Bank mergers: The experiment lands in court

By Steven W. Svre
United Press International

BOSTON — A series of regulatory changes by states that collectively became known as the New England banking experiment prompted regulators to file suit in court, but still haven't been put into practice in the states.

The regulations that limit interstate bank mergers to institutions in New England states with similar statutes drew the ire of big money center banks that felt they were unconstitutionally excluded from merger activity in those states.

The U.S. Supreme Court's decision Monday to hear the complaints against regional banking compacts will at best probably delay implementation of the New England regulations for another six months, barring any Congressional action.

At worst, the court could wipe out the regulations that several New England banks have used to forge tentative mergers.

Citicorp, the nation's largest bank holding company, said it was disappointed that the court would not rule on the regulations that have allowed several tentative mergers.

Bank of New England in Boston and Hartford's Connecticut Bank & Trust would merge. Bank of Boston, the largest bank in New England, would take over Colonial Bancorp in Waterbury, Conn., RHFT Financial in Providence, R.I.

Hartford National also wants to take over Artru Bancorp of Lawrence, Mass. Fleet Financial Corp. of Providence, wants to open new banks in Hartford and Boston.

Many other banks interested in interstate activity are waiting for a "clear green light" from the Supreme Court before taking action, said Massachusetts Banking Commissioner Paul Bulman.

"We're definitely gratified the Supreme Court agreed to review this important case," said Clarke Cogger, chief of Citicorp vice president in charge of New England operations.

"The issue is really what the banking system is going to look like in the U.S. for the next decade. What started in New England has become a pattern in a number of regions in the country," Cogger said.

The regulations Citicorp opposes have been passed by Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island. Maine has no restrictions on interstate banking mergers, while New Hampshire and Vermont allow no such activity.

"We continue to believe the New England interstate banking statutes are constitutional and remain confident (they) will be upheld," said Bank of Boston spokesman Wayne Taylor. "We hope that the Supreme Court will hear oral arguments during the spring term."

Bank of New England President Peter McCormick said he also remained confident in the statutes that have been upheld by state banking commissioners and the Federal Reserve Board.

"The tentative merger between Bank of New England and CBT would create the region's second largest bank."

"We're disappointed to learn of the additional delay, since the best interest of our shareholders, customers and employees will be served through completion of the merger," CBT Chairman Walter J. Connelly Jr. said in a statement.

"We will be glad to have the constitutional questions resolved once and for all," he said.

Bulman said he was surprised the Supreme Court agreed to hear the case, believing a previous 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals decision upholding the regulations was a firm judicial endorsement.

"I'm surprised... I thought the circuit court decision was a whole lot further than they had to," he said.

Connecticut Banking Commissioner Brian J. Wolf said he was disappointed the Supreme Court would hear the challenge but optimistic the law will survive the review.

Wolf said the concept of regional interstate banking embodied in the law is new, but the constitutional issues before the Supreme Court have been decided "time and time again."

Connecticut optimistic bank rules will stand

HARTFORD — State Banking Commissioner Brian J. Wolf says he is optimistic the state's interstate banking law will survive a review by the U.S. Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court agreed Monday to hear an appeal by Citicorp of New York and NorthEast Bank of Stamford challenging the interstate banking laws in Connecticut and Massachusetts.

State officials chose to limit interstate banking to New England because of concerns large New York banks would gobble up Connecticut banks, threaten the state's small banks and move sources of credit out of state.

The appeal to the Supreme Court has delayed at least five interstate banking deals involving Connecticut banks.

The appeal also delays plans by Hartford National Corp. to merge with Artru Bancorp of Lawrence, Mass., and plans by Fleet Financial Group of Providence, R.I., to open a bank in Hartford.

Wolf said he wants to see how those deals work before deciding on any changes to the law and thus will not ask the 1985 Legislature to make any changes in the law.

Computers called source of stress

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Computers may be the best innovation for business since the cash register, but they also are a source of a growing malady among the nation's corporate workers — stress.

Dr. Kathryn Cramer, a health psychologist at St. Louis University, says the greatest cause of stress among workers is "a lack of feeling of control over one's circumstances and resources."

Cramer said every corporate position has its stress-causing elements, and the key is to identify them and find ways to cope with them. Contrary to popular belief, executive positions are not always the most pressure filled.

"The higher up you go on the corporate ladder, the more degrees of freedom and resources you have in dealing with problems," said Cramer. "Secretaries can be under much more stress than top corporate management positions. Her clients range from AT&T to Balston Purina Co. and the Harvard Business School Alumni.

"We consider ourselves an educational vehicle so people can get the right information and then go out and choose the programs that are best for them," Cramer said.

She said one of HealthLine's most popular features is the stress management program, citing statistics that 80 percent of the people who call on physicians do so because of stress-related problems.

Consultant suggests 'Newbrook' analysis

By Richard March
United Press International

CONCORD, N.H. — Risks and costs associated with the "Newbrook" plan to complete the Seabrook nuclear plant would be worse for consumers than the bankruptcy of the project's lead owner, according to a consultant.

Gregory Palast, a consultant for Union Associates of Chicago, asked the state Public Utilities Commission to order a study of the financial reorganization of Public Service Co. of New Hampshire under federal bankruptcy laws.

New Hampshire's largest electric utility is seeking regulator approval to borrow $665 million to complete Seabrook's first reactor. Seabrook II has been conditionally canceled.

In another development, Seabrook opponents were to argue today in the New Hampshire Supreme Court against a $90 million debt sale last June by Public Service Co., lead Seabrook owner.

Public Service Co. was near bankruptcy several times in 1984 because of expenses from Seabrook I, projected to cost about $4 billion more than initial estimates. The company claims it would go bankrupt if Seabrook I is canceled.

Regulators are investigating whether it is in the best interest of consumers to authorize the completion of Seabrook I, rated at 82 percent finished.

Testifying for the Campaign for Ratepayers' Rights, a Seabrook opponent, Palast said high electric rates brought on by the project's completion would hurt the state's booming economy and result in the loss of some 9,100

New phones raise tough legal issues

By Ken Franklino
United Press International

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — The rising popularity of cordless telephones has given the courts new legal issues to chew on when they deal with police eavesdropping and invasion of privacy cases.

The phones, selling like hotcakes in electronics stores and through phone companies over the past two years, transmit conversation by radio waves instead of traditional land lines. In some cases, conversations can be picked up on an ordinary radio.

The cordless wonders have become so popular that sales have totaled over a million sets since 1982. The Electronic Industries Association, a Washington, D.C.-based trade group, estimates 1985 sales will total 6.5 million.

The Rhode Island Supreme Court is now considering such a case: An appeal of a drug-peddling conviction of a man whose arrest resulted from chance monitoring of incriminating phone calls he made on a cordless phone at his home.

On Nov. 4, 1983, a Woonsocket woman called city police and said her son was playing with the dial on an AM radio and she heard what sounded like a man talking on the phone about selling drugs.

Two detectives went to her home and heard over the same radio the sound of a telephone ringing. They took an AM radio tuned to the same frequency to another spot in the city and overheard a conversation.

Detectives identified one of the voices as that of the woman's neighbor, Leo L. "Red" Delaurier. Police surveillance was set up near Delaurier's home.

With approval of the attorney general's office, police monitored conversations for several weeks, using cassettes to tape discussions relating to alleged drug trafficking, gambling and prostitution.

They also overheard Delaurier boast about how their inability to prosecute him.

"At one point, he made a comment about how stupid we were, that we would never get him, and here we are listening to him over the telephone," said Detective L. Gordon Tempert.

On Dec. 16, 1983, Delaurier, who had other drug charges pending, was arrested on charges of delivering LSD to an undercover state policeman and as a bail violator.

Authorities claim Delaurier conceded that conversations monitored on his cordless phone concerned illegal drug activities.

But attorney Mark L. Smith, argued the radio monitoring was illegal — thus making any evidence inadmissible in court.

But AT TRIAL LAST MAY, a Superior Court Judge Corinne P. Grande ruled the transmissions were similar to those of citizens band radios and were therefore public.

The judge said police did not violate Delaurier's constitutional right to privacy because the cordless phone he brought from a Radio Shack store came with instructions warning of its transmitting power to other receivers — including ordinary radios.

"It is a matter of fact that the cordless phone delivered to him was not a cordless phone, but a radio transmitter," said Steven Brown, executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union's Rhode Island affiliate, which took no position on the Delaurier case.

Barbara Hurst, appellate chief in the state public defender's office, said the issue could result in new case law, as has happened with other technological advances.

"There are countless situations in which new machinery gives rise to new problems," she said. "But in this case, the technology is not new. It is a whole body of new Fourth Amendment law concerning whether they amounted to an illegal search."

"What the courts usually do is consider the new technology and make a determination through common and traditional principles. Courts have been handling these kinds of scientific developments for years."

IN RHODE ISLAND SUPREME COURT arguments on Dec. 3, defense lawyer Smith claimed Delaurier had "an expectation of privacy" when talking on the phone which he was allowed for two years without knowing his conversations were being transmitted to a radio.

Smith said police should have got a court-authorized wiretap. He cited a 1974 federal appeals court ruling in California involving incriminating conversations picked up on car telephones as agreeing with his interpretation of the nation's 1968 wiretap law.

In response, Assistant Attorney General John E. Migliacolo said the supreme courts of Florida and Kansas have found cordless phone conversations are not private and can be used as evidence in court without a wiretap authorization.

He said if the appellate court rules in favor of Delaurier, police and the housewife who reported his illegal activity could be prosecuted criminally or sued for civil damages.

"Such a result would be mind-boggling," Migliacolo argued. "Laws designed to guard against unwanted intrusions would be transformed into protections for open and notorious criminal behavior."

G.P., governor vow cooperation

HARTFORD — The General Assembly convened today with Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill and leaders of the new Republican majority pledging to work for cooperation during the five-month legislative session.

The House and Senate convened shortly after 10 a.m. for the start of the latest chapter in a lawmaking history that dates back 349 years when a General Court began passing laws for Connecticut in 1636.

The first order of business was swearing-in ceremonies in the 151-member House and 36-member Senate with the two houses slated to meet together for afternoon speeches by O'Neill and state Supreme Court Chief Justice Ellen A. Peters.

O'Neill met Tuesday with legislative leaders of both parties for a half-hour meeting, described as cordial, though no issues were discussed and the only agreement was to try and keep open lines of communication.

O'Neill pledged to seek cooperation and to keep in touch with both parties. He said he would work as closely and as harmoniously as possible, understanding also that politics will be politics. "O'Neill said."

Republican leaders agreed the meeting was cordial, but at least one House Speaker-elect, R.E. Van Nostrand of Darien, said the governor should have met with the GOP minority leaders in years past.

"It was a nice meeting, a get-acquainted meeting that should have occurred years ago," said Van Nostrand, who said it was the first time O'Neill invited the GOP to a regular legislative session.

"The purpose of the meeting was certainly not to draw battle lines. It was to establish a rapport on most issues," said Sen. Philip S. Robertson, R-Cheshire, the incoming House Speaker-elect.

However, Robertson conceded the meeting was symbolic and no contentious issues were discussed, although O'Neill did indicate he will assign a member of his staff to keep in contact with the new Republican majority.

Today's first day of the session will be devoted primarily to housekeeping chores, such as adopting rules and swearing-in legislators, and receptions and parties, though there will be at least two major speeches.

O'Neill will deliver his State of the State address to a joint session of the House and Senate after Peters gives an address on the state of the court system.

The House also is expected to appoint a committee to look into a contested election for the 73rd Assembly District seat in Waterbury.

Van Nostrand said Democrat Joan V. Hartley will be seated as representative and a three-member committee will then look into the challenge from Republican Gloria Bogen.

Records missing at court

By Sarah Paskell
Herald Reporter

Auditors have uncovered evidence of more missing files at Manchester Superior Court and also report that some accounting records that could help in tracing the fines have disappeared, state Auditor Leo Donahue said Tuesday.

A complete audit was ordered around the time that Donahue Becker notified Governor William A. O'Neill last November that an internal auditor for the state Judicial Department had found that 14 motor vehicle fines paid at Manchester Court in late 1983 were never deposited and may have been embezzled.

Donahue said that with the new evidence, the total value of fines that were paid to the court but never deposited into state accounts now exceeds $1,000.

He did not say exactly how much more in fines has been discovered since a formal investigation began last November. Nor could he predict when the investigation, which is being carried out by auditors and staff from the office of Hartford State's Attorney John Bailey, will be finished.

The information that more money and records are missing came from an interim report submitted Monday by auditors who are working under Donahue and his fellow state auditor, Henry J. Becker, to trace the missing money.

Two plants to treat water beginning later this month

By Alex Girelli

If all goes well, the town's new water treatment plant on Spring Street will go into operation Monday in parallel with the old plant on Cooper Hill Street. Public Works Director George A. Kandra told the Board of Directors Tuesday night.

Kandra said the parallel systems will be in use for about 20 days and that he expects the new plant will be fully operative by Feb. 1.

Since Dec. 15, the water system has been operated through the computer at the new plant, Kandra said. All components in the plant have been tested and the filter beds and the clearwells (reservoirs of water ready for distribution) have been disinfected.

A state inspector is scheduled to tour the plant Friday.

Kandra said the office staff, now housed in Lincoln Center, will move into the plant on the weekend of Jan. 28. A clerk will continue to work in Lincoln Center so that people who need water hookup permits can get them at the same time they get other permits from offices in Lincoln Center.

IN ANOTHER MATTER, Kandra reported that bids will be opened Jan. 30 for the Porter Street trunk sewer project and he expects competition for the contract.

U.S. economy grows

Jobless rate holds stable

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The unemployment rate held at 7.2 percent in December, the Labor Department said today, and reported that the U.S. economy created 3.2 million new jobs in 1984.

With the increase in the labor force during the year, the new jobs meant that 1 million people were able to leave the unemployment rolls in 1984.

The December rate was slightly higher than the revised 7.1 percent reported for November. Before the revision, November's rate also was 7.2 percent.

There were 340,000 new jobs created during December, a surprisingly strong 44 percent of them in the manufacturing sector. Unusually good weather helped produce 55,000 construction jobs.

The decline in the number of unemployed people still left a 2.2 million looking for work. The 1984 improvement was substantially less than the strong recovery gains in 1983 when 4 million jobs were created and the jobless list reduced by 7.2 percent in June and then bounced up and back down in November and December.

The civilian unemployment rate was 8 percent in January 1984, slipped to 7.2 percent in June and then bounced up and back down in November and December.

from 17.8 percent in November but over major categories showed little or no change.

The Labor Department said that most of the 3.2 million new jobs were created in the first half of 1984. But despite the second-quarter slowdown, job creation continued through the fourth quarter.

The civilian unemployment rate was 8 percent in January 1984, slipped to 7.2 percent in June and then bounced up and back down in November and December.

Deep freeze grips state

By United Press International

Connecticut residents woke up today to dead batteries and frozen pipes in the first Arctic cold blast of the winter of sub-freezing temperatures expected to last at least through the weekend. The National Weather Service at Windsor Locks said temperatures plunged into the single digits or below zero in some northern areas overnight and reported a reading of only 6 degrees at 7 a.m. Winds gusting to 25 miles an hour created chills factors of 25 below zero, prompting state health officials to warn citizens, especially the elderly, to protect themselves against frostbite and dehydration. Auto club officials reported a brisk flow of telephone calls from members with dead or low batteries and commuters were advised to take a little extra time to warm up their cars. The frigid air from Canada that descended on all of New England was expected to make today the coldest day of winter so far but warmer than the record low of minus 7 for the date set in 1968. The cold was in sharp contrast to a record 74 degrees recorded in the state just 10 days ago. Adding to the cold is a light snow that covered most of the state Tuesday that blocks the heat of the earth from radiating into the atmosphere, the weather service said. Forewarned of the bitter cold, most of Connecticut's estimated 3,000 street people took refuge in shelters, soup kitchens and churches. The St. Vincent de Paul shelter in Middletown opened round the clock with police bringing the homeless in all hours. In Hartford, the homeless filled St. Elizabeth House and The Open Hearth. The Immaculate Conception Church in Hartford, which operates its shelter on weekends only, opened its door Tuesday night because of the frigid weather.

Kittinger said he plans to ride in a closed capsule equipped with solar panels for heating and cooling, electrical systems to operate navigation and communications equipment. A launch site has not been chosen yet, primarily because Kittinger must first receive permission from communist nations to fly through their air space. "We're hoping this is a period of detente and they will give us permission to fly around the world," Kittinger said. "We don't want them to think we're a spy in the sky — just a peaceful adventure-loving balloon."

Lawford's last job

Peter Lawford's last attempt at show business ended in December with him stumbling around the set and unable to remember his lines. People magazine says Elizabeth Taylor managed to get Lawford a $2,000, two-day cameo role in "Malice in Wonderland," in which she stars as gossip columnist Louella Parsons, because he was having trouble paying his bill, the magazine said. But Lawford's wife found him drunk and smoking marijuana two days before he was to report. "He seemed terrified about going in front of the camera," Patricia Susan Lawford, 35, his fourth wife said. "I kept telling him he was killing himself." She took him to Cedars-Sinai Hospital where he had blood transfusions and vitamin shots but one on the set he could not remember his lines and went back into the hospital, where he died on Christmas Eve.

Almanac

Today is Wednesday, Jan. 9, the ninth day of 1985 with 356 to follow. The moon is moving toward its last quarter. The morning stars are Mercury and Saturn. The evening stars are Venus, Mars and Jupiter. Those born on this date are under the sign of Capricorn. They include pioneer psychologist John Watson in 1878, Austrian conductor Rudolph Bing in 1892; novelist Simone de Beauvoir in 1908; Richard Nixon, 37th president of the United States, in 1913; actor Lee Van Cleef in 1925; singer Joan Baez in 1941; and actress Shelley Fabares in 1942. On this day in history: In 1861, Mississippi seceded from the Union. In 1945, American troops invaded the Philippine island of Luzon and went on to liberate Manila. In 1969, the British-French supersonic Concorde jetliner made its first test flight at Bristol, England. In 1972, the luxury liner Queen Elizabeth was gutted by fire while docked in Hong Kong. A thought for the day: Simone de Beauvoir said, "This has always been a man's world, and none of the reasons hitherto brought forward in explanation of this fact has seemed adequate."

Nuclear war has chilling effect

By Dennis Anderson
United Press International

LOS ANGELES — Research indicates that the smoke and dust churned up by a nuclear war would dramatically cool portions of the Earth, but scientists say they really do not know what the effects would be. "There is a range of possible effects from highly localized freezes to a global winter popularized in the press," Alan Hsieh, spokesman for the National Climate Program Office, told reporters at the American Meteorological Society's annual meeting Tuesday. Scientists on the panel agreed that many areas covered by the smoke would suffer freezing temperatures that would create havoc in crop production. "You're going to have a dramatic effect on food and crops," said Michael MacCracken, a researcher at the Lawrence Livermore National Lab in Northern California. "Food has been the issue after nuclear war for a long time."

The meteorologists also said the effect of nuclear winter would depend on whether nuclear blasts occurred during the winter or summer when there are differences in the amount of solar energy reaching different parts of the planet. The variables, one scientist said, make it impossible for military strategists to calculate exactly what the climatic effects of a nuclear exchange would entail apart from all other damage caused in the blast. "Education, federal budget cuts and deregulation in the telecommunications industry are among the most important issues facing the General Assembly when it begins its 1985 session today, state legislators from Manchester told the Board of Directors Tuesday evening. IOH pool wins approval
The Board of Directors Tuesday night approved the design of a swimming pool which Instructors of the Handicapped plans to build at Manchester High School for use in teaching handicapped people to swim. The directors had tabled action on the question Dec. 4, asking for information on likely maintenance costs for the special pool. Mayor Barbara Weinberg said the board has now learned it will cost from $3,000 to $4,000 a year to heat the pool's water to the 68-degree temperature required by handicapped people. The cost of building the pool, estimated at $250,000, will be borne by IOH, which has been collecting contributions for several years. The pool will be in a building to be constructed at the south end of the existing pool building at the high school.

Lawmakers and directors discuss priorities for session

By Kathy Gormer
Herold Reporter

Education, federal budget cuts and deregulation in the telecommunications industry are among the most important issues facing the General Assembly when it begins its 1985 session today, state legislators from Manchester told the Board of Directors Tuesday evening. "Education is going to be the number one legislative issue this year — there's no doubt about it," state Sen. Carl A. Zimser, R-Manchester, said during an informal discussion Tuesday night in the Lincoln Center hearing room. Zimser said he plans to introduce a bill this week that would change the way state educational aid — provided under the Guaranteed Tax Base formula — is regulated. He said changes are required so that towns like Columbia, which contracts with another district school to provide education to some grades, would not be punished for saving money. "We've got to fix the formula so the formula works," he said. STATE REP. ELSIE L. SWENSON, another member of the new Republican majority in the assembly, told the directors she agreed that education would be one of the most important issues that comes before the Legislature this year. But she said she favored abolition of the GTB system altogether. "I think it's a terrible formula," she said. "I don't think anyone understands it."

Swenson said that increasing teachers' salaries is another important issue that will come before the Legislature this year. State Rep. James B. McCavagh, a Democrat, said he thought cuts in the federal budget would put the burden of funding some programs on state and local government. But he said the shift would probably not result in large increases in state spending. "I think the move is going to be to cut costs, not to increase costs," he said, noting that the Republicans will control the agenda for the session. The three legislators and Kathryn Feidelson, associate director of the Connecticut Conference of Municipalities, spent about an hour with the directors discussing legislative matters of particular concern to towns.

PENDING LEGISLATION concerning the telephone industry could have a significant impact on many town residents, the legislators and representatives of the Southern New England Telephone Co. told the directors. Zimser said that the Energy and Public Utilities Committee, which he chairs, will consider a bill Thursday to extend the moratorium on allowing competition for long-distance telephone service within the state until June. The current moratorium, imposed by the Legislature last year, expires Feb. 15, he said. Zimser said an extension of the moratorium would allow a telecommunications task force to examine the possible effect of intrastate competition on customers' rates and to allow time for public hearings on the issue. WILLIAM HUNNIFORD, community relations manager for SNET, warned the directors that intrastate competition could result in higher rates for telephone customers and endanger the concept of universal service. Local rates are now subsidized by long-distance charges, and if telecommunications companies such as MCI were allowed to provide long-distance service within the state, SNET would have to cut its long-distance rates to stay competitive, he said. Such cuts would result in increased costs for local telephone service, he said. Hunniford said an extension of the moratorium "does a much better job of protecting the customer's interest." Manchester General Manager Robert B. Weiss told the legislators he was particularly concerned about the way motor vehicles are registered and the town's potential liability for the cost of relocating tenants who live in buildings that are condemned for health reasons or housing code violations. Weiss said he favors a yearly system of motor vehicle registration done through the town tax collector's office in order to reduce delinquent taxes. He said he would also like to see liability for relocation costs shifted to landlords of buildings that are condemned.

Director Stephen Penny Tuesday night tabled consideration of fact finder's recommendation on town contract negotiations with the union representing police officers. The fact finder also backed a union request for a fifth week of vacation for officers with more than 20 years' service. Board doesn't discuss police negotiations

Without comment, the Board of Directors Tuesday night tabled consideration of fact finder's recommendation on town contract negotiations with the union representing police officers. The fact finder also backed a union request for a fifth week of vacation for officers with more than 20 years' service. Officials seek to stop flooding

Public Works Director George A. Kandra will have a recommendation ready for the Feb. 5 meeting of the Board of Directors on what the town can do about a drainage problem that periodically floods a cellar at 11 Bremen Road. Mayor Barbara Weinberg asked Kandra Tuesday night to prepare the recommendation after an attorney representing the owner of the Bremen Road house pressed the directors for a solution to the long-standing problem. The town administration also will ask the town attorney for an opinion on whether the town has any liability in the matter. Attorney Richard Quinlan represented the property owner, Edward Werner, at the board meeting in Lincoln Center. He said Werner has been patient for seven or eight years and wanted to know when Werner could expect to hear whether the town plans to take steps to solve the problem. Kandra said he has studied and investigated the case. He said he will not recommend that the town buy the property. The Board of Directors rejected that idea as a solution in 1978 when it was proposed by Jay Giles, former public works director. Kandra said the ultimate solution would be installation of a storm drain line that would cost about $300,000. He said that it is a high cost to solve the problem, which affects Werner and about five other property owners, whose back yards are flooded in heavy storms. Kandra said the town has a list of 60 storm drain projects from which it must choose when it does about $1.5 million in storm drain work under a bond issue approved by voters in Nov. 6 election. This year has been suffering for as long time," Director James Fogarty said of Werner. "It is no picnic to have a flood in the cellar. Kandra said some steps have been taken over the years and as a result the flooding occurs less frequently. The property is just west of the parking lot of McDonald's restaurant, which fronts on West Center Street. When Weiss suggested getting advice from the town attorney on the matter, Director Stephen Penny said that advice should not be part of the information given to Werner or his attorney. "It is our responsibility to the people of town not to make public an opinion of the town attorney on a matter that might become the cause of litigation," Penny said.

hearings held by the directors Tuesday night. After the hearings, the directors voted to approve buying part of the Purnell Parking Lot from the estate of W. George Glenney for $13,848. Donald Richter, attorney for the Connecticut Bank and Trust Co., trustee of the estate, told the directors the bank has an appraisal for the land that shows a value of $185,000. TOWN GENERAL MANAGER ROBERT WEISS said the $13,948 figure was regarded by an appraiser for the town and by the town attorney as a fair settlement. The property includes about 90 parking spaces. In other action after public hearings, the directors approved the following appropriations: • $9,464 for adult basic education to be financed by a state grant. • $2,617 for tutoring eighth- and ninth-grade students in preparation for the mandated ninth-grade proficiency test, to be financed by a grant. • $866 to the library to be financed from proceeds of the sale of books not wanted by the library. • $3,100 for the Elderly Outreach Program to be financed from contributions under the Neighborhood Assistance Act which gives donors state tax advantages.

Belgian to tour MMH
One of the top health officials in Belgium will tour Manchester Memorial Hospital Monday, hospital spokesman Andrew Beck said today. Etienne Pelfrene, inspector general of the Belgian Ministry of Public Health and Family, will visit MMH along with three administrators from Reese Lare — a private, 550-bed hospital also in Belgium. "As far as we know, we're the only hospital in the area that they'll be visiting," Beck said. "They're going to be touring the hospital in the morning and then having lunch with us." Beck said that Pelfrene is a friend of Warren Plesnik, who became head of MMH in June. The two met through a mutual friend who has international health ties, Beck explained. The four visitors Monday will be shown "everything from x-ray to the lab to private rooms," Beck said. "And if they have any special interests, we'll accommodate them." A letter from Pelfrene prompted the visit, according to Beck.

DI Rosa objects to letter
Town Director Peter Di Rosa objected Tuesday night to the fact that Human Services Department employee John Post had written a letter soliciting contributions under the Neighborhood Assistance Act for the town's Elderly Outreach Program. Post could not be reached for comment this morning. But Hanna Marcus, director of human services, said Post's job description includes such fund-raising efforts. Marcus said she could not comment in any detail on Di Rosa's criticism because she had not heard about it before a reporter telephoned her. Di Rosa raised the question when the Board of Directors considered an appropriation of $3,100 to the Elderly Outreach Program to be financed by contributions under the act. The act gives corporate donors state tax advantages when they contribute to charitable organizations. The outreach program, operated by the Human Services Department, is one of the programs the directors have approved for inclusion under the Neighborhood Assistance Act.

Town condemns easement
The Board of Directors Tuesday night voted to condemn an easement along an empty wooded lot at the corner of Kennedy Road and Vernon Street for $150. The town wants the easement so that it can remove growth to improve the sight line on Vernon Street when the street is reconstructed. The owner of the land, George Mandalos of 19 Sage Drive, had made what Public Works Director George A. Kandra told the directors was a "non-negotiable" counter-proposal of $5,000. In other action, the directors tabled consideration of acquiring from the state a small tract of surplus land at the southwest corner of Tolland Turnpike and Adams Street until it has more information about the land. It decided against acquiring another parcel of state surplus land on Tolland Turnpike near the Islander Restaurant. The town administration has found no use for the land.

Plea cuts short molestation trial

By Sarah Possell Herald Reporter

The trial of Manchester resident Stephen P. Smith on child molestation charges folded before it began Tuesday when Smith pleaded no contest to an unrelated criminal charge.

As part of a plea bargain between his defense attorney and the prosecutor, Smith pleaded no contest to first-degree reckless endangerment in connection with a November 1983 incident, in which he was accused of driving drunk with his five-year-old adopted daughter in the car. As part of the plea bargain, Judge Harry N. Jackaway gave Smith a one-year suspended jail term and three years probation.

Jackaway also ordered Smith, 29, of 281 Center St., to seek psychiatric evaluation and treatment and forbade him to have any contact with the child.

Prosecutor Rostia Creamer, an assistant state's attorney, substituted the endangerment charge for the original charge of first- and third-degree sexual assault and denial of injury to a minor. Smith has denied the charges.

THE ASSAULT CHARGES stemmed from Smith's February 1984 arrest in connection with several incidents in early 1984 when Smith's adopted daughter

Public school secretaries who are new to the job are paid too much in Manchester, while those with the most experience are paid too little, according to a private consultant who is updating the job descriptions of the school system's 65 secretaries.

Former Mayor John W. Thompson, who runs a consulting firm which offers advice on personnel matters, said Tuesday that he will present his findings to school officials this week.

"I thought that the salary plan as it existed now was too compressed, with the beginning salary rate too high and the maximum rate too low, Thompson said. "I suggested that they put some breathing space between the levels."

Thompson said some current job titles are outdated, and do not reflect actual responsibilities. The increased use of computers means that some positions have become more valuable than existing job descriptions indicate, he said.

"THE NET EFFECT is that nobody is hurt by this, and some people are recognized more fairly

Two endorsements cause controversy Bolton GOP backs candidates

By Sarah Possell Herald Reporter

BOLTON — Two controversial candidates won endorsement for the forthcoming town elections Tuesday night.

Robert Campbell, who wants a seat on the Board of Finance, and Thomas A. Manning, who has announced his candidacy for the Board of Education, were the only two candidates out of 22 who did not receive unanimous votes for endorsement.

Republican Registrar of Voters Bette Martin dropped out of the race for school board at the meeting. "I did for party unity," she told a reporter. "I'm going to run two years from now."

Deputy First Selectman Douglas T. Cheney won endorsement in his bid for the position of First Selectman.

At the town committee endorsements are subject to the approval of registered Republicans who attend a party caucus on Jan. 22.

The move to endorse Campbell and Manning drew criticism from some Republican finance officials who felt that the discussion at the meeting Tuesday.

IF HE WINS THE caucus vote, Campbell will vie with incumbent Republicans Morris Silverstein and Clayton Adams and incumbent Democrat Charles Holland for one of three openings on the finance board.

By state law, the Republican party may win no more than two of the incumbents on past school spending decisions merited endorsement for re-election.

"This is the time when we should express an opinion one way or the other," he said.

"We're not questioning one instance in their tenure," responded town GOP Chairman Mark Johnson. "The two candidates have to pay the price of thinking an excellent job."

Clearer regulations governing hobby auto repair drew support from several Manchester residents at a Planning and Zoning Commission hearing Monday night.

The amendment to zoning regulations, drafted by Zoning Enforcement Officer Thomas O'Marra, is intended to limit automobile repair activity on private property, which has drawn complaints. The PZC said Monday that the proposed change "is not going to make junk car problems go away in Manchester, but it will make it better."

Most of those who spoke complained about extensive home automobile repair operations in their neighborhoods. The PZC did not act on the proposal Monday.

William P. Rice of 190 Chestnut St. said an automobile operation is in his neighborhood and "there is nothing to prevent them from re-selling." The auto work can be done by a mechanic who is calling it a hobby, Rice said.

The proposed regulations would require automobiles kept for the purpose of a hobby to be owned by the resident of the house or a member of the household and limit their number to two per dwelling.

The regulations would also require that the car be used for replacement or repair, not for sale or disposal, of no substitute or replacement auto could be brought to the premises within six months of the sale. "The hobby rebuilding shall not cause a nuisance from noise, odors, vibration or other source," the proposed regulations say.

JOHN LAGOS of 281ROST, re-citing problems with a "hobby" auto repairer in his neighborhood, said that he has seen oil leeching into his front yard from the auto operation. He recommended that all types of business be held in a business zone. "There is too much room to bend," he said.

Tom Corbett of 128 Grandview St., whose hobby is refurbishing old cars, agreed that the regulations should be in a business zone.

Other residents who spoke said they were not sure if they were in favor or opposed to the proposed regulations, but that clarity in the regulations was needed.

The PZC agreed that the regulations need more clarity. Members postponed action on the matter until they could get more information and work out more details of the proposal.

THE COMMISSION ALSO HEARD, but took no action on, a proposal by Lawrence A. Fazio for a zone change for a small parcel of land on Buckland Street from Rural Residence to Business I. The four-tenths-of-an-acre plot contains a single family house which Fazio wants to convert to a real estate office for a business associate, Thomas J. Crossen Jr.

In written comments, planning director Mark Pellegrini recommended denial of the proposal, calling it "spot zoning" as the only legal basis for the proposal, also cited antiquated traffic problems associated with the change in traffic patterns on Buckland Street from recent reconstruction and the Interstate 84 interchange.

He said Monday: "It is not advisable to encourage local service traffic to this roadway."

Fazio acknowledged that the property would be more appropriate for a Business III zone, except for the fact that the property contains a dwelling which does not lend itself to other uses.

NEW YORK — Accused "Death Wish" gunman Bernard Goetz appeared briefly in court today, but prosecutors asked for a postponement until additional evidence is gathered, including a hearing considering an indictment against him.

Goetz faces charges of attempted murder and illegal weapons possession for shooting four teenagers who harassed him and his friend on Dec. 22 in a downtown subway.

Manhattan Criminal Court Judge Jay Gold postponed the hearing until Jan. 16 at the request of District Attorney Robert Morgenthau. A spokesman for Morgenthau said prosecutors wanted time to present additional evidence to a grand jury.

Goetz did not testify during his brief appearance, and his lawyer, Frank Brenner, said before the grand jury because "he is under no obligation" to do so.

Brenner said he did not know if prosecutors would give the grand jury video tapes and statements from the shooting that lets Goetz is said to have made to New Hampshire police when he surrendered last week.

"Bernie looked nervous, pensive, reflective, concerned about his future and concerned about the future of a justice system that lets criminals go free," said another neighbor, Allan Horwitz, whose young sons both got hugs when their friend Bernie arrived home.

"The very first thing he said to me was that he wanted me to know that he doesn't consider himself a hero, he wasn't looking to be a hero," Horwitz said. "It was strictly self-defense. Had he not done what he did, he would have been on the floor of the train. He would have been seriously hurt."

The four teenagers Goetz shot on a downtown subway train three days before Christmas have admitted harassing him and asking him for $5.

The case has triggered a wave of support from across the country for mugging victims and others who compared Goetz to the Charles Bronson vigilante character in the movie "Death Wish."

Kennedy meets apartheid critic

Sen. Edward Kennedy met the exiled wife of jailed black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela today, hugging the outspoken critic of South Africa's policy of racial separation.

Kennedy, D-Mass., on the fifth day of his visit to South Africa, brought six members of his family to meet Winnie Mandela, a leading critic of the South African apartheid policy. She is exiled to Brandfort, a country town in the Orange Free State province about 200 miles south of Johannesburg.

Also on hand to meet the Kennedys at Mandela's home were her husband, Zindi Zenni, and Zenni's husband, Prince Thum-buzami Dlamini, a member of the royal family of Swaziland.

Kennedy's identity as the exiled wife, Winnie Mandela can only meet one person at a time. Consequently, Kennedy entered her Moshe Street house first.

Waiting outside were the senator's son, Edward Kennedy Jr.; his daughter, Catharine Kennedy; his sister, Jean Kennedy Smith; Smith's son, Steve Smith; and Chris and Cathy Kennedy, son and daughter of the late Sen. Robert Kennedy.

About 200 neighbors and town residents gathered to greet the Kennedy entourage, accompanied by scores of local and foreign journalists, arrive at the Mandela

Georgia executes killer as his mother watches

JACKSON, Ga. (UPI) — Coed killer Roosevelt Green, saying "liberty and justice for all" did not regret his crime, as he was executed in Georgia's electric chair early today while his mother watched calmly.

Green was declared dead at 12:28 a.m. EST after a single jolt in the 2,000-volt electric chair at the Georgia Diagnostic and Classification Center. It took two jolts last Dec. 12 for Georgia to execute Alpha Otis Slieden.

In his final statement, Green denied killing an 18-year-old white college coed in 1976 and blasted what he called a "double-standard" in Georgia's penal code.

The 28-year-old black former migrant worker, whose black accomplice also was sentenced to death, said while he was in jail during his trial, a deputy sheriff told him: "Two nigger lives are not worth one white."

"It's evident now that liberty and justice for all is not the synonym for what is about to happen to me," Green said.

"What you people are about to witness is a grave injustice. I'm about to die for a murder I did not commit."

Green's mother, Annie B. Green, said she was glad to see her son in his kingdom, and goodbye mother.

Stowaway found dead in unclaimed baggage

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A woman who curled up in a suitcase in an apparent attempt to smuggle herself into the United States was crushed to death because the bag was smashed by other airline luggage, authorities say.

The woman's identity was unknown Tuesday as detectives and airport officials tried to determine how the suitcase wound up at International Airport.

The body was found Monday by customs inspectors among unclaimed baggage at the airport's international terminal.

The cause of death was asphyxiation due to mechanical compression of the chest. "Bill Gold, a spokesman for the Coroner's Office, said.

Detectives said the woman may have been crushed by the weight of other luggage and that the death is being classified as accidental.

Officials said the luggage probably was carried in a pressurized cabin, meaning there was sufficient oxygen to sustain life.

The woman, who was 5 feet tall and weighed about 120 pounds, was lying in a fetal position inside the suitcase measuring 28 x 33 x 10 inches.

Detectives said a victim appeared to be in her late teens or early 20s and was described as either Asian or Middle Eastern, with brown hair and brown eyes.

She was wearing gray pants and a blue sweater over a blouse and two T-shirts, as well as a ring, bracelet and earrings, but carried no identification, ticket or money. A half-eaten banana was found next to the body.

OPINION

The curtain rises on GOP's Act II

How sweet it is, as Jackie Gleason used to say, for Republicans this week as the 1985 General Assembly opens and they taste the fruits of their victory last November and take control there.

Republicans haven't been so politically prosperous in a decade, which gave extra bouquets to the opening day. It was clearly time to party, oh yes.

For Republicans and those other guys, though, the legislative session will really be Act II in a drama labeled 1986. The election which the GOP won so handsily a couple of months ago was Act I.

Despite the impressive GOP success then, the state still has a Democratic administration with a Democratic governor in charge. That is what 1986 — call it Act III — is all about as far as Republicans are concerned.

Tom D'Amore of New Hartford, the GOP state chairman, knows it. After polls closed on Nov. 6, D'Amore was saying he would keep the heat on his party to focus on the next contest — the one that counts the most in the state, because it means occupying the governor's office. Almost parenthetically, he said retaining control of the Legislature would be a priority, too.

HE INTENDS TO BE a frequent visitor during the session. He is happy that leaders of House and Senate have invited him to sit in on meetings they will have every Wednesday. While the agenda will deal with strategy on tax programs, on education issues, on hunting "Getting to Know You" with labor people, and other good stuff, D'Amore will talk a little politics when he sees the opportunity. He sees encouraging rapport among House and Senate leaders, though he notes they are "four very different guys."

His closest ally is probably his New Hartford neighbor, Senate Majority Leader Reginald Smith. The able, low-key Smith will play off Senate President Tom Phil Robertson of Cheshire, a restless, often contentious scrapper who loves to take it to the Democrats.

Robertson isn't sure how he will get along with the big gun in the House, Speaker R.E. Van Norstrand of Danbury, a sometimes moody, always quick-witted tactician who has lived for this moment when he and his party could emerge from the minority shadows. Van's hand-picked majority leader, Rep. Bob Jackle of Stratford, gets along with everybody but may turn out to be the middleman if tensions arise later on.

THE UNKNOWN FACTOR for Republicans as they sail the political seas is how they will react to U.S. Sen. Lowell Weicker of Greenwich, who likes to be considered big daddy to the party and who probably has 1986 on his mind more than all of them put together. Weicker has assured D'Amore he will drop in at least once a month. "It's good for the image," he told the chairman. The senator is a likely candidate for governor in 1986.

The readings on Weicker, as support trooper or candidate, will have to come in monthly installments. Democrats, meanwhile, will literally have an in-house party leader who will be, among other things, the point man for Democratic Gov. Bill O'Neill.

Rep. Tim Moynihan of East Hartford, who was elected state chairman Monday night, will be deputy minority leader in the House as well. He sees no problems in holding both jobs.

AS MOYNIHAN TOOK THE REINS this week, it was hail and farewell for Jim Fitzgerald of Newington, the chairman for just short of five years. But while everyone was patting Fitzgerald on the back, he confided to us that the scenario for his departure would have been different if he had written it.

He believes he was eased out earlier than he intended to go, and he sees some of the congressional delegation behind it. Fitzgerald had always said he would resign right away if the governor ever told him that would be best. But the word never came, until just before the surprising developments of Dec. 28. Fitzgerald believes the delegation, in private meetings, put the telling pressure on O'Neill to ask for the resignation now.

Moynihan, by the way, learned he has a hotel reservation in Washington for Jan. 30, when the Democratic National Committee elects a new chairman. Fitzgerald made it for himself. Membership on the national committee goes with being state chairman.

Moynihan hasn't decided how he will vote. Of the other members, Peter Kelly of Hartford is for Nancy Pelosi of California, John Flynn of Avon is for Paul Kirk of Massachusetts. Mary Sullivan of Greenwich was leaning toward Terry Sanford of North Carolina. Arline Bidwell of Simsbury has not decided. Kirk is said to be the leader.

To Rewald, CIA work is defense

WASHINGTON — Can someone who claims "the CIA made me do it" get a fair trial in a federal court? Or does the government's interest in protecting the CIA from embarrassment inevitably stack the deck against such a defendant?

Through years of overuse by busybodies trying to impress their dates, the whispered words "I work undercover for the CIA" have become a hackneyed line. But to Ronald Ray Rewald, whose Honolulu investment firm was declared bankrupt in 1983 at an estimated cost of $11 million to hundreds of investors, the claim of a CIA connection is the very heart of his defense against 100 criminal counts of fraud and perjury.

Rewald insists that he set up and ran his investment company — Bishop, Baldwin, Rewald, Dillingham & Wong — as a front for CIA covert operations in the Far East, and that its operations were directed by agency headquarters in Langley, Va. His defense is that the CIA caused his company's financial troubles and is now letting him hang out to dry, disavowing any CIA responsibility.

MY ASSOCIATES Indy Badhwar and Dale Van Alsta have dug up evidence that Rewald's links to the spy agency were a lot more solid than the CIA is willing to admit. Yet as I've reported, the judge in a civil suit filed by Rewald, Martin Pence, has kept defense attorneys from examining reams of the investment firm's documents, which are confident would establish their client's CIA connections. And while expressing serious doubt about Rewald's claims of a close relationship with the CIA, Pence justified sealing the company documents on grounds of "national security."

Now the federal judge will preside over Rewald's criminal trial, Harold Fong, is showing the same signs of cutting Rewald's defense off at the knees — and using the same innate contradiction to justify it.

Don't impede district plan for Buckland

It is absurd to have two firehouses within 500 feet of each other, but we have to admire the Eighth Utilities District for its responsible planning to build a station to serve the Buckland area.

At the same time, we find abominable the town government's efforts to hinder progress by "expressing interest" in land which would create a better site for the Eighth District station.

The Eighth District is proceeding with plans to build a second firehouse at Tolland Turnpike and Buckland Street, and buying a piece of state land next to the firehouse site would provide better access to roads.

But under state law, the town government will be given the first option to buy the parcel, and General Manager Robert Weiss has told the state that the town is interested in it.

But the town apparently has no use for the land. Asked why the town wants the property, Weiss said, "I don't know. I haven't given it a thought." Mayor Barbara Weinberg also had no idea about what the town could do with the land.

Town leaders apparently are trying to be coy. We don't understand how taxpayers put up with that.

Meanwhile, Eighth District leaders continue to look for a cheaper way to provide fire protection to the rapidly developing Buckland area. But the task is difficult. The town government refuses to sell, or to share, the Buckland firehouse it can't use to serve Buckland.

It's time for the town to stop playing games. The town's Buckland firehouse is of little use. Officials have yet to substantiate with statistics their claim that it is needed to serve areas outside Buckland.

And the town doesn't need the state land at Tolland Turnpike and Buckland Street. Thwarting the Eighth District in its move to buy the property could be considered a breach of the law. The court ruling which decided Buckland fire jurisdiction warned the town not to interfere with the Eighth District's rights and responsibilities in that area.

Shultz to brief Reagan

Talks end with agreement for more

By John A. Callcott
United Press International

GENEVA, Switzerland — The United States and Soviet Union have agreed to open their most ambitious effort ever to contain the arms race, but Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko warned today that "immense tasks" lie ahead.

Secretary of State George Shultz, whose two days of talks with Gromyko produced the accord for sweeping new arms control negotiations, echoed his Soviet counterpart's concern, saying, "It is clear that we have a long and arduous process ahead of ourselves."

"In our discussions it was apparent that we had lots of important differences of opinion. So we start the negotiations," Shultz told reporters on the Air Force plane taking him back to Washington and a meeting later today with President Reagan.

He disclosed that Gromyko had pressed until the very end of their talks for a suspension of Reagan's proposed Strategic Defense Initiative, the anti-missile defense research program popularly known as "Star Wars."

Officials who accompanied Shultz and Gromyko said despite the breakthrough in Geneva, an arms control accord could take weeks to reach.

"However, a certain step has been made in establishing a dialogue between our two countries," he said. "The Soviet Union is prepared to go its part of the road (and) I would like to express the hope that the United States will do the same."

Gromyko, referring to the U.S. "Star Wars" program, stressed the two superpowers must address ways of "preventing the militarization of outer space."

Shultz told reporters his talks with Gromyko had been held in a businesslike and respectful atmosphere.

He said despite Gromyko's insistence that the United States suspend "Star Wars" research, there were never any acrimonious exchanges during their four meetings, which began Monday.

Shultz, speaking at a news conference Tuesday, made it clear Washington will not abandon "Star Wars," but is ready only to "discuss" the issue.

"We really don't believe in bargaining chips," he said.

SHULTZ LEFT GENEVA at 8:15 a.m. (2:15 a.m. EST) without making a statement, saving his comments for reporters on his plane. Gromyko left 45 minutes later, braving temperatures of minus 4 degrees to read a statement on the airport tarmac.

Second half play lifts MHS cagers to victory

What a difference a half makes. Manchester High was two different clubs Tuesday night as it clipped Falmouth 61-47, in Central Connecticut Conference Eastern Division basketball play at Clarke Arena before a sparse gathering.

Falmouth could get no closer than nine points in the fourth quarter. Manchester kept the Falcons at bay through the halftimes 10-14 from the foul line.

The second half we turned it around and played with a lot more spirit. We were moving the ball and forcing them to make mistakes. And we did. Once we played with more intensity we were okay," Pearson said.

Fermi's doubling on the ball also didn't prove to be a problem after the first half. "I told them that if we had to play with more intensity and force them to make mistakes. And we did. Once we played with more intensity we were okay," Pearson said.

Fermi didn't help itself the opening 16 minutes as it had 14 turnovers from the field and a weak 3-for-8 from the foul line.

"If we shot some foul shots and some shots on the paint had fallen, we could have played off 12-14 points and could have played differently the second half," said Falmouth coach Phil Morton, who saw his undermanned Falcons dip to 1-3 in the division and 1-5 overall.

"We were fortunate to come out tied (after the first half). We could have been in trouble down 6-8

MIAMI — Dan Marino is collecting post-season awards at the same rate as he broke passing records during the season.

The Miami quarterback was honored as the Pro Football Writers Association MVP Monday and the Seagram Offensive Player of the Year Tuesday. On Saturday Marino and Dolphins coach Don Shula will receive awards from the Touchdown Club in Washington.

In between, he'll prepare for the Jan. 20 Super Bowl against the San Francisco 49ers.

"Tomorrow I'll be at practice," Marino said Tuesday night. "I'm not tired of all this. I recognize it as an honor. Players on my team help me win these awards."

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (UPI) — Bryan Trottier was named the dominating center he was and Islanders coach Al Arbour thinks he's on the right track.

Trottier scored twice, once in a short-handed situation, and Tomas Jonsson netted a power-play goal in the first period Tuesday night to lead the New York Islanders to a 3-1 victory over the Montreal Canadiens.

"This was one of Bryan's better games," said Arbour. "He had a strong showing in all areas. I hope he's over all the little nagging injuries he's had all year since the Canada Cup. The Trottier of the past could mean a whole lot to this team."

The Islanders, the former four-time Stanley Cup champions, are not the invincible team they once were. Trottier says teamwork and the proper attitude are lacking in the players.

"I think before we worked hard individually but not as a team," said Trottier, who has 12 goals on the season. "I do feel better and that's important. It's also important that the veterans remind the younger guys about how to play for a game. We kind of know what we have to do. Some of the younger guys may be hungrier but they need some of that rah-rah stuff to get ready in the locker room."

"Kelly played great," said Stettin. "He's from my hometown (Edmonton, Alberta) and I used to give him tips. I'm glad to see him do well."

Hruddy, who is alternating with No. 1 goalie Billy Smith, is grateful for the chance he is getting.

"I'm playing with confidence," said Hruddy. "I hope to get a few games in the middle of the year before Al goes to Billy if he gets hot."

Capitals 4, Wings 3
At Detroit, Mike Gartner snapped a 2-2 tie with 1:23 remaining in the third period and Steve Stevens added a pair of goals to hand Detroit its fourth straight loss. Gartner put in his 25th goal after scoring off his own rebound. The victory was the fifth in six games for Washington, 23-11-7.

Flyers 5, Canucks 3
At Philadelphia, Todd Bergeron scored two goals in his NHL debut, including the game-winner, to lead the Flyers. Vancouver tied 11-3 on Stan Smyl's 13th goal of the season at 5:24 of the third period. Bergeron put the Flyers ahead 4-3 at 11:22.

Oilers 4, Nordiques 0
Wayne Gretzky scored his 42nd goal of the season and added two assists while goaltenders Andy Mogg and Grant Fuhr combined for the Oilers third shutout.

Sabres throw everything into deadlock with Whalers

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — The Buffalo Sabres had goals in their eyes according to Mike Foligno. The right-winger who scored the tying goal in Tuesday night's game described the team's last-minute strategy.

"Our theory in the last 30 seconds was to get everything we could at the net. As it turned out we had all the guys out (on the ice) but had goals in their eyes. We just wanted to get everything at the net as possible."

The last ditch effort paid off. Foligno scored goals in the final 28 seconds of regulation to enable the Sabres to come away with a 4-4 tie against the Hartford Whalers.

With Buffalo goaltender Tom Barrasso pulled for an extra attacker, Foligno blasted the puck through a screen of players and it bounced into the net off the skate of Hartford defenseman Mark Fusco.

The game came to its second remaining tie in the second Buffalo goal to go off Fusco's skate.

"Foligno had the puck at the side of the net. He just shot it and it went in the corner," was all the discouraged Hartford goalie Greg Milen had to say on the final goal.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Lightweight Jacko King of Philadelphia scored a disputed sixth-round knockout Tuesday night in a 10-round split decision over Al Martino of Washington. Martino, 23, appeared to slip as he dodged a short right hand by King. But referee Joe O'Neill ruled a knockdown midway through the sixth round. That ruling was the winning margin for King, according to judge Ron Burns, who scored the fight 5-5 but favored him on points, 46-45. Lynne Carter awarded King a 6-4 edge, while William Costrub scored it 4-4 for Martino. Martino fell to 10-31 with 1 KO.

Runager feeling just super

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (UPI) — When punter Max Runager lost his job with the Philadelphia Eagles, it appeared the only way he'd work at the Super Bowl was if he was willing to sell popcorn. Runager got the boot by the Eagles, but now he's headed for Stanford Stadium Jan. 20 as the punter for the NFC champion San Francisco 49ers.

"Unemployed to the Super Bowl," Runager said. "Unbelievable. There are 49 others with a different story, but Runager's season is unique in that it was seemingly written for Hollywood."

College basketball roundup Techsters hit rough waters

By Fred Lief
United Press International

Georgia Tech is just beginning its trip through the Atlantic Coast Conference and already it's hit white water. The Yellow Jackets, ranked 10th in the country, have dropped two of three league games and that's without having encountered the likes of Duke and North Carolina.

Over the weekend they were beaten by Wake Forest and Tuesday night in Atlanta Clemson sent them for a spill with a 98-81 victory behind Vince Hamilton's 27 points.

"It's a tough loss for us and we know people will think we're not a very good basketball team," Georgia Tech coach Bobby Cremins said. "Hopefully, we can come back, though it's going to be tough."

The Tigers led 70-53 with 11:55 to go before Tech cut it to 80-77 with 2:38 left. With Tech on the move, Yellow Jacket guard Mark Price drove to the basket, but could not convert. Tech was never able to recover. Clemson outscored Tech 16-4 in the final 2:01.

"That was the key play of the ball game," Cremins said. "We had a layup there. We had our best man with the ball. Either he's going to score or get fouled in that situation. But we got nothing out of it and that just broke our back."

Price was outstanding, hitting 12-of-16 shots. He was backed by Horace Grant with 17 points and Glen McCants with 13 as the Tigers shot 60 percent in hinging their record to 9-2.

Georgia Tech, 10-3, was led by Bruce Dairymple's 24 points and Duane Ferrell's 21 points and 12 rebounds. Price was checked with a shot 40 percent in hinging their record to 9-2.

"I think we're playing with a lot of confidence now," Clemson coach Cliff Ellis said. "We played aggressive from the tipoff. We are not a good basketball team if we play cautious. We've got to play hard."

Elswhere, No. 1 Georgetown beat Seton Hall 90-70 and No. 8 Syracuse defeated No. 17 Boston College 64-58.

At East Rutherford, N.J., Patrick Ewing scored 33 points on 15-of-17 shooting to power Georgetown, 14-0, in a Big East game. The 7-foot All-American also had 9 rebounds and 4 blocks. Andre McClellan scored 16 points and Ricky Burton nailed 17 rebounds for Seton Hall.

At Syracuse, N.Y., Dwayne Ewing scored 20 points to lead the Orange in a meeting of Big East powers. Syracuse, 9-1, took the lead for good with 1:15 left on Derek Brewer's two free throws. Trevor Gordon and Roger McCready each had 13 for BC, 10-2.

In other games, Terry Gannon scored 18 points and North Carolina State broke a three-game losing streak by beating Virginia 81-62. Jerry Stevens struck for 16 points to become Iowa State's all-time scoring leader in a 106-86 romp over Abilene Christian.

Robert Jackson's 20 points helped James Madison defeat Old Dominion 80-68, denying Coach Paul Webb his 30th victory. Mike Yeager scored 14 points to lift Army over Fordham 63-59; and Glen McCants with 13 as the Tigers shot 60 percent in hinging their record to 9-2.

Georgia Tech, 10-3, was led by Bruce Dairymple's 24 points and Duane Ferrell's 21 points and 12 rebounds. Price was checked with a shot 40 percent in hinging their record to 9-2.

"I will be playing sometime," Rozier said Tuesday. "I'm tired of sitting around. I want to be out on the field and start playing ball."

Rozier, 23, had been in the second year of a three-year, $3.1 million personal services contract with Edward DeBartolo, Sr. DeBartolo's team, the Pittsburgh Maulers, has merged with Philadelphia to form the Baltimore Stars.

The Stars were not interested in paying Rozier and did not invite him to training camp. Rozier's agent, Art Wilkinson, then said his client would be willing to sit out the next two years and collect $1.5 million from his contract with DeBartolo, unless other arrangements were worked out.

At Tuesday's news conference, Rozier and Brendan Moynihan, Wilkinson's accountant, said DeBartolo would buy out the former Nebraska running back. "Mike has accepted the terms of a buy-out agreement from the Pittsburgh Maulers and with Mr. Edward DeBartolo, Sr. and should become a free agent player within the next few days," Moynihan said. "We will be happy to entertain contract talks at this time with any professional team."

Wilkinson, reached by telephone in Philadelphia, declined to reveal terms of the agreement. But he said the amount paid by DeBartolo, combined with what Rozier likely will receive in a new contract, would be comparable to what Rozier would have earned had he remained under contract.

As a free agent, Rozier can negotiate with any NFL team. The Houston Oilers, who hold his NFL rights, have said they will begin negotiations until USFL Commissioner Chet Simmons signs a letter releasing Rozier from the league.

"I think there's a good chance I'll get that letter," Wilkinson said. Asked where he wanted to play, Rozier said, "I'm looking at the Memphis Showboats in the USFL and Houston Oilers in the NFL. It's between one of those teams."

But Moynihan said Rozier would not limit himself to Memphis in the USFL. "We're looking at the best situation for Mike," he said.

Rozier won the Heisman Trophy in 1983 after gaining 2,148 yards and has 15 in post-season. Brophy's regular season was hindered by injuries that caused him to miss five games and play sparingly in four others.

Syracuse's Dwayne 'Pearl' Washington has a step on Boston College's Michael Adams, who grabs him from behind in Big East play Tuesday night at the Carrier Dome in Syracuse. Orangenwam won, 64-58.

the second half as Wake Forest rallied past Furman 79-64. Kelvin Scarborough's two free throws and a dunk in the last 12 seconds sent New Mexico over Baptist 64-59; Norman Luckett scored 22 points and St. Peter's shot 68 percent in the second half in stopping Manhattan 73-63; Niagara clipped New Hampshire 71-60 on Joe Alexander's short jumper with eight seconds left; Toledo scored the final 10 points on free throws to defeat Kent State 67-58; Mike Ballenger and Kannah Johnson hit for 14 points apiece to push Western Kentucky past Jackson State 75-64; and Chuck Knostman scored 29 points as Northern Colorado ended Denver University's 79-game home winning streak with a 67-64 victory.

Rozier reaches buy-out agreement

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Heisman Trophy winner Mike Rozier won't be sitting around this season counting his millions after all. Rozier has reached a buy-out agreement with his former U.S. Football League team and will become a free agent in the next few days.

"I will be playing sometime," Rozier said Tuesday. "I'm tired of sitting around. I want to be out on the field and start playing ball."

Miami's Brophy wants second title

MIAMI — Joy Brophy wants to give Miami its second straight championship football team. Brophy helped the University of Miami Hurricanes to win national championship last year and will start at inside linebacker Jan. 20 in Super Bowl XIX for the Miami Dolphins against the San Francisco 49ers.

"I tell you, it's just all so unreal," Brophy said after Miami's 45-28 AFC Championship game win over Pittsburgh in the Orange Bowl Sunday. "The amazing thing is, it's in the same city on the same field and I'm playing the same position."

Brophy's personal winning streak hit 22 games earlier in the season. The Hurricanes won their last 11 games last year and the Dolphins their first 11 of 1984.

But it was after the streak ended that Brophy played his best for the Dolphins. He had to overcome two injured thumbs and beat out Pro Bowl-bound A.J. Duhe first, but Brophy has made 26 steps in

"I'm not sure he was a surprise," Miami coach Don Shula said of Brophy. "We took him in the second round but we felt he would play before our No. 1 pick, Jackie Shipps."

Shipps (Shipps) is a great talent but he's not ready to play Brophy

You needn't pay mega bucks for tortellini salad

By Nancy Pappas
Herald Reporter

"You're having a few friends in for lunch. Or you're putting out a spread for relatives of the football-watching persuasion. So you drop in at the deli to pick up a pound of tortellini salad, another of seafood with shells, two peppercorn rolls, three spinach puffs and a couple of calzones to slice up and serve."

The cost to feed those six guests? About $14 at local delis. There is an alternative. You can serve the same five items, with plenty of fresh, raw vegetables to round out the menu, for less than half the cost. You can do it yourself, using convenience products which are available in supermarkets.

Peppercorn rolls are a snap with refrigerated dough, and spinach puffs are simple using frozen puff pastry. Even if you consider yourself a kitchen klutz, you can roll dough, right? And slice a few mushrooms and carrots, right? You can make tortellini salad, one of the trendiest salad items in culinary circles today.

So, give these deli doublers a try. Your budget will be glad you did. "You're having a few friends in for lunch. Or you're putting out a spread for relatives of the football-watching persuasion. So you drop in at the deli to pick up a pound of tortellini salad, another of seafood with shells, two peppercorn rolls, three spinach puffs and a couple of calzones to slice up and serve."

The cost to feed those six guests? About $14 at local delis. There is an alternative. You can serve the same five items, with plenty of fresh, raw vegetables to round out the menu, for less than half the cost. You can do it yourself, using convenience products which are available in supermarkets.

Peppercorn rolls are a snap with refrigerated dough, and spinach puffs are simple using frozen puff pastry. Even if you consider yourself a kitchen klutz, you can roll dough, right? And slice a few mushrooms and carrots, right? You can make tortellini salad, one of the trendiest salad items in culinary circles today.

Florida diner offers blend of East, West

By John DeMers
United Press International

FORT WALTON BEACH, Fla. — Rudyard Kipling, who carried on about East and West having no common ground, obviously never lunched on barbecued chicken, mashed potatoes and Yum Gai at John's Diner.

John Robertson, a veteran of both Navy and Air Force who ran two restaurants in Thailand, mixed the spicy delights of his wife's native cuisine.

"I've been to every country in the world and eaten in every major city," said Robertson, 59, sipping coffee at his table near the kitchen. "But I've never seen anybody else put chicken and dumplings and fried rice on the same damn menu."

That menu is the heart of the diner's fascination, because no one would travel farther than across the street for the dark paneled walls, countless tables or utensils wrapped in paper napkins.

Yet the list joggles items like meatloaf, baked ham and rice and gravy with the pungent, texture-rich creations of Thailand.

These Oriental dishes, though similar in some ways to Chinese, are almost always spicier and lighter, sidestepping heavy breadings and the ever-present sweet and sour for saucy built on meat stocks and spiked with an assortment of Thai peppers.

The KITCHEN has a series of imaginary lines dividing the American and Thai cooks, the latter brought over by Robertson through a dizzying complex of contacts and paperwork.

The Americans come in before dawn, to make breakfast and start the time-consuming baking and roasting. They also get the stock pots going, so the Thai can leap directly into stir-frying as soon as they arrive on the same damn menu.

So much of that time was spent in Thailand that he chose to stay with his wife and children even after the end of strong American presence. A small restaurant opened near a fading U.S. airbase evolved into three casual eateries in the international resort of Pattaya.

"All I wanted was something to do," Robertson said. "But the GIs kept after me till I built the largest men's in Thailand. I had 30 or 40 people working for me when I first made chicken and dumplings, and they all told me I was crazy."

Diner's curry is quick, easy

By John DeMers
United Press International

FORT WALTON BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — John Robertson deflates most requests for recipes from his diner in the Florida Panhandle by explaining his cooks do their work without any.

"That cuisine, like most in the Orient, is an accumulation of techniques rather than a handy set of steps. And besides, he adds, few home cooks have the hours required to produce the meat stocks at the heart of his best dishes.

With some prodding, however, Robertson parts with a quick and easy recipe of sorts for his Thai Curry, a dish far removed from the thicker, darker versions served in India.

He says it can be made with vegetable oil instead of coconut milk. In some testing the addition of canned chicken broth pushed the product miles closer to that enjoyed at the restaurant.

"Much is left to the individual taste buds. For example, people who love the taste of curry can increase the amount of powder added. Those with no particular feeling for curry but an affection for highly spiced dishes can add a few ground jalapeno peppers in lemon juice to liquid the Thai trend to substitute for vinegar."

Thal Curry
2 chicken breasts
3 tablespoons chicken broth or vegetable oil
3 large onions, sliced and separated
1/2 cup bamboo shoots
4 ounces canned coconut milk (curdles less than fresh)
6 ounces canned chicken broth
2 ounces whole milk
4 tablespoons dry red curry powder
1/4 teaspoon Nampla fish sauce (Thai fish sauce, available in specialty stores)

Stir fry the chicken pieces in 2 tablespoons of broth or vegetable oil until they are cooked through but not brown, then set aside to cool. Lightly saute the sliced onions until they begin to soften, then add bamboo shoots, coconut milk, whole milk and 6 ounces of chicken broth.

When that mixture begins to bubble, stir in the curry powder. Cover and let simmer for 10 minutes before adding the Thai fish sauce. Crushed jalapeno peppers in lemon juice should be served on the side so diners can stoke up the dish as they prefer.

Note: Though John's Diner does not do so, frozen peas, chopped and lightly sauteed green peppers or whole red peppers can be added to the mixture color.

John Robertson stands beside the cash register in his unusual diner in Fort Walton Beach, Fla. He serves a combination of Southern cooking and spicy Thai delicacies.

Upcoming movie on Hearst can't top 'Citizen Kane'

By Jean Hanauer
United Press International
NEW YORK — Once upon a time in Hollywood Orson Welles made a movie called "Citizen Kane," based on the life of newspaper magnate William Randolph Hearst. It was terrific.
Coming up in an ABC movie called "The Hearst and Davies Affair," based on the love affair between Hearst and actress Marion Davies, whose career Hearst created. It is soap opera.
The ABC movie, to air Jan. 14, 9-11 p.m., Eastern time, has no artistic pretensions, but it does have problems.
One of them is that Robert Mitchum plays Hearst, which may be the worst piece of miscasting since John Wayne had his eyelids taped to play Genghis Khan in "The Conqueror."
Hearst was a big man and so is Mitchum, which is Hearst's resemblance end. There even is the matter of voice — Hearst had a surprisingly high-pitched voice for his size. Mitchum rumbles. He looks more bemused with his role than bewitched by his paramour.
Virginia Madsen plays Marion Davies, the love of Hearst's later life, and she is quite pretty and charming although perhaps a mile girlish and middle American for the part.
The story line dribbles pieces of history and Hearst's political ambitions along the way as Hearst, 52 and a married man, meets high society.

Davies was no hard-hearted gold digger, although she sometimes drank too much and had an affair outside romance — with Charlie Chaplin. When Hearst was in financial trouble and in danger of losing his publishing empire, she came through with $1 million to bail him out. Even though the incident is real, in "The Hearst and Davies Affair," it seems phony.

Caffeine and chocolate are high in theobromine, and the amount of caffeine they contain is disputed. Advice

Sleeping with obese spouse becomes waking nightmare

DEAR ABBY: A marriage of 35 years is about to end because my spouse has become repulsively obese. It's not that this person cannot "perform" — it's that I get totally turned off before I ever get to the bedroom.
Have you any advice for the partner of the fat one? I think try can't help getting sick, but growing fatter and fatter because of overeating is another story.
If I just didn't have to sleep with that spouse, I could survive. What is there besides divorce?
TURNED OFF IN SEATTLE

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR TURNED OFF: There's understanding. Overeating is an addiction. Food, like drink and drugs, is used by many to make them feel better. Don't be judgmental or unkind. Communicate with your spouse on a loving level. Try to get that spouse to an examination, a sensible diet and an exercise program. Then suggest Overeaters Anonymous. (There are chapters all over.) I've seen the miracles they have performed. It's worth a try. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: What would you do if you were a 5-foot-4, 60-year-old lady in love with a shrimp?
STATUESQUE

DEAR STATUESQUE: I'd get on my knees and thank God if he loved me back. Then I'd pray that no 5-foot lady was fishing off my dock.

Can craving for chocolate cause swelling of breasts?

DEAR DR. LAMB — In a recent column, you recommended that women give up smoking and should stop drinking coffee. I hope you will add some more items to your list.
My breasts swelled for two weeks out of four for 15 years. Then a friend of mine who had this problem was told to give up both coffee and chocolate, and her trouble ended.
I had eaten chocolate for as long as I could remember, so I decided to try out chocolate and cut down on coffee.
The results were astounding. In two weeks, I had improved so much that I knew the problem was caused by chocolate. The pain and swelling were gone. Please spread the word and add chocolate to the list of items to be eliminated.

paper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.
DEAR DR. LAMB — We installed a water softener 25 years ago. Then two years ago, I developed edema. On a hunch, I called our health department for an analysis of our water. They told me the sodium content was abnormally high. We disconnected the water softener, but I still have edema.
I was also informed recently that I had a mild case of congestive heart failure. I spent 10 days and nights under oxygen. I was told the edema and congestive heart failure were related. Can one overcome edema and congestive heart failure?
DEAR READER — You did the right thing in disconnecting the water softener. When you have congestive failure, your body retains sodium. That, in turn, leads to water retention. The retained water causes the edema — swelling of the feet and ankles. This is why many physicians put patients with congestive heart failure on a salt-restricted diet.
Obviously, if you are going to restrict salt in your diet, you don't want it in your water either.
Yes, many patients with congestive heart failure successfully are treated. With medicines and salt restriction, the heart beats stronger and the excess fluid is eliminated.

Some studies have not demonstrated good results with this program, but those studies were of short duration and not all of the sources of xanthines were controlled.
No one with lumps of any sort in the breasts should follow such a self-treatment program without a physician's examination. Let the doctor decide what you have otherwise, you might miss a dangerous lump.

Solon's bill is red flag to colleague

By MILLY McLEON
United Press International

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — A Republican state representative thinks the Rhode Island House of Representatives should open its day with the pledge of allegiance, but one Democratic colleague thinks that's a bit much to ask.
"It's not that I'm a blind patriot or (believe in) patriotism for patriotism's sake," the bill's sponsor, Rep. William Henry, R-Cranston, said Tuesday.
"We start off each day with a prayer which I think is more controversial than the pledge. I believe the flag signifies the high goals and ideals of America. It's really a symbol of a country that believes in all the right things," he said.
His bill had 20 sponsors, both Democratic and Republican, when he submitted it Tuesday. Henry laid it on the table for more signatures before House Speaker Matthew J. Smith, D-Providence, decides what to do with it Wednesday.

Rep. Linda Kushner, D-Providence, asked Smith to send it to committee, rather than taking an immediate vote, because she disagrees with it and thinks the bill should be debated.
"I would prefer we would not have a pledge of allegiance," she said. "The necessary thing is for the Legislature to pass good legislation for the state. This is not going to further that."
She said legislators make a patriotic statement by serving in the House and take an oath to uphold the laws. She believes that should be enough.
Henry said her objection is the only one he has heard so far.
"I think it's basically my belief that you don't wear your patriotism on your sleeve. I agree with that," he said. "But I don't think there's anything wrong with saying the pledge to the flag."

Rep. Gaetano Parella, R-Bristol, agreed.
"I've been here 15 years and we've never done it," he said. "We have to instill more pride in the country. The last few years (the nation) has been taking things too casually."
The pledge of allegiance would give a lot of respect to the chamber," said another bill sponsor, Rep. Raymond Paolino, R-West Warwick.
Henry submitted the same bill last year but it never came to a vote. The third-term legislator said other representatives suggested he try again with a resolution before the new General Assembly.

Dancers go free, but boss rapped

SEATTLE (UPI) — The Washington Court of Appeals has reversed the convictions of three women arrested for topless dancing, ruling the law they were prosecuted under applies to businesses and not their employees.
The court Monday ordered the misdemeanor convictions reversed and the charges dismissed against Diana Graf, Alexa Marie Work and Shawn R. Riley — all topless dancers at the Booby Trap in Federal Way at the time of their arrest.
The women were arrested as a result of an undercover vice squad operation. Their conviction in district court was upheld by the superior court, but reversed by the Court of Appeals.
The justices ruled the women were incorrectly charged with a King County ordinance that prohibits the licensing of a topless-dancing establishment.
The ordinance says the proprietor of a business will lose his license — and face a maximum fine of $250 or a jail term of 90 days — if he is caught allowing bare-breasted dancing.

The Jan. 28 show, televised nationwide on ABC-TV, has been expanded from two to three hours to allow presenters time to award nine additional AMA trophies for a new video category. Awards are also given in pop-rock, country and soul categories. Country entertainer Loretta Lynn will receive the Award of Merit during the telecast. Previous winners include Irving Berlin, Bing Crosby, Johnny Cash, Berry Gordy Jr., Ella Fitzgerald, Stevie Wonder, Michael Jackson and Benny Goodman. The American Music Awards are determined by record and video buyers, rather than industry executives and musicians.

Collins caper

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Joan Collins has formed a new production company for the purpose of producing and starring in a six-hour mini-series titled "Sins," based on Judith Gould's novel.
The mini-series is scheduled for broadcast by CBS-TV next fall as the first of several projects Miss Collins plans in conjunction with New World motion picture-television productions.
Miss Collins and her partner, Peter Holm, have a deal with New World that calls for development and production of motion pictures, for television, mini-series and series for network and cable programming.

Thoughts

Fads and cults come and go, along with narrowness and bigotry. These are parts of our lives, and are found even among members of respected religious groups. Can we not see cults as opportunities for us to undertake some reforming self-examination as well as some Godly ministry to others?
Cults usually promise an altering of consciousness and mastery of self — with expectation of personality changes that are bound to have widespread repercussions, especially within the family. We recall that dedication to the Biblical message is accompanied by a transformation of the self, by God's help, and that all kinds of dedication and commitment restrict one's freedom to some degree.

It is possible that some who have joined a cult have experienced a genuine religious conversion. But, realizing that we cannot possibly have all the answers to our philosophical and theological questions, can't we exhaust the mystery of God, or fully unravel the divine dimension to human life, one cannot accept the claim that a cult's writings tell "Everything you wanted to know about..."
Some adherents quote their sacred writings like parrots, and then drift into further well-rehearsed variations. Often too, members are encouraged to cut ties to their friends and families, in favor of social contacts restricted to the in-group. Even reading matter is skillfully controlled.

"Outsiders and their utterances are on the wrong path and can only be dangerous."
Secrecy does have definite psychological and religious functions. It strengthens the individual in his or her belief that rites and beliefs have a certain divine quality about them. It heightens the feeling of elitism and exclusiveness, and it reinforces group identity and solidarity. But secrecy can be deceptive and is subject to the suspicion of being manipulative. Secret doctrines and practices are shrouded in an aura of mystery and become almost immune to both internal and external criticism.
