Spill clears plant

By Kathy Gormus
Herald Reporter

A leak in a holding tank this morning sent 2,000 gallons of an ammonia solution spilling into the basement of the Multi-Circuits plant on Harrison Street and forced the evacuation of first-shift workers, a fire official said.

Town Deputy Fire Chief Robert Bycholski said no one was injured in the incident, which was reported at 7:20 a.m.

State Department of Environmental Protection employees were taking samples from storm sewers and catch basins in the area late this morning to see if any of the ammonium hydroxide, which is used as a cleaning solution, leaked into the sewers.

Meanwhile, other workers from the DEP were preparing to pump the solution out of the basement of the circuit board manufacturing plant into a tanker truck.

An inspector with the DEP said the ammonium hydroxide did not have to be diluted before being vacuumed up.

Bycholski said the chemical can cause skin burns and respiratory irritation if a person comes into direct contact with it. Some of the approximately 12 town firefighters on the scene entered the spill area, he said.

The spill was one of the largest at Multi-Circuits recently. Three acid spills at the plant earlier this year totalled less than 500 gallons.

William H. Stevenson, general manager of the plant, was not available for comment on the spill and did not return phone calls from the Herald.

But Bycholski said a broken pipe leading to the 2,000-gallon tank apparently caused the leak.

"Whether it was deteriorated or someone broke it, we don't know," he said.

Plant workers quickly shut off another 2,000-gallon tank of ammonium hydroxide before it began leaking, Bycholski said.

Police sealed off Harrison Street to vehicles during the clean-up.

Town Fire Chief John C. Rivosa said the wind aided clean-up operations by dissipating fumes from the ammonium hydroxide.

The spill was contained to the basement where the holding tanks were located, Bycholski said.

Firefighters at first thought the leaking substance was ammonium chloride used to clean copper off plating parts, Bycholski said.

"We couldn't get close enough to find out which it was," he said.

The nature and extent of the spill was determined after DEP workers entered the building wearing gas masks.

Ed Alexander of the Hazardous Waste Disposal Unit of the state Department of Environmental Protection looks into a manhole near the Multi-Circuits manufacturing plant this morning while Brian Coss of the DEP looks on. DEP workers were checking storm sewers and catch basins in the area after a leak in a holding tank spilled 2,000 gallons of ammonium hydroxide into the basement of the plant. No one was injured in the incident, fire officials said.

Cafeteria workers settle contract

A tentative contract settlement has been reached with school administrators as well as with the newly unionized school cafeteria workers, Assistant Superintendent Wilson E. Deakin said today.

While Deakin would not reveal the terms of the contract, he said the prospect of a firm agreement "looks good." Negotiators for both the cafeteria workers and the administrators are currently assessing support for the deal among members of their unions, Deakin said.

Board of Education members have already said they would approve the proposed cafeteria workers' contract if the workers find it acceptable, according to Deakin. "I'm encouraged that it's going to be a wrap," he said, adding that negotiators will probably meet to draft the document next week.

The school cafeteria workers, who number about 45, voted this spring to join Local 991 of the American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees. The union also represents about 200 other clerical workers and employees of the schools and public works department.

Nelson Foss, a custodian at Verplanck School, is the newly-elected president of that union. Foss was not available for comment this morning.

Deakin said the Board of Education held negotiations Monday night and into the early morning Tuesday to reach a tentative agreement with school administrators.

Latest index puts inflation at 4.2 percent

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumer prices rose 0.4 percent in October, the same as September, bringing inflation for the first 10 months of the year to a moderate, seasonally adjusted annual rate of 4.2 percent, the Labor Department said today.

Food and beverage prices were up 0.4 percent, following a decline in September. Transportation costs rose 0.7 percent, a bit faster than September, largely due to rising gasoline prices. The cost of medical care, registering 0.5 percent, also was rising slightly faster than September.

Housing rose more slowly, only 0.1 percent compared to 0.4 the previous month. Other major groups, including apparel and upkeep, entertainment and other goods and services continued to rise at about their same moderate rates as September.

The Consumer Price Index stood at 315.3, meaning that goods costing $100 in 1967 now cost $315.30.

For the past three months as a whole, the Labor Department said, inflation has run at a compound annual rate of 4.7 percent, still moderate compared to rates like 12.8 percent in 1979 and 11.8 in 1980.

Prices of gas and electricity for the home, both of which had risen sharply in the third quarter, were down in October — falling by 1.3 percent and 1.7 percent, respectively. But home fuel oil prices rose 0.8 percent.

Grocery store food prices, which had declined 0.3 percent in September, rose 0.4 percent in October, largely due to a turnaround in meats, poultry, fish, eggs, fruits and vegetables. For most of these items, the rises were less than is usual for October. Beef was up 1 percent, while pork was down 0.8 percent.

Gasoline prices rose 1.1 percent in September and 1.8 percent in October after registering declines in each of the three preceding months. But gasoline prices still are 2.3 percent lower than at the end of 1983 and 13 percent below their peak level of March 1981.

Larger increases in automobile insurance, 1.7 percent, and auto finance charges, 1.2 percent, also contributed to the rise in transportation costs.

The government reported earlier that wholesale prices declined 0.2 percent in October, the third such decrease in a row.

Guard to probe tugboat sinking

NORWALK (UPI) — U.S. Coast Guard officials today planned to open a formal inquiry to investigate what caused a tugboat to sink in the waters of Long Island Sound, bringing six crew members to their deaths.

The tugboat the Celtic disappeared Saturday night while ferrying the 125-foot barge Cape Race and its cargo of scrap metal from Bridgeport to Newark, N.J. The tug was later found in 80 feet of water off the Norwalk coast.

Officials speculated the scrap iron shifted on the barge, dragging the tug to the bottom. Scrap is a very moveable cargo," Bridgeport Police Sgt. Thomas Giblin said.

Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Rick Harden of the New London Marine Inspection Detachment said the official hearing, held jointly with the National Transportation Safety Board, would be held in New York.

He said witnesses would include members of the firm which loaded the barge, the barge's owners and the bridge tenders in Bridgeport who observed the Celtic.

A slick of diesel fuel led officials early Monday to the tugboat about two miles southeast of the Sheffield Island, but the barge was not found.

Hampden by the murky 57-degree waters of the Sound, Coast Guard divers searched for three days before finding all six bodies of the crew.

Defense mag says MiGs didn't arrive in Nicaragua

LONDON (UPI) — The Soviet Union apparently shipped a number of MiG-21 fighter jets on a freighter bound for Nicaragua but probably unloaded them in Libya before crossing the Atlantic, Jane's Defence Weekly said today.

Under a Washington dateline, the authoritative defense magazine quoted "U.S. sources" for what it called "a new turn" in the mystery of the MiG-21s that prompted U.S. warnings to Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista rulers they faced U.S. action "if any imports threatened other countries in Central America."

The United States issued the warning after the Soviet freighter bound for Nicaragua was spotted loading crates "apparently likely to contain MiG components" on the Black Sea last month.

Jane's noted that the Bakuriani finally turned up at Nicaragua's northern Pacific port of Corinto "no crates of the size that could contain jet fighter components appeared" although it unloaded vehicles, helicopters and munitions.

But the magazine said the U.S. sources now report that the Bakuriani, as it passed through the Mediterranean, also was "observed unloading similar crates for Libya before proceeding to the west coast of Africa."

Star gazer finds his comet

MARLBORO, Mass. (UPI) — Michael Rudenko, an amateur astronomer who spotted a new comet last week, said the discovery satisfies his dream "to see something no one else had seen before."

But the computer engineer is already working to realize another dream — he wants to discover a second comet.

"One comet they think is lucky," Rudenko said in an interview with the Marlboro Enterprise this week. "Two comets, and they'll know I was really looking."

Rudenko, who commutes from his home in Amherst to his job as a software engineer for Digital Equipment Corp. in Marlboro, spent 246 hours in the last four years scanning the sky in hopes of discovering a comet.

Last Wednesday, using his 6-inch refracting telescope, he spotted an object that did not appear in any sky charts and called a friend, Daniel Green, who works at the Central Bureau for Astronomical Telegrams in Cambridge. The discovery is a worthwhile clearinghouse for comet sightings.

Green told him Harvard's Oak Ridge Observatory was already photographing the sky to conduct a similar sighting reported the previous night by an amateur comet-hunter in Arizona, David Levy.

Levy's description matched that submitted by Rudenko, Green said, "and we immediately realized it was the same comet" — immediately named the Levy-Rudenko comet.

Having the comet named for him, Rudenko said, "is secondary to the whole accomplishment. It was just a dream of mine — to see something no one else had seen before."

Green said the comet will brighten slightly next month and pass closest to the sun in mid-December. Then it will turn away and probably not approach Earth again for tens of thousands of years.

Rudenko's new goal is to discover a comet that will spend more time in view of earthlings — one that is visible at least every 200 years.

A baron as a portrait

Art collector Baron Hans Heinrich Thyssen-Bornemisza says beautiful women and fine art have a great deal in common. "If you meet a wonderful picture or a wonderful girl, it's about the same feeling," he says. "And if you meet a very pretty girl, or see a very attractive painting, you know it's going to be very expensive."

The only difference, said the baron, is "if you acquire a work of art, you can take it home, sit down and then relax." The baron's extensive collection of American art goes on display Wednesday at the Detroit Institute of Arts.

Yankee's dollars

Joe DiMaggio, the Yankee Clipper who became Mr. Coffee, won't be 70 until Sunday but he got together with some old friends to celebrate early in Atlantic City, N.J.

The baseball hall-of-famer was honored with a dinner at Resorts International Hotel-Casino that drew his brother, Dom DiMaggio, a former Boston Red Sox outfielder, ex-Cleveland Indians pitcher Bob Feller and several former DiMaggio teammates.

One ex-Yankee, Whitey Ford, speculated on what DiMaggio could earn in today's big-money world of baseball. "There's no way they could pay him," Ford said. "He'd own one of the teams. As great as he was, he and (Yankee owner George) Steinbrenner would be partners."

A little political humor

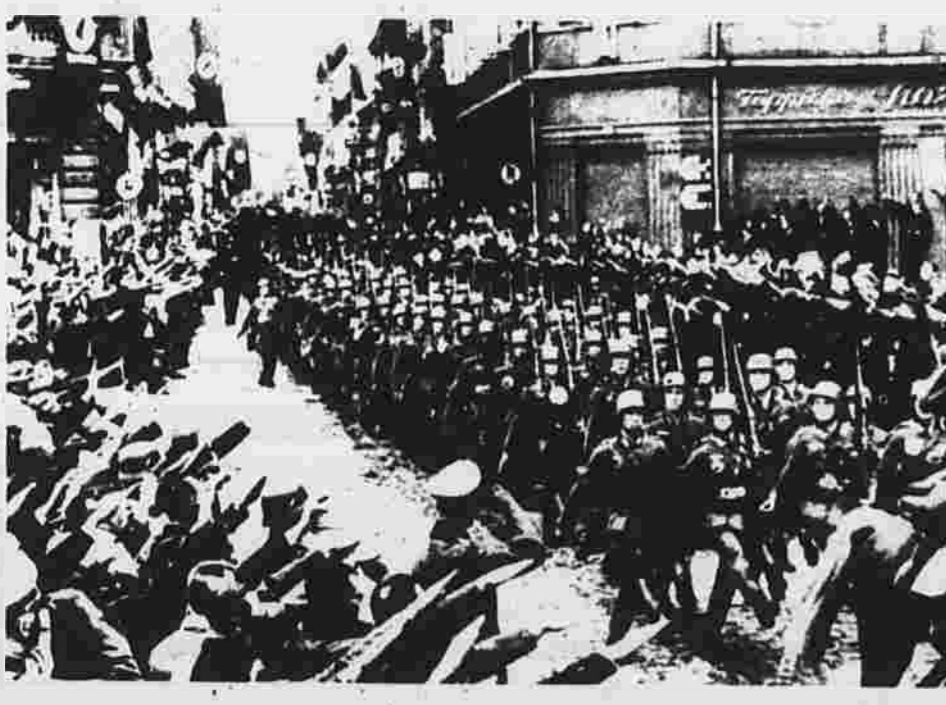

Just before leaving for his Santa Barbara, Calif., ranch for a Thanksgiving vacation, President Reagan gave a White House party for his campaign workers. He suddenly burst into laughter while watching the reception line as he came upon longtime friend Charlene Heston and the joke was on a well-known liberal. "What was your name again?" Reagan said. Heston, without cracking a smile, replied, "Ed Asner, sir."

Falling for Hollywood

After taking such a beating while filming "Turk 182," Robert Ulrich is no doubt thinking about getting a stuntman for his next movie.

For "Turk 182" he had to fall onto a table, spend eight hours in a body cast, walk on his hands for six hours, be beaten unmercifully by Peter Boyle and race into a burning building only to be knocked through a window by a blast from a fire hose.

"I kept thinking, 'I hope they remembered to put film in the camera,'" Ulrich said. "Turk 182" is due out early 1985.

Cheney groups get preview

By Alex Girilli Herald Reporter

Members of the Cheney National Historic District Commission and the Cheney Hall Foundation heard a preliminary report Tuesday afternoon on public improvements that will be made in the historic district with the $750,000 bond issue approved by town voters in January 1982.

Town Planning Director Mark Pellegrini and representatives of C. S. Maguire Associates stressed that plans for such things as landscaping and street decorations are in a preliminary stage. They said they would report again when the plans become more specific.

The Maguire firm, located in New Britain, has been hired by the town as a landscaping consultant. Generally following the concepts of Anderson, Nutter and Finegold — the firm that did a comprehensive study of the historic district several years ago — Carl Mueller of Maguire Associates described Elm Street as the focal center of the district, with particular emphasis on the Hartford Road end of Elm Street, near Cheney Hall, as the place where people are likely to congregate.

A plan displayed by Mueller showed the building now occupied by a Pratt and Whitney Aircraft Group foundry as an indoor parking lot. Mueller said indications are that PWA plans to move the operation there to its East Hartford plant within a couple of years. The Pratt building lies immediately north of the Cheney Hall parking lot.

The plan also presumes the Cheney velvet mill at 60 Elm St., the velvet weave shed at 182 Pine St., and the yarn dye house at 31 Cooper Hill St., will become office uses.

If those buildings are developed as offices, parking space for workers will be needed. Mueller said land for parking in the area will be limited.

All three of those buildings are owned by Clock Tower Mill Associates, the partnership that is developing the Clock Mill at 63 Elm St. into 185 apartments. The former Manchester Modes building and the old weaving mill are also being redeveloped into apartments.

Mark Levine, a spokesman for Clock Tower Mill Associates, said recently that the partnership has no definite plans for the three other buildings it purchased along with the Clock Mill.

Levine is president of Dwelling Development Corp., one of the partners in Clock Tower Mill Associates.

Members of the commission wondered to what extent the historic district would draw visitors and whether a tourist information center would be needed. Mary Blush of Little Theater of Manchester said she does not think there would be a good place for such a center because it would interfere with normal parking there.

Such a center would not be part of the work to be done under the $750,000 bond issue.

The bond-financed work includes paving the Elm Street extension north of Forest Street, resurfacing portions of Elm and Forest streets and Hartford Road, improving intersections, widening Hartford Road between Pine Street and Elm Street, resetting curbs, rebuilding sidewalks, installing ornamental street lights and directional signs, and planting trees.

Members of the Cheney Historic District Commission emphasized during the meeting that the signs and street lights should be uniform.

HRC urges training expansion

By Kathy Gormus Herald Reporter

The leaders of unions that represent town employees should be included in affirmative action workshops run by the town, members of the Human Relations Commission said Tuesday night.

Commission Vice Chairman Robert Faucher said that union leaders had approached him about the possibility of participating in such workshops following an Oct. 16 affirmative action workshop in which only town department heads participated.

Leaders of unions such as the police and firefighters' unions deal with town employees much like management-level employees, Faucher said during the commission's regular meeting. They are also affected by affirmative action laws and should become more familiar with them, he said.

"Union leadership are in a way supervisory personnel," Faucher said. "Their consciousness has to be raised, too."

While no formal vote was taken, the eight commission members at Tuesday's meeting agreed that union leaders should be included in any future workshops.

Linda Parry, the town's personnel officer, told HRC members she had not thought of including union leaders before. But she said she thought it was a good idea.

Although town officials have said they hope to run affirmative action workshops on a regular basis, no specific planning has begun for the next one, Parry said.

The Oct. 16 workshop was the first one conducted by the town in almost two years. It focused on dealing with biases and coping with change, officials said. The workshop was closed to the public and the press.

Manchester has repeatedly been criticized for the lack of minority-group members among its approximately 450 employees. Only four of those employees are members of minority groups.

In another matter, the commission tentatively set May 19 as the date for its next Human Rights Day.

The event will be held at Manchester Community College, commission member Eleanor Tunney said.

Commission Chairman John W. Cooney said no program for the annual event has been planned yet.

Schools name arts students

Gwen Brooks, vice principal of Manchester High School, today announced the names of the four students who have been chosen to attend a new performing arts academy in Hartford.

The four faced considerable competition, auditioning along with 16 other MHS students for the available slots. They are Shea Adams, a senior, daughter of Georgia Adams of Rachel Road; Ashley Cruz, a sophomore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Amado Cruz of South Farms Drive; Michele DiBella, a senior, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael DiBella of Hamlin Street; and Wendy Brown, a junior, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ivers Brown of Bradford Street.

The four will attend the Greater Hartford Academy of the Performing Arts five afternoons a week, after the school opens in January. They will continue to complete academic requirements at MHS, attending classes there in the morning.

"All four are very excited about it," Brooks said.

Computer needs cool air

The Eighth Utilities District will study a way to correct a heating problem that developed in the firehouse at Main and Hilliard streets when a dispatch room was built on the second floor to house computerized equipment.

The room becomes too hot for the computer equipment and the adjacent bunk room for firemen is too cool.

The district directors Monday night authorized Joseph Tripp, fire commissioner, to take corrective steps, probably by rezoning the heating system.

Tripp, who was not at the meeting, submitted a written report which described the heating problem.

"He also said that the budget for maintenance of fire apparatus is low and reported that a newly purchased emergency power generator is being wired for use."

Incest talk planned

Dr. Jamshid Marvasti, a child psychiatrist who heads Manchester's Sexual Trauma Center, will give a talk titled "Incest: Sexual Abuse of Children and Adolescents" next Thursday.

The conference will begin at 2 p.m. in Conference Room B at Manchester Memorial Hospital and will be followed by a panel discussion that is expected to last until 4 p.m.

ECHS has open house

East Catholic High School will hold an open house for prospective students and their parents on Thursday, Nov. 29, at 7:30 p.m. The informational session will be held in the ECHS auditorium.

On Saturday, Dec. 8, East Catholic will hold entrance examinations for its incoming freshman class. The tests will begin at 7:45 a.m. and last until 12:30 p.m. There will be a $5 fee and students should bring two pencils.

Americans still like farm

WASHINGTON — So far this decade, Americans are staying down on the farm, but the government has found that more than half the people who work on farms can't live on them, a sharp shift from 25 years ago. The Census Bureau also reported that those in the farm population don't make as much money as other Americans, but suffer less unemployment.

The survey, prepared with help from the Agriculture Department and released Tuesday, showed the farm population basically steady between 1960 and 1983, holding around 5.7 million — about 1 out of every 40 Americans.

The report, based on statistics around April 1983, found that only 44 percent of those employed in agriculture lived on farms, with the rest commuting to work the soil. In 1970, 83 percent of farm workers lived on farms; in 1960, 70 percent.

Returns spur more violence

LONDON — Striking coal miners blocked a mine entrance with a blasting trailer and hurled rocks at police in Yorkshire today as union members in North Wales abandoned an 8-month-old walkout.

Overnight violence centered on South Yorkshire, where the strike protesting the closure of 20 pits and the loss of 20,000 jobs began in mid-March.

At Thurston, near Barnsley, miners dropped a length of steel rail track from a railway bridge onto a police vehicle.

Other police vehicles were pelted with stones and a car was pushed down an embankment to try and reinforce the barricade but overall it was a relatively quiet night, a police spokesman said.

Chicago has 2nd race attack

CHICAGO — Civil rights leaders want a speedy federal investigation of two separate attacks in the last two weeks on black families who have moved into predominantly white neighborhoods.

In the latest incident Tuesday, a home in a white South Side neighborhood was firebombed after a black family moved into it. A spokesman for the Chicago Convention, a group of religious and community leaders, said the group has petitioned Attorney General William French Smith to quickly begin a federal investigation of both incidents.

Warren Sanders Sr., 55, whose family moved into the single-family home on the Southwest Side three weeks ago said he was sitting in the kitchen shortly after midnight when a Molotov cocktail crashed through a window. His wife and son were asleep in their bedrooms.

Police say woman held as sex slave

RED BLUFF, Calif. (UPI) — Police say a mill worker kidnapped a young woman hitchhiker seven years ago and held her captive as his sex slave, forcing her to spend nights confined in a box just big enough for her to lie down in.

The suspect, Cameron Hooker, 31, pleaded innocent Tuesday to a variety of charges including kidnapping, rape and sodomy. He was ordered held in the county jail on $500,000 bail.

The identity, condition and whereabouts of the 27-year-old woman were not disclosed.

Police Chief John Faulkner said the woman reported that Hooker kidnapped her at knifepoint in 1977 when she was hitchhiking and held her prisoner until she fled several months ago.

Faulkner said the woman was allowed to leave Hooker's home in the northern California city of Red Bluff in May of this year to get a job as a motel maid but she returned each night because she feared for her life and the lives of members of her family if she fled.

Faulkner said the woman asked a local minister for advice, but did not tell him she had been held captive. The minister told her she was living in sin and advised her to return to her family home.

She took his advice and went back to her family. Police were contacted by an informant on Nov. 7 and Hooker was arrested 11 days later.

The woman told police she was kidnapped while hitchhiking to the mountain town of Westwood near Susanville. She said Hooker held a knife to her throat, put a hood over her head and drove her to his Red Bluff home.

She said he locked her inside a box inside his basement. The box was barely big enough for her to sit up.

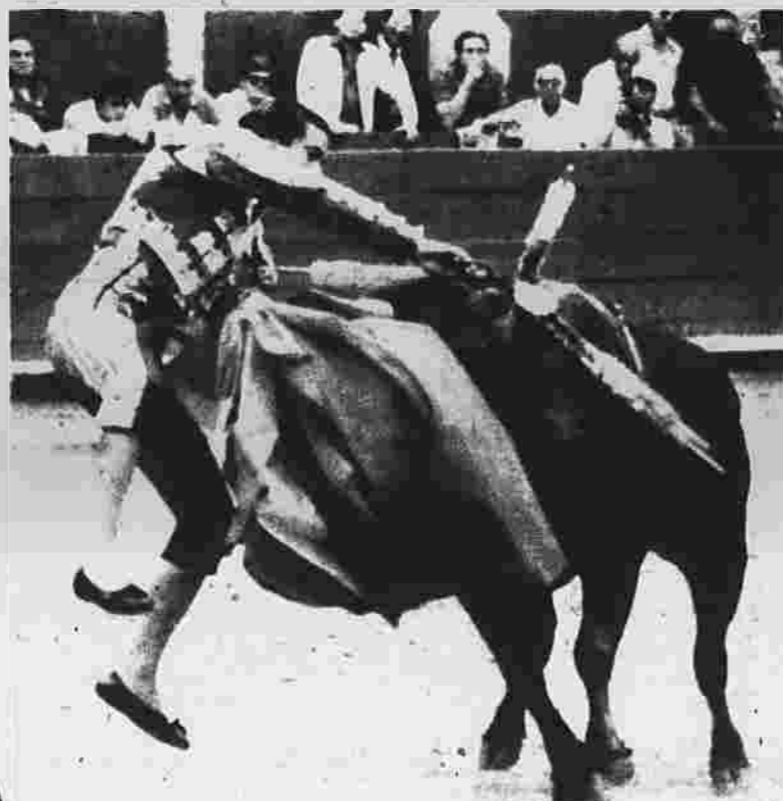

The next day, she was moved to a larger box — a double-walled crate Hooker made himself — that allowed her to lie down and turn around. At various times she was blindfolded, handcuffed and bound with leather straps.

The police chief said that a year later Hooker took her with him when he moved to a mobile home where he lived with two children, apparently his own, on a 1-acre lot on a cul-de-sac in a rural subdivision.

"It's just too hard to believe," said a neighbor who asked not to be identified. "I knew the girl and I knew Cameron and they were so normal. To me, he was as normal as anyone."

After being informed of the alleged crimes, Faulkner said, investigators interviewed the woman and several other witnesses. He said a criminologist team from the state Department of Justice searched Hooker's house and found evidence to substantiate the charges and prompt his arrest.

A preliminary hearing for Hooker has been scheduled for Dec. 5.

Kirkpatrick seeks return to private life

By John Usher
United Press International

UNITED NATIONS — Jean Kirkpatrick, who has held the post of U.N. ambassador longer than any other than Adlai Stevenson, says she plans to resign in December and return to private life.

Kirkpatrick, 56, said Tuesday she has not yet submitted her resignation to the White House, but intended to talk soon with President Reagan to "work something out." The White House had no immediate reaction.

It was reported during the election campaign, though never confirmed by Kirkpatrick, that she wanted the post of either secretary of state or national security adviser in the next Reagan administration.

"I have the intention to return to private life," she told a news conference at the U.S. mission to the United Nations. "I have a desire and that is my desire."

Kirkpatrick said she planned to resign after the end of the 39th General Assembly session in December.

Though a life-long Democrat, she gave up a position as professor of comparative politics at Georgetown University when she was selected by Reagan in 1981 to be the permanent U.S. representative to the United Nations.

Kirkpatrick said she has told Reagan many times of her desire to leave the United Nations and return to teaching. The combative envoy, who has held the U.N. job longer than anyone other than Adlai Stevenson, who served from January 1961 until July 1966, made many friends and not a few enemies with her no-nonsense speeches.

Kirkpatrick said regard for the United States in the General Assembly had improved during her time.

"The U.S. situation is very substantially improved. There is simply no question about that," she said.

"In our view, and I suspect in the view of many other countries, the tone of the General Assembly has substantially improved."

Grieving survivors bury unidentified victims in Mexico

By Lucy Hood
United Press International

MEXICO CITY — Grieving survivors of a natural gas explosion that leveled a working-class slum filed somberly up a dusty hillside to bury in a mass grave the first of at least 544 victims of Mexico's worst industrial disaster.

Only 23 of the 298 bodies lowered into the rocky ground as dusk fell Tuesday were identified. The rest were charged beyond recognition.

Pemex, the government-owned oil company that operated the natural gas plant that exploded before dawn Monday, released a statement late Tuesday saying it was puzzled by the deadly string of thundering blasts and raging fires that killed at least 544 people in the suburb of San Juan Ihuatpec.

More than 1,500 people were injured and 10,000 were left homeless in the worst industrial disaster in Mexican history.

The company report said "all gas tanks and safety valves were inspected daily" at the complex in the northern Mexico City suburb and officials were trying to determine the cause of the explosion.

The company report said "Some 5,000 relatives and friends gathered at El Caracol cemetery in Ecatepec Tuesday night to bury the first victims. Miguel Valencia, a priest from the Our Lady of Fatima parish, said mass as men carried a stream of white caskets up the dusty hill.

"Blessed are the poor, for they shall inherit the kingdom of heaven," Valencia said, blessing the caskets with holy water. "Few family members are here, but this is the tragedy of the whole Mexican nation as one family."

Only 23 of the caskets placed in the two 150-by-15-foot trenches carried names. The remaining caskets placed in feet into the rocky ground were identified only by numbers in green paint.

Firemen from the Ecatepec fire station continued working through the night searching the still smoldering ashes of the demolished neighborhood.

Cranes and bulldozers earlier moved the twisted rubble of brick and adobe homes and buildings razed by the explosion to remove the mangled bodies.

The Interior Ministry reported 324 victims perished in the blaze, but said "lamentably that number can only increase as we receive more reports of unidentified bodies or of missing loved ones."

A definite number of dead will be difficult to determine, the ministry said, because "200 homes completely disappeared" in the pre-dawn blast.

Before the mass burial, families looked through seven rows of 500 charred bodies at the Tulpetlac community center to try to identify lost relatives.

Lucia Prieto, 24, said she had given up hope of identifying her 20 family members who perished in the blaze.

"There is no point in trying again," she said sobbing. "I will never be able to pick them out. I know they are here. I just don't know which ones they are."

"My mama, my sister Araceli and seven brothers all died there. Three of my brothers lived at my father's home with their wives. I lost them all, eight nephews and nieces. They were so small," she said.

Either Guadalupe Hernandez, coordinator of identification services at the Mexico state coroner's office, said, "We have counted 565 bodies of victims lined up here for identification."

Red Cross spokesman Jose Calderon said 544 bodies had been recovered.

Among the unidentified bodies were three secured together by the intense heat, which appeared to be a mother clutching her two children.

Most of the 330,000 people evacuated from the area stayed in makeshift refugee centers.

Reagan silent on ban talk

CANBERRA, Australia (UPI) — The United States and the Soviet Union have agreed to send envoys to Canberra to discuss space weapons and nuclear arms control in separate sessions with Australian officials, Australia announced today.

"I would hope that we will see movement in the direction of effective arms control," for instance, in the direction of a comprehensive test ban treaty and the direction of controls, effective controls, on military competitiveness between the superpowers in outer space," Foreign Minister Bill Hayden told a news conference.

He said high-level U.S. and Soviet officials would come to the Australian capital early next year. The two sides would be in Australia at the same time for the sessions at which Australia will act as an intermediary, he said.

Martin Fitzwater, a White House spokesman in California where President Reagan is vacationing, said he had no comment on Hayden's remarks. There was no immediate reaction from Moscow or the State Department.

Hayden said both sides agreed to hold talks with Australian officials following correspondence between Australian Prime Minister Bob Hawke and Reagan, and between Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and Hayden.

Hayden said Reagan was "very willing" to send to the Australian capital a team of arms control experts to discuss the disarmament issue.

He said he received a letter Monday from Gromyko, saying Soviet officials would fly to Australia early next year for the talks.

"I conducted talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko and suggested it would be useful for our two countries to meet for in-depth discussions to assist in the mutual understanding of each other's approach to certain other arms control issues," Hayden said.

The Soviets broke off talks on limiting nuclear missiles late last year to protest the start of deployment of U.S. Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in five Western European countries. The deployment was called for in a 1979 NATO plan to counter a build-up of Soviet SS-20 missiles.

Although some administration officials are reportedly against new talks, the State Department and some members of the National Security Council are pushing for ways to resume the negotiations.

Administration sources said Tuesday a Soviet message to Washington could lead to a new meeting between Gromyko and Secretary of State George Shultz aimed at reviving the nuclear arms negotiations.

The White House declined to confirm or deny the Kremlin had sent a message that could lead to a meeting between Gromyko and Shultz.

League champions collide on Turkey Day

By Bob Pappell
Herold Sports Writer

The game everyone's been waiting for has finally arrived... Manchester High meets East Catholic High Thursday morning at Memorial Field at 11 o'clock in the annual Turkey Day football showdown.

And for only the second time in its nine-year history, the Turkey Day game will feature two conference champions... Manchester, 63 overall, won its last tie for the CCC Eastern Division crown, East, 72 overall, clinched a share of its HCC title.

One item of prestige that is at stake is the Army and Navy Club trophy... The award is presented to the winning team, with a trophy being retired after a school has won three times.

The winning squad also receives the James Horvath trophy, awarded by the game's officials... In head-to-head overall competition (the first meeting was played on opening day and not on Thanksgiving), East holds a 5-4 edge.

There will be no state championship sweepstakes this time around (though East is still mathematically eligible)... Nevertheless, two formidable gridiron opponents will square off in what will be a rematch for many.

Keep the game in perspective

By Bob Pappell
Herold Sports Writer

Most of the 6,000 or so spectators who will attend the Turkey Day football game can't wait to see Manchester and East Catholic collide for the "town championship."

Cheap entertainment on your day off before signing out at the family fest.

At stake, as everyone knows, is the annual "town bragging rights."

The winning players earn the right, but are they really the ones who do most bragging and get so much satisfaction out of it?

Or is someone else out there? Most athletes will admit that they get enough inner gratification from a victory. Winners don't have to talk.

Glenn Dubois wins decision

WEST HARTFORD — Glenn Dubois of Manchester was a unanimous winner by decision over Peter Harris of Ansonia in a 140-pound (lightweight) amateur boxing match Tuesday night here at the Agora Ballroom.

"He looked very good and won all three rounds," said Stan Czerwinski, Dubois' manager. Dubois ran his record to 8-1 with the victory. He has five KOs. Czerwinski said Dubois should be back in the ring around the middle of December.

Explorers open on Sunday

EAST HARTFORD — The East Hartford Explorers tap off their 28th season Sunday night against defending New England Basketball Association champions Willimantic at the Penney High gym at 7:30.

The Thread City club will feature former UConn players Mike McKay, John Thomas and Jeff Carr along with player-coach Ron Pires. The Explorers have bolstered their line-up with former Central Connecticut State University standouts 6-4 Richie Leonard and 6-5 Ken Hightower.

Whalers are in Detroit

DETROIT — The Hartford Whalers, in the throes of a goal-scoring slump, will try to break out tonight when they visit the Detroit Red Wings in NHL play at 7:35. The game will be televised by WTVT-TV 30.

The Whalers have a home date Thanksgiving Night against the Pittsburgh Penguins on Civic Center ice at 7:35. The game will be televised by SportsChannel.

Water polo awards to locals

WINDSOR — A pair of Manchester residents, Jim Crombie and Mike Castelman, won awards for their play this past fall with the Loomis Chafee School's water polo team.

Crombie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Crombie Jr., was the most valuable player for the Windsor-based school's team. He was tri-captain and was named to the all-New England first team as goalie.

Castelman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roland Castelman, was selected to the all-New England second team.

Rec Center schedules

The East Side Rec, Mahoney Rec Center and Community Y will all be closed Thursday, Thanksgiving Day. They will be open Friday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The Mahoney Center open Sunday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. There will be no Recreation swimming at Manchester High Thursday and Friday.

Top hoop prep star killed

CHICAGO — Ben Wilson, one of the nation's top prep basketball stars, died early today from gunshot wounds he suffered during a sidewalk scuffle outside the high school he attended to a state championship.

Wilson, 17, a senior at Simeon Vocational High School, died at 6 a.m. today at St. Bernard Hospital, hospital officials said. Police said they would seek murder charges against two 16-year-old youths who had been charged with attempted murder and attempted robbery. A third youth, age 17, who witnessed the Tuesday afternoon incident, was not charged.

Last year, Wilson, a 6-foot-8 forward, led Simeon to a 30-1 record and the Illinois Class AA title. Scouting services have called him as one of the nation's top players and DePaul, Illinois and Indiana were recruiting him.

Gastineau sentenced to teach

NEW YORK — New York Jets defensive end Mark Gastineau will spend 90 hours teaching his sport to youths at Rikers Island because he fractured a man's nose during a brawl at a swank Manhattan night club.

Gastineau, considered the best defensive end in pro football, had faced up to one year in jail and a $1,000 fine. He was convicted of assault for his part in a free-for-all at Studio 54 on Sept. 30, 1983. Judge Alan Marcus, who presided at Gastineau's trial at Manhattan Criminal Court, Tuesday ordered the Jets star to conduct a football clinic for prisoners between the ages of 16 and 21 awaiting trial at Rikers.

Pirates are for sale

PITTSBURGH — Pittsburgh businessman James Roddey says he would like to take the money-losing Pirates off the hands of the majority-owning John W. Galbreath Family and minority shareholder Warner Communications Corp.

Roddey, an advertising executive who is active in civic affairs, told UPI of his interest in purchasing the National League team shortly after Pirates President Dan Galbreath announced Tuesday that both his family's 51 percent share and Warner's 48 percent share are for sale.

USFL sets plans for 1985 season

NEW YORK (UPI) — Without a defending champion or a definite site for its championship game, the U.S. Football League nevertheless is blasting full speed ahead on its final spring season.

The league, which says it will switch to fall play in 1985, confirmed Tuesday previously announced new markets in Baltimore, Portland, Ore., and Orlando, Fla. within a 14-team, two-division format.

Under the league's new 18-game format, each of the 14 teams will play home-and-home games against teams within its own seven-team conference. In addition, each club plays six games against teams in the other conference when the regular season begins the weekend of Feb. 24.

The Eastern Conference consists of the Baltimore Stars, Birmingham Stallions, Jacksonville Bulls, Memphis Showboats, New Jersey Generals, Orlando Renegades and Tampa Bay Bandits.

Western Conference clubs are the Arizona Wranglers, Denver Gold, Houston Gamblers, Los Angeles Express, Oakland Invaders, Portland Breakers and San Antonio Gunslingers.

The USFL draft will be held Jan. 3-4 and training camps open Jan. 19. The championship game is scheduled for July 14, but the site is undetermined. Various indications are that it may be played at Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J.

The defending champion Philadelphia Stars will move to Baltimore this season and the New Orleans franchise will play in Portland. Two mergers will have Michigan, the scheduled host of the 1984 title game, moving to Oakland to combine with the Invaders and Oklahoma going to Arizona to play with the Wranglers.

Meanwhile, the entire Chicago Bears' season will be held Jan. 3-4 and training camps open Jan. 19. The championship game is scheduled for July 14, but the site is undetermined. Various indications are that it may be played at Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J.

The defending champion Philadelphia Stars will move to Baltimore this season and the New Orleans franchise will play in Portland. Two mergers will have Michigan, the scheduled host of the 1984 title game, moving to Oakland to combine with the Invaders and Oklahoma going to Arizona to play with the Wranglers.

Meanwhile, the entire Chicago Bears' season will be held Jan. 3-4 and training camps open Jan. 19. The championship game is scheduled for July 14, but the site is undetermined. Various indications are that it may be played at Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J. needing a cornerstone player, a player around whom you can build a team. They didn't get one. They got two.

Langston, a 17-game winner and the AL's strikeout king, got three first-place votes and 82 points. Davis is the first Seattle player ever to win a major post-season award and he and Langston are the first teammates to finish 1-2 in AL Rookie of the Year voting since Boston's Fred Lynn and Jim Rice in 1975.

Called up from the minors in April when regular first baseman Ken Phelps broke his hand, Davis took advantage of the opportunity to hit 27 home runs and drive in a club record 116 runs. In addition, he hit 284, collected 34 doubles, 3 triples and scored 80 runs.

"He showed us in spring training that he was a very disciplined and very mature hitter for his age," said former Seattle manager Del Crandall. "In fact, we liked everything about him except his foot speed, but with his power you don't really care."

Davis broke into the major leagues with a flourish, hitting eight homers and driving in 16 runs in his first 15 games. He went on to hit 18 homers and knock in 65 runs by the All-Star break and the only Seattle player named to the All-Star team.

Langman, a 24-year-old left-hander, posted a 17-10 record with a 3.40 ERA and struck out nine batters on the final day of the season to win the league's strikeout crown with 204.

He had an exceptional second half, posting a record of 11-3 after the All-Star break.

Florida to keep SEC title, banned from Sugar Bowl

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Florida can retain its first-ever Southeastern Conference football title until the NCAA makes a final ruling on its probation, but the seventh-ranked Gators are banned from this year's Sugar Bowl.

The SEC champion automatically gets an invitation to play in the Sugar Bowl, but the SEC executive committee ruled Tuesday that Florida is ineligible for post-season play for violating 59 NCAA rules.

Eleventh-ranked Auburn, which lost to Florida this season, will represent the SEC in the New Orleans bowl game if it wins Dec. 1 against Alabama. Should Auburn lose to the Crimson Tide, 18th-ranked Louisiana State would go to the bowl.

Florida faces three years probation for recruitment and other violations, but has appealed the punishment and must wait until an NCAA council hearing in January to learn if lesser sanctions will be imposed.

It was concluded that a decision on whether or not the University of Florida will be recognized as conference champion will, as with other matters, be reserved until the conclusion of the NCAA appeal process. SEC executive committee chairman Dr. James McComas said after the closed-door meeting.

McComas, president of Mississippi State University, said the committee unanimously decided to bar Florida from post-season football games because the school and individuals in its football program have admitted to violating NCAA rules.

The NCAA charges led to the firing of Coach Charley Pell, who was in his sixth year at Florida. He was replaced by offensive coordinator Galen Hall.

McComas said the executive committee wanted to commend Florida president Marshall Criser "for his prompt, decisive action." He said Criser's action called for "parallel action" by the conference.

Criser said the school tried to get the committee to acknowledge Florida's right to the title "without qualification."

"We share with our fans and with our coaches and players the great disappointment that this nationally-ranked team will not participate in a bowl game this year," he said.

Florida players were disappointed, but understanding.

How to WATCH YOUR WEIGHT

for the next 4 weeks

That holiday mirth doesn't have to lead to holiday girth

By Nancy Pappas Herald Reporter

To a dieter, the period between Thanksgiving and New Year's might as well be called the Days of Desperation. The fantasies of others may include visions of sugarplums—at 104 calories each—but committed waistline-watchers must be content with sugar-free chewing gum instead.

Diet Saboteur lurks around every corner. Many family celebrations revolve completely around food.

And there's no use hiding. "You can't stay barricaded in a tower at home, just because you're on a diet," said Mary Ellen Campbell, a dietitian at Manchester Memorial Hospital.

How can you circulate at parties and enjoy family gatherings without blowing your diet completely?

We put that question to diet and nutrition experts around Manchester and were given these suggestions by Todd Poindexter, assistant manager of the Holiday Health Spa on West Middle Turnpike, Shirley of Overeaters Anonymous' Campbell of Manchester Hospital, and Anna Brown of Weight Watchers.

Do little family exercising before a meal. People used to think that this would sharpen the appetite, but vigorous exercising actually suppresses the desire for food, explained Todd Poindexter.

Don't deprive yourself. Take small portions of everything that passes you at the table, but only a tiny bit of the dressing, gravy and candied yams. Fill your plate with green beans or turnips instead, suggested Campbell of Manchester Hospital.

Chew slowly. Put down your fork between bites, and just enjoy the conversation around you. It takes 15 to 20 minutes for your appetite center, sometimes called the appetizer, to get the message that your food needs are satisfied. Since most of us wolf down a meal in less than 15 minutes, we don't have time for an appetite message we eat until our bellies press against our waistbands, giving us the "discomfort cue."

Drink plenty of water throughout the day, and several glasses about 20 minutes before a meal, Poindexter suggested.

Don't skip meals, said Campbell of the hospital. A cup of soup or a half-sandwich and piece of fruit—about half of what you're accustomed to consuming at a meal—is far better than no meal at all.

If you are planning the hospitality, always be sure there is fresh fruit available, Campbell said. Your guests may want it instead of a rich dessert, or as a between-meals fill-in.

When you know you've had enough, but cannot convince the hostess, try "Thank you, I'm comfortable with what I've already eaten," or "Thank you, everything was delicious, maybe I'll be able to fit in a little more later."

Compulsive overeating is a disease of isolation. When you feel depressed about the holidays, or alone in a world of tempting foods, call a friend. In Overeaters Anonymous, there are sponsors and lists of people who are available for a telephone chat at all hours of the day or night.

Keep a journal of feelings during the holidays. Instead of thinking, "Poor me, I can't have all this food people are raving about," make a list of things you're grateful for. Be sure to include diet-related things, such as the fact that you can now wear nice clothes; that you're now in better health; or that your diet has served as an inspiration to friends. Start this week, since it is an appropriate activity for Thanksgiving.

These low-cal recipes can turn any diet into a party

By Nancy Pappas Herald Reporter

Getting ready for a long season of entertaining? Here are some delicious, low-calorie treats, suitable for any occasion, from an elegant supper party to an afternoon of watching football games on television. Approximate calorie counts are listed for each.

Crab-stuffed shrimp

8 large shrimp
2 tablespoons low-calorie mayonnaise
1 tablespoon yogurt
2 teaspoons lemon juice
1/4 teaspoon grated lemon peel
2 teaspoons finely chopped fresh parsley (or 1 teaspoon dried)

1/4 pound real or imitation crab meat (see note below)

Simmer shrimp, still in their shells, in about 1/2-inch water. Remove and drain just as soon as the shrimp change color, or about three minutes. Peel and devein each shrimp. Cut lengthwise until each is almost, but not quite, cut in half.

Mix together remaining ingredients. Spread inside and around the shrimp, pressing lightly. Cover and chill until serving time. For a seated first course, put two on each small plate; for passing at a cocktail party, plan on one per serving. Contains 45 calories per stuffed shrimp.

Note: Imitation crab, also called sea legs, is a seafood product made of fish such as pollock which has been seasoned to taste like crab. It is a remarkably good substitute for the real thing, and costs about a third as much. Purchase fresh, when possible, or frozen, if necessary. The canned product is not a particularly good texture.

Liver pate

4 green onions, chopped
1/2 teaspoon butter
2 tablespoons cottage cheese
1 teaspoon tarragon
1 tablespoon white wine vinegar (preferred) or cider vinegar
1/4 teaspoon garlic salt
2 tablespoons cottage cheese
2 teaspoons finely chopped pistachios, toasted hazelnuts, or almonds

Saute onions in butter until glazed, then add chicken livers and cook until brown. Add tarragon, vinegar and garlic salt. Simmer 5 minutes.

Let cool and puree in a blender with cheese and parsley. Turn into a crock, cover and chill. Sprinkle with nuts at serving time.

Makes 1/4 cups. Contains 20 calories per tablespoon.

Variation: If you prefer a less tangy flavor, substitute chicken broth for the vinegar.

Potted herb cheese

1 cup low-fat small-curd cottage cheese
1/2 cup low-fat yogurt
3 tablespoons minced fresh parsley
1/2 cup minced fresh spinach
2 tablespoons minced shallots
1/4 teaspoon crumbled dry tarragon or basil
1 clove garlic, mashed or minced

Dash red hot pepper sauce

Salt and pepper to taste

Put all ingredients into the blender and blend until fairly smooth. Turn into a small crock, cover and chill. Makes 1/2 cups. At 15 calories per tablespoon. Serve with mushroom caps, zucchini sticks, cherry tomatoes, celery, carrot or fennel sticks.

Spinach-bacon salad

2 tablespoons wine vinegar
1 tablespoon dry white wine
1 teaspoon soy sauce
1/2 teaspoon each salt, sugar, dry mustard and curry powder
1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
1/4 cup sunflower oil

1 12-ounce bag fresh spinach, washed, dried and chilled

1 hard-cooked egg
4 slices bacon, cooked and crumbled

Combine vinegar, wine, soy sauce, salt, sugar, mustard, curry and pepper. Stir until dissolved. Mix in the oil. Shake well and chill.

Tear spinach into bite-sized pieces and place in a salad bowl. Toss with dressing, sprinkle with sliced egg and crumbled bacon.

Serves four, 150 calories per serving.

Mushrooms au jus

1 12-ounce carton fresh mushrooms
Pepper and salt to taste
1 clove garlic, split
Shake each, dried and paprika

If you are wondering what to do with all of the turkey that is left over, the recipes in today's column should inspire you. Leftover turkey has many uses, and can please your family and your budget.

Turkey is low in calories; 160 calories per average serving. It is also low in cholesterol and salt. Turkey has an important place in many special diets.

Because of its mild flavor, turkey is easily blended with many other ingredients to entirely change its taste and appearance. In other words, turkey is easily disguised if a little imagination is used in its preparation and presentation.

The freezer and microwave can team up to make it possible to serve delicious main dishes made from leftover turkey. These frozen entree dishes, ready in minutes, can be a lifesaver on a busy day. Two recipes of this type are included for you to try. You are sure to appreciate the convenience of having them ready when last-minute mealtime panic is about to strike.

Turkey Divan Casserole

2 packages (8 ounces each) frozen chopped broccoli
1 can (10 1/2-ounce) cream of shrimp soup
1/2 cup mayonnaise or salad dressing
1/2 cup milk
1/4 cup white wine
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
3 cups thinly sliced cooked turkey
1 package (12-ounce) frozen pre-cooked tiny shrimp, thawed
1 package (8-ounce) fresh mushrooms, sliced

2 cups dry cornbread stuffing mix
6 slices (1/4-ounce each) pasteurized process American cheese

Remove the outer wrap from broccoli packages, place packages on a plate in the microwave. Microwave on high for 5 to 6 minutes, or until just defrosted; drain.

Mix soup, mayonnaise, milk, salt, wine and nutmeg in a small bowl. Spread half of the mixture in an 12x8-inch baking dish. Arrange broccoli in the dish. Top with turkey slices, shrimp and mushroom slices. Pour remaining soup mixture over top. Sprinkle with half of the cornbread stuffing mix. Cover with waxed paper.

Microwave on high for 8 to 11 minutes, or until heated through. Rotate dish after half of the cooking time. Arrange cheese slices on top, sprinkle with remaining cornbread stuffing mix. Microwave uncovered at 70 percent power (Med-High) for 4 to 5 minutes, or until cheese melts. Let stand for 5 minutes before serving. Serves 4 to 6 people.

Turkey and Pea Pods

3 cups cooked turkey pieces, skin removed

Marinade:
2 tablespoons water
1 tablespoon sherry
2 teaspoons soy sauce
1/4 teaspoon honey
1/4 teaspoon dry mustard
1/4 teaspoon ground ginger
1/4 teaspoon instant minced garlic
1/4 teaspoon onion powder
1 thin lemon slice

To serve:
1 package (6-ounce) frozen pea pods
1/4 cup water
2 tablespoons oyster sauce
2 teaspoons cornstarch
1 teaspoon instant chicken granules
1/4 cups sliced fresh mushrooms
2 tablespoons chopped green onion
2 cups cooked rice or chowmein noodles

Place turkey pieces in a freezer container. In a 2-cup measure, combine all marinade ingredients. Microwave on high for 1 to 2 minutes, or until boiling.

Japan dishes suit the palate

Recipes for such familiar Japanese recipes as Miso soup, sashimi and sushi, tempura and teriyaki are intermingled with Japanese home-style cooking in the New Japanese Cooking Class Cookbook, recently published by Consumer Guide.

This is another in a series of best-selling Cooking Class Cookbooks published by Berkman House and Publishing of New York. The book is $4.95 and is available in most book shops and department stores where cookbooks are sold.

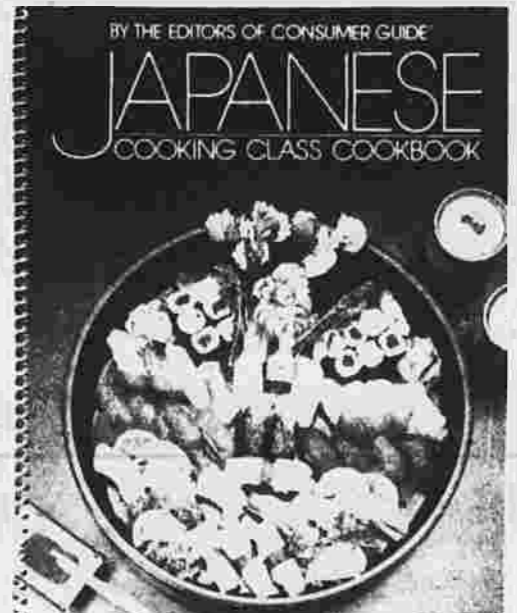

With easy-to-understand instructions and colorful step-by-step photographs, even the novice cook can prepare these recipes — you don't have to be Japanese.

There is also a lengthy list of Japanese ingredients. Many will be found in specialty food stores.

The editors of the cookbook invite you to open it to any page and begin your travels through the delicious world of Japanese cooking.

Chicken meatballs
4 ounces green beans
1 pound ground chicken
1 tablespoon plus 2 teaspoons sugar
1/2 cup soy sauce
1 medium egg
1/2 tablespoons cornstarch
2 cups dashi
1/2 tablespoons sake
1/2 tablespoons mirin
Cut green beans crosswise into halves or thirds. Reserve. Mix chicken with the 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 tablespoon of the soy sauce and the egg in medium mixing bowl. Sprinkle with cornstarch. Stir to mix well. Mix dashi, sake, mirin and remaining 3/4 cup soy sauce and 1 tablespoon sugar in 3-quart saucepan; heat to boiling over medium high heat. Form chicken mixture into 1-inch balls. Add chicken balls, one at a time, to boiling broth; boil until chicken is cooked, 5 to 6 minutes. Remove balls from broth with slotted spoon. Add beans to broth and cook until beans are crisp-tender, 2 to 3 minutes. Remove beans from broth. Serve chicken balls with the beans and top with hot cooking broth, if desired. Makes 4 servings.

Baked fish & Vegetables
1 1/4 pounds flounder or other white fish fillets
3 teaspoons sake
1 teaspoon soy sauce
1 teaspoon fresh ginger juice
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 large carrot, pared
2 small green bell peppers
1 medium yellow onion
1/2 tablespoon vegetable oil
1/2 medium lemon, cut into thick slices
Cut fish into 4 equal pieces and place in shallow glass bowl. Mix sake, soy sauce, ginger juice and salt in small bowl; pour over fish. Let stand 10 minutes, drain, reserving marinade. Cut carrot crosswise into 1/2-inch thick slices; if desired, cut into decorative shapes. Cut green peppers crosswise into 1/2-inch thick slices and the same with the onion, and separate onion slices into rings. Heat oven to 325 degrees. Brush oil over centers of 4 pieces aluminum foil. Place 1 piece fish on center of each piece of foil; arrange carrot, pepper and onion slices over fish. Sprinkle with marinade. Bring two opposite sides of foil together over center of food; fold together in 1/4-inch folds to seal. Fold up each end of foil packet to securely seal in fish and vegetables. Bake until fish flakes easily with fork, about 15 to 20 minutes. Place foil packets on serving platters; unfold foil. Serve immediately with lemon slices.

Ginger Pork saute
1 pound boneless pork loin or tenderloin
4 ounces Chinese cabbage
3 tablespoons soy sauce
1 tablespoon fresh ginger juice
1 tablespoon sake
1 teaspoon sugar
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
Cut pork crosswise into 1/4-inch thick slices. Cut slices into 2-inch pieces. Remove hard center sections from cabbage leaves, if necessary. Cut cabbage into 1-inch squares. Mix soy sauce, ginger juice, sake and sugar in small bowl; stir until sugar dissolves. Heat 1/2 tablespoon oil in skillet over high heat. Add pork, saute, stirring constantly, until pork is half cooked, about 3 minutes. Remove pork from pan; reserve. Add remaining 1/2 tablespoon oil to skillet. Add cabbage, saute, stirring constantly until almost tender, 1 to 2 minutes. Return pork to skillet; add soy sauce mixture. Cook, stirring occasionally, until pork is cooked through, 2 to 3 minutes. Serve immediately.

Repent, you speeder

BEAUMONT, Texas (UPI) — A high school junior has filed suit against a highway patrolman, claiming the officer preached to the teenager and made him sign a statement dedicating his life to Jesus Christ.

The officer signed the paper "Jesus."

Darryl Ray Craig, 17, who filed the suit Monday, claimed he was driving home from a rock concert Sept. 13 when his truck struck a utility pole and overturned on Interstate 10.

Trooper Douglas Fetters arrived and made the youth sit in a patrol car for two hours while the officer preached to him, the suit said. The trooper allegedly made the boy list his sins on a sheet of paper. The list included "sassing back mom" and "stealing candy."

Eggplant with a twist

Carolyn Woodward of Waddell Road is a fan of the eggplant-and-veal dish known as Noto Romano, served at Viteello's Ristorante on Main Street. "Because of the generous portions, I brought some of the Noto Romano home," said Woodward. "My son warmed it up in the microwave and loved it, not realizing it was an eggplant dish."

Woodward says she is always looking for unusual ways to prepare vegetables, and this is tops on her list of must-have recipes.

The dish has been popular with diners at all three locations of Viteello's, according to Gail Cohen, vice president of the firm. The restaurant was first in Maine, then on Hartford's Franklin Avenue, and is now in Manchester. Here is the way the dish is prepared in Manchester:

Noto Romano
2 green bell peppers
Olive oil as needed
1/2 teaspoon dried basil
1/2 teaspoon dried oregano
Salt and pepper to taste
6 to 8 cutlets of veal, pounded thin
1 eggplant, sliced lengthwise
1 egg beaten with 2 teaspoons water
2 1/2 cups Italian-seasoned bread crumbs
1/2 cup mushrooms, sliced in chunks
Butter or margarine
1/2 pound mozzarella cheese

2 to 3 cups red tomato sauce
Seed bell peppers and cut into lengthwise strips. Sprinkle with basil, oregano, salt and pepper, drizzle with a little olive oil and bake in a 325-degree oven until barely tender.

Meanwhile, dip veal cutlets and eggplant slices into the egg, then dredge in bread crumbs. Start olive oil heating in two wide, shallow frying pans. Fry veal slices for less than a minute on each side, and fry eggplant slices for about 90 seconds on each side. Layer veal and then eggplant into a shallow casserole or au gratin dish. Set aside briefly.

Add a tablespoon or two of butter or margarine to the eggplant frying pan, and saute mushrooms briefly.

Scatter peppers and mushrooms over veal, then top with shredded mozzarella cheese. Bake in a 325-degree oven until cheese is melted and all layers are hot. Top with hot tomato sauce. Serves four. May be accompanied by a side dish of pasta.

To have your favorite restaurant dish included in this weekly column, simply write a note telling us the name of your favorite dish at a local restaurant. We'll contact the chef and ask for the recipe. Include your name, address, and a phone number where you can be reached during the day. (Phone numbers will not be published.) Please concentrate on restaurants in the Manchester area. Address inquiries to Today's Special, Manchester Herald, P.O. Box 531, Manchester, 06040.

Cable TV firm notes first year

By Sarah Posselt Herald Reporter

BOLTON — The head of the cable television company that serves Bolton and Andover thinks cable programs aren't what they ought to be.

"There are only two or three good movies a month on HBO," Al Wiersma, the blond and bearded general manager of United Cable Television of Connecticut, said in a recent interview.

Wiersma also said that he's written to MTV officials because of complaints from parents and school teachers about the violence and sex in music videos aired on the network.

MTV and CBN, the religious network, headed the list of channels a survey of the company's Plainville franchise area showed subscribers were willing to drop to make room for Channel 61, Wiersma said. United Cable is required by law to carry 61, the new channel in Hartford.

United Cable's two Connecticut franchises offer 47 channels of programming but have the capacity to offer as many as 60, Wiersma said. The company's list of pay options includes Home Box Office and the Playboy channel.

Asked if Playboy is popular in Vernon and Bolton, Wiersma answered, "You'd be surprised."

The LOCAL HEADQUARTERS for the eastern Connecticut franchise sits across Route 44 from Syndet Products in Bolton, in a 60-year-old house.

A bedroom now serves as a customer waiting room. The dining room is an office. The family room was converted into a computer room, or "head end," where the equipment that monitors and controls cable signals is located.

For a while, the equipment was hooked up to a main computer at the company's Plainville headquarters, where Wiersma spends most of his time. But repeated breakdowns in August and September forced the company to move the computer to Bolton, where Wiersma said it has worked with fewer problems.

A new computer, slightly larger than a two-drawer filing cabinet and valued by Wiersma at about $40,000, was recently delivered to the Bolton headquarters but is not yet hooked up.

Wiersma said he feared that a computer-related service blackout in August that lasted more than 12 hours would damage the company's reputation. He said Hartford Cable Television's service lapses have tainted the public's faith in the Connecticut cable industry.

"We've all suffered because of it," he said of the Hartford franchise's problems. "We only lose service once a year, but when it happens people go crazy."

THE FAILURES of several major cable companies in other parts of the country to make good on their promises pushed the industry into a slump in the late 1970s, Wiersma said.

He said the industry is coming out of a bad period, years when local governments required the companies to underwrite expensive public access facilities and to pay fees as high as $1 million before being allowed to build.

His comments were echoed by Edward W. Dooley, vice president for public affairs of the National Cable Television Association.

"Gold plating ultimately drives the cost up to customers," Dooley said. "And you had this frenzied approach to construction." He said some companies ran up huge debts to install systems fast.

In the early days, cable companies incorrectly forecast profits from services that it turned out there was no demand for, Wiersma said. He said people are still not tuned into the wide range of uses cable can serve.

Wiersma said he doesn't have time to watch much television himself. But when he does, he's likely to tune in to ESPN, the sports network, or Atlanta entrepreneur Ted Turner's Cable-News Network.

Wiersma predicted the quality of cable programming will rise as the companies to underwrite expensive

BUSINESS Commission reports most toys are safe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Consumer Product Safety Commission, in its annual pre-holiday warning, says most toys on the market for Christmas are safe, but warns parents must still closely watch children when they play with toys.

The estimated number of toy-related injuries declined from 123,000 in 1982 to 118,000 in 1983, the commission said Tuesday in praising manufacturers for taking safety precautions.

"The most common type of accident occurred not because there was anything wrong with the toy, but because the toy was not being used safely," commission Chairman Nancy Steorts said.

The commission called on parents to be especially careful of balloons, which are perfectly safe when inflated but can easily choke a child when deflated. Steorts said of the 16 toy-related deaths reported to the commission last year, five were caused by balloons.

Steorts, standing amid dozens of toys and games, led a group of children from a Washington elementary school through a classroom-type exercise on how to make sure little brothers and sisters play safely through the holiday season.

Satisfied the children had learned to keep deflated balloons away from the smaller kids, Steorts brought on Santa Claus who presented each pupil with an early Christmas gift.

Steorts warned about toys with small parts, designed for older children but which toddlers under 3 years old can take apart, try to eat and choke on.

Doug Thompson, president of the Toy Manufacturers of America, said, "In most cases of misuse, it's the exuberance of youth and perhaps a lack of supervision in the home."

Taking note of the estimated $4 billion worth of toys sold between Thanksgiving and Christmas, the commission warned parental Santas to beware of toy chests with unsupported lids that can crash shut and small squeeze toys and rattle that can be swallowed.

"Crib gyms" are fine for tiny infants but turn into hazards when the child reaches about six months and begins to try to stand up because he can become entangled in the device, the commission said.

The commission recalled 29 toys last year, with the cooperation of the manufacturers, and another 11

Phony invoice scams increase

If you're in a business, large or small, in any part of the United States, you must be on guard against exploding scams in phony invoices for office supplies. You already may have been swindled by one of the many companies that send out solicitations that look exactly like invoices for real merchandise or services.

Your Money's Worth
Sylvia Porter

The fake bill racket makes money by flooding so many businessmen with these look-alike bills that even if only a few owners actually pay, the swindlers still come out way ahead.

The originators of these scams can be very creative. It's commonplace, according to a Postal Service spokesman, for companies to receive bills for such typical office necessities as copying paper, toner and related supplies, typewriter ribbons and correcting ribbons and fluids, pens and pencils.

There are many other variables. The Better Business Bureau of Metropolitan New York has received complaints about phony invoices for listings in telephone directories and non-existent classified directories. Businesses that received these fake bills complained that the solicitations looked so much like an invoice they couldn't guess if it was or was not a swindle. In any event, they had never agreed, or asked, to be listed in the so-called directory.

Many of these fakes ask you to pay for listings in obscure journals read by special-interest groups or minorities.

And in a new twist, some companies have received "bills" for advertising space in newspapers they never authorized.

The crooks behind this swindle claim that the companies receiving these bills have bought ad space in religious or special-interest newspapers.

Not surprisingly, the people behind these rockets move around a lot and change addresses and box numbers frequently. As a spokesman for the Postal Service told Ellen Herrmann, my research assistant, "They move into a city or town, send out all these invoices, and start getting in some money. Of course, complaints start, too, but by the time the whole thing becomes public, they've made money and they leave."

The Postal Service takes a dim view of these fake bills, and there are laws and regulations against this kind of deception.

It is illegal to mail an invoice that is a solicitation unless the mailing bears either of two specific disclaimers in regulated type, layout and color.

One of the disclaimers reads: "This is not a bill, this is a solicitation. You are under no obligation to pay unless you accept this offer."

The authorized disclaimer must be printed in type on the front of the solicitation. The type, by the way, has to be at least one-quarter of an inch in height.

Since these phony bills make money when you, the business owner, or whoever is responsible for paying bills are inattentive, you must be aware of what they are doing.

Don't be deceived by mailings that look official. Take your time to read through them, including the fine print.

Here are some other suggestions about what to do if you are unlucky enough to get one of these in the mail.

Don't pay any bills unless you find the appropriate orders or phone log authorizing the purchase. Of course, make sure the merchandise actually was received as ordered.

Report the phony mailing to the local Better Business Bureau and postal authorities.

Save all the material, including the envelope, so you can mail it to the chief postal inspector. Someone at your local post office can tell you how to prepare an affidavit to include with the mailing so you can make a formal complaint.

In other words, your complaint can help put one of those fakes out of business while protecting your own.

UConn installs new system

The state collected $152.9 million in taxes on September sales, compared to $132.7 million for the same month a year ago, Edward Balda, the state's chief revenue forecaster, said Tuesday.

He said the 15.2 percent increase "is still a very strong performance" but marked the apparent end of a 14-month revenue surge that saw monthly increases averaging 20 percent over the previous year's collections.

The sales tax surge was a key contributor to the record $164.4 million surplus posted in the fiscal year and the $125 million surplus projected this fiscal year.

"It appears that Connecticut is starting to follow the national slow-down in retail sales," Balda said, but has predicted for the past few months that the surge would come to an end.

It's incredible it has lasted for 14 months," said Balda, who is chief of revenue and economic forecasting in the Office of Policy and Management, the state's budget office.

Area cable TV company notes first year

demand grows. He said pay channels like HBO need far more good movies than movie-makers can supply so many pay networks are now commissioning their own movies.

UNITED CABLE marked its first anniversary in eastern Connecticut last month by giving the first subscriber a deluxe package of cable services for the next 12 months.

The eastern Connecticut franchise was a $12 million investment for the Denver-based United Cable Television Corp., Wiersema said. He does not expect the franchise to turn a profit before 1988, possibly not until 1990.

The 10-year-old Plainville franchise cost $19 million to develop and turn a profit, he said.

Wiersema has said he expects the eastern Connecticut franchise to be completed by the end of 1985.

By mid-October, the franchise had strung cable wire past 14,579 homes in Vernon, Bolton, Ellington and Talland. The system has 7,342 subscribers, or about 50 percent of the homes that are newly passed by cable. There are about 23,000 homes in the seven-town franchise.

Installation is nearly complete in Vernon, Tolland and Ellington. In Bolton, only 10 of a planned 60 miles of cable is installed but the rest is scheduled to be finished by the end of the year, Wiersema said.

Andover, Hebron and Marlborough also will be within the franchise area but are not scheduled for hook-up until next year.

WIERSEMA SAID he expects between 60 and 65 percent of homes in the seven towns to subscribe once installation is complete. The Plainville franchise has 82,000 subscribers, or about 64 percent of the homes passed by cable, he said.

The Plainville franchise covers Bristol, New Britain, Berlin, Canton, Avon, Farmington and Burlington. It is one of 38 franchises the company holds across the United States. The company has a partial interest in 10 other franchises.

Nationwide, United Cable has almost 600,000 subscribers, or 54 percent of the households in its franchise areas.

according to the company's annual report. The National Cable Television Association counts United Cable as the 11th largest cable company in the country.

United Cable Chairman Gene W. Schneider said in the company's 1984 annual report that it is also the seventh fastest-growing cable company.

Wiersema said he wants to sign up the other 40 to 50 percent of households that has so far failed to attract. He defined the unconverted as largely people on fixed incomes and the elderly.

"This is where the fun begins," he said. "We have to get extremely bold and try new things."

ELDERLY VIEWERS are "more attracted to news and information channels than entertainment," Wiersema said. He suspects many older people aren't aware of the range of programming available, including such services as LifeTime, a 24-hour health channel. He said aggressive advertising as well as new programming "should turn" most of those households into customers.

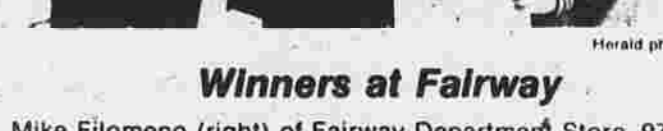

During his 13 years in the cable business, 10 of which have been with United Cable, Wiersema has heard some wild misconceptions about the way cable television works.

Some subscribers complained when cable failed to turn the picture on their black-and-white sets to color. Others put towels over their screens to keep the company from spying into their homes, he said.

A spokesman for the National Cable Television Association said Monday that last month's federal deregulation of subscription rates for basic cable service should help the market by allowing cable firms to offer more service options with varying prices.

Chairman Schneider said that some services are more popular than expected and have been underpriced by local government rate regulators.

Wiersema said he expects the industry to compete eventually with telephone companies in fields like home banking and shopping by cable. Schneider also raised the possibility that future systems could allow customers to pay for a single program, to send and receive information and could provide home security monitoring.
