growth in mice. Gurney said the effect may be more widespread, but the testing techniques are not perfect.

"The real implications of this work is the identification of the growth factor," he said.

San Diego — Kurt Bevacqua says he will do anything to get his name in the paper. So far in the World Series, he has.

A goat in Game 1 because of a base-running blunder, Bevacqua bounced back with a three-run homer Wednesday night to rally the San Diego Padres to a 5-3 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Now he doesn't have to catch balls tossed off a building to get publicity as he did two years ago in downtown San Diego.

"It was done for charity," said Bevacqua. "It wasn't as difficult as I thought it would be. They say the ball was traveling between 109-111 miles per hour when I caught it."

Bevacqua's efforts helped the Padres tie the World Series at one victory apiece heading to Detroit for the next three games.

Health costs up, but not as much as in other years

By D'Vera Cohn
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Nearly 11 cents out of every dollar Americans spent last year went for health care — adding up to a record $355.4 billion — but the government says the tab increased by the smallest percentage in a decade.

The nation's medical bill consumed a record 10.3 percent of the gross national product, up from 10.5 percent in 1982. The spending amounted to $1,459 for each man, woman and child in the United States.

But Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler, who released the figures Wednesday, said the 1983 health bill rose 10.3 percent over 1982, the smallest increase in a decade — proof, she said, that cost constraints by government and private business are working.

"We are making sure and steady progress against the health cost spiral," she said in a statement. "These new figures reflect our progress while maintaining the high standards of quality care Americans have come to expect of their health care system."

They fly low for leaves MONTPELIER, Vt. (UPI) — It was called the ultimate in leaf-peeping.

U.S. Air Force navigator Kirk Faryniak, 28, a St. Albans native, said he convinced his crewmates recently to detour two huge cargo planes over Vermont for a look at the blazing fall foliage.

Faryniak said the two C-141B planes were en route from Colorado to Massachusetts on Sept. 24 when they made the detour, which he called "kind of unofficial" but not in violation of approved Air Force courses.

He said the detour provided the pilots with training for low-level flying in mountainous areas — not to mention a good look at the autumn color.

WHY NEWSPAPERS?

Reach the voters with newspaper advertising!

Newspapers provide the ideal climate for political advertising because newspapers are in the business of keeping readers, of whatever political persuasion, informed on all aspects of politics.

Newspapers have a tremendous value for the candidate and are the obvious medium for political advertising because the various sections of the newspaper are devoted to the dissemination of political news and views: in news columns, in feature articles, in editorials, in "Letters to the Editor" columns, in cartoons.

Newspapers rank high in creating name identification. Newspapers rank high in believability. And newspapers rank high in providing the lowest cost per voter means of communicating and getting your message across.

This election year, perhaps more so than ever, people have a watchful eye on critical, crucial issues. Your job is to tell them about yourself, about the issues, explain your solutions to the problems that affect your community.

Bevacqua not kidding with bat

By Rich Tosches

SAN DIEGO — It was sort of like Steve Martin winning the Indianapolis 500. Don Rickles catching the winning TD pass for Notre Dame. It was Rodney Dangerfield hitting a 26-foot jumper at the buzzer to beat the Celtics.

Wednesday night, San Diego Padres' funny man Kurt Bevacqua — who struts through lockerrooms with arrows piercing his head, fills people's shoes with water, and prior to a game last month powdered his hair and donned Manager Dick Williams' glasses and uniform to bring the lineup to homeplate while Williams was serving a suspension — crashed a three-run homer to beat the Tigers, 5-3, in Game 2 of the World Series.

As far as the Tigers were concerned, Bevacqua was about as humorous as leprosy. He got as many laughs from Detroiters as you'd get from driving a Toyota through their city with an unemployment chart stenciled on the side.

Bevacqua's blast in the fifth inning ushered the World Series to Detroit tied at 1-1.

Bevacqua, used as a pinch-hitter all season but filling the designated hitter role in the Series, cracked an 0-1 pitch, sending the ball into the left field seats and sending nearly 20 San Diego fans into hysterics.

Bevacqua had two other hits in four trips to the plate, and afterward he basked in the attention.

"I hit one home run all year," he pointed out. "How the hell do I know if anything is going out when I hit it? I'm not what you might call real experienced in that type of thing."

Bevacqua also wasn't about to let the moment slip by without reminding all who would listen of what a performance he turned in.

Petry's lack of sharpness cost Tigers in Game Two

By Richard L. Shook

SAN DIEGO — Dan Petry's pitches weren't going where he wanted. Especially the one that landed in the left field seats.

"I just wasn't sharp," Petry said Wednesday night after Kurt Bevacqua touched him for a game-deciding three-run homer that lifted the San Diego Padres to a 5-3 victory over the Tigers which knotted up the World Series at one game apiece.

"I didn't have the stuff I normally have. The pitches they should have hit, they hit."

"I haven't thrown that many of that particular kind," Petry said of the home run pitch, a high slider that Bevacqua lined high over the left field fence in the fifth inning. "That pitch should have been hit."

The loss was the first by Sparky Anderson as a manager after 12 straight postseason wins. He had not felt defeat since Carlton Fisk's memorable home run in the sixth game of the 1975 World Series.

Carlisle leads Celtics

WORCESTER, Mass. (UPI) — Boston Celtics rookie guard Rick Carlisle had a homecoming of sorts, and he made it a good one.

Carlisle, who attended northeast Worcester Academy for one year, scored 18 points, handed out 5 assists and grabbed 4 rebounds to help Boston defeat the Houston Rockets, 124-105, Wednesday night at the Centrum.

UPI photo

"It was a good chance to go out and do my job," said Carlisle, a third-round pick from Virginia, who hit 10 of 18 field goal opportunities in his 25 minutes. "I felt good. I heard a lot of noise out there and it gave me an indication of how well I was doing."

Carlisle, benefiting from added playing time due to the holdouts of guard Gerald Henderson and forward Cedric Maxwell, scored 12 points in the second half while playing with most of Boston's starting unit.

"With the guys not in camp, everybody had a chance to learn the system. The pressure is never really on one person in this offense. It's nice, it boosts your confidence," said Carlisle, who played two seasons at the University of Maine before transferring to Virginia in 1981.

The Celtics were led by Larry Bird with 20 points and Kevin McHale added 19 as the Celtics, 2-0, jumped out to a 12-point lead at the half and Houston, 0-2, could never draw closer than 10.

The NBA's top draft pick, center Akeem Olatunji, scored 20 points for the Rockets and drew the praise of Boston coach K.C. Jones.

"With the moves he has, he's going to be some kind of player," said Jones.

Boston center Robert Parish also spoke with admiration of the 7-foot Nigerian.

"Every once in a while you get an Akeem or a Ralph (Sampson), also of Houston, but it takes rookie centers two or three years to find out themselves."

Houston coach Bill Fitch said that Olatunji was playing aggressively in the second half and converted from center, is still learning when to play near the basket or to move outside.

Houston's Lionel Hollins looks for a teammate to pass the ball to as Celtics Greg Kite hovers above in Wednesday's pre-season hoop game at the Centrum in Worcester, Mass. Boston won, 124-105.

"It's a matter of judgment, anything different offensively," said Fitch of the 7-foot-4 Sampson, who in 1983 was the top draft pick.

SAN DIEGO — Sparky Anderson has caught the Jack Murphy Stadium "wave" and wishes it would go out with the tide.

"In Detroit we have a professional 'wave,'" Anderson said. "The Padres' front office menon that has swept many ballparks recently." This one here looks like a winner.

Tim Lollar, who will start the third game for the Padres, disagreed.

"This is the high school now," he said with a laugh. "They're getting the idea."

Some Padres fans won't forget. Criticized by Chicago media members and others during the NL playoffs for their supposed laid-back attitude and frequent trips to the beach, a few had a message for those entering the ballpark Wednesday night.

"I went into the batting cage for two hours every day until De- cember," said Gwynn, one of baseball's premier line-drive hitters. "Then I go a little longer as we get closer to spring training."

"I got better this year and it's because of what I did last winter."

Heroes were also goats

UPI Sports Writer

In trivial pursuit of World Series heroes and goats who were one and the same person:

1. Babe Ruth was the New York Yankees' goat of the 1922 World Series with a .118 batting average and no homers in five games but their hero in 1928 with a .625 average and three homers in the Yankees' four-game sweep.

2. Rookie Yogi Berra played so poorly in the 1947 Series that he had to be switched from catcher to the outfield in the fifth game. He went on to catch in 13 more World Series and at his retirement held or shared 15 Series records.

3. Whitey Ford of the Yankees holds the records for most World Series wins and losses by a pitcher. He won 10 games and lost eight.

4. Rogers Hornsby became the toast of St. Louis when he was the Cardinals' player-manager against the Yankees in 1926; in addition to managing, he knocked in four runs in the seven-game Series. In his other Series, playing for the Chicago Cubs against the Yankees in 1929, he batted .228 and struck out eight times in 21 at-bats.

5. Christy Mathewson won 373 regular-season games and often is called the greatest pitcher in National League history. He won his first three World Series games by shutouts — against the Philadelphia Athletics in the 1905 Series — and then lost five of his next seven decisions in subsequent Series.

6. Don Larsen of the Yankees pitched the only perfect game in World Series history against the Brooklyn Dodgers on Oct. 8, 1956.

7. In 1957, he appeared in two Series games against the Milwaukee Braves and yielded eight hits, five walks and five runs in 9-3 innings.

Detroit wants playoff rerun

The Detroit Red Wings may not soon win a Stanley Cup, let alone fashion a dynasty, but making it to the NHL playoffs last year apparently was only a glimpse of things to come.

On the eve of the 1984-85 season opener, the Red Wings picked up one of the league's most respected veterans. Detroit got all-star center Darryl Sittler from the Philadelphia Flyers Wednesday in exchange for left wingers Murray Craven and Joe Paterson.

Sittler, 34, was acquired by the Flyers in January 1982 after a stellar career with the Toronto Maple Leafs. A 14-year veteran, Sittler is one of the league's all-time leaders in goals with 473 and points with 1,094.

"I don't think he's too excited about leaving Philadelphia," Flyer general manager Bobby Clarke said. "But he will be going to an organization that is rebuilding. They tried numerous times during the off-season to get him."

Detroit has been trying to balance youth and experience. Last year's top draft pick, Steve Yzerman, was the youngest All-Star ever and led all rookies in assists with 48 and points with 67.

This year, Detroit made Shawn Burr the seventh pick overall in the draft after scoring 85 points in 62 games. Then a trade with Vancouver netted the Wings feisty Teiger Williams, one of the league's few enforcers who actually can score.

Detroit and 7 other teams will find out just how they shape up when the NHL opens its 98th season tonight. The regular season, which runs through April 7, starts with Edmonton at Los Angeles; Pittsburgh at Boston; Hartford at the New York Rangers; Montreal at Buffalo; Quebec at Vancouver; Washington at Philadelphia; Toronto at Minnesota; Detroit at Chicago; and St. Louis at Calgary.

The rest of the team's action Friday night with the Islanders at New Jersey and Edmonton against St. Louis.

Edmonton, led by superstar Wayne Gretzky, won its first NHL title last spring by derauling the New York Islanders' bid to tie Montreal's record-tying five straight Stanley Cup championships. The Oilers' championship lineup is intact. A major trade Ken Linseman to the Boston Bruins for Mike Krushelnyski.

The Islanders' talent, experience, youth and depth could help New York recapture the Cup. A surprising Washington team that registered the best defense in the NHL last season could be a strong contender with the Minnesota North Stars are favored to repeat as Norris Division champions. Toronto Maple Leaf captain Steve Yzerman is expected to lead the charge for the Patrick Division title, and the Pittsburgh Penguins, who won just 16 games last year, are hoping No. 1 pick Mario Lemieux will elevate them from the cellar.

Boston won the Adams Division title last year, but the Bruins are already locking some wounds. High-scoring Barry Pederson has a broken hand and defenseman Grog Kuzak is out for the year with a knee injury. Left-winger Craig MacTavish is serving a one-year prison sentence for vehicular homicide.

Cougar booters fall in overtime

HOLYOKE, MASS. — For the second game in a row, the Manchester Community College soccer team let a 1-0 lead slip away.

McCRC returned to action at home Saturday at 20'clock against Middlesex Community College in the ninth annual "Milk Can Game."

After a scoreless first half during which neither team took advantage of scoring opportunities, MCC finally broke the ice with a goal 22 minutes into the second stanza.

Josh Corbett took the ball at midfield and lofted a kick into the Holyoke goal area. Teammate George Rebelo corralled the pass, broke free from the defense and put a shot past goalie Stu Ritter into the right post.

Holyoke charged back and tied the contest but with 6:39 remaining, Dan Belanger carried the ball out of his own end and dribbled down the left side through several Manchester defenders. Belanger then one-touched the ball to Rob Barry, who beat goalie Sean Riddell for the game-tying marker.

Just 3:39 into the overtime period, Belanger fed Rick Conant near the left post and headed the ball into the back of the net for the game winner.

Holyoke held a 19-15 advantage in shots on goal. Ritter made nine saves, while Riddell came up with 10.

Stoughton to Nighthawks

NEW HAVEN — Blaine Stoughton, who in five seasons with the Hartford Whalers became the team's second-highest scorer, will begin this season with the minor-league, now Haven Nighthawks.

The American Hockey League club announced Wednesday Stoughton and fellow NHL veteran Robbie Florek have been assigned to New Haven by the New York Rangers.

Silk Town swimmers excel in wake of 94-78 setback

At first glance, it seems hard to fathom a swimming team producing 28 individual best times and still losing a meet. But with two quality competitors like Manchester High and Wethersfield High pushing each other, records were bound to fall.

The Indians were beaten in their first meet of the year by Wethersfield, 94-78, Wednesday at the Indians' pool but there were no real losers.

"We needed a meet like this to bring out some excellent personal performances," said Manchester coach Dave Frost, whose Indians set high water marks on 28 occasions.

Manchester took five first place spots, including a pair by Mary Ann Troy, who won the 50- and 100-yard freestyles. Kris Noone copped the 100 and Shelley Factora took top honors in diving.

The Indians won their third consecutive match Wednesday, beating visiting Simsbury 15-5, 15-13 and 15-13 at Clarke Arena. It was Manchester's first three-game sweep of the year.

Manchester, now 5-4, hosts Enfield in its next match Friday at 3:30.

Sarah Bailey, Carin Gocht, Cathy Warwick and Paige Lepak played well all-around for the Indians.

The Indian junior varsity squad also won, beating Simsbury, 15-5 and 15-7. Julie Falkowski served well while Lisa Benefant played well defensively for 4.5 Manchester.

Choice' dismays GOP

By Tracy L. Geoghegan
Herald Reporter

BOLTON — Republican Town Committee members voted their dismay Wednesday over the recent succession to power of two Democrats on the Board of Selectmen.

Republican Selectmen Lawrence Converse and Douglas Cheney said they had no choice but to appoint Democrat Sandra Pierog first selectman after the death of Henry Ryba in September.

Some Republicans also objected to the appointment of Michael Ziska to fill Pierog's seat.

"If the selectmen had had their choice, Douglas Cheney would not be first selectman," Converse said.

Converse and Cheney said they had to appoint Pierog because she is a Democrat and the town charter stipulates that a person of the same political party must be appointed to fill a vacant selectman's position.

"We had no choice," Converse told fellow committee members.

Morris Silverstein said the Republican Town Committee should have been consulted before the three GOP selectmen voted Pierog into office.

"There were options," Silverstein said. "I would have chosen, certainly, to this committee to allow time for input."

Cheney said he did not want to create a political dispute at a time when the selectmen were trying to gain approval for four major capital projects.

Cheney said he contacted the town attorney for a legal opinion after Pierog's appointment. The attorney confirmed that according to the town charter and state statutes, the Republican-dominated Board of Selectmen was forced to appoint a Democrat.

If the selectmen had not filled the position within 30 days, Cheney said, the Democratic Town Committee would have had 60 days to select a replacement from other Democrats. A special election could have been called if signatures of 5 percent of the electorate were collected, Cheney said.

Silverstein continued to argue that the three Republican Selectmen should have consulted the town committee before they acted.

"Under the circumstances, the selectmen acted properly," said Mark Johnson, town committee chairman.

Johnson said that for "the sake of continuity on the Board of Selectmen and quick transition after Ryba's death, appointing Pierog was the right thing to do. The projects are the important thing," Johnson said.

John Republicans also expressed dissatisfaction over the appointment of Ziska to Pierog's seat on the Board of Selectmen.

"My God, he's on every committee in town," said Grant Davis.

Cheney agreed. "One man has everything," he said.

Ziska is the Democratic nominee for the 35th Assembly District seat now held by Rep. J. Peter Fuscus, R-Marlborough.

Business Prospects, Planning Commission and Conservation Commission and is chairman of the Water Pollution Advisory Council.

Tennis courts studied

A PBC member told the commission Wednesday that it would cost about $3,000 to repair the cracked tennis courts temporarily and about $30,000 to fix them for good.

Michael Misari said his research showed that the courts could be patched for the lesser amount, a process that would slow the cracking for two to three years.

A permanent repair would mean removing at least half of the asphalt surface, reinforcing the base beneath and resurfacing the courts, he said. The original base was not properly installed, he claimed.

"You can't correct it unless you tear 'em up and do it," Misari said, but he recommended going with the cheaper repair.

"I think they're better off with the $3,000, just do it every two or three years," he said.

The commission took no action on his recommendation. If the Board of Education decides to stick with the less expensive repair, the commission would be the lesser amount, a process that would slow the cracking for two to three years.

A Bolton contractor estimated the cost of fixing the leaky walls at Bolton Elementary School at $3,785, a member of the PBC said Wednesday.

Town school and building officials have said the southwest wall leaks when it rains. Members of the building commission said the water apparently comes in where the wall meets roof flashing.

School maintenance officials recommended using silicon to seal the seam and the concrete blocks in the wall. The estimate came from Dam-it Waterproofing of Bolton.

Since the estimate is less than $10,000, the project will be referred to the Board of Education. The Public Building Commission oversees projects that cost $10,000 and up.

Ross case heads to trial

WILLIAMSTOWN (UPI) — Superior Court Judge Richard C. Noren has ruled the state has enough evidence to try Michael B. Ross for the slaying of two young women in eastern Connecticut.

Noren found probable cause Wednesday for the young insurance agent to be charged with the deaths of Tammy L. Williams, 17, of Brooklyn and Debra Smith Taylor, 23, of Griswold.

Ross, 25, of Griswold, also will stand trial in New London Superior Court for the slayings of four more young women. He is being held at the state jail in Hartford.

The state constitution requires a judge to find probable cause before a person can be tried on a charge punishable by life in prison or death. The capital felony murder charges against Ross carry a possible death sentence.

Noren issued his ruling after a hearing in Windham County Superior Court over Williams' slaying.
