Pentagon pushing shelter program

By Richard C. Gross
United Press International
WASHINGTON — The Pentagon is pressing its program to turn 600 military facilities into shelters for the homeless as the government urged an advocate for the indigent protesting administration policies to end his 48-day hunger strike.

Secretary Lawrence Korb. At the same time, an internal Pentagon memorandum indicated the Pentagon's "Shelters for the Homeless Program" has begun to gather steam nationwide with another five areas asking for Defense Department facilities.

Reagan's lead strong; Mondale fights on

By Clark F. Richards
United Press International
President Ronald Reagan and Vice President George Bush, appearing confident of re-election, stumped for GOP congressional candidates Friday while Walter Mondale said the president was "out to lunch" on issues that affect people.

In Cleveland, at a rally in front of the Cuyahoga County Courthouse, the president said the Democratic leadership of the House of Representatives, "Reagan said, 'This is just one more illustration of how clear the choice is in this campaign.'

And you helped me

Giovanni Ronci walked into a local television station, which had appealed for help for a Mexican girl with a defective heart, and stunned employees by pulling out $10,000 in cash to pay for an operation.

Ronci, 25, a local restaurateur and Mexican national, told the station KCTV he had heard of 12-year-old Sylvia Olvera's plight.

"One thing we were taught as kids was to be generous and to give to those who don't have," said Ronci.

Sylvia, a deaf mute living on a ranch in Baja California, has an open artery in her heart that should have closed at birth. The irregularity causes her heart to beat faster than normal, which is leading to a heart attack.

Her plight was discovered by Diane Reighard of El Cajon, who met the girl on a visit to the ranch. She told the story to the station, which broadcast an appeal for money.

Ronci saw the broadcast and decided to help. He remembered the 25 gold Mexican coins he had, and took them to a coin dealer for cash.

Drunken Commies

Drunkness in the Soviet Union is reaching critical proportions, according to letters to Pravda.

"Despite its very old age drunkness refuses to retire," a reader from Stavropol wrote the newspaper. "It is shameful and unpleasant to see so many drunk people in the streets."

Pravda said it receives more and more letters about drunkness among women and teenagers.

It printed one letter from a 10-year-old girl in Leningrad.

"Dear newspaper, I ask your help," the letter said. "I watched a TV program about medical help for men and women who drink vodka," it said.

"Please take my mother for medical treatment because vodka is very bitter — I tried it," the girl said. "I like fruits but my mother never buys them. She spends all our money on vodka. There are many children in our school whose fathers, mothers and sisters drink vodka."

Musical vibrations

A musical based on the Beach Boys is set to send good vibrations through New York when it premieres March 17 at the Entertainer Theatre.

The score for "Surf'n' USA: The New Beach Boys Musical," features two dozen of the Boys' hits, including "Woolly Bunch of Girls," "California Girls," and "Help Me Relax." And the show has even said they're considering writing some new tunes just for the show, although they're not performing in it.

"Surf'n' USA" is based on a book by Danny Jacobsen and Barry Vign, who have written for TV's "Soap" and "Fame." It's produced by Eddie Davis, Dennis Ross directs.

Drifting bottle found

A drift bottle released from a National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration ship more than 1 1/2 years ago near Christmas Island in the Pacific Ocean has been returned after its discovery on Mindanao in the Philippines, 4,000 miles away.

Richard S. Shomura of NOAA said Thursday the bottle actually was found June 15, 1983 in White Beach in Cagway, a town located in Surigao Sur, Mindanao.

Shomura said it was not known why the identification card inside the bottle was not returned sooner.

Oceanographers use drift bottles to study surface currents.

Here's advice on care for car

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The days when gas stations checked oil and washed windshields for one low price are over.

To aid in simple car maintenance, a new book titled "Simple Service" from its Driver magazine works which they ordered removed from the public libraries in the northern English town.

Local officials argued Thursday about the action of a town council meeting in secret that ordered the removal of the offending titles because of public complaints.

In addition to 400 medical test books ordered dumped because of their sexual content, the titles included "Genius and the Goddess" by celebrated writer Aldous Huxley, J.P. Donleavy's "The Beauty Beast" and "The Virgin Soldiers," a comic misadventure of a group of young conscripts.

The book on the natterjack, a common British species, is plentiful on local sand dunes and Sefton officials believe that reading the book might inspire local youngsters to harass and harm them on the beach.

1-85 exit ramps are moved
As of Monday the eastbound and off ramps at exit 30 on Interstate 85 will move from Tolland Turnpike beside the Collier shopping plaza to Buckland Street, according to a state Department of Transportation news release.

The existing eastbound ramps on Tolland Turnpike will be closed off and replaced with an embankment, still to be constructed, and bridges connected with new Tolland Turnpike bridges over the highway.

Temporary signs and illuminated message boards will direct traffic on and off the new ramps.

Thompson lists tax stand

The $40 million in revenue expected this year from the state tax on real estate transactions should be given to towns and cities for use in repairing roads and bridges. Democratic candidate John Thompson said this week.

Thompson is seeking out Republican state Rep. Elsie Swenson in the 12th Assembly District.

In a news release Wednesday, Thompson said the state government is expected to run a surplus of more than $100 million, while local property taxes are stretched to the limit.

The tax of $5 per $1,000 on the price of a property being sold is collected by town clerks and sent to the state.

Thompson said the tax was passed in June 1983 when the state faced severe budget problems, but that crisis has passed and other taxes levied at the time make it unlikely that it will recur.

Cheney wait for taxpayers

Some job duties in town it seems might be too strictly defined.

Several people were kept waiting outside the Mary Cheney Library Wednesday afternoon until the custodial firm responsible for opening the doors arrived.

One woman who called the Herald said she waited with her 3-year-old daughter until 1:30 — a half hour after the library is scheduled to open — before the doors were opened.

"There was a whole crowd of people out there," she said. "We waited and waited."

The woman said two librarians later told her they were forbidden to open the doors because it is the job of the custodians.

But library Director John Jackson said there was nothing in the contract with the custodial service, Colonial Empire Inc., to prevent librarians from opening the library's doors.

"There's nothing to forbid it," he said. "We can do it, we have done it."

Jackson said the custodians were 15 minutes late Wednesday.

"If we realized they were going to be that late, we would have jumped on it," he said.

A group of University of Connecticut employees has endorsed Democratic town Director Stephen Cassano's bid for the state Senate seat held by Republican Carl A. Zimser, R-Manchester.

Thompson favors home plan

Both senior citizens and the state budget will benefit if the state does everything possible to help elderly people remain in their homes when they do not require nursing home care, Democratic candidate John Thompson said this week.

"If a minimal contribution for a homemaker or a companion can reduce the state's contribution for nursing home care, it would be a dollar well spent," Thompson, who opposes state Rep. Elsie Swenson, R-Manchester, said in a news release.

Thompson also said he has become aware of problems agencies have in getting information about their services to the people who need them most. He said one way to distribute the information might be by having it mailed along with utility bills.

planned dinner dance has been ticketed and another fund-raiser is in the works, Beaulieu said.

The cost of the entire project has been estimated at $83,000. Plans call for the park to be landscaped and include benches and a black granite monument bearing the names of 14 Manchester men who died in the war. The monument will be modeled after the monument in Washington, D.C., honoring Vietnam veterans.

Beaulieu said his group placed the order for the monument with Manchester Monument Co. Last week it is to cost $27,000.

Some $15,000 in donations have come in from the general public. $15,000 was pledged by the Hartford Foundation for Public Giving, and another $15,000 was paid to the town by Southern New England Telephone for use in developing the park.

SNET paid the funds in return for running a new driveway along the eastern edge of the park, where it is Manchester headquarters is located and for installing several parking spaces. The land is still owned by the town, and SNET's

Both senior citizens and the state budget will benefit if the state does everything possible to help elderly people remain in their homes when they do not require nursing home care, Democratic candidate John Thompson said this week.

"If a minimal contribution for a homemaker or a companion can reduce the state's contribution for nursing home care, it would be a dollar well spent," Thompson, who opposes state Rep. Elsie Swenson, R-Manchester, said in a news release.

Thompson also said he has become aware of problems agencies have in getting information about their services to the people who need them most. He said one way to distribute the information might be by having it mailed along with utility bills.

Cheney wait for taxpayers

Some job duties in town it seems might be too strictly defined.

Several people were kept waiting outside the Mary Cheney Library Wednesday afternoon until the custodial firm responsible for opening the doors arrived.

One woman who called the Herald said she waited with her 3-year-old daughter until 1:30 — a half hour after the library is scheduled to open — before the doors were opened.

"There was a whole crowd of people out there," she said. "We waited and waited."

The woman said two librarians later told her they were forbidden to open the doors because it is the job of the custodians.

But library Director John Jackson said there was nothing in the contract with the custodial service, Colonial Empire Inc., to prevent librarians from opening the library's doors.

"There's nothing to forbid it," he said. "We can do it, we have done it."

Jackson said the custodians were 15 minutes late Wednesday.

"If we realized they were going to be that late, we would have jumped on it," he said.

planned dinner dance has been ticketed and another fund-raiser is in the works, Beaulieu said.

The cost of the entire project has been estimated at $83,000. Plans call for the park to be landscaped and include benches and a black granite monument bearing the names of 14 Manchester men who died in the war. The monument will be modeled after the monument in Washington, D.C., honoring Vietnam veterans.

Beaulieu said his group placed the order for the monument with Manchester Monument Co. Last week it is to cost $27,000.

Some $15,000 in donations have come in from the general public. $15,000 was pledged by the Hartford Foundation for Public Giving, and another $15,000 was paid to the town by Southern New England Telephone for use in developing the park.

SNET paid the funds in return for running a new driveway along the eastern edge of the park, where it is Manchester headquarters is located and for installing several parking spaces.

Block grant supporters should have fought harder

Democratic Town Chairman Theodore Cummings invited a good deal of criticism this week when he attacked those who have failed to support renewed participation in the federal Community Development Block Grant program.

Cummings blasted liberals, "so-called progressives," and others who have shied away from taking a public stand on the program. He complained that there appears to be little interest in helping people, "especially if it's people with a different skin color or from a different town."

It's also one of the reasons opponents are probably right when they predict they'll be victorious in the referendum Tuesday on whether Manchester should rejoin the CDBG program.

KEY ISSUES IN THE CAMPAIGN have been the extent of the possible forced commitment to subsidized housing and the spectre of a repeat of the discrimination lawsuit filed against Manchester after it withdrew from the program.

Manchester Spotlight James P. Sacks Herald City Editor

Manhattan illustrates the way the problem has been addressed. "We don't want somebody from Hartford telling us where to put what," one man said in a reference to subsidized housing. He warned against "fancy administrators" carrying "fancy titles."

On Oct. 2, when the Republican Town Committee considered the CDBG question, similar narrow concerns carried the day. The GOP in a count taken by secret ballot, voted 36 to 4 against participation.

SEVERAL GOP COMMITTEE MEMBERS, notably Geoffrey Naab and town Director Peter

DiRosa, exhibited less paranoia than others at the meeting, but appealing to common sense was a lost cause.

With or without CDBG participation, "Any civil rights activist can come into town and sue us," Naab pointed out. DiRosa made an appeal for consideration of facts rather than emotions.

Those facts, should anyone care to examine them, indicate that the way the issues have been presented is misleading.

HUD already has accepted Manchester's application, complete with its "zero goal" commitment to new subsidized housing.

But except for support from Cummings, the six Democratic members of the Board of Directors and the majority on a study panel led by former Mayor Matthew Moriarty Jr., the backing for renewed participation has been nearly nonexistent.

I'm not stupid," he said. Citing the national tendency for fewer and fewer people to support unpopular causes, Cummings praised Moriarty and the others who have bucked the reactionary stand of CDBG opponents such as the GOP, the MPOA and the single-issue "Concerned Citizens for Manchester Development."

He was right to say that the influential few who support rejoining the program deserve credit: they have presented their case well.

But considering what's at stake, the absence of a broader coalition backing re-entry has been disheartening.

With or without renewed participation, Manchester can be sued for discrimination. But if the 1981 federal ruling against several plaintiffs, one of them the U.S. Department of Justice, was worth anything, a new suit on those grounds won't go far.

Furthermore, the visions of vindictive lawyers waiting in the wings of President Reagan's Department of Justice to pounce on Manchester are close to ludicrous, as is the concern that HUD will force the town to put a housing project in Center Springs Park.

Return Zinsser and Fuscias

Carl Zinsser as state senator and Peter Fuscias as state representative are two legislators who seriously and consistently give attention to the need of smaller towns in their districts for expanded state police coverage.

Join me in vote for McCavanagh

As a lifelong resident of the 12th Assembly District, and a small businessman in Manchester, I feel our best interests will be served by the re-election of Jim McCavanagh on Nov. 6.

Jim McCavanagh needs your vote

Those of us who live in the 12th Assembly District may have quite different opinions as to the best presidential candidate, but on this we can agree - Jim McCavanagh has served us well.

Set priorities on Bolton work

I suggested at the Oct. 30, 1984, Bolton town hearing on capital improvements that Bolton voters vote "no" on the library-media-computer center. There are several reasons for a "no" vote besides an increase in property taxes.

Thompson helps solve problems

Approximately three weeks ago, I called Jack Thompson with a problem concerning an appropriate meeting place for a group which I and 70 other members belong to.

I recommend Jack Thompson for Congress. Jack has the ability, loyalty and integrity to do a great job in this office.

Teddy Kennedy is making a lot of thunder these days claiming that "Ronald William Reagan has no right to quote John Fitzgerald Kennedy." Actually, the reverse is true: It is Teddy who has no right to quote his brother.

Parents, seniors: Core curriculum better for Bolton

A great statesman once said that it was the duty of government to look after those "in the dregs of life, the shadow of life, and the sunset of life."

Carl Zinsser's distinguished legislative record shows that he too is a statesman on behalf of the elderly and the innocent. There are many senior citizens now enjoying their hard-earned retirement. Today, they are threatened by ever-rising energy costs.

What's at stake here are things like loans to low-income homeowners, improvements to the Senior Citizens' Center and an elevator at the Municipal Building.

Support proposal for Bolton High

As a longtime resident of Bolton and a concerned parent of three school-aged children, I write this letter in support of the proposal to add the library-media-computer center to Bolton High School.

Vote Republican to protect people

In this election, many charges and countercharges have been made. Most of the arguments are based on interpretation of how laws are made and processed.

The Democratic administration in Connecticut is loaded with cases of corruption and mismanagement, yet those running the Democratic ticket are busy arguing semantics of how votes were made.

Plan for better Bolton education

Over 20 years ago, when I first entered the teaching profession, education was still feeling the "aftereffects" of the Soviet satellite Sputnik. The nation responded to that event by providing extraordinary resources to meet the needs of American education.

A number of years ago, Manchester gave up an invaluable opportunity to directly channel federal dollars in a way that is meaningful to the various needs of the community.

In the past, Manchester has benefited by the use of CDBG funds in the area of recreation by the repair, rehabilitation or conversion of the handicapped of the Verplanck and Globe Hollow swimming pools.

Let's be sensible on Bolton plans

It is possible to plan Bolton's four projects for 50 years. I moved to Bolton in 1938. The town has grown from a population of 800 to about 4,000 today.

In 1949, the first "consolidated" school opened its doors (our oldest elementary school). Two additions were made since then: a north wing and a south wing. Then we built a new "5-8" school. The school began its first year in 1963.

The Bolton school system has been spending the last two years developing and adopting proposals to improve an already quality system.

Svetlana returns home

Joseph Stalin's daughter, Svetlana Alliluyeva, who defected to the West in 1967, has returned to Moscow and her Soviet citizenship has been restored, the official Tass news agency said Friday.

China's Deng calls for purge

PEKING — Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping, urging older officers to give way to younger and more competent ones, called Friday for a purge of ranking military leaders from the world's largest standing army.

"I hope to see more open-minded people in the army," Deng told a meeting of the powerful Central Military Commission, of which he is chairman.

Calm restored to prison

ATLANTA — More than 500 Cuban prisoners were held under close security in the federal penitentiary gymnasium and factory Friday following a riotous night of fires and window-breaking put down with tear gas and high pressure fire hoses.

At least four guards were slightly injured during the melee — the second in less than three weeks — that broke out in the five-story cellblock B of the sprawling high security federal penitentiary Thursday night.

It was not known how many, if any, prisoners were injured.

Visitors were allowed inside the prison grounds but guards in towers using megaphones stopped news reporters from entering and ordered them back to the sidewalk.

Polish government on alert

WARSAW, Poland — Thousands of mourners Friday chanted railroads and roads leading to Warsaw on the eve of the funeral of a slain pro-Solidarity priest as his body was carried across the nation for burial in his church.

The government was believed to be on alert for any trouble arising from public outrage over the 37-year-old Rev. Jerzy Popieluszko's death at the hands of three members of the secret police.

But police were careful to avoid a show of force that could provoke a clash with supporters of the outlawed Solidarity union.

About 5,000 people kept a vigil outside a hospital in Bialystok, 100 miles east of Warsaw near the Soviet border, where the funeral procession to Warsaw began at mid-afternoon.

The priest's body, recovered Tuesday from a reservoir outside Torun in northern Poland, had been taken to an autopsy to Bialystok.

Trick-or-treaters found dead

DECATUR, Ill. — The bodies of two young girls missing since they went trick-or-treating Halloween night were discovered by police Friday, apparently strangled in a housing project.

A third girl, Patricia Hall, 7, was found alive, hiding in the closet of an apartment in the housing project a short distance from the children's homes.

The three girls had been subjects of an intense search since parents reported their disappearance late Thursday.

Police said they were searching for a man with a rusty, four-door Oldsmobile.

Police did not reveal the identities of the dead girls, who were last seen Wednesday at 6 p.m. but Patricia had been accompanied on the Halloween outing by her sister Theresa, 9, and their cousin, Sherry Gordon, 12.

The bodies were found in the Longview Housing project a block-and-a-half away from where they lived. They were in locked apartments that were being remodeled.

Jobless rate isn't better

WASHINGTON — The nation's unemployment rate lingered at 7.4 percent in October, with 8.4 million people looking for work just prior to Election Day, the Labor Department reported Friday.

The latest jobless rate was the same as September and just 0.1 percentage point below the 7.5 percent rate when President Reagan took office in January, 1981.

During the depth of the recession, at the midpoint of the Reagan term, unemployment went up to 10.7 percent for two months.

At least 500 are dead in Indian strife

By Paul Anderson United Press International

NEW DELHI, India — Army troops opened fire Friday on rioters in more than 20 Indian cities in efforts to crush three days of chaos triggered by the assassination of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi that left more than 500 dead, neighborhoods in flames and Sikhs prey to marauding Hindu mobs.

"As India tumbled into the worst communal violence since its independence in 1947, Gandhi's son and successor, Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, warned his people the bloodshed 'will destroy everything India stands for.'"

"I cannot and will not allow this," he declared. Despite the violence, Secretary of State George Shultz and other world leaders began arriving to pay homage to the slain leader of the world's most populous democracy at his ritual Hindu cremation Saturday.

Tens of thousands of mourners formed a three-mile-long line outside Mrs. Gandhi's childhood home, the Teen Murti House, and passed by the flower-covered casket of the woman who led India's 720 million people for 15 of the past 34 years.

With about 30 cities under indefinite curfew, the army struggled to crush arson attacks and mob violence against Sikhs that flared across northern India for a third day in revenge for Gandhi's assassination Wednesday by 20 Sikh bodyguards.

Police, with orders to shoot rioters and arsonists on sight, opened fire in more than 20 cities and more than 500 people were reported killed in northern India since Oct. 31, when they lived in San Diego, Calif., in 1972.

The Tass announcement came hours after the principal of a Quaker school in England said that Olga, now 13, failed to return after a mid-term break. He said that Svetlana telephoned him Oct. 22 to say she was going back to Moscow.

U.S. Gray denies bugging

UTC's Gray denies bugging

HARTFORD — Allegations he ordered the bugging and tapping of his once-neighbor appeared strongly denied Friday by United-Technologies Corp. Chairman Harry J. Gray.

"The allegations are completely false," said Gray, who has asked UTCTC's board of directors to investigate the charges made by former UTC President Richard J. Carlson.

Gray confirmed Friday he asked the board for the investigation one day after Carlson abruptly announced his resignation "for personal reasons" on Sept. 17.

Only 16 months earlier Gray had named Carlson president and ordered his resignation in the wake of the $15 billion company, the world's biggest builder of jet engines and the 8th largest manufacturer in the country.

But the loss of military jet engine contracts to arch rival General Electric, and a clash over how to deal with the Pentagon over the issue led to a bitter feud between the two, financial observers said.

Willimantic police nab 17

WILLIMANTIC — Local and state police Friday arrested 17 people and confiscated drugs, cash and weapons in what they described as a major crackdown in the Willimantic area.

The roundup began at 5 a.m. with 11 search and seizure warrants obtained by local police and members of the Eastern District Statewide Narcotics Task Force.

A state police spokesman said confiscated in the raids was $10,200 in cash, 17 ounces of cocaine valued at $4,000, a half pound of marijuana with a street value of $300, eight marijuana plants, 83 bags of heroin that sell for $25 each and approximately 200 assorted amphetamine pills.

Also seized was a 22-caliber rifle and a 12-gauge shotgun.

The 17 were presented in Windham Superior Court on charges of possession of narcotics with intent to sell and cultivation of marijuana.

Ross pleads innocent

WILLIMANTIC — Michael B. Ross pleaded innocent Friday to two of the six murders he is accused of committing the day after officials disclosed Ross was also charged with the attempted murder of a North Carolina woman.

The 25-year-old insurance salesman appeared in Windham Superior Court to enter pleas in the deaths of Tammy Williams, 17, of Brooklyn and Debra Smith Taylor, 26, of Jewett City.

Authorities in North Carolina said 25-year-old woman, clinging to her 7-month-old baby, was dragged into a soybean field in Rolesville, raped, severely beaten and left in 1981.

Pill scam is widening

SKOKIE, Ill. (UPI) — "A couple of very clever salesmen" could have marketed bogus birth control pills that have surfaced from New York south to Florida and as far west as Denver, a spokesman for the Food and Drug Administration said Friday.

It was the largest report of counterfeiting of a widely distributed prescription drug in his history, the spokesman said.

The counterfeit pills resemble Ovulen, a popular oral contraceptive produced by G.D. Searle & Co. at its Puerto Rico plant.

Searle spokesman said. The phony pills are under-strength, the wrong shape, and are numbered and labeled to match the genuine Ovulens. The phony pills are being withdrawn from distribution because the counterfeit pills apparently carry those numbers, the firm said.

Chemists for the FDA and Searle analyzed the bogus pills as they were removed from drugstore shelves and sent to the federal agency.

Investigators for the FDA traced counterfeit pills back to Interstate Drug Exchange Inc., a Plainville, N.Y., distributor.

Searle spokesman Mark Brand said women who have pills with lot numbers 441 or 489 should return them to their pharmacy, which should determine whether they are counterfeit.

Although the pills do not provide adequate birth control, Brand said it is unlikely that the counterfeit pills would otherwise pose a health risk.

"It only takes a couple of very clever salesmen to go into the right place... and phony pills are being marketed through legitimate channels," said FDA spokesman William Griggs in Washington. "It only takes two or three sales of this type to effect this type of spread."

Connecticut In Brief

Bush visits West Haven

WEST HAVEN — Vice President George Bush told a Republican rally Friday night that Republicans are "running flat out and we're not looking over our shoulder until we cross that finish line and win this election."

Bush, making a final campaign stop before Tuesday's elections in the state where he grew up, spoke of a "new spirit of hope and optimism" in the United States under President Reagan.

"We are No. 1 again in the world and we're going to keep it that way," he told 700 supporters at West Haven High School.

Bush was stumping in West Haven for Republican Lawrence J. DeNardis, who is battling Democratic Rep. Bruce A. Morrison in a hard-fought race in the state's 3rd District.

Libertarians not on ballot

WASHINGTON — The Libertarian candidate for president Friday failed to qualify for the Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall to order Connecticut voting officials to put his name on the Nov. 6 ballot.

David P. Bergland asked Marshall on Thursday to order voting officials to place his name on the ballot even though they decide he did not submit enough signatures on qualifying petitions. The state Supreme Court agreed with the election officials.

Marshall rejected the plea without comment. Bergland can now ask another of the nine justices to review his plea or appeal to the full court, but it is unclear whether he will have the time before the election on Tuesday.

Connecticut law requires a minor party or independent candidate to submit signatures from voters equal to 1 percent of the votes cast for the office in question in the last election.

Board eyes programs for gifted pupils

HARTFORD (UPI) — A proposal to require state-wide programs for gifted students by the 1988-89 school year will be considered by the State Board of Education, officials said Friday.

Officials said the program would correct a "serious lack" of attention to the state's talented students by providing consistent teaching for gifted students from kindergarten through the senior year of high school.

No nation gives as short shrift to its talented students as we do in the United States," said Jane K. Goodman, chairwoman of the State Board of Education. "We need to pay attention to these students."

The proposal was raised in a report prepared by the Department of Education at the request of the Legislature. It would create a state-wide program within five years at a cost of $23.9 million.

Board members Wednesday will consider the report, which must be submitted to the Legislature's Education Committee by Jan. 1, although officials hope to extend the deadline to Feb. 15 to allow time for public hearings.

Officials said in the 1983-84 school year, about $7 million was spent by the state and municipal school districts on programs for gifted students.

The report noted that only about 15,000 of the 47,000 gifted students were enrolled in programs, statistics the report called "a serious lack of programs and services for all gifted and talented pupils."

"We have quite a few programs for gifted and talented throughout the state, but they're very scattered," Goodman said. "Some are good, some are terrible."

She also said the programs are not mandated and those that do exist do not cover from kindergarten to 12th grade. She said although nearly 2,000 students are enrolled in art programs, no art program exists for all grades.

The report also points out that most current teachers in the programs have not had any special training. The report would require the number of full-time teachers involved in gifted programs to rise from 230 to 500.

Goodman said the board also will study a plan to create a state high school for some of the state's gifted students who excel in mathematics, science, music and art.

The proposed special high school for the gifted would cost the state $50,000 and would be built after another $50,000 was raised through private donations, the report said.

O'Neill launches statewide drive for the hungry

HARTFORD (UPI) — Gov. William A. O'Neill Friday launched a Thanksgiving food drive he called the first statewide effort in the nation, saying he hoped no one in Connecticut would go hungry during the holidays.

Officials said the ongoing drive, which also helps stock the shelves of the 200 food banks, soup kitchens and pantries across the state in time for the lean and difficult winter months.

"We're talking about a program no other state in the union has," said O'Neill at a capital news conference he held with the drive's co-chairmen, Connecticut Food Bank director Mark Patton and Brad Davis of WDRB radio.

Books Hailey's latest book probes medical ethics

By Iris Krosnow
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Arthur Hailey's new book, "Strong Medicine," suggests some pretty potent stuff, but the author insists he's not playing doctor and it's not a medical treatise.

"I am a storyteller — not a non-fiction writer — and that's all I ever wanted to be," says the man who brought the world "Airport" and "Hotel." "Now if in the course of telling a story I can achieve something more, that's fine."

Something more is just what Hailey, 64, is onto in his first book in five years, a tale that bares the pharmaceutical drug industry and takes a stethoscope to it. The plot line traces the 27-year saga of heroine Celia Jordan and her pursuit in a business that tries to balance ethics and profits — and sometimes fails. Although the story is made believable, Hailey laces his prose with hard, cold facts that are destined to make consumers think twice when popping their next pills.

Among the revelations in "Strong Medicine" (Doubleday, 448 pp., $16.95) are that drugs are frequently marketed without sufficient clinical testing and that many over-the-counter remedies are useless, even harmful.

Dr. Gerold Grodsky, an international expert on diabetes, was the advisor on the project, which like Hailey's eight other bestsellers represents three years of work.

"Every pharmaceutical product is an alien substance in the human body," says Hailey on a topic he knows only too well. In the aftermath of quadruple bypass surgery, he now must take five medications a day.

Doctors generally are not well informed about drugs," he continues. "The information about drug effectiveness comes from a frequent error on the medical profession's part, he adds, is not saying attention to the synergistic effect of prescriptions. "Many doctors do not inform themselves about the interaction of different kinds of drugs," Hailey remarks.

"My wife, for example, had a bad sprained ankle and the doctor prescribed something without asking first if she was taking some other medicine."

In his own case, he refuses to take even plain aspirin on top of his daily drug quota. "I don't want anything to interact with what I already take. And I will never in my life take a cold remedy. They are an illusion; some can even be harmful. There is no cure for the cold."

"It's merely a coincidence, Hailey claims, that his first book following a serious illness deals with heavy medicine. Rather, the topic was recommended to him by Samuel Vaughan, a vice-president at Doubleday, his publishing house. A controversial area Hailey stumbled over in his research was the high incidence of doctors who themselves are hooked. The physician in "Strong Medicine" is addicted to drugs and based on a doctor Hailey actually knew who died of an overdose.

"His wife told me afterwards" about the problem, says Hailey. "A doctor in my practice can get unlimited quantities of any drug he wants. He gets hundreds of free samples. He can write prescriptions for himself."

"So doctors can experiment with drugs. They have a conviction that they can handle it. But the doctor who becomes a drug addict often doesn't know how to stop."

When asked whether a mass experimentation with drugs such as Thalidomide or DES in pregnant women could ever happen again, Hailey nods an emphatic yes.

"It could happen again without question," he says. "One thing that's realized. Until a drug actually goes on the market, no one can possibly know what its overall effect will be. Sure, you can have

Having the best of both worlds
By James Jacoby
What should you do when you can have either of two futures to make your contract? The best thing to do is take both of them, if you can do so without a hitch.

North certainly had a minimum for his rise to two hearts. When South made what sounded like a game try of two spades, North tried to sign off at three hearts. Partner persisted with four clubs. Now it would really be cowardly not to show the diamond ace along the way to four hearts, and that's what North did. That was sufficient encouragement for South to jump to six hearts.

West led the spade nine, mainly to create a bridge problem for all of us. Declarer won the ace and cashed the heart ace. Since West had a natural heart winner, South had to decide what to do about the potential losing queen of clubs. If West had the diamond king, a diamond finesse would produce a second diamond winner, on which the club loser could be discarded.

Declarer worked it out to have the best of both worlds. He played to the diamond ace and then back to the K-Q of spades. Then he threw West in with a heart. If West had the king of diamonds and led that suit, dummy's queen would be good. If West led a club into the A-Q, the hand would be over. Finally, if West led a diamond

Bolton selectman doesn't endorse project endorsement

By Sarah Passell
Herald Reporter

BOLTON — An apparent endorsement of four proposed building projects in a Friday news release from the Board of Selectmen was at least partly recanted later in the day by First Selectman Sandra Pierog.

In the news release, selectmen assured voters that the town can afford the $3 million it may have to borrow in the form of a long-term bond issue if all four projects are approved by voters in referendum questions on Tuesday's general election ballot.

The projects are a new public works garage and central fire station, a new library-computer center at Bolton High School and renovations to Community Hall.

"There are facts available to document the fiscal health of the town of Bolton and there are options available to minimize the impact of an additional tax burden," according to the news release, which was signed by Pierog for the board.

"The needs will not expire... Construction of these projects now will benefit not only us, but the future taxpayers as well."

Deputy First Selectman Douglas T. Cheney said Friday he had not seen the release but had consulted with Pierog on its contents. He said he understood it would be a board endorsement of all four projects.

But in an interview Friday evening, Pierog said she did not intend the release as a board endorsement of the four projects.

The garage, fire station and Community Hall proposals have been developed with selectmen's support, but the high school library-computer center is a project of the Board of Education.

In 1983 First Selectman Henry P. Ryan attacked the school board for introducing the project at a time when it would have to compete with the selectmen's building proposals for taxpayers' approval.

Hyba died Sept. 13 and Pierog was appointed to take his place. Democrat Michael Zizka was appointed to fill Pierog's seat.

"I think I have said that the Board of Selectmen is in agreement that the town can afford all four projects," Pierog said Friday.

"I don't think we're trying to make up their minds," she said of the news release. "We're just trying to vote on the referendum questions."

"We don't feel that we as a board can give blanket approval to every thing."

Pierog also refused to say which projects she favors. "What I do know is I go into the voting booth only I know," she said.

Cheney said he differs with some school officials on the high school proposal in his opposition to buying an expensive "mainframe" computer. But he said he could support adding more space for the library and an expanded computer curriculum, he said. "I certainly can."

Selectman Lawrence A. Converse refused last week to state publicly his position on the proposals. Neither he nor selectman Carl Preuss and Michel Zizka could be reached Friday for comment.

In the news release, Pierog noted that the town has no outstanding bonds to pay off and that Bolton is allowed by state law to bond up to $5 million and the school system up to $2.5 million.

"The total costs of all projects ($2,945,000) fall well below these limits," she said.

"Clearly, this is one indication of fiscal ability to pay."

She said a board estimate, released last month, that the tax rate could rise 5.1 mills in the first year of a $3 million bond, is "a worst-case scenario." She said that figure assumes that neither the grand list, which is the total of all taxable property in town, nor non-tax revenues will grow.

The news release also raises the possibility that the town could use its capital reserve fund to pay for part of the building costs. Connecticut towns are required by state law to set aside each year funds equivalent to at least one mill, but no more than two mills, for capital uses. In Bolton one mill currently equals about $76,000.

Critics of these arguments have said at public hearings on the projects that selectmen are overlooking the normal yearly increases in regular town expenditures. Some have predicted that increased revenues will be eaten up by other town needs.

Residents who are registered voters may vote on the projects when they vote in the general election at Community Hall between 6 a.m. and 8 p.m.

Non-residents who own property in town may vote on the referendum questions only at Bentley Memorial Library on Bolton Center Road between noon and 8 p.m.

Gejdenson's opponent isn't ready to say battle's over

By Tracy L. Geoghegan
Herald Reporter

Most political insiders say U.S. Rep. Samuel Gejdenson, D-Conn., is assured of a victory in the 2nd Congressional District on Tuesday. But his Republican opponent, Robert Kowitz, hasn't admitted it for a moment.

Gejdenson, a popular two-term congressman, has several times as much money to spend on his campaign than Kowitz does, according to recent reports.

"It's hard to run against an incumbent," Kowitz said when reached at her Coventry home Friday. "He has five paid staff people I have three."

"But I haven't doubted for one minute that I'm going to win," Kowitz said.

"I feel comfortable about this election," Gejdenson said Friday from his home in Bozrah. "But we've got to keep on working. I think the voters deserve to be courted."

Kowitz surprised observers earlier this election season by beating Nicholas Norton of Colchester for her party's endorsement.

Her defeat had been widely forecast because she was virtually unknown outside Coventry, where she formerly chaired the Town Council. The upset was later attributed to the fact that she started early campaigning in every town in the large eastern Connecticut district.

In the last rush before Election Day, both candidates are busy making their differences known to the voters.

Friday found each candidate on the other's home turf. Gejdenson delivered a talk on "modern problems" to a Coventry High School audience. Kowitz greeted factory workers and students in Bozrah.

"The Kowitz campaign stresses her support for President Reagan's policies. She says she opposes tax increases and favors economic growth and more defense contracts for Connecticut firms."

Gejdenson, in sharp contrast, has the distinction of voting against Reagan more than any other member of Congress his freshman year.

Gejdenson says Reagan's economic plan is not working. He also opposes the President's budget cuts in education, health and the environment.

"I support legislation for arms control and equal pay for equal work," Gejdenson said. "My opponent opposes both those pieces of legislation."

Gejdenson says he is running on his record as a Congressman. "I have seniority in the House. I have experience," he said. "I'm the most capable voice for eastern Connecticut."

He lists several facilities in the district for which he was able to gain money, including the submarine base hospital in New London, a Vietnam veterans' center to open soon in Norwich and the Coast Guard's research and development center in Groton.

Kowitz, a University of Connecticut botany professor, is hoping her long and diligent campaign will pay off. "I've spent every day going to the towns. I don't know if I've done it more than Gejdenson, but I've definitely done it for more time."

She was hindered by a broken foot for several crucial weeks during her campaign. She was also unnerved a bit on her way to a speech in Vernon when lightning struck a tree outside her house and sent it hurtling over her roof.

"It's been a very exciting campaign," Kowitz said. "I've had a very positive experience wherever I've gone."

EVERY SOUL HAS A MISSION

"My Child and My Children. The Eternal Father does not wish to Lose one of His children, and what can He do with all the murders of the unborn taking place? For that reason among many, the United States will suffer unless there is placed into your government a group that fears the Lord if they cannot Love the Lord. They will fear Him and find measures to stop the slaughter of the unborn. You are taking these babies, these children from the world, before their mission has been performed. Each and every unborn child has been sent upon earth with a mission to fight Satan. Remove them without the knowledge of God. Remove them and it is truly said with great sorrow that Satan now rules your government and the world." Jesus 4-14-84

Issues aren't mystery

These are the days when the candidates begin to play really dirty. If there were a referee, they'd both be penalized 15 yards for unnecessary roughness.

You can't say who started it and many times the candidates themselves don't have much to do with the direction their campaigns take. They say what's suggested to them by experts who have studied how to get votes but when the election for the presidency is over next week and the loser calls the winner to concede victory, I think both candidates will look at the campaign and each other with some embarrassment.

At one time or another, for example, each has suggested the other was something less than patriotic. President Reagan suggested it about Mondale months ago and Mondale struck back last week by accusing Reagan of being unfeeling when he ignored the first anniversary of the deaths of the 241 Marines in Beirut. Neither charge does much honor to the man who made it. One thing I don't suspect either Mondale or Reagan of being is unpartriotic.

On Oct. 26, Reagan was seen in a well-staged appearance at a New York synagogue. This time he was wearing a yarmulke instead of an American Legion cap. In his speech that day, he suggested Mondale was soft on anti-Semitism. Mondale responded by saying it was a despicable charge and I agree with him. Mondale and Reagan are no more anti-semitic than they are unpartriotic.

Reagan has been going after Mondale because Mondale said that, if elected, he'd probably have to raise taxes. For such an honest statement, Reagan has been trying to scare voters into thinking it's going to cost them more money if Mondale is elected. Reagan himself has said only that he has no plans for raising taxes. He hasn't said he won't be making plans to raise them. It seems inevitable that he will.

There's less reason for Reagan to play dirty pool here at the end than there is for Mondale. If you're losing, you get desperate. I hope Mondale doesn't get desperate and say a lot of things that make him look less like the first-rate gentleman and public servant that he is.

The real issues are too tough to tackle in these hit-and-run campaign speeches and these ridiculous 30-second television commercials. All that matters is the basic difference between the Democrat Mondale and the Republican Reagan.

War uniform finds its way to Homestead

The old navy blue wool jacket is a bit frayed; brass buttons decorated with the American eagle need to be shined.

But the coat has seen noble times. On May 4, 1968, the jacket was worn by Albert Anderson when he marched off to serve his country in the Spanish American War.

Anderson, the last surviving member of the 68-member Connecticut National Guard that day in 1898, died in 1969. His daughter, Evelyn Erickson of 26 Alton St., recently donated his war jacket, felt wide-brimmed hat and canvas-covered canteen to the Manchester Historical Society.

Anderson, who was born in Sweden, was exceptionally patriotic, his daughter says. "He didn't have to go to (war). He volunteered," she says.

"He was a very proud soldier. I can tell you that," she adds. "He always thought a lot of America." Anderson immigrated when he was 14.

Apparently, however, Anderson spoke little to his family about the war. Mrs. Erickson remembers him regaling the family with only one story — how the men in Company G got drunk on the train enroute from Maine to Camp Haven in Niantic in July, 1898.

"They were all drunk on the train except for him and another fellow," says Mrs. Erickson. Her father, she notes, was not a drinker.

"We always laughed at him — he was sober — it was funny the way he told it."

Mrs. Erickson doesn't remember ever seeing her father dressed in his uniform, though she has a faded sepia-toned portrait of Anderson standing at attention in the war jacket and hat.

The jacket is very small. "You had to be pretty thin to wear it," she says. "But I wouldn't call him a small man. He was tall — a very handsome man, if I do say so."

Mrs. Erickson decided to donate the jacket after her son, Ron Erickson, suggested she do so. "It's been sitting down in the cellar all these years," Erickson says.

"I never saw him looking at it. He just showed me when I was younger. He said, 'There's my army coat.'"

According to a story printed in the Manchester Herald shortly before Anderson's death, the Manchester recruits were mustered into service at Camp Haven in Niantic May 17, 1898. Anderson was 21.

The recruits were sent first to Fort Knox, Maine, then came back to Camp Haven in July. On July 18 they were sent to Fort Alger in Virginia. "The food wasn't good," Erickson remembers his grandfather saying. "It was wormy."

Company G returned to Niantic Sept. 8 and stayed until Sept. 22. At that time, men went on furlough until Oct. 21 when they were mustered out of the service. According to the Herald story in 1968, the company never saw active service, except for the few men who joined the regular Army.

Anderson's hat is a brown felt hat with a wide brim that is trimmed with brown grosgrain ribbon. The hat was part of a dress uniform, Mrs. Erickson says.

The canteen is covered with beige, hand-stitched canvas, water-resistant in places.

Evelyn Erickson of 26 Alton St. helps display the Spanish American War uniform her father once wore. Standing with her are Herbert Bengtson of the Manchester Historical Society, and her son, Ron Erickson. She recently donated the jacket to the Society.

Sneaking still isn't the way to go

It's taken 33 years but it's finally happened. I am happily embracing a new fashion fad and it hasn't taken me three years to do so.

The fashion fad says it's OK to wear running sneakers with your business suit. The fad, of course, has strict limits.

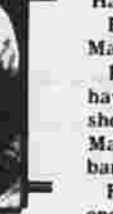

The fad says it's fashionable to wear the sneakers on the way to and from work. One must not wear them during the work day, and not ever in the office, please, perah the thought and hope to trip over your dead grandmother's white gloves should you be seen in your Adidas by the Xerox machine.

But, as a way of getting to and from work, I think sneaks' beat high heels or even sensible walking shoes maybe 60 or 70 times over.

I admit it felt funny that first day, with a gray business suit topping off my baby blue sneakers.

And, I also admit that on that first day, I sneaked around the Herald's receptionist

But women are not sneaking to work in Manchester.

In the week I've taken up the practice, I haven't spotted one other female similarly shod. In the hopes of encouraging other Manchester females to take up the sneaker banner, here's some advice.

First, have a place to hide your sneakers once you arrive at work. Otherwise, people start congratulating you for training for the Manchester Road Race — when you haven't been.

Second, ignore what any male says about your new walking gear. Men are trained at baby school to demand that females walk in uncomfortable shoes. Women wear shoes which make them taller and thinner. They do not wear shoes for getting places in, but rather, shoes for standing up in. But the sneaker revolution is going to change this. Third, if you're wearing a business suit and sneakers, and we meet on Main Street — wave!

Keep walk-to-work sneakers out of sight of fellow employees. Select office desk file drawer, for instance.

Advice

Young virgin thinks look is as good as a touch

DEAR ABBY: This is driving me crazy. I am 13 years old and I have decided to save myself for the man I marry, but I have a problem. I'm not sure I'm a virgin.

When I was about 5 or 6 years old and my brother was 15 or 16, he'd check me for ticks (we lived on a farm) and then I would check him for ticks. As I recall, we gave each other a pretty thorough checking over, but I honestly don't remember how far we went. I know we both took a pretty good look at each other. Does that count? No other boy has laid a hand on me since. Am I still a virgin?

DEAR WORRYING: Quit worrying. "Looking" doesn't count. You're still a virgin. DEAR ABBY: We've heard about the use (more appropriately the abuse) of the names Chuck and Jack, but I think the "Tons of the world have more to say about a 'Peeping Chuck' or a 'Peeping Jack'."

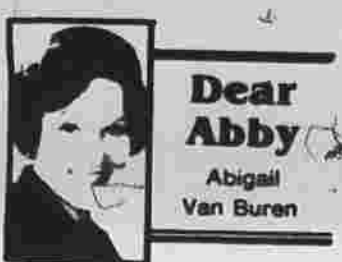

DEAR ABBY: I don't know what to do about my mom. She is so old-fashioned. She has a very strict attitude and I want to go upstairs and listen to records in my room. She says, "It doesn't look nice." How about tomfool and tommyrot? Both are put-downs, and a tom-tom is something to beat (up) on.

DEAR TOMBOY: I don't know what to do about my mom. She is so old-fashioned. She has a very strict attitude and I want to go upstairs and listen to records in my room. She says, "It doesn't look nice." How about tomfool and tommyrot? Both are put-downs, and a tom-tom is something to beat (up) on.

Dear Abby

My boyfriend's sister invited both of us to visit her for three days (she's 22 and married) but my mother says, "It doesn't look nice." I'm 17 and my boyfriend is 18.

Surgery betters hormones in solving fibroid problem

DEAR DR. LAMB - I have fibroid tumors in the uterus. They are causing irregular periods. I'm 44. My family doctor wants to put me on male hormones, but my gynecologist said absolutely not.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I certainly agree with your gynecologist. The side effects of testosterone would be unwanted, and there are much better ways to manage the problem.

Fibroids often decrease in size during menopause, when female hormone decrease.

It is by regular periods you really mean you have a bleeding problem. Then you may need to have the fibroids removed surgically.

Small fibroids, if strategically located in the uterus, can cause severe bleeding. Small fibroids may be removed without removing the uterus.

blister on the upper lip? No one else in the family has ever had one. If he had contact with a herpes virus eight years prior to this, could it remain dormant that long? More than anything else, I would like to know if he will have a problem with herpes in the future. Is there some way one could get completely over it even if it is only herpes 1?

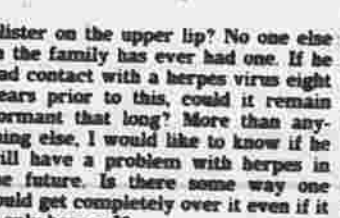

DEAR READER - Perhaps you will be less concerned if you realize that from 80 to 90 percent of the population has antibodies proving that they have had herpes 1. These antibodies develop early in life because herpes 1 can be transmitted by kissing someone in the 30 to 90 percent of the population that has herpes and who may kiss a baby or young child.

Southpaws have distinct advantage on the lanes

The ultimate controversy of bowling is rearing its ugly head once again. Does the left-hander have the advantage over a right-hander? More times than not the southpaw does.

The bowling proprietor is facing an extremely difficult situation. He has not only the bowlers, lefties and righties, but the American Bowling Congress and its affiliates, the United States Bowling Congress, and the various state bowling organizations, all of whom are well to front.

In some cases, for the lower average bowlers, the lane conditions will not greatly affect their averages. The mid average (160-190) and especially high average bowlers can be affected.

Lane conditions are going to vary from house to house and even lane to lane. Each center has its own surface, conditioner and process for preparing the lanes. A lot of proprietors attempt to even things out. It doesn't always work that way.

In the 1983-84 bowling season at Bradley Bowl in Windsor, Locks, the Steak Club Classic had left-handers in the top four spots in average. Gary Morgan came in at 225. Tim Cornelio — 222. John Myers — 219. Ted Kone — 218. Tony Renaud was high right-hander at 214 followed by Rich Macierowski and Marcel Lessard at 211.

Opinion: Morgan is not 11 pins better than Renaud or 14 better than Macierowski or Lessard.

In the LaVie Industrial League at the Parkdale Lanes, the top five averages are all left-handers. John McCarthy — 229. Myers — 213. Leon Bloudeau — 213. Roger Mieczkowski — 206 and Al Senha — 205. The top two right-handers are Rich Garner at 203 and myself at 200.

A spot check was run by a member of the board from the Central Connecticut Bowling Association, and a member of the American Bowling Congress, at the Parkdale Lanes. The ABC representative mentioned that the condition was not in compliance with ABC specifications. Something had to be changed. Fine, change the condition but don't press the panic button.

That's what has appeared to happen. The lanes which have appeared to have been oiled the same amount all the way across the lane. It seems like a logical approach to the problem. Wrong! The right-handers have to contend with the ball track area. That's the portion of the lane usually between the second and fourth arrows where the lane is wet. The oil dries up quicker and has a tendency to be absorbed into the track. If a right-hander throws it to the right of the second arrow, the ball keeps going right. If he puts it in the track area, it hooks early. There has to be an increase in oil in the track. Don't increase the oil on the left. When a righty plays outside and points to the pocket, the ball will hook very hard to the left as soon as it starts to cross the track.

Thuday in the Industrial League, the scores went way down as expected. Of the four 600 sets, three were rolled by left-handers. The top right-handed average shooter rolled as follows: Garner — 498, Jenkins — 469, Charles Hartley Jr. averaging 193 shot 546, and Pete Beaudry at 190 shot 522.

It's a reverberating habit. Attempts have to be made to even things out.

Winners from the tournaments held recently at the Parkdale Lanes were:

NO-TAP — Men's Division — Steve Allard, 897. Women's Division — Joyce Haley, 792.

MAJORS — Shawn Dukett, 783.

SENIOR CITIZENS TEAM TOURNAMENT — MARY CHAVES, Pete Seder, Viola Poulard, Romeo Dube.

Costello, Garza defend ring titles

KINGSTON, N.Y. (UPI) — Billy Costello and Mike Jones defended their world titles Saturday in a non-title fight.

Costello, 28, and his manager, Mike Jones, were not overjoyed at the prospect of facing Marbury — a veteran fighter who has never been stopped in 46 pro fights (38-5 with 15 knockouts).

Garza, 25, of Los Angeles, is just trying to get recognition as a great boxer. He also faces a tough veteran in Meza who has a 41-4 record with 32 knockouts. It is Meza's second shot at the title. In his first attempt, he was stopped in six rounds by Wilfredo Gomez on March 27, 1982.

Garza said, "I never predict, except I will win." Garza said.

New England grid outlook

The match-up of Rhode Island and New Hampshire Saturday will either solve the question of the Yankee Conference title competition.

URI, 8-1, will clinch the championship if it beats the Wildcats, 7-1, in this weekend's game at Durham, N.H. But a loss puts both teams into an outside possibility.
