Santa and sales open state holiday season

By United Press International

Clear weather, special sales and a day off were a winning combination for Connecticut shopping malls and department stores when strong sales initiated the Christmas shopping season Friday.

With Thanksgiving Day a memory, many turned their energies to Christmas shopping. About 20,000 people flowed through giant Westfarms Mall, the largest in the Hartford area, and traffic backed up on access roads.

This is one of the most important and highlighted shopping days before Christmas," said Ann Marie Powers, the mall's marketing and public relations manager. "But it is very different from last year. Shoppers are very direct. They are coming to get what they want and going."

Santa Claus led a parade through downtown Hartford to the Civic Center where Christmas trees and holiday displays drew sights and smiles from shoppers as they headed for the stores.

Shawn Larson, 9, of Manchester, turned the key to illuminate Constitution Plaza with 30,000 white lights strung through trees and shrubs and around sculptured angels and reindeer.

Many visitors to the 21st annual Festival of Lights contributed canned goods for an emergency food bank in the Greater Hartford area.

Charitable organizations across the state made sure hundreds of the poor and needy could give thanks for a hot, holiday meal Thursday. Churches, community centers and Salvation Army kitchens across the state served nearly 1,000 Thanksgiving dinners.

"It was an enjoyable time," said Stanley Jagiello, a volunteer at the Salvation Army in New Britain. "People had smiles on their faces and that's what counts."

At least two people died in traffic accidents since the holiday weekend began 6 p.m. Wednesday. Both fatal accidents were on secondary roads in Fairfield County. One was a head-on collision on a state highway where state police continued increased patrols for

Man to get plastic heart on Sunday

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — A candidate for the world's second artificial heart implant has been selected and the surgery will be performed Sunday morning at Humana Hospital Audubon, it was announced Friday night.

The recipient is William Schroeder, 52, of Jasper, Ind., who was already at the hospital awaiting the procedure. Humana Heart Institute International said.

Dr. William DeVries, the pioneer surgeon who implanted the world's first artificial heart in Seattle dentist Barney Clark at the University of Utah Medical Center on Dec. 2, 1982, will begin operating on Schroeder at 8 a.m. EST Sunday.

Schroeder was first diagnosed as having coronary artery disease in 1982 after suffering a heart attack. Humana spokesman Linda Broadus said. His disease was confirmed by cardiologists in February 1983.

The patient, a retired quality assurance specialist at the Crane Army Ammunition Activity in Crane, Ind., was forced to retire in March 1983 because of the disease and underwent open-heart surgery with several coronary bypass grafts performed by Dr. Allan Lansing's cardio-vascular surgery team at Humana Hospital Audubon.

The surgery was successful but his condition continued to progress to where he was diagnosed in October 1984 as having Class Four cardiomyopathy.

The mechanical heart is practically the same as the Jarvik-7 that beat 12,912,400 times in Clark's chest before he died of a colon infection 112 days after the implant, Broadus said.

The only change in the plastic and metal heart is the valve, she said. A single piece of metal is being used instead of welded design, aimed at preventing the break that occurred on Day 12 of the Clark experiment.

Also new is the approval to use a battery-powered, portable power device for the air-driven machine, she said. Unlike the 325-pound bedside unit, the portable device measures just 9 square inches, weighs 11.4 pounds and would allow the patient to leave the confines of a hospital room.

Dr. Robert Jarvik, inventor of the plastic and metal heart, says the portable device is the "key to high quality of life" for the patient, allowing him the mobility Clark never had because complications set in before the portable driver could be used.

Broadus said a detailed, seven-page consent form warns the prospective patient of severely limited activity, kidney loss, liver, bowel or lung dysfunction and failure of the mechanical heart itself.

The form also warns of the high level of media attention that will follow the operation, she said.

Nitze likely to lead U.S. in arms talks

By Helen Thomas United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Reagan will meet with top officials next week to "fine tune" American positions for new nuclear arms negotiations in Europe.

CBS News, quoting reliable administration sources Thursday, said the United States was considering a possible three-year moratorium on U.S. testing of space weapons, and a temporary suspension of additional deployment of cruise and Pershing missiles in Western Europe. Both would represent concessions by the United States.

Asked about the CBS report, Sims said, "I'm sure on missile deployment there's no change in our plans."

He also said, "We would not have a moratorium as a pre-condition. But we will discuss it if the Soviets bring it up. We would be willing to discuss mutual restraints" in the negotiations.

About Moscow's continued insistence that the American medium range missiles be removed from Europe, Sims said, "We don't expect them to change their public positions."

National security affairs adviser Robert McFarlane said Friday the "pace of the dialogue has picked up considerably" since a Sept. 28 meeting between Reagan and Gromyko provided "clearing of the air."

Other sessions will be held with the involved over next week and Sims added that "we hope we can sustain it in private channels and more moderate elements at the State Department."

Sims said that at a meeting late Wednesday, chaired by McFarlane and attended by all "key players," everyone "signed on" to the approach for the Geneva talks.

Area Republicans say changes coming

By Tracy L. Geoghegan Herald Reporter

Area Republicans say Connecticut residents can expect to see Gov. William O'Neill humming a different tune when both houses of the General Assembly convene with new GOP majorities in January.

"People will see a difference in policy," said Rep. J. Peter Fusco, R-Marlborough, whose 55th Assembly District includes part of Manchester. Fusco said that because Senate Republicans will have enough votes to override a gubernatorial veto, O'Neill will be forced to make compromises with the GOP as he never has before.

"Now the papers say he's talking about repealing taxes," Fusco said. "He decided to lead rather than follow."

For some time, state Republicans have been calling for a reduction in taxes. Fusco said he predicted that by the time

O'Neill will have a hard time, but everyone will have to get along," she said. "There is going to be a lot of hard work."

"O'Neill has got some real problems," Zinsner said. "He's had some trouble with scandals in his administration and he knows there are some other Democrats who would like to be governor."

"He may use the fact that there's a Republican Legislature to be a very political and get himself in a position where he can blame everything on the Republicans."

Zinsner added, "I think he's going to be very political."

"O'NEILL IS IN TROUBLE," was the view of Manchester Republican Town Committee Chairman Curtis Smith. On the tax issue, Smith said, O'Neill "is taking a position against his party in order to play ball with the Republicans."

Smith predicted the governor will be able to successfully straddle the middle ground between his party and the new Republican majority in the Legislature and win re-election in 1986.

Small investment brings big boost to state film industry

By Lyda Phillips
United Press International

HARTFORD — When Elisabeth Andrienas goes to the movies she's not ogling the actors or reacting to the plot. She's evaluating the background for upcoming locations in Connecticut.

In the year the Connecticut Film Commission has been in existence, director Endrienas has brought $1 million in film production to the state, most of it in television commercials. And she's done it on a $50,000 budget.

Endrienas says Connecticut has all the ingredients for films: "the variety of locations, the four seasons, industry, the water, the hills."

"There's diversity too. A lot of times film makers are not looking for beautiful settings," she adds. Commissioner of Economic Development John Caron, also film commission chairman, agrees.

"We have a tremendous variety of locations and a number of well-known people from stage and screen" living here who help spread the word that Connecticut is a beautiful place to make a movie, he says.

Despite competition from other New England states for the Hollywood glitter (and dollar), Endrienas says Connecticut should do well. Massachusetts is the most formidable competitor, she says, with a film bureau since the early 1970s.

"We have competition," Caron acknowledges. "It's the same thing we faced in industrial development. The image and mindset is of Vermont's fantastic, New Hampshire's fantastic. But we can offer almost any location. We can match 'em."

Endrienas acts as a go-between between film producers and local people and institutions. A producer sends her a description of the film or a quick sketch of the setting the movie requires.

Endrienas then combs the countryside for a suitable spot, negotiating with the owner of the property or the residents of the town. During production she tries to protect the interests of both the film production company and the local institution or individuals.

A lot of times I get involved only after they've run into some problem," she says.

Recently she found a location for Charles Kuralt's television program in the wilds of eastern Connecticut. Kuralt sought a "very rural spot." Endrienas suggested five or six locations, including Coventry and Glasgow, where the post office is in the postmistress's living room. The segment is scheduled to be shot in February.

And she was looking for a location for a recent film to be made by Alan Siegel, director of "Taxi Driver" and "The Sting."

The film will involve an extraordinary relationship between a young reform school student and the institution's headmaster. The producer sent a two-paragraph description and an artist's rendering of the setting he wants — a Gothic wooded school with a pond, stream and a hockey field, with absolutely no modern structures."

Endrienas began with a list of possible locations. First Long Lane School in Middletown, then down the Connecticut River Valley to mental hospitals, prep schools, sanitariums and retreats.

"It's a natural spot," she says. "I've gotten over the point of getting excited." Now she just hopes that she is its proximity to New York City where many of the major commercial television production companies are based. Most of the commercial work is shot in Fairfield County.

commercial work. That's our bread and butter," she says.

Birthday almanac

Nov. 25 — Joe DiMaggio (1914), the New York Yankees outfielder who batted safely in a major-league record 56 consecutive games in 1941. He was chosen the American League's most valuable player three times.

Nov. 26 — Rich Little (1928), the Canadian-born actor and impressionist who made his U.S. television debut in 1964. His numerous nightclub and television appearances have made him the best-known impressionist of his time.

Nov. 27 — James Agee (1893-1955), the poet, film critic, screen writer and author. His novel, "A Death in the Family," won the 1937 Pulitzer Prize for literature.

Nov. 28 — Charles T. Curtis (1812-1894), the lawyer and historian who was the defending lawyer in the Dred Scott case that reached the U.S. Supreme Court in 1857. He authored several books on U.S. constitutional history.

Nov. 29 — Louisa May Alcott (1832-1888), the author whose autobiographical novel, "Little Women," brought her nationwide fame. She was also active in the women's suffrage and temperance movements.

Nov. 30 — Sir Winston Churchill (1874-1965), the English statesman and author whose leadership and stirring oratory inspired his nation during World War II. He was awarded the 1953 Nobel Prize for literature.

Dec. 1 — Woody Allen (1935-), the comedian, film maker and actor who has directed and starred in such films as "Play It Again, Sam," "Annie Hall," "Stardust Memories" and "Manhattan."

Historical perspective on TV

Historian Henry Steele Commager, 82, insists television is vulgarizing the American mind. "Everything gets 30 seconds. If somebody's house burns down. Or the drop a bomb on Constantinople. Unless it's advertising — that gets two minutes," he said.

The exception, said the Amherst professor, is public television. He will appear in WGBH-TV's half-hour production, "Dark Ages," on what's wrong with American history.

After the 30-minute taping, Commager stood from his chair, plunked his history text on the table and announced, "You've got enough."

Don't get mad, get glad

It will be a long time before Connie Roux of Riverside, Calif., throws anything away without checking it twice.

Roux, a wallpaper hanger, said a woman she was working for called her home Tuesday — her birthday — with what seemed like a strange question.

"Connie, where are my paper towels?" she asked.

"I used them up," Roux replied.

"Where is the empty roll at the end of it?" "I threw it in the trash."

"Where is your trash?"

"They take the garbage and look it away."

At that point, Roux said, the woman "went nuts" — and eventually explained that she and her husband had hidden $2,500 inside the roll.

Roux and the homeowners went to the local dump, where operators helped find the spot where the nine-tons of trash from her neighborhood was deposited.

After 45 minutes of wading through the garbage, Roux found the roll — with the $2,500 intact — at the bottom of the roll.

"From now on," she said, "I'm never going to throw anything away, not even an empty toilet paper roll, without checking inside it."

Almanac

Today is Saturday, November 24th, the 328th day of 1984 with 37 to follow.

The moon is moving toward its first quarter.

The morning star is Saturn.

The evening stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Jupiter.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Sagittarius. They include Zachary Taylor, 12th president of the United States, in 1784 and painter Henri Toulouse-Lautrec in 1864.

On this date in history:

In 1860, women from 21 states met in Cleveland to draw up plans for organization of the American Women Suffrage Association.

In 1961, the U.S. Security Council authorized Secretary-General U. Thant to use force to settle the violent Belgian Congo crisis which erupted after Belgium gave the Congo its independence.

In 1963, Lee Harvey Oswald, named as the assassin of President John F. Kennedy two days earlier, was fatally shot by Jack Ruby in a Dallas jail.

In 1974, at the Vladivostok summit, President Ford and Russian Communist Party leader Leonid Brezhnev tentatively agreed to limit the number of all offensive strategic nuclear weapons and delivery systems through 1985.

A thought for the day: Scottish poet Robert Gilfillan said: "There's hope for every one and a habit for every pain, but the first joy in our heart never comes back again."

Today in history

On Nov. 24, 1963, Lee Harvey Oswald, named as the assassin of President John F. Kennedy two days earlier, was fatally shot by Jack Ruby in a Dallas jail. He is seen here, moments before he was shot, being escorted by two lawmen in the Dallas Police Station.

Lawmakers predict tax cuts, spending scrutiny in 1985

By Tracy L. Geoghegan
Herald Reporter

Tax cuts, home care for senior citizens, establishing an inspector general's office and tighter budget laws are some of the things area legislators plan to seek when the General Assembly convenes in January.

Manchester legislators said they plan to support the repeal of so-called "nolucance taxes" on children's clothing and meals under $1, as well as the real estate conveyance tax.

Sen. Carl A. Zinsser, R-Manchester, said he would also like to see a tax on seeds and fertilizer repealed.

Rep. Elsie "Big" Swenson, R-Manchester, said she will support a reduction of transportation taxes to senior citizens.

Rep. James McCavanagh, D-Manchester, predicted corporate taxes might be cut next year as well.

The sales tax, McCavanagh predicted, will remain the same in 1985. But he said if the state continues to generate a budget surplus, Connecticut residents may see a cut the following year.

Legislators should also take a good look at taxes on estates inherited by spouses, according to Rep. J. Peter Fuscas, R-Marlborough. Fuscas called such taxes "archaic" in a society in which many families have two incomes.

"How can you separate revenues when two spouses work?" Fuscas asked. "It's the same money."

Republicans in Connecticut have long been trying to establish an inspector general in the state to investigate and prosecute waste and corruption, several legislators said.

Zinsser and Fuscas both said they expect the bill to be passed by the new Republican majority in the next session of the General Assembly.

"We've got auditors doing that job now, and they can only go so far," Zinsser said.

Both Fuscas and Swenson said they will support the home care bill, which would provide state assistance to make it easier for senior citizens to remain at home, rather than be forced into nursing homes.

"Home care costs one-third of what nursing homes cost," Fuscas said. "Plus it provides a more dignified way of living and preserves a person's assets."

McCavanagh said he will be pushing to change public safety laws regarding malfunctioning rear lights on cars.

McCavanagh said at present people missing a rear light are fined $40 if they are caught by police. He said because most people don't check their lights every time they get in the car, he would like to see warnings given by police at first.

Then 10 days, if the light has not been fixed, violators should be fined a larger amount of money.

Fuscas said he has high hopes that his version of the "Delaware Plan" — defeated under the Democratic majority — will pass when he reintroduces it in the Republican-controlled Legislature.

The Delaware Plan, based on the financial programs instituted by former Delaware Gov. Pierre duPont, would amend the state constitution to stipulate that no new tax can be passed and no existing tax increased without a 60-percent vote in both houses.

The plan would also establish regulations for "rainy day fund" in the state budget. Fuscas said. Under these laws, the state could only spend 90 percent of its revenues — and also would be required to hold back two percent of its revenues to take care of deficits.

The Delaware Plan would take some of the politics out of state financial decisions, Fuscas said, by hiring professionals to handle revenue, expenditures and projections.

Firehouse appraisal is needed

Eighth Utilities District President Walter Joyner says he can't put a dollar figure on the "fair market value" of the town's firehouse on Tolland Turnpike.

But he said this week he supposed for market purposes he would sell to the district, the town will engage an appraiser to arrive at an exacting price.

On Monday, the district Board of Directors voted to make another offer to buy the firehouse.

Unlike the district's first offer, which was rejected July 12 by the Manchester Board of Directors, the new one does not set a limit of $350,000 on the price. The motion approved by the district directors is evaluated for market value by determining how much it would cost to replace it and subtracting how much it has worn in the years since it has been built, according to those knowledgeable about the property.

The Buckland firehouse was built eight years ago for $50,000, including the cost of the land.

Most of the town directors said in July that the sale would not benefit the town — but not because the district offer was too low. They said the town needs the firehouse to protect the town and schools, despite the fact that it cannot serve the Buckland area in which it is located.

A state Supreme Court decision several years ago upheld the district's claim that it provides fire service in Buckland.

Joyner said Wednesday that he plans to suggest again, as he has in the past, that if the district buys the firehouse, the district could lease back one of its two bays to the town.

Under that arrangement, he said, the Town of Manchester Fire Department and the Eighth District Fire Department would be back each other up. The district department is composed of volunteers. The town department is unionized and firefighters work full-time.

Church sponsors sex talk

Center Congregational Church is sponsoring a program Sunday night to help parents teach their children about sexuality.

Linda Gray, who represents the Board of Christian Education at the church, said the workshop is designed "to help parents communicate better with their kids."

The program, titled "Connections," will be led by a registered nurse and was developed as part of the family planning training program at the University of Connecticut Health Center. It will run from 7 to 10 p.m.

Call 647-9941 for more information.

Alzheimer's group to meet

The area Alzheimer's Support Group will meet next Wednesday at 7 p.m. in Conference Room 1 of Manchester Memorial Hospital.

Friends, relatives and others who care for patients with Alzheimer's — a degenerative brain disorder with symptoms like those of senility — are invited to attend. The support group was recently set up with a federal grant, and is sponsored by Visiting Nurse and Home Care of Manchester and the hospital.

Donations will be accepted at the meeting, though admission is free. For more information, call Alice G. Schofield or Louise Lettau of the Superintendent of Schools Wilson Drakin will be able to sit on the lap, receive a free gift and have a photo taken. Pancakes will be served, and high school performing groups will entertain.

Tickets cost $3 per person and are available by mail only. The breakfast will be held in the Manchester High School cafeteria. To register, parents should send a check along with their name, address, phone number, the number of adults, and the number of children who plan to attend to the Manchester Education Association, Breakfast with Santa, c/o Keeney Street School, 179 Keeney St., Manchester.

Nov. 30 is the deadline for registering.

Have breakfast with Santa

The Manchester Education Association is sponsoring a "Breakfast with Santa" from 9 to 11 a.m. on Saturday, Dec. 8, with proceeds to go to the union's scholarship fund.

To register, parents should send a check along with their name, address, phone number, the number of adults, and the number of children who plan to attend to the Manchester Education Association, Breakfast with Santa, c/o Keeney Street School, 179 Keeney St., Manchester.

Nov. 30 is the deadline for registering.

District mulls withholding

The Eighth Utilities District will investigate the possibility of withholding tax from payments it makes to some appointed officials to avoid having them pay penalties to the Internal Revenue Service, according to officials.

A question was raised when the district directors met Monday night about the practice of not withholding tax.

Leonard Luszycki, a district employee, said he has been told by the IRS that the tax can be withheld.

He said that he sometimes has to pay a penalty as a self-employed person for not making quarterly payments. His $350-a-year regular fee as assistant alarm superintendent is paid quarterly, but fees for extra alarm work are paid only annually. In years when these fees are high, the penalty for not making a quarterly payment is a burden, he said.

Helen Warrington, district clerk, said the district is not allowed to withhold the tax of appointed officials. But District President Walter Joyner said there are IRS provisions which allow it.

School board feed irks city official

WEST HAVEN (UPI) — A Christmas party when organizations like the PTA have to fight to get us to spend money on building improvements and supplies," she said.

She plans to boycott the Dec. 10 event, scheduled for the New England Food and Beverage Co. restaurant. "I was elected to serve as a volunteer. At no time was I to be paid or compensated," she said.

About 25 people, including Mayor Lawrence C. Minichino, Superintendent of Schools Alfred Maiorano and other school administrators, attended last year. Minichino has been invited this year, but he wasn't known Friday whether he planned to attend.

Harris estimated the tab for the dinner to be $1,000, which includes a choice of steak, lobster or shrimp, but Board of Education Chairman Bruce Denny said the event is "no big deal," and a bill of $600 would probably be more like it.

Cost is not the point, said Harris, who says its relatively small compared to the entire school budget.

"I went to the party last year expecting to pay for it," she said. "But when I asked about it, I was told the Board of Education pays for it as a 'thank you' to Board of Education members because they are't paid."

Moslem rebels kidnap two

ZAMBOANGA, Philippines — Moslem rebels kidnaped two American tourists this week on a remote island in the southern Philippines, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said Friday. Alan Croghan, the embassy spokesman in Manila, identified the hostages as John Rabaner and Helmut Herfel, who were reportedly seized from a mini-bus with two Filipino guides on Jolo island late Monday. Their hometowns were not immediately known.

A National Police report filed earlier from the island 380 miles south of Manila said the two Americans belonged to a medical mission assigned to the Sulu archipelago, but Croghan said they were tourists.

Virginia recaptures convicts

BURKEVILLE, Va. — Four cold convicts who fled the Nottoway Correctional Center after Thanksgiving dinner were captured early Friday and a fifth fugitive was found later hiding in some bushes near the prison.

Anthony Fox, 29, serving life plus 33 years on a rape conviction, was found about 9 p.m. and offered no resistance, authorities said. Robert Berryman, deputy director of the state police criminal investigations division, said authorities had assumed Fox was hiding near the 500-acre prison because no one had seen him and they had no reports of stolen cars.

Fox was finally located in a brushy area about half-mile away from the prison, just off Route 466 between Crewe and Nottoway.

Soviets fly over Japan

TOKYO, Japan — Two Soviet bombers violated Japanese air space Friday, ignoring radio warnings and 34 Japanese fighter planes that scrambled from four air bases to intercept them, a defense official said.

The violation was the second such intrusion in 11 days and came amid a buildup of the Soviet bomber fleet at the U.S.-built air base at Cam Ranh Bay, Vietnam.

Defense Agency official Masahito Nishida said 34 Japanese fighters from four bases were scrambled to intercept a squadron of seven Soviet Su-26 bomber jets that headed south through the Tushima Strait.

Nishida said two Tu-95 Bears from the squadron entered Japanese airspace for three minutes and 20 seconds at about 6,300 m., ignoring radio warnings and jet fighters that wagged their wings to head off the convoy.

U.S. diplomats leave Colombia

BOGOTA, Colombia — More than 10 U.S. diplomats and their families have left Colombia because of threats from drug traffickers angered by a U.S.-Colombian crackdown on international cocaine smuggling, an embassy spokeswoman said Friday.

The U.S. Embassy spokeswoman said "more than ten" diplomats and their families left this week and will not return for at least 40 to 45 days. "The embassy is carrying on normally although with extra security precautions."

Ambassador Lewis Tambs, 57, confirmed that there have been threats against embassy personnel by drug traffickers but vowed that the embassy will continue to work with the Colombian government to fight the lucrative cocaine trade.

Death toll tops 100 mark

The nation's highway death toll surpassed 100 Friday in the second full day of the long Thanksgiving holiday weekend.

A United Press International count showed at least 112 people had died on the nation's roads since the holiday weekend began at 6 p.m. local time Wednesday. Eighteen people were killed in California, 15 in Florida, and nine each in Texas and Ohio.

The National Safety Council predicted as many as 500 people would die and another 17,000 to 20,000 would suffer disabling injuries before the long holiday weekend ends at midnight Sunday.

Parliament removes speaker

AMMAN, Jordan (UPI) — The Palestinian parliament-in-exile Friday removed its pro-Syrian speaker "for not carrying out his duties" in its first action against members who headed a boycott call by Palestine Liberation Organization rebels.

The move came on the second day of a weeklong meeting of the Palestine National Council that heard Jordan's King Hussein call for an international Middle East peace conference at which the PLO would participate "on an equal footing."

Two senior PLO officials said Friday that Hussein's peace plan, which called for an Israeli withdrawal from all territories seized during the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, would be considered by the PNC.

Storms batters Florida

A windswept storm battered Florida's Atlantic coast Friday, grounding a crippled Venezuelan freighter, forcing the evacuation of ocean hotels and sending a radar balloon called "Fat Albert" plunging into the ocean.

Elsewhere, heavy snow warnings were posted for the high country of Southern California and Nevada. Gale warnings were posted over the coasts of Washington and Oregon. Rain showers lingered along the Washington coast and from Arizona to southern Nevada.

A flood warning was posted for virtually all of Florida's Atlantic Coast as 30-to-40-mph winds combined with high tides to inundate low-lying areas.

Three die in Korean DMZ firefight

PANMUNJOM, Korea (UPI) — A Russian tourist bolted across the Demilitarized Zone between North and South Korea today, sparking a gunbattle between security forces in which three soldiers died and a U.S. serviceman was wounded.

The firefight between security guards of the American-led U.N. Command and communist North Korean troops occurred at the trace village of Panmunjom, 25 miles north of Seoul, the UNC said. The defector managed to escape unhurt.

"One UNC security guard was killed and another wounded shortly before noon today while taking defensive actions against an armed attack on the UNC side of the Joint Security Area at Panmunjom," a command official said.

Two North Korean soldiers were believed killed and two others wounded in the firefight, the announcement said. The dead and injured soldiers were not identified.

"The slain UNC security guard was a Republic of (South) Korea soldier assigned to the UNC Support Group to JSA. The wounded guard was an American soldier," the official said.

In Washington, Robert McFarlane, President Reagan's national security adviser, told CBS News: "These incidents happen from time to time. They are to be expected. I think the loss of life is surely regrettable."

The shooting came less than 24 hours after San Francisco Mayor Diane Feinstein visited the trace village and talked across at the communist north through binoculars.

The shooting took place when between 20 and 30 North Korean guards opened fire with pistols across the border in pursuit of a Russian tourist who was fleeing across the trace village in an attempt to defect, the UNC announcement said. It said the Russian was visiting the area as a member of a North Korean-sponsored tour group.

"The defector is a Russian and he is in the Seoul area in good health," a U.S. Embassy source said. "He was not hurt, and is being questioned as to his intention."

The Russian defector was not immediately identified but one South Korean source described him to be in his early 20s.

The announcement said UNC security guards took defensive action, firing back on the northern soldiers who were chasing the Russian across the border line that bisects the trace village known as the Joint Security Area, an oval-shaped zone 800 yards in diameter.

The UNC requested a meeting of security officers of both sides to prevent further incidents, the announcement said.

It was the second defection from the communist side through Panmunjom where the 1953 Korean armistice agreement was signed. On Oct. 30, 1981, a cook assigned to Czechoslovakia's contingent of the Neutrality Supervisory Commission walked across to the south.

The gunbattle was the worst incident reported in the trace village since Aug. 16, 1976, when North Korean soldiers shot to death two U.S. army officers in a dispute over the cutting of trees in the DMZ.

Most oppose U.S. troops in Korea

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Americans strongly oppose the use of U.S. combat troops in the event of hostilities between North and South Korea, a national security adviser released Friday by a conservative group with close ties to the White House.

The survey, conducted by a private organization, showed that 61 percent of those polled oppose any U.S. combat intervention to aid South Korea if a conflict breaks out.

On separate questions, however, 82.6 percent said they favored American aid to China if it was attacked by the Soviet Union, and 71.9 percent would support U.S. intervention if the Soviets attacked

Japan. The survey, which covered a number of issues related to the Far East, was released by The Heritage Foundation, a conservative think tank which has some influence with members of the Reagan administration.

Asked which actions they most supported if hostilities began between North and South Korea, 61 percent said they opposed any use of American combat forces; 28.8 percent backed the use of U.S. military forces in a combat role; 4.2 percent said they favored the use of strategic nuclear weapons against North Korea, and a percentage were undecided.

An even larger percentage — 67.1 percent — said they opposed the use of tactical nuclear weapons to end fighting between North and South Korea, even if it was the only way to have a short war or prevent another Vietnam-style conflict of a lengthy nature.

The survey showed that a significant percentage of Americans — 45.4 percent — feel the current South Korean leadership under President Chun Doo Hwan has caused an improvement in the political and civil rights situation there since he assumed office following the assassination of Park Chung Hee.

On other issues involving Korea, 61.3 percent said they felt South Korea's human rights record is a key factor in determining U.S. support for that country; 70.4 percent said they do not believe South Korea is guilty of unfair trade practices, and 67.2 percent said they favored removal of trade restrictions on goods imported from South Korea.

In other areas, 59.9 percent opposed U.S. military aid if China attacked Taiwan, but 67.2 percent said they felt the United States should resume diplomatic relations with Taiwan.

The telephone poll was conducted by Sindlinger & Co., Media Pa., among 2,661 adults between Oct. 8 and Nov. 5. It had a margin of error between 3 percent and 5 percent.

Son says first lady's jealousy

By Helen Thomas
United Press International

WASHINGTON — President and Mrs. Reagan are "saddened" by criticism from Reagan's oldest son, who says the first lady criticized him because she is jealous of his family, close friends said Friday.

There were several indications that the president was quite angry over remarks by Michael Reagan, a sharp critic of the first lady.

"They feel he needs some guidance," said the friends, speaking of the president and first lady's reaction to remarks by Michael. "They're saddened and only trying to help him."

The friends asked not to be identified.

Sheila Tate, the first lady's press secretary, would not comment on Michael's latest comments. Michael is the son adopted by the president and his first wife, actress Jane Wyman.

At an impromptu news conference in Omaha, Neb., Thursday, Michael said that aside from an occasional "squabble-type thing" within the family, he feels no estrangement from his father.

The dispute began when Nancy Reagan said in an interview that Michael was estranged from his father.

Michael and his wife, Colleen, spent Thanksgiving in Omaha. "I think it's not an estrangement,

Talk draws Reagan's ire

as much — as a jealousy Nancy might have towards me and my family, you know, being the son of another marriage," Michael said.

"We have only two grandchildren of the president. I have noticed since that time that Nancy has not been as warm toward us and it's not really anything bad. I think, as a mother ... she would like to have her kids have the grandchildren of the president. I think there's a jealousy there."

The president has never met Michael's younger child, Ashley, who is 19 months old.

On that score, friends said that Michael — who was married for 10 months in 1972 — has never seen his teenage son by that marriage.

Earthquake jolts California mountains

MAMMOTH LAKES, Calif. (UPI) — A strong earthquake rocked the Sierra Nevada and much of Central California Friday, triggering a rock slide, knocking food off store shelves and frightening residents in dozens of communities.

Caltech scientists said the quake, with a magnitude of 5.7, was centered about 15 miles south of Mammoth Lakes, a ski and skiing resort.

The U.S. Geological Survey said the earthquake was felt over thousands of square miles from San Francisco to San Barbara on the California coast and through the middle of the state across the Nevada border to Las Vegas.

Geophysicist Douglas Given said the quake, which struck at 10:30 a.m. PST, was the strongest to hit the area since May 1960 when four quakes greater than magnitude 5 shook the towering mountains.

A moderate aftershock struck about an hour after the first tremor.

Mono County sheriff's deputies reported the tremor knocked out some telephone lines and a rock slide was reported on lower Rock Creek about 20 miles south of Mammoth.

Officials throughout the state said there were no reported injuries, but there were concerns about property damage.

"Four major dams in the area are of primary concern," Deputy Dick Wood said. "The Los Angeles Department of Water and Power and the Southern California Edison Co. surveyed the dams and so far there are no reports of damage."

Is it really 'morning in America'?

Hernbert Weakland and D. Douglas Roth are Rust Belt clergymen in the news as a result of the same concerns for the non-rich, non-yuppie element in the population which, though shoved aside, hangs on at the peripheries of our national life. They have chosen different ways to show their concern.

The Rev. Mr. Roth has been removed from his pastorate at Lutheran Trinity Church in Clairton, Pa. For his part in an obstreperous campaign against the closing of old steel mills in and around Pittsburgh. For defying bishop, synod and court order by refusing to vacate his church, the high sheriff of those parts, Eugene Coy, hauled the minister before a judge who sent him to jail, not before quoting scripture to him: "Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake." (1 Peter 2: 13-17).

Never get into spitting contest with a lama nor a scripture contest with a clergyman. Roth shot back with a quotation that wrothful prophets dwelling in arid and rocky places have hurled at the representatives of duty constituted authority to these many centuries. (Matthew 6: 24). "No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and despise the other: or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon."

IT HAS BEEN SOME YEARS since that verse was heard in this land. Judging from what has been coming from the mouths of the court preachers surrounding the First Magistrate under the new dispensation it is God who serves mammon in America now.

Hernbert Weakland is the Roman Catholic archbishop of Milwaukee and the chairman of a panel of bishops who have finished their draft of a national pastoral letter on social values and economic justice. There are passages in the draft especially suited for the beginning of the Christmas shopping season when the scenes in the stores make the baby Jesus wretch in his cradle: "The Gospel calls us to renounce disordered attachment to material possessions... limits on consumption and the accumulation of wealth are essential if we are to avoid what Pope Paul VI called 'the most evident form of moral underdevelopment, namely avarice...'

It has been some years since that verse was heard in this land. Judging from what has been coming from the mouths of the court preachers surrounding the First Magistrate under the new dispensation it is God who serves mammon in America now.

Hernbert Weakland is the Roman Catholic archbishop of Milwaukee and the chairman of a panel of bishops who have finished their draft pictures of the born-again clergy at a Republican convention last summer, the about at the great barbecue roll-billions of Texas.

IN POLITICS THEY SAY money talks, bull being walks. Therefore there is no immediate reason to fear either the Roman Catholic bishops or Rev. Roth. The minister's campaign to compel the steel companies to reinvest their profits in modernized plant has no chance of success. The executives before whose houses he and his corporal's guard of agitators picket are not afraid of him. He has no power over them, not even the power to shame them in a time when it is believed he who serves the community best is he who enriches himself the most. What lies in store for Rev. Roth, one suspects, is a short, minor league martyrdom and then years of oblivion as a harmless campus chaplain somewhere.

And what lies in store for the bishops? They have spared themselves the indignity of being called crackpots. Their group, unlike Rev. Roth's, has not been pulling prankish stunts like putting dead fish in the safe deposit boxes of the big banks who do not lend investment capital to their shabby, disintegrating hometowns.

But what of the masses who saw Ronald Reagan's "It's morning in America" campaign in its heyday? When it's morning in that America the days are cloudless, the children white and happy, the homes snug and secure and no hard word is heard.

NHTSA failure to recall Fords was a mistake

WASHINGTON — New information gathered by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration makes shockingly clear that the agency's 1980 decision to spare Ford Motor Co. the largest auto recall in history continues to exact a grisly toll of death and injury.

In the three years and eight months following the decision, the agency's own figures show at least 46 deaths and 1,064 injuries from accidents allegedly caused by faulty transmissions in Ford vehicles. But Rep. Tim Wirth, D-Colo., and the non-profit Center for Auto Safety suspect the death toll is much higher — more than 70, in fact.

Safety advisers at NHTSA concluded four years ago that components of automatic transmission systems in nearly 10 million Ford, Mercury and Lincoln cars in model years 1978-1979 were dangerously defective. The defect can cause the gear to shift from park to reverse when the motor is left running.

The safety experts advised a recall, which would have cost Ford about $200 million. The company argued — and insists to this day — that the accidents were the result of driver error.

NEIL GOLDSCHMIDT, then secretary of transportation, agreed with the company and overruled his advisers' recommendation for a recall. Instead, he ordered Ford to mail each owner a warning sticker — 1-by-5 inches, black on gray — to put near the gearshift as a reminder to be careful when parking.

From July 1977, when NHTSA began its investigation of the faulty transmissions, till Goldschmidt's decision in December 1980, the agency's figures show 114 deaths and 1,064 injuries in accidents linked to the park-to-reverse problem.

But Roger Maugh, Ford's director of automotive safety, continues to fault driver error, not the transmission. "A transmission in good working order will not jump or slip out of park," he told my associate Tony Capaccio. "Nor can such a transmission fall to engage or hold in park."

Maugh also said that "unexpected movement of driverless vehicles" is "not a Ford-only phenomenon."

Both Ford and NHTSA consider the warning-sticker mailout an adequate solution, Maugh said. 88 percent of the stickers were delivered to owners.

RUBY WEINBRECHT of McLean, Va., was one of the 12 percent who didn't receive the warning sticker. She suffered a broken coccyx and severe contusions last year when she tried to stop the rearward lurch of her 1978 LTD after she set the gear in park and got out to dump garbage.

"Although the settlement required Ford to notify the owners of all defective cars," Ms. Weinbrecht wrote NHTSA, "we did not receive such a notice even though we are the original owners of the car."

The safety agency director, Diane Steed, in a statement to Wirth last year, said of the Goldschmidt decision, "At the present time I am not inclined to disturb this settlement."

Footnote: Although Ford insists there was nothing wrong with its automatic transmissions from 1970 to 1979, the design was changed for 1980 models.

The new boy network

At one time, El Salvador's leftist guerrillas received help from the Sandinistas in Nicaragua for their six-year battle. They still may be getting some assistance.

From their point of view, that's only fair. In the late 1970s, the Salvadoran rebels reportedly lent the Sandinistas $10 million to $11 million (obtained from kidnap ransoms) to finance the fight against the Somoza dictatorship.

Once they ousted Somoza, the Sandinistas began returning the favor to the Salvadoran guerrillas.

What's new, though, is that the Salvadorans may be lending a helping hand to nascent underground groups in other countries. My roving reporter Jon Lee Anderson recently got reliable, if second-hand, information that Salvadoran guerrillas have shown up in Chiapas, Mexico, where they are training an obscure band of leftist guerrillas.

According to one of the sources — a Mexican with good connections to the country's left — the Salvadoran guerrillas come up to the Chiapas base and other sites as a form of "rest and relaxation" from the rigors of the war in their homeland.

BUT THE TRAINERS DON'T offer their services free. Payment includes cash and supplies — especially weapons — for the units back in El Salvador.

At the time, there was serious concern in this country that the radical underground groups posed a threat to the Olympic Games. Whether such a terrorist attack was actually contemplated is not known, but the guerrillas may have been discouraged by the tight security measures at Los Angeles.

Though no spectacular terrorist "hit" materialized at the Games, the leftist underground apparently is still actively operating just south of the border. And the veterans of the war in El Salvador are passing along their deadly expertise to a future generation of guerrillas.

Cuomo, Iacocca enter race with books for the minority

Editor's note: The following is a collection of the features written by authors of books that have been published recently or soon will be. The opinions are those of the author.

By George V. Higgins

Now as the supervisors of elections clear away the detritus of the 1984 presidential campaign, and weary if unwary citizens conclude that it is safe to clean their foggy spectacles and recharge their hearing aids, the prudent observer with shuddering resignation hunkers down in preparation for the 1988 campaign.

Seasoned spectators of American politics anticipate the opening skirmishes of the next national contest soon after the one that started this year's traditional NFL Thanksgiving Day game between the Detroit Lions and the Green Bay Packers, albeit with much less enthusiasm as the football game inspires.

Each of these authors plainly intends to furnish a detailed and winning profile of his many excellent qualities and some of the philosophy which in his estimation qualifies him for leadership.

While no sensible person confidently argues that anyone near a majority of voters actually desires more than to be able to recognize the candidate on television, it is widely believed that an influential minority persists in wondering what, if anything, is going on behind the smiling face.

Those books are aimed at that minority. They are meant to convince readers that behind the Democratic National Convention and the panache Iacocca manifested in bailing out Chrysler, there is substance of character and intellect as well.

By remarkable coincidence, it happens that the same stories offering the Cuomo and Iacocca books also have in stock "Style versus Substance: Boston, Kevin White and the Politics of Illusion," which I wrote without any expectation whatsoever of seeking elective office.

It deals with the curious partnership, often quarrelsome but indissoluble, which has been formed by our candidates and the media during the past 20 years or so. It focuses specifically on the case of Mayor Kevin White of Boston, which I wrote without any expectation whatsoever of seeking elective office.

Higgins' book, "Substance versus Style: Boston, Kevin White and the Politics of Illusion," is published by Macmillan.

Gift books needn't cost a lot

By United Press International

If you'd like to give a book as a gift this Christmas but don't want to spend what coffee-table books are going for, don't despair. There are plenty for the choosing and, with one exception, all of the following are $25 or less.

Get the season off to a good start with the Reader's Digest's "A Family Christmas" (304 pp., illus., $21.50). This lovely book covers most of what you need for a traditional Christmas — craft ideas, menus, stories and prayers.

The articles talk about the tradition of the Christmas tree and cards, and stories include "Yes, Virginia, There Is a Santa Claus."

Another seasonal book is "Images of Christmas," by Elaine Wilson, calligraphy by Dorothy Bux (Doubleday, 127 pp., $12.95). The collection of poems, carols and writings are both English and American. It includes such favorites as the carol, "We Three Kings," and the story of the nativity from St. James. All are beautifully illustrated and transcribed by Bux.

A delightful gem is "A Happy Book of Christmas Stories," by William J. Lederer (Norton, 64 pp., $7.95). These short stories are full of Christmas spirit and are bound to leave you with the warm feeling you get when Christmas is just right.

The one expensive book in this selection is "The National Archives of the United States," by Herman J. Viola (Abrams, 288 pp., $49.50). It's well worth it for those interested in this country's heritage. This volume makes the past come alive in its pictures and text of items such as the Constitution contained in the Archives. The book's publication coincides with the Archives' 50th anniversary.

Nostalgia of a different sort comes through "Coney Island, A Postcard Journey to the City of Fun," by Richard Snow (Bantam, 199 pp., $24.95). This is a journey into history, to a time when Coney Island was the place to go. Snow restores the bustle and liberal bustle of the early 20th century amusement park, restaurants and waterfront as he describes the photographs and postcards reproduced in this book.

For the mystery-lover in your family, there's "Hercule Poirot's Casebook" (Dodd, Mead, 878 pp., $15.95). It contains all 50 of Agatha Christie's stories starring the French inspector. They range from "The Yellow Lady," to "Murder in the Mews."

Readers who get a different perspective of space from the photographs in Timothy Ferris' book "SpaceShots — The Beauty of Nature Beyond Earth" (Pantheon, 143 pp., $24.95). Ferris and Carolyn Zales selected these photographs as much for their beauty as anything else. Jupiter's ring, a Magellanic cloud, and the north Polar region of Mars are but a few of the unusual shots in this lovely book.

"The Good Housekeeping Book of Plants" by Rob Herwig (Hearst Books, 288 pp., $19.95) is the perfect gift for anyone with a green thumb. Herwig's book recommends plants for indoor gardening, gives information on plant care, and lists plants according to their light and humidity needs and growing characteristics.

Thanksgiving transplants give life to three children

By Edward Fulton
United Press International
The death of a victim of child abuse in Austin, Texas, gave life to three children in Michigan and Texas through hastily arranged transplant operations on Thanksgiving Day.
The Texas child, Arnold G. Shalda, was declared brain dead Wednesday. His body was flown to Ann Arbor, Mich., where his heart, liver, kidneys and corneas were removed.
The heart, liver and one kidney were transplanted Thursday into three children in operations at the University of Michigan Hospital in Ann Arbor, at Children's Hospital in Detroit and at Children's Medical Center in Dallas.

Heart recipient doing fine

HARTFORD (UPI) — Physicians plan a biopsy Monday to determine if there are any problems with the state's second heart transplant recipient although there are no indications of infection or rejection.
The 34-year-old Connecticut man is still in critical but stable condition," said Hartford hospital spokesman James Battaglio Friday.
He ate a light Thanksgiving dinner and visited with his family during the holiday.
"The ventilator was removed," Battaglio said, and the patient sat in a chair.
"He will probably be put on solid foods in the next few days if he continues to do well," Battaglio said, noting the 45-minute biopsy procedure Monday will determine whether the body is accepting or rejecting the heart.
There is no sign of infection or rejection, Battaglio said.
The patient, who has requested anonymity, received a new heart Wednesday in a seven-hour operation, the first heart transplant at Hartford Hospital.
The first heart transplant operation in the state was completed Nov. 3 at Yale-New Haven Hospital. The recipient, Mary Jendryak, 52, of Montville, died Saturday 15 days after surgery.
An autopsy showed lung disease caused by her long-standing heart ailment may have combined with a Paragay.
While Spanish is the official language of the Republic of Paraguay, 90 percent of the population speaks Guarani. Most of the 3.3 million people are mestizo, although there are Caucasian, Indian and Negro minorities. Roman Catholic is the official religion, with about 97 percent.

Zoning can't keep buffalo from roaming

BOLTON — The Zoning Commission decided Wednesday that there is nothing in town zoning regulations that gives the commission the power to force George Negro to keep his buffalo from roaming down Route 85.
The commission reviewed the regulations at the request of the Board of Selectmen, which heard an appeal for help last week from town building official H. Calvin Hutchins on behalf of West Street resident Frank Paggioli. Paggioli and his wife have complained that the wild buffalo penned on Negro's property next door to them often escape and wander into their yard.
Selectman Michael A. Zizka said he visited the Paggiolis last weekend and five buffalo ran into their yard while he was there. When the Paggiolis chased them into the street, he said, Zizka said he thinks the roaming buffalo are a hazard to area residents and to motorists traveling Route 85.
In a vote, the selectmen Tuesday defeated a proposal to create an ordinance prohibiting animal owners from letting their animals roam.
First Selectman Sandra Pierog and Selectman Carl Preuss voted against the proposal. Zizka and Deputy First Selectman Douglas T. Cheney voted in favor of it.
Preuss said he opposed the idea because such an ordinance could be enforced equally against the one-time offender and the habitual offender, which he thinks is unfair.
The board instead referred the matter to its ordinance subcommittee and asked the Zoning Commission to check zoning regulations.

Area Towns In Brief

COVENTRY — The next monthly meeting of the Coventry Elementary School Parent Teacher Organization is scheduled for Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the school library.
At 8 p.m. Coventry Police Chief Frank Traasakas will give a talk called "Our Children and Street Drugs."
Parents of children of all ages are invited to attend.
HOLIDAY BUFFET SET FOR SENIORS
BOLTON — All Bolton senior citizens are invited to a Christmas buffet luncheon at Community Hall on Dec. 12. Lunch will be served at 1 p.m. The cost is $6.50 a person. Reservations must be made and paid for by next Friday. For more information, call Mrs. William Balch at 648-3759.
CRAFT SHOW DATE NEARS
BOLTON — The annual Holly Berry Fair and Craft Show is scheduled for Dec. 1 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Bolton Elementary School on Notch Road.
Area craft makers will display their wares for sale. Exhibits are to include dried and silk flower arrangements, wooden toys, stained glass, baskets, doll house miniatures, hand-painted lollipops, slate paintings, water colors, fabric stenciling and Christmas decorations.
There will also be men's neckties, ceramics, jewelry and dolls, according to Lorrie Baker, chairwoman of the event. The Bolton Parent Teacher Organization will hold a bake sale and auction.
Pastel portrait artist Lois Simmonds Macuga of Glastonbury will be on hand to draw portraits. To schedule a sitting call Sally Barr at 643-5994.
Santa Claus is also expected to make an appearance.
TEACHER HEADS REGIONAL GROUP
BOLTON — Bolton High School Latin teacher Susan Murray was elected the 1984-85 president of the Classical Association of New England at the association's annual meeting earlier this month.
Murray is also advisor to the high school Latin Club and Senior Class. She has served on the association's executive board for several years. She has also helped to organize past state Latin Days.
Murray is a West Hartford resident.
ZONERS SAY FIREHOUSE OK
BOLTON — The Zoning Commission confirmed Wednesday that a firehouse is a permitted use for the residentially zoned land slated to become the site of a new central fire station.
The land, at the corner of Notch and Bolton Center roads, currently belongs to Claude Ruel. Ruel has agreed to sell three acres to the town for $35,000. The town has a year to pick up the option.
Residents approved a proposal to build a new fire station, at an estimated $800,000, in a referendum on Nov. 6. It was the only one of four building proposals to win approval.
The proposals defeated in the referendum were for a new public works garage, a library-computer center at Bolton High School and renovating Community Hall.

Hollywood holidays

William Shatner would rather spend Christmas astride a horse than in a patrol car or aboard a space ship

By William Shatner
HOLLYWOOD — Apart from their religious significance, putting our lives into a larger perspective, the year-end holidays are really designed to celebrate life. Life in general and our lives in particular. In effect, we are not only supposed to take time to bring joy to the world. We are invited to take time to bring joy to ourselves, too.
That is not as obvious as it might sound. Most of us (and I speak from very personal experience) get so caught up in the details and demands of our work that we don't take time during the year to accomplish the one thing for which we are working, real personal pleasure in life.
All of this is by way of addressing my choice of place and activity for the holidays. Obviously, it is a decision I don't take or make lightly. I want holidays filled with the fullest measure of joy that is in my power to control. And since I'm not personally responsible for peace on earth, I settle for immersing myself and my family in one thing that gives us the greatest satisfaction — our horses.
Having come into the world as a street kid from Montreal, I wasn't necessarily destined to be a cowboy. But as film assignments compelled me to learn to ride, I found that horses combined the highest values in my estimation, perfection and beauty. I was apparently destined to be a horse breeder. And having had one of our stallions, Sultan's Great Day, win the World Championship for American Saddlebreds this August served as my Christmas present for years to come.
Yes, I will spend my holidays in the company of my family and my horses, and I can think of no greater gift of joy to myself. Let Santa tool up and down the globe with his reindeer; I'll be with the most graceful and grand creatures I have yet encountered. Happy holidays indeed.

Robert Stack finds Christmas a time for high-spirited reunions, family gatherings and celebration

By Robert Stack
HOLLYWOOD — Our family used to experiment with Christmas by celebrating the holidays in faraway places like Honolulu and Mexico and in snowy mountain resorts. But it never really worked.
Christmas should be based on what you are accustomed to and where your roots are. My roots were deeply established in Southern California five generations ago. So this is where we've enjoyed the holidays for many years now.
The important part of Christmas is sharing it with people you care about. We invite all the waffle we deeply love to spend Christmas Day with us, people who have lost loved ones, lonely old bachelors and other strays. We like to swap memories, tell a few lies and get a little bugged.
Exchanging gifts isn't a big deal with us. Usually there is some humor attached to our presents. And sometimes they are bizarre. The year we built our house, Rosemary (Mrs. Stack) and I gave each other a stand of fully grown palm trees for the garden. This year our gifts to female friends and family has been solved. Rosemary is now American distributor for a French perfume line — Les Grains.
Rosemary is a super cook and we put out a big buffet for about 20 people in a honey-cured ham, which is the reason I married her.
For us, Christmas is a festive occasion to be celebrated with our children (son Charles, 25, daughter Elizabeth, 27) and catch up with friends and make a few strangers feel wanted.

Discovering prayer: her way to beautiful life

By Margaret Hayden
Herold Reporter
Barbara Gawle, author of "How to Pray," has stopped making plans. That is one of the lessons she learned in prayer.
Her life has unfolded in a beautiful way, better than any plan she could have made, said the 35-year-old woman who entered the Community of Felician Sisters soon after she experienced God and delighted at her new discovery. This was 20 years ago at the foothills of Mount Tam. Her decision to enter the religious life was sudden, but her decision to leave came years later after she completed three years in a novitiate with other young sisters and five years of teaching at Our Lady of Angels Academy.
As the time for taking final vows was imminent, she went on a retreat and, after serious thought and prayer, decided she was called to another type of religious life. She knew she wanted to help others share the riches of the spiritual life she was beginning to experience.
I found myself moving from teaching to a ministry where I might share the treasures I was experiencing in prayer, she explained, adding that she did not know how this idea would develop and she often has been surprised.
"PART OF THE PROCESS of prayer is an attitude of surrender," she said. "I was allowing God to direct this whole process."
The calling to the ministry came from a community of nuns with whom she had taught at Our Lady of Angels Academy in East Hartford.
The resident of 38 Elsie Drive is a secretary in the finance department of the Hartford archdiocese office of Catholic schools, where she enjoys being behind the scenes of Catholic education. She has taught teaching eight-week courses called "Discovering Prayer" at various locations.
"I had no idea I'd write a book," Gawle said of her first published work, "How to Pray." She had considered writing an article on prayer. "The opportunity for a book came out of the clear blue sky," she said.
After she taught a one-semester course on prayer at Manchester Community College, a representative of Spectrum Books, a division of Prentice-Hall Inc., asked her to write a text of her course.
"The idea appealed to me," she said. She sensed she had the ability to write. Instead of using a textbook style, she wrote a practical guide of suggestions for discovering spiritual growth through prayer.
"PEOPLE WANT TO KNOW where they can start," she said. She began writing the new and life same journey. Four qualities — awareness, listening, sui-

Don't send me packing

Andy Rooney
Syndicated Columnist
There are people who can pack a suitcase and people who can't. When I'm going away, I wish I could pay one of those Japanese workers who package electronic equipment to come over to my house for a few hours and help me pack my suitcase.
If practice or experience helped, I'd be a great packer. I travel often and pack a suitcase as many as 30 times a year but I never get any better at doing it.
There are several problems a person can have with packing and I have all of them. I'm not naturally neat and, for the life of me, I can't fold a shirt or a suit the way they don't last long. Just as I'm about to fresh from the dry cleaner. Anything I pack needs pressing when I get where I'm going and take it out of the suitcase. I've washed other people make those quick, det moves with a piece of clothing and then lay it gently into a suitcase but I can't duplicate their action.
I OWN THREE suitcases now. The most beat-up one is 25 years old and is, of course, the one I like best. I've tried to replace it but American Tourister no longer makes that model. Companies that make retail merchandise generally don't like anything that lasts for 25 years.
Good packers like suitcases with little compartments and pockets with elastic tops at the front and back of their suitcases. They tuck things neatly into them. All I want is a big empty box for a suitcase. Something I can dump clothes in.

everything in, I've never yet been able to close any suitcase I've packed without sitting or standing on it. Usually I struggle for three or four minutes with the catches. It's a great relief to me when the catches catch but the feeling doesn't last long. Just as I'm about to tuck too much in, I always forget to put in one or two things and invariably have to reopen the suitcase. Advice

High cost of holiness takes the worshipers by surprise

DEAR ABBY: Our 24-year-old daughter, her husband and their 6-year-old son recently moved from Las Vegas to a small town in northern California. Her husband's company transferred him there.

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

His reply: "Unlike churches that are supported by weekly collections or tithing, synagogues are sustained by annual membership dues. Because of the great number of worshipers who want to attend only for the High Holy Days, the seating capacity exceeds the limit, so it is necessary to reserve seats for those who make prior arrangements. Those who do not wish to join the congregation make their contributions, then seats are reserved for them. They are also welcome every other day of the year. (Nobody has to 'pay to pray'.)"

Though healthy, smokers still risk a 'silent disease'

DEAR DR. LAMB - A friend thinks he is a moderate smoker, since he averages a pack a day. Also, he feels that because he has smoked since age 15 and he's now 53, it would have harmed him by now if it were going to. He also drinks two or three beers a day. What do you think of this combination as far as his long-term health is concerned? He is apparently in good health now.

Your Health Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR READER - It is very difficult to get the message across that heart and vascular disease is a silent disease. You can appear to be in very good health until you have your very first symptom - a heart attack, stroke or sudden death. A high percentage of people with this disease do not live long enough to be admitted to the hospital. Under these circumstances, it is essential to do something constructive before you have that first

Vinegar is trusty helper for cleaning a crock pot

DEAR POLLY: How can I remove the white film on the inside of a crock pot after use?

DEAR SUSAN: I suspect our old friend, white vinegar, will come to the rescue here. Wipe out the inside of the slow cooker with a cloth soaked in vinegar. If the film remains, fill the pot with water, add a half cup of vinegar and let it soak for 15 minutes, then rinse and wash. That should take care of the problem.

DEAR ABBY: Concerning your answer to "Honey-ug" in which you explain how far some beauty contestants go in the use of artificial attachments: I have seen wigs, caps, plates, artificial freckles, phony mustaches, false hips and breasts, padding, false fingernails, colored contacts, false eyebrows and hair colored every color on the palette - sometimes all on one head - plus various other beauty "aids," but who ever heard of a teenager with silicone implants? Certainly not I, and I am a BOSOM BUDDY: DEAR BUDDY: You should get around more. I assure you there are some.

DEAR ABBY: I am not asking for advice, I need help. I think I speak for a lot of elderly folks with arthritis. We cannot open those tamperproof pill bottles! And why should we have to? Instead of making the druggist put those caps on all prescription bottles, why not put the responsibility where it belongs? Make the customers ask for them if they want them!

Supermarket Shopper

Smart shoppers meet challenge

By Martin Sloane United Feature Syndicate

Last Thanksgiving was an exciting time for Melissa Lawler. All her sisters, brothers, their spouses and their children - 26 in all - gathered at her home in Vermont. "Since we wouldn't be seeing each other at Christmas, we all agreed to bring our holiday gifts and exchange them Thanksgiving evening," says Melissa. A common trait among shoppers who play the refunding game is the desire to outdo their previous performances. Melissa is no exception. To stock up for this year's family gathering - they are all coming for Christmas - she also stockpiled food bargains by carefully planning her shopping trips to take advantage of store specials and her inventory of coupons.

Rats! The mice get chosen for another cancer study

By Patricia McCormack United Press International

NEW YORK - Do mice that smoke cigarettes have anything in common with people who have a smoking habit? A new study suggests that mice who inhale cigarette smoke develop a type of lung cancer. The study, published in the journal Science, found that mice who inhaled cigarette smoke for 18 months developed a type of lung cancer similar to that found in humans. The study was conducted by researchers at the National Cancer Institute. The mice were divided into two groups: one group inhaled cigarette smoke for 18 months, and the other group did not. The mice that inhaled cigarette smoke had a significantly higher incidence of lung cancer than the mice that did not. The researchers found that the mice that inhaled cigarette smoke had a higher incidence of a type of lung cancer called adenocarcinoma. This type of cancer is the most common type of lung cancer in humans. The researchers also found that the mice that inhaled cigarette smoke had a higher incidence of a type of lung cancer called squamous cell carcinoma. This type of cancer is the second most common type of lung cancer in humans. The researchers concluded that the study shows that mice that inhale cigarette smoke develop a type of lung cancer similar to that found in humans. This suggests that mice may be a good model for studying the effects of cigarette smoke on humans.

Thoughts

And he said to him, "Rise and go your way; your faith has made you well." (Luke 17:19; RSV) You see, the Samaritan knew that he was God's to begin with. He had to know because no one else believed it. They were too interested in themselves... in keeping the skin pure... in entering back into society to notice that the Samaritan was healed, too. They couldn't see that the Samaritan didn't leave Jesus' lesson and in the end would probably lock the Samaritan out as they had before. But he was God's to begin with. It was a secret, perhaps only known between him and God, but the Samaritan knew. Do we know? Do we understand that no matter how great the distance society creates between us and itself, God accepts us unconditionally? Do we understand that in the end, the only one who accepts us for who we are, for who we are made to be, is the Maker himself? To us he says, "Go and show yourselves to the priests. Your faith has made you well." For us he said that faith could be as possible. To us he gave the power to know these things, though others may not know. So now, we may accept us for who we are, for that we give thanks in a thankless society!

College basketball preview

Georgetown leads superpower parade

By Fred Lief
UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Logic says it is best to keep quiet about such things. And for those who take their basketball dynasties seriously, the subject may border on poor taste.

It has been more than a decade since the same school won consecutive NCAA championships. UCLA took the title in 1972 and 1973. The players were Bill Walton, Keith Wilkes, Larry Farmer and Greg Lee. The coach was John Wooden and the empire was near the end.

The revolution was upon college basketball, tossing the old guard off the palace walls. Scholarships were reduced, preventing schools from stockpiling players; blacks made their way in greater numbers into athletic programs of southern universities; television and the college game discovered their mutual love, and gleaming new arenas grew out of the prairies and deserts.

Talent found its way into places where basketball was previously a second-class sport. Winning became a little easier, and winning an NCAA crown and then doing it all over again the next year.

"IT'S VERY DIFFICULT to repeat in anything," Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim says. "Especially the national championship." Says Washington coach Mary Harshman: "There is a party no country wide."

So for Georgetown to come back and win the title once more will be no small undertaking. The proceedings for the 282 Division I schools begin Nov. 18 with the traditional opener in Springfield, Mass., between Oklahoma and Illinois and culminate next spring with the Final Four in Lexington, Ky.

And, to be sensible or not, there is good reason to think this could be the year for Georgetown. The Hoyas went 34-3 last season in becoming the first eastern team to win 30 games in a season. They forced opponents to shoot less than 40 percent, an NCAA record. And if any doubts remained by tournament time they were dispelled in the public dismemberment of Kentucky in the NCAA semifinals and the victory over Houston in the final.

Georgetown was a killer team

Patrick Ewing (33) and his coach, John Thompson (left) helped lead Georgetown to the NCAA Division I basketball championship a year ago. The Hoyas are favorites to repeat, although Thompson said any talk of that is pure foolishness.

baseline-to-baseline last year. And while the recruits are simply some of the nation's best.

"BECAUSE it is a national championship you tend to think it's complete," Thompson says. "But it's not complete. We made a lot of mistakes. I'm not by nature the sort of person who comes into anything overconfident."

If Thompson is looking for reasons to have his confidence shaken he need go no further than his own conference, the Big East, where St. John's and Syracuse will have much to say.

And the rest of the country is lined up from College Park to Champaign to Corvallis.

In the South, there's Duke, Memphis State, Georgia Tech, North Carolina State, North Carolina, Kentucky and Virginia Tech. The troops in the Midwest are DePaul, Illinois and Indiana and moving across the country there's Arkansas, Southern Methodist, Oklahoma, Nevada-Las Vegas and Washington.

And breakthroughs could come from unexpected places: Oral Roberts or Santa Clara or George Washington.

Ewing is joined by two fellow Olympians and All-Americans this season: Chris Mullin of St. John's and Wayman Tisdale of Oklahoma. Others returning from the gold medal-winning squad are guard Steve Alford of Indiana and centers Jon Koncak of Southern Methodist and Joe Kleine of Arkansas.

SOME OTHER BIG men jostling for position this year will be Benoit Benjamin of Creighton, Mike Brown of Washington, Dallas Comegys of DePaul, William Bedford of Memphis State, Dave Hoppert of Nebraska and Blair Rasmussen of Oregon.

Along with Mullin and Alford at guard are Wayne Washington of Syracuse, Mark Price of Georgia Tech, Johnny Dawkins of Duke, Bruce Douglas of Illinois, Mike Wagner of Louisville and Dell Curry of Virginia Tech.

At forward with Tisdale, there's Larry of Memphis State, Efron Winters of Oregon, Charles of N.C. State, Kenny Walker of Kentucky, Xavier McDaniel of Wichita State, Chuck Person of Auburn, Detlef Schrempf of Washington and A.C. Green of Oregon State.

Among the top freshmen are: Delray Brooks of Indiana, Danny Bruins' first NCAA title team, Hazzard was given the job last March when Larry Farmer resigned. He has not coached on the college level. Last year the Bruins won fewer than 20 games for the first time since 1980-81.

Other coaches, other coaches talk a lot of trash, Hazzard says. "They say, 'I think we can be as competitive as anyone.'"

Competition around the country will again come from the influx of foreign players. In last season's NCAA Tournament, Akeem Olatunji of Nigeria and Schrempf of West Germany were two of the best. Olatunji moved on to the NBA but Schrempf is back with team and countryman Christian Welp.

The Huskies also have Floki Signarsson of Iceland while Georgia Tech has Yvon Joseph of Haiti and Louisiana State Zoran Jovanovic of Yugoslavia. Indiana's pivot man is Uwe Blab of West Germany while Syracuse answers with freshman center, Ron Sobasky of Lebanon, and Marist College in upstate New York has three Europeans, including 7-3 Rik Smith of Holland.

"A LOT of American coaches started coming over to Europe a few years ago and taught us the American game," Schrempf says. "I got us interested and many of the foreign players came over to high school as exchange students."

There has been no official survey on the number of foreign students playing college basketball in the United States.

Says one NCAA official: "It's difficult to try to say how many whites there are and how many blacks."

This season league rules will again vary. Twenty-three Division I conferences will use some combination of a shot clock and a 3-point shot. A new league joins the basketball map, the Gulf Star Conference, a collection of six Texas and Louisiana schools.

ALSO NEW IS the 64-team I NCAA Tournament. The field of play has been expanded to accommodate the growth in talent across the country and the eagerness of universities to pluck some dollars from the tournament pie.

Gone also is some familiar terminology. The tournament brackets will now be designated East, Southeast, Midwest, West. The Midwest bracket was renamed for geographical reasons.

The names of the tournament brackets are not the only ones worth watching. The last two seasons brought about the lyrical names to come back over the court in a while: Baskerville Holmes of Memphis State and Olden Polynice of Virginia. As for this season, how wrong can it go with Napoleon Lightning of the Francis (Pa.) and Antic Lavodrama of Houston Baptist?

"You're not going to get any coach — unless Muhammad Ali starts coaching — saying, 'I'm going to win the national championship.' It's not a sensible thing to do."

John Thompson, Georgetown coach

coaches merit a close look. Joey Meyer of DePaul, Mary Harshman of Washington and Walt Hazzard of UCLA.

Like a monarch passing on the crown, Ray Meyer leaves DePaul after 42 years and is followed by his son, Joey Meyer. An assistant coach for the Blue Demons and their key recruiter, Joey Meyer inherits a squad that went 27-3 last season.

"I'm by lying if I didn't say I was a little nervous, excited, about my first year here," he says. "But I know that I'll be a coach."

With Ray Meyer now a DePaul television commentator, Harshman is college basketball's winningest active coach with 620 victories. The silver-haired 67-year-old enters his 46th and final season.

"I finally got him to retire," Harshman says of Meyer. "I was sitting with him on a plane one. I told him he's got to retire a year before I do so he can be number one."

UCLA ONCE MORE turns to its basketball family with the installation of Hazzard. A guard on the Bruins' first NCAA title team, Hazzard was given the job last March when Larry Farmer resigned. He has not coached on the college level. Last year the Bruins won fewer than 20 games for the first time since 1980-81.

UConn hosts Harvard in tournament contest

STORRS — University of Connecticut men's soccer team will be appearing in the NCAA Division I tournament for the seventh consecutive year Sunday when it hosts Harvard University at noon here at Gardner Dow Field.

The Huskies wound up the regular season at 14-1. Harvard, 11-4, won 10 of its last 11 games, including a 2-0 decision over the Huskies.

The UConn-Harvard match, a second round game, amounts to being for the New England championship. The Huskies have won four consecutive New England titles.

The winner advances to the national quarterfinals, to be held at campus sites, which are to be completed by Dec. 2. The semifinals, also at campus sites, are to be completed by Dec. 9 with the national championship game at the Kingdome in Seattle, Wa., on Sunday, Dec. 16.

Oklahoma State-Oklahoma game has lots of meaning

By Lisa Harris
UPI Sports Writer

For Oklahoma State, this year's game with Oklahoma finally means more than an excuse for a state-wide party.

When the two clubs met Saturday in an intra-state contest at Norman, Okla., OSU (from EST), the Cowboys have something on the line for the first time in years.

The game is for a share of the Big Eight championship and a trip to the Orange Bowl. The loser will probably play South Carolina in the Gator Bowl.

Oklahoma State is one of the big stories in a surprising season that has seen no names like Texas Christian rise to glory while powerhouses like Pittsburgh fall flat. The Cowboys, 9-1, are rated No. 2 while the Sooners, 8-1-1, are a step behind at No. 3.

It's a great opportunity and challenge for both teams, Oklahoma State coach Pat Jones said. "I feel like both teams are playing for a chance to have a shot at the national championship."

Oklahoma set up Saturday's showdown with a 17-7 win over Nebraska last week that cost the Cornhuskers their No. 1 rating. Although Nebraska will tie the Oklahoma-Oklahoma State victor for the Big Eight title, Saturday's winner will go to the Orange Bowl because of a higher ranking.

Should the Cowboys and Sooners tie, No. 8 Nebraska would win the conference title outright and go to Miami.

For OSU, this would be its first-ever Orange Bowl appearance. Led by first-year coach Jones — UPI's Big Eight Coach of the Year — the Cowboys have posted their best season ever, with nine victories for the first time in 54 years.

The Cowboys will have to contend with Sooners quarterback Danny Bradley, UPI's Big Eight Player of the Year. Oklahoma lost to Kansas — its only defeat this season — with Bradley sidelined with an ankle injury.

Bradley has completed 32 percent of his passes for 869 yards and seven touchdowns and has rushed 128 times for 300 yards and eight TDs. Cowboy counterpart Rusty Hilger leads the conference in total offense, having completed 127-of-214 passes for 1,641 yards and 15 touchdowns.

Both teams are among the nation's top 10 in three defensive categories: rushing, total and scoring.

Elsewhere Saturday, No. 1 Brigham Young hosts Utah State, No. 1 Texas visits Baylor, No. 9 South Carolina visits Clemson, No. 12 Southern Methodist hosts No. 14 Southern Methodist hosts Arkansas, No. 16 Texas Christian visits Texas A&M, No. 17 Virginia hosts No. 19 Maryland and No. 18 Louisiana State hosts Tulane.

No. 1 BYU has to avoid an upset by lowly Utah State to keep its first-ever top ranking. The Cougars, headed for the Holiday Bowl Dec. 21 against Michigan, are 11-0 and have won 22 straight games, the longest winning streak in the nation. Utah State is last in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association and have lost 10 of their last 11.

At Waco, Texas, the Longhorns can clinch the SWC crown with some help. Texas can take the league title with a victory over Baylor and a Texas Tech upset over Houston. If Texas and Houston both win, the Longhorns have to win against Texas A&M Dec. 11 to win against Texas Tech and insure a Cotton Bowl appearance. Southern Methodist, Texas Christian and Arkansas also remain in the running for the SWC crown.

In a Friday game, Doug Flutie's 68-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Gerard Phelan as the gun went off gave 10th-ranked Boston College a 47-45 victory over No. 12 Miami.

Swing keeps 'token liberal' busy

Writer hits new right's economic ideas

By Gail Collins
United Press International

NEW YORK — Business is brisk these days for writer Robert Kutner, who's found himself greatly in demand as a "token liberal" for economic debates with the leading lights of the New Conservatism.

"If you're 25 and getting out of school, all the action is on the right," he said. "I worry about where the next generation of elitarians is going to come from. It's pretty lonely."

Kutner, who writes for the New Republic and other magazines, has just finished a book that challenges what he feels is a central myth in conservative economic theories, that efficiency and egalitarianism are contradictory goals, and that the United States must choose between "prosperity and social justice."

"The Economic Illusion," published by Houghton Mifflin, examines the economics of other industrialized non-communist countries, and shows, Kutner said, that "the relationship between efficiency and economic equality differs all over the lot. Clearly Japan proves full employment doesn't have to be inflationary."

One generally Kutner did embrace is that universal entitlements, available to all citizens, tend to be more efficient than means-tested programs like Medicaid that are available only to the poor.

"A big example is medicine. We have an awful mixed public-private system where the private market regulates costs but the government pays the bill."

Kutner does not expect his position as a lonely liberal to end quickly. "I find everybody I agree with these days is at least 60 years old," he said.

But the conventional wisdom of American economic thought has changed before and will change again, he predicted.

"America is really complicated — one part egalitarian and one part individualist," he said. As long as people feel equal economic opportunity can be achieved by individual effort, he said, "there's no conflict. But when individualism doesn't get you there, the United States can turn very radical. The country is double-edged."

If the social contract is to change again, unions will have to play an important role, Kutner said. "The thing that makes a different sort of social contract politically possible is non-wealthy people organizing to have political influence. The best one-word shorthand I know for that is union."

S.F. Baby Bell company enters computer market

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Pacific Telesis, one of the seven Baby Bell companies created in the AT&T breakup, is branching out into a new retailing area as a natural extension of the telephone business.

PacTel is getting into the computer store business in California before making a region-by-region assault on the rest of the country.

"It makes good retail sense to start in California," said William H. Luden, president of the unnamed new subsidiary. "Retailing is really a regional ball game. The economies of scale are really regional economies. We'll start with the home region and expand regionally."

It really should not be surprising to see Pacific Telesis making such a move, Luden said.

"I think there is some precedent for it," he said. "We have some sister companies that have leapt into moderately similar retailing business. It's a wonderfully good fit."

"If you follow the evolution of telecommunications and data processing from mainframes to minicomputers, we're at the embryonic stage at the micro level," said Luden. "Pacific Telesis certainly has the telecommunications expertise and we're bringing in some microcomputer retailing expertise."

The new venture is another link in the Pacific Telesis chain of affiliated firms that includes Pacific Telesis International, another subsidiary that plans for the international telecommunications market.

U.S. District Judge Harold H. Greene, the judge in Washington who approved the AT&T breakup agreement, expected to approve the request from Pacific Telesis to operate the two retailing and international business subsidiaries.

Luden, who came to the telephone company from Micropro, the computer software company that created the WordStar word processing package, is confident there is a big market for the retail venture. He is equally sure that PacTel is willing to spend the money necessary to make the subsidiary successful.

"PacTel knows that this will be a fundamental part of its diversified business strategy," he said. "One of the things that got me very excited about coming here is the size of their resources and also the ambition and commitment to this project."

Company officials are not talking too specifically about the name of the subsidiary, when it will begin operations and what brands of products it will feature.

Corporate pensions boom

Led by AT&T's $46.4 billion, top corporate pension funds have boomed in the U.S. Combined pension assets of the largest 100 corporations were found by Business Week to have risen in 1983 by 19 percent — to $220 billion.
