Welcome rain promises end to the fires

By Ruth Youngblood United Press International

Fire officials breathed sighs of relief today as the skies opened up and doused stubborn blazes across New England, promising an end to a spate of fires raging through bone-dry woodlands for more than a week.

Nightlong rains ended a smoky fire in Rhode Island and most of those in Connecticut, and kept wet the charred lands in western Massachusetts and New Hampshire where fires had been contained Monday.

The way it's raining now, it's like putting water hoses all over the city," said deputy Fire Chief John D'Amico of Waterbury, where 70 firefighters had fought more than 200 fires during the week.

"This will end our problems for a while," he said.

Connecticut officials in other areas agreed that the inch or more of overnight rain may have finally doused the last smoldering sparks which had lingered beneath the dry forest leaves.

An unusually dry autumn has turned the region's picturesque hills into a tinderbox, with the fires thriving on crisp leaves and dry roots. More than 1,700 acres in Connecticut were burned.

"As long as the weather cooperates, we could be near the end of this rash of fires," said Thomas M. O'Brien, acting fire control officer for the state Department of Environmental Protection.

Officials said the rains almost completely doused the most stubborn state fire, atop the Ragged Mountain in Southington, where firefighters dragged equipment up steep slopes for eight days in a row.

City Fire Chief Arthur Toth called the rains "terrific." He said "we still have smoldering spots but it (the rain) was very helpful."

The blaze contributed to the death of volunteer fireman Roger Sullivan, 46, of Southington, who collapsed on the peak last week. Other injuries have been reported in the worst outbreak of brush fires in Connecticut in 25 years.

Open burning was banned in Connecticut and in all of New Hampshire's state and national forests.

Officials said light rains in New Hampshire gave a helping hand to firefighters who Monday had finally contained a blaze that charred 130 acres of woodland on the slope of New Hampshire's Table Mountain.

Ed Merski, a spokesman for the U.S. Forest Service said the rains had not been heavy as hoped for, but had helped control the fire.

"Probably a foot of snow would really be a help right now," he said.

Crews working 12-hour shifts had used six high-pressure pumps to draw water from nearby streams onto the flames since the fire was discovered last Tuesday.

Officials said a careless hiker may have started the blaze.

In Rhode Island, soaking rains late Monday extinguished a brush fire which had raged for more than three weeks, charring 50 acres of woodlands in Johnston, in the northwestern part of the state.

Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., right, greets Manchester Democrat Raymond Damato as Dodd made a stop at Manchester Democratic Headquarters Monday afternoon. Dodd praised Damato for the support he has given many Democratic candidates.

Fiano plans housing near MHS

By Sarah E. Hall Herald Reporter

The Board of Education Monday granted developer Larry Fiano the right to top off part of a sandy ridge overlooking Manchester High School to build houses, after he satisfied concerns about erosion, drainage and privacy.

Fiano had asked for permission to flatten the steep portion of the bank, which is on the west boundary of high school property, in order to build seven two-family homes near the top of the hill, on property surrounding the Multi-Circuits Inc. building on Summit Street.

After the meeting, Fiano said he plans to buy the eight lots there within 10 days and begin construction within two weeks. Not leveling the bank would mean one of the lots earmarked for a new home could not be developed, he said.

"We feel that lowering the bank would not only be beneficial to us, but it would also be beneficial for the town," Fiano said.

Director of Planning Mark Pellegrini confirmed today that the duplexes Fiano plans to build are an approved use in that zone. Fiano said he plans to approach the Planning and Zoning Commission on several aspects of the development.

Flattening the top of the hill — which was gouged by excavators some years ago — would make it look better, according to Fiano.

School board member Francis Maffei, who chairs the school building and sites committee, agreed: "The slope is an eyesore," he said.

"Our main concern were about water run-off," Maffei said. But he said Fiano had assured the building committee when it met last week that the developed land would have enough catch-basins.

"We're certainly not going to increase any run-off onto the school property," Fiano said at the time.

School board member Bernice E. "Bunny" Cobb told the building committee last week that she feared the development of one lot overlooking the MHS tennis courts might interfere with gym classes conducted there.

"I feel we have to protect our privacy," she said.

Monday night, Fiano told the board it would be "no problem" for his partnership, Summit View Associates, to put up an evergreen buffer at the top of the hill. The area will be landscaped and seeded to prevent erosion, he said.

Fiano volunteered to install a gate in the fence that will run along the bank, so students could gain access to the road he plans to build down the other side of the hill.

But the school board would have to pay for a walkway leading up to the gate, if that is what it wants, Fiano said.

Wilfred Dion, the head of the school building and grounds department, said students would opt for the shortcut no matter what the board decides.

"Once you put a street there, the kids will cut a pathway to it — and they'll cut right through that fence," he said. "I know they'll make their own way."

School Business Manager Raymond Demers said the new dead-end street would be "an easier and nicer place for students to walk" than Perret Place, which is farther away from the high school.

But people who buy the new homes may not want students trooping past, school board member Gloria Della Fera said.

"The purpose of a cul-de-sac is for privacy," she said. "People build there because it's quiet. I've just never seen a cul-de-sac with an access through the middle of it."

Students have cut through the undeveloped property for years, board Chairman Leonard Seader pointed out. He said lowering the bank would "certainly (be) an improvement from what's there."

Dodd faults performance of president in debate

Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., said Monday that President Ronald Reagan as he appeared on two televised debates is "the president as he is."

He said that for four years the American people have seen the president as he is when aided by teleprompters.

Dodd spoke to about 40 Democrats gathered on the lawn of Manchester Democratic Headquarters at 200 Main St. Monday afternoon.

He said that when one watched the debates with Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale, one sensed the feeling that Reagan "really did not know what was going on."

Continuing to criticize the Reagan administration, Dodd said that earlier in the day he had spoken to a black student at West Haven High School. She was an "A" student who could not go to college although several colleges accepted her. Dodd said the student told him she could not get financial aid because her working family had too much money to qualify. The family does not have enough to afford her tuition.

"That was a graphic experience — to see what has happened in the past four years," Dodd said.

Dodd said national security involves not only military strength, but also educational opportunity. He said the present administration is making it harder for middle-income families to afford education.

"This administration is going to worry more about corporations than people," Dodd said.

Every generation has needed help, Dodd said. He said the nation should not shortchange the next generation.

Dodd said Connecticut has good government. "We don't have to apologize to anyone, least of all Ronald Reagan," Dodd said.

Dodd praised several people in the audience — Raymond Dumato, state Rep. James McCavanaugh, whom Dodd credited with recruiting him to run for office.

Trends may delay 4-year high school

By Sarah E. Hall Herald Reporter

School Superintendent James P. Kennedy said Monday that his "cracked crystal ball" foresees a delay in plans to move ninth graders to Manchester High School, as well as a sharp dip in junior high school enrollment next year and beyond.

Kennedy was making these and other predictions based on town-wide enrollment patterns over the past five years. He told the Board of Education that this year's "marked deviation" in that pattern is cause for caution.

By Oct. 1, 228 more students than administrators planned for had enrolled in Manchester classrooms. "At least two more years of data will be needed to tell whether this year was a single year deviating from past trends or whether new trends have been established," Kennedy told the board Monday.

But it looks like declining enrollments will still make a four-year high school possible by 1990 — though that is one year later than last year's projections indicated, the superintendent said.

The high school should increase in enrollment slightly for the next three years, and then begin a rapid decline, according to Kennedy.

His projections show that by 1990, the population in grades nine through 12 should drop from its current 2,236 to 1,691. It would hit a low point in 1993, then begin to climb again.

Even though more students showed up than expected in the town's two junior high schools than expected this year, Kennedy said that population will probably decline by more than 400 students over the next four. The school board has not yet decided whether to close Bennet Junior High School and house all seventh and eighth graders at Hilling, or keep both schools open by moving sixth graders there.

Some other predictions Kennedy made include:

• Enrollment in kindergarten through sixth grade should reach a low point next school year.

• There should be little change in the grade K-6 enrollment for at least the next four years.

• Junior high enrollment should dip by about 140 pupils next year alone. But only slight changes in junior high districts will be necessary over the next few years.

"Last year, Manchester births reached an all-time low," Kennedy said. He said that statement takes into account all babies born to Manchester residents at hospitals in the general area.

The number of children born to Manchester residents at Manchester Memorial Hospital has decreased as smaller communities surrounding this town have grown, Kennedy said.

But school board member H. John Malone, a pediatrician, said the low Manchester birth rate is deceiving.

According to Malone, many young parents cannot afford to buy houses in Manchester, and so they move to Bolton or elsewhere for a few years. When they have amassed enough money, they move back to Manchester — with two or three children in tow, he said.

Sparks fly over Earp's gun

WORTHINGTON, Mass. (UPI) — More than 100 years after Doc Holliday and the Earp brothers shot it out at the OK Corral, sparks are still flying over the infamous encounter.

But today's dispute involves words instead of bullets and centers on the authenticity of a gun a Worthington couple claims Wyatt Earp carried on that dusty afternoon Oct. 26, 1881.

Catherine and Timothy Rude-Sena of Worthington said they bought Earp's Colt .45 at a Brimfield flea market in 1981 for $1,400, and estimate the long-barreled handgun is now worth $200,000.

"We don't think, we know it's his gun," Catherine Rude-Sena, 30, said Monday.

"I believe this is one of the single most important firearms in the history of the American West," said Leonard Day of Easthampton, an antique gun dealer.

But some gun experts dispute whether the gun, which is inscribed with Earp's name, really belonged to the lanky deputy Arizona marshal.

"I doubt whether the inscription is 10 years old. In any case it was done well after Earp's death, so it couldn't be his gun," said R.L. Wilson, an antique gun historian.

John Gilchrist of Tucson, Ariz., a collector of Earp memorabilia, told The Sunday Republican in Springfield he was convinced the gun wasn't used by Earp during the shootout.

"I know it's not the gun because I own the gun Wyatt used at the OK Corral," he said.

But Timothy Sena claims the Smith and Wesson gun Gilchrist owns isn't Earp's. "I've never seen mention of Wyatt carrying a Smith and Wesson," Sena said.

The Senas said they'd like to exhume the bodies of those killed during the shootout to examine the bullets.

"We would love to dig up the bodies of Clanton and the McLaury's to get the bullets, but of course, we can't," said Catherine Sena.

The Senas said they authenticated the inscription of the gun by having a handwriting expert, a Massachusetts State Police trooper, examine the gun and other work by engraver F.J. Durand, who worked in Dodge City during Earp's time.

They believe the gun was presented by Earp at a party of Republicans Sept. 5, 1879.

But Gilchrist disagrees.

"Wyatt probably had a drawer full of guns and their gun was probably in it. But when Wyatt walked out the door that day, it was my Smith and Wesson he took with him," he said.

They suit him fine

A visitor who declared he would never return to Brattleboro, Vt., because of a $10 parking ticket has changed his mind after an outpouring of community support — worth at least $30.

Frank Burbank of Northfield, Mass., made the angry declaration in a recent letter to the editor of the Brattleboro Reformer. He said a parking ticket he received because his car's bumper extended 3 1/2 inches over the edge of a downtown parking space was unfair. He said another car had encroached into his space, and that his parking job did not prevent a third automobile from parking in front of him.

"I am sending $10 to the police department," he wrote in the angry missive. "Have fun with it, because it's the last you will get from Frank Burbank."

Town officials contributed $10 from their own pockets to offset the fine, said Assistant Town Manager Chris Hart, and a local restaurant sent Burbank a $10 gift certificate for his troubles.

The upshot was that Burbank expects to return to Brattleboro this week, he said.

A plea for peace

Actress Susan Anspach and actor Mike Farrell, members of the Committee of Concern for Central America, testify during a hearing held as part of a town meeting in Boston Monday. The event was part of National Town Meeting Tour on Central America. The hearing was held at the State House.

A haunting trumpet

Jazz trumpeter Miles Davis' haunting, muted trumpet version of the Cyndi Lauper chart-topper "Time After Time" drew such raves on the jazz festival circuit that Columbia Records is giving it special treatment. The Davis version of "Time After Time" will be released Nov. 1 as a 12-inch extended-play single. It will also be included on the next pressing of Miles' most recent album, "Decoy." November marks Davis' 40th anniversary in jazz.

"I like to play balls and once it sticks in my head, I have to play it. Once I hear it, I have to get it out of my system," Davis said. Putting his own touch on pop tunes is nothing new for Miles Davis, who hit the charts several decades ago with a reworking of "My Funny Valentine."

A Goodman tribute

Friends of Steve Goodman, who died of acute leukemia Sept. 20, will gather Nov. 3 at a concert arena in Orange County, Calif., to pay tribute to the folk artist. Jackson Browne, Jimmy Buffett, George Carlin, Emmylou Harris, Kris Kristofferson, Martin Mull, Willie Nelson and Randy Newman are some of the artists who are donating their performances. Goodman is best known for his railroad ballad, "City of New Orleans," which he wrote and Arlo Guthrie turned into a Top 10 hit.

A rich Christmas

Christmas is a long way off, but Dolly Parton and Kenny Rogers already have begun cashing in on the holiday. The two multimillionaire singers recorded their first album together, "Once Upon A Christmas," which should hit the stores next week.

"I'll sell at least a million copies," said David Wheeler, marketing director for RCA Records in Nashville. Wheeler was not sticking his neck out too far with the "million" prediction. "We've already shipped that many," he said. The album includes such traditional songs as "Silent Night," "The Christmas Song," and "White Christmas," as well as five new tunes written by Parton.

Now you know

Big Ben, known as a huge clock in London's Westminster Palace, is a name that actually refers to the bell in the tower, named for Sir Benjamin Hall, the commissioner of works when the bell was installed in 1858.

Atlas sells lucky ticket

A West Hartford man may become a lottery millionaire as a result of a ticket he bought at Atlas Station on West Middle Turnpike.

Donald Griffin is one of 20 finalists in the "Extra Million" grand-prize drawing to be held today in Trumbull. Each finalist will be home at least $5,000 richer, but the luckiest winner will receive $50,000 a year for the next 20 years ($1 million).

IOH pool advances

As a result of a unanimous vote at Monday night's school board meeting, the legal groundwork is in place for "Instructors of the Handicapped" to build a special pool at Manchester High School.

The IOH, a non-profit group made up of a Board of Directors and high school students who teach disabled people to swim, must still get approval for its actual construction plans.

But the contract governing use of the pool has now been established. Under its terms, the swimmers' group will pay for all construction costs, while the town will own the pool and pay for maintenance.

Police charge man was bookie

Police arrested a Simsbury man on bookmaking charges Monday and have a warrant for the arrest of a second man, capping a two-month investigation into illegal gambling in Manchester and other Hartford area towns conducted with the Hartford Police Department, police said today.

James A. Cromwell, 41, was charged with transmission of gambling information and released on a $500 bond for an appearance Monday in Manchester Superior Court.

Lt. John Glowacki of the Hartford Police Department said that Cromwell was part of an estimated $10 million yearly operation centered at an East Hartford residence used as a regional gambling headquarters.

The investigation in Manchester began after an informant told a Hartford detective that three men, including Cromwell, were involved in a bookmaking operation in the Main Street area, Manchester police said. The informant gave police a Manchester phone number that the informant said was routinely used to place horse racing and sports wagers, according to police.

The informant told police the men were relaying calls to other phone numbers to elude police detection, police said.

Police said today they obtained warrants to trace the number to another Manchester number, to which the calls were being transferred. Calls were being transferred from the second number to a third number traced to the East Hartford residence, police said.

Police obtained warrants to search the premises where each phone was listed, they said. They said they found nothing at either Manchester address but seized slips of paper with sports results and tally sheets from the East Hartford address.

Thompson says he'll work to resolve state's problems

By Kathy Garmus Herald Reporter

Former Democratic Mayor John W. Thompson describes his style as "laid back," but vows to assume an activist role if elected to represent the 13th Assembly District.

His Republican opponent, two-term state Rep. Elsie L. Swenson of Manchester, regards her role as "one great big social opportunity."

"I would try much more vigorously to find solutions," Thompson says. "I think I'd be more of an activist."

He says the issues foremost on his mind are expanding day-care opportunities for working mothers, curbing sexual abuse of children through more intense monitoring by school personnel, increasing funding for public education, improving state-municipal relations and making the property taxes more equitable.

When asked what is the biggest issue on the minds of voters in the 13th Assembly District, Thompson says, "We've hit that very hard in Manchester to support our schools and other services," Thompson says.

He says he would hold regular office hours, something he practiced when he was mayor, and would reach out to various groups for their opinions on legislation that comes before the General Assembly.

"There should be a very strong working relationship between the state and towns because we're creatures of the state," he says. "I've always felt it should be more of a partnership than it is."

Like his opponent, Thompson considers himself tuned into the needs of the handicapped. He has served on the Connecticut Society of Gerontology.

But while Swenson speaks of concern for the elderly, Thompson charges she has an "anti-consumer" voting record that has particularly hurt elderly residents. For instance, she voted against a bill that would have aided people wanting to switch from expensive electric heat to other types of heat, he says.

"She's an extreme Republican," Thompson says. He says he is more of a moderate.

He says the issues foremost on his mind are expanding day-care opportunities for working mothers, curbing sexual abuse of children through more intense monitoring by school personnel, increasing funding for public education, improving state-municipal relations and making the property taxes more equitable.

HE SAYS THE BIGGEST DIFFERENCE

between himself and his opponent is that he would work harder at solving problems. He says that elected, he would spend much of November and December working on legislation he would introduce in the General Assembly.

"When the people of Manchester send you to the General Assembly, they don't send you there to get on-the-job training — they want you to address these issues," he said.

Democratic Town Committee Chairman Theodore Cummings says he thinks Thompson is running stronger this election than he was two years ago. In 1982, Thompson lost to Swenson by 79 votes.

"He's got all the things that make the best public servant — sincerity, integrity, a willingness to take the heat," Cummings says.

Even Swenson hesitates to criticize Thompson, saying he probably would be better than she on labor and bonding issues.

"Everybody has their cup of tea," she said. "I think anyone who runs for office should not be criticized."

Zinsser says CCAG claims are false

By Kathy Garmus Herald Reporter

The leaflet was recently put on cars at the Manchester Parkade, Zinsser said.

Zinsser said Cassano should repudiate CCAG's endorsement because of the leaflet.

"CCAG is a professional organization that is very thorough in its research," Cassano said this morning. "CCAG, I don't think, would intentionally try to deceive."

Cassano said he would not reject the group's endorsement. He said if some of the claims in the leaflet are false, he would expect CCAG to correct them.

"They have a moral obligation to supply factual data," he said.

Michael K. Wilkinson of Bolton, co-chairman of the CCAG, could not be reached for comment this morning.

Among the claims in the CCAG leaflet are that

- Opposed a bill that would have prevented utility companies from charging consumers for electricity that would not be generated until 1986 or later.
- Opposed a bill that would have phased in the cost of the Millstone III nuclear plant in Waterford over three to five years.
- Opposed a study of the feasibility of public ownership of electric companies.
- Opposed a bill that would have required at least one of the commissioners on the state Department of Public Utility Control to look out for the interests of low- and middle-income people.
- Opposed regulating rates for nursing home patients.

Kennelly stumps in Manchester

By Kathy Garmus Herald Reporter

If the United States cannot provide a health care system for people over 65 years old, it should be ashamed of itself, U.S. Rep. Barbara Kennelly told a luncheon audience of about 80 at the Army and Navy Club Monday.

Kennelly spent the morning in Manchester on her campaign for re-election in the 1st Congressional District. She visited Dean Machine Products and the Senior Citizens' Center before the luncheon.

She said that working to keep the troubled Medicare program viable would be one of her top priorities in Congress. She said she would like to win another term.

Kennelly is opposed by Republican Herschel Klein of Windsor.

She said that once Medicare gets in the red, it will be almost impossible to save it.

She said welfare programs are not very popular now. If a "means test" is applied to Medicare, the program will be killed within ten years, Kennelly said.

Speaking on the presidential election race, Kennelly said that if issues were the only thing to consider, Mondale would be an easy winner. She said the Democratic Party is battling the popularity of President Reagan.

"I'm in the right place," she said of her Congressional post.

"I really wanted to make a difference," she added, referring to her decision to leave the post of secretary of the state in Connecticut to fill the term of the late William Carter.

During her visit to Dean Machine, many of the men and women sat hunched over their machines Monday morning.

But Kennelly made sure she shook hands with nearly every worker at the plant, where aircraft engine parts are made.

He said he opposed in committee another bill that would have prohibited utilities from charging for work in progress under all circumstances. That bill was eventually defeated, he said.

Zinsser said he voted for the phase-in bill. Zinsser said the DPUC bill was a bad bill because it did not say how an advocate for the poor would be added. He said the commissioners should already be looking out for the poor.

Zinsser said he has not contacted Cassano about the leaflet.

"Maybe what we need in the state of Connecticut is a campaign fairness act," he said.

NY hotel chain eyes Manchester

Manchester may be the location for one of five new hotels to be built in the next three years, according to a New York-based hotel investment company.

The town, along with nine other towns and cities, is being evaluated by Paul Underhill Associates as a possible site for a new Hampton Inn, the company president said Monday.

"We will look into Manchester because it is an area that we see as expanding out from Hartford," said Paul T. Underhill, president of the firm.

Besides Manchester, other cities to be studied for feasibility are Hartford, Danbury, Greenwich, Fairfield, Waterbury, Stamford, Branford and New Haven, according to the company.

Underhill said locations along I-95 will be considered first. His firm has not yet begun to evaluate Manchester specifically.

The first Hampton Inn in Connecticut will be built off Interstate 95 in Milford. Ground breaking on that project is scheduled for December, according to Underhill. He said the hotel is scheduled to open in fall 1985.

Hampton Inns were introduced recently by Holiday Inn as an alternative low-budget hotel. Plans call for hotels in the chain to keep operating costs down by forgoing extras such as banquets, meeting rooms and banquet facilities.

The chain plans to charge between $40 and $46 for first class accommodations, the company said.

All the hotels will be managed by Underhill's affiliate company, Underhill Management Corp., of New York, which is headed by Dieter E.F. Seelig, Underhill said.

Walnut Street called unsuitable Zoners turn down day-care center

A proposed day-care center on Walnut Street was rejected unanimously by the Zoning Board of Appeals Monday night because members said the neighborhood was not suited for such a facility.

In rejecting the application of Cynthia Davidson of Gretna, La., members of the board said the area around the two-story house at 111 Walnut St. was too densely populated to allow a day-care center. They also said the residential character of the neighborhood might have been changed by the center.

"The board has granted day-care applications in the past and will continue to do so when conditions in the neighborhood warrant it," said ZBA Chairman Edward Hachadorian.

"While we're sympathetic, we have to look at the property," said ZBA alternate Josh Howroyd. Davidson told the board a "painful shortage" of day care centers exists in Manchester.

IN OTHER BUSINESS Monday night, the ZBA:

- Granted Evelyn E. Brass permission to attach a one-car garage to her house at 29 Barry Road.
- Denied Xtra Mart permission to put a canopy over gasoline pumps at 410 Hartford Road.
- Tabled the application of the Bloomfield-based Gospel Assembly Church to convert the former Manchester Marine Club on Parker Street into a church and church-run school. The school would serve up to 25 children.
- And denied Manchester Movers Inc. permission to build a 60-by-80-foot warehouse and smaller storage buildings at 85 Colonial Road in the Manchester Industrial Park. ZBA members said they were denying the application because the company proved no hardship, as is required for a variance.

Candidates stress debate advantages

President Reagan and Walter Mondale sought to capture what momentum they could scrounge from their foreign policy debate and swept out of Kansas City to the campaign trail to trade charges over who is the stronger and more competent leader.

Reagan, Mondale and their running mates spread across the country Monday, each claiming the foreign policy showdown was a decisive victory for their cause that would ensure their party will take the White House in the election two weeks from today.

All four candidates tried to reiterate points well made and to take shots that might have been missed during the Monday and last presidential debate of 1984.

Reagan, as he did Sunday night and throughout the campaign, sought to portray Mondale as a Johnny-come-lately to the cause of a strong defense and a stop at a B-1 assembly plant in Palmdale, Calif., rectified a list of defense projects Mondale opposed.

"The truth is, if all his 'no votes' had prevailed, America would barely have any defense, any real means to protect the peace, any chance to preserve our way of life," Reagan said.

Mondale also debated heavily on the theme of his debate appearance, that Reagan does not have the know-how to guide the nation in an international crisis.

Last night, the American people saw with their own eyes what the problem is," Mondale told several

2nd search turns up nothing

PORTLAND, Maine — The Australian government is refusing to mount a search for missing American sailor Bill Dunlop until it compares a sample of his handwriting with an unsigned note that washed up on a Queensland beach last week. A friend said the State Department agreed to fly the letter to Canberra today.

A private search plane crew crossed the Great Barrier Reef off Australia's northeast coast Monday and again early Tuesday (Australian time), but found no trace of the 43-year-old Maine adventurer. Dunlop was last seen four months ago in the South Pacific while trying to circle the globe in a 9-foot sailboat.

Australian authorities have refused to launch any search for Dunlop since August when he was reported overdue on a 3,000-mile voyage from the Cook Islands, saying it was fruitless to comb such a vast area.

The unsigned note, written in a combination of script and printed letters, read: "Shipwrecked on an island. No food. Little water. Turn around out." It was dated 10-18-84.

Body of 3rd fireman found

DUNDALK, Md. — Authorities searching the charred ruins of a furniture store today found the body of a third firefighter killed in a five-alarm blaze.

Baltimore County Fire Lt. Kenneth Wadkill said the body of James Kimbel, 25, was found about 4 a.m. EDT under debris at Shiller's Furniture and Appliance Store in Dundalk, a Baltimore suburb.

The bodies of two other firefighters, Walter Bawroski, 38, and Henry Rayner Jr., 32, were found Monday evening in the rear of the store, Baltimore County Fire Battalion Chief Frank Wilson said.

Wilson said Rayner had been a firefighter for four years and Bawroski for 15 years. Kimbel was a two-year veteran.

Police hunt for riot chiefs

SEBOKENG, South Africa — Thousands of troops and riot police conducted a house-to-house search of the black township of Sebokeng today in a hunt for leaders of riots that have killed 80 people in the past two months.

Authorities arrested at least 348 people on charges ranging from living in the township without the proper permits to possession of illegal arms, stolen property or drugs.

More than 80 blacks and one white — a baby hit by a rock — have been killed in recent racial violence arising from black protests of denial of political rights, rent hikes and the poor quality of black schools.

OPEC reaches accord

GENEVA, Switzerland — Six OPEC oil ministers were to leave Geneva after agreeing in principle on a temporary production cutback to maintain prices at current levels, officials said today.

OPEC sources said the projected cutback would be 3 million barrels a day, with Saudi Arabia accounting for half of the total. The plan will be put to a full emergency conference Oct. 29 of all 13 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

The talks Monday were initiated by Saudi oil minister Sheik Ahmad Zaki Yamani. The oil ministers of Algeria, Libya, Kuwait, United Arab Emirates and Venezuela also attended.

Oil industry experts said the six countries were the OPEC members that are most capable of sustaining a temporary cut in production.

Shakir trial set to conclude today

Shakir had been brought into the Western Hospital emergency room by two men who refused to identify themselves.

Shakir is also charged with failing to make a court appearance in connection with the case last March 5. He and his wife, Florence, testified that they thought they were told he had to return to court on March 5.

Acting co-counsel, Shakir Friday questioned witnesses and raised objections to court procedure. After chastising Shakir many times for improper questions and objections, Judge Jackaway threatened to cite him for contempt.

"I've been very patient with you," Jackaway told Shakir. "I am very reluctant to start contempt proceedings, but we're not going to waste this court's time."

ZBA postpones action on Marine Club school

A proposal to open a church and church-run school in the former Manchester Marine Club at 717 Parker St. was tabled by the Zoning Board of Appeals Monday night because a contract for the sale of the property had not yet been signed.

Manchester attorney David Keith, who represented the Gospel Assembly Church of Bloomfield, told the board that he had hoped to have the contract signed before Monday's public hearing. Although two representatives of the former Marine Club were present, Keith said they did not have the authority to sign the contract without a vote of the club's membership.

They later told Keith otherwise. After all of the other public hearings were over, Keith appeared before the board with a signed contract. But the board voted to leave the matter tabled until Nov. 26 because most people in the Lincoln Center hearing room had already left.

ZBA Chairman Edward Hachadorian said if the board agreed to hear the Gospel Assembly

Marcos rounds up murder suspects

Marcos, after accepting the report, ordered the seven suspects confined to barracks and announced an "immediate trial," although the four other panel members said they would issue their own report Wednesday.

The report by Chairman Corazon Agrava traced the alleged assassination conspiracy as far as Brig. Gen. Luther Custodio, 50, who was assigned to protect Aquino on his arrival at Manila airport, where he was killed.

Splitting with the other four panelists, he took the position that the report should be identified as a member of the group.

"The chairman could not conform to that proposition," it said. "It was then agreed that the four members will prepare and submit their own report."

But he wrote, after five panelists agreed that Custodio had to be in the conspiracy.

"The criminal plot could not have been planned and implemented without his intervention," the report said.

The report said the panel unanimously rejected military claims that

Against the Army Cover-up allegations increase

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The father of a helicopter pilot killed in a raid immediately preceding last year's U.S.-led invasion of Grenada, says the Army tried to suppress information about his son's death.

Stanley Lucas said the Army did not tell him of the death of his son, Capt. Keith Lucas, until four days after it occurred and only listed it publicly when he pressured Army officials in Kentucky and Defense officials in Washington to do so.

"There has been a big whitewash," Lucas said in a telephone interview with United Press International.

The disclosure Monday followed reports by NBC News and Knight-Ridder newspapers a day earlier that there were up to 10 unreported deaths in raids conducted by Navy "Seal" commandos and a special "Delta Force" before the invasion officially began at 5:27 a.m. Oct. 25, 1983.

It could not be independently verified whether Lucas's son was involved in the same operation described in those reports.

But a congressional source familiar with classified information on the operation said, "The policy was to declare 'black' (not report) everything that could be declared black. There were losses that were not reported."

A Pentagon spokesman said he challenged anyone to produce the names of any U.S. armed forces member who died on Grenada and was not among the 19 listed. Lucas named names to the list on an immediate basis. "Smaller added," Lucas said his son was killed when the UH-60 "Blackhawk" helicopter in which he ferried special forces troops onto the island crash landed and was fired on by Cuban or Grenadian forces.

All members of the helicopter's crew were wounded and "there were casualties among the Rangers and the Delta Force people that my son was possibly one of," he said.

Major Steve Roy, a public relations officer at Ft. Campbell, Ky., said Monday that Lucas was shot down while transporting Army Rangers but that he knew nothing of any special forces operations.

When Capt. Lucas was reported missing Thursday, Oct. 27, his parents traveled to Ft. Campbell, from their Granite City, Ill., home and pressed officers of his son's 158th Aviation Battalion for an explanation.

From extensive accounts of the operation given by members of Lucas's unit, his father said, "It became apparent that the staff officers at Ft. Campbell were lying to us. They knew (Tuesday) morning (Oct. 25) he was dead."

Lucas said the Pentagon that Friday (Oct. 28) from Ft. Campbell and said he was told by an Army major his son's status was classified and there was a possibility those names (would) never appear on a list.

Capt. Lucas's father said his son was only named on Defense Department casualty lists after he repeatedly asked for the lists.

Lucas said he knew of no involvement by his son in special forces operations but added that his son had feared leaving the Army because he said "he would be blackballed, classified as a security risk."

Gen. John Vessey, the Joint Chiefs of Staff chairman, admitted that at least one secret operation on Grenada failed in a June letter to Rep. James Courter, R-N.J., a member of the House Armed Services Committee.

Re-elect Fuscas in 55th district

Voters in the 55th Assembly District will have to choose Nov. 6 between a Republican incumbent with considerable business experience and a Democratic newcomer who has a particular interest in land use and development.

The Manchester Herald recommends a vote for the incumbent, Rep. J. Peter Fuscas of Marlborough.

Fuscas, seeking his third term in what he calls a "swing district," is the better choice because of his experience, his seniority, and his ability to keep in touch with his constituents.

His broad experience includes 20 years in business, which has proven an asset in his active role in the Legislature's Appropriations Committee and Program Review and Investigations Committee. His seniority, in a district that has flip-flopped between political parties, is a major benefit: He serves on two important committees, and he is a stable voice for the 55th at the Capitol.

Most important, we believe, is Fuscas' ability to determine, and act responsibly on, the issues of concern in his district. He has succeeded in this effort in a number of ways.

Before each legislative session, Fuscas polls his constituents with a questionnaire sent to every household in the district. The more than 1,000 annual responses serve as his voting guide for the session. At the end of each session, Fuscas sends a report on what happened to all the households. It is an effective way to communicate with the voters.

It has become fashionable for General Assembly challengers to claim that the incumbents are not accessible, and Fuscas' opponent, Democrat Michael Zizka of Bolton, has made that claim. Unfortunately, Zizka is wrong. Fuscas has been visible in, and responsive to, all parts of the 55th district, including Manchester's third voting district.

Fuscas does his homework. Many legislators know what is happening, but Fuscas is one who knows how to put it together and come up with solutions. And he has proposed specific solutions, instead of merely indicating "interest," or "willingness to consider," the problems of education, taxes and spending, public safety, the environment, and human services.

Even the Democrats acknowledge Fuscas' efforts. Rep. Janet Polinsky, co-chairwoman of the Appropriations Committee, says Fuscas has been a very active member of the committee. "He's one of the legislators who are out to make government work."

The Herald's endorsement of Fuscas does not mean that his opponent is unqualified for elected office. Zizka has worked as a geologist and an attorney, and he has promised to make the Legislature his full-time job if he is elected. He has served on three town boards in Bolton and recently was appointed to fill a vacancy on the Bolton Board of Selectmen.

But the Herald believes 1984 is too soon for Zizka. He needs more experience in local politics and government before he can be considered seriously as a candidate for state representative. We encourage him in his political career, and expect to hear more from him in the future.

It is unfortunate that the Pentagon, a full year after Grenada, is so reluctant to embrace fully the long-held principle that the public is entitled to the best in wartime news coverage.

It took almost a year following the secret invasion of Grenada for the Defense Department to grudgingly concede that in the future a pool of correspondents would be permitted to accompany troops on any surprise military operations.

But what a strange pool Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger initially proposed. There would be two journalists, a still photographer, a magazine reporter and two wire service representatives. No newspaper reporters were included.

Resection from newspapers was swift and damning. Weinberger quickly relented and amended the pool to include a newspaper reporter. That makes sense. Television news does not pretend to coverage in depth. News magazines report weekly. Wire stories stress breaking news events. Major newspapers, with large staffs that include military correspondents, are in a position to provide immediate news in depth.

Restricting press access to military operations short changes the public, not the press. Reporters have long accompanied the military on secret invasions; many have died in the process.

The military must protect its attack plans from prying eyes and it can easily do so. But when any secret military operations are commenced, representatives of the American newspapers must be allowed to observe and report.

'Biz' deserves to be re-elected

To the Editor:

I am surprised and disappointed at the ads Jack Thompson's committee is running. I had always thought he was a gentleman but the ads make that assumption doubtful.

He suggests that "Biz" Swenson does not keep informed on issues, when all through her correspondence from the hit-and-run accident she had representatives attending every legislative meeting so she could keep informed. She attended meetings with a walker as soon as possible and had better attendance than many with no physical problems. There is no one more available to her constituents through personal contact. Ask anyone who has had a problem and contacted Biz. She has proven her ability to work hard. The ad says, "the bottom line is competence." Are they saying she is incompetent? The bottom line is results and results are the byproduct of competence.

I've always known Biz's main concern to be the people that she serves and not any political party or purpose. She has a record that she can be proud of and deserves to be re-elected.

Tom's second scheme would be good for about 5 to 7 years, and then would be obsolete. Tom has expressed his views on different occasions. It has been explained several times that his views are legitimate. We have gone through his thought process and decided that they would not be sufficient for the future. Tom is trying to look to the future through a rear-view mirror. He is not looking at the "big picture." We have offered to meet with Tom to explain our thinking and how we arrived at our present scheme. He has not agreed to meet with us. I think we have to look to the future — not the next couple of years, but 15 to 20 years down the road. The town garage, firehouse and renovations to the Community Hall are all looking 20 years Tom try to take our 20-year project and change it to a 2- to 7-year project at best?

In an exhibit which will be mailed to homes in Bolton, the library-media center is by far the most expensive of the four capital projects. This is due to state funding of 60 percent of the total cost of the project. The library-media center will affect taxes the least.

If the library-media center is voted down, it just doesn't go away. We are at a critical time in the education of our students. The special education students, the present library and the computers cannot be adequately handled within the physical confines of our school. There are four or five vocal people in town who are against the library-media center. It is a shame that these four or five people dominate the conversations and the media. It is time for the people who are for the project to stand up and be counted. We must not let the vocal minority sway the silent majority on school matters in Bolton. Let's move forward in progress. Let's not march backward into the future.

MCC's theater: Town is fortunate

To the Editor:

If you're lucky, may still be able to get a ticket this weekend (Oct. 26, 27, 28) to Manchester Community College Theater Wing's production of "Jacques Breil Is Alive and Well and Living in Paris."

My husband and I were fortunate enough to see it last Thursday evening, and the production is a unique form of musical entertainment. It would be difficult to single out anyone in this presentation as the cast, orchestra and production staff were all First Class performers.

How fortunate Manchester is to have this Theater Wing — more than 1000 seats for Manchester Community College!

Return Zinsser, says colleague

To the Editor:

Carl Zinsser and I have served together in the state Senate for four years. During this time, I've come to respect Carl not just as a competent, outspoken and effective legislator, but as a man dedicated to the people of his district and the betterment of Connecticut. Carl is a fighter for the people he represents and he always lets his constituents know where he stands.

Carl has worked hard on the Legislature's Energy Committee to control escalating utility rates which have placed a huge financial burden on consumers. Carl is committed to keeping energy bills down and better delivery of energy assistance to the poor.

But Carl is best known for his successful effort to establish the Children's Trust Fund — which provides money for state efforts to prevent child abuse. He has taken the initiative to tackle this issue which promises to be in the forefront of the 1985 legislative session.

I am proud to have Carl as a colleague. The citizens of Manchester, Glastonbury, Bolton, Hebron and Columbia have good reason to also feel proud of their representation in the state Senate. It is my hope the voters of the 4th Senatorial District exercise their right to vote Nov. 6 and return Carl Zinsser to the General Assembly.

Panel backs embassy relocation

WASHINGTON — Has the Ayatollah Khomeini given Ronald Reagan the evil eye? According to intelligence sources, the aged leader of Iran's Moslem fanatics believes he was responsible for Jimmy Carter's defeat four years ago. Now he wants to put the same spell on President Reagan.

His madness is not without its merits. Iran has trained, bankrolled and directed Shiite terrorists who are reportedly planning one or more bombing attacks on U.S. facilities in the Middle East, before Election Day.

U.S. intelligence received what one State Department insider described as a "specific" warning of a pre-election strike just a few days ago.

As a result, several embassies in the region have been placed on full alert. They include those in Kuwait, Oman, Bahrain, Jordan and, of course, Beirut.

THE FLOOD OF INTELLIGENCE TIPS has created a problem. There have been so many threats of violence against U.S. embassies in recent weeks that some analysts suspect a deliberate disinformation campaign. The aim would be to cry wolf so often that, when nothing happens, the American embassies would relax security and make a real attack easier.

"There is deliberate misinformation being given out to wear down our analysts," one source told my associate Lucette Lagnado.

The Shiite terrorists' long-range goal is nothing less than driving the United States out of the Middle East. Some administration critics charge that President Reagan has encouraged this dangerous dream by his failure to retaliate against the terrorists — or their sponsors who were responsible for the two embassy attacks and the Marine massacre in Beirut. The critics say the terrorists have interpreted this as a sign that they can operate against Americans with impunity.

Another predicts rate shock

HARTFORD — An official of the Environmental Action Foundation has predicted "rate shock" in the next two years for Connecticut utility customers.

Alan Noguee, a utility analyst with the foundation in Washington, said Monday a recent nationwide study by his organization showed utility ratepayers will pay $25 billion in rate increases in the first year alone when nuclear power plants now under construction begin operating.

Customers of Connecticut Light and Power will pay an extra $2.4 million over the life of the Millstone III nuclear plant, Noguee said.

Noguee said in the first year, the average residential customer would pay an extra $147, the average commercial user $702 and the average industrial customer, $28,000. The Seabrook nuclear power plant in New Hampshire will cost United Illuminating customers $1.2 million in higher rates over its lifetime, Noguee said.

Reagan to visit state on Friday

By Mark A. Dupuis
United Press International

HARTFORD — President Reagan has planned a second visit to Connecticut where campaign strategists believe a victory could help influence elections in other states where polls close later.

Reagan is scheduled to be in the state Friday for a brief speech from the steps of Fairfield Town Hall before leaving for another campaign stop in Hackensack, N.J., officials said Monday.

J. Brian Gaffney, state chairman of Reagan's re-election campaign, said he was "flattered and delighted that the president realizes how important Connecticut is."

Polls give Reagan a comfortable lead in Connecticut and his campaign has targeted the state for victory, partly because it traditionally reports results early on election night.

The visit will be Reagan's second campaign stop in the state this year. He recently received a warm reception at a campaign rally in Waterbury.

Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale has yet to visit the state in the general election campaign, although he made two brief stops prior to the state's Democratic primary in March.

Mondale was criticized by state Democratic leaders for spending little time in Connecticut prior to the March primary, which he lost to Colorado Sen. Gary Hart.

Democratic leaders said they have been assured Mondale will be in Connecticut which the Democratic contender has targeted to win.

However, House Speaker Irving J. Stoberg, D-New Haven, said Monday he could see Mondale skipping the state and concentrating on other states with more than the eight electoral votes Connecticut has to offer.

"Let's face it, that's the way a campaign has to be designed," Stoberg said.

He said he would be upset, however, if vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro, New York Gov. Mario Cuomo or Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., didn't campaign in place of Mondale. Ferraro has been in the state twice to date.

Abortion clinics fear violence

By Mark A. Dupuis
United Press International

HARTFORD — The Connecticut Coalition of Abortion Providers has appealed to the state for protection because of violence directed at abortion clinics in other states.

The coalition submitted 3,200 petition signatures to Gov. William O'Neill Monday denouncing the arson and bombing attacks and warning it could spread to Connecticut.

"While violent acts have not yet directed at any of the clinics in the state, we are very much concerned that such acts could and may occur because of the heightened controversy over the abortion question," said Judy Frey, president of Planned Parenthood of Connecticut.

"We don't want to just sit and wait until it does happen," said Laura Minor of the Summit Women's Center, who along with other coalition members delivered the petition signatures to O'Neill's office.

Rocks have been thrown through windows of Connecticut clinics and there have been anti-abortion demonstrations outside. There are nine independent abortion clinics in Connecticut and clinics are also operated by several hospitals, the coalition said.

Violence is "a direct assault on the right of choice by those clients who come to clinics to have their health care needs met," Frey said.

He said he would be upset, however, if vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro, New York Gov. Mario Cuomo or Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., didn't campaign in place of Mondale. Ferraro has been in the state twice to date.

Connecticut In Brief

State workers told not to speed

HARTFORD — Gov. William A. O'Neill has warned state employees not to exceed the speed limit and to use seatbelts while traveling on state business.

O'Neill issued a memorandum to state agency heads Monday telling them to pass on the instructions to employees. He said his office has received complaints about state workers exceeding the 55 mph speed limit and those complaints will be investigated.

"No exceptions will be made, with the obvious exceptions of public safety and emergency vehicles on call," O'Neill said.

Last week the governor ordered state police to crack down on speeding and other traffic violations in the wake of two accidents in one week on the Connecticut Turnpike in which five people were killed.

Wethersfield gal wins Lotto

NEWINGTON — A young female employee of Acta Life and Casualty Co. has become the company's second winner in two weeks of the top prize in Connecticut's Lotto game.

Cathy Grygowicz of Wethersfield, arrived at Lottery Headquarters to pick up a check for $99,567.38 after taxes, the first installment of her $2,469,176 winnings.

She purchased the ticket at the company store where last week's winner was sold to Debra Morocco, 27, also of Wethersfield.

Although she kept the ticket in a safety deposit box, she could barely sleep through the weekend because she was so excited about her good fortune. She said she would buy her parents a surprise gift and purchase a condominium at some date. But for now, "I'm on my way to the bank," she said.

Or is it a bank for my business needs?

For the business person, we have something we call a Bottom Line Program. This program provides you with such business services as commercial loans and mortgages, company payroll and retirement plans and letters of credit. Among its major benefits is a checking account that pays interest (try to find that kind of offer at a "commercial" bank). Technically, Bottom Line Checking is a "repurchase agreement" and, therefore, not a deposit and not insured by the FDIC. But it does have the solid reputation and resources of the Savings Bank of Manchester behind it. And how fine it is, to see any unused balance in your business checking account making money for you!

If you have a personal checking account at SBM, you also have, of course, an opportunity to earn attractive interest on the unused balance. We give you a variety of interest-bearing options. And the money does grow for you! Our other personal services and accounts run the gamut from personal loans to CDs to IRAs to travelers checks to safe deposit boxes to Commi (automatic teller machine) cards.

For business banking, for personal banking, we have a lot of attractive alternatives. We'd like to tell you about them. We certainly make banking convenient for you, too, at our many locations east of the river. Not to mention, at our expanded main office on Main Street, Manchester, which is especially staffed up with business, personal financial advisers.

What kind of bank are we? We're both personal and business. And we're the best of both.

Things change for the better. Here at the Savings Bank of Manchester, now we can offer in-depth help and planning on all your financial needs. Do it more conveniently, and with a lot more personal attention, too.

It's both, of course. Helping to make all your banking easier with a full range of business/personal services.

Legislative contest hits the airwaves

By Mark A. Dupuis
United Press International

HARTFORD — State Democrats and Republicans have launched vigorous advertising campaigns to win control of the Legislature where Democrats have controlled both chambers since 1975.

"The final push for us is in the radio campaign," said Republican State Chairman Thomas J. D'Amore Jr., who unveiled the four GOP spots which began airing Monday and feature Sen. Lowell Weicker Jr.

The Democrats produced seven radio spots, which have been airing for two weeks. Two of the Democratic ads feature Gov. William A. O'Neill who praises the party.

The two parties are spending $50,000 each on radio "spots" to air around the state through Nov. 6 when voters will fill 151 House and 36 Senate seats. The radio effort is the first this year directed at the legislative elections.

"I wanted a campaign of this type to talk about what Connecticut Democrats have done in the past 10 years," said retiring Senate Majority Leader Richard F. Schellinger, D-Essex.

House Speaker Irving J. Stoberg, D-New Haven, has taped an ad for two weeks. But also is airing it statewide urging voters to elect Democratic legislators.

Republicans, buoyed by polls giving President Reagan a big lead in the state, are hoping to take control of at least one chamber, while Democrats are confident of retaining control, though possibly by slimmer margins.

"I think we'll maintain control," said Schellinger, who said he expects the presidential contest to be closer than polls indicate, cutting into whatever coalition Reagan might give to candidates lower on the ticket.

"Realistically, I think the chances are excellent we will gain control of one chamber," said D'Amore, who said that with the party lever on voting machines "you can't help but to have coattails."

Both Schellinger and D'Amore said it was the first time their parties had used radio ads to influence legislative elections and give a general party pitch. Both said television ads were too expensive.

The Democratic and Republican focus on the state's transportation network, taxes and the economy and education. But, as would be expected, they reach different conclusions.

"There's an old saying that power corrupts," Weicker says in one of the GOP ads. "Maybe the Democrats have been in power too long. Let's change that. Join me in voting for a Republican Legislature on Nov. 6."

O'Neill, in one of the two spots he taped, reaches the opposite conclusion about his party's rule. "Vote for Connecticut Democrats, we've been good for you," O'Neill says.

The tiny country of San Marino claims to be the oldest state in Europe, having been founded in the fourth century A.D.

"I guess it's the one best bank for the both of me."

"He doesn't really DO anything. He's into looking intellectual, moody and a bit arty!"

The ink might run out, but the wells never need software

How often do you see an inkwell pump? This contrivance took a silver medal at the Paris Exhibition of 1839.

On the center of the top it reads MEDAILLE D'ARGENT 1839. Other lettering tells us it is an ENCHER POMPIE.

The body of the inkwell is of porcelain painted green with gold stenciling.

There was always the problem of keeping the ink on top for pen dipping without it getting dried up. This assembly would feed a doss of ink into the caplike projection by means of an inside piston controlled by the knob. After the writing chore was finished, the pump would zoop the surplus back into safe storage.

The so-called bible on the subject, W.E. Covill's "Ink Bottles and Inkwells" (pub. 1971, Sullwood), has 1,280 pictures in 28 categories, but nothing like this "pompie." At first blush, "Wow, rare!" but notice that Covill sticks to U.S. material and, anyway, we see a magazine article by Betty and Ted Rivera (who wrote a similar book in 1973), that describes a piece very much like this, and also a similar model, in white porcelain — again of French derivation.

"Ink bottles," according to author Covill, are the commercial containers used by the manufacturers, holding from a thimbleful to a gallon. "Inkwells" were more personal, for people's desks, or, used to carry in pockets.

A skimming of the categories in Covill: Conical ink bottles, then bottles cylindrical, square, rectangular, hex and octagon, domed and domed with offset neck. More: Barrel-shaped, cabin and house-shaped, these came into vogue during the William Henry Harrison campaign. One barrel says "Tippecanoe Extract" on one side and "Hard Cider" on the other.

Of special interest to our townspeople is the section labeled Pitkin Type Inkwells. Quoting, "The title refers to all the swirled and vertically ribbed patterns which... were thought to have been made by the Pitkin Kovel & Kovel go from $18 for a brown stoneware piece to $865 for a bronze and marble French Military Figure design. The Encher Pompe shown here, together with the three sterling pens, is valued at $250 by the owner (Judith Capovich of Vernon).

As anyone with this particular bug might hope, there is a Society of Inkwell Collectors (5136 Thomas Ave., S. Minneapolis, MN 55410). They provide a means for selling and trading, information on history, identification and market prices, and also professional appraisals.

Membership should be just great — if you don't mind receiving a newsletter called, "The Stained Finger."

Russ MacKendrick is a longtime Manchester resident who is an authority on collectibles.

This old inkwell took a silver medal in a Paris exhibition in 1839. These containers could be letter with messages, much like this one, as well as keep the ink for prolific letter-writers. This one reads Medaille D'Argent and has a porcelain body with gold stenciling.

His one call was worth thousands

BRIDGEPORT (UPI) — It has been nearly 50 years since four famous words changed the life of a hotel page boy named Albert Alieri. "Call for Philip Morris," he shouted in a lobby, and then on radio and later television.

Fifty of people still remember "Johnny" Alieri, 69, and next month he will be celebrating his 90th birthday. Alieri's one call was worth thousands of dollars.

He finished his 47-year career with the company in sales and public relations and retired in 1982. Alieri now shops the publicity he was paid to create.

Alieri said friends wrote to the Smithsonian and officials contacted him and asked for his uniform and other materials.

Manchester boys win first CCC East title

EAST HARTFORD — Having the strength in numbers, Manchester High clipped East Hartford High, 22-8, in Central Connecticut Conference Eastern Division boys' cross country action here Monday at Wickham Park to lay claim to the first division championship.

Manchester finished its campaign 11-0 overall, 7-0 against CCC East Division foes.

East Hartford's Hector Ortiz was the individual winner with a time of 15:55 over the 3.1 mile layout. Following him, however, in the next three placements were Paul Toland, Mike Barry and Jim Lemieux for Manchester. Chip Blodgett, Senan Gorman seventh and Alan Myers 10th for the Silk Toppers.

Gorman and Myers are sophomores.

Chip Blodgett ran his best race of the season with a sixth place finish, noted Manchester coach George Sutor.

Manchester's next outing is Thursday at the CCC Eastern Division championships (individual competition, no team scores kept) at Wickham Park.

Results: 1. Ortiz (EH) 15:55 for 3.1 miles, 2. Toland (M), 3. Barry (M), 4. Lemieux (M), 5. Ramos (EH), 6. Blodgett (M), 7. Gorman (M), 8. Lombardo (EH), 9. Shannon (EH), 10. Myers (M).

MHS girls bow

EAST HARTFORD — Losing the battle but winning the war — that was the feeling of Manchester High girls' cross country coach Phil Blanchette after he saw his squad drop a 27-30 decision to East Hartford High here Monday at Wickham Park.

The loss gives the Indians a final 10-2 overall mark. "We lost the battle but the team is winning the war (in that) for the first time this season our top four runners were within a minute of each other, which less than 10 days before the state meet is good news," Blanchette cited.

East Hartford's Julie Bister was individual winner with a time of 15:12 over a 2.5 mile layout. Sophomore Sheryl Veal and Debbie Dussault were sixth and seventh respectively for Manchester.

Manchester's next outing is at the individual CCC Eastern Division championships Thursday at Wickham Valley.

Results: 1. Kelly (A) 14:20 for 4.000 meters, 2. Carolyn Palfol (SB), 3. Tracy Dowden (NW), 4. Danielle Bonnet (M), 5. Doyle (EC), 6. Little (EC), 7. Colleen (C), 8. Cross (EC), 9. Dayna Gaines (SB), 10. Catherine Keating (SB).

West Virginia leads Lambert Cup

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (UPI) — West Virginia's 21-20 victory over Boston College Saturday gave the Mountaineers the lead in balloting for the Lambert-Meadowlands Cup, awarded after the season to the best team in the Northeast.

West Virginia, 6-1, received all seven first-place votes for 35 points. Boston College, 4-1, fell to second with 20 points, followed by Penn State, 5-2, with 15 points.

Rutgers, 5-2, with eight and Army, 4-1-1, with one.

Penn State is at West Virginia Saturday while Boston College hosts Rutgers in games that should have a significant bearing on Lambert balloting.

The seven-man selection committee for Division I-A teams is made up of sportswriters and broadcasters in the Northeast.

Holy Cross maintained its lead among Division I-AA teams trying for the Lambert-Meadowlands Cup. The Crusaders received all five first-place votes and 50 points after improving to 6-0 by crushing Connecticut 41-0. Colgate, 4-2, is second with 40 points, Rhode Island, 7-1, third with 38, New Hampshire, 6-1, fourth with 36 and Pennsylvania, 4-1, fifth with 26.

Indiana, Pa., leads the Division II poll with three first-place votes and 39 points, ahead of Towsan State, second with two first-place votes and 37 points. Indiana, 6-1, Towsan State, 7-1, swapped places from last week's list.

Whalers open four-game swing

HARTFORD — The first place Hartford Whalers open a four-game road trip tonight in Calgary, Alberta against the Calgary Flames. Hartford has the second best point total in the NHL, trailing only the Stanley Cup champion Edmonton Oilers. The Whalers' nine-point, 4-1-1 record is presently one point better than the Buffalo Sabres' 4-2 mark in the Adams Division.

Hartford's early surprise start will either be exposed or solidified on its tough four-game swing, which includes stops in Winnipeg, Minnesota and Chicago.

"Calgary is playing exceptional," said Whaler center Mark Johnson. "They'll be a big test. It's also tough to play in Minnesota, and Chicago is probably the toughest place of them all."

The Whalers' point differential of plus six (24 goals for, 18 against) is the fourth best in the league, behind Edmonton, plus 22, Philadelphia, plus 10 and Calgary, plus eight.

BC's Browne on probation

BOSTON (UPI) — Boston College fullback Jim Browne has been placed on probation after admitting he possessed 23 grams of cocaine when police stopped him for speeding last month.

Judge Albert H. Burns continued the case without a finding to May 7, 1985 after Browne admitted to the drug charge Monday in Brighton District Court, officials said.

"It is a probationary-type setup," said Browne's lawyer, Conrad Blitzer. "If he behaves himself, gets into no further trouble, the court will dismiss the charge. He's getting no special favors."

Hawaii tickets up for grabs

The two biggest winners in the 1984 Road Race in Manchester Thanksgiving morning will not be the first two of an expected field of over 5,000 runners to cross the finish line on the first female triathlete.

The first time in the 48-year history of Connecticut's oldest road race special awards will be given — worth far more than the first place television set.

Two of the entrants in next month's race over Manchester's paved streets will win round trip airline tickets to Hawaii, courtesy of Connecticut Travel Services which has a branch office in the Parkside. The two winning names will be drawn at random from the list of registered runners who complete the holiday run.

The entry fee remains at $5, one of the lowest in New England for a major race, with merchandise prizes guaranteed the first 25 finishers, plus the first five females to finish, as well as awards for both men and women in four age categories, up to 38, 40 to 49, 50 to 59 and 60 plus. The first three in each age group will qualify while special awards are ticketed for the first three high school male and female runners to finish.

A change in the awarding of prizes at race headquarters set up in the Nathan Hale School will find only the top 25 finishers and the first five women getting their awards on race day. Prizes to age category and special division winners will be mailed when the results are official. Last year there was considerable confusion and the committee hopes to erase this problem on Turkey Day.

There is no longer any minimum age, a practice started last year.

Race starts at 10 o'clock with entries now being received with the cutoff date for making the program November 9. Pre-race entrants will be given a late opportunity to sign up, between 8 and 9:15 on race day at the Nathan Hale School.

The shot at winning the trip to Hawaii is only one in 5,000 but it should help bring in record numbers.

Prized club

Eskel "Ske" Buckland is a golf bug who collects and preserves wood shuffled clubs and irons. The former local man, who started out in the game as a caddy at the Manchester Country Club, reported finding an old wood club that bore the name of Conroy, Manchester, Conn. Conroy was Frank Conroy, the first professional at the local club back in 1917. Buckland, who played golf at Manchester High with Art Wilkie and Jim Civello as teammates, said he would offer the Conroy club to the Manchester membership for display. A member of the National Hockey League's Buffalo Sabres, Buckland joined his fellow members from all over the country at its annual meeting recently at Myrtle Beach. "All the players need wood clubs and dress in knickerbockers," Buckland said. Area golf courses will remain open as long as the Indian Summer continues or until the snow flies.

Rams Eric Dickerson too much for Falcons

ATLANTA — Containing Los Angeles Rams running back Eric Dickerson is easier than doing it. The Atlanta Falcons knew that when they had to do it if they were to have a shot at beating the Rams twice in the same season for the first time — but they couldn't do it.

Dickerson, the No. 2 rusher in the NFL, battered the Falcons for 142 yards on 25 carries Monday night — including a 10-yard touchdown jaunt — while leading the Rams to a 24-10 victory that averaged a 30-28 loss in Los Angeles barely two weeks ago.

In the process, Dickerson, a second-year man out of Southern Methodist who gained 164 yards last week, increased his season total to 911 yards, just 36 behind Chicago's Walter Payton in their one-after losing to the Rams in last-second field goal two weeks ago.

With Dickerson's running and Henry Ellard scoring on 9-yard pass catch and a 69-yard punt return, the Rams dominated play all the way, improving their record to 5-3 and leaving the two games behind once-beaten San Francisco in the NFC West.

The Falcons, who have lost three of their last four games, dropped to 3-5, four games behind the 49ers at the midpoint of the season.

The Rams' only points outside the second quarter was an 18-yard field goal by Mike Lamford with 7:33 left in the game after Los Angeles had marched from its own 14 all the way to a 4th-and-goal at the Atlanta 1.

"I was disappointed we didn't put the game out of reach in the second half," said Rams coach John Robinson. "Dickerson helped us control the game with his running and Ellard and the special teams were also positives."

That was a good win for us to have going into the other game this weekend," Robinson said.

The Falcons, who have scored 10 or less points in three of their last four games, had a 39-yard Mick Lackford field goal in the second quarter and got their lone touchdown on a 10-yard pass from Steve Bartkowski to Henry Ellard.

"We like to play the Rams, but we never got into the game," said Bartkowski, who completed 29 of 31 passes, but for only 144 yards. "Our offense never got going enough to take them out of their defensive game. Mental errors and trying so hard caused us to make our own mistakes."

Ellard's scoring punt return came with only 39 seconds remaining in the first half. Only four plays earlier, Atlanta's David Frye raced 88 yards with a fumble recovery only to learn officials had ruled his knee had touched the ground at the Atlanta 12-yard line.

"I got a good block on the right side and when I cut back, it was wide open," said Ellard. "This is the best game I've had this year and I feel like I'm getting in the groove. We control the game in the first half but may have gotten a little too conservative in the second."

Rams' Eric Dickerson sends the grass flying as he scrambles for one of several long runs in first-quarter action against Atlanta Monday night. Dickerson led Los Angeles team to 24-10 win over the Falcons.

Howe signs with Dodgers

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Car salesman Steve Howe is once again relief pitcher Steve Howe.

The former Dodger relief ace who has been plagued with drug problems and was suspended from baseball for a year, signed a one-year contract with Los Angeles Monday and will pitch for the team's entry in the Dominican Republic winter league.

Heisman Trophy run shaping up into match race

By Dove Roffo
UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK — The run for the 50th Heisman Trophy is shaping into a match race between an oversized tailback and an undersized quarterback.

The tailback is Ohio State's 6-foot-2, 230-pound junior Keith Byars, who leads the nation in rushing and scoring. The quarterback is Boston College senior Doug Flutie, who stands just 5-9 and 176 pounds but has the Eagles unbeaten in four games and ranked fourth.

Byars has tradition on his side since a running back has won the Heisman every year since 1971, when Auburn quarterback Pat Sullivan was honored as college football's best player.

But injuries to several top running backs has observers feeling this might be the Year of the Quarterback. All-American Bo Jackson of Auburn and Navy's Napoleon McCallum were among the pre-season Heisman favorites but both went down with injuries in the early going. Jeff Smith of Nebraska, who got off to a better start than Heisman winner Mike Rozier last year, has also been slowed by injuries.

Flutie has several advantages over the budding tailback from Ohio State. The Eagles passer is the most exciting player in the nation and he was voted MVP going into the season than Byars. Flutie is also a senior and plays in the media-heavy Northeast.

Boston College's Doug Flutie (22) appears to be in a two-man race for the Heisman Trophy with Ohio State running back Keith Byars.

wondering his worth in the next college draft. Flutie has convinced Ohio State coaches he is a great college competitor.

"There's just no way to defend him," Alabama Coach Ray Perkins said after Flutie passed for 254 yards and two TDs against the Tide.

"Doug always comes completed 86 of 140 passes for 1,195 yards, 16 TDs and just four interceptions.

Both Flutie and Byars were second-team All-American selections last year but Byars didn't gain major national attention until he started ripping through opposing defenses at an alarming rate this season.

Byars had gained 1,076 yards on 180 attempts and 16 TDs for 96 points before Saturday's game against Michigan State. He also led the nation in all-purpose yardage with 243.5 yards per game including receiving and kick returns.

Byars' best game came against Illinois Oct. 13 when he galloped for a school-record 274 yards on 39 carries and scored five touchdowns to run his season total to 16.

"I think the whole team broke the record," said Byars, who also has thrown a TD pass this year. "I was just for the guy carrying the ball. They block for me and I'll run for them."

Another top pre-season candidate, Pittsburgh offensive tackle Bill Fralic, has dropped out of the running because his Panthers are struggling at 1-5. Despite a massive campaign by the Pitt Sports Information Department, Fralic was a longshot anyway since no interior lineman has ever won the award.

Other leading candidates are Miami quarterback Bernie Kosar and Brigham Young passer Robb Bosco. Kosar, a sophomore, had passed for 2,151 yards and 15 TDs in seven games and was second in passing efficiency.

Longshots for the award are Tennessee running back Johnnie Jones, Iowa quarterback Chuck Long, Iowa State wide receiver Tracy Henderson and Texas safety Jerry Gray.

Some feel Henderson and Gray are among the all-time greats at their position but wide receivers and defensive players aren't taken seriously by Heisman voters.

"If you want to see the best wide receiver in the country, you just have to come and see Tracy Henderson — he's unbelievable," Texas A&M Coach Jackie Sherrill said of Henderson, who caught 47 passes for 740 yards and six TDs in his first six games.

Texas Coach Fred Akers nominates Gray for the Heisman. "If they give it to the best player in the country at his position, then you have to look at Jerry Gray," Akers said.

But if they give it to the best running back or quarterback — as usual — then you only have to look at Byars and Flutie this year.

BUSINESS

Sales and income down at Pioneer

Pioneer International Corp. of Manchester has reported net sales for the third quarter ended Sept. 1 of $5.29 million, compared to third-quarter sales of $7.67 million in 1983. Income from continuing operations was $749,000, or 44 cents per share, compared to $932,000 or 55 cents per share for the same period last year. The company reported a net loss of $873,000 or 51 cents per share for the current third quarter, versus net income of $1.2 million or 71 cents per share a year ago. Net sales for the nine months ended

Sept. 1 were $16.98 million, compared with $21.44 million for the same period last year. Income from continuing operations was $2.36 million, or $1.39 per share, versus $2.06 million, or $1.21 per share, for the same period last year. Net income for the nine-month period was $3.22 million, or $1.89 per share, compared with $3.02 million, or $1.77 per share, for the same period last year. Pioneer International makes aerodynamic retardation and deceleration systems, recovery systems and parachutes for military and commercial use. It also manufactures ultralight aircraft for military, recreational and commercial use. Its parent company, Pioneer Systems Inc. of New York City, reported sales of $10.98 million for the three months ended Sept. 1, compared with sales of $13.12 million in the third quarter of 1983. Income during the quarter was $664,000, or 23 cents per share, compared with $722,000, or 25 cents per share in the third quarter of 1983. The company reported a net loss of $1.37 million compared with a net income of $902,000 for the same period last year. Operating margins from the 1984 third quarter as well as for the nine months ended in the third quarter were ahead of last year's results despite a reduction in sales which primarily reflects timing differences in shipments under government contracts, said company President Alan H. Greenstadt.

Eye World sets retailing trends

By Steven W. Syre
United Press International

FRAMINGHAM, Mass. — Eye World, a big optical store in a busy mall, often hands its customers electronic pagers to carry while they shop in other stores, giving them a beep in about an hour when their glasses are ready. Eye World and other superstores are trying to take another step in the optical retailing practices that became popular in the 1960s and 1970s, mostly notably by Pearle Vision Centers. The giant stores carry a huge selection of frames — Eye World says it stocks 10,000 — and grinds lenses on the premises so the finished product can be prepared quickly. They also have people in the store to handle examinations. The superstores don't necessarily have to knock over the competition to succeed, but most find a place in a market expected to boom. The industry, which accounted for $3.5 billion last year, will grow to $18 billion by 1990 by some estimates. What the big stores require to make money is big volume. Typically, superstores cost $500,000 to $800,000 to build and need volume in excess of $1 million for profit, said Charles Glovsky, an analyst at Eppler, Guerin and Turner in Dallas.

"The superstores will take a significant amount of the market, but there's enough room for all the retailers to grow. Some financial heavyweights are getting into that (superstore) area," Glovsky said. The heavyweights include companies like Quaker Oats and U.S. Shoe. Eye World, looking to expand, has reached a deal to do that with Gillette, a former employer of one of the optical company's principals. Those big companies are attracted to the business by the demographics of an aging population that will need more help with vision. Convenience and price made them look at superstores. "Assuming that you go to a doctor's office in a medical building and that doctor sees a few patients a day, obviously we're in a position to provide the product and service at a lower cost to the consumer," said Richard Feldman of Eye World. That was the premise successfully exploited by stores like Pearle, having a large variety of eye products and people to handle examinations. Federal Trade Commission reports concluding retailers could give good service at lower prices also helped. Despite their success there is still plenty of opportunity for the retailers, and Glovsky said 80 percent of the business is controlled by private practitioners. "Pearle is the only chain you could call a truly viable national force with (more than) 1,000 outlets and it still has below 10 percent of the market," Feldman said.

Dollar is down

LONDON (UPI) — The dollar opened lower on all European exchange markets today. Gold rose in Switzerland and was stable in England. In Zurich, gold opened at $339.50 an ounce, compared with a previous close of $338.50. In London, gold was unchanged at $339.25 an ounce.

Business In Brief

Quebec eyes New England

BOLTON, Vt. — Energy-rich Quebec is eager to cultivate external markets — particularly in the Northeast — for its undeveloped power supplies, a Hydro Quebec official says. Jacques Guevremont, a marketing official for Hydro Quebec, said Monday the provincial power company has 30,000 megawatts of annual power yet to be developed, and is looking toward New England as a long term, reliable market. Construction is already underway in northeastern Vermont on a transmission system that will be used by the New England Power Pool to import 690 megawatts of electricity from Hydro Quebec. Additionally, another project underway in the northwestern part of the state will be used for the direct purchase of about 150 megawatts of power by Vermont.

Dollars to Donuts

WESTERLY, R.I. — Hess Eaton Donut Flour Co. has stepped up plans to dominate the New England Donut market with its president setting a goal of 15 new stores a year in an ambitious expansion program. Company officials said the expansion will wrest market control from Dunkin' Donuts of Randolph, Mass., which now dominates the market by 1990.

Hess Eaton President Louis Genereale predicted a doubling of last year's profits of $11 million in net sales by August, 1985 and an increase in the employment force from 360 to 500 workers.

Hub bank cuts prime

BOSTON — The First National Bank of Boston has announced a one-quarter-point decrease in its based lending rate to 12 1/4 percent effective immediately.

The bank is the principal subsidiary of Bank of Boston Corp.

Courier completes sale

LOWELL, Mass. — Courier Corp. Chairman James F. Conway Jr. has reported the completion of the previously-announced sale of its Business Forms Division to Uniformed Printing and Supply Inc. It became effective Sept. 30.

Uniform printing is a privately held company recently formed by James L. Southern III of Belmont, Mass., and several other investors. As reported earlier, the sale price was slightly in excess of $11 million, resulting in an after tax loss of $700,000. Courier has retained all real estate currently used by this division and has leased it to Uniform Printing.

Prime makes appointment

NATICK, Mass. — Prime Computer, Inc. President Joe M. Henson has announced the appointment of Andrew C. Knowles III as corporate vice president. Knowles, who will report to Henson, also has been named a member of the company's operating committee.

China inks Bay State pact

The American suppliers include Federal Eastern Corp., Perkin-Elmer Semiconductor, Digital Equipment Corp., G & W Electric Co., Southeast Engineering Corp., Crosby Valve Division, and International Assistance Associates.

Taiwan Power Co. of the Republic of China is the biggest customer, with its purchases exceeding $5 million.
