Hindus seek revenge

Violence prompts emergency session

By Stewart Stavin
United Press International

NEW DELHI, India — Troops in full battle gear moved into New Delhi and six other cities today to head off a religious war against Sikhs by Hindus seeking revenge for the assassination of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

Gandhi's son, Rajiv, sworn in as her successor, called the cabinet into emergency session to deal with the growing violence that killed at least nine people and injured hundreds.

More than 60 fires set by rioters sent smoke billowing over the New Delhi skyline and automatic weapons fire echoed through the streets of the capital on the first of the official 12 days of mourning for the 65-year-old prime minister killed Wednesday by two Sikh members of her security staff.

Gandhi's body lay in state at her childhood home — where more than 70 people were hurt when mourners stampeded through police barricades to get a glimpse of the flag-shrouded body. Sikhs and Hindus fought with clubs and swords in the streets of the capital. Witnesses to a Sikh-Hindu clash outside the Rakabganj Sikh Temple in central New Delhi said two people were killed in a battle of swords and clubs. One man was beheaded with a swipe of a Sikh sword. Another was doused with kerosene and set afire; his body left smoking in the street before the temple.

Truckloads of green-clad soldiers moved into New Delhi, Calcutta, Kanpur, Allahabad, Lucknow, Banaras and Jabalpur to reinforce police and paramilitary forces, the home ministry said. The press trust of India reported one man shot and killed in New Delhi and two others killed outside a Sikh temple in Calcutta.

In Tiruchappalli, 1,200 miles south of the capital, a 24-year-old Hindu railway worker killed himself by pouring kerosene over his head and lighting a match, shouting "Indira Gandhi zindabad" — "Long live Indira Gandhi."

More than 400 people were treated for injuries in one New Delhi hospital alone.

The streets of the capital were littered with the smoking shells of scores of automobiles, buses and trucks burned by rioters. Reports from many sections of the capital said shops owned by Sikhs had been burned and the owners and their families terrorized.

The press trust of India said at least 500 cars, trucks and buses were set ablaze by rioters in New Delhi. One Sikh told United Press International he guarded his home with a gun against Hindu mobs surging through his south Delhi neighborhood.

Army, police and paramilitary security forces were on full alert and in some areas they had orders to shoot rioters on sight.

"Hindu students are pulling Sikhs from their vehicles and beating them up," said Ram Nairan, 27, who reported seeing a dozen vehicles set afire in the capital.

Rajiv Gandhi, a former airline pilot and his mother's hand-picked successor as prime minister, pleaded for calm Wednesday in an address to the nation after taking the oath of office.

Joyner won't nix sharing

By Alex Girelli
Herald Reporter

Stressing a desire to avoid conflict with the town, Eighth District President Walter Joyner said today he is not rejecting the town's latest suggestion for temporary sharing of fire protection services in the district.

But he linked consideration of that proposal with what action the town takes over the district's desire to buy state land next to the site it is buying for a district firehouse, and with the a district request for a review and report by the Planning and Zoning Commission on the district's firehouse plans.

Joyner said the district has applied to the PZC for such a review as a "municipal agent" under terms of the state statute requiring municipal agents to have certain kinds of projects reviewed by the planning authority.

A member of the town Planning Department staff said today that the PZC received a request dated Oct. 26 from attorney John D. LaBelle Jr. for such a review, normally termed a mandatory referral.

The application again raises the question of whether the district is a municipality.

The same question is crucial in the district's attempt to buy state-owned land on Tolland Turnpike and Buckland Street. State law requires that when state land becomes unneeded excess, the state must give the municipality in which it is located the first crack at buying it. The district has expressed interest in buying the land. The town also wants to consider buying it.

If the PZC does have to review the district firehouse plan, it will be placed in the position of having to pass judgment on the construction of one firehouse to be built very close to another. The town's Buckland firehouse, from which it cannot legally provide fire protection in the Buckland area, is near the site of the district's proposed firehouse.

In a letter to Joyner, Mayor Barbara Weinberg suggested that the town could provide fire protection within the district's area as designated by the district for as long as the district wanted. It suggested that the Town of Manchester Fire Department could be first responder to fires in an area designated by the district, with the district fire department second responder from the existing district firehouse at Hilliard and Main streets.

Asked today for his reaction to that suggestion, Joyner said, "At this point I don't know." He said he would discuss it with district directors.

He said he really wants to find a solution to the problem. He said the best solution is to share the Buckland station. He said the district has offered to buy the station or to lease it, and has asked the town to consider building a third bay on it.

All those alternatives have been rejected by the town.

As for the effort to avoid conflict, Joyner said, "I'm not carrying a sword and looking for a fight. I don't feel we should roll over and play dead either."

Both sides try to influence voters' decision on CDBG

By Alex Girelli
Herald Reporter

When Manchester voters go to the polls Tuesday, they will decide whether the town should accept federal Community Development Block Grants administered by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

They will make that decision by voting either yes or no on Question Number 5 on the town ballot.

A "yes" vote will mean the voter favors accepting the grants. A "no" vote will be one against accepting the grants.

HUD has already accepted Manchester's application for the funds, which contains a "zero" goal for construction of new low-income housing, but participation hinges on the outcome of the referendum.

If the voters approve participation, this is the way the $468,000 for fiscal 1984 will be spent:

- $130,000 for housing rehabilitation

- $133,000 for sidewalk and drainage improvements

- $60,000 for playground improvements

- $50,000 for an elevator at the Municipal Building

- $75,000 for parking and drainage improvements at the Senior Citizen's Center

- And $20,000 for administration of the program

Manchester will be eligible for a slightly smaller entitlement in fiscal 1985. After that its eligibility will lapse unless Congress changes the CDBG program.

THE DISPUTE OVER

- Is bonding needed?
- Grant issue history
- stories on page 3

WHETHER the town gains or loses by taking the grants has a long and stormy history. On two occasions, townspeople have voted strongly in opposition to the program. The town has not accepted CDBG grants since 1980.

It faced a discrimination lawsuit over the decision to withdraw, which it eventually won.

The current chapter began early this year when Stephen Cassano, a Democratic member of the Manchester Board of Directors, suggested the town re-examine its position on the grants. Cassano said he understood that the regulations governing the administration of the grant program had changed enough to warrant a new look.

One of the chief arguments for dropping out was the belief of opponents that by accepting the grants, the town was committing itself to the possibility of having to build subsidized family housing.

The degree to which grant regulations or the philosophy behind the administration of the regulations have changed has been pivotal in the arguments for and against the CDBG program.

CASSANO WAS NOT THE FIRST DIRECTOR to suggest re-examining the town's position. Former Republican Director Joan Lingard made the same suggestion at one point, but the board's Democratic majority quickly dismissed the notion as politically unrealistic.

The upshot of Cassano's suggestion this year was the appointment of a 15-member citizens' committee to study the question. Members included seven Democrats, seven Republicans, and one unaffiliated voter. They included some people who had been active in the pro- and anti-CDBG campaigns of the past.

The committee met five times and issued both majority and minority reports.

The nine-member majority recommended rejoining. The five-member minority took the opposite view.

The majority, led by committee Chairman Matthew Moriarty Jr., concluded that while the regulations have not substantially changed, their interpretation and enforcement have eased considerably. The majority position concluded that the risk to the town in rejoining the grant program is "small enough to be insignificant."

The minority report, prepared by former director Joseph Sweeney, a leading opponent of accepting the grants in 1979, said the risks were too great to justify re-entry. One risk cited in the minority report was that of another lawsuit against the town.

The 15th member of the committee, Vivian Ferguson, issued a separate report. She abstained from voting on the merit of

Slaying shocks Indians in town

By Sarah Possell
Herald Reporter

The response to Indira Gandhi's death among several Indians who live and work in the Manchester area was one of shock and sadness.

"Oh my God," said Ashok Kumar, owner of East West Imports on Center Street, when told Wednesday of Gandhi's assassination. "Is that true?"

This morning Kumar, who left India almost 10 years ago and is now an American citizen, had more to say about the slain prime minister, whom he called "a fantastic leader," and about India's future.

"I think Indira Gandhi was even better than her father," said Kumar, referring to India's first prime minister, Jawaharlal Nehru. But he said he thinks Gandhi's son Rajiv, who was sworn in as prime minister shortly after his mother's death, will have a difficult job following in her footsteps.

"It's going to be a test for him," Kumar said. He said the eruption of Hindu violence against Sikhs Wednesday after word of the assassination spread through the Punjab, where the Sikhs have been in revolt against the Indian government, would test Rajiv Gandhi's ability as a leader.

He said he does not blame Gandhi for sending the military last June to storm the Golden Temple at Amritsar in the Punjab, which radical Sikhs had turned into an armed fortress. At least 600 people died in the fighting.

"If anything, she was too late in doing it," he said. "She should have done it two years ago."

Kumar is a native of the Punjab and said he fought in the 1971 war with Pakistan that led to the creation of Bangladesh. Kumar said the Sikh religion was founded by a warrior caste of Hindus who protected the Hindus from Moslem invasions in the 15th century.

He said the Sikhs who are calling for an independent state do not represent the Sikh majority in India. "You're not talking about the Sikhs who are good," he said. "They are fanatics, these people."

The Herald was unable to locate any Sikhs for their reaction to Gandhi's assassination.

"I woke up, and the radio was saying that they took her, and then that they shot her," said Daxa Patel, a 19-year-old Manchester Community College student who lives in East Hartford. "I was like, 'Why?'"

Patel and her family came to this country five years ago. She is still an Indian citizen and has relatives in a western Indian state that has not been touched by religious violence.

"The Sikhs are good people, but they wanted their separate country, and that's not good," she said.

She said her family thought well of Indira Gandhi, though they disapproved of her suspending democracy during a time of widespread opposition in 1975. The move cost Gandhi the prime ministry in the country's 1977 general elections, she said.

"We thought she was very good," Patel said. "She had done a lot of good things for the country." She cited the creation of Bangladesh as an example, and the annexing of the nation of Sikkim as an Indian state.

None of three interviewed Monday by the Manchester Herald said they believed the Soviets would move to take advantage of a possible power vacuum.

"I don't think the Soviets would move in," Kumar said. "The Soviets would have to have some reason to move in. Politics are still strong in India."

Dr. V. Abraham Kurien, a Manchester cardiologist, said, "I don't think the Soviets are going to run into India, any more than America will go into India."

"I don't even think there are going to be any major problems in India. Tension suddenly diffuses itself when somebody dies. It will bring people to a little bit more of their senses."

"Her death is very sad," Kurien said. "But she could have died this morning of a heart attack. The tragedy is the way it happened."

Ross faces new charges

HARTFORD (UPI) — Michael B. Ross, charged with the murders of six young women in Connecticut, was charged with the attempted murder, kidnapping and sexual assault of a North Carolina woman, officials announced today.

Lt. Kenneth Kirschner, spokesman for state police, said a warrant for Ross' arrest was filed by the Wake City, N.C., sheriff's office.

The alleged incident occurred in July, 1981, Kirschner said, but had no details concerning the woman involved.

The charges against Ross came after state police detectives provided information to the Rolesville police regarding their assault investigation.

Ross, 25, has been indicted on eight counts of capital felony murder in New London County in connection with the murder of four women. He has also been indicted in Windham County on two counts of capital felony murder for the killing of two women there.

If convicted on any of the capital counts, Ross would face the possibility of death in the electric chair.

Ross is presently being held in a Connecticut jail on the six separate homicide cases that occurred between January 1982 and June 1984.

In New London County, Ross has been indicted for the murders of Robin Stavinsky, 19, of Columbia; April Brunas, 15, and Leslie Shelley, 14, both of Griswold; and Wendy Baribeault, 17, of Lisbon. In Windham County, Ross was charged in the murders of Tammy Williams, 17, of Brooklyn and Debra Smith Taylor, 26, of Jewett City.

Across the nation

Subzero cold chilled the high plains this morning, sending the wind chill down to 40 below, while intense storms that sparked a cluster of tornadoes continued to drench the central plains.

Heavy storms continued in Kansas City early today, after 2 1/2 inches of rain in the area Wednesday caused some street flooding. The rains drenched much of the surrounding area, with 4 1/2 inches in Emporia, Kan., and 3 1/2 inches in Elmer, Mo.

The storms sparked several tornadoes around the plains including a twister that killed two people in a trailer park near Carbondale, Kan., Wednesday night. The tornadoes touched down near Chester, Okla., Wednesday evening, damaging a house and downing power lines. More twisters were reported near Lambert, Okla., and Orinda, Okla., destroyed two houses and a barn and downed phone and power lines, officials said.

Thunderstorms swept across northern Texas, bringing gusty winds that destroyed homes and property. Strong winds near 70 miles per hour overturned trailers in Revanna and the Lake Bonham region.

The Texas storms doused Bonham with 4 inches of rain in less than an hour and 3 inches in an hour at Ivanhoe.

Shrill Texas had 4 inches of rain in 30 minutes, with the weight of the rain causing a department store roof to collapse. Three people were injured slightly.

rejoining the grant program, but supported the idea of putting the question to the voters.

THREE LOW-INCOME WOMEN FILED a lawsuit against the town in 1979 as the result of its withdrawal from the CDBG program.

During its meetings, the citizens' study committee heard representatives of East Hartford and West Hartford describe how the grant program works in their town.

On Oct 1 against supporting re-entry into the program, the Democratic Town Committee did not meet on the question and this is not on record either way.

THE CONCERNED CITIZENS for Manchester Development, which initiated the move to withdraw from the CDBG program in 1979, recently reactivated itself and placed advertisements in the Herald advocating a "no" vote.

In 1975, Community Development Block Grants administered by the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development first became available. Manchester received the program and remained in it for four successive years.

Relations between the town and HUD appeared to go smoothly in the next two years of the program. Manchester used about $1.5 million in grant money over four years for a variety of purposes, including the establishment of the Senior Citizens' Center in the former Green School.

In 1978, while the fourth-year grant application was pending, the relationship between town officials and officials of HUD became strained. The issue was whether the town had fulfilled its obligations to "affirmatively further fair housing."

In an effort to satisfy HUD objections to the town's effort, the town hired Wilbur Smith of Hartford, now a state senator, as an equal opportunity coordinator to educate the community about fair housing.

Should town bond for repairs?

By Kathy Gormus Herald Reporter

With the town attorney seeing a litany of lawsuits over everything from falls on deteriorated sidewalks to damaged cars from potholes, few people would argue that the town's roads and sidewalks are in poor shape.

Not all of the money has yet been targeted for specific projects. Town officials have admitted that the proposed repairs represent only a very small portion of the work needed to be done throughout town.

The bond issue was proposed by Democratic directors Stephen T. Penny and James F. Fogarty. The directors voted unanimously in August to put the bond issue on the ballot as a referendum item, although some of them had reservations about borrowing money to pay for the bond.

Speaker backs Thompson, McCavanagh

Stolberg, in town, blasts Republicans

By Kathy Gormus Herald Reporter

State House of Representatives Speaker Irving J. Stolberg Wednesday condemned what he said was misleading campaign material being distributed throughout the state on behalf of Republican candidates.

"I've never seen a campaign with as broad-scale misrepresentation," he said during an afternoon news conference in the office of state Rep. James R. McCavanagh, D-Manchester.

The Democrat from New Haven displayed one tabloid that said a Democratic legislator voted for more crime.

Another tabloid showed a man with pockets turned inside-out and claimed he had voted for the Democratic incumbent. The man was not even a resident of the legislator's district, Stolberg said.

"This is a lot of the Connecticut campaign process," he said. "I hope the candidates that use this type of material go down in flames."

Stolberg was in Manchester Wednesday to endorse McCavanagh for re-election in the 12th Assembly District.

He also endorsed former mayor John W. Thompson in his bid to unseat Republican state Rep. Elsie L. Swensson in the 13th Assembly District.

Stolberg called Thompson "a man of tremendous compassion" who has done a lot for Manchester. Thompson was able to bring local government to the people when he was mayor, Stolberg said.

McCavanagh is respected by both parties at the Capitol for his integrity and determination, Stolberg said. He also praised McCavanagh for working on three different committees while maintaining a good attendance record on all of them.

Stolberg said that McCavanagh has not been immune to misleading attacks from his Republican opponent, Jonathan Mercur.

"Jim McCavanagh is attacked for having his name on just one bill," he said. "It's easy to put your name on a bill."

Many legislators have been claiming credit for bills which they had nothing to do with, he said. House Minority Leader Ralph E. Van Norstrand has even urged fellow Republican representatives to sign onto bills that have already passed the House, Stolberg said.

Van Norstrand could not be reached for comment this morning on that charge.

As speaker of the house, Stolberg said, he has a duty to defend the integrity of the party and the legislators.

"If a Democrat had used the same type of attack against a Republican, I would be calling him or her in," he said.

Stolberg said he thought the Republicans might be using negative campaign material to increase any potential effect President Ronald Reagan might have if he defeats former Vice President Walter Mondale, the Democratic candidate, on Nov. 6.

"I think because they feel Mr. Reagan is running strong, they feel if they can tear good Democrats down, then they can slip in sleazy Republicans," he said.

Stolberg said he was concerned that the Democrats would lose House seats in the Nov. 6 election. The extent of any potential effect cannot be determined, he said.

In response to a reporter's question, Stolberg said he did not resent the national Democratic party for its attention to the presidential race in Connecticut. "If Mr. Mondale can win California and New York but not being here... on a national level, it would be worth it," he said.

Smith and Cummings argue over CDBG comments

Republican Town Chairman Curtis Smith took exception today to remarks made Wednesday by his Democratic counterpart, Theodore Cummings, to the effect that there is no broad interest in Manchester to take action to help people, "especially if its people with a different color skin or of racial, issue. And Cummings made the comments Wednesday about an evident lack of support from liberals and others for the town's re-entry into the Community Development Block Grant program.

Smith said Cummings insulted the people of Manchester with that remark. He called it a desperate attempt to get people to vote for an unpopular program.

He said Cummings sought to make the dispute over CDBG grants a black and white, or racial, issue. And he said that is unfair to a lot of people who don't view the CDBG controversy that way.

Smith said the Republican Party, which has opposed rejoining the grant program, has encouraged blacks to take part in government.

Cummings responded today that the only people who will be insulted are those who want to view it as an insult.

"I've insulted no one," Cummings said. "I have to smile at Curt's efforts to make me the bad guy," he said.

Linking Cummings' remarks to political philosophy, Smith charged that Cummings favors more government takeover of local matters. He said this contrasts with the Reagan-Bush stress on volunteerism and reflects the Mondale-Ferraro aversion to big government.

Smith said "people helping people" is attitude that built the country. He said the Democratic leadership in the state is trying to insult those who believe in that philosophy.

Barfield stay denied

RALEIGH, N.C. — A federal appeals court refused today to spare the life of Margie Velma Barfield in a ruling just 16 hours before she is to die in the nation's first execution of a woman in 22 years.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., rejected Barfield's plea for a stay of execution and her attorneys hastily prepared to go to the Supreme Court.

Barfield is scheduled to die by lethal injection at 2 a.m. EST Friday for poisoning her fiancé.

OPEC predicts price rise

GENEVA, Switzerland — OPEC oil ministers say their nine percent cutback in daily oil production starting today will push up prices on the world market, but two U.S. oil companies and America's energy secretary disagree.

The 13 oil ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries formally agreed Wednesday to lower their oil production to 16 million barrels a day. OPEC's previous daily ceiling was 17.5 million barrels.

The new cap was to stay in force until spot prices return to the $29-per-barrel OPEC reference price. Saudi Arabia's oil minister, Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani, said he was certain the price would rise by mid-November and possibly sooner.

"Some oil companies do not have enough stock and therefore they have to buy," he said. "Therefore we think the action will be felt in the market the minute the oil companies try to find a barrel and don't get it easily."

The oil ministers said non-OPEC members Mexico and Egypt had also agreed to lower their production to defend the $29-per-barrel benchmark.

Building costs increase

WASHINGTON — Builders spent 1.1 percent more on construction labor and materials in September, with major increases for streets and highways but a setback for single family houses, the Commerce Department said today.

The increase brought spending back up to its level in June but the figure was below May's peak. Builders were spending at an annual rate of $13.2 billion in September after seasonal adjustment, 11.9 percent more than a year earlier.

When the figures were additionally adjusted to compensate for inflation, the September increase was 0.7 percent, a 0.6 percent ahead of a year earlier.

Private construction was 81.8 percent of the total in September, gaining 1 percent over August in current dollars.

U.N. announces peace talks

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Guerrillas launched new attacks against Israeli forces in southern Lebanon and Israel had agreed to hold military level talks on an Israeli withdrawal.

At the United Nations, Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said Wednesday the conference would begin Monday at the headquarters of the U.N. peacekeeping force in Naqoura, a coastal city near the Israeli border in southern Lebanon.

The announcement came after two Israelis and three members of an Israeli-backed Lebanese militia, the South Lebanon Army, were wounded in two separate guerrilla attacks, Lebanese radio reports said.

Three Israeli intelligence officers were reported killed in another attack in the Israeli-occupied south, but Israeli military officials in Tel Aviv had no immediate comment on the report.

U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy arrived in Israel for talks today on the eventual withdrawal of its estimated 10,000 troops in southern Lebanon-Israel invaded Lebanon in June 1982 to drive Palestinian guerrillas out of the country.

Candidates put campaign in high gear

By Arnold Sawislok United Press International

The 1984 presidential campaign reached the political equivalent of football's two-minute drill today. With four days left before the voting starts, everybody is going all out for the big scoring play.

Democrats Walter Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro were behind and trying everything to catch up. President Reagan and Vice President George Bush are ahead and trying to produce a victory that will smash the opposition for the next four years.

After two relatively quiet days in the White House, Reagan set out today on a 14-city, cross-country tour, hitting mostly big electoral states, that will wind up in California, his adopted home state and the largest electoral prize.

Mondale, who has been campaigning all week like a man who believes his repeated claims that the tide is turning, kept going with a heavy schedule in key eastern and midwestern states.

The vice presidential candidates also were in high gear. Ferraro was going nearly coast-to-coast twice in two days — New York to Los Angeles, Los Angeles to New York and Ohio on the schedule today. Delaware, New Jersey, Maryland and Connecticut tomorrow.

The Democratic candidates were to join for the traditional New York garment district lunch-hour rally today before splitting up Wednesday in Baltimore. Mondale dismissed Reagan's suggestion that Ferraro was selected for the ticket solely because she is a woman and he accused Bush of having a "character flaw."

Mondale told reporters Ferraro "was picked as the result of a process in which we reviewed every possible candidate for president. I picked her because she's the best. I picked her because she has a capacity to be a super vice president and president and the record is there."

Mondale also said, "There's a character flaw in Mr. Bush. He has not once, but three times, made aside remarks about Geraldine Ferraro. It had to be deliberate and he didn't have the character to apologize."

"We elect a president and vice president not just on the basis of resumes but also on the basis of character. I'm proud of my vice presidential candidate and I'm proud of the potential that she offers for our country," Mondale said.

Reagan made a last visit to his Washington campaign headquarters to boost his troops' morale. Accompanied by campaign chairman Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., and campaign director Edward Rollins, Reagan spent about an hour thanking his workers urging them to "Get out the vote" on Election Day.

Reagan said he will keep "running one vote behind."

"It feels better that way," he said. "The one thing that I agree with Mr. Mondale on," he added, "is that the polls don't vote. People do."

Reagan backed away from his bold prediction Tuesday that Nov. 6 would bring not only victory but "an historic realignment" of the two-party system as traditional Democrats flock to the GOP.

He jokingly lamented that he could not convince his chief pollsters "to hide the polls," and told the campaign workers, "Just don't take them seriously until Tuesday."

In Milwaukee, Ferraro also had a feisty comment on Reagan's quoted suggestion that she was a token candidate.

"If the president has any doubts about my substance, perhaps he and I could have a debate — and we do have four days left."

"Let me suggest to you that I think I have proven myself as a national candidate not only throughout the three months of the campaign, but also during the debate. I am not being hidden from the press and I am still doing open forums throughout the country," she said.

Baby Fae doing well. LOMA LINDA, Calif. — Baby Fae, the longest-surviving recipient of an animal heart transplant, is doing so well it is hard to tell her from a normal baby, but her doctors say she could face her most severe test this weekend. Physicians at Loma Linda University Medical Center said Wednesday the baboon's heart implanted in a landmark, life-saving operation Friday was performing so well that a physician could not distinguish baby Fae from a healthy infant down the hall. "I am amazed how perfectly normal baby Fae looks and behaves, a sign of her continuing process," said Dr. Theodore Mackett, chairman of transplant services at Loma Linda. "There's another normal baby on the same floor, and I tell you I couldn't tell the difference between them." The 4.8-pound, 19-day-old girl from Barstow, Calif. — whose identity is being withheld at the request of her parents — is "doing very, very well, yawning, vigorously sucking on her pacifier, wiggling in her specially-warmed bed and enjoying rocking in her parents' arms," said Dr. David Hinshaw, professor of surgery. The baby received daily visits from her parents and grandmother and is able to recognize her mother, he said. A spokeswoman said baby Fae was gaining her formula and "is always hungry." "She is being weaned away from the oxygen concentration, a mark in her progress," Hinshaw added. "Her immune system shows no indication of any crisis. There are no signs of rejection of the new heart." But Hinshaw said this weekend could be a critical period in baby Fae's development because "in general, there is a bump at 7 to 10 days," when heart transplant patients are in the most danger of rejecting their new organ. ## Computer users lose inhibitions

Why is it that computer mail is full of profanity, obscenity and rudeness that business people normally don't use in face-to-face conversations? That is not a matter of theory but of fact. It even has a name, from the computer age: it is known as "flaming."

The significant factor in this phenomenon is emotional. When people sit down to express their opinions or ideas at computer terminals, they tend to get far more emotional than in talking or even in old-fashioned letter writing. And researchers are a bit baffled by the loosening of inhibitions that takes place.

One curious researcher hazards the guess that, because computers are operated much more by the younger generation, the computer messages reflect the much less inhibited vocabulary of the young men and women who got their education in the colleges were wracked by rebellion, verbal as well as political. That's learned to use language that appalled their elders. But the offensive language is used by people in management positions and therefore older. So maybe the explanation is simply that it is easier to swear at or abuse others when there is no other human around — only the impersonal computer terminal, which can't talk back, chasten or censor. Certainly the managers and executives don't have the brake of a secretary's presence, which in years past could deter the use of epithets in the office.

Scientists are still trying to explain the phenomenon. Some of the ingenuity to build new kinds of computers that will have the ability to think — artificial intelligence, they call it. If they make a breakthrough in that direction, the first thing they will have to do is program every computer with a censor that will screen out all the offensive words and phrases that, in grade school, triggered a slap from the teacher's ruler — in the older generation, of course.

Inaugural plans are under way

By Mory Beth Franklin

WASHINGTON — Although the next president of the United States — whoever it is — will not be sworn in for another three months, preparations are already under way for the nation's 90th inauguration ceremony.

Work on Washington's quadrennial extravaganza began last April when the Armed Forces Inaugural Committee, initially made up of two people and expected to top 300 by next month, began planning the event.

Navy Cmdr. Greg Gagne, a spokesman for the committee, said up to 12,000 military personnel will be involved in some form of planning or participating in the ceremony, from military escorts and drivers to snow removal crews and medics.

The biggest single group is the 2,100-man contingency that will line the mile-long parade route from the Capitol to the White House.

"We're just awaiting the final outcome," Gagne said in reference to the yet-to-be held election.

Gagne said this is the earliest an inaugural committee has ever started planning and arranging the event, which usually attract about 100,000 visitors.

"It has been very helpful," he said, noting that the staff is creating a first-ever step-by-step guide for future committees on topics ranging from security preparations to potential sites for inaugural galas.

On the topic of security, Gagne commented: "We'll do what we need to do. It's fair to say that things are different today than four years ago." However, he would not say whether metal detectors or other security equipment would be used to screen the crowd.

Last summer, Congress got into the act by appointing its own six-member inaugural committee. The panel's first piece of business in August was to select the West Front of the Capitol for the ceremony.

It will be only the second time in history that a president will be sworn in on the side of the Capitol that looks down Pennsylvania Avenue to the Washington Monument and the White House.

West Front at about 5-to-1 over the traditional East Front, where presidents from Andrew Jackson through Jimmy Carter were sworn in.

Parts of the Capitol will be appropriately decorated with red, white and blue bunting and large American flags — less of a patriotic gesture than an attempt to hide some of the unsightly scaffolding that is expected to mar the West side of the building for two people and expected to top 300 by next month, began planning the event.

Chairman of the Joint Congressional Committee on Inaugural Ceremonies, earlier this month, drove the first ceremonial tennepenny nail into the inaugural stand that is expected to cost $29.9 million, when completed in December.

The stands are designed to hold about 1,500 invited guests, ranging from the president, vice president and their families, to current and former members of Congress, the Cabinet, the Supreme Court, members of the diplomatic corps, military officers with the rank of general, and Medal of Honor winners.

While the bulk of the $500,000 budget will be used to erect stands, another $200,000-plus will finance decorations, invitations and personnel.

The winner's inaugural committee, to be established after the election, will decide on the number and location of inaugural galas, authorize appropriate inaugural souvenirs, and control a large number of tickets for the actual ceremony. Members of the public can request tickets for the inauguration from their congressmen or senators.

Union supports Jack Thompson

It is with great pleasure the men of IAF's Local 1579 endorse the candidacy of Jack Thompson for state representative. Jack is the type of person who takes an active role in the political process and is not afraid to stand up and fight for our community.

This need is more important than ever before because our representative must aggressively seek the legislation that our community needs.

In days gone by, we could afford to be less staunch about our interests in state government, but today we face a wide variety of problems. This difficult job takes a person who has proven himself to be a strong leader, not merely a participant in the process. Jack has proven himself time and time again to be this type of leader in our community.

There are those that take, and those that give in this world of ours, and Jack Thompson is certainly at the top of the list of givers. We are very proud and honored to know and support him. There is no one amongst us who will care more to work harder, and totally devote themselves on behalf of the community he loves.

Time to put cap on Reagan fiasco

When Ronald Reagan ran for office in 1980, he promised a balanced budget by 1983. These are the facts:

When he came into office, the national debt ceiling was $800,000,000,000. Five percent of the annual budget was used to pay the interest on the national debt.

In his short 3 1/2 years in office, the debt limit has been raised to a whopping $1,824,000,000,000, with 12 percent of the budget going to pay the interest on his national debt.

He has raised the national debt more than a trillion dollars, more than doubling the total debt of all previous presidents. The interest has risen from 5 percent to 12 percent of the annual budget.

This phony Reagan prosperity bubble can stand only so much hot air. When this bubble bursts some day, the burden of this stupidity? Our children and their children the rest of their lives.

The young who are intrigued by his persona today will pay dearly for it the rest of their lives.

'Butcher' may never be tried

WASHINGTON — Why hasn't Klaus Barbie, the notorious Nazi war criminal, been brought to trial by the French? Some of my intelligence sources doubt he will ever be.

The reason is simple and scandalous. The "Butcher of Lyon" has acquired a new title: "The Man Who Knew Too Much." Barbie has hinted from the start that he could blow the whistle on a number of Frenchmen — living and dead — who attained high positions in France after secretly collaborating with the Nazi occupation forces during World War II.

Reject Bolton's school project

Presently, our town fathers are suffering from an edifice complex and are being asked to pass judgment on this condition on Nov. 6. The subject is just too vast for this letter to bear and I will concern myself here only with one proposal, namely, the library-media-computer center for Bolton High School.

On the night of the hearing, Oct. 1, it became apparent that the Board of Education had not thoroughly examined whether the center was needed, what impact the construction and maintenance of it will have on the taxpayers' pockets and, finally, how the use of the computers will be integrated into the curriculum. A very disconcerting element of this proposal was the absence of consideration for rearranging the existing high school space to accommodate the suggested facilities. A proposal for rearranging existing space was made from the floor, and if not the plan, then the concept, merits consideration.

It merits consideration in view of the fact that the present high school was built 20 years ago according to demographic predictions that calculated the student body would reach 500 in 10 years.

Now, 20 years later, the student body consists of 310 members, which includes 83 students from Willington (Board talk, Sept. 24, 1984). Curiously enough, one of the arguments given by the proponents of the center has been, again, demographic.

President Francois Mitterrand's Socialist government at first was eager for a public trial of Barbie, believing he would embarrass only its political rivals. Now they're not so sure.

In fact, my associate Lucette Lagardo was told by someone who is believed to be Barbie as an intelligence informant that he often boasted of the ease with which he had recruited French spies for the Nazis. He even bragged that he had agents inside the resistance movement itself.

Barbie's lawyer has hinted that some of the clandestine traitors his client knows about rose to prominence in postwar France. But it would be easy to bluff. Even high officials who know they are clean can't be sure that one of their colleagues wasn't a hireling of Barbie during the occupation. It's not a secret likely to be shared.

So Barbie sits in jail while the government ostensibly takes more time to prepare the prosecution case. The trial, at first scheduled for late 1983, then for sometime this year, is now vaguely planned for 1985.

Some State Department sources suspect that Barbie is stalling in hopes that France, now 71 and reportedly in frail health, will die strongly with the thought that French authorities are delaying Barbie's trial out of fear of his revelation.

Footnote: Beate Klarsfeld, the international Nazi hunter who tracked Barbie down, disagreed strongly with the thought that French authorities are delaying Barbie's trial out of fear of his revelation. "He has no names to reveal," she said. Ms. Klarsfeld said the trial would take place next year.

Jim McCavanagh willing to serve

To the Editor:

I have known Jim McCavanagh since he was a boy growing up in Homestead Park. Having watched him mature, marry, raise a family, become a local independent businessman, serve as town director, and a state legislator, I can truly say that he is most deserving of re-election to the state House of Representatives.

Jim is the type of person who responds to the needs of people and our community. He is not the type of person who gets involved in something just for his own good.

I urge all voters in the 12th Assembly District to vote for Jim McCavanagh. He is truly a fine man and we are fortunate to have someone with his sincere interest in our community willing to serve us.

Mercier's ideas are destructive

To the Editor:

Your editorial endorsement of James McCavanagh for the 12th Assembly District race over his opponent, Jon Mercier, hits the nail on the head when you speak of Mercier's "bizarre positions."

Every position that Mercier has taken in the campaign has been touched with flakiness. These positions have run the gamut from groundless attacks on McCavanagh about sponsoring legislation, to the present support by Mercier of the "Delaware Plan."

Every state employee should be aware of the destructive power of Mercier's new proposal. The fact is that all departments of state government have been operating on a shoe-string for years — all of them: transportation, mental health, mental retardation, higher education, regulatory agencies, etc., and to the public's net cost.

What a difference a 1 or 2 percent more in various budgets would have made as far as meeting the state's obligations is concerned. And Mercier proposes that agencies receive only 98 percent of their budgeted needs!

To be sure, the state administration has not been blameless in its budgeting practices. Agency budget proposals are not really created to objectively meet statutory or moral obligations, but are crafted so as to not higher than the revenues that can be gathered at no political cost. The result: The state skimps so much that the public suffers. And Mercier wants to accentuate the decline in state services, already at a low ebb.

What is needed in a state legislator is someone who knows what he is talking about, one who is willing to learn, not someone with an endless succession of mad-hat schemes and off-the-wall statistics. The 12th district race is supposedly close. Let us hope that rationally in the person of Jim McCavanagh prevails.

Support man who gets the job done

To the Editor:

This election year, the voters in the 12th Assembly District have a choice between two men who appear to have different approaches to representing us in the state Legislature.

I am supporting the man who I believe wants to get the job done first, and not spend a lot of time making fancy speeches.

Vote for worker, not just listener

To the Editor:

I had a little trouble following the logic of the Herald's endorsement of James McCavanagh.

Two years ago, a veteran legislator advised Mr. McCavanagh to "shut up and listen" for his first term.

Mr. McCavanagh took this advice.

You cite this favorably, as a reason for endorsing Mr. McCavanagh.

I hope we pay legislators, even freshman legislators, for doing more than sitting and listening. Should we reward a legislator who does just that, with a second term?

I've known Jon Mercier for many years and know that he is a hard worker. He is a good listener; however, he listens, then acts rather than listens and sits.

If we want a legislator who isn't just there, if we want someone who will work hard for Manchester, then we should vote for Jon Mercier.

Questions about Cassano's record

To the Editor:

Director Stephen Cassano aspires for higher office. He should clear up a few matters of interest to us common folk. I understand from newspaper reports that teacher groups are looking for a possible 50 percent increase in starting salaries, up to $24,000 for 180 days or 36 weeks. Then upgrade their wage scale to $48,000.

How do you plan to satisfy their requests? A state personal income tax as some teachers want? Using the $150 million state surplus? Increasing town tax rate?

2. Is it true that you suggested giving the town manager a $3,000 raise after the town budget hearings were closed? As chairman of the real estate committee of the Board of Directors, you are

Swenson needed in the Legislature

To the Editor:

It is a distinct honor and privilege for me to endorse state Rep. Elsie "Biz" Swenson for re-election from the 13th Assembly District.

Biz has proven to be an exceptional legislator. She has the capacity to understand complicated issues and make the tough decisions. Her service on the Government Administration and Elections and Human Services committees has been outstanding.

Biz brings to the Legislature qualities and experience which are crucial to a representative government. She is not a "politician" in the usual sense of the word. Her concerns are the people of her district and of Manchester. Biz is able to concentrate on her needs, for she has no greater goal than serving as state representative.

The sensitivity and caring Biz brings to the House have been of great help to all our members. In a day and age when too often we look at issues from a sterile perspective, Biz is able to articulate the real human impact of our actions.

We need Biz Swenson in the state Legislature. I am sure the voters of the 13th District will have the wisdom to return this most able and dedicated representative on Election Day, Nov. 6.

Mercier develops realistic agenda

To the Editor:

It is with pleasure that I write to endorse Jonathan Mercier, the Coif nection House of Representatives from the 12th Assembly District.

I have had the opportunity to meet and talk with Jon, and I have been extremely impressed with his grasp of the issues and his clear understanding of the needs of his community. Jon has a legislative agenda we have discussed which is realistic and serves the needs of Manchester's 12th District.

Jon Mercier will prove to be an outstanding legislator, and I am pleased to endorse him for state representative.

Thompson better for 13th district

To the Editor:

As a former resident of the 13th Assembly District, I would like to take this occasion to urge all residents of that district to cast their votes for John W. Thompson, the Democratic candidate for the 13th Assembly District.

Your votes for John W. Thompson will entitle you to a representative who truly captures his opponent's campaign slogan: "People Before Politics." As former mayor of Manchester, Mr. Thompson opened his office to the public. He was willing to hear any grievance, and he was willing to take a stand on each and every one of those grievances and complaints. The compliments he modestly credited to his constituency.

Support man who gets the job done

To the Editor:

This election year, the voters in the 12th Assembly District have a choice between two men who appear to have different approaches to representing us in the state Legislature.

I am supporting the man who I believe wants to get the job done first, and not spend a lot of time making fancy speeches.

I am sure his actions will only enhance his already excellent reputation.

John Thompson has promised the constituents of the 13th Assembly District that he will "try much more vigorously to find solutions" to those problems and issues that they face. This is not idle political Bridge Finding a way to the dummy By James Jacoby. South was a little disappointed with his partner's vulnerable pre-emptive three-bid. He mentally congratulated himself for not bidding seven, and then immediately misplayed the small slam. He won the opening lead with his spade queen, played king of clubs and a low club toward dummy. When West showed out on the second club, discarding a heart, declarer had no way to make the hand. Six club tricks are enough to make the slam, if they can be taken. If South plays the club by leading first a low club from his hand to dummy's nine, he will succeed unless West originally held all four of the defender's clubs. If East wins the queen, South can subsequently overtake the Integrity unit causes stir HARTFORD — Prosecutors say a proposal to create a public integrity unit to deal exclusively with government corruption would not lead to "witch hunts," but other officials are skeptical of the plan. Chief State's Attorney Austin J. McQuigan has announced the unit within his office "to corruption cases so that the process is a normal part of the business of investigation and prosecution." McQuigan's announcement came after Monday's conviction of William V. Carbone, a former Transportation Department supervisor, on eight felony charges. Waterbury Attorney Timothy Moynihan, who represented Carbone, reacted with cynicism. "I think it smacks of selective prosecution," he said. "It involves targeting one individual or one group and then looking for some criminal violation to charge the individual or group with."

Johnson discounts rates STAFFORD — Johnson Memorial Hospital plans to start offering reduced emergency room rates after for treatment of minor ailments in an effort to compete with the walk-in centers. Hospital spokesman Michael Helechu said patients will be charged $30 to $35 for non-emergency care instead of the usual $750 to $750 a day. "We want to be able to provide the full range of medical care, from minor to intensive, 24 hours a day," Helechu said. The charges do not include X-rays, tests and medicine. Helechu noted patients usually shy away from the emergency room for care that could be provided by a family doctor or clinic because of the cost.

Mrs. Carter raps Reagan HARTFORD — Former First Lady Rosalynn Carter has criticized President Reagan's stands on arms control and the federal deficit while defending her husband's record on foreign policy. Mrs. Carter said Reagan has followed a policy of "belligerence" in dealing with other nations that has cost the United States respect overseas and also swelled budget deficits threatening the future back at home. "I don't know a country in the world that we have a better relationship with than we did four years ago," she told reporters Wednesday after addressing a regional conference of the National Council of Community Mental Health Centers. Mrs. Carter said she and her husband just returned from a trip to Latin America and "the United States certainly is not standing tall down there."

Allion attorney files appeal NEW HAVEN — The defense attorney for Guillermo Allion has filed an appeal with the Connecticut Supreme Court in an attempt to overturn Allion's conviction on charges he bled his wife and her parents to death. John R. Williams said he is claiming that a biased jury heard the case and the public defenders who represented Allion during the trial did not have adequate time to prepare a defense. Williams also said the public defenders had been intimidated by a member of the Public Defender Services Commission who is related by marriage to the victims' family.

1.8 million signed up Voter registration sets record levels

By Mark A. Duovis United Press International HARTFORD — The state's chief elections official hopes that next week's voter turnout will hit an all-time high with a record 1.8 million people registered to vote. Secretary of the State Julia H. Tashjian said Wednesday that voter registration is up 11.6 percent over last year and 5.8 percent over 1980 when the last presidential election was held. Both the size of the increase and the total number of people registered to vote set new records, Tashjian said at a news conference where she released the registration figures. Democrats continue to lead Republicans easily in registrations, but the GOP made greater gains in terms of percentages over last year than in 1980. In comparison to 1980, according to the figures, Tashjian said she hopes a record number of voters will turn out Tuesday, though she said she didn't expect the turnout in percentage to match the record of 80 percent set back in 1968. "I personally would love to see a turnout in the upper 90s," Tashjian said, "but realistically I would assume some place around 83 percent." Both Democratic and Republican leaders took heart in the registration figures, which showed 718,772 Democrats, 477,499 Republicans, 608,613 unaffiliated voters and 898 minor party registrations. Democratic State Chairman James M. Fitzgerald said the record for Democratic registrations is evidence his party "is alive and well in the state of Connecticut." "Our job now is to get out the voters of next Tuesday so that all of our candidates can benefit from this major increase in the Democratic rolls," he said. Peter W. Gold, executive director of the state Republican Party, said that although Democrats still lead in registrations, the GOP was pleased with the 52,000 voters it added to its files. "By any standard, it's a record-breaking year," said Gold, who also said polls show that many of the newly registered Democrats will vote for President Reagan next week.

Kennedy raps Reagan for big deficits

WATERBURY (UPI) — President Reagan campaigns on promises and avoids tough issues like the federal deficit and extravagant defense spending. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., has charged. "Ronald Reagan is the biggest spender in all American history," Kennedy told a cheering crowd Wednesday in the second of two campaign stops in Connecticut to support Walter Mondale and the statewide Democratic ticket. "He acts as if he hadn't happened," he said of the federal budget shortfall. "If $20 billion deficits were wrong under the Democrats, then $200 billion deficits are equally wrong under the Republican administration." Kennedy was joined by Gov. William A. O'Neill, Sen. Christopher Dodd, Rep. William R. Roth and several other Democratic leaders and candidates for rallies in New Haven and Waterbury. Hundreds of people turned out for Kennedy's speech on the New Haven Green and an estimated 2,500 jammed a hall and spilled outside on the grounds of Hamilton Park in Waterbury. Reagan drew thousands to the Waterbury Green last month and Kennedy lashed out at the president for his speech that day which invoked the names of presidents Roosevelt, Truman and John F. Kennedy. "The Waterbury crowd roared when Kennedy said, 'Ronald Wilson Reagan has no right to quote John Fitzgerald Kennedy.'" "They (Republicans) have never really seen or understood the harm their policies have done to millions of average Americans," Kennedy added.

Schools get new staff

BOLTON—Two new staff members were hired recently in the Bolton schools.

West Hartford resident Ann Green will begin work Nov. 13 as the new Bolton Center School guidance counselor and Bolton High School Cooperative Work Experience coordinator. She will replace Joanne Levy, who moved to Arizona early this year.

Elizabeth O'Brien of Marlborough is the new school psychiatrist, replacing Carol Rice, who resigned last summer to have a baby.

Green has worked as a guidance counselor at Avon Middle School and as a youth counselor for the Capitol Region Education Council Youth Work Experience Program.

O'Brien was formerly school psychologist in the Norwich public schools.

Meet town manager Sunday

COVENTRY—The Town Council will hold a reception Sunday for the new town manager, David L. Berner, and his wife, Bonnie.

The event will be held in the board room of the Town Hall at 5 p.m.

Berner, a Rice Lake, Wis., native, moved to Coventry in September when he was appointed town manager.

Ramp ready for Nov. 6

BOLTON—A ramp into the Community Hall, installed about one year ago, will be available to handicapped voters on Election Day.

The Senior Citizens' Committee is urging townspeople not to let wheelchairs, crutches, canes, walkers or leg casts prevent them from casting their ballots.

The ramp is on the south side of the Community Hall at 222 Bolton Center Road.

Polling place moved

COVENTRY—The Second Voting District polling place for the Nov. 6 election will be the Coventry Presbyterian Church at the corner of Route 44 and Trowbridge Road.

The polls will not be at the usual location, the Second Congregational Church, because church officials were not able to guarantee that the community house would be available all day, according to a news release from the town registrars of voters, Sandra D. Ashley and Barbara Johnson.

Andover OKs plow purchase

ANDOVER—Residents at a town meeting Monday approved a $14,000 purchase of a truck and plow to clear snow from around town buildings.

The three-quarter ton truck is to supplement the larger road-plowing trucks the town already has. In past winters, a road truck has been diverted from clearing town roads to plow around Andover Elementary School and the Town Office Building, town officials said.

Toastmasters Virginia Smith no longer fears speaking in front of a group

By Nancy Pappas Herald Reporter

Public speaking isn't anything new to Virginia Smith of Spring Street.

She served a term as president of the PTA at Martin Elementary School. She earned her master's degree in business administration from the University of Connecticut. And she was regularly asked to speak in front of groups, both in St. Mary's and in Manchester.

She may have seemed self-assured on the outside, but inside, said Smith, she was suffering from nerves and shyness.

"It was a real ordeal for me, whenever I had to get up and speak," she said recently.

That was the case today, too. She said her public speaking skills are improving; she feels far more poised in front of groups; and she is teaching a course in managerial communications at Manchester Community College.

Here's help

Have a speech to give? Here are some tips from Toastmasters International:

1. Select a topic which can be covered in the length of time you are expected to speak. Goals will vary, of course, depending upon whether you are presenting a 90-minute lecture in a college classroom, or a three-minute autobiography at a Welcome Wagon meeting.

2. Select a limited number of main points, then expand by the use of examples, stories and anecdotes. Make the point, repeat it in different words, illustrate the point, then state it once more. Handled properly, this will not seem repetitious to the audience, and it makes your speech far more effective. According to the Toastmasters' manual, if you merely state a fact and then continue with the talk, most of the audience will miss the point.

3. Plan an interesting opening sentence. This doesn't necessarily mean a joke. But audiences will wake up, and retain more of what you say in the body of the address, if you capture their attention in those first few moments.

4. Select a good way to conclude the talk. Research indicates that people best remember the last thing they have heard.

5. Speak from notes on index cards rather than a fully-typed text. A written speech encourages you to read to the audience, which is appropriate only in limited circumstances. Your speech has far greater impact when you are speaking to, rather than reading at, the audience. Many speakers write out the entire speech, break it down into major sections, assign a key word to each section and finally jot only those key words.

6. On the other hand, there may be sections in any speech which ought to be read aloud. For example, to quote another authority accurately or to present figures or detailed plans, you would read from prepared text. However, try to recapture the appearance of candor as quickly as possible.

Virginia Smith of Spring Street is a member of Toastmasters International. She said the club has developed her public-speaking skills.

"Peter Fusscas believes our working families deserve, better. That's why he voted against double digit state spending and 350 million in new taxes."

"Peter Fusscas believes people deserve safer neighborhoods. That's why he supported manpower increases for our state police, and a state-wide crime stopper program."

"Peter Fusscas believes when government overtaxes you, it should return your money. That's why he wanted a special session to return the 275 million surplus the State will see at the end of this year."

"During the Reagan's 33 state dinners, these precious favors have often gone to their sparkly pals from Hollywood or moguls from big business. Or as comedienne Joan Rivers quipped after one such affair of state: "No scum here."

For example, at last June's event in honor of President and Mrs. J.R. Jayawardene of Sri Lanka, the "glitterati" included actors Robert Conrad and Fred MacMurray, impersonator Rich Little, Texas magnate Nelson Dupler Hunt and Dallas Cowboy coach Tom Landry.

TOM LANDRY? What's his tie to Sri Lanka?"

"He doesn't necessarily relate to Sri Lanka," acknowledges James Rosebush, the First Lady's chief of staff. "But he adds a certain dimension that could be interesting to the visiting head of state."

Seasoned party-watchers say that means Landry is a powerful Reaganite in Texas and an invitation to the White House is a gracious payoff.

Other luminaries who have graced the State Dining Room since Reagan took office are Brooke Shields, Olivia de Havilland, Jimmy Stewart, Burt Reynolds, Carol Burnett, Eva Gabor, Lillian Gish, Larry Hagman and Rock Hudson.

Mrs. Reagan often telephones her invitations to the state dinners. The mood of the times is also a prime ingredient.

"Entertainment selected for Reagan affairs of state has also been big names of the stage and screen. Gretchen Poston, social secretary under the Carters, has produced plays like "Las Vegas East."

They featured the likes of Frank Sinatra, Wayne Newton, Julio Iglesias and Mel Torme.

When the Carters occupied the Pennsylvania Ave. address, there was less emphasis on "glitter" and more on the arts. Poston adds, citing a piano recital by Rudolf Serkin and a poetry reading by Cicely Tyson as exemplary.

"And the Carter guest list tended to be more academic, more in the sciences and arts," she recalls.

"There was more emphasis on the private, non-official person."

AMONG the common folk invited by the Carters to the White House were those who took the presidential hopeful and his family into their homes while they campaigned cross-country.

An athletic buff, President Gerald Ford was partial to inviting a lot of sports figures to state dinners," remembers Maria Downs, social secretary during his administration. When Jimmy Connors was a guest, his behavior was so sweet that it shattered his reputation as tennis's bad boy.

"It was during a state dinner in the Rose Garden under a white tent," adds Downs. "There was a gentleman sitting in Connors' seat and the man wouldn't move. Connors realized the man had had a few drinks too many. So he quietly found out where the man was supposed to be sitting and said: "I'll just go sit over there."

President Ford saw what happened and wanted to make it up to him. So I called Connors and they had breakfast together and a swim at the White House. He wanted to know if the president would like to also play a game of tennis, but the president said: "No way!"

The First Family's preferences are only part of what characterizes state dinners. The mood of the times is also a prime ingredient.

"As the Vietnam war wore on, we wouldn't have had a Peter, Paul and Mary as entertainment," remembers Bess Abel, social secretary for the Lyndon Johnsons. The folk trio, who did perform at the Johnson White House early in the administration, were avid anti-war activists.

"You also wouldn't have dancing anymore — it wasn't time for it," adds Abel. "You didn't want people to say, 'they are dancing it up at the White House.' What we did gravitate toward was ballet as entertainment — that was relatively safe."

Nords fly by the Whalers

By Bob Papetelli
Herald Sports Writer

HARTFORD — Don't let the early standing fool you. The Quebec Nordiques still play major league hockey. They can shoot and they can score.

Above all else, though, the Nordiques can skate. Faster than a speeding bullet. More powerful than a local motor.

The harsh reality of Adams Division competition slapped the Whalers smack in the face Wednesday night at the Civic Center, as Quebec buzzed Hartford, 5-3.

Who would've been nice for the Whalers, not so much to strengthen their hold on first place, but to open up more ground between them and last place. The paramount concern in Hartford this year is not to finish on top, it's to stay out of the cellar.

"It just escaped us, we had a chance to put a nail in that room's coffin," said Whaler defenseman Chris Kotsopoulos, of the Nordiques, currently at the bottom of the division. "We would've been eight points ahead of them, but we're still in first until someone knocks us out."

The Buffalo Sabres will have something to say about the Whalers' precarious position when they engage Hartford (6-11) in a home-and-home series Friday and Saturday night. Buffalo, which hosts Friday's game, is undefeated home with a 5-0 record. The Sabres are winless on the road (0-4-0).

After an exciting and exceptionally rugged first period (30 minutes in penalties), Quebec (4-6-1) stormed the gates in the final two stanzas, dominating play with an endless attack that featured the swift line of Dale Hunter, Michel Goulet and Tony McKegney.

"When they're moving, it's one of the best in the league," said Goulet, who has been named to the all-star team. "They're moving, it's one of the best in the league," said Goulet, who has been named to the all-star team.

The line accounted for 11 points, with McKegney notching a three-goal hat trick. McKegney also had an assist, while Hunter added four assists and Goulet chipped in with a goal and two assists.

White Hunter Goulet McKegney was the difference, the Nordiques' other line — the one with the name "Stassy" written all over it.

Bill made it prescient when Peter Stassy, from brother Martin, flicked a wrist-high shot into a net between Milen and the right post at 8:46 of the third period to regain the lead for Quebec, 4-3. The Whalers had tied it at 3:01 on a power play tally by Ron Francis 2-46 into the final stanzas, McKegney, who had put the Nordiques ahead at the end of the second stanza, sent patrons scurrying for the exits when his third marker with less than three and a half minutes left insured the victory.

"We came out a little flat tonight and they outplayed us," noted Milen, whose consistent tending kept the score from getting out of control.

One Whaler far from flat was Francis, who was the team's top contributor in virtually every facet of the game. His playmaking, defense and checking were a big factor in keeping the affair from becoming a blow-out.

But even the man with the NHL's longest consecutive point streak (11 games) couldn't stop the Nordiques Tuesday. Those guys can fly," Francis marvelled. "I tried to slow them down by hitting them, but they're big, too."

Francis was the main drive, another man-advantage situation. The 21-year-old center, set by the power play 2-37 into the contest by getting hooked to the ice by Will Paolomont, after breaking free with a nice move and moving in alone on Nordique goalie Dale Bouchard. A minute later, Francis fired a low slapper from the top of the slot. Bouchard made a pad save, but Mark Johnson was open on the left doorstep and slid a backhand in for a 1-0 lead, just 30 seconds later.

Francis leads the Whalers' all-time NHL goal scorer against Hartford, with 34 in 31 games. Francis leads the Whalers' all-time NHL goal scorer against Hartford, with 34 in 31 games.

Goulet set the tempo for the rest of the night when he gave the Nordiques a 2-1 edge within a minute of the middle period. Play revolved around the Whalers' defensive end thereafter.

Greg Malone, who managed his second goal of the season by hitting them, but they're big, too."

John Janenda has made a major contribution this year for the Manchester soccer team. He's been a stalwart on defense at stopperback.

echoed Hartford's frustration. "They were making that long pass back and we weren't able to get any offensive pressure because of it."

WHALERS NOTES: The loss was the Whalers' first at home since March 17 of last season, a 4-2 defeat to Pittsburgh. The 6-0-1 Civic Center streak, including 3-0 this year, was a team record. Quebec was 2-1 before the win. Goulet is the all-time NHL goal scorer against Hartford, with 34 in 31 games.

Kotsopoulos watched from the penalty box for the 40th minute of his career when he was called for roughing in the first period. David Jensen and Mark Fusco didn't dress for Hartford. Jensen was rested, while Fusco was sidelined with a nagging rib injury that he incurred in Chicago.

Janenda is a particular threat as a corner kicker, where he has charged into the crease to head in goals on several occasions. In reflecting on the unbeaten season, Janenda admitted it was discussed as a team goal "but it was a lot tougher to do."

Regarding the upcoming state tournament, of which Manchester should be one of the Class 1A favorites, the captain echoed the sentiments of his teammates.

"Some people say we won't be ready because of the caliber of teams we have played," Janenda said, referring to the Indians' relatively mild regular season schedule. "But, tough competition brings out the best in us, we peak against fine teams."

"We're definitely capable of winning it, but we'll need that good attitude and a totally committed, 100 per cent effort," he added, viewing teams from the defending Danbury, Newington and Glasstown as top contenders.

Turnout was best yet

After a rocky start — going 1-3 thru four games — the Manchester high football team has turned things around with three consecutive wins.

The triumphs have all come against CCC Eastern Division rivals and that fact, coupled with Bockle's upset loss to South Windsor, moved the Silk Towners into first place for the time being.

While the Manchester varsity has experienced success, so too has the freshman squad guided by Mike Masse. This is Masse's fifth year as coach.

Masse still has 52 with his team, of which 37 are ninth graders. It's the biggest turnout ever.

Masse has had plenty of success in recent years. His 1983 team was unbeaten at 7-0, with the previous year seeing a 4-2-1 mark logged. A 6-0 record was logged in '81.

And Masse says his present team, currently 3-0, will be sending something the varsity team always is looking for — linemen. "We have some good size, maybe the best linemen in regards to size and quality we've had," says Masse, adding that some are already in the 170-180 pound range.

From last year's unbeaten squad, a dozen are with Ron Cournoyer's program at the high school. Masse was just guessing but he thinks about 25 of this year's ninth graders will go out for football at the high school in '85.

Speaking of midges, there will be a championship game for the Manchester Midget Football League title played Friday night at Mt. Nebo at 6-30 between the Chargers and Eagles. The clubs wound up double-acted after the six-week regular season, each at 1-1.

Celtics up tempo, down Nets

By Frederick Waterman

BOSTON — The Boston Celtics hoisted their 19th NBA flag Wednesday night, then showed the New Jersey Nets how championships are won.

Led by Larry Bird's 20 points, 13 rebounds and six assists, and Robert Parish's 25 points and 15 rebounds, the Celtics cruised to a 116-105 victory in their season home opener.

Boston, 2-0, which trailed by as many as 7 in the first half, dominated the fourth quarter with a 10-point surge which the Nets saw coming, but couldn't stop.

"There's just something about the Celtics coming down the stretch," said Nets power forward Buck Williams.

Nets coach Stan Albeck acknowledged the inevitability.

"They strap you in a chair and explode a cyanide bomb underneath it. You can see it coming like a big cloud of smoke," he said.

Bird savored the pre-game ceremonies, which included distributing the championship rings, but he was not in the mood to celebrate.

"It's a very special night for the Celtics, it's the end of a hard work, but when the ball goes up at the game's start, you've got to be ready," said the Celtics' All-Star forward.

Bird and guard Quinn Buckner, starting in place of injured Danny Ainge, each scored 4 points during the final-period surge.

Boston's K.C. Jones learned his team would not be pined for the Nets, 1-3, because of five days' rest since Friday's opener in Detroit.

"I was worried about us getting in a step," he said. "The team was flat, he responded, 'Yes, and they had a right to be.'"

"In the second half, we were getting what we wanted, but they weren't falling. That was probably due to our conditioning."

Otis Birdsong had 21 points to lead New Jersey. Darvin Cook scored 15. Boston's Dennis Johnson added 21.

The Nets were playing without Darryl Dawkins, sidelined due to back spasms, and Michael Ray Richardson, who was ejected in the second quarter after collecting his second technical foul.

Janenda led way for MHS booters

The Manchester High soccer team's undefeated season was the result of a solid team effort, but several 18-year-olds did the heavy lifting that allowed just eight goals all year.
