Arms control highlights 2nd debate

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — President Reagan and Walter Mondale fought over who could provide strong and sensible leadership in the nuclear age, but with Election Day just over two weeks away neither delivered the knockout punch they sought in their second debate.

The 90-minute showdown produced no major fireworks except those shot off in celebration outside the debate hall once the affair ended — or gaffes by either contender, both of them feeling the pressure of having to prove their mettle before millions of television viewers across the nation.

An early ABC poll following their final debate found 39 percent feeling Reagan won, 36 percent picking Mondale, and 25 percent undecided.

Vice President George Bush called his running mate the clear winner. "One man talked tough and the other — our president — spelled out the facts irrefutably. He was in charge. The man was in total control."

Jim Johnson, chairman of the Mondale campaign, claimed his boss "won because he was strong and effective throughout. He demonstrated the president did not comprehend the essential elements of arms control policy... He raised serious questions about whether the president was in charge."

Both candidates made hectic campaign appearances today. Reagan flew to Palmdale, Calif., to view a B-1B assembly area, and then goes to GOP rallies in San Diego and Medford, Ore., before spending the night in Portland, Ore. Mondale stumps in Philadelphia.

Inaugural preparations

Construction begins Friday on the West front of the Capitol in preparation for the presidential inauguration on Jan. 21, 1985.

Connecticut In Brief

Communist blasts Reagan

HARTFORD — A national Communist Party leader wound up a two-day visit to Connecticut Friday, pitching his party's presidential ticket but stressing a greater need to out President Reagan from office.

James Steele, national chairman of the Communist Youth League, said his party is pushing its presidential candidate, Gus Hall, but more importantly is part of a larger movement to defeat Reagan.

"We would appreciate a vote for our candidates but the bottom line is to defeat Reagan," Steele, 37, of New York City, said at a news conference outside the Capitol.

Steele stopped short of endorsing Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale, but conceded the former vice president has the best chance to defeat Reagan.

Steele attacked Reagan as anti-union, opposing enforcement of civil rights laws and favoring reduced federal spending for social programs while increasing spending on weapons.

Agencies seek $4.4 billion

HARTFORD — State agencies have submitted budget requests totaling $4.4 billion for the next fiscal year, or about 10 percent more than current spending levels, the state's deputy budget chief said Friday.

Budget officials are now reviewing the requests and will have a tentative budget ready for Gov. William A. O'Neill by Nov. 15, said Howard G. Rifkin, deputy secretary of the Office of Policy and Management.

The requests for the 1985-86 fiscal year, which begins July 1, 1985, represent just less than a 10 percent hike over this year's $4 billion budget, Rifkin said.

Racketeering charge made

HARTFORD — State police announced Friday the arrest of a 61-year-old Stratford man on racketeering charges.

Thomas A. Debrizzi, 61, was arrested on a warrant charging him with one count each of racketeering and conspiracy to commit racketeering. He was released on $10,000 bond and was scheduled to appear in West Haven Superior Court Oct. 29.

Ex-prosecutor says U.S. hid Nazi criminal

By Carol Rosenberg United Press International

ROCKLAND, Mass. — Arthur Rudolph, the top rocket scientist identified this week as a Nazi criminal, was able to work in the United States because U.S. officials whitewashed his records, a former Justice Department prosecutor charged Friday.

Rudolph's name was on a list of German scientists who U.S. officials planned to recruit after World War II. He worked at a missile factory in Peenemunde, Germany, and was involved in the development of the V-2 rocket.

At that time, Rudolph's war crimes were known, and they were mentioned in State Department and Pentagon background files on potential scientific recruits, Loftus said.

He estimated, judging from his Justice Department research between 1978 and 1981, that at least six other World War II criminals brought here from Germany under Operation Paperclip are still living in the United States.

The Justice Department announced this week that Rudolph, 78, renounced his U.S. citizenship rather than face charges he worked thousands of slave laborers to death in a Nazi missile factory. Rudolph left the United States in March and turned his U.S. citizenship in May while in Germany.

Rudolph, who played a prominent role in the Saturn-5 space program that put astronauts on the moon in 1969, was brought to the United States with Werner von Braun and 116 other German rocket scientists after World War II.

Loftus says government investigators working for the Pentagon and State Department chose to clear Rudolph's background because of an order from President Truman not to accept any war criminals.

"Anyone that stumbles across Rudolph's files in a cursory manner is going to get out of the Pentagon committed a fraud against President Truman," Loftus said. "Truman was kept in the dark."

Loftus said Rudolph and dozens of other scientists brought to the United States under Operation Paperclip were cleared of being war criminals shortly after Truman declared three categories of scientists would not be allowed to work here. They included people defined as "War Criminals," past members of the Nazi Party and the elite Nazi police responsible for enforcing Hitler's genocide program, and people who had done experiments on human beings.

The first two categories eliminated Rudolph because he was known as the chief operations director for Nazi laborers to work in the United States to help provide Germany's V-2 missile production at an underground rocket factory where thousands of slave laborers died digging tunnels with their bare hands. Hitler used the rockets to bombard London.

Loftus said Pentagon and State Department officials, working in tandem with British intelligence operatives, decided to ignore Truman's order and whitewash the criminals' records because they believed he would be defeated by Thomas Dewey in the 1948 election.

Town Democrats say Mondale won

Manchester Democrats contacted by the Herald today generally think Walter Mondale, the Democratic candidate for president, won Sunday night's debate on foreign policy and narrowed President Ronald Reagan's lead over him.

Republicans saw the debate either as a Reagan victory or a draw with no effect on the election. Theodore Cummings, Democratic town chairman, said Mondale made an "even more presidential showing than in the debate two weeks ago. He said Mondale's composure and self confidence in the debate will translate into a gain that will pick up many more of the Democratic votes that have been doubtful."

"I think the race is going to be closer than the polls show," Cummings said. Curtis Smith, Republican town chairman, called the debate a draw and said nobody lost and nobody gained. But Smith said he is not concerned about the Reagan-Bush campaign. He said that before the debate Manchester Republicans conducted a telephone poll of 150 voters and found support for Reagan strong, even among Democrats.

Mayor Barbara Weinberg, a Democrat who supported Mondale in the primary elections, said the presidential race will be closer than the polls have indicated. Of the debate, she said the quality of Mondale's answers were better and Mondale continued to project the image of leadership. She said Reagan did better than in the last debate.

State Sen. Carl Zinsser, R-Manchester, said "Reagan, R-Manchester, said she was 'glad to see Reagan a little more honest.' She said it is difficult to have committees telling you what to do. Swensson said she doubts the debate changed anyone's vote.

U.S. Rep. Barbara Kennelly, D-Conn., in Manchester on her campaign for election in the 1st Congressional District, said today, "I wish we had had a knockout, but we didn't." She said the debate will be looked at as a draw.

The Democratic challenger — who wants CIA Director William Casey fired over the episode — termed the booklet "giving instructions for hiring assassins, hiring criminals" an embarrassment and part of a policy "that's actually hurt us, strengthened our opposition and undermined (U.S.) moral authority in that region."

He did not renew his call for Casey's resignation, Reagan, who said the primer did not amount to state-supported terrorism, did not respond to suggestions a CIA probe he ordered let "the fox into the chicken coop."

Police clear Jordan in Parkade incident

By Sarah Posselt Herald Reporter

Police today announced that patrolman Martin Jordan has been cleared of any impropriety in his actions when he stopped Sears employee Clarence Zachery Jr. outside Sears in the Manchester Parkade during a robbery investigation last May.

But Lt. Samuel Kotsch Jr., who conducted the five-month investigation into Jordan's conduct during the incident, said in his report to Chief Robert D. Lannan that the complaint Zachery registered the same day indicates "a deficiency within our Department regarding the method by which individuals can obtain explanations of police conduct, contacts and procedures."

It is apparent... that at least three police officers advised the Zacherys to file a complaint when perhaps explanations were all that was necessary," Kotsch said in his report, dated Friday.

Ron vows firing of book writers

By Elliot Brenner United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Reagan sought to undo political damage from the revelation of a CIA terrorist booklet for Nicaragua rebels by saying during the debate with Walter Mondale that whoever is responsible will be fired.

The issue of the handbook on psychological guerrilla warfare, erupting in the closing weeks of the campaign, was the first topic of the foreign policy debate Sunday night in Kansas City, Mo.

The Democratic challenger — who wants CIA Director William Casey fired over the episode — termed the booklet "giving instructions for hiring assassins, hiring criminals" an embarrassment and part of a policy "that's actually hurt us, strengthened our opposition and undermined (U.S.) moral authority in that region."

He did not renew his call for Casey's resignation, Reagan, who said the primer did not amount to state-supported terrorism, did not respond to suggestions a CIA probe he ordered let "the fox into the chicken coop."

Leaf pickup in town to begin on Monday

Curbside vacuum leaf pickup in Manchester will begin Monday morning and is scheduled to continue for six weeks, officials said today.

The town has been divided into six routes for the pickup. The first route lies generally in the north and northeast section of town.

A full schedule with lists of streets will be advertised in Thursday's Herald, the officials said today.

The route to start Nov. 5 is generally in the south and southwest section of the town.

On Nov. 13, collection will begin along a route in the east section, on Nov. 19 in the central section west of Main Street, on Nov. 16 in a central section east of Main Street, and on Dec. 3 in the west side of town.

In the past few days the Herald has received a number of phone calls from residents wanting to know if the collection had started.

Rinestone said the budget this year allows about $25,000 for assistance in the leaf pickup program from outside town forces.

day on rental of vacuum trucks to augment town-owned trucks in the cleanup. Town officials have estimated the town will need 100 hours of truck rental time.

George Rinestone, work coordinator for the Highway Department, said the routes are about the same as they were last year, but the section is changed so that the same section will not be first again.

Rinestone said the collection is beginning on the last Monday in October as it has in the past, but leaves have fallen earlier this year.

Tribute to Grandpa

Ernest Hemingway was nicknamed "Papa," but to Margaux Hemingway he was the Grandpa who died when she was 6. She is just now really discovering him, thanks to the TV documentary on Hemingway she is making tentatively titled "Watering Holes." It took her to his haunts in Key West, Cuba, Paris, Pamplona and the south of Spain. "It's a personal search for me," she told UPI, "finding out about my grandfather. I feel that through my own discoveries, and with my humor, I'll be able to educate my generation about him."

She currently is representing the Paternina Winery in the U.S. market — she also attended the dedication of the Hemingway Cellars in their Rioja Valley winery. When the documentary is done, she plans to head for her London home to work on an album.

A Bealle downer

When the Beatles broke up, Paul McCartney fell apart. "For the first time in my life, I was on the scrap heap, in my own eyes," McCartney said in the upcoming Playboy. It wasn't the money. "It was just the feeling, the bewilderment of not being of any use to anyone anymore. It was a bartering, empty feeling that just rolled across my soul... Drugs had shown me little bits here and there — they had rolled across the carpet once or twice, but I had been able to get them out of my mind. In this case, the end of the Beatles, I really was done in for the first time in my life."

He said his wife had to get up with him who didn't want to get out of bed in the morning. "He wanted to drink earlier and earlier each day," McCartney said, "and didn't really see the point in shaving, because where was he going?"

Wild about Harry

Britain's Prince Charles is so wild about his 5-week-old son, Prince Harry, that he has been neglecting his public duties, according to People magazine. Prince Phillip reportedly berated Charles during a stormy session for not keeping up with official documents and for cutting back on public appearances. Charles, in turn, complained that his father went for a drive instead of rushing over to see the new baby. Charles reportedly shows more interest in nursery duties such as changing diapers and bathing the baby than Princess Diana.

The newest little prince, it is rumored, will become the first member of the immediate royal family to have an American godparent, oil tycoon Armand Hammer, 88, a close friend of Charles.

Herve's new job

Herve Villechaze, who played Tattoo on "Fantasy Island" for six years before quitting in a dispute over money, has traded his white suit for overalls and a red bandana print shirt. The 3-foot-11, 70-pound actor was dressed for success in his latest job, a stint on the syndicated TV show "Hee Haw."

He found Nashville has definite advantages over Los Angeles. "I like it here. No one hustles me here. I don't need a bodyguard," said the Villechaze, who carries a gun at all times for protection. Villechaze also keeps busy helping abused children. He's on the board of directors of a halfway home for neglected and abused children in Los Angeles and is active in Child Find, which helps locate missing children. He's even obtained a private investigator's license so he can help locate missing children with their parents.

Eighth fights stubborn fire

Eighth Utilities District firefighters fought a stubborn brush fire on and off all weekend in the woods east of Union Pond. Fire department spokesman Thomas E. O'Marra reported today. They were first called to the scene around noon on Friday. Thirty-six firefighters returned late Saturday afternoon to fight a 175-by-75-foot patch of woods on fire that took nearly two hours to subdue, O'Marra said. They were called back about 2:30 p.m. Sunday. O'Marra said 30 firefighters spent another almost three hours battling the fire. "Hopefully we stirred it up and soaked it down enough," he said. He said the cause of the initial outbreak has not been determined but could be simply the dryness of the growth in the area. He said the fire apparently spread underground, popping up above ground again each time firefighters thought they had extinguished it.

Cassano starts student group

Stephano Cassano, a Democratic town director who is running for the Fourth Senatorial District seat, has started a "Students for Cassano" group at Manchester Community College. Between 20 and 25 students have volunteered to help his campaign. Cassano said. An item in the latest college newsletter urges students to join. "Those involved" see a clear choice, and they've been working," according to Cassano. As a professor of sociology at MCC, he said he is concerned that the college is severely understaffed and has too many part-time instructors. While Cassano said he refuses to advocate his candidacy in the classroom, he said he is excited that students are willing to help him at a time when some complain of student apathy.

The purpose of the fair is to allow students to hear first-hand about vocational schools from representatives. Parents of MHS students are invited. The fair will be held in room G-1 at the high school.

Fraze named police sergeant

Manchester police officer Spencer D. Frazee, an eight year veteran of the department, will be promoted to sergeant at a Wednesday morning ceremony at the police station, police spokesman Gary Wood said today. He lives in Tolland with his wife and two children.

Manchester hopefuls to appear

Candidates in the 9th Assembly District, which includes part of Manchester, are scheduled to debate next Monday at East Hartford's Town Hall. The debate is being sponsored by the East Hartford League of Women Voters, according to a news release. Incumbent Democrat Donald Bates and Republican candidate Kevin Norige, both of East Hartford, will answer questions from a panel of parents of Manchester area civic organizations in each of the three towns included in the District: East Hartford, Glastonbury and Manchester. The debate is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. and is open to the public.

'Biz' says she's a friend to elderly and handicapped

Editor's note: This is the third in a series of profiles of candidates who will appear on the Manchester ballot in the Nov. 6 election.

By Kathy Gormus Herald Reporter

She considers herself an advocate for the elderly and the handicapped. At 62 years of age, 13th Assembly District Republican Rep. Elsie L. Swenson of Manchester says she knows the problems facing older people. And, having spent some time in a wheelchair after being struck by a hit-and-run driver two years ago, she says she is keenly aware of the needs of the handicapped. Issues she has addressed during her two terms in the Legislature have been human services, public health and education. "But more often than not, Swenson's conversation focuses on the needs of the elderly."

She says many of the taxes levied by the state are particularly hard on its elderly residents and cites taxes on meals under $1 and used clothing as examples. "Some of those taxes can be cut without hurting the state's budget," she says. Swenson stands firmly against a state income tax on the grounds that her constituents in the 13th District have said they do not favor one.

Health care cost containment and the prevention of sexual abuse of children are issues she says she wants to tackle if she wins a third term on Nov. 6. And, she says, the state does not adequately fund an energy assistance program to help its poor and elderly residents keep warm in the winter. But when asked whether she has in mind legislation to address these and other issues, Swenson says she is awaiting reports from study

ELSIE 'BIZ' SWENSON seeks third term in 13th

Elsie L. Swenson, 560 Porter St., Age: 62. Married to Joseph L. Swenson Sr. Education: Braintree High School, Braintree, Mass.; courses through the Service Bureau for Women's Organizations. Experience in public office: 13th District state representative since 1980; member of Human Services and Government Administration and Elections committees. She puts in nearly full-time hours at the job, according to Van Norstrand.

SWENSON SAYS SHE CONSIDERS HERSELF a scrapper when it comes to issues she feels are important. She proudly explains that she does not hesitate to write letters to Gov. William A. O'Neill. "When it comes time to fight, I fight," she says. But Thompson says much of Swenson's scrappiness is show. "I would try much more vigorously to find solutions," Thompson says. Swenson says she feels there is unfinished business awaiting her at the capital. If voters return her to Hartford, Swenson says she would become involved with the banking committee and possibly the appropriations committee. If she loses the election, she says, she will return to volunteer work. Swenson never held a paying job before being elected to the Legislature four years ago. "I'm doing it because I enjoy it," she says of her legislative work. Swenson says she has no greater political ambition than "representing my town."

Civic background: Vice chairwoman, Republican Town Committee, 1976-1980; member, National Easter Seal Society; secretary of Easter Seal State Society; volunteer, Manchester Memorial Hospital; former volunteer for Red Cross and Meals on Wheels; member, Manchester Association for Retarded Citizens; member of South United Methodist Church. Campaign Manager: Judy Kargl.

Planners oppose church school, day-care

Planning officials have recommended that a Bloomfield-based church be denied permission to convert the former Manchester Marine Club at 717 Parker St. into a church and church-sponsored school. They have also recommended that a Louisiana woman be denied permission to establish a day care center on Walnut Street. Both applications will be the subject of public hearings before the Zoning Board of Appeals tonight. The ZBA meets at 7 p.m. in the Lincoln Center hearing room. The board is also scheduled to hear:

- An application from Evelyn E. Brass to attach a one-car garage to a house at 29 Barry Road.
- Extra Mart's application to build a 52-by-38-foot canopy over gasoline pumps at 410 Hartford Road.
- An application from Manchester Movers Inc. to reduce yard size requirements so a warehouse can be built at 85 Colonial Road.

In recommending against the application of the Gospel Assembly Church of Christ, the ZBA said the church and school would be "contrary to sound planning practices" because of the industrial character of the area. The property is in an industrial zone and is surrounded by industrial uses, including a scrap metal and a used auto parts business. The school would operate "in an environment which would not be conducive because of noise, traffic and commercial activity," Zebb wrote in an Oct. 19 memorandum to the ZBA. The proposed school would operate from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday and would serve about 25 children, according to Zebb. Zebb also recommended that Cynthia Davison's application for permission to run a day-care center at 111 Walnut St. be denied because it would bring a business character to a residential neighborhood. The property on which the house sits also has a front yard that is too small to permit sufficient parking, Zebb said in a memo to the ZBA. Davidson, of Groton, La., proposed to run the center from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday. The center would take children up to four years old.

Mercier says McCavanagh's evading him

General Assembly candidate Jonathan Mercier said today that incumbent James McCavanagh's charge that Mercier made scurrilous personal attacks on him is utterly false and is a "flimsy excuse to avoid a direct discussion of the issues."

Mercier is the Republican challenger to Democratic Rep. McCavanagh, who is seeking a second term in Manchester's 12th Assembly District. Mercier has repeatedly asked McCavanagh to debate the issues and McCavanagh has refused, citing time constraints. In Mercier's latest invitation last week, he suggested the two candidates try to arrange with the Kiwanis Club to share a platform at two successive meetings instead of speaking separately. "I did not make any statement at the League meeting or elsewhere which could be described in the words he used," Mercier said. "I simply do not know what he is referring to."

The faces of President Reagan and Walter Mondale show the strain and the stakes of Sunday night's foreign policy debate in Kansas City. The president heads for the West Coast today while Mondale goes to Philadelphia in a last-ditch effort to swing voters to his side before the Nov. 6 election.

Mondale camp on the trail to narrow Reagan's lead

By Matthew C. Quinn
United Press International

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Walter Mondale, his second debate with President Reagan behind him without the aura of the first, embarked on an ambitious last-ditch campaign today promising to press his attacks on Reagan's debate statements.

The Democratic presidential nominee continued to get in his licks against Reagan following the 90-minute nationally broadcast debate on foreign policy today, he said, "we're going to have a little debate about what he knew and what he said."

With only 15 days left before the election, the Mondale camp did not get the hoped-for knockout blow against the president on what aides viewed as the president's most vulnerable subject area, and Reagan was back on stride.

Reagan aides see smooth path to election

By Helen Thomas
United Press International

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Jubilant aides say President Reagan's showing in the final debate has made it virtually impossible for Walter Mondale to gain the ground he needs with just two weeks left in the race for the White House.

On leaving the Kansas City, Mo., Municipal Auditorium Reagan flipped the thumb-up sign to supporters but made no other assessment of his performance.

White House chief of staff James Baker said the president was "in command" and "on the offensive." "I think the president made it very clear that once again America is prepared for peace," he said.

Missing since June

By Ed Lion
United Press International

PORTLAND, Maine — Family and friends of missing solo sailor Bill Dunlop, their fading hopes revived by a desperate "Robinson Crusoe-type" note found on a remote Australian beach, launched an aerial search today of the island-dotted Great Barrier Reef.

"We didn't have the luxury of time," said Jeffrey Weinstein, a close friend of Dunlop, who has been missing since June in the South Pacific in his quest to sail around the world in the smallest boat ever.

After studying detailed maps of the region and of Dunlop's trans-Pacific route, Weinstein said a twin-engine plane with a pilot and three trained observers began circling-crossing an area 80 miles east of Mackay on Australia's eastern shore.

Dunlop's wife, who lives in Mechanics Falls, was contacted Saturday and told that a note for help stashed in a small plastic container had been found washed up on a Queensland beach, triggering hopes that it may have been written by him.

"Shipwrecked on an island," the unsigned note read. "No food. Little water. Time running out." "The note sounds like him," said Pamela Dunlop. "They told us it was half-written, half-ruined — that's just the way Bill writes."

The Australian government denied a request to begin searching the numerous uninhabited islands of the Great Barrier Reef off Queensland until it compares the note with an original sample of Dunlop's handwriting which Weinstein said would be flown to Australia today.

He said the focus of the private search was "in line with the route he took in combination with the strong winds and currents he was facing for the last couple months of his voyage."

Just why the note was not signed was a "mystery to all of us, though he could be delirious in a Robinson Crusoe-type situation," Weinstein said.

"But it was dated 10-16-84. It should be noted that a date written that way is almost exclusively American, so we pretty much figure it's an American," he added.

"There is the chance that it may be a hoax, but it's the type of incident that definitely necessitates follow-up," he said. "I am satisfied that the people who found the note while walking along the beach are of good integrity."

Weinstein said the undamaged note, found near the Whitsunday Passage area of the Queensland coast, was inside a small plastic margarine container which contained a brand-name product sold throughout Australia and the South Pacific.

"He could have picked up the note on the way down," Weinstein said. "It's possible that it was written by someone else who was on the boat."

Hard line, soft rhetoric on defense

By Richard C. Gross
United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Reagan jostled with Walter Mondale on the Soviet-American military confrontation, seeking to unhorse the Democrat by charging him with a "record of weakness," second to none, on national defense.

Mondale, trying to counter an image of being soft on defense, called the Soviet Union "a tough and ruthless adversary" and pledged a "commitment to a strong national defense." But he also said strength alone was not enough.

"The president must be in command," said Mondale, who has openly questioned whether Reagan knew enough about defense matters to lead the country sensibly. "A president has to lead his government or it won't be done."

In their nationally televised 90-minute debate Monday, the two men clashed head-on only briefly on defense — a major issue that helped elect Reagan four years ago with a campaign commitment to "return America" to a "strong national defense."

The Soviet Union has been engaged in the biggest military buildup in the history of man," Reagan said, jabbing at Mondale for being part of what he termed the Carter administration's policy of "unilateral disarmament, of weakness, if you will."

"I thought when I came into office it was time there was some realistic talk about the Soviet Union, and we did get their attention."

"I have no illusions about the Soviet Union's leadership or the nature of that state," Mondale retorted, arguing that if Washington did get Moscow's attention it was in the negotiating table.

"They're a tough and ruthless adversary and we must be prepared to meet that challenge, and I would," he said. "Where I part with the president is that despite all of those differences, we must, as past presidents before this one has done, meet on the common ground of survival."

Reagan, the former vice president said, "completes this term with a very dangerous arms race under way. There are now over 2,000 more warheads today than when he was sworn in four years ago."

To show that "there will be no unilateral disarmament under my administration," Mondale said that he has proposed "a budget that would increase our nation's strength in real terms by double that of the Soviet Union." He did not elaborate.

Body trapped in sealed mine

By Susan E. Kinsman
United Press International

ACTON, Calif. — Officials sealed a 100-year-old Mojave Desert gold mine until they can find a way to safely remove the body of a miner who was overcome by bad air and fell 40 feet down a narrow shaft.

Two mine safety experts inclined into the two-foot-wide shaft with 40 feet of Roy Madsen's body Saturday night, but were unable to recover it, sheriff's spokesman Wes Sluder said.

Officials padlocked the mine entrance Sunday, saying the lack of oxygen and the possibility of a cave-in made further recovery efforts too dangerous.

The presidential race between Republican Ronald Reagan and Democrat Walter Mondale is seen as a clear choice between two political philosophies and the same may be true in the 5th District.

"What it's coming down to is a contrast between an old, tired liberal and a more conservative candidate talking about the future," Rowland said.

In the next session Rowland said he would press for Medicare reform and tighter domestic spending and the adoption of a "pay-as-you-go" budget to reduce the deficit.

Rowland said he is a "moderate" Republican, is confident he can appeal to Democrats and independents. The insurance salesman was elected in 1980 and re-elected in 1982 to Waterbury's 73rd assembly district where only 18 percent of the registered voters are Republicans.

His chances in the congressional district may be hurt by reapportionment which removed the traditionally Republican towns of Westport, New Canaan and Trumbull. "It hurts the numbers," Rowland said.

Oregon resumes vote fight

PORTLAND, Ore. — A political feud between an Indian guru's followers and their outraged neighbors has moved into federal court — with control of the county government at stake.

U.S. District Judge Edward Leavy, who held an unusual full court session Saturday, was to resume the hearing today on whether street people imported by the sect from urban ghettos around the country have the right to register to vote.

The guru's followers seek a preliminary injunction ordering Wasco County Clerk Sue Profit to resume accepting registrations.

An estimated 3,500 homeless persons have been brought to the central Oregon commune of guru Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh in the past six weeks, raising the population to about 7,000. The sect plans to run write-in candidates for the two open seats on the three-member Wasco County Commission. The guru's outspoken secretary, Ma Anand Sheela, has infuriated some residents by saying the county should be taken over because it is so "bigoted."

Ratchford seen as beatable

GOP musters all its resources in 5th

By Susan E. Kinsman
United Press International

HARTFORD — The Republican and Democratic national committees have targeted Connecticut's 5th District congressional race as one to win in a close contest between a veteran Democrat and a Republican newcomer.

Rep. William R. Ratchford, 50, a Danbury lawyer, is seeking a fourth term in the heavily Democratic district which stretches from his hometown across the upper reaches of affluent Fairfield County into the industrial and less prosperous Naugatuck Valley.

His challenger, state Rep. John G. Rowland, 27, is the first Republican candidate to run as a native of Waterbury in many years and the GOP is betting on that advantage to give him an edge in the district's largest city and Democratic stronghold.

WILLIAM RATCHFORD — a Reagan critic

JOHN ROWLAND — an avowed moderate

Ratchford has criticized the Reagan administration and voted against the president's economic recovery plan, but has taken credit for all economic development in the 5th District. You can't really have it both ways and people are realizing this," Rowland said.

Ratchford, a member of the House Appropriations Committee and Select Committee on Aging, said he was proud of his voting record and constituent service.

"I think getting the job done is an important test, and I feel I've met that test," Ratchford said. "I've shown much more interest in — and concern for — people programs."

In the next session Rowland said he would press for Medicare reform and tighter domestic spending and the adoption of a "pay-as-you-go" budget to reduce the deficit.

His chances in the congressional district may be hurt by reapportionment which removed the traditionally Republican towns of Westport, New Canaan and Trumbull. "It hurts the numbers," Rowland said.

Barnes talks of accord

PLAINVILLE — Nearly 600 striking workers at the Barnes Group company who went on strike two weeks ago have reached a tentative three-year contract with management negotiators.

"We have reached a tentative agreement with the company," said Philip J. Robotham, president of Auto Workers Local 712, whose 357 Associated Spring members struck Oct. 8 with 225 Wallace Barnes Steel Division workers when their contracts expired.

Negotiators reached agreement on the tentative contract Sunday and the union will hold a vote on whether to ratify it at a meeting Tuesday. The strike will continue until the vote, union officials said.

Negotiators would not disclose the terms of the contract but both sides reacted positively. Just before walking off their jobs, union members two weeks ago overwhelmingly rejected a company contract proposal by a 560-7 vote.

Westport State police, at the behest of Gov. William A. O'Neill, cracked down on motorists and issued 133 tickets for speeding and other moving violations in Fairfield County last weekend.

Police said they issued 67 tickets Saturday and another 67 tickets Sunday in the crackdown, which began midnight Friday and ended by 11 p.m. Sunday.

State police dispatcher Paul Egan said state police caused no additional troopers and increased the use of radar during the first weekend of the ticketing effort.

Gov. William A. O'Neill initiated the crackdown, announcing that he expected state troopers to get tough on speeding and recklessly driven cars and trucks.

Gatta vows swift action

HARTFORD — City Manager Alvin Gatta pledged to act quickly and independently on city problems during a meeting with the city's largest neighborhood group.

Gatta, who has been in office less than a month, drew applause Sunday from about 100 members of the Hartford Areas Rally Together (HART) as he addressed the ninth annual Congress at South Catholic High School.

Gatta pledged to have 20 apparently substandard buildings inspected in one month, visit a dangerous intersection on 2nd and Summit streets and study the problem of eradicating rats in the city.

Gatta also promised he would not leave important issues "on the corporation counsel's doorstep," referring to HART criticism that previous managers used legal opinions to evade action.

Questions about speed crackdown

Gov. O'Neill's action against highway speeders is welcome and laudable, but we have some questions about it. Will this be a sustained effort for safer highways and the apprehension of speeders? The crackdown will be of little service to the people of Connecticut if it is merely a temporary reaction to highly publicized accidents.

The governor ordered increased vigilance against speeders last Tuesday, and his lieutenants carried out his orders with swift dispatch. The state police reassigned troopers to the traffic enforcement unit to go along with the airplanes and the computerized detection systems they plan to use to apprehend law-breaking motorists. The public safety commissioner has also authorized more overtime to increase the number of patrol hours.

No one can argue with these efforts. But there are other questions. How much overtime will be allowed? Eventually overtime becomes expensive. Would it be more practical to hire additional troopers? In the past, the state police department has said it has too few troopers covering too large an area. Will the proposed transfer of personnel create manpower shortages for dealing with other law enforcement matters? The state police reassigned troopers to the traffic enforcement unit to go along with the airplanes and the computerized detection systems they plan to use to apprehend law-breaking motorists. The public safety commissioner has also authorized more overtime to increase the number of patrol hours.

About the letters

As Election Day draws near, readers will notice an increase in the number, and sometimes the length, of letters appearing in the Open Forum on this page.

In some past campaigns, the Herald has placed restrictions on letters to the editor, but most of those restrictions no longer exist. We believe it is important to present the views of our readers without placing limits on frequency, length or subject.

However, to assure fairness, there are still a few guidelines: Letters should be original. We would prefer that they be brief. The Herald reserves the right to edit letters for brevity, clarity and taste. We don't insist on it, but we encourage letter-writers to use a typewriter. This helps avoid errors which could result from different styles of handwriting.

We have informed candidates that we will not publish Open Forum letters written by them in the last month preceding Election Day. Instead, statements by candidates are reported on the news pages.

Finally, there is a deadline for letters dealing with election issues. To make sure we can publish all of them before Election Day, letters will not be accepted after noon on Friday, Nov. 2. To assure fairness, we will not publish letters which raise new issues at the last minute, unless they are of exceptional merit.

A lot of hot air

What has to rank high on the list of the most unprovable statements of the year is the following by Anne Avery, safety director of the Consumer Federation of America. "Indoor air pollution," she said, "costs the nation up to $100 billion annually in medical expenses and lost productivity, and it accounts for up to half of all illness in the United States each year."

That was said in behalf of a Federation pitch to pressure the government into boosting its budget to fight this unpublicized scourge. The one thing that's surely true about her claim is that it's impossible to prove — or disprove.

Where, for instance, does one find the data to either support or refute a contention that "indoor air pollution" sends at least 50 percent of all our ailing citizens to a sickbed annually? Where are the numbers to be found which back up that supposed

Debate needed in 13th district

Jack Thompson has asked his opponent for state representative to participate in a debate, but he has been turned down again as he was in the last election.

In order for a state representative to participate fully in the legislative process, he must be able to speak for good legislation and against legislation that would be harmful for his constituents. A debate would show the qualifications of both candidates in this area.

The experience in leadership that Jack Thompson gained as mayor and deputy mayor of Manchester plus his ability to express himself convincingly are the qualifications needed to exercise the full power of the office of state representative.

Jack Thompson will not go to the Capitol just to observe and vote. He will be a prominent and influential member of the House of Representatives. He will introduce legislation and convince the Assembly to vote for it. The result for the citizens of Assembly District 13 will be complete and effective representation, that will obtain for their full share of state benefits.

CIA chief ignored the record

WASHINGTON — CIA Director William Casey has been caught in the uncomfortable embrace of Basil Tsakos, a Greek arms promoter whose international dealings have attracted the interest of intelligence services around the world.

I've seen a thick report on Tsakos from the files Greek intelligence alleging that he had a criminal record in Greece and was suspected of dubious international arms deals.

Sources say Greek intelligence cooperates closely with the CIA, and at least some of the information is in CIA files.

At the snap of a finger, Casey could have obtained a report on Tsakos. Either he failed to check his own files or ignored what they contained. Casey also ignored warnings about Tsakos' criminal record. This says a lot about the competence and coherence of the nation's spy master.

Tsakos came to Casey during the early days of the Reagan administration with a multi-billion-dollar scheme to build a trans-Africa pipeline. Casey has denied endorsing the project, though a CIA spokesman said the agency was interested in the idea because of its potentially strategic importance.

The pipeline would carry Saudi Arabian oil across Africa, bypassing the unstable Persian Gulf and transiting three central African states — a route of questionable stability.

Whether the plan was endorsed or not, the meetings with Casey gave Tsakos and his American partner — an old Case sidekick named Joe Rosenbaum — an important name to drop as they sought support for the pipeline at the Pentagon and State Department.

Casey also put Rosenbaum in touch with some former intelligence agents who might have been interested in the project.

Here, meanwhile, is what my associate Cory Johnson found out about Tsakos from Greek intelligence reports and other sources:

- In the mid-1960s, Tsakos represented the British government in its effort to sell nuclear power plants to Greece. Sources described Tsakos as a "big man" who was paid thousands of dollars to influence Greek officials to buy the British reactors. Though Tsakos was apparently influencing the "right people, the deal fell through abruptly when a military junta seized power in Athens in 1967.
- Tsakos is suspected of being more than just a nuclear-plant middleman. London-based Greek intelligence, the KYP, suggests that he was a part-time British spy. "Tsakos is very closely associated with an agent of the British Intelligence Service," a KYP report states, adding: "Our reports indicate he is a collaborator of the British services."
- The Greek files show that Tsakos represented several British firms, but he moved his military-sales operation to Switzerland shortly after the Greek government began investigating him for possible national crimes.
- Tsakos was suspected of running an antique-smuggling operation based in France. The antiques were smuggled from border posts and even from the Athens airport with the aid of a Greek Civil Aviation Service employee. The network was also suspected of smuggling illegal immigrants from Italy and Bulgaria to the United States.
- The Greek files showed that Tsakos when he tried to sell tank parts to Greece in 1973. More recently, the Greek defense ministry launched a major investigation of a Tsakos-related tank deal, which I wrote about.
- Greek government reports confirm Tsakos' earlier criminal record and describe him as someone who "would do anything for money."
- The Greek files state that Tsakos was denied a passport in 1949 because he had been an army deserter. He later obtained a special diplomatic passport.

British children expect holocaust

LONDON (UPI) — British schoolchildren feel anxious about the possibility of nuclear war and many feel governments are doing little to remove the threat, a study published by the Sunday Times showed.

Out of 561 schoolchildren polled, 91 percent said they did not think they would survive a nuclear holocaust. 39 percent thought a nuclear war was likely to happen in their lifetime and 21 percent thought it could happen at any moment.

Just under half of those questioned — 45 percent — said thoughts of nuclear war affected how they felt about career and marriage plans.

The children questioned were all between the ages of 11 and 15 and living in the southwestern British city of Bristol. The poll was carried out by the Avon Peace Education Project, an independent organization.

A whopping 80 percent said they did not think governments were doing enough to remove the threat

The diplomats said Sunday rumors that President Konstantin Chernenko would step down at the session expected Tuesday appeared unfounded, adding they believed the body merely would make minor personnel changes in the ruling 12-member Politburo.

There were also reports that Politburo member Mikhail Gorbachev, believed by some to be the most likely successor to Chernenko, may relinquish responsibility for agriculture to devote himself to ideological and party affairs.

The central committee, which governs the Communist Party, is made up of some 315 members. It generally meets twice a year before Supreme Soviet sessions, but the rubber-stamp Parliament is not due to sit until late November or December.

The meetings are never announced in advance, but two top Soviet officials earlier this month confirmed there would be an extra session devoted to agricultural matters and possibly minor personnel changes.

A Western diplomat said the officials, central committee spokesman Vadim Zagladin and Pravda chief editor Viktor Afanasyev, may have been instructed to air the information about the session to quell rumors it was being held to remove Chernenko.

There is a lesson in the bidding of today's hand. South had 6-4 distribution, suit diamonds. A-K-J-10 in his secondary club suit. Anyone holding a hand with a king and a queen in the bidding two clubs on the second round and then returning to the first bid holding. With one king less in his high card values, South would have first introduced two diamonds, and then later introduced three clubs. Armed with only 6-4 shape but also a good hand, North showed club support. South asked for aces and bid the small slant in clubs.

Area Towns In Brief

Group to fight evictions

COVENTRY — A spokesman for a new group protesting the eviction of tenants from seasonal homes around Coventry Lake will confront the Town Council tonight, says a group leader.

Howard Haberern, a landlord who rents out a seasonal home year-round, said the group will "ask questions about what we consider are inconsistencies" in the town's eviction policy.

Haberern said he knows of town records which classify some homes affected by the ordered evictions as year-round dwellings. He said he suspects the town may have designs on the property in question, and blamed the town for "trying to play a game" over sewer installation.

Despite the town's refusal to release the names of those who have received eviction notices, Haberern said he has reached about 20 affected tenants. "We're at a disadvantage right now," he said. "This hit us all of a sudden."

Haberern said that sometime soon, the tenants' group will meet at its 9 David Drive home.

BOLTON — Birch Mountain Road resident Mark Alban has been appointed the first member of a new insurance review board that the Board of Selectmen created to write town insurance specifications.

State nurse makes slow recovery

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Claudia Zabaski, a New Haven nurse who survived a risky heart-lung transplant, struggled back today from a dangerous downturn in her condition, a hospital spokesman said.

Officials said doctors were forced to give Zabaski oxygenated blood when her condition deteriorated this week in the first days following her seven-hour transplant operation at Presbyterian Hospital.

"She had some difficulties over the weekend, it has caused some concern," said hospital spokesman Tom Chakurda. "She did receive oxygenated blood — that would indicate there were some difficulties."

He said she was still in the surgical intensive care unit. "I understand there is improvement today, but she's in very critical condition right now."

The 38-year-old woman waited more than a year for the transplant, the only cure for her primary pulmonary hypertension, a condition which prevented oxygen from reaching the cells of her body.

Dr. A. Purushotham, the woman's New Haven cardiologist who was with her throughout the operation, said Zabaski had needed a donor who matched her B-positive blood type, tissue type and

Bolton Day Festival at park had something for everyone

By Sarah E. Hall
 Herald Reporter

BOLTON — Good smells drifted even farther than the long line of parked cars at the second annual Bolton Day Festival in Indian Notch Park Saturday, where up to 1,000 people took in crafts booths, played games, and enjoyed barbecued chicken.

Many townspeople turned out for the free festival, which some said was the town's biggest social event of the year.

"There's not much happening in Bolton, so when they have something like this, it's like — 'Why miss it?'" said Leslie Chambers of Sunset Lane, who was there with her two children.

A crew of aproned men from the Bolton Lions Club tended the grill. By day's end, they had roasted hundreds of chickens to black-skinned, tender perfection.

"Though rain threatened early in the day, skies cleared by noon. "It's a glorious day," said Dick Marshall, who was decked out in a woman's wig and hat to hawk cider for the Columbia Lions Club.

Marshall's appearance was by popular request. The president of the Bolton Lions Club spotted him in Columbia's Fourth of July parade — where he was part of a "drop recovery team" cleaning up after horses — and asked him to make a repeat performance.

Karen Corte prepares to release a flying bird toy Saturday's Bolton Day Festival, with food games, demonstrations and more drew nearly 1,000 people.

The food and warm sunshine drew more than just people. Bees were out in such force that the announcer advised victims to go to the Bolton Volunteer Fire Department for treatment.

The Democratic Town Committee was doing brisk sales in balloons and pumpkins. Mark Johnson, the GOP in Bolton, offered the crowd his rivals drew.

"They've got a lot of people looking. But they don't have anybody buying," Johnson said. "My own party was selling apples, cauliflower and squash."

Quite a few fairgoers played volleyball, bocci, and horse-shoe tournaments. By day's end, the event had netted about $1,500 for its sponsors, the Lions Club.

The money will go toward building an addition on the Lions Club pavilion, according to festival Chairman Buck Vatteroni.

"I would have liked to have seen even more people there, because there was plenty of room and plenty of things for them to do and see and buy," Vatteroni said today. "I hope the festival gets bigger every year."

Region's firemen hope for rain

A chance of showers was forecast across New England today, the first hope of relief to weary firefighters in four states where brushfires burned across hundreds of acres of woodland, fed by dry autumn leaves, bushes and roots.

Helicopters were used in Connecticut Sunday to battle a stubborn mountain top blaze, dozens of firefighters and volunteers fought smoldering fires in Rhode Island and Massachusetts, and wilderness burned in New Hampshire.

"I'm going to have an Indiano rain dance," said Thomas M. O'Brien Jr., Connecticut's acting state fire control officer, who said off it goes."

About 20 new fires were reported in western Connecticut Sunday and several were set, he said. Firefighters remained at the scene of several other blazes that had burned for several days around the state and destroyed up to 1,700 acres.

A Connecticut Air National Guard helicopter was used to repeatedly dump thousands of gallons of water on a stubborn fire atop Fogged Mountain in Southington.

The fire first reported Monday charred more than 300 acres of brushland contributed to the death of a volunteer firefighter Wednesday. Roger Sullivan, 60, of Southington, a 40-year fire veteran, collapsed on the mountain and was pronounced dead at a Southington hospital.

Eagles neutralize Giant guns in turnaround

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The last time the Philadelphia Eagles saw the New York Giants, Phil Simms and Lawrence Taylor were unleashing bombs on both sides of the line of scrimmage...

In addition, backup receivers scored both four-quarter touchdowns. Kenny Jackson suffered a shoulder separation in the second quarter...

The Eagles, 4-4, got fine games from a lot of people. The Philadelphia defense sacked Simms five times and held him to a more respectable 248 yards passing on 16-of-33 — and no touchdowns...

They played the same style as last time but they were a little more effective this time, Simms said. They probably wanted more than we did. We played tough but we were tougher...

There wasn't much difference out there," Brown said. "It was a knockdown, drag-out fight. We were determined to come out on top. We played our butts off against them the last time. This time we knew we'd shut them down."

Marathon mark set by Jones

CHICAGO (UPI) — Despite his record-setting victory in the America's Marathon, Steve Jones says he's looking forward to returning to the security and safety of just being a corporal in the Royal Air Force...

He said he only would take time out to run in shorter races, such as 5,000 and 10,000 meter events but will return to Chicago next October to defend his title.

It stepped in a pothole in last year's America's Marathon at the 17-mile mark in my first marathon ever," Jones said.

In training for the 30,000 Olympic event last August, I made up my mind I would get my training to come to Chicago because I knew the best runners in the world would be competing."

With a record 10,114 entrants running, Jones and Mota each won $35,000. But under amateur regulations, the money automatically goes to trust funds and the runners can dip into the cash only to cover training expenses.

Iowa defense a big thorn

Iowa's defense has become a thorn to its Big Ten rivals. It things continue at this pace, the Hawkeyes will bloom in the Rose Bowl, Michigan became the third straight Big Ten team denied a touchdown by Iowa's defense...

Iowa's defense held Michigan to 107 yards and intercepted three passes. Two by Devon Mitchell, Ronnie Harmon, Owen Gill and Long all scored on short runs for touchdowns.

Ohio State got another 100 runs from Keith Byars, the nation's leading rusher. But he had to hold off a strong second-half surge by Michigan State, 23 in the league, to stay tied for the top.

Rutgers' Carlos Lopes of Portugal, this year's Olympic gold medalist, finished at 2:09:06, just three seconds ahead of Australia's Rob deCastella.

Lopes, who was running slightly behind Jones until the 17-mile mark, said at that point "my legs started to tire and I realized that I could never pass Jones and do a good job."

DeCastella said that "even though Jones had never run in a marathon until last year, his superlative training and desire put him in a class by himself."

The women's winner said she tried a new strategy Sunday. "I got myself into a bind in the Olympics marathon in Los Angeles because I was only worrying about where I would finish instead of trying to make a run in a very fast time," Mota said.

USFL unsettled for '85 season

AMELIA ISLAND, Fla. (UPI) — The U.S. Football League ended its owners meeting a day early, with the league still unsettled on the number and location of teams that will play in 1985.

The meeting was scheduled to last through Sunday, but ended abruptly Saturday amid fanfare — but no confirmation — of reports of four possible mergers in the 18-team league.

At a news conference immediately after the meetings, USFL Commissioner Jim Simmons denied the speculation that he would announce a merger with the American Football League.

Simmons, after introducing Tampa Bay Bandits owner John Bassett for a rambling USFL pep talk, avoided questions of team mergers by promising a definitive news conference Nov. 7 in New York.

Bassett said the league was delaying release of the merger agreements to give owners time to notify their staffs and players of the potential changes. But Simmons added that some "paper work" still must be completed before the deals are finalized.

Details of possible mergers that slipped out of the owners meeting included: A merger of the Pittsburgh Steelers with the Oakland Raiders in Oakland, Calif.

A merger of the Pittsburgh Steelers with the 1984 league champion Philadelphia Stars in Baltimore. If the league could get permission from the University of Maryland, the new team would play at College Park in 1985, moving to Baltimore Memorial stadium in 1986.

A merger of the Oklahoma Outlaws with the Arizona Wranglers in Phoenix, Ariz.

A merger of the Michigan Panthers and the Tampa Bay Bandits in Tampa, Fla.

A merger of the New York Jets and the New York Giants in New York City.

A merger of the Los Angeles Raiders and the Los Angeles Rams in Los Angeles.

A merger of the San Francisco 49ers and the San Francisco Giants in San Francisco.

A merger of the Dallas Cowboys and the Dallas Stars in Dallas.

A merger of the Houston Oilers and the Houston Oilers in Houston.

A merger of the Cincinnati Bengals and the Cincinnati Bengals in Cincinnati.

A merger of the Cleveland Browns and the Cleveland Browns in Cleveland.

More women work in Japan

TOKYO (UPI) — Two out of every three Japanese women over the age of 15 work in either part-time or full-time jobs and women now account for 35.3 percent of the nation's workforce, according to a government survey.

The white paper on women workers showed there were 14.8 million women workers in Japan in 1983, a rise of 680,000 or 4.8 percent over the previous year.

Of those, 11.74 million held full-time jobs while 3.06 million worked part time, the survey reported.

Publicly housed women represented only 31.3 percent of women over the age of 15, a decline of 0.7 percent over the 1982 figure.

The decline reflected the increasing number of housewives aged 35 to 44 who sought full or part-time jobs to augment family income, the survey's authors concluded.

Stephen Nikodemski, owner of the Manchester Burger King on Center Street, presents Hallowe'en gift certificates to Michael Murphy and Ricky Brainerd, state Easter Seal ambassadors, as his wife looks on.

Easter Seals to benefit

The Easter Seal Society of Connecticut will benefit every time customers purchase Hallowe'en gift certificates at area Burger King restaurants. For a $1 contribution to Easter Seals, customers will receive 10 gift certificates to tuck into children's Trick or Treat sacks. Proceeds go to the programs which help children and adults with disabilities.

Here's the beef

The Hillstown Grange, 617 Hills Street in East Hartford, has recommended Accutane to treat cystic acne. It's been faking Minocin now and have been for several years.

It doesn't seem to be helping very much. The acne is severe on my back and I still get cystic pimples on my face. That's why I'm considering Accutane.

The doctor says I could take Accutane for four months and probably never have to take anything again, which sounds terrific. I'm 28 and the doctor says that without Accutane I'll probably have cystic acne until I'm 40. I've had this problem since I was 13 and I'm fed up with the embarrassment, cost, pain and scarring.

What are the side effects of Accutane? I hear there are a lot. Will these effects go away when the medicine is discontinued? Will Accutane affect future children even after the medication is discontinued?

DEAR READER — Accutane is the treatment of cystic acne or those cases that cannot be managed by more conventional means. Certainly, not everyone needs Accutane, but some — and you sound like one — can benefit from it.

Yes, Accutane does have side effects. The most common problem is excessive dryness, which can affect the eyes, mouth, nose and most membranes.

Accutane may cause birth defects. That is why it is not recommended for women who may become pregnant or who are pregnant. Women should avoid pregnancy until 12 months after Accutane has been discontinued.

I have discussed the conventional treatment and the use of Accutane in treating acne in a new issue of The Health Letter, Special Report 29, Controlling Acne, which is am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me very useful medicine in the treatment of cystic acne or those cases that cannot be managed by more conventional means. One-man relief center ships goods to needy in Poland

By Loni Jordan
United Press International
PULASKI, Wis. — Brother Andrew Giba remembers the first time he was like to be a small boy with nothing in the days after World War II.

For the last dozen years, he's been trying to spare others that sadness by shipping to Poland thousands of packages containing desperately needed clothing, shoes and other items.

"Something is in me, I feel I have to do it," Brother Andrew said from his makeshift one-room relief center brimming over with donated clothing, boxes ready for shipment to Poland and hundreds of dog-eared letters asking for help.

"I understand it's a drop in the ocean, but even this drop is needed. By profession, Brother Andrew is a bookkeeper for the Franciscan Publishers. The religious order operates a sophisticated printshop inside the placid monastery in Pulaski.

Back in Poland, the word of help available from strangers in the United States burgeoned into hundreds of requests each year for any kind of assistance.

"Each box is custom-packed, based on a family's needs, with sweaters, shoes and other used, but serviceable items. Occasionally, a toy for the children or some reading material may be included. Brother Andrew said he tries to target the shipments for rural routes who may have more than the usual difficulty purchasing goods.

"Then comes the hard part — finding the money to send the 30 pound packages on their two-month journey to Poland and the scrutiny of its customs inspectors. U.S. Postal Service rates are far too high, so Brother Andrew has worked for many years through a Milwaukee firm operated by a Polish family. For 50 cents per pound — compared with a regular mailing rate of well over $1 — the relief packages are shipped to Baltimore and then on to Poland.

Brother Andrew said he has more than 100 busy collecting goods and money to keep records on the total cost. Somehow, he said, he has always managed, although he worries about a possible 50 percent increase in current shipping charges. Some packages are paid for by area residents who send them to specific families in Poland. The cost of most are paid through a combination of donations, Brother Andrew's collection and sale of

Bank announces earnings
 MANCHESTER, N.H. — BankEast Corp. reported net income of $3.9 million for the first three quarters of 1984, up slightly from the first nine months of last year.
 BankEast Chairman W. DeWitt said the acquisition of Kingswood Trust and Savings will increase annual earnings to more than $30 million.

Olin says income up
 STAMFORD — Olin Corp. has reported a third-quarter net income of more than $16 million, an increase of 26 percent from the same period last year, and a slight increase in net sales.
 In its quarterly report, the company said its net income was $16.5 million, or 72 cents per share, compared with $12.9 million, or 54 cents per share, for the third quarter of 1983.
 "Olin's brass operations were the major contributor to the profit increase as the metals facilities continued to operate at high levels," said John Henske, the company's chief executive officer.

He said net sales for the quarter were more than $475 million, an increase of about 2 percent from the $466.2 million reported for the same period last year.
 Net income for the first nine months this year was $76.5 million, or $1.27 per share, a 29 percent increase from $59.5 million, or $0.92 per share, for the first three quarters in 1983.

 Sales were $749.5 million for the period this year and $682.7 million for the first nine months of last year.

Chesebrough income dips
 GREENWICH — Chesebrough-Pond showed record sales of more than $514 million but an 8.4 percent dip in net income in its latest quarterly report.
 The company announced its third-quarter sales worldwide climbed 17 percent to $514.5 million this year from $466.32 million last year. Net income for the third quarter of 1984 was $40.97 million, or $1.18 per share, compared with $44.72 million, or $1.25 per share, in 1983.
 The decline was due to higher manufacturing costs as a percent of sales, higher interest payments and lower income from the company's minority interest of operations in India.

Nortek makes acquisition
 CRANSTON, R.I. — Nortek Inc. has announced the acquisition of Diamond Architectural Inc. of New Rochelle, N.Y.
 Diamond Architectural, which had sales of about $9 million in its last fiscal year, designs, fabricates and installs glass and aluminum curtain walls in metropolitan New York.
 Nortek said the acquisition would complement its existing curtain wall operations at its Miami-based Glassalum Engineering Corp. and The Major Glass Co. of Woburn, Mass.

Rhody landmark sold
 EAST GREENWICH, R.I. — Jolly Jon's Spring, a Post Road landmark that includes a fast food restaurant, has been sold and may be turned into retail and office units for a business development near Goddard State Park.
 James Peskin, of Warwick, and William E. Stone, of East Greenwich, purchased the land extending from Post and Forge Roads to beyond the Maschachowage River along with two buildings that make up Jolly Jon's hamburger restaurant.
 Peskin and Stone plan to connect the two buildings to create a single unit which will be offered for sale or lease.
 If sold as 1,000-foot units, there will be a total of 17 retail store spaces on the ground level with a similar number of office units on the second floor, the owners said.
 Peskin said the retail units probably will be priced from $65,000 to $75,000 for the retail units while the professional offices "probably will cost a little bit less."

Medicare holds fee surprises

White Medicare is one of the most successful social programs we have ever undertaken, and while it has unquestionably improved the health and longevity of older Americans, my mail is increasingly loaded with bitter complaints about Medicare's payment of doctor bills.

Our elderly citizens, led to believe that Medicare will pay 80 percent of the doctor bill, are dismayed when they find that the Medicare-approved "reasonable charge" for treatment they have received is much lower than the doctor's actual charge — and that they have to pay the difference. On the whole, Medicare picks up about 75 percent of the cost of hospitalization for the elderly, but it has been covering only about 55 percent of their doctor bills.

A so far little-publicized provision of the 1984 Deficit Reduction Act may at last reach the problem, but in a roundabout way. In a move designed primarily to cut Medicare expenditures for the government, Congress slipped a 15-month freeze on the fees of doctors treating Medicare patients. Until Oct. 1, 1985, the Medicare schedules of "reasonable charges" will remain at the level they were in June 1984.

There was concern that physicians might shift the burden of the freeze to Medicare beneficiaries. So, borrowing a concept from the Blue Shield Plans, Congress included in the new law a provision encouraging physicians to become "participating physicians" — to accept Medicare's schedule of reasonable charges, full payment for all of their Medicare patients all of the time.

As a financial incentive, Medicare promises to recognize greater increases in the fees of participating physicians after the end of the freeze.

Since it began, the Medicare program has provided a physician with the option of accepting assignment of a Medicare beneficiary's benefit rights (and billing Medicare) or of billing the patient and letting the patient collect from Medicare. With the acceptance of an assignment goes a commitment on the part of the physician to consider the Medicare reasonable charge as his or her full payment. On the other hand, a physician who bills a Medicare patient directly is free to charge more than the reasonable charge.

Only 20 percent of all physicians use the assignment method of billing for all of their Medicare patients all of the time, recent figures show. Close to one-third never take assignments. One-half take assignments in some cases and not in others.

By Oct. 1, physicians were to decide whether or not to become participating physicians and send back the agreements signifying their intent. The simplest way to find out if your doctor has chosen to become a participating physician is to ask him or her. But before long, those participating will have certificates or signs to display in their offices.

Your Money's Worth

In addition, all participating physicians will have their names listed in directories that will be available in December at Social Security offices, area Agency on Aging offices, senior citizen organizations and at the offices of the Medicare carriers. Notices being sent to the 30 million Medicare beneficiaries provide a toll-free telephone number for obtaining information on participating and non-participating physicians.

If you are a Medicare beneficiary and your doctor is not participating, you may want to shop around for a doctor who has signed up. But there is no need to panic!

You will still have Medicare coverage, and Medicare, as before, will pay 80 percent of the reasonable charges. Although a non-participating doctor may bill you for more than just the remaining 20 percent of the reasonable charge, he or she cannot bill for a higher amount than the charges for the same type of service in effect in June 1984. Non-participating physicians who raise their charges during the freeze period can be fined up to $2,000 and penalized in other ways.

Before the new law was enacted, the American Medical Association announced that 75 percent of physicians were voluntarily freezing their fees, perhaps to head off the legislation. At one point, Congress was considering making it mandatory for doctors to accept assignment on all Medicare claims.

Welcome rain promises end to the fires

By Ruth Youngblood
 United Press International

Fire officials breathed sighs of relief today as the skies opened up and doused stubborn blazes across New England, promising an end to a spate of fires raging through bone-dry woodlands for more than a week.

Nightlong rains ended a smoky fire in Rhode Island and most of those in Connecticut, and kept wet the charred lands in western Massachusetts and New Hampshire where fires had been contained Monday.

"The way it's raining now, it's like putting water buses all over the city," said Deputy Fire Chief John Dandanos of Waterbury, where 70 firefighters had fought more than 200 fires during the week.

Before the new law was enacted, the American Medical Association announced that 75 percent of physicians were voluntarily freezing their fees, perhaps to head off the legislation. At one point, Congress was considering making it mandatory for doctors to accept assignment on all Medicare claims.

Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., right, greets Manchester Democrat Raymond Damato as Dodd made a stop at Manchester Democratic Headquarters Monday afternoon. Dodd praised Damato for the support he has given many Democratic candidates.

Dodd faults performance of president in debate

Director of Planning Mark Pellegrini confirmed today that the duplexes Fiano plans to build are an approved use in that zone Fiano said he plans to approach the Planning and Zoning Commission on several aspects of the development.

Flattening the top of the hill — which was gouged by excavators some years ago — would make it look better, according to Fiano.

School board member Francis Maffe, who chairs the school building and sites committee, agreed: "The slope is an eyesore," he said.

"Our main concerns were about water run-off," Maffe said. But Fiano said he had assured the building committee when it met last week that the developed land would have enough catch-basins.

"We're certainly not going to increase any run-off onto the school property," Fiano said at the time.

School board member Bernice E. "Bunny" Cobb told the building committee last week that she feared the development of one lot overlooking the MHS tennis courts might interfere with gym classes conducted there.

"I feel we have to protect our privacy," she said.

Monday night, Fiano told the board it would be "no problem" for his partnership, Summit View Associates, to put up an evergreen buffer at the top of the hill. The area will be landscaped and seeded to prevent erosion, he said.

Fiano volunteered to install a gate in the fence that will run along the bank, so students could gain access to the road he plans to build down the other side of the hill. But the school board would have to pay for a walkway leading up to the gate, if that is what it wants, Fiano said.

Willard Dion, the head of the school building and grounds department, said students would opt for the shortcut no matter what the board decides.

"Once you put a street there, the kids will cut a pathway to it — and they'll cut right through that fence," he said. "I know they'll make their own way."

School Business Manager Raymond Demers said the new dead-end street would be "an easier and nicer place for students to walk" than Perret Place, which is parallel to it but further away from the high school.

But people who buy new homes may not want the new street, he said.

School board member Gloria Della Fera said, "The purpose of a cul-de-sac is for privacy," she said. "People build there because it's quiet. I've just never seen a cul-de-sac with an access through the middle of it."

Students have cut through the undeveloped property for years, board Chairman Leonard Seader pointed out. He said lowering the fence would "certainly be an improvement from what's there."

More than 1,700 acres in Connecticut were burned. "As long as the weather cooperates, we could be near the end of this rash of fires," said Thomas M. O'Brien, acting fire control officer for the state Department of Environmental Protection.

Officials said the rains almost completely doused the most stubborn state fire, atop the Ragged Mountain in Southington, where firefighters dragged equipment up steep slopes for eight days in a row.

City Fire Chief Arthur Toth called the rains "terrible." He said "we still have smoldering spots but that (the rain) was very helpful."

The blaze contributed to the death of volunteer fireman Roger Sullivan, 60, of Southington, who collapsed on the peak last week. Other injuries have been reported in the worst outbreak of brush fires in Connecticut in 25 years.

Open burning was banned in New Hampshire and in all of New Hampshire's state and national forests.

Officials said light rains in New Hampshire gave a helping hand to firefighters who Monday had finally contained a blaze that charred 130 acres of woodland on the slope of New Hampshire's Table Mountain.

Ed Merski, a spokesman for the U.S. Forest Service said the rains had not been heavy as hoped for. "Probably a foot of snow would really be a help right now," he said.

Crews working 12-hour shifts had used six high-pressure pumps to draw water from nearby streams onto the flames since May. Officials said a careless hiker may have started the blaze.

In Rhode Island, soaking rains late Monday extinguished a brush fire which had raged for more than three weeks, charring 50 acres of Woodlands in Johnston, in the northwestern part of the state.

Continuing to criticize the Reagan administration, Dodd said that earlier in the day he had spoken to a black student at West Haven High School. She was an "A" student who could not go to college although several colleges accepted her. Dodd said the student told him she could not get financial aid because her working family had too much money to qualify. The family does not have enough to afford her tuition.

"That was a graphic experience — to see what has happened in the past four years," Dodd said.

Dodd praised several people in the audience — Raymond Damato, state Rep. James McCavanagh, whom Dodd credited with recruiting a million-dollar grant for the sewer project, Stephen T. Casano, for his work in the conversion of the Main Building at Bennett Junior High School to housing for the elderly.

"When he arrived at Democratic headquarters, Dodd, escorted by Theodore Curmin, Democratic town chairman, greeted everyone in the audience.

He said that for four years the American people have seen the president as he is when aided by teleprompters.

Dodd spoke to about 40 Democrats gathered on the lawn of Manchester Democratic Headquarters at 200 Main St. Monday afternoon.

He said that when he watched the debates with Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale, one sensed the feeling that Reagan "really did not know what was going on."

Sparks fly over Earp's gun

By Sarah E. Hall
 Herald Reporter

WORTHINGTON, Mass. (UPI) — More than 100 years after Doc Holliday and the Earp brothers shot it out at the OK Corral, sparks are still flying over the infamous encounter.

But today's dispute involves words instead of bullets and centers on the authenticity of a gun a Worthington couple claims Wyatt Earp carried on that dusty afternoon Oct. 26, 1881.

Catherine and Timothy Rude-Sena of Worthington said they bought Earp's Colt .45 at a Brimfield flea market in 1981 for $1,400, and estimate the long-barreled handgun is now worth $200,000.

"We don't think, we know it's his gun," Catherine Rude-Sena, 30, said Monday.

"I believe this is one of the single most important firearms in the history of the American West," said Leonard Day of Easthampton, an antique gun dealer.

But some gun experts dispute whether the gun, which is inscribed with Earp's name, really is his.

"I know it's not the gun because I own the gun Wyatt used at the OK Corral," he said.

But Timothy Sena claims the Smith and Wesson gun Gilchriste owns isn't Earp's. "I've never seen mention of Wyatt carrying a Smith and Wesson," Sena said.

The Senas said they'd like to exhume the bodies of those killed during the shootout to examine the bullets.

"We would love to dig up the bodies of Clanton and the McLaurys to get the bullets, but of course, we can't," said Catherine Sena.

The Senas said they authenticated the inscription of the gun by having a handwriting expert, a Massachusetts State Police trooper, examine the gun and other work by engraver F.J. Durand, who worked in Dodge City during Earp's time.

"They believe the gun was presented by Earp at a party of Republicans Sept. 5, 1879," but Gilchriste disagrees.

"Wyatt probably had a drawer full of guns and that gun was probably in it. But when Wyatt walked out the door that day, it was my Smith and Wesson he took with him," he said.

Former exec blasts EB delays

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — A former Electric Boat executive said poor company management was responsible for construction problems, delays and cost increases on the Trident submarine program.

The Providence Journal-Bulletin said Sunday former EB assistant general manager James E. Ashton said he believes EB's poor management also caused skyrocketing cost overruns on the smaller, 683-class submarines.

"The only way that you could blame the problems on something else was to blame it on the design and, of course, there is a long history of blaming Navy-imposed design changes for that," the Journal-Bulletin quoted Ashton as saying.

EB has argued for years that delays on both submarine programs were caused by Navy-imposed design changes, getting the Navy to agree to costly delays in delivering the Trident and to a $24 million price increase in 1981.

But Ashton said he found Trident designs were excellent in comparison with those of the lighter planes built at Fort Worth, the paper said.

He concluded that Trident design changes should have been far less disruptive than those on the F-15s, the Journal-Bulletin said.

Alvin A. Spivak, a General Dynamics spokesman in Washington, said company officials in St. Louis knew of such reports and believed Navy-ordered design changes were behind Trident construction problems, the paper said.

Navy officials were unavailable for immediate comment.
