

Reagan speech cheers anti-abortionists

By David E. Anderson
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Anti-abortion leaders, fueled by warm support from President Reagan and a string of impressive rallies across the country, believe they are turning public opinion to their cause.

But supporters of the 1973 Supreme Court decision legalizing most abortions can point to a new poll that shows growing public support for their position, especially among the critical Roman Catholic population.

Tens of thousands of demonstrators turned out Tuesday for a rally in Washington, D.C., to mark the 12th anniversary of the controversial decision.

Today, the Life Amendment Political Action Committee, hoping to capture the movement's renewed enthusiasm, will announce its chief pro-abortion political target for 1986.

Reagan, cheered wildly by the throng in Washington, spoke from the White House by a special telephone hookup.

"I feel a great sense of solidarity with all of you," Reagan said. "God bless you for your courage and commitment."

"The president is a solid pro-life right down to his gut," said Jack Wilke, president of National Right to Life.

THE CROWD, BUNDLED AGAINST the frigid chill, carried American flags and chanted "save our babies" as they waited for Reagan's address. One group of teenagers sang "Jesus Loves the Little Children."

Though the weather still was below freezing, Tuesday was slightly warmer than Monday, when bitter cold and strong winds forced the cancellation of the inaugural parade.

Reagan condemned abortion clinic bombings, saying, "We cannot condone the threatening or taking of human life to protest the taking of life by way of abortion."

Movement leaders, however, echoed Reagan's comments that public opinion is turning in their favor.

"We're winning the debate," Moral Majority leader Jerry Falwell told the crowd. "It isn't a matter of will we stop the biological holocaust. It is a matter of when."

But a new poll by ABC News showed that 52 percent of Americans support abortion on demand, up from only 40 percent in 1981. The poll also showed that Roman Catholics were even more liberal than the public at large, with 54 percent favoring abortion on demand.

Following Reagan's address, the group, carrying placards, marched to the Capitol where they lobbied members of Congress. Other demonstrators went to the Supreme Court.

POLICE SAID 23 PROTESTERS, including one juvenile, were arrested when they refused to leave the plaza in front of the building.

Across the nation, similar rallies took place.

In Kansas, single roses and tiny loaves of bread were placed on the desks of state legislators, symbols of each side in the controversy.

Pro-abortion activists called a mass rally in a Chicago church, while anti-abortionists held demonstrations at four abortion clinics.

Anti-abortion leaders in Texas said they are confident the Legislature will pass a bill "inhibiting" a woman's right to an abortion.

Pro-abortion groups, meanwhile, criticized the president and called for stronger measures to end violence at abortion facilities.

It said the court decision "ended centuries in which women were denied a full range of legal options for dealing with their unintended pregnancies," and that Reagan "called solely for compassion for the unborn."

HARTFORD — In the 12 years since the U.S. Supreme Court ruled abortion legal, supporters and opponents of the controversial Roe vs Wade decision have never stopped fighting the battle.

All wore black armbands in mourning for the thousands of unborn children lost to abortion and several wore red roses, the symbol of the right-to-life movement.

"The present status of abortion in the United States is one of instability and uncertainty," she said. "Whether through funding cutbacks, federal mandates or terrorist acts of violence — the legal right to choose is being blatantly attacked."

Discovery's flight represents a major new step by the Defense Department to utilize the reusable spaceplane as a truck to haul military satellites to the orbital "high ground" of increasing interest to the superpowers.

It is the 18th shuttle mission and the first fully classified manned space flight in NASA's quarter-century history.

Earlier in the meeting, while a quorum was present, the EDC voted to appoint Town Auditor Gerald O'Leary to perform a close-out audit on the Buckland Industrial Park grant at a cost of $2,500.

Members of the Economic Development Commission agreed informally this morning to take a different approach toward development of the 27-acre Union Pond Industrial Park because of the expansion of Interstate 84, which is adjacent to the property.

Secrecy shrouds shuttle

By William Horwood
United Press International

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Despite unprecedented secrecy, the all-military crew of the shuttle Discovery openly went to the firing pad today for an afternoon launch to carry a "big ear" satellite into orbit to spy on the Soviets.

Shuttle commander Navy Capt. Thomas Mattingly, Air Force Lt. Col. Loren Shriver, Marine Corps Lt. Col. James Buchli and Air Force Maj. Ellison Onizuka and Gary Payton passed by the launch control center at 11:35 a.m. in their silver "astrovan" preceded by police cars and a NASA helicopter.

Discovery, grounded Wednesday because freezing weather threatened ice damage on takeoff, was rescheduled to blast off today on its blacked-out flight sometime between 1:15 p.m. and 4:15 p.m.

The exact launch time was classified to hamper Soviet efforts to track the shuttle and its sensitive payload but the Air Force promised to activate counting clocks at the Kennedy Space Center press site nine minutes before liftoff.

Air Force forecasters predicted good weather for the planned launch and space agency officials said work at the firing pad proceeded smoothly overnight.

The countdown was secret and no other details were released until 11:30 a.m. "All I can tell you is we're on schedule," said NASA spokesman Hugh Harris. "There have been no problems."

Traditional television coverage of the crew's entrance into the shuttle was forbidden. All conversations between the astronauts and mission controllers will remain secret throughout the classified flight.

Telltale oxygen vapors billowing from the area of the shuttle's three main engines at 8 a.m., detected through a telescope 3 1/2 miles away, tipped off reporters that the shuttle's half-million-gallon load of supercol propellants was being loaded.

EDC warm to Weiss plan to seek proposals at I-park

Members of the Economic Development Commission agreed informally this morning to take a different approach toward development of the 27-acre Union Pond Industrial Park because of the expansion of Interstate 84, which is adjacent to the property.

The commission also agreed to act to close out the grant agreement with the state on the Buckland Industrial Park. Only two parcels remain to sell in the 393-acre park.

Instead of developing Union Pond park into small lots for small industrial users, EDC members agreed to a suggestion by town General Manager Robert B. Weiss that the town accept proposals from different types of developers and then select the best proposal.

They did not vote on the park proposal because a quorum was not present at the end of the meeting.

"We thought we should take another look at the park now that the highway has opened up," Weiss said.

Sharon loses libel lawsuit against Time

By Eilon Cates

NEW YORK — Former Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon lost his $50 million libel suit against Time Inc. today when a federal jury found the magazine acted without malice in falsely linking Sharon to a 1982 massacre of Palestinian civilians.

Sharon had won two victories earlier in the deliberation when the jury decided that a crucial paragraph in a Time story had defamed him and that it was false.

Pearson to resign as coach at MHS

By Len Auster

Manchester High School basketball coach Doug Pearson announced this morning that he was submitting his resignation effective at the end of the 1985 season.

There were reports that Pearson was under pressure to either accept a two-year suspension or resign at the end of the season. At a news conference in his office, he denied that.

Pearson's resignation as basketball coach will not affect his employment as a physical education teacher at MHS.

There were rumors that Pearson, involved in several controversial incidents during his 11-year coaching career at MHS, had to make a decision after being logged with a technical foul in a Jan. 11 game against Rockville High at Clarke Arena.

The 40-year-old Pearson, however, said he has been considering resigning for a couple of years. "The last two or three years I've been considering resigning. A lot of things have happened in the last couple of years. I have been thinking about it. But each time I decided to stay because I love to work with these kids so much. I feel my heart is in the right place."

One thing which Pearson didn't like was the timing. "I don't like resigning in the middle of the year because you don't create the best atmosphere for the team. I would have preferred to make this announcement at the end of the season, but because of recent speculation and rumors, I feel I had to make it at this time," Pearson said.

Pearson's to-date won-loss record is 148-89. He served as assistant basketball coach under James Moriarty before taking over as coach in 1974. His teams either won or shared four titles in the now-defunct Central Connecticut Interscholastic League.

In his prepared statement, Pearson wrote, "At the present time I plan to devote more time to my family and to pursue other career opportunities as they develop. I am hopeful that I will be involved in basketball in some capacity in the near future."

Right now, my only goal is to help this team do the best they can for the remainder of the season. We have suffered some good injuries that have put us into a position where we really have to come together as a team. I feel the state need my every effort to help them succeed."

Pearson appeared subdued, standing with one knee on a chair in his office, at this morning's news conference. Asked about trouble with the school administration over incidents during his career, he said, "I have no ill feelings toward anyone. I'm disappointed I feel a sense of loss because basketball and Manchester High School meant so much and are so important to me. I feel good about myself and everything I've done the last 11 years. I feel the program is well respected around the state and whoever takes over won't have to make a lot of changes."

month trial in U.S. District Court in Manhattan. The jury had been deliberating on the complex case for 11 days and had focused on the malice issue for seven days.

In its statement, the jury found that Sharon acted without malice in linking Sharon to a 1982 massacre of Palestinian civilians.

Under U.S. libel law, a public figure such as Sharon must prove not only that a published statement defamed him and was false, but that it was published with malice — meaning Time knew its information was false or seriously doubted its accuracy.

The paragraph in Time's Feb. 1983 cover story reported that Sharon, who was defense minister at the time, had "discussed" with Lebanon's Phalangist leaders the need to avenge the death of Lebanese President-elect Bashir Gemayel on the eve of the 1982 massacre of an estimated 700 Palestinians at two refugee camps in Beirut.

Earlier, Sharon had hailed the jury's two-part verdict as a "clear moral victory" for him, the Jewish people and the state of Israel.

I feel the program is well respected around the state and whoever takes over won't have to make a lot of changes."

Pearson is a 1963 graduate of MHS and a 1967 graduate of the University of Bridgeport. "This has not just been a job here to me. I was born and grew up here. I feel it is a great community. But as things happened and developed, I feel I had to make the decision at this point. I feel it was the time to stop."

Anti-abortion group taps poverty program

By Gregory Gordon
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Heads of a federal program for the poor approved about $100,000 in volunteer aid to anti-abortion group's state office and an administration appointee urged the organization to apply for another $15 million, officials say.

Thomas Pauken, a Reagan appointee who directs the volunteer agency ACTION, said he was pleased to see the grant to the state office of Birthright Inc. that suggested they seek grants from the anti-poverty program VISTA were "unauthorized."

Pauken said he reprimanded the author, Myron McKee, a $52,230-a-year ACTION official, for writing the letters but defended the existing VISTA program if a certain number of other people don't qualify.

Critics, including Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., who has battled the administration over the use of VISTA funds, charged Tuesday that expenditure of anti-poverty money for anti-abortion causes is forbidden by Congress.

They accused the administration of trying to divert scarce funds intended to help the poor through VISTA — Volunteers in Service to America — for political purposes.

Mimi Mager, executive director of Friends of VISTA, which has joined in battling administration moves to redirect the agency, charged that Birthright "clearly lacks the anti-poverty mandate and focus required under the law."

Pauken said he had no advance knowledge that McKee was sending the letter earlier this month to Birthright's state offices, along with a copy of the successful Massachusetts grant application submitted in September for $100,000 in volunteer aid.

Each volunteer receives stipends totaling about $6,500 a year and costs taxpayers about $7,800. If the grant requested and received such manpower, it would total nearly 2,000 volunteers and cost more than $15 million, absorbing virtually the entire VISTA state offices.

Since the mailing, VISTA officials confirmed, program officials in Iowa and Wisconsin also have received inquiries from Birthright state offices.

Pauken said as soon as he learned of the mailing last week, he summoned McKee to his office. "I told him, 'This is not the way we operate in ACTION,'" Pauken said in a telephone interview from Waco, Texas. "We're not in the business of encouraging any group to do anything."

He said he directed McKee, who last year was an unsuccessful anti-abortion candidate for the GOP congressional nomination in Minnesota's 1st District, to reimburse the government for the cost of the mailing.

Anti-abortion group taps poverty program

VISTA is providing Birthright's Massachusetts office with a $21,000-a-year staff coordinator and $78,000 in subsidies for a dozen volunteers, according to Bill Coby, head of the government agency's Massachusetts state office.

Birthright, openly opposed to abortion, is a counseling service for women facing unwanted pregnancies and has 510 chapters nationwide. Birthright encourages women to carry their babies, and term and will provide shelter to pregnant women seeking it.

"No problem is so great that it warrants destruction of an innocent life," says a recorded message at a Birthright office.

Pauken defended the grant to Birthright, asserting the organization aids many poor women with unwanted pregnancies.

Coby also defended the grant, saying that if some of those helped are poor, "you don't deny them VISTA money. It's a certain number of other people don't qualify."

MR. T. OUTSIDE COURTROOM vows to protect child witnesses

LOS ANGELES - With television's Mr. T lending his imposing support, the first child to testify against seven former McMartin Pre-School teachers accused of molestating 41 students stuck to his story under a gentle but thorough cross-examination.

The 7-year-old boy, identified only by his first name and a reference number, had told prosecutors that teachers at the suburban Manhattan Beach nursery school molested and photographed him while he and other pupils played "naked games" at the now-closed school.

During his cross-examination, defense attorney Dean Gits grievedly testified Wednesday to establish that the youngster's claims had been suggested to him by over-zealous prosecutors.

Under Gits' examination, the boy conceded that it had been his parents who told him that the main defendant in the case, Ray Buckley, 26, was "bad" and had molested him.

Picketing the South African embassy

Father Mudd's parishioners had neglected to bring an entrenching tool with them so that they had some trouble getting the poles on which they had tacked their banner to stand in the ground. Though it was January the earth had not yet frozen allowing them, by dint of kicking the earth with heels, to dig holes for the poles so that the traffic on Massachusetts Avenue could read the name of Saint Augustine Catholic Church on the green material. A hundred and fifty yards across a little street and up a hill the two graystone buildings of the South African embassy sit out of the picketers' line of sight.

Across Massachusetts on a triangular patch of land where Lovers Lane begins, a single TV station van is parked. This is the seventh week of orderly demonstrations. No business day is skipped but some days are skimpier than others, days when Randall Robinson, the affable, accessible coordinator of this effort in shoe leather and chinchillas, is clearly scraping the bottom of the volunteer barrel.

Twenty years ago in Selma there were days like this one when the Movement was reduced to putting grammar school children on the picket line. They looked sparse and frail and on those days so did the Movement, though Andy Young (now former congressman, ex-U.N. ambassador and Mayor of Atlanta) would slip his coffee from a polystyrene cup and say, "We're going to pass a voting rights bill from here, you'll see."

WE OF LITTLE FAITH and much skepticism did not see nor was there much to see in the sparse line of picketers from Saint Augustine's walking their flattened ellipse on the sidewalk in front of an empty chateau of a house 500 feet below the embassy. That is as close to a diplomatic mission as you legally may picket in Washington. The parishioners, perhaps three quarters black, wore knitted woolen hats; a middle aged white woman of obviously limited means, walked guiding a young, blind black man. They looked as though they could stand a little emancipating themselves. On most every day two or three elected officials from somewhere in America turn up, county commissioners from California or state reps from Massachusetts. Some must come to get their political tickets punched, but others do not come to be seen. On Dr. Martin Luther King's birthday many hundreds came to give their respects to the dead. "I had been wanting to go but I hadn't. I had the day off so I walked over and got on the picket line," a white woman said. "On the way I realized I was wearing my fur coat, it's only quarter length but still... I went anyway and length Emba mink." On Christmas day, a group from the American Jewish Committee took over the responsibility to make sure the chain of days was unbroken. Rev. Walter Fauntroy is the District of Columbia's non-voting delegate to the House of Representatives; earlier in his life he worked and walked with Martin Luther King. He is often on the picket line as he was on St. Augustine's day, carrying a large cross on which a bronze Jesus had been nailed.

EVERY DAY THE DRILL on Massachusetts Avenue is the same. The picketers arrive around 3:30 and after school an hour Randall Robinson steps to the microphone set up on the lawn in front of the empty chateau. "Will the designated messengers of the day please assemble behind the lecturn," he will say and then he introduces them.

On this day Rev. Fauntroy and his friend Father Mudd linked arms and walked up the street together to the police awshores. The officers were told who was intending to be arrested and those people were allowed across the barrier to proceed up the hill to the steps of the government. The officers are as helpful as they can be. It's not Selma. At the station house, where the arrestees are taken in vans, everybody is immediately released. Picketing the South African embassy in the District of Columbia will not get you electrocuted.

At the embassy door Father Mudd turns to the parishioners and leads them in a short service. The police are respectful. "No more weeping over me!" "And before I'd be a slave, 'I'll be buried in my grave, 'And go home to my lord and be free.'" Only now do the police lead him away.

Reagan plans tougher line on Pinochet

WASHINGTON — President Reagan will follow up his public criticism of South Africa's white supremacist policies with a tougher line against another unpopular regime — the military dictatorship of Gen. Augusto Pinochet of Chile.

A preliminary step in implementing the new policy will be the replacement of Ambassador James Theberge, who has spent four years in Santiago trying to ingratiate himself with the Pinochet government and who reportedly opposed the get-tough policy.

In fairness to Theberge, his attitude toward Pinochet may be the result less of sympathy than of pragmatism. The strategy behind Theberge's approach is explained in an embassy document, which is quoted in a recent column.

The United States "is critical of the Pinochet government because it has not been moving rapidly enough toward a democratic transition and because of human rights violations in Chile," stated the document. "The U.S. Embassy in Santiago has and will continue to practice secret diplomacy, and the ambassador will quietly discuss with officials of the Chilean government the importance of political liberalization."

With this as his guideline, Theberge repeatedly demonstrated, in small but significant ways, seeming U.S. support for Pinochet. For example, he was the only ambassador from a Western democratic country who attended a recent ceremony honoring the military regime. On the other hand, he was the only one who failed to attend the 10th anniversary celebration of a Catholic human-rights group.

Apparently, Pinochet hasn't been the least influenced by any secret U.S. pressure to liberalize. On the contrary, he recently called out the troops and truncheons to suppress his political opponents in violent confrontations.

So President Reagan will add a little public pressure. The new policy is being drafted behind closed doors by the state Department's Latin American and human-rights bureaus. It's still closely guarded, but my associate Lucette Lagardo has learned about the proposed changes. For example, the embassy will attempt a delicate "tightrope act" between the Pinochet regime and the opposition parties. The new ambassador will try to open lines of communication with both sides, while making it clear that the United States doesn't necessarily embrace either the regime or its critics.

The White House and State Department will make more frequent, public criticism of Pinochet. The pattern, in fact, has already begun. An inside source said the State Department has made some 18 critical public statements about Chile in recent months. "That's more than we have criticized the Russians," he said.

Like the first two proposals, an economic "sanctions" being suggested by the policy drafters is significant but more symbolic than practical. The proposed policy would have the United States abstain from votes on Chilean loans from the Inter-American Bank and other international institutions. Secretary of State George Shultz opposes the use of loans to pursue political policy. But abstention by the United States from such loans would register U.S. displeasure with Pinochet, without directly blocking the loans or preventing other nations from blocking them.

The purpose of the policy shift hopefully is to increase U.S. influence in Chile. Theberge has "lost the confidence of both sides" there, I'm told. A more evenhanded approach might win the United States at least the grudging respect of both Pinochet and his opponents.

WASHINGTON — Senate Republican leader Robert Dole said today a freeze of Social Security cost-of-living payments is nearly as important as the goal of slicing $50 billion off the federal deficit in fiscal 1986.

Dole also said cutting the deficit is "good politics" that will benefit GOP senators in the 1986 elections.

The Kansas Republican told a U.S. Chamber of Commerce breakfast he needs bipartisan support for his deficit reduction plan — being put together separately from President Reagan's budget — and cautioned them not to be "distracted" by proposals for tax simplification.

"We need to get deficit reduction first," he said. "We're serious about it, we believe it's a good policy and we believe it's good politics" with 29 Republican senators up for re-election in 1986, Dole said.

He said spending cuts must come in every area government and added he believes that Social Security recipients will understand when "we articulate the need for a freeze we can explain to most people that we are doing this to sustain the economy... it will be hard to obtain the $50 billion without it (the freeze on Social Security cost of living payments)," he said.

Explosion rips Shell plant
ROXANA, Ill. — Authorities today recovered the body of a worker killed in a fiery explosion that ripped through a Shell Oil Co. refinery and injured at least seven others.

A section of the refinery used to remove wax and other materials from lube oil blew up about 2:50 p.m. CST Wednesday and officials were unable to search for the missing worker until the fire subsided.

His body was found early today, said company officials, who added his identity would be released later.

Company spokesman Dave McKinney said determining the cause of the explosion and fire at the plant 20 miles northeast of St. Louis might take several weeks.

Withdrawal talks end
NAQOURA, Lebanon — Israel and Lebanon today suspended talks on the withdrawal of Israeli troops from southern Lebanon in stalemate, bringing the three-month-old negotiations to near collapse.

"The delegations maintained their earlier positions and agreed to leave open (the date of the) next meeting," a joint communique said.

The Lebanese and Israeli army delegations met briefly after lunch and then broke off talks, with no date to meet again. The talks began last Nov. 8.

Lebanon began the 14th round of negotiations by demanding a detailed timetable for the departure of Israeli troops before it would coordinate the withdrawal or ask the United Nations to send peacekeepers into evacuated areas.

But Israel countered that it is up to Lebanon to keep order during the pullback. Israel has said it will leave the Mediterranean port of Sidon by Feb. 18 and be out of Lebanon by the fall.

Soviets display chief's letter
MOSCOW — Soviet newspapers today prominently displayed a letter written to a Canadian teenager by President Konstantin Chernenko, who is rumored to be ill and has been out of public view for almost a month.

The media attention was reminiscent of similar attention given to letters and statements signed by Chernenko's predecessor, Yuri Andropov, during the seven months he was out of sight prior to his death last February.

Another letter — congratulations to participants in a peace conference in Moscow — also was published on the front page of every major newspaper and mentioned on radio and television news.

"It's just all so familiar," said one Western diplomat of Chernenko's published reply to a letter from Laurie Piroux, 18, of Calgary, Alberta.

Italy frees Nazi criminal
ROME — Nazi war criminal Maj. Walter Reder, who has been serving a life term for the massacre of at least 600 men, women and children in 1944, was freed by the Italian government today and flown to his native Austria.

Reder was taken from the military prison in the resort city of Gastei, north of Naples, amid great secrecy and put aboard a special plane for Graz, Austria. He was then driven to Baden, a small town some 12 miles south of Vienna.

Reder was the last major war criminal held in an Italian jail.

In Vienna, a Foreign Ministry spokesman confirmed Reder was in Austria but declined to give his location, saying, "he doesn't want to be contacted."

Memorial planned
KENT, Ohio (UPI) — Kent State University's decision to erect a memorial honoring four students killed during an anti-war protest in 1970 may "heal the wounds of the past," says a man who was wounded in the incident.

The university already has several memorials of the May 4, 1970, shootings, but no monument initiated by the school. The monument approved Wednesday would be "a central memorial," university spokesman Joe Durbin said.

Big warehouse fire lights up New York

By William Fitzgerald
United Press International

NEW YORK — A swirling tower of flame flared up through the Manhattan skyline, injuring 10 people and forcing about 100 to evacuate in a searing 10-alarm warehouse fire, New York's biggest blaze in 17 years.

Hundreds of firefighters battled the roaring fire Wednesday night, and crews still worked early today to keep the flames under control.

Eight firefighters and two civilians suffered minor injuries, the Emergency Medical Service said.

Witnesses 10 miles away said they could see the fire casting an eerie, flickering glow on the New York skyline. It destroyed the eight-story warehouse.

The Red Cross said 41 guests of the Travel Motor Inn on West 42nd Street were forced out by the fire. Fred Yeager, spokesman for the Red Cross of Greater New York, said the guests from 17 stations across the city were called in to help.

Yeager said many people in the motel were staying courtesy of the fire since their homes already had been destroyed by fire.

Residents of a nearby building of workers were evacuated Wednesday when the fire broke out but were allowed to return to their homes today.

The blaze erupted at 7:28 p.m. EST at the eight-story Wieser Piano Co. warehouse at 324 W. 43rd St. and spread rapidly. About an hour later officials declared it a six-alarm fire. By 9:30 p.m. it went to 10 alarms, and heat from the intense, roaring flames shattered windows in nearby apartments.

Firefighters brought it under control at 10:30 p.m.

Fire Chief John O'Rourke said he feared the "millions of gallons" of water sprayed onto the fire would freeze and pose a threat to traffic. The Sanitation Department spent the night salting the streets and sidewalks in the area.

O'Rourke said the fire may have been caused by a defective oil burner in the "warehouse basement. A 2,000-gallon oil tank fed the shooting flames, he said.

The fire broke out next to Rescue Company No. 1 and quickly destroyed the firehouse despite efforts by its 30 crewmen to stop the blaze.

Fire Department spokesman John Mulligan said at least 400 firefighters from 17 stations across the city were called in to help.

Mulligan said the blaze was the largest single building fire since the one Dec. 13, 1967 at the Morgan Annex of the Post Office at West 29th Street and 11th Avenue. That blaze took 11 alarms and forced the evacuation of hundreds of postal workers.

Firemen train their hose on flames billowing from a Manhattan warehouse Wednesday during a 10-alarm fire which spread to an adjacent firehouse and forced the evacuation of a nearby hotel. It was the first time in 17 years the 10-alarm designation was used. Two firefighters were injured, officials said.

Suspects may not be jailed

MANILA, Philippines — Armed Forces Chief Fabian Ver slipped into a courthouse today and was booked on two counts of murder in the assassination of opposition leader Benigno Aquino.

Ver, a loyal ally of President Ferdinand Marcos, was charged as an accessory in the Aug. 21, 1983, murders of Aquino — Marcos' arch political rival — and of Rolando Galman, the man the government said killed Aquino.

Ver was freed after being fingerprinted and posting $1,500 bail.

The four-star general appeared in court after ahrs, under orders from Judge Manuel Pamaran, served arrest warrants earlier on 26 men charged in the case.

Maj. Gen. Prospero Olivas, commander of the Metropolitan Police, said 17 military men named as principals in the slayings. The group includes Brig. Gen. Luther Custodio, chief of the elite Aviation Security Command responsible for Aquino's safety, and two colonels.

The 17, who could be executed if convicted, have been confined to their quarters under Piccio's supervision. Piccio must surrender them within 10 days, the sources said. They have been ordered held without bond.

The charge sheet said they "willfully, unlawfully, feloniously and with evident premeditation and treachery" killed Aquino and Galman.

Among the 17 are Constable Rogelio Mariano and Sgt. Filomeno Miranda, the military escorts closest Aquino when he was shot at Manila Airport on Aug. 21, 1983. Prosecutors said one of the two "most probably" killed the former senator.

Aquino was killed as he returned home from three years of self-imposed exile in the United States.

The case will be tried before Pamaran, presiding judge of the Sandiganbayan, a special court that hears cases against public officials.

The only civilian named, businessman Hermilo Gosico, was charged as an accomplice and faces up to 30 years in prison. His bail was set at 20,000 pesos — $1,052.

Pamaran, known for his tough sentencing, vowed to give priority to the case.

"We will not allow any postponement in the trial except on highly meritorious grounds," he said.

Ver, 54, a trusted ally of President Ferdinand Marcos, has denied any involvement in the assassination and has been on leave since October.

"I expected it. I'm prepared for it, like a good soldier," Ver said.

The indictments announced Wednesday by the prosecutor's office affirmed the October findings of a civilian commission that Aquino was the victim of a military conspiracy, and that Galman — shot by soldiers moments after Aquino was slain — was a "fall guy."

Aquino's younger brother Agapito, 46, said the family remained unsatisfied because the "real mastermind" has not been indicted.

EPA discloses gas leak at Carbide plant

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The chairman of a House Health and Environment subcommittee today accused the government and Union Carbide of ignoring reports warning of a possible "Bhopal tragedy" at the firm's West Virginia insecticide plant.

Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., said internal memos warned company officials last September of the "concern that a runaway reaction could occur" in storage tanks holding the deadly insecticide methyl isocyanate.

Three months later, a leak of the substance from Union Carbide's plant in Bhopal, India, killed 2,500 people.

A report released Wednesday by the Environmental Protection Agency said safety records at the company's plant in Institute, W. Va., show 28 leaks of the insecticide between 1980 and 1984.

The report says hundreds of pounds of deadly methyl isocyanate were released, but agency spokesman Dave Cohen said they "were not the types of leaks" that occurred in Bhopal.

"Yet, 28 leaks of that stuff, however minor, are unsettling," he added.

The EPA said it is continuing its investigation to determine how serious the incidents were.

Interviews on "The CBS Morning News" and on ABC's "Good Morning America," Waxman said Union Carbide officials ignored their own internal safety reports that showed "the potential for a Bhopal tragedy in the United States."

Waxman said Warren Anderson, chief executive officer of Union Carbide, testified last year that "he couldn't imagine such a thing ever happening... yet his internal people were telling him that it could happen, and in a few months later it did happen."

He said the EPA was lax in its oversight of Union Carbide.

Dick Henderson, a spokesman for Union Carbide's Institute plant said the company could not comment directly on the report because it had not seen it.

"But I don't think any of the instances were of any threat to the community," Henderson added.

In a related development in New Orleans, a panel of federal judges will be asked today to consolidate two dozen lawsuits demanding billions of dollars from Union Carbide for victims of the Bhopal gas leak. About 2,500 people were killed and thousands more injured.

Don't trample woman's right on abortions

When the Supreme Court eased the rules on admission of illegally seized evidence earlier this year, President Reagan and other conservatives hailed the court for freeing the police from restraints. However, when court decisions do not match the conservatives' ideology, there is displeasure and dissension. Conservatives have felt this way ever since the Supreme Court legalized abortion in the 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision.

New battle lines were drawn this week when anti-abortionists staged a "March for Life" in Washington. Similar protests took place in Connecticut's major cities as well. The pro-abortion groups were heard, too. And Reagan reiterated his support for a constitutional amendment that would overturn the 1973 decision. Twelve years ago, the justices said a woman's constitutional right to privacy allowed her the choice of terminating a pregnancy, and that states could not restrict abortion during the first trimester of the pregnancy.

Despite polls that show the majority of Americans believe that a woman has a right to decide for herself, Reagan and other conservatives insist upon pressing their case. This is unfortunate.

The Constitution is not the answer for every social problem in the country. Matters of conscience cannot be legislated by the very government that Reagan says he would like to get off the backs of the American people. He doesn't want the government in their pockets, but he wants to interfere with their individual rights.

Another irony is that the president's and vice president's personal views are contrary to their own church teachings. Reagan is a member of the Disciples of Christ and George Bush is an Episcopalian. Both religious bodies, while seeking to minimize abortion, accept its legality and the right for a woman to make that choice.

Though abortion is not the best method of family planning, it is a reality that must be accepted. It is an alternative to a battered, unwanted child or a young mother strangled beyond her means. The highest court in the land has made its decision. Let us accept it, and not try to trample an individual's rights.

50th anniversary Beer can comes of age

By Dick West

WASHINGTON — Today, students are observing the 50th anniversary of the beer can.

This golden jubilee commemorates the historic day in 1935 when the Krueger Brewing Co. began selling canned beer in Richmond, Va.

As the Can Manufacturers Institute points out in celebratory news releases, beer cans have "changed enormously" in the past half century.

And so, it might be added, has the market, which reflects the taste of the beer-drinking public.

According to the institute, 610 billion beer cans have been produced over the 50-year span. This averages out to more than 12 billion cans, or about 2 billion six-packs, a year.

Putting it another way, if all the beer cans made every month were discarded, there would be more than enough to litter a path to the moon.

However, the institute's claim of 65 percent of the market includes draft beer sold in aluminum kegs and the nearly 29 billion cans that were recycled in 1983.

THE FACT THAT beer cans were introduced 50 years ago does not mean people only have been drinking beer that long, of course.

The ancient Assyrians, Babylonians, Chinese, Egyptians, Greeks, Romans and Texans have been brewing the stuff since 4,000 B.C., a frightfully early date to start quaffing beer unless you are downing a cold one or two with lunch.

In older days, beer that wasn't packaged in wooden kegs was sold in glass bottles, about which the can institute speaks only disparagingly.

It says, for instance, that "beer in glass bottles comes directly into contact with bare glass," whereas "beer in cans never touches bare metal."

Furthermore, "coated metal cans protect beer's flavor better than any other container, including glass bottles."

More than 350 coatings, including acrylics, vinyls and solvent-based epoxies, have been tried through beer can history. Modern manufacturers use water-based enamels.

The institute says enamel coatings are 50 percent cheaper and aluminum cans are five times lighter than the steel used when beer first was canned 50 years ago.

OTHER MILESTONES the institute considers significant include:

- 1937 — First quart beer can sold.
- 1942-46 — All 2 billion beer cans made were shipped abroad to American servicemen. Moreover, the cans were colored olive drab so enemy airplanes wouldn't pick up a reflective glare.
- 1954 — First 16-ounce beer can sold.
- 1958 — First aluminum can sold.
- 1962 — Ring-pull opener test-marketed on Iron City beer by Pittsburgh Brewery Co.
- 1970 — Beer Can Collectors of America founded in St. Louis.
- 1975 — Non-detachable can-opening tabs introduced by Fall City beer.

As these landmarks make clear, the 1950s and 1960s were decades of what the institute calls "great innovations."

Foremost, perhaps, was the ring-pull tab invented by Ernie Fraze of Dayton, Ohio. Among other things, that innovation made it unnecessary for motorists to keep a beer can opener in the glove compartment.

The institute conveniently overlooks any ring-pull tabs may have played in the history of littering except to note that the advent of non-detachable tabs helped "reduce unsightly beverage litter."

They assured me that everything that could be done for him was just as if he was in the emergency room at Manchester Memorial Hospital. Not only did they do their job efficiently, they showed utmost concern for me which was a tremendous comfort, and I knew their skills would have saved his life if it had been possible.

At the Manchester Memorial Hospital emergency room, I again received the same assurance by staff members that everything possible was being done for my husband. They stayed with my children and me constantly, and I felt the same comfort of caring people.

We are indeed fortunate in this community to have the best emergency medical assistance possible. I am deeply grateful to the paramedics team and the staff at the Manchester Memorial Hospital emergency room.

Reagan has job in mind for Kirkpatrick

By Helen Thomas
United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Reagan says Jean Kirkpatrick, outgoing ambassador to the United Nations, "will be very good" at the foreign policy job he intends to offer her soon.

He said the new post is in the executive branch but declined to reveal the job until it is formally offered to her, perhaps by some time next week.

"I am hopeful that we have something that she would enjoy doing," he said as speculation centered on a possible role for her in the Agency for International Development or the U.S. Information Agency.

The Washington Post reported that sources close to the ambassador said it was unlikely she will accept an offer to be AID administrator.

Kirkpatrick has announced that she will return to academic life unless a high-level foreign policy job in the administration is available.

Reagan, who has made clear he considers Kirkpatrick an asset to the administration and wants her to stay on, disclosed that he has something in mind for her in an Oval Office interview with United Press International Wednesday.

Reagan, in one of the first interviews since he began his new term four days ago, appeared optimistic that a nuclear arms agreement can be reached with the Soviet Union. The United States has proposed that three sets of talks — on medium-range and long-range missiles and space weapons — open in Geneva, Switzerland, March 5. The Kremlin has not yet replied.

Reagan said his domestic goals over the next four years are basically the same as in his first term: "continued economic ex-pan with low or no inflation."

"And on the international scene," he added, "to pursue the goal of getting rid of nuclear weapons entirely and bringing about the possibility of peace in the world."

Reagan appeared anxious to get his second term rolling, expressing irritation only at suggestions that his soon-to-depart "big three" advisers — James Baker, Edwin Meese and Michael Deaver — ran the White House.

"In spite of all the stories to the contrary, the buck really does stop over there at that desk," he said.

Baker, Reagan's chief of staff, is soon swapping jobs with Treasury Secretary Donald Regan. Meese plans to leave to become attorney general and Deaver is returning to private life.

Reagan says he knows of no other impending departures of Cabinet officials but added, "I wouldn't be surprised" if more top

White House sends its budget and programs to Congress.

He declined to say whether he would support Vice President George Bush in a 1988 run for the presidency, declaring with a smile, "I'm not going to talk about candidates for '88."

Reagan said he believes the Soviets agreed to new arms talks because of fears the arms race would expand.

"I think the reason we're coming to the table is that they know, as we know, that the choice now is: have some legitimate agreement on the reduction of arms or face an arms race," he said.

Reagan cautioned against any euphoria that might be prompted by their word of talks. "But I just have to cling to some optimism" that an agreement is possible.

Town, police union exchange proposals

Assistant General Manager Steven Werber and a representative of the union that bargains for Manchester police officers have exchanged counterproposals over a police contract and will meet again next week to discuss them further, Werber said Wednesday.

Peter Gernat, the representative for Council 15 of the American Federation of the State, County and Municipal Employees, said he made a counterproposal to Werber and was awaiting his response. Neither Werber nor Gernat would say what his proposal contained.

The town and the police union have been unable to agree on a new contract and have come to fact finding. The next step, if they cannot agree, is binding arbitration, a step both sides say they would like to avoid.

Search for Two Colombian Aircraft

A commercial plane carrying 23 persons crashed in the mountains of western Colombia Wednesday while search planes continued looking for another plane with 17 aboard that disappeared within a minute of the first crash.

Tashjian adamant about party lever

HARTFORD (UPI) — Bipartisan support for removing party levers from voting machines may be growing but the highest-ranking Democrat testifying at legislative hearings said the device encourages "self-expression."

The party lever on Connecticut voting machines was criticized by Republicans at Wednesday's hearing as an "insult to state voters."

The comments were made at a public hearing on several proposals before the Legislature's Government Administration and Elections Committee to do away with the lever which allows voters to choose all of one party's candidates by moving a single lever.

Removing it from voting machines will require an amendment to the state constitution which could be submitted to the voters in 1986 at the earliest.

"Some say this device is the culprit that sweeps many candidates into office on the coattails of another," said Secretary of the State Julia Tashjian. But she said it was a "convenience" to state voters and did not stop them from exercising the right to split their votes between parties.

"To bar the public from the right to use the lever is simply to deny our electorate another form of self-expression," Tashjian said, "and is counter-productive to my philosophy of encouraging every citizen to vote through an easy and open system."

She was the highest-ranking Democrat and state official to testify on the proposal. Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill, who has long defended the party lever, did not testify, but has said it may be time to rethink the issue.

O'Neill was one of those who blamed the party lever and President Reagan's popularity in the state for the Republican Party's takeover of the legislature in the last election.

Rep. Irving Stolberg, D-New Haven, majority leader and former House speaker, agreed.

"There was a phenomenon that occurred in November that caused many members of the Democratic party to rethink their position on the optional party lever," said Stolberg, who has supported its removal for 15 years.

"I hope to see far more support from the Democratic Party this year than it has in the past," Stolberg said.

Republican State Chairman Thomas D'Amore Jr. said his party has had a "long commitment to removal of the party lever" and has not changed that view because it was helped by President Reagan to a legislative majority.

"The argument that a 'landslide' victory should prove to us the validity of keeping the party lever was as weak then as it is today

Here's what you can do to help fight rising costs

Are you spending too much on too many different medications?

The simplest way to find out, said Jerry Roy, pharmacist at Arthur Drug Store of Manchester, "is to load everything you're taking into a big plastic sack and bring it over to your druggist."

"Of course, we cannot change your prescription. But we can tell you that Drug X and Drug Y do the same things; or they counteract each other," the pharmacist said.

Beginning in March, the Manchester Senior Citizens' Center is expected to resume its twice-monthly talks by a pharmacist on prescription drugs. These informal sessions will be held the first and third Wednesday of each month.

On April 11 at 12:45 p.m., also at the Senior Center, Henry Seitzer, a retired pharmacist, will speak on "The Use and Misuse of Legally Prescribed Drugs."

All local chapters of AARP are involved in the issue of drug cost containment. The AARP State Legislative Committee will meet Jan. 31 and one of its members emeritus, Evelyn Gregan of Manchester, will report to local chapters in the next couple of months.

Four bills on drug cost containment are expected to be introduced in this year's state legislative session. As of this month, State Sen. Joseph Markley, R-Southington, is the co-chairman of Human Services Committee, along with State Rep. James Fleming, R-Simsbury. Copies of proposed legislation may be obtained from their offices, as well as information about the progress of the bills toward passage.

Information on two different citizen action groups, Seniors United in Action and United Connecticut Action for Neighborhoods, may be obtained by writing to P.O. Box 6422, Hartford, 06106. UCAU will send a speaker, dispatch senior leaders to lead discussion groups, or help organize a chapter.

Obituaries

Vincent A. Boggini
Vincent A. Boggini, 73, of 102 School St., died Wednesday at Manchester Memorial Hospital.

He was born in Manchester and was a lifelong resident. He was sales manager of Carter Chevrolet. Before he retired, he was self-employed as a real estate broker.

He was a member of the Manchester Board of Realtors and Manchester Country Club.

He is survived by a brother, Alphonse V. Boggini of Manchester, and several nieces and nephews.

The funeral will be Saturday at 8:15 a.m. from the John F. Tierney Funeral Home, 219 W. Center St., with a mass of Christian burial at 9 a.m. in St. James Church. Calling hours are Friday from 7 to 9 p.m.

Memorial donations may be made to the Lupa Foundation of Connecticut, 45 S. Main St., West Hartford.

Werbner defends hiring practices

Assistant General Manager Steven R. Werbner has defended the town against charges by a critic of Manchester's minority hiring record that the town has passed over qualified minority applicants for the municipal workforce.

The charges were contained in a recent letter to the Herald from Manchester resident Frank J. Smith.

"The town has made every effort to open its hiring process and to use exams which are job-related," Werbner said in a memorandum to General Manager Robert B. Weiss released this week. "The town in no way has systematically found ways not to hire minority candidates."

In a Jan. 14 letter to the Herald, Smith said the 141 applicants received by the town from black men and the 50 from black women

Little hope remains for crash survivors

TEGUIGALPA, Honduras — Frogmen scoured the shark-infested waters off the northern Honduran coast today for 21 bodies from a plane that crashed after a U.S. military plane crash after rescue parties found parts of the aircraft.

The U.S. Southern Command in Panama said search parties on a beach north of Puerto Trujillo found a sleeping bag, an unused life preserver and a radio. The transport plane disappeared Tuesday morning en route from Panama to the landing strip at Puerto Trujillo, 270 miles northeast of Tegucigalpa, and was believed to have gone down in the Caribbean.

U.S. and Honduran air force rescue teams, using airplanes and helicopters, began searching the coast early Wednesday, but their efforts were hampered by bad weather and rough seas. The weather has since cleared.

A team of 30 divers flown in from the U.S. Southern Command in Panama and other specialists were searching for the wreckage of the aircraft, aircrew helmet bags and helmets.

Callahan said it was unlikely, however, that any survivors from among the plane's 16 passengers and five crew members would be found.

Callahan said the plane's final destination was to have been the U.S. Air Base at Palmarola, 50 miles north of Tegucigalpa.

During the last radio contact with Tegucigalpa airport, at 10:02 a.m. EST Wednesday, the plane asked permission to descend at 22,000 feet to 20,000 feet, supposedly because of unfavorable visual conditions above Trujillo.

Trujillo has no ground control tower.

The dog is found, but where's the town?

LOS ANGELES — Attention Parkville. We have your dog.

The question is: where is Parkville?

Animal control officials are conducting a nationwide search for a town by that name so they can find the owner of a lovable golden retriever found New Year's day weaving in and out of the Rose Bowl Parade.

We've checked five different states — New York, Kentucky, Tennessee, South Carolina and Pennsylvania," said George Baca, chief deputy director of the Los Angeles County Department of Animal Care and Control.

The dog — named Rosebud by animal shelter employees in memory of the parade — was taken from the paths of flower-petaled floats and marching bands by a man who leaped he might get hurt.

The man held him by his choke chain and his dirty red bandana until the festivities were over. He then checked with authorities to see if anyone had reported a lost dog, an affectionate fellow who will lie down and sit on command.

Anyone who has information about Rosebud can call the shelter collect at 213-922-8874.

property before the building can be constructed.

Pro-Mark was recently sent a four-month option agreement to sign, Pellegrini said. An option on another parcel has expired and more information is needed before it can be extended, Pellegrini said.

THE EDC ALSO BACKED A recent decision by Pellegrini not to offer an option on a lot of the Wilcox Excavating Co. Pellegrini said the company planned to use the property primarily for storage of heavy equipment, which is not a permitted use in the park.

In other business, the EDC approved a proposed sign by the Garston Sign Co. on its property in the park and received information from Pellegrini on the town's industrial guidelines, which the EDC is to review.

Weiss said the guidelines were established in 197 as an incentive to developers and may no longer be valid because most of the industrial land has been sold and the town's growth patterns are changing.

The EDC will form a subcommittee to consider modifying or eliminating the guidelines, but leave most of the research up to the Planning Department.

A funny thing happened on the way to the typewriter last week.

There was a mob slaying. A gangland-style murder, performed by a blind-man-billy.

And, in the end, poor Tortellini Salad was dead.

I received the call at home, and took the news to my office. I was shocked.

"I'm really sorry," my boss said. In tones appropriately laced with sympathy. "And I hate to be the bearer of bad tidings. But I opened the computer file today, and found an obituary for your Tortellini Salad. I presume that death occurred last Friday."

I arrived at the office the next morning, turned on my computer and peered into the file where my Tortellini Salad was supposed to be stored.

Tortellini Salad of West Hartford is survived by two grandchildren, and several nieces and nephews. The file said. "He was predeceased by his mother, Olive (Oil) Really. Funeral arrangements are incomplete."

I was in shock. Grief-stricken. "I presume this happened among your food story crashes into an obituary," the boss said. "It doesn't happen often. Yours was an unusual casualty."

Now, although I'm considered by some to be a fairly good cook, I have produced my share of disasters.

Tones emanated a lot of eye brood and red-broiled chuck steaks aflame. I've embalmied many a lamb chop I meant only to marinate, and have left hundreds of leftovers in the back of the fridge, to moulder and turn all colors of the rainbow.

My Szechuan chicken is known as "a real killer." And I've cavalierly tossed pot holders — too numerous to mention — onto the funeral pyre.

But never, in all my years of cooking tragedies and triumphs, has anyone composed so much as an "In Memoriam" notice for one of my dishes.

And certainly not a full-scale obituary.

But somehow, it seems more than fitting to memorialize the passing of a 36-inch story. If you've ever lived through a computer glitch, you understand my sentiments. In a quick-FLASH-FLASH, three hours of work goes down R.I.P.

By Nancy Pappas

It's going to seem funny being as thin as I plan to get. Some people probably won't even recognize me, I'll be so thin.

"You look great, Andy," everyone will be saying.

The least I ever weighed after I got out of college was 183 pounds. The most I ever weighed was yesterday when I hit 221 without even my socks on. I don't develop a great punch that sticks out. I gain weight all over. Even my ears are heavier.

IT'S EASY to see why a lot of people aren't as successful at losing weight as I'm going to be. They go for some crazy scheme that doesn't work. Not me. I'm going to do it the old-fashioned way and simply cut down on everything. After I've lost 20 pounds, I may write a book about it.

Come to think of it, later today, I may call my publisher, Atheneum, and ask if they'd be interested in a book about my weight loss. "How I Lost 20 Pounds in 20 Days." I may call it. That would be a good title, give or take a few days.

It might even be a good idea if I started a diary the same day I start

If the shoes are short, the diet may be long

I'd buy a new suit if I wasn't about to lose weight. There's no sense buying a new suit and then having it hang on me after I've lost 20 pounds. That's what I'll probably lose, 20 pounds.

Unlike some people, I know how to lose weight. I'm not going in for any crazy diets. I weigh too much because I eat too much. It's that simple. I'm not going to count calories or watch carbohydrates, fats and proteins. I'm just going to cut down on food.

It's time I did something. All my shoes seem a little short and not as wide as they were when I bought them and I think it's because I have more weight on my feet. The extra weight makes them longer and wider.

The only thing I'm going to cut out completely is ice cream. I may have a dish of ice cream after dinner tonight but after that, that's it. No more ice cream until I drop Another thing I'll do is cut out second helpings.

When I'm asked if I want more, I'll be strong. "Couldn't eat another bite," I'll say.

Advice

Trapped cat makes trouble below tree

DEAR ABBY: I am a 69-year-old grandmother who lives alone and suffers from high blood pressure. Last week, I noticed a strange woman in my backyard, so I went out to see what she was doing there. Well, it seems she lives directly behind me. She said her cat ran out of the house, into my backyard, and climbed to the top of my tallest pine tree. We both tried to coax her down, but the poor thing was too frightened to move. I won't bore you with the details, but that poor cat was up in my tree crying pitifully for three days! It turned bitter cold, so I finally telephoned this neighbor and said, "You must get your cat out of my tree before she freezes or starves to death. Please call a tree man or somebody!" She said, "You call one; I can't afford it!"

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

Abby, she lives in a nice house and drives an expensive car, and this is a very affluent neighborhood. So I said, "If you can't afford it!"

a pet, you shouldn't have one," whereupon she hung up in my face. The next morning, the cat somehow managed to scamper down and run home. I later learned that this neighbor telephoned my son's ex-wife and said, "How in the world did you ever stand that dreadful mother-in-law of yours?" (My little grandchild let the cat out of the bag - no pun intended.) This woman invaded my property, shattered my nerves, then bad-mouthed me to my ex-daughter-in-law. What do you think of her behavior? OUTRAGED IN GEORGIA

DEAR OUTRAGED: She was rude, inconsiderate and nasty (no pun intended). It's said, "Fences make good neighbors." Get one.

DEAR ABBY: This is a second marriage for both of us. I have two grown children by a previous marriage. He has three. We have accumulated a goodly amount of property and money since our marriage. Under Ohio law, what would happen if one of us were to die without a will? Would the surviving children be entitled to anything? Does the estate have to be probated? And does the person who probated it automatically receive a percentage of the estate? Your answers to these questions concerning Ohio law will be greatly appreciated. CONCERNED IN OHIO

DEAR CONCERNED: You say that you and your spouse have accumulated a goodly amount of property and money. Congratulations. Ohio is teeming with lawyers whose education cost them a lot of money. Please consult one, and be prepared to pay a reasonable fee for receiving authoritative answers to your legal questions.

Tight shoes cause corns on the feet

DEAR DR. LAMB - I have had a corn on my left little toe for 20 years. Every time the foot doctor removes it, it comes right back. What can I do to get rid of it? DEAR READER - You will probably have a corn there until you get shoes that fit. That is a common location for a corn, since the shoe is often too tight over that area and constantly irritates the skin. If you cut your shoe where the top joins the sole - along the side, where the little toe is - this will relieve the pressure and you will stop having trouble with the corn.

Your Health Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

A half-moon-shaped piece of molinskin tape can be cut and put around the corn. This helps to remove pressure from directly over the corn. The idea is to build up enough area around the corn to lift the shoe off the area.

I don't think much of corn plaster, since they often cause a chemical burn. Do-it-yourself surgery can also lead to complications, including an infection. To have a corn removed immediately, see a doctor. However, to make it disappear on its own, get a shoe that does not put any pressure over the area and the corn will go away in time. I'm sending you The Health Letter 11-16, Common Foot Problems: What to Do About Them, which discusses corns and calluses. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper. P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10101.

Offer coffee to uninvited

DEAR POLLY: What does one do when unexpected guests arrive right at dinner time when we are just sitting down at the table to eat? I am prepared only for coffee for the family. D.V.C.

Polly's Pointers Polly Fisher

DEAR D.V.C.: Well, you certainly have no obligation to feed uninvited guests at such a time. At the same time, I assume you don't want to appear ungracious to these folks. I'd say something like, "We're just sitting down to get that we'd be happy to visit with you if you'd join us for some coffee."

DEAR POLLY: Oil-based salad dressings have always meant a messy bottle until I thought to store them in the new "no-drip" bottles with vegetable oil in it. It works so well, I'm going to use my next bottle for pancake syrup. DORIS

DEAR DORIS: I love these no-drip bottles, but it hasn't occurred to me to use them for messy pourables like syrup or salad dressing. It's a great idea! Your helpful pointer earns you the Pointer of the Week award, a copy of my book "Polly's Pointers: 1001 Helpful Household Hints for Making Everything Last Longer." Others who would like this book can order it for $5.99. Make check payable to POLLY'S POINTERS and send to POLLY'S POINTERS, Box 1216, Dept. 55, Cincinnati, OH 45201.

DEAR POLLY: As a handy baby sitter, I have a few cards in my purse. Children enjoy matching colors, suits and numbers. They can do magic tricks, build card houses and play popular games. The cards are easy to carry and are almost like a traveling chest full of toys. Make a tasty salad dressing by simply adding a few ingredients to your nearly empty ketchup bottle. Mix together one tablespoon of vinegar, two tablespoons of oil and one-eighth teaspoon of Italian seasonings, pour into the bottle and shake well. MRS. S.W.

Christmas pup needs a home

By Barbara Richmond Special to the Herald

Cleo, this week's featured pet, is one of the Dog Warden Richard Rand calls his Christmas babies. Cleo is 3 or 4 months old and is a mixed breed. She's a quiet little dog with big sad eyes. Another Christmas baby is really a baby. She's just about 6 weeks old. Rand isn't sure what breed she is because she's really too young to tell. Whatever breed she is, right now she is just an adorable handful of fluffy fur. She was picked up on Jan. 18 on Hilltown Road and will be ready for adoption this weekend.

There are a couple of other newcomers at the pound since last week. One is a cocker spaniel cross. She's a beautiful blonde and is about 1 year old. She was picked up on Mill Street on Jan. 21.

The dog pound is located on town property off Olcott Street. Rand is on the pound daily from noon to 1 p.m. He can also be reached by calling the pound, 643-662 or by calling the police department at 644-4555.

There is a $5 fee for adopting a dog to make the transaction legal. The new owner also has to have the dog licensed.

Advisory panel wants ban on cigarette ads

By D'Vera Cohn United Press International

WASHINGTON - A government advisory council, blaming smoking for hundreds of thousands of deaths each year, is urging Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler to work for a total ban on cigarette advertising and promotion.

The advisory council to the government's National Institute on Drug Abuse voted Wednesday 8-1, with one abstention, to tell Heckler that cigarette advertising is "both highly immoral and inconsistent with our handling of nearly all other products in the society."

The council is the first government advisory group to urge an advertising ban, according to a staff member of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, which regulates the industry. The council said in an 11-page letter it is particularly concerned about the influence of advertising on teenagers deciding whether to smoke.

"We wish to communicate to you, and through you to the administration and the Congress, our strong belief that legislation should be implemented to totally eliminate the advertising and promotion of cigarettes in the United States," the council's letter to Heckler said.

Heckler's office said she would have no immediate comment on the letter. Lloyd Johnston, head of the council subcommittee that drafted the letter, said in an interview opponents of an advertising

Routine chest X-rays worthless, doctors say

By Gino Del Guercio United Press International

BOSTON - The nation could cut its medical bill by $1.5 billion a year, without affecting the quality of care, simply by eliminating routine chest X-rays, a team of chest X-ray doctors said today. The team, led by Dr. F. Allan Hubbel, primary author of a study published in the New England Journal of Medicine. A study conducted at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Long Beach, Calif., found that just about all the ailments chest X-rays are used to detect would be picked up by doctors during a routine examination.

One possible exception is early lung cancer, so early that it is not much that can be done once it is discovered. Fewer than 10 percent of lung cancer patients are alive five years after diagnosis.

Chest X-rays are the most common X-ray procedure performed in the United States today. In 1980, the latest year for which figures are available, 52 million chest X-rays were performed at a cost of approximately $50 a piece.

The tests, which can be used to diagnose a variety of lung ailments such as cancer and tuberculosis, are routinely performed in many hospitals whenever a patient who is thought to be at high risk of lung disease is admitted.

Doctors at the VA hospital reexamined the records of 284 patients who received routine chest X-rays when they were admitted. They found that at the time of treatment only one patient had something on the X-ray that caused doctors to change their recommendation for treatment.

That patient had undiagnosed lung cancer. A lung was removed, but the cancer had spread and the patient died eight months later.

'Webster' tackles a touchy subject

By Joan Hanover United Press International

NEW YORK - Television family sitcoms traditionally have been never-never lands where real life seldom, if ever, happened. They were cozy places where father knew best and everybody loved Lucy. When real problems were admitted, it was within the safe confines of Archie Bunker's outrageous bigotry. In these tales, where seldom was heard a discouraging word, there certainly was no place for anything so threatening and so disturbing of the peace of mind as child molesting.

But that is the subject that "Webster" deals with on ABC, in an episode to air Jan. 25 titled "The Uh-Oh Feeling."

Webster's friend, Beth, is molested by a substitute tutor. She has been told by the tutor that if she tells her parents they won't love her anymore. She becomes withdrawn, afraid, ashamed.

The producers of "Webster" have arranged a scene in which a therapist talks to Webster and his schoolmates - and the viewing audience - about good touching, bad touching and confusing touching. A child asks the therapist how to tell the difference, and she replies:

"Well, you get a different feeling inside; a tingly little feeling that says 'uh-oh.' And that 'uh-oh' feeling tells you something's wrong. And when you feel something's wrong, you're right... Your bodies belong to you and no one has the right to touch you if you don't want them to. Because you know why? You have power. And that power is the word 'no.' Not a quiet 'no,' but a big loud 'no!'"

The children are taught the response to possible child abuse - "No! Go! Tell!" That echoes the message Henry Winkler delivered recently when he made a guest appearance on Richard Pryor's Saturday morning CBS show, "Pryor's Place." Winkler also was teaching the message of No! Go! Tell!

It is encouraging to see television sitcom producers take the vast power of the medium to deliver a message instead of a laugh track, particularly about such an uneasy but important subject as child molesting.

For the older crowd, an upcoming episode of NBC's "The Facts of Life" tells some hard facts about cocaine.

In a special chapter to air Jan. 30, Lisa Wheeler as Blair Warner learns that her boyfriend uses cocaine.

When confronted, the boy insists he is in "complete control" and uses the drug to help keep his grades and his extracurricular activities.

The show passes on the word from the National Institute on Drug Abuse that cocaine users often kid themselves into believing cocaine buys them more time in the day by helping them remain

Ian Blood's goaltending paces MHS ice victory

ENFIELD - A upset victory can be just the proper tonic needed for a last place hockey team to break out of the doldrums. Manchester High's ice men may have received such a spark Wednesday night at the Enfield Twin Rinks, when clutch goaltending by Ian Blood, who turned aside 29 of 32 shots, led the visiting Indians to a 6-3 win over Fermo High in a CCC Eastern Division match-up. "Definitely, the game was Blood's," said slotted Manchester coach Wayne Horton, when asked what the difference was between the two squads. "Ian was fantastic, this was the best I've ever seen him." Manchester, which broke a three-game losing streak, is now 2-5 in the conference and 4-7 overall. The Indians host arch-rival Rockville High in another CCC East meeting Saturday night at 8:10 at the Bolton Ice Palace. Fermo, which had a 33-27 shot on goal advantage, fell to 2-2 and 5-2. The Indians jumped off to a 2-0 first-period lead and never trailed against opposing goalie Scott Greenough, who came up with 20 saves. Prolific scorer Bobby Blake provided the impetus for the Indians when he tallied an unassisted goal at 9:30 to give East a 3-2 lead. "We sort of let down until Glastonbury tied it before we started to get serious again," noted Russo. Bowers knotted it back up at 2:16 of the middle period, before Hutt answered a minute and a half later with another marker to put the Eagles ahead to stay. Hutt completed his second hat trick in as many games as another unassisted tally at 8:02 to make it 6-2. Kevin has developed into the best 1-on-1 puckhandler on the team," said Russo of Hutt, who leads East with 9 goals, 6 assists and 15 points. Mike Flannery scored his second goal of the year at 9:12 and then Brian Callahan added his fourth at 15:51 to increase the margin to 7-2. East added three more goals in the final period. Mike Fisher connected for his first of the season, and then defenseman Jason Hanford counted his third and fourth to complete the scoring. Hardworking playmaker Dave Olander contributed three assists for East. East outshot Glastonbury, 47-26. Eagles' goalie George Jordan made 27 saves, though Russo has slotted regular tender Steve Cavallo to start Saturday.
