

Warren M. Anderson, chairman of Union Carbide Corp., right, looks on as Ron Van Myren, who headed the company's investigating team into the catastrophic toxic gas leak in Bhopal, India, attempts to explain ways water could have been introduced into the tank of methyl isocyanate gas. The news conference was held at the firm's Danbury headquarters. The leak killed 2,500 people.

Firm sees flaws, but blames no one

DANBURY — Water contamination of a storage tank, possibly caused by sabotage, went undetected and led to a gas leak that killed more than 2,500 people at a Union Carbide plant in Bhopal, India, the firm says.

The company said Wednesday the pesticides factory was riddled with safety violations and estimated deadly methyl isocyanate gas escaped through a tank safety valve for about two hours.

Company officials, however, did not pinpoint blame for history's worst chemical disaster.

Union Carbide also said it would resume production of the gas next month at its Institute, W.Va., plant, depending on approval of the Environmental Protection Agency. Production was halted there after the Bhopal disaster.

In a report by Union Carbide scientists and technicians from the United States, the company said 120 to 240 gallons of water "inadvertently or deliberately" was allowed to contaminate an underground storage tank in the Bhopal plant.

The mixture started a runaway chemical reaction that leaked a deadly cloud of methyl isocyanate could have been introduced into the tank of methyl isocyanate gas. The news conference was held at the firm's Danbury headquarters. The leak killed 2,500 people.

Carbide to reopen Institute MIC unit

INSTITUTE, W. Va. — Union Carbide said it still plans to reopen the methyl isocyanate unit at its Institute plant, pending approval from the Environmental Protection Agency.

The EPA was sent all technical information regarding the MIC unit, said company spokesman Harvey Cobert Wednesday.

An EPA official had complained to the company about delays encountered by a joint state and federal review team in receiving information.

"I am advising you that as a result of these delays the review team may not be able to complete the technical evaluation by April 1," wrote Stanley Laskowski, an acting EPA regional administrator.

Laskowski sent the letter to Union Carbide Vice President Ronald Wishart. The firm had said earlier it hoped to reopen the unit April 1.

"It still depends on the EPA's approval," Cobert said. "EPA should receive all the technical data Wednesday that it feels is sufficient to approve the startup."

Union Carbide shut down the MIC unit at Institute following a catastrophic leak of the deadly gas at the company's Bhopal, India plant in December. The company Wednesday blamed the leak on water contaminating a gas storage tank.

A citizens group spokesman said despite Union Carbide's announcement at its headquarters in Danbury, Conn., there are still unanswered questions about the leak.

"The critical element that seems to be lacking is how did the water get in there," said Perry Bryant, director of the West Virginia Citizens Action Group. "Their report leaves very little understanding as to why a Bhopal accident could not occur at their Institute."

Bryant said while Carbide had done all it could to determine the cause of the accident, he did not think the company had enough information on which to base a conclusion.

The safety and operating procedures employed at Institute ruled out the possibility of such an incident, Browning said.

"The timely start-up of the Institute MIC operations," said Browning, "is important to our farmers and growers who benefit from carbamate insecticides."

Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va., said he was confident Carbide had conducted a thorough review of the Bhopal tragedy. He said he believed the company would be making every effort.

"As the day approaches to restart its production of MIC, I would urge Union Carbide to work closely with local, state and federal officials to ensure maximum, public safety," Rockefeller said.

The West Virginia Democrat said his overriding concern is that Carbide continue its efforts to strengthen safety procedures at its facilities in West Virginia.

Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va., said he was confident Carbide had conducted a thorough review of the Bhopal tragedy. He said he believed the company would be making every effort.

"As the day approaches to restart its production of MIC, I would urge Union Carbide to work closely with local, state and federal officials to ensure maximum, public safety," Rockefeller said.

operation for five months before the leak.

A flare tower designed to burn off gases vented from the plant also was shut down for maintenance at the time of the leak, he said.

Workers were not aware of a dangerous buildup of pressure in the storage tank, and an alarm which had not been reset failed to sound in warning of the rapid rise in temperature, Van Myren said.

Anderson said the safety lapses were in "total disregard" of company operating procedures. Union Carbide was not aware of the violations, Anderson said.

Van Myren said four months of intense scrutiny, including more than 500 laboratory experiments, revealed water and iron were involved in the chemical reaction sparking the toxic leak.

The exact source of the water was not known, he said.

THE WATER, WHICH GENERATED the dangerously high temperatures, reacted with methyl isocyanate. Above-normal levels of chloroform also played a part in the reaction, Van Myren said.

Suspension of gas production in time for the major growing season.

But a citizens group said Union Carbide had provided "very little understanding" about why a similar leak could not occur in Institute.

Ailing angler finds solace in hot soup, rods

I'm back after a seven-week hiatus. During this time, my old fisherman underwent surgery a couple of times, and is recuperating from an aneurysm — "glitch" that still leaves me kind of wobbly. However, I'm delighted to sit here and pound the typewriter.

First off, I want to thank all of you great people for your cards, telephone calls and good wishes. It sure is nice to know that I have a lot of friends who care.

Well, let me give you the low-down on the character who writes this column.

WHEN I ARRIVED home from the hospital to convalesce after surgery, food just plain tasted terrible to me. It was not the hospital cooking, nor my good wife's. She is a superb cook. I think it was an accumulation of painkillers, anesthesia, and just feeling lousy.

My long-suffering spouse, tried tickling my palate with all kinds of goodies, and they still tasted like cardboard. Finally, she said to me "I know what!

Loyola talks tough awaiting match-up with Georgetown

Most of the 16 teams remaining in the NCAA Tournament have declared their respective region the toughest. That kind of talk can be interpreted as a prefabricated excuse in case of elimination.

One team has emerged a refreshing change of pace. A little deflated, perhaps, but refreshing.

LOYOLA (Ill.) faced with playing highly favored defending national champion Georgetown Thursday night, is talking tough.

LOYOLA, 27-5, will try to back up their words against an extremely deep team led by All-American Patrick Ewing, Reggie Williams, David Wingate, Bill Martin and Michael Jackson.

NBA roundup

Celtics just barely nail one on Bucks

Before Wednesday night, the NBA champion Celtics had defeated every team in the league with one exception — the Milwaukee Bucks.

At Indianapolis, Calvin Natt scored 27 points to lead the Pacers, who moved three games up in the Midwest Division.

At Los Angeles, Mike Mitchell scored 31 points and the Spurs, despite squandering a 30-point lead, staged off the Bulls for the 14th time in 16 games.

At San Antonio, Mike Mitchell scored 31 points and the Spurs, despite squandering a 30-point lead, staged off the Bulls for the 14th time in 16 games.

At Seattle, rookies Tim McCormick and Frank Brickowski scored 24 and 22 points, respectively, to lift the Sonics.

At Philadelphia, Reggie Theus scored 12 points, and the Nets, 128, Cavs 108.

In both the Twos and Toddlers' program, children have structured activities of songs, games, creative movement and crafts. An alternative to nursery school emphasizing socialization skills.

Activities are geared to the larger attention span of the Pre-K/Kindergarten. We will emphasize fine and gross motor skills, basic concepts and socialization skills.

This program strives through the medium of gymnastics and other physical education related activities to provide a warm, loving atmosphere in which young children can achieve. It offers Mom and child a quality time together (free from home distractions) where verbal praise and encouragement are effective tools to create a positive and healthy self-esteem. Come join the fun! Wear Comfortable Clothing.

A child's first exposure to dance. Rhythmic movement, group work and improvisational games.

One is never too old or too young for recreation fun.

A New Pagani Field?

Actually, Manchester does not have a new field, but we have installed lights at our West Side Softball Field. Come on over to Pagani Field and enjoy the two leagues that will be competing at 6 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. Better yet, get involved and play some softball this spring and summer.

The outdoor racquetball courts are located at Charter Oak Park.
