GEORGE BUSH ... 'blow Fritz away'

By Laurence McQuillan United Press International

PHILADELPHIA — George Bush, claiming victory in the vice presidential debate, says it will help the Republican ticket "blow Fritz Mondale away," but Geraldine Ferraro is calling herself the winner and proclaims: "Two out of two ain't bad."

The two vice presidential candidates generally battled on equal footing in their Thursday night contest. In light of Walter Mondale's strong showing in his debate with President Reagan, the vice presidential showdown took on heightened importance as both presidential campaigns strived for momentum.

"I never felt so great in my life," Bush said after the contest. "I am absolutely convinced that we've turned this thing around. I believe President Reagan is going to blow Fritz Mondale away."

You have to admit, two out of two ain't bad," referring to Sunday's presidential debate in Louisville. "We have not yet begun to fight."

In Miami, Mondale said he was pleased with his running mate's performance, saying it showed "the difference between a cheerleader on the one side and a leader on the other."

An early poll sampling by ABC News taken right after the debate found that 45 percent of those queried felt Bush had won, to 32 percent who thought Ferraro had taken the bout. The remaining 25 percent was undecided.

Ferraro flies to Madison, Wis., today to join Mondale for a rally on the steps of the state capitol, and then stumps in the Chicago area. Bush campaigns on his own in Elizabeth, N.J., and Birmingham, Ala., while Reagan takes a whistle stop train trip through Ohio. With as many as 50 million viewers watching, the two candidates clashed on abortion, civil rights, foreign and economic policy, and their individual tax returns.

The most heated moment of the 65-minute exchange erupted over Lebanon — with Ferraro warning Bush about his "patronizing attitude" toward her grasp of foreign policy.

The sharp exchange began with a Ferraro attack on Reagan's policies in Nicaragua. "When I think of the things they're doing in Central America, supporting a covert war, I don't support that kind of activity."

Bush replied: "I think I just heard Mrs. Ferraro say that she would do away with all covert actions. If so, that has very serious ramifications, as the intelligence community knows. This is very serious business."

The remarks clearly struck a nerve in his opponent, prompting

Ferraro to snap: "I almost resent Vice President Bush, your patronizing attitude that you have to teach me about foreign policy."

"Please don't categorize my actions," she warned. "Leave the interpretations to the American people."

In other areas, Bush said he was wed to the president's policies "every step of the way" — while Ferraro reminded her rival he once dismissed Reagan's economic program as "voodoo economics" before joining the GOP ticket in 1980.

Ferraro said she would resign from office if her Catholic religion conflicted with the national interest and warned the Soviets she would take "swift, concise and certain retaliation" if she became president.

Bush said that, like many Americans, he believes he pays "too much taxes," and that he agrees with Reagan that "nuclear weapons should never be fought with."

IRA takes credit for hotel bombing

By Mark Schacter United Press International

BRIGHTON, England — A bomb blast ripped through a resort hotel where Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and most of her Cabinet were staying early today, killing four people and injuring at least 25, including a government minister and prominent member of Parliament.

The Irish Republican Army claimed credit for the attack. British Broadcasting Corp. television news said four bodies were pulled from the wreckage. Police officially confirmed one of the deaths.

The deafening blast, centered in the hotel lobby area, came around 3 a.m. as Thatcher worked on her keynote address to the Conservative Party's annual convention, police said.

"The IRA claims responsibility for the detonation of 100 pounds of gelignite in Brighton against the British Cabinet and the Tory (Conservative Party) war-mongers," an IRA statement issued in Dublin said.

"Thatcher will now realize that Britain cannot occupy our country, torture our prisoners and arrest our people on their own streets and get away with it. Today we were unlucky but remember we have only to be lucky once — you will have to be lucky always. Give Ireland peace and there will be no war."

The statement was signed by "P. O'Neill," whose identity was not immediately known.

One of the most prominent members of the Cabinet, Industry Secretary Norman Tebbit, fell four floors and was trapped beneath tons of rubble when his wing of the hotel was shredded by the explosion.

Grimacing and moaning, Tebbit was pulled from the wreckage in blood-stained pajamas four hours later by firemen guided in their frantic search by floodlights supplied by television camera crews.

He suffered a broken leg and chest injuries and hospital officials said he would need surgery.

Among the last to be pulled from the rubble was John Wakeham, the Conservative Party's floor leader in the House of Commons. One junior trade minister was quoted as saying he was in "very bad" condition.

News reports said one of those still missing was Conservative Member of Parliament Sir Anthony Berry.

"I was up working," Thatcher said. "I had just turned to do one final paper and then it went off. My husband was in bed."

Firemen raised ladders and cranes to the upper floors of the hotel to reach casualties, and some of the injured were brought down strapped to stretchers on hydraulic platforms.

Thatcher and her senior ministers have been in Brighton since the beginning of the week for the annual convention, which was to end today following her speech. Home Secretary Leon Brittan told an early morning news conference 15 to 20 pounds of explosive were used in the "barbaric outrage."

"A ghastly event of this kind is deeply worrying," Brittan said. "There's no way in the free world that total security is possible."

Thatcher and Brittan insisted the convention would go on as planned despite the bomb.

"The strength of our democratic system and our determination not to succumb to outbreaks of this kind is shown by the fact that we will go ahead with that confidence," Brittan said.

The Conservatives' meeting resumed on time, although many seats were empty in the auditorium. The party members bowed their heads and recited the Lord's Prayer in memory of the victims.

An assistant in the Bloomfield Recreation Department has been appointed director of recreation in Manchester, town General Manager Robert H. Weiss announced today.

Donald S. Sprague, 33, has been with the Bloomfield Recreation Department since 1978 as an administrative assistant for parks and recreation.

He has a master's degree in recreation administration from the University of Connecticut and a bachelor's degree from Springfield College.

"He will begin his new duties on Nov. 5, Weiss said.

"Mr. Sprague brings to his position a broad experience both in program administration and administrative responsibilities with the Bloomfield Recreation Department," Weiss said in a news release.

Sprague said today he sought the position in Manchester for "professional advancement."

"I've been an assistant for seven years and Manchester seemed like a good opportunity," he said.

Sprague said he was not familiar with Manchester's recreation programs. But he said, "They have a reputation for having good facilities."

He said he knew former Director of Recreation Steve Thomson, who resigned in June to start his own travel business in California.

Sprague is a lifelong resident of the Hartford area. He now lives in Newington.

Sales tax revenue surge continues

By Mark A. Dupuis United Press International

HARTFORD — Strong consumer confidence and buying by prospering businesses have been credited for the 21.2 percent increase in state sales tax revenues in August.

It was the 15th consecutive month revenues from the state's largest source of tax dollars grew more than 20 percent and the 22nd month of double-digit growth, chief state revenue forecaster Edward Balda said Thursday.

The strong showing by the sales tax was cited as the main reason for a record $164.4 million surplus posted in the last fiscal year, which ended June 30. Also, the trend is likely to increase the state's projected $38 million surplus for the current fiscal year, which runs through June 30, 1985.

Balda said he couldn't say how much the latest growth would affect the state surplus because his figures don't reflect expenditures, which could come in higher than expected and offset the higher revenues.

The state collected more than $111.9 million in taxes on August sales, a 21.2 increase over the $92.3 million collected on sales in August 1983, said Balda, chief of revenue and economic forecasting in the Office of Policy and Management.

"It's again very very strong growth. It can't continue this way, it cannot continue this way," Balda stressed. "What I can't tell you is when it is going to change."

Strong consumer confidence, buying by prospering businesses and auto sales contributed to the August sales tax jump. New car registrations for the month increased almost 45 percent over the same month last year. "That's a lot of cars and that's a lot of tax," Balda said.

However, while the sales tax revenues grew by more than 20 percent, Balda said personal income grew by only 16 percent to 17 percent, indicating the upward trend will have to come to an end.

"The key thing is when is this going to slow down. We know it's going to slow down, the question is when. That's a tough one," he said. "Definitely the national economy is slowing down and that means soon thereafter we follow."

U.S. wins boundary feud

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (UPI) — The World Court today drew a boundary line in waters disputed by the United States and Canada off the Maine coast, granting most of the U.S. claim.

At stake was 30,000 square miles of ocean space bounded by Maine, Massachusetts and Nova Scotia. U.S. Geological Survey experts have said the region could contain 1.5 billion barrels of oil and 12.2 trillion cubic feet of natural gas.

In a 4-1 decision, a special World Court tribunal granted the United States about four-fifths of the area. Both sides have said they will accept the court's ruling.

Initial estimates of the size of the region designated for U.S. control was based on maps released by the court.

Following the ruling, legal teams from both countries argued and shook hands, but declined to comment on the decision.

Both U.S. and Canadian representatives said they would hold separate news conferences to discuss the decision further later in the afternoon.

U.S. lawyers have told the special five-man tribunal headed by Italian Roberto Ago that the region, part of the Georges Bank territory, has been fished almost exclusively by American fishermen for 180 years. The area's status as the "last great American fishery" means it should remain in U.S. hands, they said.

Doctors order rest

Tammy Bakker, wife of PTL Club President Jim Bakker, has been released from a Palm Dale hospital under orders to rest because of an erratic and extremely rapid heartbeat. PTL officials in Charlotte, N.C., said.

Mrs. Bakker, 42, returned with her husband to their vacation home near Palm Springs, PTL spokeswoman Teresa Gardner said.

Bakker has been unavailable for comment since he disclosed last week that he bought a $450,000 home near Palm Springs in May. The house saga began Aug. 1, when Bakker told TV viewers of the "Jim Bakker Show" his family had given nearly all they owned to PTL. Mrs. Bakker urged viewers to pay PTL's bills because "Jim and I can't. We've given everything we have."

Bakker declined the home purchase after the Charlotte Observer asked questions about the house and two cars Bakker bought for about $100,000.

The modern masters

With 40 paintings from his incredible collection already touring the United States, Baron Hans Heinrich Thyssen-Bornemisza introduced another 16 of his prized possessions to London Tuesday. Sir Hugh Casson, president of the Royal Academy of Arts, told a preview gathering the Thyssen collection was "one of the largest and finest and most passionately collected in the world."

Baron Thyssen himself said these "modern masters" — every great name from Corot to Lucien Freud — "is much more representative (of the whole collection) than those touring the United States." The Royal Academy is showing Thyssen's Picassos, Van Goghs, Dalis, Cezannes and many others, under Princess Margaret's patronage, until Dec. 19.

Robert Gray, chairman of Gray and Co., said Wednesday in a statement that Bolger will "bring new strength" to the organization.

"Postmaster General Bolger has demonstrated he is one of America's most skilled business managers," said Gray. "He has directed the nation's largest non-government enterprise since 1978 with responsibility for a yearly budget of $28 billion on a nationwide system of 690,000 employees and dealing with 12 unions."

Bolger will join the firm Jan. 1, 1985.

The lost vocal cord

The sun was Mercury's undying Sunday when British pop supergroup Queen had to send thousands of disappointed South African fans home from Sun City because bare-chested, sexy lead singer Freddie Mercury lost his voice 30 minutes into the show.

A spokeswoman for the Vegas-style casino and resort, about 40 miles from Johannesburg, said Queen would cancel three more of their 11 spectacular sound and light shows.

As Mercury underwent medical treatment to restore his voice, the showgoers said doctors blamed the dusty, dry Sun City air for Mercury's ailment. Ticket holders were offered refunds — small consolation to those who had paid up to $400 to travel as far as 1,000 miles to see Mercury perform.

Although it has not been officially announced, Farrah Fawcett is pregnant.

Friends say Farrah, who received good reviews for her performance as a battered wife in "The Burning Bed" TV movie, is expecting a baby after the first of the year but hasn't announced marriage plans. She has been the constant companion of Ryan O'Neal since leaving ex-husband Lee Majors more than four years ago.

Jaquyn Smith, still Farrah's friend from their "Charlie's Angels" days, has offered her pregnant pal a bunch of baby clothes only slightly worn by Jaquyn's 2½-year-old son, Gaston.

Through the looking glass

TV mimics life in a big way when the HBO drama "Countdown To Looking Glass" debuts Oct. 16. Six leading political and military experts, including former Sen. Eugene McCarthy and the late Ellsworth Bunker, former U.S. ambassador to NATO, portray themselves in the program.

"Looking Glass" depicts nine days of international tension that bring the world to the threshold of World War III as seen by a fictional network TV news team. Some of those who play journalists are hardly fictional — Nancy Dickerson and Eric Sevareid even use their own names in the production.

She's a video brat

Cyndi Lauper is the first rock 'n' roll star to be the victim of a practical joke on NBC's "TV's Bloopers & Practical Jokes" Oct. 16. Lauper was at a radio station waiting for what she thought was an interview. She was asked to keep an eye on the two children of the "station manager" while he attended a brief meeting elsewhere in the building.

The kids proceeded to get her under up by criticizing her singing, her clothing and her hairdo and by throwing things around. Finally, she was told it was all a gag for the TV show.

DOT official urges turnout at Main St. hearing

By Kathy Gormus Herald Reporter

The rebuilding of downtown Main Street probably cannot begin until the spring of 1987, a state Department of Transportation official told nearly 100 people over eggs and sausage this morning.

Robert Rakowski, the DOT's liaison for the Main Street project, said a public hearing on the reconstruction plan has been scheduled for Nov. 27 in the Lincoln Center hearing room.

Joining Rakowski at the Jester's Court for a breakfast session sponsored by the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce were Deputy Commissioner of Transportation William A. Lazarek and John B. Jensen, a DOT project manager. The three spoke on the progress of several highway projects in the Manchester area.

Rakowski urged support for the Main Street project, which has been in the works for a number of years and was previously rejected by the DOT.

"We would like to have a good response at the public hearing," he said.

Mike Belcher, chairman of the chamber's board of directors, said the chamber would sponsor an informational session on the Main Street plan before the hearing so that hearing time would not be wasted by explanations of the plan.

Some merchants on Main Street have said they fear the plan could turn the street into a four-lane highway that would discourage people from stopping.

Kenneth C. Burkamp, owner of the Manchester Mall at 81 Main St., asked, if the DOT had considered the loss of a 30-space parking lot on Park Street when it planned to add three off-street lots.

"The lot up at Pearl Street is not going to help us much — it's four or five blocks away," Burkamp said.

Rakowski said the three new lots were included only to replace the on-street parking that would be lost under the plan.

The plan calls for the elimination of more than 100 on-street parking spaces, two lanes of traffic in each direction and construction of an access road just east of Main Street that would connect several off-street parking lots.

The state has already approved the concept of the plan.

Concerning other projects, Jensen said work on the reconstruction of Interstate 84 through Manchester is well advanced. Access to areas in Manchester served by existing exits will be maintained at all times, he said.

Lazarek also said the DOT is ready to seek federal approval of plans to complete the highway from Bolton to Columbia. However, the Connecticut Citizens Action Group has vowed to fight the DOT on the project, he said.

All highway projects east of the river have high priority with the DOT, followed by the widening of Interstate 91, Lazarek said.

He said a $5.5 billion transportation program passed by the General Assembly last year has assured the state of money for highway improvements. "The infrastructure plan was proposed by Gov. O'Neill. This will enable us to accelerate just about everything we're doing in the department," he said.

The state now gets about $70 million a year in federal highway aid, Lazarek told the chamber members and guests.

Landlord and department store owner George Marlow defends conditions at his 869 Main St. apartment building before the Housing Code Enforcement Committee Thursday. At right is his lawyer, John D. LaBelle Sr., who has threatened a lawsuit against the town if the code is not applied consistently.

Enforcement group delays action on Marlow building

By Sarah E. Hall Herald Reporter

Landlord George Marlow sparred with members of the Housing Code Enforcement Committee Thursday, before the panel decided to postpone action on problems in his 869 Main St. apartment building so a new proposal can be considered.

Marlow spoke during the hearing in Lincoln Center of his poor and elderly tenants, charging that the town has failed to provide for them properly. "It puts an unfair burden on a landlord, and I feel it has to stop," he said.

Installing bathrooms and enlarging apartments which fall under the 400-square-foot minimum — as the code requires — would not be practical if rents are to stay low, according to Marlow. But committee members insisted it would be feasible.

At issue was a plan to recombine rooms, proposed by Health Director Ronald Kraatz, a panel member. Others on the eight-member panel are the town's chief building inspector, its two fire chiefs and representatives of several other departments.

"It seems to me there is a very simple and easy way to meet the 400-square-foot requirement in at least 12 apartments in that building — without doing anything more than opening up some existing doors," Kraatz said. Though some individual rooms would still fall below the code's minimum of 120 square feet, Kraatz said, it would be reasonable for the committee to waive that requirement.

The health director challenged Marlow's argument that parts of the code are unfair and unreasonable. Using other standards to judge Marlow's case would be "tantamount to changing the code of the Town of Manchester," Kraatz said. "I think it would be inappropriate for us to do that."

But Marlow said that making his 21 apartments bigger — and reducing their number — would pose a financial hardship, since his tenants can barely pay their rent already.

"And I'm not putting a $5,000 or $10,000 bathroom into an apartment I get $200 a month for," he said.

Marlow complained that he is being "put on trial" for code violations in his 57-year-old complex, which was once the Orford Hotel. He held that his building's problems are unique.

"If this building violates the code the way it is, believe me, you have 1,000 other violations in town," Marlow said.

Door-to-door inspections of the downtown portion of Main Street are planned for soon after the committee met on Oct. 2 to begin work on the code.

Marlow's lawyer, John LaBelle Sr., threatened to sue the town if it did not enforce the code elsewhere.

"Frankly, I'm a little tired of all this," Marlow said Thursday. "I interpret what you're saying as that I should close the building down."

Earlier in the hour-long hearing, which was continued from Oct. 2, Marlow said that he did not need the building — "financially or otherwise." More than once, he mentioned that he was "really puzzled" about what to do and asked the committee for help.

But he reminded the group that the town's action against him began with a plea for assistance last March.

"It was I who asked for help from the Department of Health, and all I got was zero," Marlow said. At the time, he was seeking to evict a tenant who took in several young people barred from Manchester's homeless shelter.

A subsequent inspection revealed 82 housing code violations ranging from cockroaches infestation and unsanitary conditions to faulty wiring, inadequate kitchen and bathroom facilities, and lack of sufficient living space, according to health officials. But the health department decided to give Marlow a 90-day grace period.

Another meeting will be held next Wednesday, at 7 p.m., in the conference rooms at Manchester Memorial Hospital. For more information, call the visiting nurses at 647-1481 or call the hospital at 646-1222 and ask for the social-services department.

Alzheimer meeting draws 70

About 70 people turned out Wednesday for the first meeting of the town's only support group for families and caretakers of patients with Alzheimer's Disease, Louise Letourneau, supervisor of clinical services for Visiting Nurses and Home Care of Manchester, said Thursday.

"The response was excellent," she said. "It was very, very rewarding." After viewing a film on Alzheimer's, the meeting was opened to questions, and people's hands just went up," she said.

A recent state grant of nearly $20,000 enabled the Visiting Nurses to organize the support group. Alzheimer's is a frequently devastating brain disease with symptoms like those of senility.

"Cassano has committed himself in the past to such issues as equal pay for work of comparable worth, day care, the elderly and housing opportunities, and we are sure he would continue to do so in the state Senate," she said.

Mercier repeats challenge
Jonathan Mercier said he spoke by phone this week to his political opponent, Rep. James McCavannah, and repeated his invitation to debate issues.

Mercier, a Republican, is challenging McCavannah, who is seeking his second term as representative from the 12th Assembly District. Mercier had sent a letter to McCavannah challenging him to debate. When McCavannah did not decline the invitation, he said his time constraints might make it impossible.

Mercier said today that McCavannah on Monday would be available anytime in the next four weeks except for two time slots.

"I understand the time constraints," Mercier told the Herald, "but I find it hard to believe his calendar is so full that he cannot find one time in four weeks to do a debate."

Police said today that Thomas P. Koval, 26, of 113D Sycamore Lane, had been charged with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol, processed at the police station and released.

Police say he struck the door as he was leaving the station.

He is scheduled to appear in Manchester Superior Court Oct. 10.

McCAVANAH FREES $200,000 STATE FUNDS FOR PORTLAND BRIDGE RE-ELECT MCCAVANAH 12th DISTRICT VOTE Democratic

Aides give win to Bush

By Ira R. Allen
United Press International

PHILADELPHIA — Vice President George Bush, animated and pleased with his performance, compares his debate to a prize fight and his handlers said today said he outpointed Geraldine Ferraro.

"We feel the debate last night went very well. We think the vice president went very well," said Presidential Campaign Director Edward Rollins.

"Mrs. Ferraro represented her side very well but we think the vice president, especially on the foreign policy, showed his extensive experience," Rollins said in a pre-dawn briefing for reporters.

Bush picked up his campaign schedule today with a planned ride aboard a tugboat at the port of Elizabeth, N.J., and a meeting with dock workers and the president of the International Longshoremen's Association, one of the

Ferraro kept on offensive

By Paula Schwed
United Press International

PHILADELPHIA — Geraldine Ferraro celebrated her debate performance with family and friends until 2 a.m. today and described herself as having been "very vice presidential" in the confrontation.

Campaign manager John Sassewicz reporters that the Ferraro campaign had no doubts that their candidate performed well in her Thursday night debate with Vice President George Bush.

"I think she won it hands down," Sassewicz said. "The fact is that she went toe to toe with the vice president of the United States and not only held her own but distinguished herself."

Ferraro spent the morning at a private fund-raiser in Philadelphia and spoke with reporters briefly before it started. When asked if she had been purposely restrained in the debate, she replied, "very vice presidential though, right?"

Sassewicz said Ferraro stayed up until 2 a.m. today celebrating with family and advisers.

Ferraro chose to make a subdued appearance in the debate, avoiding the occasional wisecracks and high spirit that characterize many of her public appearances.

She seemed determined to prove herself capable and firm enough to take over as president if necessary. Polls show many voters remain unconvinced she has enough experience to lead the country.

Her calm demeanor switched to seething resentment in a flash when Vice President George Bush accused her of opposing all covert action by the CIA and added, "Let me help you with the difference, Mrs. Ferraro, between Iran and Lebanon."

She had likened the humiliation of Americans over the Iranian hostages to the Lebanon bombing that killed more than 240 Marines.

Her lack of foreign policy and military expertise is a sore point with Ferraro. On a day when Bush's press secretary was quoted as calling her "bitchy" and "arrogant," she was ready to fight back.

"I most resent, Vice President Bush, your patronizing attitude that you have to teach me about foreign policy," she said, turning to glare right at him.

"Please don't categorize my answers, either," she ordered. "Leave the interpretation of my answers to the American people who are watching this debate."

She defended her lack of experience in government by citing her years as a prosecutor and a teacher. Ferraro, who won election to Congress six years ago by promoting herself as the housewife from Queens, N.Y., stayed home with her children until the youngest was in school.

"I wasn't born at the age of 43 when I entered Congress," she said, adding that jobs aren't always paramount. "It's how you approach problems and what your values are. I can make the hard decisions."

A face flushed pink and some disjointed sentences indicated Ferraro was somewhat nervous, especially at the start of the debate. She delayed her arrival in Philadelphia as late as possible so she could relax at home with her family after rising early to attend class.

Even Ferraro's choice of clothing was subdued: a tan tweed jacket over a gray skirt instead of the bright silk dresses she usually wears.

U.S./World In Brief

Josephine's winds increase

MIAMI — Hurricane Josephine boosted its top winds to 95 mph as it churned up the Atlantic today but forecasters said it probably would turn slightly more toward the open sea.

The season's third hurricane was located at 6 a.m. EDT near latitude 32.5 north, longitude 71.4 west, about 300 miles southeast of Cape Hatteras, N.C. The National Hurricane Center in Miami said Josephine moved toward the north at about 10 mph overnight and a north to northeast motion at 5 to 10 mph was expected today.

The hurricane's winds grew from 90 to 95 mph during the early morning but forecasters Miles Lawrence said "little change in strength is expected today." Gale extended 300 miles from the center of the storm.

Briley death watch begins

RICHMOND, Va. — Barring extraordinary legal action or intervention by Gov. Charles Robb, Linwood Briley goes tonight to the electric chair he tried to avoid by leading the biggest death row breakout in U.S. history.

Briley's attorneys had few alternatives left after the U.S. Supreme Court rejected their second appeal of the week Thursday and Robb indicated he intended to let the execution proceed.

A death watch was to begin this morning, involving a team of 11 Corrections Department officers. Two officers will keep Briley under constant watch and help prepare him for the execution, scheduled for 11 p.m. EDT.

Briley would be the 28th man executed in the United States since the Supreme Court lifted its ban on capital punishment in 1976. It would be the 15th execution this year.

Briley, whose gang was linked to 11 killings during the late 1970s in Richmond, was sentenced to death for the murder and robbery of popular country-and-western disc jockey John "Johnny G" Galaher.

Lebanese guerrillas slay 5

Lebanese guerrillas ambushed and killed five soldiers of an Israeli-backed army unit southeast of Beirut, hours before a crucial U.N. Security Council vote today on the future of a multinational force-keeping role in the region.

Police reports quoted by the Voice of Lebanon radio station said the attack was against a patrol of the south Lebanon army, which Israel is grooming to take its place after an imminent withdrawal from the region.

The attack was on a side road on the outskirts of Qilaya, a village 31 miles southeast of Beirut in Israeli-occupied territory, the broadcast said.

"Units of the south Lebanon army later surrounded the region and made several arrests," the broadcast said.

After a similar attack last month, Druze Moslem units of the south Lebanon army attacked the village of Sahnor and killed 13 civilians in retaliation.

Sahnor is 6 miles north of Qilaya.

Defiant Senate rejects debt hike

By Robert Mackay
United Press International

WASHINGTON — In a shocking move, the Senate at the end of a 15-hour marathon session early today killed a bill to raise the national debt and forced the weary 98th Congress to delay its final adjournment.

The "must" debt measure was defeated 48-14 in a game of political chicken as Congress was within minutes of final adjournment.

In fact, both the House and Senate approved an adjournment resolution with a deadline of midnight tonight. Congress must adjourn then. If its business is not done, Congress will have to ask President Reagan to call it back into emergency session.

The defeat of the debt measure was sparked by a Democratic protest against President Reagan's economic policies and ballooning budget deficits.

With Senate Democrats voting no, conservative Republicans refused to go on record in favor of raising the national debt limit by

Wholesale prices show big decline

By Denis G. Gullino
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Producer prices fell 0.2 percent in September, as lower food and energy costs combined to provide the biggest drop in wholesale prices in 21 months, the Labor Department said today.

The decline in the department's Producer Price Index surprised many private analysts, who expected a fairly stiff increase, and followed a 0.1 percent decline in August.

But an increase, perhaps substantial, is already in the works for October's report because of a shift upward in gasoline prices, a department analyst said.

For the year through September wholesale inflation is running at a rate of only 1.9 percent, when figured annually, well below the pace virtually every leading forecaster expected by now.

Wholesale prices do not directly affect what consumers pay at the cash register. But they establish trends that form a basis for consumer prices several weeks or months later.

Food prices went down 0.4 percent, matching their move down in August.

Winner promises to pay

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — A man who won $5.8 million in a Pennsylvania Lottery game but failed to make $125-a-month child support payments has agreed to pay $20,000 a year to support his daughter.

In addition, Ronald G. Mack, 39, Upper St. Clair, agreed Thursday in a family court hearing to donate $40,000 a year into a trust fund for the girl until she turns 18.

Mack won the Lotto in May and stopped making the monthly payment in July after he quit his $16,000-a-year job as a lab technician at Mobay Chemical Corp. His monthly payment had been deducted from his paycheck.

The agreement was reached in a pre-hearing conference with an attorney for his daughter, Tiffany, 11, and his ex-wife, Gail, 38.

Mack's annual payments from the lottery are $214,635 for 21 years. Mack also agreed to pay for Tiffany's college expenses for four years.

He conceded it was wrong to stop the payments, but said he had done other things for his daughter, such as buying her clothes and sending the girl and her mother on a trip to California.

"There's no justifying the fact that I did not support my daughter," Mack said. "But I am not the ogre that people are painting me out to be."

Ron takes the 'T' train

DAYTON, Ohio (UPI) — President Reagan, following the example of Democrat Harry Truman, took a train trip across Ohio today and charged at the outset that Walter Mondale's proposed tax increases would put "a mortgage on your future."

Reagan, who has been working to regain the offensive since his much-criticized performance in his first debate with Mondale, made the comments in remarks prepared for a rally in Dayton at the start of a 200-mile, eight-hour trip.

"We're taking the whistle stop of '84 to demonstrate that our government is once again on the right track — and our national renewal is not going to be derailed," Reagan said. "I will be traveling on the same train Harry Truman used in the 1948 campaign. And all of us who remember what he said know that he spoke some very blunt truths and that is what I hope to do today."

Reagan, who was once a Democrat, planned to make five stops in western Ohio before ending his tour in Toledo and flying back to Washington. He was scheduled to spend the weekend at Camp David.

Scientists get bonus from Challenger crew

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Challenger's crew gave scientists a bonus series of Earth radar pictures today to wrap up an eight-day science mission scheduled to end on time Saturday with a touchdown at the Kennedy Space Center.

NASA officials said weather conditions had improved and they were optimistic Challenger would be able to return to its Florida base for what would be only the second shuttle mission in 13 to end at the ocean-side spaceport.

Commander Robert Crippen, Jon McBride and crew members Sally Ride, Kathy Sullivan, David Leestma, Paul Scully-Power and Canadian Marc Garneau stayed busy today winding up experiments and readying the ship for its blazing descent from orbit and touchdown at 12:25 p.m. EDT.

The extra day of radar observations was made possible by an inspection Thursday of the radar scanner's big folding antenna by spacewalkers Leestma and Sullivan who showed it could be secured without problem later today.

The 35-foot-long folding antenna gave the astronauts trouble early in the mission by failing to fold up properly.

The spacewalkers also connected a hose between two tanks in the rear of Challenger's payload bay to transfer hydrazine rocket fuel from one to the other today in a demonstration of satellite refueling techniques.

When Leestma and Sullivan, the first American woman to walk in space, began the fuel transfer early today they could not resist peering for a look at the pre-dawn California coast and Los Angeles.

"We're passing over L.A. at night and it's beautiful so we'll probably all take a quick look out the window here to say hi to our folks in California to wake up to see us but they sure are pretty at night."

While the crew was hampered early in the mission by a series of troublesome snags, the one problem remaining today were the failure of one of the video computer display terminals in Challenger's cockpit and trouble with the keyboard for another.

Crippen reported the computer display appeared to be operating normally early today but it failed again later and the astronauts had to replace a suspect cable to fix it.

Mission planners earlier worried that bad weather from Hurricane Josephine could force Challenger to remain aloft an extra day or divert the craft to its alternate landing strip at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

Sen. Zinsser joins the debate-evaders

Republican incumbent Carl Zinsser this week joined the parade of candidates for the Legislature who claim they are too busy to debate before the election.

Zinsser, who is seeking a third term in the state's Fourth Senatorial District, said Wednesday that his schedule for every evening until Election Day was completely booked. Not that Zinsser's a popular guy, but his excuse is as unconvincing as the similar ones presented last week by incumbent Reps. Elsie Swenson and James McCavanagh.

It could be that after watching Walter Mondale and President Reagan debate last Sunday, Zinsser decided Republicans should stay away from anything but polite forums that don't include lengthy one-on-one confrontations. He cited several of these when asked to explain his reasoning for declining the challenge.

But more likely, he just saw nothing to gain by debating Cassano—especially outside Manchester. Cassano, though well known in Manchester because he has been on the Board of Directors for seven years, could use some free publicity in Glastonbury and Hebron, where his latest proposal called for the debates to be held.

That lends some credibility to Zinsser's charge that Cassano was milking the debate issue at least partly to gain publicity, but it shouldn't let the two-term incumbent off the hook. Cassano has also challenged Zinsser to a debate in Manchester.

WHEN ZINSSER DECLINED TO DEBATE, he also repeated his charge that Cassano's "whole campaign has been a personal attack on me."

Though Cassano has certainly attacked Zinsser, that claim isn't completely accurate and is no excuse to avoid debating. Cassano has also criticized Zinsser for missed committee votes, inflammatory rhetoric and other matters that should concern the voters.

Zinsser, in turn, has rebutted Cassano's charges piecemeal, attacked his positions because of his affiliation with the community college and said he is hiding from the issues.

Chamber takes a positive step

We applaud the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce, which reacted quickly this morning to a suggestion for an informational meeting on the plan to rebuild downtown Main Street.

After several years of planning, it seems that approval of a downtown Main Street plan is at hand. Unfortunately, even if it is approved, the reconstruction will not begin until spring 1987, according to the DOT.

Sponsoring the informational meeting is a positive step for the chamber. We hope the chamber also will take a stand in support of the plan, and lobby for moving it higher on the list of funding priorities.

Water is inferior and dangerous

To the Editor:
My letter refers to the three contaminated wells off New State Road.

As per your latest article on Sept. 27, Mr. Stanley Alexander, an engineer with the Department of Environmental Protection, states that plans for tracing the source of chemical contamination are at a standstill.

He could not say when the DEP would try again, but that the department has not given up. He also said that he is concerned that the level of contamination could rise above federal limits. Where does this leave us, the people using this water on the west side of town?

These wells provide most of the water to western Manchester. With these facts in mind, why should the residents on the west side of Manchester be subjected to the dangerous situation?

In addition to a water system contaminated with a very high mineral content which in time will do costly damage to heating systems and plumbing in general in the west side of Manchester, residents will find that the hard water from the wellfield is not only very unhealthy, but has a negative financial impact on homeowners as well as on businesses.

No one in our administration has ever made mention of this mineral problem since the wells went into use. How many homeowners on the west side can afford to install a filtering system if and when the chemical problem is ever cleaned up? The mineral problem will always be there so long as westsiders use well water.

We are all aware that the minerals will not harm us health-wise. But at a town referendum, the voters of Manchester supported a substantial bond issue to improve and modernize our water system. We were assured that our water would then be of the best quality.

In view of the many problems that have developed since the completion of the project, we seriously question that promise.

In addition, we have reason to believe our water rates will rise with no resultant benefits to the residents. We therefore question why we were required to accept not only inferior but dangerous water and anticipate the additional costs caused by the mineral content in the present system.

We are very concerned about the dangerous chemicals. These wells should be shut down immediately and decontaminated. Before they are reopened, the DEP should declare that they are absolutely safe and according to federal regulations.

Voters deserve to hear a debate

To the Editor:
I am writing in regard to the election campaign for state representative in Manchester's 13th Assembly District, between Democrat John Thompson and the Republican incumbent, Elsie Swenson.

I can't accept that Mrs. Swenson is "too busy" to debate the issues with her opponent. As a voter, I deserve to have the opportunity to compare the candidates and their stands on the issues. I deserve to see them in action, to see for myself who would best represent my interests in Hartford.

If a candidate refuses to be accountable before an election, what can I expect after Election Day?

Bolton's Cheney is the most able

To the Editor:
In Bolton, we recently lost our first selectman, Hank Ryba, most unfortunately. During Mr. Ryba's tenure, the town had been most capably run by our deputy first selectman, Doug Cheney.

Doug deserves a great deal of thanks from the townspeople for a job well done under some very adverse conditions. He kept the town running smoothly and was able to keep the referendum project moving, even though he was under a very tight schedule.

The Board of Selectmen also deserves a vote of thanks for their persistence during these past months when we were not quite sure whether Mr. Ryba would return to take his very active job as first selectman.

Unfortunately, Mr. Cheney was never given the praise he deserved for his job well done. A section in our Town Charter refers to state statutes to replace the first selectman upon his death or vacancy.

Doug most likely would have taken over as first selectman due to his experiences and number of years on the board except for one small fact: A subsection in the charter states that the vacancy must be filled by the same party and, therefore, the selectmen had no choice but to place Mr. Pierson or another Democrat in that position.

I believe that the charter commission missed the boat when that section of party affiliation affected the most important position for Bolton, and neglected the fact that the most able person for the position was passed over mainly because he was a Republican in the deputy first selectman position.

These Scouts have gone on to new schools and new troops, but I would like them to know how much their gift was appreciated, and how proud I am to have been their leader.

Would you please reprint this letter I recently received from the UConn Health Center? Thank you.

We all know how hard you must have worked to gather these funds. But as for you're feeling indebted to us for what we have done to help your sister Scout, we actually feel most grateful to you.

Gifts such as yours, support the basic research which helps us understand more about cancer and how best to treat this disease. Most of all, such gifts help support our goal of curing all the children who come to us for care.

On behalf of all these children, their families and friends and, particularly our staff, thank you very much.

CIA spy follows tradition

WASHINGTON — The CIA is apparently back in business on American college campuses, less than a decade after it was stepped down by Congress for covertly financing student groups and paying youthful undercover agents to spy on campus "radicals."

This time the CIA's infiltration of academia may actually be legal, under a 1981 executive order signed by President Reagan. It allows the spy agency to collect "significant" intelligence secretly within the United States as long as the espionage isn't aimed at the domestic activities of American citizens or corporations.

An investigation by my associates Dale Van Atta and Indy Bodwar indicates that from September 1982 to May 1983, the CIA paid a Hawaiian student to spy on foreigners at two colleges and a Mormon tourist attraction on Oahu.

If the student spy's information was indeed "significant," the CIA got a bargain: He was paid $100 a month for his eight-month undercover mission, he said.

THE YOUNG SPOOK is Jim Rewald, who was 19 when the CIA recruited him for campus cloak-and-dagger work in July 1982. He had just been accepted for the fall term at Brigham Young University (Hawaii) in Laie, Oahu.

Young Rewald also had impressive family credentials: His father, Ronald Ray Rewald, had earned $6,000 by spying on students for the CIA at the University of Wisconsin in the early 1960s. (It was this sort of domestic espionage activity on college campuses that led to the congressional crackdown on the CIA a decade or so later.)

The elder Rewald is now facing multiple counts of fraud for his involvement in an investment operation he claims was a CIA front.

In an exclusive interview, Jim Rewald said he set out to follow his father's footsteps one night at dinner in the Rewald home. A guest, a CIA agent known as Richard Cavannagh, asked him, "Would you be interested in collecting information on students?"

Young Rewald accepted on the spot. "It was my chance to start with the CIA before I left college," he explained. "They had known I wanted to join the agency for a couple of years."

Young Rewald signed a contract. His "control" was a Chinese-American agent. For some CIA reason, the case officer was posing as a Japanese named Tadao Suzuki — in the one state where such an ethnic masquerade would likely be spotted by the large Japanese-American population.

FOR HIS $100 a month, Rewald was assigned to keep close watch on six visiting students from the People's Republic of China. The CIA wanted information and current photographs.

Rewald diligently clipped articles on the Chinese students from the college newspaper, surreptitiously snapped their pictures, and tailed them to the Polynesian Cultural Center, a tourist attraction next to Brigham Young University-Hawaii.

He also obtained college computer lists with details on the Chinese students' activities by telling the registration office he was working on an English paper. Once, he said, he hid the office for further information.

After one semester at BYU, Rewald transferred to Chamaine, a Catholic university in Honolulu. Suzuki was delighted by his recruit's ecumenical enthusiasm. The CIA had about all it needed on the Chinese students at BYU-Hawaii, and the agency had never had a man in place at the Catholic school.

THE PICKINGS proved to be slim, though, and Rewald's interest flagged. "I thought it was important work," he said. "But after a while it seemed sort of ridiculous."

AIDS boy still faces isolation

By James V. Heillon
United Press International

NEW HAVEN — A 5-year-old boy with AIDS has been discharged from Yale-New Haven Hospital after two years of treatment, but he faces more isolation because school officials will not admit him to public school.

A search is underway for a volunteer to tutor the boy privately. School Superintendent John Dow Jr. said Thursday. But he will not be allowed to mingle with other children in a kindergarten classroom.

We intend to serve the youngster in a homebound situation by finding a volunteer tutor," Dow said. "We have several names. We're working with these people."

"The community is very sensitive on this. The bottom line is, would you want your child to be in a classroom with a child with AIDS?" Dow asked. "Everyone I've asked said, 'Absolutely not.'"

In a letter to state Education Commissioner Gerald N. Tirozzi, Dow said until public acceptance of the fate of the boy is more widespread, his primary obligation, "even before the teaching of basic skills, is to ensure the safety and welfare of all students and staff."

Dr. John Dwyer, chief of clinical immunology at Yale Medical School, who treats the boy, said the public falsely perceives AIDS as being more contagious than it is, and this has caused unfair discrimination against victims who have lost jobs and friends because of the disease.

In some respects, Dwyer said, child victims of the disease "are like children with a slowly progressing cancer in that their ultimate prognosis is poor. But for the next two or three years, we would like them to lead as normal a life as possible."

Dwyer said his patient is an intelligent little boy with a good personality, who is angry, capable of displaying it, but who responds to kindness and attention. He said he has been in two foster homes and was abused in one of them.

Referring to a report saying the AIDS virus has been detected in the saliva of victims, Dwyer said of 6,000 known cases, none is known to have been transmitted by saliva.

School administrators in at least three U.S. cities have denied admittance to children with AIDS who have reached school age, despite medical assurances the children are not a threat to others.

A spokesman for the National Center for Disease Control in Atlanta said there are 60 children in the United States with AIDS, most of them under the age of 4.

With several states facing the dilemma, the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services plans to name a committee next month to draft guidelines for educating children with AIDS.

Dow had asked Tirozzi in July for recommendations on how to proceed in the case. He was told the child was entitled to free school privileges from the New Haven Board of Education.

Robert Margolin, associate commissioner of education, told Dow the board "has the same obligation to a child with AIDS as it does to other children but it must fulfill its obligation in a manner consistent with the medical needs of the child."

Dwyer said the problems of children with AIDS are compounded because they may not have proper care at home. Their mothers often had been heavy intravenous drug users, prostitutes, or both.

Dwyer said if the public were better informed about the disease discovered in 1980, it wouldn't fear it as much and the social problems associated with it wouldn't be as difficult to resolve.

Labor leader rallies Yale strikers' cause

NEW HAVEN (UPI) — AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland has warned striking clerical and technical workers at Yale University bargaining may not be enough to improve their financial situation.

At a rally of about 1,000 strikers, students and sympathizers on the New Haven Green Thursday, Kirkland said the strike by Local 34 of the Federation of University Employees was more than an economic issue. He said it reflected labor's problems nationwide with the Reagan administration.

"There's a limit to what we can gain through bargaining alone, especially in a hostile political atmosphere," Kirkland said. "We now have in Washington the worst, most backward of anti-union impulses of any administration."

"Labor is concerned with your fight and the fight on Nov. 6," Kirkland said, "and we have to win both of them. Labor must go all out to elect Walter Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro."

About 1,500 members of Local 34 walked off their jobs Sept. 26, charging Yale with salary discrimination by sex and race. Negotiations with a private mediator have failed to resolve the dispute and no new talks are scheduled, said John Wilhelm, the union's chief negotiator.

Yale has refused to submit to binding arbitration or raise its last offer of 24 percent with salary increases over three years. The union, whose members earn an average $33,400, asked for pay hikes of 26 percent, cost of living increases and assurances about job security.

Kirkland said Yale has shown itself to be as "shortsighted, narrow minded and obsessed with the bottom line as any corporate executive."

"A university cannot be a leader if it shrinks from a role in fighting discrimination. But trade unions can and will have been," Kirkland said. The national union has endorsed the strike and will provide financial help if asked, Kirkland said.

The labor leader came to the New Haven campus to launch a speaking tour of 25 or 30 towns in the Northeast and accused the Reagan administration of "most icy indifference to civil rights and women's rights."

Wilhelm said the union planned informational picketing and other activities for this week's Parent's Weekend at Yale.

The refusal of dining hall and custodial workers to cross Local 34's picket lines has closed 12 of Yale's 13 dining halls and forced many professors to move classes off campus.

Molester doesn't want out

HARTFORD (UPI) — A man who said he has molested 1,000 boys the past 35 years is fighting the state to remain behind bars claiming he cannot help himself and will commit more molestations.

Nevin Mawhinney, 49, is trying to block his scheduled Nov. 23 release from a 5-to-10-year sentence imposed in June 1982 for performing oral sex on a 16-year-old boy.

Mawhinney, who has spent all but five of the past 35 years in prison for molesting boys, wants to undergo shock therapy or injection of Depo-Provera, which blunts the male sexual drive.

But the state Department of Correction does not have the treatment program sought by Mawhinney and claims its obligation will end when Mawhinney is released.

Mawhinney, who has been in and out of prisons in Pennsylvania, New York and Connecticut since 1948, told the Superior Court in a letter he is concerned with the rights of society to be protected from him.

A state lawmaker who agrees with the prisoner has taken up his cause and wants the state to keep Mawhinney off the streets.

Sen. Fred H. Lovegrove Jr., R-Fairfield, said this week there must be something like child molesting, what good is the law when the state knowingly lets somebody out," said Lovegrove.

Lovegrove has filed papers in the Probate Court at Somers hoping to institutionalize Mawhinney and state officials are trying to devise a treatment program for the prisoner outside the correction department.

Correction officials said use of Depo-Provera on prisoners has not been approved by the state and the shock aversion therapy was discontinued in 1975, partially because of a lawsuit that claimed inmates were coerced into the treatment as a condition for parole.

Mawhinney has claimed the refusal to provide him with the specific treatment violates his right to be free from cruel and unusual punishment.

Assistant State Attorney L. D. McCallum said Mawhinney "is a prisoner and we have given him' treatment and our hold on him is over when released."

McCallum said Mawhinney must prove the state is deliberately denying him the treatment he needs and that it's the state's obligation to provide it.

In a recent interview, Mawhinney estimated he had molested 1,000 boys and many of them he picked up in the Times Square area of New York City.

"I walk down 42nd Street and in 15 minutes I have five kids asking if they can go home with me," said Mawhinney.

Good works prompts gift
NORTH BRANFORD (UPI) — Forty years ago Dan Cosgrove was a young contractor desperate for work and some nuns asked him to grade their parking lot for $500. He did it for free and his business soon prospered.

Cosgrove has remembered the sisters by donating $2.5 million in land to Albertus Magnus College, a small 59-year-old New Haven women's school run by the Dominican Sisters of St. Mary of the Springs.

The donation was announced Thursday at a Restland Farms dinner hosted by the Exchange Club of Branford, honoring Cosgrove with its "Golden Deeds" award.

The land is also owned by Attorney Edward L. Marcus of New Haven, a Democrat and state Senate majority leader from 1967 to 1970. Each owns seven-eighths of the 307 acres in Cheshire near Interstate 84 and Route 70. The remainder is owned by the third donor, Edward M. Messer, a New Haven mortgage broker.

No substances in food
HARTFORD — State health officials have found no foreign substances in three dessert products in which tampering was suspected.

Thomas Furgalack, coordinator of the food protection program of the state Department of Health Services, said the handling of four recent incidents of suspected tampering in Bristol will be left with the Bristol Police Department for investigation.

Area Towns In Brief

Democrats to pick justice
BOLTON — Town Democrats put caucus Tuesday at Community Hall to pick a candidate for justice of the peace to replace First Selectman Henry P. Ryba, who died Sept. 13. The caucus is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. at the Community Hall on Bolton Center Road. All registered Democrats may participate.

Bolton GOP boosts Fuscass
BOLTON — The Bolton Republican Town Committee voted at its meeting Wednesday to make a $500 contribution to the re-election campaign of Rep. J. Peter Fuscass, R-Marlborough.

Committee members also decided to donate $200 to the campaign of Sen. Carl Zinzer, R-Manchester, who is being challenged by Stephen T. Cassano in the 4th Senatorial District. Bolton Republicans said they decided on the $500 for Fuscass campaign because Fuscass had given them the same amount in a previous election. "It's not a gift as much as it's an exchange," said Lawrence Converse, a Bolton selectman. "We wouldn't have $500 if it wasn't for Peter."

Fuscass' Democratic opponent in the 5th Assembly District is another Bolton resident, attorney Michael Zizka. Zizka was recently appointed to the Board of Selectmen.

Bolton Days coming soon
BOLTON — Townpeople will celebrate the 264th birthday of Bolton Oct. 19 and 20.

Bolton Days festivities will include:
• A balloon launch, sponsored by the Bolton schools, which will have students studying town and local affairs.
• A social town meeting sponsored by the Board of Selectmen, which will be held at the Herrick Park Building on Oct. 19 at 8 p.m. There will be a display and discussion of the four proposed building projects to be voted on Nov. 6.
• And the Bolton Lion's Club's annual chicken barbecue and festival Oct. 20 at Indian Notch Park.

Church supper set Saturday
COVENTRY — The First Congregational Church of Coventry will have a roast beef supper Saturday from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. in the Church vestry on Main Street.

The public is welcome to the church. The charge is $4 for adults, $3.50 for senior citizens and $1.25 for children.

Coventry board mulls change
COVENTRY — The Board of Education is considering whether to make adequate class attendance a requirement for earning high school credits.

A new rule debated at Thursday night's board meeting would require that to earn credit, "a student must attend a minimum of 75 percent of all class meetings per course."

Board member Lawrence Mickel, speaking in favor of the proposal, said, "We need to underscore that attendance has a real value to it — that there's something that goes on in the classroom between teacher and student that you can't get from a book."

High School Principal Dennis Jay said there is a direct relationship between cutting classes and failure. He said only a few students a year manage to pass a course after missing more than a quarter of the class meetings.

But Judith Halvorsen said she feared that the proposed rule does not make simple provision for students who miss class because of illness.

The board will discuss the matter further at its Oct. 25 meeting.

Execs buy Holiday Inn
HARTFORD (UPI) — Two New England hotel executives plan extensive renovations to a downtown Holiday Inn they purchased for $9.1 million.

All states should adopt the program now being used by three states, with the federal government paying 75 percent of the administrative costs, Rowland said Thursday.

Rowland, challenging Rep. William R. Ratchford, D-Conn., in the 5th District, said the government could save $465 million the first year and about $245 million in each subsequent year if all states adopted the program.

Under the system, welfare officials use computers to check the Social Security numbers of welfare recipients against numbers on bank accounts to determine if a recipient has assets exceeding welfare program limits.

Rowland, a state representative from Waterbury, co-sponsored a bill creating a small 59-year-old New Haven women's school run by the Dominican Sisters of St. Mary of the Springs.

The donation was announced Thursday at a Restland Farms dinner hosted by the Exchange Club of Branford, honoring Cosgrove with its "Golden Deeds" award.

The land is also owned by Attorney Edward L. Marcus of New Haven, a Democrat and state Senate majority leader from 1967 to 1970. Bolton board boosts center plan
By Tracy L. Geoghegan
Herold Reporter

BOLTON — The school board Thursday discussed how to clear up what members say are misconceptions among townspeople about the need for computers and criticisms concerning the expense of the proposed center. The proposal will be the subject of a referendum on Nov. 6.

During the meeting, board member Michael Parsons urged fellow board members to take a more aggressive role in working to gain voters' approval for the project.

"Let's take off our kid gloves and get out and fight for this," Parsons said. "What is the alternative? It's very ugly."

"The consequence on our kid's educations will be severe," he said. "If this gets voted down, you would look at it as a town-wide problem in negativism toward education," said board member T. Dye Hooper.

One point board members appeared to agree on is that a smaller and seemingly less expensive alternative proposal by Thomas Manning would actually cost taxpayers more money because it would not be eligible for state grants.

The school board's center proposal is eligible for up to 60 percent in state reimbursement. The referendum question is conditioned on the grants but Bolton will not get a decision on them until next year.

Board members also said Manning's proposal, raised during a recent public hearing on the media center, does not address the future needs of the school.

One area of misconception, board members said, is the proposed main frame computer system. Many townspeople have said they do not trust the reliability of main frames because there would be times when the entire system would "go down," rendering it useless to students.

Hooper said, however, that the board is not committed to a main frame system.

And even if such a system were selected, Hooper said, a problem in the central computer would mean only that terminals could not communicate with each other or with outside sources. Each terminal would still be able to function as an individual unit, Hooper said.

Board members also discussed a list of questions on the media center proposal submitted by Planning Commission Chairman Robert Gorton.

Two of the questions addressed issues raised by Manning. Gorton asked if the school board proposal called for a library much larger than state regulations require and whether Manning's proposal could save the town money.

Hooper said that he and architect Alan Wiedie recently showed the plans for the library-media center to an official from the state Department of Education and received his endorsement.

"If we go skin and bones, and do the bare minimum, six years from now we'll be back making another addition," said Parsons.

Parsons said enrollments at the high school are increasing and will continue to do so because Manning's proposal would require dividing several classrooms to accommodate computers. It would not be practical as a long-term solution, Parsons said.

"Historically, the requirements for square footage per student have increased," Parsons said. "Space is already tight."

"Two teachers already have no permanent base," Hooper said. "They must move around according to what room is open."

Hooper said he was told by state officials that additions to school buildings should be planned to accommodate 20 to 30 years of change.

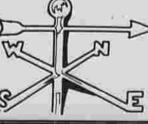

"Bolton's population is going to increase when the (Interstate 84) connector goes in," Hooper said. "Demands on the media center are going to increase."

Hooper also said Bolton will need the facility to take advantage of state-sponsored education programs which are geared toward a media center approach.

Another objection raised by the Planning Commission and by speakers at the public hearing concerned the "stepped" wall design of the proposed addition to Bolton High School.

Many people have said that although the design is aesthetically pleasing, it would be cheaper to build a plain rectangular building.

Hooper said the stepped wall called for in the design was designed to give the library a full view of the library. He said a rectangular design would not allow a full view.

"If we go skin and bones, and do the bare minimum, six years from now we'll be back making another addition," said Parsons.

Parsons said enrollments at the high school are increasing and will continue to do so because Manning's proposal would require dividing several classrooms to accommodate computers. It would not be practical as a long-term solution, Parsons said.

"Historically, the requirements for square footage per student have increased," Parsons said. "Space is already tight."

"Two teachers already have no permanent base," Hooper said. "They must move around according to what room is open."

Hooper said he was told by state officials that additions to school buildings should be planned to accommodate 20 to 30 years of change.

"Bolton's population is going to increase when the (Interstate 84) connector goes in," Hooper said. "Demands on the media center are going to increase."

Hooper also said Bolton will need the facility to take advantage of state-sponsored education programs which are geared toward a media center approach.

Another objection raised by the Planning Commission and by speakers at the public hearing concerned the "stepped" wall design of the proposed addition to Bolton High School.

Many people have said that although the design is aesthetically pleasing, it would be cheaper to build a plain rectangular building.

Hooper said the stepped wall called for in the design was designed to give the library a full view of the library. He said a rectangular design would not allow a full view.

The land they want to buy is a narrow, triangular plateau at the top of old town sand bank. The town proposes to build 10 or 12 starter houses on the flat land along Love Lane at the foot of the bank.

Anti-crime measures sent to the president

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress has handed the president a bipartisan package of anti-crime measures hailed by some as the most far-reaching bundle of criminal justice legislation ever to come from Capitol Hill.

The more than 20 provisions in the massive measures — an element within a catchall spending bill approved Thursday — combine items sought by the administration and ones promoted by Congress. The items range from bail and sentencing reform to measures dealing with computer fraud and credit card fraud.

Also included within the package is provision for a drug "cear" but in a different fashion from an earlier proposal vetoed by the president.

The American Civil Liberties Union took issue with several provisions. ACLU Executive Director Ira Glasser called the bill a "phony compromise" with "many of the worst features of the Reagan administration proposals."

The bill would, for the first time, authorize preventive detention of suspected federal criminals and substantially impede the use of

Cassano blasts Zinsser on debates

By Alex Girelli Herald Reporter

Democratic state Senate candidate Stephen Cassano said today he is not surprised that his political opponent, Carl Zinsser, has refused to debate the issues with him.

Zinsser said Wednesday that a letter from Cassano inviting him to debate had come too late. The undated letter arrived last week, he said.

Mercier wins backing of Realtors'

Jonathan Mercier, whose political opponent is a Realtor, has won the endorsement of the Connecticut Association of Realtors.

Mercier, a Republican, is seeking to unseat incumbent Democrat James McCavanagh, who is running for a second term as state representative from the 12th Assembly District.

the campaign that he wanted to debate, but Zinsser said Wednesday Cassano had not contacted him until last week.

Zinsser said Cassano delayed issuing his invitation because he knew Zinsser's schedule would not permit a debate.

Cassano also said there would be ample opportunities at other forums to discuss the issues. Cassano said today that scheduled events by the League of Women Voters limit the opportunity to respond to many questions because all candidates for state office must be given an equal opportunity to express their points of view.

Cassano said the biggest losers would be residents of Bolton,

Columbia, and Hebron, who have no forums and who have to rely on limited media coverage and advertising to form their opinions.

The 4th District encompasses Manchester, Glastonbury, Bolton, Columbia, and Hebron. LWV forums are scheduled in Manchester Tuesday and in Glastonbury Oct. 30.

Zinsser has said Cassano's whole campaign has been "a personal attack on me." "I'm quite independent in my voting."

In endorsing Mercier, Harry McAvanagh said he did not endorse him in the 1982 election.

McAvanagh said he raised his family on income from real estate, but "When I'm in there, (the Legislature) I'm quite independent in my voting."

By Nancy Pappas Herald Reporter

When the air turns crisp and the leaves form a canopy overhead of spectacular color, the attention of the world's travelers turns to New England.

"It's foliage fever," said Ray Hughes of the Pioneer Valley Association, a tourist information bureau in Northampton, Mass. "We're at the peak of the season right now, and there's no end in sight."

So, unless you've already booked your room at a picturesque little inn north of here, you'd better plan to make a one-day circuit for leaf-lookers.

At this time of year, small roads, which were never designed to handle much traffic, back up with bumper-to-bumper traffic. Route 7 is particularly heavily used, as it winds north from the Connecticut border, through the South Egremont and Stockbridge areas, and on towards Bennington and Shaftsbury, Vt.

That's why the Manchester Herald's foliage fling takes you north on Route 10, instead, then over Route 143 and south again on Route 112. We've kept the driving to a minimum, so that you can stop at some of the interesting antiques shops and craft galleries you'll find along the way.

This is a mini-tour which could be expanded easily into a two- or even a three-day jaunt by adding visits to the Historic Deerfield Museum (featuring traditional New England crafts), Levetri Craftsmen & Artists (140 craftsmen displaying work in four large galleries), and Amherst.

OUR TOUR BEGINS as you head north out of West Springfield, Mass., on Route 10. To get there quickly, follow Route 91 north from Hartford, then take Route 20 across to Route 10. Or, for a more scenic route up, pick up Route 202 in Avon, Simsbury or Granby, and head north.

After passing under the Massachusetts Turnpike, travel north several miles into the towns of South Hampton and East Hampton. These towns are home to two antique shops and about a half dozen fine furniture workshops which are generally open by appointment only. The first you'll come to is an antiques shop run by George and Elsie Gorton, at 277 College Highway in South Hampton, specializing in glass, china, silver, brass, copper and iron. Call 413-527-1073 to see their wares.

Next along the route is the craft complex at Cottage St., East Hampton. Here about 15 master craftsmen run workshops, with five working in custom furniture for specialty clients. Most have no showrooms, but they can let you leaf through scrapbooks with photographs of works they've already completed. Call Silas Kopf, 413-527-0284, or John Tierney, at 527-4718, for more information.

Finally, there is Glaskowsky & Co., right on Route 10, at 180 Main St., East Hampton. Glaskowsky specializes in 18th and 19th century American furnishings, including maps, clocks, toys, wrought iron, quilts and paperweights. He is open all day Thursdays and Fridays, and after 4:15 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays. The rest of the time, "it's by chance or by appointment," he said. Call 527-2410.

Follow Route 10 into downtown Northampton. This is a town of so many galleries and antique shops (and quite a few interesting restaurants, as well) that it's worth a special trip. If you do decide to postpone your leaf-gazing and stop now, however, you can pick up a map listing most of the town's antiques shops at any of the dozens of stores in town.

Leaving Northampton, head northwest on Route 9, through the tiny town of Florence. On the right, or east side of the road, you'll notice the Miss Florence Diner. This is a gem of diner architecture and a must-see for those who are connoisseurs of such things.

IF YOU'RE GETTING HUNGRY, this is a good place to stop. The menu is incredibly ambitious for a diner — close to 100 items, including hearty seafood dinners — but the simple short-order grill foods are the stars. Try to sit up at the counter and watch the perfectly choreographed movements of amount of food in a tiny space, and can work miracles with a quick weight shift and a slip of the wrist. Continue out Route 9 a few more miles to Haydenville, where an old metal melting and fabrication plant has been renovated into The Brassworks, a mini-mall with crafts galleries and a large antiques shop. (The mall also contains one of the best children's bookshops we've ever visited.)

Two miles farther you'll come to the town of Williamsburg, best known for the Christmas Inn Restaurant, serving holiday-style meals, with all the trimmings, year-round. Another popular stop is the Williamsburg General Store, featuring country crafts and excellent homemade breads, pies, cookies and home-churned ice creams in a large variety of flavors. Both are right on Route 9 in Williamsburg.

If you make the right turn directly opposite the Christmas Inn, you'll soon see signs for Oak Lodge Farm Antiques, which has a barn full of refinished and "just-as-found" antiques, and they're open every Saturday and Sunday from 9 a.m. until about 4 p.m.

Another worthwhile stop in Williamsburg is the Williamsburg Blacksmiths, Route 9 at Buttonshop Road. There you'll find wrought iron, copper, pewter and brass metal goods of all sorts. The shop is open until 4:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

At 6 p.m. today there will be a ham and bean supper with tickets available at the door. Tickets cost $4 for adults, $3 for senior citizens, and $2 for children under 12.

The fair will be open from 6 to 9 p.m. today and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday. It will feature Christmas decorations, wood crafts, knitted items, toys, pictures, jams and jellies, homemade baked goods and delicious foods served from the church kitchen.

For teddy bear lovers

You're never too old to love a teddy bear. That's the theme of the Teddy Bear Festival and Crafts Show scheduled this weekend at Windham High School in Willimantic.

This is a perfect fun opportunity for the whole family. Children are asked to alert their teddy bears and bring them to the festival. And kids, if you have a teddy bear that needs a little repair, bring it to the Teddy Bear Hospital which will perform stitching, stuffing and other minor surgery.

There will also be a crafts show with about 40 juried craftsmen. Admission to the festival and show is $1.50 for adults. Children under 12 will be admitted free. The festival is sponsored by the McSweeney Regional senior center.

Enjoy concert at church

The second in a series of concerts at South United Methodist Church, 1226 Main St., will be Saturday at 8 p.m. featuring Judith Loven, soprano. This concert, like most others, has an admission charge of $3 for adults. Some will be just with a free-will offering and a November pops concert will be $5.

Dance for the children

Sounds of the big bands — Tommy Dorsey and Glenn Miller — will ring out from Second Congregational Church, 385 N. Main St., Sunday night as "Danceation" performs.

The program starts at 7 p.m. in Fellowship Hall of the church. Danceation is directed by Walter Mamlock and band members are doctors, teachers, computer analysts, state employees, businessmen and full-time musicians.

Tickets are $2.50 and will be available at the church starting at 6 p.m. the night of the concert.

Come to the fair

Just sniff the air — smell the aroma of homemade soup cooking and herbed breads baking — and follow your nose to St. George's Church, Route 44 in Bolton, anytime from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday.

You'll see 15 New England craftsmen creating and selling. There will be a Christmas table, fall decorations, soft goods and a drawing for several items including a handmade afghan and an original watercolor.

The homemade soups will be available for lunch. Along with the freshly baked bread on sale there will also be homemade apple pies.

There will be free parking and free admission. If the church parking lot is full, fair visitors can park at Bolton United Methodist Church and be shuttled to St. George's.

Merman fans buy up late singer's belongings. NEW YORK (UPI) - An auction of jewelry, show business memorabilia and other objects belonging to the late performer Ethel Merman brought in more than $132,000 - double what auctioneers expected.

The sale was incredibly successful, "a spokeswoman for Christie's East auction house said. She said 283 of 274 lots of the singer's furniture, paintings, jewelry and theatrical memorabilia, were sold Wednesday.

A gold charm bracelet commemorating Merman's Broadway plays and show hits, from "Gilt Crazy" to "Hello Dolly," estimated to be worth $2,000, was sold to a private collector from Long Beach for $8,250.

The same collector, who was not identified and served as the executor for Merman's estate, also purchased a bronze sculpture for $750. Its value had been tagged at between $30 and $40.

Christie's East said a large number of people viewed objects belonging to Merman, the brassy entertainer who died Feb. 15, 1946, at the age of 76.

Brown votes on suicide

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — A controversial referendum asking Brown University students to vote on whether to use the event of nuclear war brought a record turnout at student government elections this week.

Brown's undergraduate Council of Students said, chairman of the Wednesday and Thursday balloting would be announced at 5 p.m. today.

Out of a student body of 5,400, an estimated 1,850 to 1,900 students voted in elections which traditionally draw scant student interest. Polls stayed open an hour beyond the 5 p.m. Thursday deadline because several hundred students were waiting in line as the deadline passed.

"It's at least 1,000 students higher than we've ever had before. I'm sure the referendum was the major reason for the turnout," said Joe McConnell, chairman of the student election board.

The non-binding referendum asking if Brown's health services office should stock cyanide pills for use upon request during a nuclear war was proposed by students Chris Ferguson and Jason Salzman, who said nuclear war would destroy all morality.

An administration spokesman said the university would not stock suicide pills regardless of the vote's outcome.

"We take very seriously the concern that the students are expressing over the threat of nuclear war," said Robert A. Reichley, vice president for university relations. "However, we do not accept the alternative of stockpiling suicide pills."

Salzman said he and Ferguson wanted "to show that nuclear war is suicide."

The consensus on the campus is that the proposal symbolizes the fear of nuclear war and has increased awareness of the issue. It has also triggered disagreement over how appropriate such a symbolic gesture can be.

"We must choose life. The real referendum is how to stop nuclear war," said David Waslow, coordinator of the Brown Disarmament Group. "Hope activities, despair paralyzes."

A few students said the referendum had made the university look silly, but one said he had a change of heart.

"I think it's going to make a statement on a statement of concern, not a statement that we want to commit suicide," said sophomore Adam Kahn.

CALDWELL, Idaho (UPI) — A holdup man with a bent for theatrics bound and gagged a convenience store clerk and waited on several customers — while a partner crouched the back room, police said.

The "clerk" even swept up and dumped the trash, allaying the suspicions of the policeman, who drove his cruiser around the block for a second look.

Officers realized they had been duped when the real clerk, Robert J. Lord, 39, wriggled free of his bonds after the robbers had vanished and called police.

"One of our officers did go into the store, and he did recognize something was a little strange and unusual," said Police Commander Don Woolery.

"So the officer left in his car, went around the block, and saw the 'clerk' pick up a trash can and go about cleaning the store. That satisfied his curiosity."

The cool-headed robber "apparently waited on several people in the store" while he impersonated a clerk, Woolery said.

The robbers walked into the store about 3 a.m. Thursday, one carrying a hunting rifle with a scope, police said.

They fled with an undisclosed amount of money, officers said.

The clerk was not injured.

Simsbury program offers challenge to city youths

ABC boys live. "When it gets dark at 8 p.m. Simsbury closes down."

Most of the ABC students have never experienced an environment where they live and breathe the majority and they're in the minority," she says.

Thus, the program not only gives students a chance to receive a good education, but challenges them culturally as well by plunging them into a new environment.

"It's a culture shock for a kid from the South Bronx to be taken to a suburb where they may see two or three black faces," says Reggie Kennedy of the Trinity College admissions office.

But, he says, "I think it helps overall ... to be brought into a predominantly white situation. It will prepare them when they are looking at predominantly white institutions."

At the Simsbury House one night, Anita Pace and her husband, Tony, pour cups of tea as the boys explain that academics come first in the ABC rulebook.

The one unbreakable rule, for example, is that students must study three hours a night unless they receive high enough grades to win exemption two nights a week.

Says Tony Pace, who works for the Holy Cross College admissions office in Worcester, Mass., "The one thing we want to make sure is that those three hours are devoted to study."

At about 2 a.m. today, the situation was declared under control and residents were allowed to return home, he said.

"Had the tank ruptured, they would have had a major incident. Everybody in the area probably would have gotten very sick or it might have been fatal if they inhaled enough of it," Placanio said.

A state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering official said there should be no lasting environmental damage from the spill.

Striped bass bill passes Congress

By George Lobenz United Press International

WASHINGTON — Congress sent legislation Thursday to President Reagan that would slap a federal ban on striped bass fishing in those Atlantic Coast states that do not reduce landings of the endangered migratory gamefish by 55 percent.

The Senate passed the bill by voice vote after adding a minor amendment to it. The bill was sent to the White House after the House agreed to the Senate change.

The bill's passage comes only weeks after Maryland Gov. Harry Hughes imposed a ban on striped bass fishing in his state's waters, effective Jan. 1, 1985, saying bass stocks in the Chesapeake Bay were dangerously low.

The legislation was opposed by Maryland and Virginia congressmen who represent Chesapeake Bay watermen, who in past years were heavily dependent on abundant striped bass.

Reps. Roy Dyson, D-Md., and Herbert Bateman, R-Va., said the legislation would not solve the problems afflicting the striped bass, a premier commercial and sport fish on the Atlantic Coast which spawns in freshwater and spends much of its life in the bay.

They contended the striped bass was not declining due to overfishing, but because of pollution in the Chesapeake Bay, where 90 percent of the Atlantic striped bass spawn.

The opponents also said the federal government should not be meddling in traditional state concerns such as fishery management.

However, proponents of the bill said the plight of the striped bass was so pronounced that it might disappear altogether unless strong action was taken.

Sen. John H. Chafee, R-R.I., said Congress could not end the current session without acting on the bill because "it's become clear to virtually everyone that steps must be taken to save the fish."

"The states' response to the problem has been slow, inconsistent and quite frankly, ineffective to date. I am not convinced that we have the luxury of giving the states another chance, another round of promises and inaction," Chafee said.

Federal and state officials say commercial landings of the fish have fallen from an all-time high of 14.7 million pounds in 1973 to a record low of 1.6 million pounds in 1983.

That decline has cost the Northeast some 7,000 jobs and $220 million in economic activity.

The legislation approved by Congress applies to the 12 coastal states ranging from North Carolina to Maine, all of which belong to the Atlantic States Marine Fisheries Commission.

To give the striped bass a chance to recover, the Atlantic States Marine Fisheries Commission — an interstate compact — requires the 12 coastal states to reduce bass catches by 55 percent.

A few states have not fully complied with the 55 percent reduction, angering other states that have restricted their sport and commercial fisheries.

This prompted several congressmen to introduce the legislation, which threatens a federally imposed ban on striped bass fishing in those states that the Commerce Department finds do not implement the 55 percent by June 1985.

Manchester got out of the blocks quickly and scored easy 5-1 win.

First half told story in MHS soccer victory

This time it didn't wait for the second half.

Manchester High, which had done the bulk of its damage in the '84 season after the intermission, tallied three times in the opening 40 minutes and never looked back as it routed Hartford Public, 5, in a Central Connecticut Conference Eastern Division game Thursday at Memorial Field.

The victory was the eighth for the Silk Towners to go along with two ties in 10 outings. The loss drops the Owl to 0-9 overall and in conference play.

Manchester, which at times has hurt by dribbling too much, had a checker on this occasion.

"Eric Walters, when he's on the sidelines charting the touches," Manchester coach Bill McCarthy revealed. "Sometimes we have a tendency to touch the ball too much against a team like this. But we didn't; we moved the ball real well."

Manchester's next outing is Tuesday at home against South Windsor High at 3:30.

Manchester had an opportunity to score with three-and-a-half minutes remaining in the half as Liam Dawg took a pass in the clear. Indian goalie Jeff Thrall, however, came out and tripped Dawg outside the penalty area. That brought about a direct kick which was misplaced wide of the cage.

Bob Chang, with his fifth goal of the year, and Janenda, his fourth, added second-half markers for Manchester. Oswaldo Gonzalez put Hartford on the scoreboard with 17 seconds remaining.

Mark Gochee played well at fullback along with Janenda and Brian Wilson. Senior Eric Brown and Joe DiPace played well among the reserves, who saw plenty of time against the Owls.

Manchester's next outing is Tuesday at home against South Windsor High at 3:30.

Whalers in strong start tie Rangers in opener

NEW YORK (UPI) — Hartford goaltender Greg Milten felt his club made a strong start with their 4-4 season-opening tie with the New York Rangers Thursday night.

"I'm proud of our effort tonight," said Milten. "We played a terrific game on the road, we have a good bunch of players here who are trying to gain respect in the league."

It was the first time in six season-openers in NHL play that Hartford has not begun the season with a loss. The Whalers make their home debut Saturday night against the Boston Bruins and then face the Bruins Sunday at Boston Garden.

The Rangers were forced to come from behind and gain the tie with just 1:09 remaining in the period. Rookie right wing Tomas Sandstrom split the Whaler defense and flipped the puck over Milten for the tying goal.

"He made a good play," said Milten. "I tried to play the percentages, he got the shot up, only place where he could have scored."

Sandstrom's goal stymied a furious third-period effort by the Whalers. Trailing 3-2 after two periods, they rallied to take the lead on goals by former Ranger Chris Kotopoulos and Sylvain Turgeon as they outshot New York 16-6 in the period.

"My confidence level in myself is the big difference this year," said Turgeon, who had two goals on the night and led rookie scorers with 40 goals last year. "I'm a little bit quicker and better able to adapt to the team's style this year."

In the five-minute overtime the Whalers outshot the Rangers 2-0 and enjoyed a 39-27 advantage in the game.

Turgeon opened the scoring 25 seconds into the game by flipping the first shot over Ranger goaltender Glen Hanlon. Just 19 seconds later Ron Greschner scored a fluke goal for the Rangers to tie the score at 1-1. As he wheeled in the Whaler zone, Greschner let fly a back-hander that hit Whaler defenseman Risto Silta and bounced through the legs of Milten.

Ron Francis put the Whalers on top 2-1 at 4:24 and the Rangers re-tied the score on a break-away goal by Reijo Ruotsalainen at 16:19 set up by a lead pass from Anders Hedberg at 16:19 as the team's skated off tied 2-2 after one period. In the second period Ruotsalainen struck again, this time on a power play at 17:30 for the only goal of the period. Pointman Greschner passed the puck across the blue line to Ruotsalainen who fired a slap shot that enabled the Rangers to capitalize on the two-man power play advantage.

The two goals by Ruotsalainen appeared to vindicate the decision by Ranger coach Herb Brooks to move him from defense to left wing. His linemate Hedberg agrees that he can handle the change in position.

"He's too good a player not to be able to play forward. It's true he had the two goals tonight, but as a player I don't think we played that well at all," Hedberg said.

The point gained by the Whalers tonight is their first in an NHL opener.

Picture clearer at halfway point for local grid squads

The Eagles have gotten strong offensive efforts from running back Buddy Zachery, who had his best game of the year last week, and Kevin Ricca, an improved blocker who Kelly has given the starting nod. Quarterback Scott Vibbert, "more relaxed now," has gotten better each week. The defense, tackle Eric Jankowski and linebacker Sean Brennan have been the most solid performers.

Manchester will have one mainstay back in action, while another will be watching from the sidelines. Center and linebacker Albie Harris, who missed the previous two games, will recuperating from an auto accident, returns with the hopes of helping turn the tide around for the Indians. Running back Greg Turner, a 1,000-yard rusher in '83, will miss the game because of "personal reasons," according to Coach Ron Cournoyer and will be replaced by sophomore Dwayne Albert, who exploded for a pair of 90-yard touchdowns in a recent junior varsity game.

"We've been working on our scoring by varying our offense from inside the 20-yard line," Cournoyer said of this week's practices. The Indians have had problems moving the ball from close field position, a shortcoming

Cournoyer attributes to inexperience. Manchester had the football twice on the Rockville 11-yard line with first down but failed to punch in a score.

In another lineup change, smothering defensive tackle Jimmy Pearson moves to nose guard, replacing the injured Mike Holland. Dan Matle and Allen Cote will alternate at Pearson's vacated tackle spot.

As for opponent Windham, Cournoyer expects the unexpected. "They have an unusual offense with multiple variations. They can pass on every down and pull reverses, screens, everything."

This crook gets away 'clean'

CALDWELL, Idaho (UPI) — A holdup man with a bent for theatrics bound and gagged a convenience store clerk and waited on several customers — while a partner crouched the back room, police said.

The "clerk" even swept up and dumped the trash, allaying the suspicions of the policeman, who drove his cruiser around the block for a second look.

Officers realized they had been duped when the real clerk, Robert J. Lord, 39, wriggled free of his bonds after the robbers had vanished and called police.

"One of our officers did go into the store, and he did recognize something was a little strange and unusual," said Police Commander Don Woolery.

"So the officer left in his car, went around the block, and saw the 'clerk' pick up a trash can and go about cleaning the store. That satisfied his curiosity."

The cool-headed robber "apparently waited on several people in the store" while he impersonated a clerk, Woolery said.

The robbers walked into the store about 3 a.m. Thursday, one carrying a hunting rifle with a scope, police said.

They fled with an undisclosed amount of money, officers said.

The clerk was not injured.

Women make gains in traditionally 'male' fields

Occupation	1970	1980
Air-traffic controllers	14.8	15.0
Carpenters	1.3	1.5
Clergy	2.9	3.1
Editors/reporters	40.2	41.3
Grade-school teachers	44.8	45.9
Lawyers	13.8	14.1
Physicians	9.3	9.5
Police officers	13.6	13.8
Real-estate agents	32.5	32.7
Registered nurses	97.4	97.5

Men continue to dominate many traditionally male occupations, but women have made gains in many areas. In addition, there has been a decline in the number of women in grade-school teaching and in nursing — two fields that were traditionally regarded as "women's domain."

Women have different view of job conditions

WALTHAM, Mass. (UPI) — Differing concerns among men and women about working conditions may help explain the disparity in their wages, a Brandeis University economist says in a report to be published this fall in a labor relations journal.

"Men and women systematically report that they value features of their jobs differently," Randall K. Filer says in a paper to be published in the Industrial and Labor Relations Review.

He cited a national survey, conducted by the University of Michigan, of working conditions. In the survey, men said they place more importance than women on wages and fringe benefits. Women valued their relationships with colleagues and other non-wage aspects of the job more highly than men.

"This probably is one of the reasons that women, on average, earn only about 60 percent of what men earn," Filer said. "It may be that any comparison of men's wages with women's wages will overstate sexual differences in compensation unless non-wage aspects are taken into account."

In a summary of his article, the university said the economic principle of "compensating differentials" may help explain the difference between men's and women's wages. The principle means that employers can pay less to find workers who perform jobs with attractive features.

Just because the principle applies, Filer said, it does not mean sex discrimination does not exist.

World Series brings back painful memories

"The 10-pitch to Fisk. He swings — long drive. Left field, it stays fair it's gone — Home Run! The Red Sox win! And the Series is tied at three games apiece!"

Sound familiar?

Any true baseball fan gets sentimental around World Series time. Everyone has favorite memories, especially of a season when one's favorite team happened to be a participant in the Fall Classic.

For Boston Red Sox fans, whose annual futile routings surpass even those of Chicago Cubs followers — in terms of close-but-no-cigar heartbreaks — there was one year that will never be forgotten.

1975. The greatest World Series of all time.

I remember it like it was yesterday. As a matter of fact, it was. At least according to the old 8-track tape player in my living room. A friend had recorded every Series game in that fateful October of '75.

Preserved for all eternity, bitterness had prevented me from playing back those priceless cartridges. Nine years later, the wounds have healed (though the scars are still tender), and it was an appropriate week for the Adidas shoe box full of tapes to come out of the closet.

Not surprisingly, as the seven sensational games were relived (as chronicled by the voices of Joe Garagiola, Curt Gowdy and Ned Martin), so too were those same desperate emotions of nine autumn past: butterflies, tension, cheers and oaths.

The Cincinnati Reds are still in the history books as the 1975 world champions, but the Series was immortalized by Fisk's extra-inning homer that won Game Six. Loads of other big moments have been obscured by time.

The following, then, are some resurrected excerpts, as accompanied by personal reminiscences.

Boston, which won the opener, took a 2-1 lead into the ninth inning of Game Two. Two outs, Johnny Bench on third, reliever Dick Drago on the mound. Garagiola: "There's an unbusiness now in Fenway Park. We're down to the final out. Dave Concepcion is the last hope for Cincinnati. There's a bounding ball, Doyle fings it down, but Concepcion beats it out! The Reds tie it!"

Concepcion stole second, Ken Griffey doubled him in and the Reds stole a victory. It's still my most frustrating memory in baseball. The Sox would've been up, two games to none.

I pulled every pot and pan out of my parents' cabinets and bounced them off the kitchen wall.

The Sox entered the top of the ninth in Game Three in Cincy, trailing 5-3. With Rico Petrocelli on first and one out, Red Sox manager Sparky Anderson called on reliever Rawley Eastwick to pitch to Dwight Gooden. "Eastwick jams him and he's just foul off. Garbo had a bad swing, he didn't know what to do. He was lucky to get a piece of it (first pitch). High drive, deep center, way back. Home Run!"

Four innings later, Fisk was the hero.

"Now it comes down to the point that the third out will be coming up. Eastwick struckout Evans on Sunday. There's a high drive, left field, the ball is near the wall, Foster's at the wall, he can't get it! Home Run! The game is all tied up and the Red Sox have pulled even, 5-3. Holy cow."

For one diehard Sox fanatic, hollering and jumping around the den, Evans' homer was a bigger thrill than the famous HRs of Game Six. In the third game, I was still living and dying on every pitch. By Game Six, a full week later, an emotionally exhausted baseball addict could muster only grunts or grunts.

Game Three went into extra innings, and Boston lost due in part to the well-documented Ed Armbrister burn/interference controversy.

Cincy held a 3-2 lead in games and a 6-3 lead in the eighth frame of Game Six when Bernie Carbo pinch hit for the Red Sox with two men on and two out.

Carbo: "Eastwick jams him and he's just foul off. Garbo had a bad swing, he didn't know what to do. He was lucky to get a piece of it (first pitch). High drive, deep center, way back. Home Run!"

Game Seven was supposedly anti-climatic, but it was yet another barn-burner. With the score knotted 3-all in the ninth, the Reds had runners on first and two out, and Joe Morgan up. Rookie Jim Burton was pitching.

Garagiola: "A little looper, center field, in fast is Lynn, it's gonna drop! Cincinnati takes the lead. That's a pitch that the youngster Burton, I'm sure, will be thinking about for a long time."

Ditto, for all of New England, Joe.

Cowboys, 'Skins go at it again in NFL warfare

By United Press International

The Washington Redskins and Dallas Cowboys are tied for the lead in the NFC East and looking forward to their meeting at RFK Stadium on Sunday, so what else is new?

"There isn't another team in the league that I enjoy beating as much as beating the Cowboys," said safety Mark Murphy, who will miss the game because of a knee injury. "Their organization just has an aloof attitude that makes you want to beat them."

"I'd rather play against Redskins than I'd rather play against O.J. Anderson," Lusk running back O.J. Anderson said. "O.J. just isn't that tough to me."

Riggins has carried 135 times for 540 yards and eight touchdowns and needs to gain just 24 yards Sunday to reach the 10,000-yard plateau.

Though both teams are 4-2 this season, the Redskins have been humbled in games thus far this season.

Washington has won four straight, but that is after opening losses to Miami 35-17 and San Francisco 37-31. Dallas was clubbed last Sunday 31-20 by fast-rising St. Louis and has lost to the New York Giants, 28-7.

"That just shows you the delicate line we all walk," Gibbs said. "If either of us looks only at each other, we're in trouble. But if we don't look carefully at each other, we're in trouble that way, too."

"We haven't had a club like this in 20 years," said Dallas coach Tom Landry. "Dallas is averaging a mere 19 points per game, far short of the 28 points Landry and his staff set as a goal for the Cowboys. They were mangled to get by on that until last week because of outstanding defensive play, but on Sunday Dallas gave up 31 points to the St. Louis Cardinals."

"A loss like that hurts your confidence," Landry said. "It will take a while to build it up."

Landry has indicated that Gary Hogeboom, the starter all season who was replaced by Danny White during the loss to the Cardinals, will start against the Redskins.

Hogeboom got a chance against the Redskins when defensive end Dexter Manley knocked White unconscious near halftime of Washington's 31-17 NFC title game victory two years ago. Hogeboom passed for 162 yards and two touchdowns in the second half.

Manley, who has a sprained ankle, is among the Redskins not expected to play against Dallas. Also listed as very doubtful are wide receiver Charlie Brown (sprained ankle) and linebacker Rich Milot, who had surgery three weeks ago to remove a bone chip from his left elbow.

Dallas wide receiver Tony Hill is expected to play after missing more than a month with a separated shoulder.

Elsewhere Sunday, it is Chicago at St. Louis, Cincinnati at New England, Indianapolis at Philadelphia, L.A. Rams at New Orleans, Houston at Miami, the Giants at Atlanta, the Jets at Cleveland, San Diego at Kansas City, Tampa Bay at Detroit, Buffalo at Seattle, Minnesota at the L.A. Raiders and Pittsburgh at San Francisco. On Monday, Green Bay is at Denver.

The New York Jets could be minus their two biggest offensive weapons—running back Freeman McNeil and wide receiver Wesley Walker—when they square off with Cleveland.

McNeil, the AFC's leading rusher with 822 yards, has severely bruised ribs and Walker, the Jets' deep threat, has a sore ankle.

"Wesley says he feels better but I think he still has a way to go," said Jets coach Joe Walton. "He's been on crutches for a couple of days. Freeman's ribs are still very sore and that's tough on a running back. We'll have to see how they come around. It's something we won't really know about until Sunday."

The Jets are 4-2 and the Browns are 1-5.

The Broncos are 5-1 and have been relying on a defense that has allowed the fewest points (78), fewest touchdowns (nine) and fewest touchdowns passes (two) this season.

"You just can't give our defense enough credit," said Denver coach Dan Reeves.

The Packers are 1-5 and will be relying on the arm of quarterback Lynn Dickey to open up the Denver defense.

Mike Bossy of the New York Islanders won the Lady Bing Trophy for sportsmanship in 1983.

Heating costs going up as usual

Fuel dealers don't foresee shortage

By Tracy L. Geoghegan
Herald Reporter

"There will be the normal price increase that there is every winter ... There's no need to panic from what the governor said. I don't foresee that there'll be any type of a shortage."

John Fogarty

"I don't think there's a shortage ... I think we just don't happen to have as much as we used to."

Frank Maffe

"I personally don't think prices will continue to go up all winter ... They'll go up until about one month from now, then they'll level off, stay there until mid-winter, then come down."

Edward Boland

The increase in heating costs this winter should be about the same as it usually is, area retailers and wholesalers predict.

And despite Gov. William O'Neill's recent warnings to the contrary, all said there is not likely to be a shortage of fuel this winter. A recent letter from O'Neill's office said he was concerned that oil suppliers in the state were not keeping their inventories high enough.

Many dealers agreed with the governor's advice that homeowners should fill their tanks early, but they said it was because of prices — not a potential shortage.

"There will be the normal price increase that there is every winter," said John Fogarty, president of Fogarty Brothers Inc. in Manchester. "There's no need to panic from what the governor said. I don't foresee that there'll be any type of a shortage."

Fogarty said there is no need for consumers to stock up on fuel in anticipation of such a shortage.

"The supplies are lower," he said. "I think that's a trend due to the fact that wholesale prices had been falling, and business says you don't buy when prices are falling. But now that the market has started to rise, business says you buy. There's plenty of oil."

Others in the heating fuel business said they would advise consumers to fill up their tanks early before prices go up any higher.

"Most people wait. Most people don't want to spend the money now," said Alan Friedman, vice president of Superior Propane Gas Service in Ellington. "But prices always go up in the winter."

"They're going to use it anyway, so they might as well fill up now," he said.

Friedman said his customers are currently paying about $1.05 per gallon of propane to heat an average home, which is about the same as they paid last year at this time. His figures are approximations because his company sells fuel for less per gallon if the order is a large one.

"Once the cold weather starts coming in, Exxon and the big companies figure they can make some more money and they jack the prices up," Friedman said.

A spokesman for Glastonbury's Bemer Petroleum Corp. also advised consumers to stock up on fuel while the prices are relatively low. He said heating oil prices began increasing rapidly four weeks ago, and will continue to do so throughout the winter.

Manchester resident Frank Maffe, president of Hall & Muska Inc. in East Windsor, said his company is currently selling heating oil for $1.08 per gallon — the exact same price they charged last year at this time.

Maffe said he could not predict how high prices would go this winter. "The big kicker is how cold it's going to get," he said. In a normal winter, he estimated, the price might go as high as $1.20 around January.

Maffe agreed with Governor

O'Neill's statements that inventories are low. But he said he foresees no shortage.

"The governor's right. The oil man can't afford to have his inventories as high as he used to," he said.

Maffe said the warm spell in February 1984 was a brutal period for oil dealers in the area. The weather suddenly turned warm. Wholesale prices dropped. And the dealers with big inventories got stuck with a lot of expensive fuel.

"The year before, the same thing happened," Maffe said. "We lost a lot of money. The oil man can't afford another bad year."

"I don't think there's a shortage," Maffe continued. "I think we just don't happen to have as much as we used to."

Edward Boland, president of Boland Bros. Inc., said he too is currently charging the exact same price to his customers that he did last year at this time. His oil is going for $1.08 per gallon.

"I personally don't think prices will continue to go up all winter," he said. "They'll go up until about one month from now, then they'll level off, stay there until mid-winter, then come down."

Boland predicted oil prices would rise another 10¢ before they level off.

He also advised consumers to fill up their tanks while the prices are low. "If you need it, go ahead. Call and take a delivery now. But there's no need for panic buying," Boland said.

Aaron Cook, president of General Oil Co. in East Hartford also said his firm has "adequate" supplies for its customers.

A spokeswoman from Caldwell Oil said that firm, like most others, is currently selling oil for only 1¢ over what it charged last year.

Prices for natural gas — the most popular method of heating in this area — should be about 16 percent higher this year, since the Department of Public Utility Control approved a rate increase for Sept 21.

A typical monthly winter heating bill for a home last winter was $122, according to Leslie Stopfel, manager of public affairs for Connecticut Natural Gas. This year that same bill will be about $130, she said.

A local heating oil wholesaler, who asked that his name not be used, called O'Neill's statement "foolish." He said O'Neill has created an artificial demand for the product that has already driven prices up.

Still, this wholesaler said, his prices are about 3¢ less per gallon than they were at this time last year.

"It all depends on the weather, really," the dealer said. "If it's a cold winter, it's the old law of supply and demand. The price will go up."

"Nobody really knows unless they're talking to God."

Check the filters

Clean or replace filters as needed in heating and cooling systems. Close vents in unused rooms and insulate ducts and pipes in unheated spaces.

Keep direct sunlight out of living spaces in summer, but let it in during winter; it helps warm the room.

Americans have rediscovered wood fuel

Many people would be surprised to learn that stoves, fireplaces, and furnaces in American homes now burn more wood than at any other time since World War II. Although residential fuelwood usage is increasing considerably, only 15 percent of the wood burned is in homes.

Since larger woodburning units usually are more efficient, 85 percent is in commercial and industrial installations.

The Forest Service, which manages this nation's 155 national forests covering 191 million acres, also maintains the Forest Products Laboratory in Madison, Wis., as a national center for wood utilization research.

In a discussion of the rebirth of interest in wood fuel in this country, the Forest Products Laboratory's Dr. John I. Zerbe noted: "The need for reducing the country's fossil-fuel usage, especially that which comes from petroleum, is becoming more critical."

In 1978, only 2 percent of America's energy needs were met by wood. That figure has grown to 5 percent today, because wood — unlike coal or petroleum — is a renewable fuel source. While coal and petroleum are finite resources, the annual growth of wood in this country greatly exceeds its use for timber products.

Especially in the wood-products industry, wood for fuel is available at very low cost, since waste byproducts can be used for this purpose. For example, Louisiana Pacific Corp. has a wood-fired power plant in Sonoma, Calif. This plant consumes 750 tons of dry wood waste per day, a byproduct of wood the company purchases from the nearby Six Rivers National Forest for the manufacture of a variety of products.

Such economical energy production and timber conservation are remarkable, especially considering the tremendous amount of power the plant is producing from wood waste.

The output of this power plant is 500 million pounds of steam per hour. This is sufficient to produce the 700 to 800 megawatts of electrical power used by Louisiana Pacific's pulp and sawmills.

An additional 10 megawatts produced at the plant are not needed by the mills and are sold to the local power company. These excess 10 megawatts are almost enough to supply the electrical requirements of the 12,000 households in the neighboring town of Arcata, Calif.

Increasingly, wood-product manufacturers throughout the country are using their own wood waste byproducts for their energy requirements. In 1978, wood-product manufacturers were 68 percent reliant upon wood waste for their fuel needs. By 1982, this figure had grown to 77 percent.

In the future, perhaps other industries will appreciate the benefits of wood fuel. Already, several hospitals in the state of Washington, where many national forests provide a plentiful wood supply, are burning wood pellets — because they are sulfur-free and create a pollution-free environment in the hospital area.

Zerbe feels that the potential exists for wood to contribute several times as much as energy as it does now. "The main sources of wood for fuel now, and the most likely sources in the future," he reports, "are the forest-products manufacturing residues, surplus forest growth, under-utilized species, and thinning and improvement cuttings. By the year 2000, he predicts, "all manufacturing wood residue will be used as fuel."

The forest-products industry and the USDA Forest Service have led the way toward reducing the country's consumption of fossil-fuels. It is expected that other industries will follow.

Ten Most Wanted List

Answers to home energy questions

Despite growing interest in energy and energy savings, homeowners continue to be plagued by such questions as the amount of insulation they need and the proper material to install.

In response to these kinds of questions, the CertainTeed Home Institute has developed its own version of the "Ten Most Wanted List." From questions asked most frequently by concerned homeowners, here are the Home Institute's "Ten Most Wanted Answers":

How does insulation work?

Heat naturally flows from warmer to cooler spaces. During the winter heating season, warmth is flowing from your heated living areas to adjacent unheated areas; attics, garages, basements and then directly outdoors.

In the summer, warmth from outdoors flows into the rooms you are trying to keep cool. Insulation guards against this heat transfer by providing a barrier to block the flow of heat. The end result: warmer in winter, cooler in summer.

Does my house need insulation?

Because most houses were built when energy was cheap and abundant, the amount of insulation in your home is probably not adequate by today's standards. In fact, if you have already added some insulation, you may find that even this is inadequate in view of the rapid rate of which energy costs are rising.

Anything less than 10 inches (R-30) of fiberglass building insulation in the attic is inadequate regardless of where you live. For many parts of the country, 12 inches or more is recommended.

Why should I insulate?

As a homeowner, there are three basic reasons to add insulation: to save money, to save energy, and to increase your personal comfort. Adequate amounts of insulation will enable you to use less energy to heat and cool your home, so you'll be saving money year after year.

Savings vary. Find out why in the Seller's Fact Sheet on R-values. Higher R-values mean greater insulating power. You'll also be conserving energy, a valuable and limited resource.

In addition, proper amounts of insulation help to maintain uniform temperatures throughout a house, thereby increasing personal comfort.

What is an R-value?

An R-value is the measure of an insulating material's resistance to heat flow. The higher the R-value, the greater the insulating power. Specific thicknesses of insulation are recommended to achieve certain R-values.

How much insulation do I need?

If your attic has 6 inches or less of insulation, at least the equivalent of 6-inch thick R-19 fiberglass building insulation should be added, according to government recommendations. If your attic has no insulation, up to 12-inch thick R-38 fiberglass building insulation may be required.

For specific amounts recommended in your geographic area, consult your local utility company, home center or a professional insulation contractor.

Where can insulation be added?

Insulation can be added to almost any house; and wherever structural framing is exposed (such as unfinished attic floors), you can install it yourself.

What kind of insulation should I use?

The most popular kind of insulation among homeowners today is fiberglass, which is available in rolls and batts for easy installation. Fiberglass is an extremely effective insulating material, because it contains millions of tiny pockets that resist the flow of heat.

In addition, fiberglass insulation won't deteriorate with age and, unlike some other kind of insulating materials, it is noncombustible.

Can I add insulation myself?

Wherever wood framing is exposed, as in the joists of an attic floor or along an unfinished garage wall, adding insulation is a job you can do yourself.

Wherever the frame is concealed, however, as in finished walls, or if your home is not of frame construction, special equipment is necessary and the services of a professional insulation contractor are recommended.

To find a contractor, first look under "Insulation Contractors" or "Insulation Materials" in the Yellow Pages. Other ways to locate a contractor are by contacting a local contractor's association or asking your friends and neighbors who've had their homes insulated.

Once the local professional insulation contractors have been identified, look for four important things any qualified professional will provide: credentials, references, written estimates, and high-quality products.

To check a contractor's credentials, contact the Better Business Bureau, Local-contractor associations also can be of assistance in this area.

How much will I save by adding insulation?

Although the amount of energy you will save depends on where you live, the size of your home and its construction, the Department of Energy estimates that insulation can be expected to pay for itself through fuel savings.

If your home was substantially built before April 20, 1977, and you install insulation yourself or have it installed in your attic, walls or floors, you are eligible for a tax credit of 15 percent of the first $2,000 you spend for both material and labor, up to a maximum of $300.

More information on saving energy can be obtained by writing to the CertainTeed Home Institute, P.O. Box 860, Valley Forge, Pa. 19482, for the free booklet: "Insulation Facts."

Keep the heat in

Insulate basement ceilings

The cold, damp root cellars of yesteryear where our great grandmothers stored homemade canned goods are a thing of the past. Now, they are called basements. Some house a photographic darkroom; others a home office, a laundry and sewing room, or a family room.

If you plan to finish your basement, says the Mineral Insulation Manufacturers Association, be sure to insulate the ceiling as well. While a cold, damp, dark cellar may be the ideal environment for growing mushrooms, it doesn't do much to keep expensive heat from escaping. Adding insulation to a basement ceiling will.

Insulating the basement ceiling is a fairly simple job. Insulation with an R-value of 19 is usually recommended. Insulation is measured in R-values, which stand for resistance to heat flow. The higher the R-value, the greater the insulating power.

Mineral fiber insulation — fiberglass or rock wool — is the overwhelming favorite among homeowners and homebuilders. It is particularly appropriate for insulating the basement ceiling because it comes in pre-packaged batts and blankets which fit between the joists.

If you're doing it yourself, MIMA suggests wearing old, loose-fitting clothing, work gloves, goggles and a dust mask. Tools include a sharp knife, ruler or measuring tape, a hammer, nails and metal wire.

Simply hammer nails into the ceiling joists at 2-foot intervals. Use the metal wire to lace across the lower edge of the insulation to keep it in place, or staple chicken wire to the joists.

If you'd rather not do it yourself, call your utility or home improvement association to get the names of some insulation contractors. You might also look in the "Yellow Pages" under "Insulation Contractors — Heat and Cold" or a similar listing. Get competitive bids from two or three contractors making sure each has the same specifications.

Additional information is in, "How to Save Money by Insulating Your Home." To get a copy of this booklet, send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to MIMA, 382 Springfield Ave., Summit, N.J. 07901.

Proper ventilation crucial to energy economy

In the face of rising energy and maintenance costs, today's homeowners are always on the lookout for ways to increase efficiency and protection within the home.

More and more homeowners have come to realize that proper ventilation is one of the most economical yet effective ways to provide a desirable home environment.

In discussing proper home ventilation, two systems must be considered: the natural, or static ventilation system, and the powered ventilation system.

The static ventilation system is simply a series of strategically placed non-mechanical vents. Simple though it may be, the static ventilation system is of enormous value within the home, particularly in view of modern construction practices.

In recent years, construction techniques have made homes virtually airtight. While this offers advantages in terms of heating and cooling, it also creates considerable problems.

There is a need for a free exchange of air between the inside and the outside. Without it, moisture, heat, grease, smoke and other contaminants are trapped within the house where they are a year-round threat to the indoor environment.

Static vents facilitate the movement of air between the home and the outdoors, helping to maintain a relatively fresh indoor atmosphere. These vents are usually installed in openings in the attic space and must be properly installed to take advantage of the natural flow of air.

There are five basic types of static vents. Ridge vents are designed to provide a continuous opening along the entire ridge line of a pitched roof. Ridge vents prevent rain and snow from entering the attic, but allow for an ongoing exchange of air between the attic and the outside.

For maximum efficiency, the ridge vent must be used with the under-eaves vents. Installed in the roof overhang on both sides of the house, the under-eaves vents serve as the intake areas, allowing fresh air to flow into the attic while stale air flows out through the ridge vent.

The other three types of static vents are: triangular vents — those which are fitted to the high point of the gable ends of the house; rectangular vents — those which are placed slightly lower at the gable ends; and roof vents — those which are normally placed on the rear slope of the roof. Regardless of which vents are used, the under-eaves vents are necessary to create a system in which air flows continuously from the attic to the outside. With this air flow, the homeowner helps to avoid the dangers which can occur in the attic from too much heat build-up in summer and too much moisture build-up in winter.

To assure that your ventilation system functions properly, it must be correctly sized. The Home Ventilating Institute, a division of Air Movement and Control Association, offers simple formulas for computing the correct size of ventilators.

First, you must determine the actual square-footage of the attic. For static vents, there should be one-square-foot of vent area for every 150-square-feet of attic square-footage.

For powered ventilators, multiply the attic square-footage by .7. The result gives the proper capacity of the fan in terms of cubic-feet-per-minute of air moved.

Attic ventilators manufactured by HVI members are independently tested and their certified CFM rating appears on the HVI label displayed on members' products. It is the consumer's assurance that the product will perform at specified levels.

For more information about proper ventilation, contact the Home Ventilating Institute Division of Air Movement and Control Association, 30 W. University Drive, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60004.

Any time is time to insulate

New Year's and birthdays tend to be the times when most of us take stock of our lives and think about changes or improvements. When it comes to home improvements, it's often springtime or autumn. But any time of year is suitable for adding sufficient insulation to make your home energy efficient.

Once your home has adequate insulation, don't overlook the importance of storm doors and windows, caulking and weather-stripping. Installing storm doors and windows should cut heat loss or gain in half.

Caulking will seal all the cracks around windows and doors. A caulking gun and caulking compound can be purchased at any hardware store. To apply, simply squeeze the compound into the cracks.

Home winterization

Stop drips, caulk cracks, insulate attics

By James V. Heallon
United Press International

MIDDLETOWN — Is the month of April, redolent with the promise of spring, the time to talk about winterizing your home?

Any time is the right time if you live in the Frost Belt, and so, good grief, you put aside your hot cocoa and you and mother listen to the man from CONN SAVE, Alan Hosteller.

He represents a state-approved non-profit group of five sponsoring utilities that since 1980 has sent energy auditors to 130,000 homes in Connecticut at the request of the customer. For a $10 fee, they suggested ways to save energy and money and the means and sources to do it.

Hosteller made a dozen recommendations, including lowering the daytime winter thermostat setting to 65 degrees and setting it back to 55 degrees at night. He said reducing the domestic hot water temperature to 120 degrees would help. It was at 115 degrees.

He suggested weather-stripping two doors and the attic access as well as insulating part of a crawl space under the house. He said weather-stripping and insulation would mean a 15 percent income tax credit.

The work, he said, would be submitted for bidding by licensed contractors and if it were done, somebody from CONN SAVE would be around to inspect it upon completion for quality.

"We're happy so far," said Pina Billings, public affairs director of CONN SAVE. "One hundred thirty thousand homes is a substantial number of homes to audit in four years and this year we started auditing apartments."

The CONN SAVE program was mandated by the 1978 National Energy Conservation Policy Act. There is supposed to be one in every state in one form or another under the federal legislation. It can usually be found through the mayor's office or the state public utilities department. Our mayor, Sebastian J. Garafalo, and the Common Council endorsed and promoted it.

Arnum in her West Hartford apartment in an attempt to save her energy and money.

The program helps people do all sorts of winterizing from installing insulation or a solar system to modernizing their heating system. It also assists in obtaining a no-interest or low-interest loan to do the work.

CONN SAVE personnel keep the homeowner posted from start to finish, and are available for questions. They supply abundant reading material on all aspects of the energy conservation program.

In a waste not, want not era, it says one drip per second from a leaky hot water faucet or showerhead sends about 175 gallons of hot water down the drain every month.

At our house, more attic insulation was proposed by the contractor awarded the job with a low bid of $483. He suggested loose fill as opposed to face insulation put in place. The idea of a hose running up through the house was not appealing. Eight eave vents for better ventilation were also suggested.

The vents didn't amount to much workwise. He proposed drilling holes into the undersides of the eaves on each of the house's four sides, say eight or so in a rectangle. Then he planned to cover the outline with metal mesh.

We elected to do the work ourselves. Now if we can just get around to it before the snow flies.

Winterizing a home can also mean paying some attention to the old and rugged cast iron cookstove whose seams need to be caulked each season so smoke doesn't intrude into the living area.

A well-kept stove is far more efficient than an open fireplace. It just needs periodic car and cleaning to make it gleam and rid it of combustibles like soot and creosote that have caused serious fires. A couple of pounds of baking soda or salt next to the stove or fireplace could come in handy along with the fire department's telephone number.

Cleaning a chimney can be done with a grain sack filled with hay or straw and small stones that is lowered repeatedly into it on a rope or chain. Long-handled metal brushes are sold for the purpose. Elbow grease is free.

The best wood to burn is hardwood because it produces nearly twice as much heat as softwood. It has to be seasoned, too, and can't be green if it's expected to be burned anytime soon. Dealing with a reputable supplier is crucial unless you want to get on friendly terms with a working axe or chain saw.

Storing wood is important. If it's put next to your house, you're inviting carpenter ants to a free meal. They were here first and love houses. They will eat you out of yours. And even when you bring wood in, make sure they aren't included. They're meaner than junkyard dogs.
