Foes of MX promise one last obstacle

By Elliot Brenner
United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's Pennsylvania Avenue pressure has driven some three congressional victories on the MX missile but opponents believe they have one chance left to run down the controversial program.

Last week, Reagan went up the broad street to Capitol Hill and successfully lobbied senators to vote twice for the MX. This week, the administration had buses bring 100 House members to the White House for more persuasion.

The arm-twisting worked as Reagan won a narrow House victory Tuesday in a 219-213 vote authorizing $1.5 billion for 21 of the 10-warhead weapons in fiscal year 1985.

All but one of the six-member Connecticut congressional delegation voted against the missile. As he announced last week, freshman Rep. John G. Rowland, R-Waterbury, sided with the president.

The House's decision brings this year's fight to a final ballot in that chamber, expected Thursday. If the MX wins, production continues. If it loses, the missile would be dead for this year.

The House Tuesday bought the argument of Reagan and others, among them chief U.S. arms negotiator Max Kampelman — brought back from Geneva, Switzerland, for last-minute lobbying — that the negotiators need the MX to help win Soviet concessions.

But House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass., a leading missile opponent, saw the vote differently. "Today we approved the concept. Tomorrow we look at the price tag," he said, referring to arguments that the ultimate price tag on the missile, taking in silo hardening, will exceed $40 billion.

"There really is a tremendous chance to turn this around in the next couple days," said opponent Ed Markey, D-Mass.

At the White House, Reagan called the vote "an important and unmistakable signal of American unity and resolve" to the world.

"America has sent a message, loud and clear, that we back our negotiators and will continue to do so," he said. "Today's vote was a vote for peace."

The MX will stay on the congressional agenda, Reagan has requested $4 billion for 48 missiles in fiscal 1986, a figure many members said was sure to be trimmed as a condition of support in the latest round of voting.

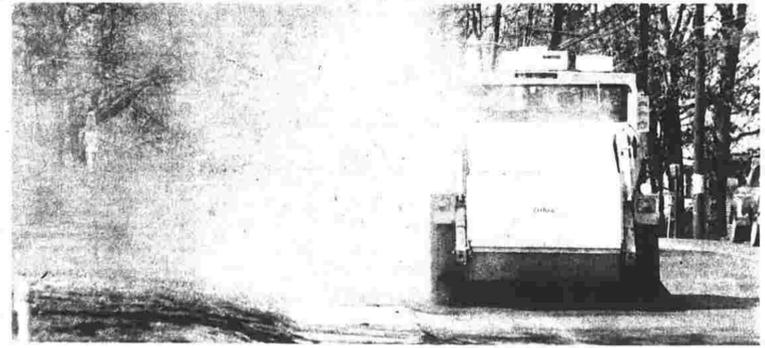

House Democratic leader Jim Wright of Texas countered, "If I believed for one minute that voting today to put these 21 additional missiles in those old vulnerable silos would make the difference between success or failure in achieving a just peace, I would vote with alacrity to spend ten times that amount of money and more."

He drew a standing ovation with a challenge to Reagan and the new Soviet leader, Mikhail Gorbachev.

"The time has come for both countries to quit squandering so much upon unproductive instruments of destruction," Wright said. "Meet us halfway, Mr. President, Mr. Gorbachev, and we'll walk the path of peace together."

The MX missile is designed as a highly accurate weapon intended to spew as many as 10 warheads each across Soviet missile fields. It stands 71 feet high, with a package of 10 warheads sitting atop a four-stage rocket weighing 195,000 pounds. It can travel the 6,000 miles from Wyoming and Nebraska silos to Soviet targets in less than 30 minutes, with accuracy as close as the length of a football field.

The cost of the missile system was $4.7 billion in 1983. In 1985, $2.1 billion for 21 missiles was approved. Over the life of a 100-missile program, it will cost $26.4 billion because of cost increases during the program.

Spring cleaning

A street sweeper raises a cloud of dust on East Middle Turnpike near the Manchester police station Tuesday during the second week of the town Highway Department's annual spring street cleaning. This week the sweepers are west of Main Street to Broad Street between Woodland and Center streets and east of Main Street to Woodbridge Street between East Middle Turnpike and East Center Street. Sweeping the entire town takes eight weeks, according to the Highway Department.

Leaders mum on fire incident

Most officials of the town and the Eighth Utilities District are keeping quiet today about an early morning altercation Tuesday between town and district firefighters at the scene of a district house fire, which police said ended with a deputy chief of the town department punching a district firefighter in the face.

But Town Fire Chief John Rivosca did say today that he has not taken any disciplinary action against the officer accused of the assault, Deputy Chief William Griffin, a 30-year veteran of the department.

"I'm not going to take any action until I have all the information," Rivosca said. He said he has already interviewed Griffin and other members of the department who were at the scene but won't take administrative action before he confers with Eighth District Chief Harold A. Topliff Jr. tonight. The two expected to meet Tuesday night but both had other commitments, Rivosca said.

Manchester General Manager Robert B. Weiss refused comment this morning, saying that he was

"I think it is a disciplinary matter for both departments, to be handled internally," Joyner said. "I want to refrain from making any comment and defuse the issue as soon as possible."

Joyner would not discuss what the name-calling and shoving, that police said occurred among firefighters while the fire was still burning, could mean for the safety of town residents and property in future fire or medical emergencies.

But town Director Stephen T. Penny said that the incident shows him that "the situation hasn't changed since 1957," when firefighters from both departments reportedly exchanged verbal taunts at the scene of a fire at the Manchester Sand & Gravel Co.

Penny said today that Tuesday's incident would not have occurred if emergency dispatchers did not have the burden of figuring out which Manchester fire department goes to which neighborhood.

Penny said he is not familiar with details of the alleged assault on Fredericksen, but added, "There's certainly no objective justification for a person hitting another person."

"But the element of provocation needs to be understood," he said. District Director Gordon Lassow also declined to comment on the incident today.

District Fire Chief Harold A. Topliff has not been available since the fire, which was reported shortly after 6:30 a.m. and extinguished in less than an hour.

Meanwhile, the tenants of the apartment damaged by Tuesday's fire have been forced to move. Linda Babineau, 25, said Tuesday that her husband was severely burned when he dashed into the back bedroom and through flames to rescue their two oldest children.

The rescue occurred before firefighters arrived on the scene, just seconds after Linda Babineau said she woke to the sound of the toddlers' screams.

Their youngest child, son Justin, was in his parents' bedroom when the fire broke out, Babineau said. Police have said they believe the Babineau's elder son, Jake, 3, started the fire in the back bedroom, which he shared with his sister, while playing with his mother's cigarette lighter.

Space defense top arms talks

GENEVA, Switzerland — U.S. and Soviet negotiators on strategic nuclear weapons met for more than two hours today in their first working session at the new arms talks between the two superpowers.

The meeting at the U.S. mission to the United Nations overlooking Lake Geneva took place just hours after President Reagan won approval Tuesday evening from the House of Representatives for another 21 intercontinental MX missiles. It lasted 2 hours and 15 minutes at the U.S. delegation building.

The two delegations in Geneva are divided into three negotiating groups on each side — on defense and space, strategic nuclear weapons and intermediate-range nuclear forces.

Delegates on the defense and space groups held their first working meeting Tuesday.

Working meetings of the individual sub-groups began Tuesday with the first session between negotiators on defense and space. Kampelman heads the U.S. group on defense and space, facing Yuri A. Rvitsinsky for the Soviet Union.

The chief strategic weapons negotiators who faced each other today were former Sen. John Tower and Viktor P. Karpov, who is also head of the overall Soviet delegation to the talks that resumed March 12.

Intermediate nuclear forces chief delegates who are scheduled to have their first working session Thursday are Maynard W. Glitman and Alexei A. Obukhov, a Soviet comment on an Indian report that blamed the company for the gas leak that killed 2,500 people in Bhopal last year. Story on page 5.

organizational meetings, the two groups agreed to allocate Tuesday days to discuss defense and space, Wednesdays to long-range weapons and Thursdays to medium-range nuclear forces.

A U.S. spokesman said Tuesday that the schedule for the three respective groups was not affected by the shooting of U.S. Army Maj. Arthur Nicholson by a Soviet sentry in East Germany.

Manchester directors who attended a weekend conference of the National League of Cities in Washington returned with a more optimistic view than they had over the prospect of the town's receiving its federal revenue sharing funds, at least for the fiscal year that begins July 1.

At a news conference this morning, Director Stephen T. Penny said the group came away from a breakfast meeting with the most of Connecticut's congressional delegation convinced that Congress is not inclined to adopt a budget by the administration of President Ronald Reagan that eliminates federal revenue sharing immediately.

Despite that, Director Stephen T. Cassano said that when the board sets a town capital improvement budget for 1985-86, it may delays spending for certain projects until the end of the year in case there is a reduction in the amount of revenue sharing in the second of the two payments for the year.

Cassano reiterated his optimistic assessment of the town's chance to get a federal grant for improvements to its sewer treatment plant.

Neither side made any substantive comment on Tuesday's first meeting of the negotiating group on defense and space, adhering to a new blackout.

A brief U.S. statement merely noted the length of the session — 3 hours and 7 minutes — and said strategic weapons groups were meeting Wednesday and those on intermediate nuclear forces on Thursday.

This morning, he said that Rep. James Florio of New Jersey has introduced a different bill that would extend the funding program.

Chafee's bill would change the grant to a loan program ultimately, but until 1989 it would remain a grant and it would restore 75 percent as the federal government share of the cost.

Sitter recognizes picture; mother reunited with son

HOUSTON (UPI) — A babysitter watching television recognized the baby picture of a youngster missing for more than 10 years, leading to a tearful reunion with the mother the boy thought was dead.

Adam Michael Hicks was 17 months old when his father, Michael Hicks, abducted him on Oct. 9, 1974. For years Maria Jo Smith, with the help of police and private investigators, searched for her son.

The 12-year-old boy was reunited with his mother Tuesday in Houston, three months after contacting Child Keepers, a Lake Worth, Fla., firm that searches for missing children.

Elizabeth Smith, an attorney for Smith, said a hearing was scheduled today in San Antonio to determine if Adam can return to Colorado with his mother.

Smith, who had remarried and was living in Littleton, Colo., feared she would not see her son again. But in January, Smith saw an advertisement for a missing child on a Denver television station.

With only a photograph of Adam at age 16 months to go on, Currier printed posters with his picture and biographical history on them.

Currier said she got in touch with some anonymous sources, and they determined that Adam and his father had moved to Houston just weeks earlier.

Members of Israeli tank crews stand in the mud Tuesday as a colleague takes cover from the muzzle of a gun at a staging area somewhere in the eastern area of southern Lebanon. As the second stage withdrawal preparations continue, Israeli press reports now say that the soldiers will return to Israel by mid-May rather than late summer as predicted.

Peres predicts early withdrawal

By James Hershberg United Press International

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Shimon Peres predicted that Israeli troops will complete their withdrawal from southern Lebanon by mid-June, three months earlier than expected.

Peres' remarks Tuesday came as Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin warned Israel would adopt a "scorched earth" policy in southern Lebanon if the region again became a base for cross-border guerrilla attacks after the pullout.

Peres spokesman Uri Savir said Peres alluded to a stepped-up withdrawal timetable during a meeting Tuesday with CBS Vice President Ernest S. Lester, who was in Israel to investigate the deaths of two network crewmen last week. The two were killed in a southern Lebanese village by Israeli tank fire.

The prime minister spoke about the very risky situation of covering a country like Lebanon but also spoke about the fact that eight to 10 weeks from now Israel will be outside of Lebanon and then this angle, also, of the problem will be solved, Savir said.

Peres had said previously that "most" Israeli troops would be out of Lebanon by mid-June with Rabin predicting the soldiers would be home by the start of the Jewish New Year on September 15.

"We will leave Lebanon perhaps much faster than people think and are arguing about," Peres told high school students in Nazareth. Rabin issued his stern warning to legislators in a closed meeting of the Knesset Foreign Affairs and Defense Committee, Israel Radio said.

The radio said Rabin reiterated that Israel intends to pull out of Lebanon, "but if terrorist attacks from Lebanon are resumed behind the international border, but military sources say parts of the second and third stages are being combined and logistics alone would determine the pace.

There is no second stage," one military source said. Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, a member of the Likud party that decided on the invasion, has said he knows of no government decision to complete the withdrawal by a particular date.

Rep. Tom Bevil, D-Ala., chairman of the Appropriations energy and water development subcommittee, requested the study after becoming concerned the commission was failing to regulate the nuclear power industry effectively.

"The report indicates the organization and management of the NRC is a blueprint for regulatory paralysis," said Bevil, who held a hearing with NRC officials today. "I am convinced that the NRC is the single largest impediment facing the nuclear power industry in America today."

Report assails the NRC

By Robert Doerly United Press International

WASHINGTON — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission is plagued with management problems that have led to a decade of regulatory failure, says a congressional report in a scathing assessment of the agency today.

The 10-month study by the House Appropriations Committee staff criticized several aspects of operations at the NRC, which is responsible for the licensing and regulation of nuclear power plants.

The investigative staff has found fundamental deficiencies which lend credence to the statement by a former NRC official, "The 10-year experiment with the commission is a failure," said the report, released today.

Rep. Tom Bevil, D-Ala., chairman of the Appropriations energy and water development subcommittee, requested the study after becoming concerned the commission was failing to regulate the nuclear power industry effectively.

"The report indicates the organization and management of the NRC is a blueprint for regulatory paralysis," said Bevil, who held a hearing with NRC officials today. "I am convinced that the NRC is the single largest impediment facing the nuclear power industry in America today."

The report also criticized the NRC for: "A costly lack of discipline" in often needlessly requiring a nuclear plant licensee or applicant to do additional analysis or plant structural changes.

Regulatory ambiguity and excesses. The existence of "staff fiefdoms." "To summarize the words of an NRC official, the feudal system did not end in the Middle Ages. It survives in the guise of the NRC's program offices."

Not using "whatever accomplishments" have been made in its research program to produce changes in regulatory requirements.

The indictment charged that between Jan. 1, 1980 and April 1983, GE defrauded the government by claiming more than $80 million in non-reimbursable overrun labor costs on the "second buy contract" by charging the costs to other government contracts.

The indictment charged GE's Re-Entry Systems Division, located in Philadelphia and King of Prussia, had a series of contracts with the Air Force to replace existing re-entry vehicles on Minuteman intercontinental ballistic missiles with a new, updated vehicle.

The project, known as the MK-12-A program, included contracts for test equipment and related computer software programs needed to insure that the missile and its new components would function properly if actually launched.

Charges fly in shooting

By United Press International

Washington and Moscow issued contradictory accounts and accused one another of deceit in the death of a U.S. Army major shot by a Soviet sentry in East Germany.

The body of Maj. Arthur D. Nicholson, shot Sunday at a Soviet installation in Ludwigslust, East Germany, was flown to Frankfurt late Monday. A White House spokesman said he will be returned to the United States Thursday.

Nicholson, a Russian linguist from West Redding, Conn., assigned to the U.S. military liaison mission at Potsdam, East Germany, was the first mission member to be killed in the line of duty.

Washington and Moscow issued differing accounts of the shooting while a Pentagon spokesman said there had been six previous incidents in which U.S. servicemen in East Germany had been beaten, shot at or had their vehicles rammed.

Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger, in Luxembourg for a NATO meeting, said Nicholson's shooting was "totally unjustified."

Weinberger said Nicholson was in the area in which access was allowed under a 1947 treaty and was shot without warning.

But the official Soviet news agency Tass said a Soviet sentry shot Nicholson after he opened the window of a restricted Soviet installation and began taking pictures. Tass said the sentry, acting "in strict compliance with military regulations," fired a warning shot before shooting Nicholson and that the responsibility for the death "lies fully on the American side."

Pentagon spokesman Michael Bernard Kahn said the department is disgruntled that "the Soviets would compound their inexcusable killing of Major Nicholson with such an obviously tendentious account of the event."

Tass said the American side "is now circulating a deliberately false version of what happened."

The Soviets have not disputed the American contention that also were taken from a vehicle and beaten on Oct. 10, 1980, were shot at or had warning shots fired near them in February and March 1983 and had vehicles rammed in January 1980 and March 1983, in one case leaving an American with broken ribs.

State Department spokesman Bernard Kahn said the department is disgruntled that "the Soviets would compound their inexcusable killing of Major Nicholson with such an obviously tendentious account of the event."

DEFENSE SECRETARY CASPAR WEINBERGER says soldier had proper access

Nicholson and his partner, Sgt. Jesse Schatz, were unarmed and that the major was shot in the chest.

The Americans have not disputed that Nicholson was taking pictures. But President Reagan said the major's actions were sanctioned by agreements covering U.S. military liaison missions in East Germany and those of the Soviet Union in West Germany.

ABC News said Tuesday it had learned the Soviet side privately acknowledged Nicholson may not have been in a restricted zone at the time he was shot, but that he had "traveled through a restricted zone" in order to get there.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger accused Moscow today of reprehensible "behavior over the killing."

Nicholson lived in West Berlin with his wife, Karen, and their 5-year-old daughter.

Paul H. Smith, a neighbor of the Nicholsons, said neither the slain officer nor his family considered his assignment in Germany to be all that dangerous.

"They said it was like living in a postcard," Smith said.

The Nicholson family moved to West Redding when Arthur Jr. was a junior in high school, setting down after years of successive moves precipitated by the father's career as a Navy pilot.

"The boy wanted to follow in his father's footsteps," Gutar said. "He was just a wholesome American trying to serve his country."

Robert E. Roth, who was Nicholson's guidance counselor at Joel Barlow Regional High School, said young Nicholson stood out because few students during the Vietnam War expressed an interest in a military career.

His classmates were fully aware of his intentions. "I'll give you 10 on Navy," read a 1965 yearbook epitaph, describing the senior as "a real regular guy."

U.S. enforces strict rules on detention of Soviets

By Richard C. Gross United Press International

WASHINGTON — Soviet military observers have been detained by U.S. Army personnel at least twice this year in restricted zones of West Germany under guidelines that forbid the use of force, the Pentagon says.

In each case, three soldiers attached to the Soviet Military Liaison Mission were stopped in their cars by West German police, handed over to the U.S. Army and escorted by the Americans to their base at Frankfurt, West Germany, Pentagon spokesmen said Tuesday.

At the same time, the Pentagon distributed a copy of a card carried by U.S. soldiers in Germany instructing them how to detain Soviet mission members and how to conduct themselves. To help identify the Soviet observers, the card has a picture of the red and yellow license plates attached to their vehicles.

"When getting a detention, no force should be used or lives endangered," the white card said.

WEST REDDING (UPI) — Residents of the town where Maj. Arthur D. Nicholson spent his youth said they want to show their compassion for the officer's parents and planned a memorial service to be held Saturday.

"We're dealing with his death as a human tragedy," said First Selectwoman Mary Anne Gutar of the U.S. Army officer shot by a Soviet sentry Sunday in East Germany.

With flags flying at half-mast throughout the community, Gutar said the memorial service would be the town's way of honoring "a wholesome American trying to serve his country."

Gutar said service at Christ Episcopal Church would coincide with services at Arlington National Cemetery in Washington where Nicholson wanted to be buried.

Townpeople "are anxious to express themselves," she said, "to show their compassion" for his parents, Jean and Arthur Nicholson Sr., who were vacationing in Florida when their son was killed.

In the first official comment from the Pentagon, Gutar said the defense department was authorized to express its sympathy for the slain officer.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger accused Moscow today of reprehensible "behavior over the killing."

Nicholson lived in West Berlin with his wife, Karen, and their 5-year-old daughter. Paul H. Smith, a neighbor of the Nicholsons, said neither the slain officer nor his family considered his assignment in Germany to be all that dangerous.

U.S./World In Brief

Court split upholds Nativity scene

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court, splitting 4-4, upheld a ruling that Scarsdale, N.Y., must allow a Nativity scene to be displayed on public land in the center of the town.

The decision arose because Justice Lewis Powell, who was out for three months recovering from surgery for prostate cancer, did not participate in the case. The tie vote in today's case upholds the law in states covered by the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, but does not set a nationwide precedent.

Scarsdale officials said placing the scene in the center of town was a promotion of religion that violated the Constitution's wall of separation between church and state.

The appeals court held that the scene would not promote religion "by allowing the display of a creche at Boniface Circle for a period of approximately two weeks during the Christmas holiday season."

Kidnap victim freed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — A British mineral expert was released by kidnappers today, 14 days after he was kidnapped in Moslem west Beirut, a British Embassy spokesman said.

Geoffrey Nash "is safe and well," a British Foreign Office spokesman in London said. "Now we look forward to the release of the remaining hostages without further delay."

The spokesman said the British ambassador in Beirut, David Milers, had been in touch with Nash by telephone and "understand that he had been treated reasonably well" before his release.

Nash, 60, a British metallurgist working for the Lebanese government, was kidnapped March 14. His release came a day after a caller saying he represented the previously unknown "Khaibar Brigades" told Western news agency his group had seized two Britons and three people attached to the French Embassy.

The group was led by an oil executive Brian Levick and Nash. The spokesman said the British ambassador in Beirut, David Milers, had been in touch with Nash by telephone and "understand that he had been treated reasonably well" before his release.

The company said it was confident it could work out all the issues arising from the case and said it was willing to reimburse the government for any improper charges that might have been made.

Carbide silent after India releases report

DANBURY (UPI) — Union Carbide Corp. refused to comment on an unreleased Indian government report concluding the company failed to take steps to prevent history's worst chemical disaster when signs of catastrophe were imminent.

The Indian government report found Union Carbide and its Indian subsidiary must bear responsibility for a catastrophic gas leak in Bhopal, India, that killed 2,500 people, the Christian Science Monitor reported Tuesday.

The paper said the report blames Union Carbide design flaws, operating errors, defective systems and managerial mistakes for the Dec. 3, 1984, pesticide plant disaster. More than 100,000 people were injured in the leak of methyl isocyanate gas.

"There just were no safety procedures to deal with the disaster," an Indian investigator told the Monitor. "And we have plenty of documentation to substantiate that Danbury, Conn., (the company's headquarters) knew exactly what was happening at Bhopal."

Union Carbide last week blamed "gross violations of established safety procedures" at the plant. Tom Falla, a spokesman at Union Carbide's world headquarters in Danbury said the company has "determined scientifically the cause was gross water contamination of the tank."

OPINION

A Democratic offer the Republicans can't refuse

Democratic leaders at the Legislature are making an offer they don't see how the Republicans can refuse — not if the GOP majority really wants to get this 1985 General Assembly unstuck.

The Democrats, noting that very little has moved in this session and fearing the worst for the final weeks, are urging the Republicans to call on them for help.

There's more to it than that, of course, but we'll get to that later.

As Senate Minority Leader Con O'Leary of Windsor Locks said at a news conference today, Democrats have the experience which many GOP legislators lack in the nuts and bolts of General Assembly business. Republicans admit that inexperience has been a problem for them this year, the first in a decade to find the GOP in control.

Capitol Comments
Bob Conrad

Senate, where nine of the bill-raising committees have freshman co-chairmen. Sen. Jamie McLaughlin of Woodbury, co-chairman of the Finance Committee, is not in that number though this is his first term in the Senate. He was in the House for two terms.

The House has no freshmen chairing committees. Speaker R.E. Van Norstrand still believes the session can adjourn early this year.

BUT SCORES OF BILLS are bogged in committees in this season of reporting deadlines. As this was written, Gov. Bill O'Neill had signed all of eight bills from this session that opened Jan. 9 only 25 had passed House and Senate.

One exception to the pokiness, it should be noted, was turned in by the Public Safety Committee. Last week, the committee cleared the last of the bills on its list. "We're Number 1," crowed Rep. Gene Migliaro of Wolcott, the House chairman and six-term veteran. Sen. Bob Miller of Danbury, a freshman, is Senate chairman.

O'Leary is afraid the Republicans will get increasingly nervous as the session grinds along and start killing bills indiscriminately to catch up. He says a GOP committee chairman has given him reason to expect that. So O'Leary is encouraging the Republicans to work with seasoned Democrats in trying to rescue this session.

REP. TIM MOYNIHAN of East Hartford, the deputy minority leader in the House who also wears the hat of Democratic state chairman, adds another dimension to the proposal, however. A political one, by gosh.

A poor performance by the General Assembly, says Moynihan, will make O'Neill look bad, too, in the public's mind. He says Democrats are rooting in a way, for Republicans to make the legislature appear operationally good, allowing for understandable partisan differences.

Much of the Democratic "concern" then, for how the Republicans come out of the session is laced with an interest in protecting their man in the governor's office — a man who intends to seek re-election next year.

Sen. Joseph Harper of New Britain was a prime mover for the new conference, aided at the outset by his town chairman, John King, labor leader Bill O'Brien of West Hartford, Sen. Steve Casey of Bristol, Bob Berger of Enfield, a former legislator, and O'Leary.

Joining them at a recent, unpublicized meeting at the state Capitol were West Hartford Mayor Kevin Sullivan, Bristol Mayor John Leone, former Rep. Gardner Wright of Bristol, West Hartford town Chairman John Drouney, and the probable director of the conference, Chris Kelly of West Hartford, Paul Vayer, a former mayoral aide in New Britain, and Alan Zaniwski, a party worker in that city, who also assisted.

"It's going to happen," says Harper.

One hit after another

A Democratic pow-wow in Manchester several weeks ago on reviving the party was such a smash hit that a similar one is in the works for April 27 at the University of Hartford.

The earlier one was for Democrats east of the Connecticut River. The April event will be for towns northwest of the river — New Britain, Bristol, Enfield, West Hartford, possibly Torrington, and their satellite neighbors.

Derby crash kills one

DERBY — Police said one man died and his passenger was hospitalized after police pursued the driver for licenses that belonged on another vehicle.

Joseph Memoli, 25, of Beacon Falls was killed Monday, police said. His passenger, Charles Billberg, 28, of Seymour was taken to Griffin Hospital in Derby with a head injury and listed in serious condition.

Patrolman James Thomas said he stopped the car Monday and found the license plate apparently belonged on another vehicle. Memoli sped south on Hawthorne Avenue and Thomas pursued, police said.

Police said Memoli turned around at an intersection and headed north, but the car struck a tree on a curve and flipped over.

Report backs emissions test

HARTFORD — The state's 2-year-old auto emissions testing program gives Connecticut its best chance of attaining decent air quality and should be continued, a state study has concluded.

The study by the Council on Environmental Quality released Tuesday said repeal of the emissions testing program as advocated by some lawmakers "would certainly result in air quality that is more unhealthful." The council found that hydrocarbon emissions must be reduced to reduce smog levels in the state and that automobiles generate more hydrocarbons than any other source of pollution.

Karl J. Wagner, executive director of the state agency, said the study showed there are no alternatives in the near future to the emissions testing program for reducing ozone, which is more commonly referred to as smog.

"The auto emissions inspection program gives the state its best shot at decent air quality," Wagner said in a statement accompanying a report on the study, which evaluated strategies for controlling ozone. "It will improve air quality. Lawmakers have a choice: keep the program or doom pollution-sensitive citizens to more unhealthful air," Wagner added.

Newer autos and light trucks must undergo the annual $10 emissions tests under the 2-year-old program, which has enraged some motorists as it in turn prompted demands from some legislators for its repeal.

Clown to return to court

BRIDGEPORT — "Tickles the Clown" was due back in Superior Court today, the prosecution's key witness against a mother of a graduating student accused of trying to bribe him with $10,000 after a pie-in-the-face graduation prank.

Robert Fuller, who performs as Tickles, claimed Tuesday that Mary Diorio, 36, hired him to hit a school administrator in the face with a pie and then begged him to keep silent.

Fuller, who has accused Diorio and her husband, James, of offering him a bribe, was to resume his testimony today when Judge Robert P. Burns said he would rule on a defense motion to dismiss the case. The Diorios each face a possible 10 years in prison on charges of tampering with a witness and bribery, James Diorio, 44, a former public defender, will be tried later.

Century reaches agreement

WATERBURY — Century Brass Products Inc. has worked out an arrangement with a Boston insurance company to cover checks for employees' medical claims.

Colonial Bank of Waterbury has been returning medical claims checks as non-negotiable for the past week.

Frank Santaguida, Century's vice president for employee relations, said Tuesday the agreement covers most of the bad medical-reimbursement checks issued before the company filed for reorganization in U.S. Bankruptcy Court March 15. Spokesmen for both hospitals in Waterbury said they could consider Century employees as medically insured.

Checks for prescriptions issued before March 15 will not be paid for the time being, but Century plans to establish an account by Friday to cover checks written after March 15, Santaguida said.

Computer kids look for peace

NEW HAVEN (UPI) — Members of a computer club at Southern Connecticut State University said they would like to generate positive energy with the two super-powers by a computer connection with their Soviet counterparts.

Senior Seth Paiker, the president of the club, referred to the tensions between the United States and the Soviet Union as one reason why the members are interested in the exchange.

"What we're doing may not alleviate that problem, but it shows some positive energy. The students are the future leaders," he said.

The club members would become the first American students to establish a computer connection with other students in the Soviet Union.

The request for the link with Moscow State University is pending and was initiated when the students wrote to President Reagan, the U.S. Embassy in Moscow and the Soviet Embassy in Washington, which referred them to a research liaison, the International Research and Exchange Board in New York City.

Only government can run gambling

To the Editor:

I can't think of two more community-active or patriotic organizations than the Elks and Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Where would these veterans, after years of fighting for freedom in foreign wars, ever get the idea that they could come home to a country that would allow them to play video games for money?

Gambling is so degrading and disgusting, an act that only government is allowed to run it.

Connecticut In Brief

Doctor denied visit to kids

HARTFORD — A cardiologist accused of bludgeoning his wife to death will not get to see his three young children as soon as he had hoped.

Dr. Russell F. Manfredi, 32, who has been charged with the March 8 killing of his wife Catherine, 35, was told by a Superior Court judge Tuesday he may not visit or communicate with his three sons even though he is out of jail on $150,000 bond.

Judge Edward Y. O'Connell said a visit with their father might be "confusing" to the children, who will be material witnesses in the case, and could have a "disturbing influence" on them.

Panel gives backing to welfare reform

By Mark A. Dupuis
United Press International

HARTFORD — A legislative committee gave initial approval to a bill that would increase welfare benefits, which in the past have been debated annually by lawmakers.

Fleming said the other components of the bill are designed to help get people off welfare and into jobs, especially people who have been on assistance for many years.

The committee approval of the bill was a major victory for Fleming, who in past years pushed the proposals unsuccessfully when Democrats controlled the Legislature.

In addition to "indexing" benefit increases, the bill would require unemployed parents receiving AFDC to look for work every week or lose their benefits and provide identification cards to assistance recipients.

The bill also would establish a pilot program where AFDC recipients could voluntarily take jobs and require that some local welfare recipients are put to work in unskilled jobs on state public works projects.

Democrats, now in the minority on the committee, supported some sections of the bill but vehemently objected to other sections and the way the Fleming and co-chairman Sen. Joseph C. Markley, R-Southington, conducted the meeting.

Fleming accused Prybyzys and other Democrats of trying to stall the meeting by asking questions about the reform plan and after more than an hour of debate Markley ordered the vote.

At one point, Fleming and Rep. Kenneth L. Prybyzys, D-Montville, became involved in a loud exchange outside the committee room over the way the meeting was handled and lack of another meeting before Friday.

Town-Eighth dispute has gone too far

It is absurd to have two fire districts building and operating firehouses within 500 feet of each other — especially when one of them can't serve the area it was meant to serve.

It is ludicrous for the leader of one of those districts to say legislation to allow residents to secede from his district would create chaos — existing legislation which allows residents of the other district to secede has already created chaos.

But it is contemptible that the rivalry between the two districts has sunk to the unprofessional level at which competing firefighters assault each other, verbally and physically.

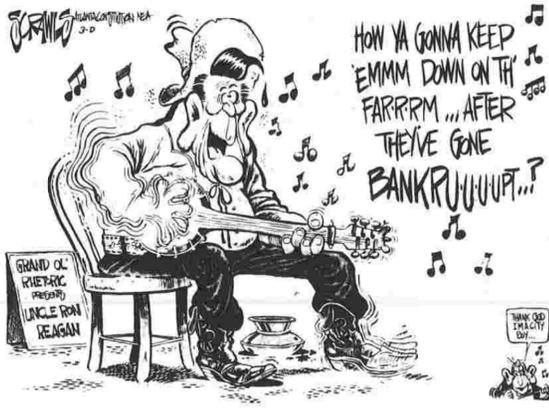

The incident Tuesday morning, when one of the town's deputy fire chiefs struck a volunteer firefighter for the Eighth District, is reprehensible. Even if such an attack were provoked, it would never be justified.

Perhaps leaders on both sides are right to withhold public comment on the matter for now. Heated discussion of the altercation would not ease the tensions between the two fire departments, and it could further polarize the community.

Manchester residents must have responsible fire protection. An incident like Tuesday's seriously undermines the trust that town residents place in their fire departments. Residents should be concerned about leadership of a fire department which allows such nonsense.

There is no evidence that Tuesday's incident created a risk greater than already existed at the site of a serious structure fire. But what could happen if firefighters were so busy fighting — or stopping fights — that they didn't have time to stop the fire? The question may sound far-fetched, but no more far-fetched than the sight of firefighters from different fire departments slugging each other.

The public has a right to know the conclusion of the investigations of Tuesday's incident. Continued "no comment" from the top could lead us to believe that such behavior is being condoned by administrators.

Column on class shows ignorance

To the Editor:

James Sacks' column on Saturday only demonstrates, further, a severe need for more quality education in our classrooms. You have a problem with "reading comprehension." You state that we are "trying to impose our values on others, regardless of the consequences." Well, apparently we are the only ones who are concerned about consequences but nowhere have we sought to impose our moral values on anyone else.

Since you have not been able to grasp the argument yet, let me repeat — we only want this course out of viable class time and done properly with educated professionals. If left in school, students who are removed will still be subject to peer pressure and possible humiliation and, as loving parents, we want to protect our children from this. I am appalled that someone in your position would openly display such ignorance as exhibited on Saturday.

Have you even acquainted yourself with the material in this course and the way it is being presented, or are you just banking on the fact that we are the "vocal minority" and you feel a need to appease what you hope is the majority?

It is education that we are seeking to give to these children — not half truths and moral skepticism. Take a look at Sweden, as an example. In 1966, the foreign editor of Look magazine at that time wrote an article on Sweden's new battle over sex after 18 years of compulsory sex education in which he stated: "The rising incidence of VD in Sweden over the past 10 years, despite the absence of prostitution, the presence of sex education and the easy availability of contraceptives that would prevent most cases of gonorrhea, baffles the experts."

And so it should, indeed. For they have forgotten that moral behavior results not from information but from formation, and the formation provided by classroom sex instruction is not conducive to continence or chastity, or even, it seems, "responsible" sexuality, even as "responsible" is defined by the most humanistic of sex experts.

That it has not worked in England is witnessed by the 1972 report of the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, commenting on the failure of sex education to stem the increase of unplanned pregnancies among adolescents.

That it is not working in the United States is shown by statistics on VD, illegitimacy and perversion.

Anyone with a modicum of common sense and awareness of human nature would perhaps reexamine a faulty premise here. And please show me where the statistics for parity are with regard to this course? Where and what are the goals to be accompanied by this course and a time limit to arrive at such goals so that we may see it is "working" here where it has not worked elsewhere?

In a guide for sex education published in "Soviet Education," a monthly journal of the Academy Educational Sciences, in 1949, the U.S.S.R. did a complete about-face from the previous Soviet policy of "free love" and early sex instruction with initiation in the schools where it did not work there either. They wrote: "Talks should be held in privacy between father and son or mother and daughter. They will definitely be justified and directly beneficial, for they will correspond to the natural awakening of sex in the young person. Such talks must also cover sex hygiene and particularly questions of sexual morality. Sex education is and should be education for love — that is, a great and profound feeling enhanced by unity of life, yearnings and hopes. But such sex education must be conducted without too open and downright cynical selection of physiological problems. Example occupies the most important place here. If the child witnesses from the first year of his life genuine love between father and mother, their mutual respect, aid and concern, and their openly permitted manifestations of tenderness and affection, these will be the most powerful educational factors and will awaken the child's attention to such serious and beautiful relations between man and woman."

Could it be that our Russian friends have zeroed in on something that we haven't been enlightened to yet? Are we to keep burying our head in the sand and say, as you do, that humanism is not being taught daily in our classrooms? Are we to accept, blindly, anything that the schools want to teach? Maybe it is just easier to say that everything is OK, because being involved is just too hard and learning the truth could be just too painful?

I maintain that you haven't really gotten yourself involved in the school system and are not backing this course or the school system from an intelligent, informed standpoint. I challenge you, if you must be vocal, to at least be knowledgeable.

And, again, I challenge the people of this town to examine the statistics and demand excellence for our children.

Church's cookbook rich in Swedish delights

By Adele Anole Focus Editor

Evelyn Ask's Swedish coffee bread is listed in a cookbook compiled by the women's group of Trinity Covenant Church.

"The recipe I use is from my aunt," she said. "Two of her aunts were caterers, and as a girl she helped them with cooking, one reason why she enjoys cooking so much today."

"It's a good thing, too. I have a big family," she said. She and her husband, Henry "Hank" Ask, are the parents of Deborah Hernandez of Coventry, Donna Olander of Coventry, Lauren Murray of Manchester, Stephen Ask in California, and Sharon Ask of South Windsor.

Those who would like the Swedish coffee bread recipe and other Swedish favorites can order the church cookbook, which was recently reprinted. Copies, at $5, are available at the E.A. Johnson Paint Co., 723 Main St., the Front Parlor, 465 Hartford Road, and at the Trinity Covenant Church office, 302 Hackmatack St. Office hours at the church are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Manchester's Trinity Covenant Church was founded by people of Swedish background. Naturally, then, the cookbook carries many Swedish favorites, such as Swedish Spritz cookies. The cookbook, though, has many other recipes as well, including a rich blue cheese dressing recipe contributed by Ask.

"At home this is our favorite dressing," she said. "That pretty Swedish costume she's wearing for her photo by the way, was especially made for her. She ordered it last summer during a Scandinavian trip she took with her husband, along with daughter Deborah and her husband."

"The dress is in striking yellow and blue. It is the national costume of Sweden, and the woman who made it for her made another similar dress for Sweden's queen. The dress arrived in time for Ask to wear it last fall at Trinity Covenant's church fair."

During the trip, she purchased cardamom. "It's much cheaper over there," she said. She also bought an extract called Attrak, which she uses in baking."

She also bought a Swedish scale. Her Swedish relatives give her recipes, but their directions use their own weights. So her new scale helps her translate.

"That's the fun part," she said. "Here are her recipes and others from the cookbook."

Evelyn Ask serves some of her Swedish coffee bread. Her costume is the national costume of Sweden.

Scald milk and add shortening, sugar and yeast and cardamom. Stir in 7 to 8 cups of flour. Beat until smooth. Set aside in warm place. Let rise until double in bulk. Shape into braids, making 4 coffee breads by dividing dough into 4 parts, and brush with beaten egg. Sprinkle with regular or pearl sugar and slivered almonds. Let rise until double in size. Bake at 375 degrees for 25 minutes.

Body may not respond to diet try

The contours of your body are shaped by deposits of fat. The way it accumulates here and there was determined by your genes before you were born, according to Dr. Ronald K. Kalkhoff, chief of the TOPS Medical Research Program at Milwaukee County Medical Complex. That's why your figure is probably like that of your parents or grandparents or an aunt or an uncle.

5. However, the total of fat on your body is largely determined by outside factors. It starts before birth. According to Kalkhoff, if your mother ate heavily while you were in the womb, especially toward the end of the pregnancy, then overfed you when you were an infant, she helped increase the number of progenitor cells that later would become fat cells on your body.

6. There are sexual differences regarding the location of the major fat deposits. Overweight women tend to accumulate fat below the waist, specifically on lower abdomen, hips, thighs and buttocks. Overweight men tend to accumulate fat above the waist, on their chests and stomachs.

7. Kalkhoff believes that heavy spots can be trimmed down. Dieting helps reduce total fat. Exercise is more selective. It trims fat over muscles, such as at the abdomen and thigh. Exercise can't help trim breasts, which are accumulations of fat tissue around glandular tissue. The usual problem with exercising in middle age is that by the time you decide to do it, decades of inactivity have slipped by, your muscles have gone lax and you find calisthenics difficult, if not impossible.

8. Knowing you need to give up. According to Kalkhoff, diet and exercise have a three to four times greater influence over your figure than heredity does.

9. Crash diets that produce quick weight loss take more water than fat off your body. Diete diet pills. As for massage, says Kalkhoff, "no matter how hard you squeeze or hit a pound of butter you'll still have a pound there." To reduce its mass, you have to "burn" it.

Trick to scallop dish is to use the right cheese

To Kim Socha of Moore Street, hoppiness is eating the scallops in cheese sauce at Vito's Birch Mountain Inn, Bolton. But the home preparation of this dish has eluded her.

Mike Capsch, manager and head chef at Vito's, said his problem was probably in her choice of cheese. Instead of the Romano, Provolone or Mozzarella that you'd normally use on an Italian dish, Vito's uses Cheddar cheese on the scallops ala Gino.

It's odd, but it's been one of our most popular dishes for about 10 years," Capsch said. "It was one of the original recipes they've been using since they opened the place."

It's a rich and garlicky dish, Capsch warns. The garlic is not browned first, but is cooked only briefly in the white wine sauce. "The Cheddar and garlic together are what makes this so unusual," Capsch told the Manchester Herald.

Scallops ala Gino
1 cup bay scallops
4 tablespoons butter, not margarine
One-third cup white wine
1 teaspoon chopped garlic
1/2 cup slivered Cheddar cheese
Fresh parsley
One-third pound freshly-cooked linguine, drained
Combine scallops, butter, wine and garlic in a shallow saucpan. Place in a 425-degree oven, or over high heat on top of the stove, for about 5 minutes. Scallops should become opaque, but should not be overcooked. (The restaurant uses a very hot boiler for this.)

Sprinkle liberally with all of the cheese, and give one stir. There should be some cheese throughout the sauce, and still more on top. Heat again, this time in the oven or broiler, just until cheese melts and top browns slightly. Garnish with parsley, chopped in sprigs. Pour out over a bed of drained pasta. Serves two.

Nutritionist links problems of child's behavior to diet

By Lidio Wasowicz United Press International

SAN FRANCISCO — Don't blame sugar or additives or allergies for a child's hyperactive behavior, a nutritionist says. The real villain may be a poorly balanced diet.

Some 10 percent of America's 5-to-8-year-olds suffer from hyperactivity, characterized by inability to concentrate, restlessness and a short attention span, said Dr. Eleanor Whitney, author of three bestselling nutrition textbooks.

"People spend a lot of money on extensive allergy testing, natural and organic foods, vitamin supplements when a simple good diet using the four basic food groups could do the trick," said Whitney, who was assistant professor of nutrition at Florida State University for 12 years.

"Poor nutrition certainly does affect behavior. Almost any of 20 nutrient deficiencies can render behavior abnormal," said Whitney, who during the past eight years has reviewed more than 16,000 articles and studies on nutrition.

Iron deficiency is the most common nutrient deficiency, affecting some 10 percent to 20 percent of children, said Whitney, founder of The Nutrition Co. Inc., a nutrition information center for health care professionals, in Tallahassee, Fla.

"Research clearly shows that in the early stages of iron deficiency a child can't concentrate, is restless, has a short attention span, can't sit still, the main characteristics associated with hyperactivity," she said.

"These may be attractive as offering the public a black-and-white picture of a villain, but the true picture is far more complicated," she said.

"Parents should not be deathly afraid of sugar and forbid their children from eating all cookies and candies but should be conscious of feeding their children wholesome foods from the four groups."

Add the apples and chopped onions and cook stirring frequently for 5 minutes, or until the apples are lightly browned. Add the cabbage, the whole onion with cloves, and the bay leaf. Stir thoroughly and pour in the boiling water.

Miniseries depicts life after Christ

By Joan Hanover
United Press International

NEW YORK — The paparazzi would have had a regular orgy if ancient Rome was anything like it is depicted in the NBC miniseries "A.D." The cast is brilliantly star-studded, but why a drama that runs through April 4, 1985, is called a miniseries remains a mystery. "A.D.", aptly scheduled to air during Holy Week, starts March 31 and runs through April 4. It picks up where "Jesus of Nazareth" left off, several days after the crucifixion of Christ, and continues through the reign of four caesars — Tiberius, played by James Mason in his final role; Caligula, acted with mad flair by John McEnery; Claudius, whose stammering cleverness is skillfully suggested by Richard Kiley; and Nero, played with campy effectiveness and just a touch of Sebastian Flyte by Anthony Andrews. There's Ava Gardner as Nero's mother, Colleen Dewhurst as a Roman matron with spine of steel, Jennifer O'Neill as naughty Messalina, Ian McShane as ambitious Seneca carrying on with Susan Sarandon as Livilla, and Jack Warden, who makes the unlikeliest Roman of them all. Hop over to Jerusalem, and there's the John Houseman playing a rabbi in a wild example of creative casting, Michael Wilding

Advice

Bible isn't last word on men's ribs

DEAR ABBY: "Al C. in Newberg, Ore." wrote: "My wife and I have a disagreement we think you can settle. Do women have one more rib than men?"

Your answer was: "Dear Al: Men and women have the same number of ribs. (Who is ribbing whom?)"

Abby, you quote Scripture from time to time, so I would have thought that you would remember Genesis 2:21-22: "And the Lord caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam, and he slept, and he took one of his ribs, and closed up the flesh instead of that. And the rib, which the Lord God had taken from man, he made a woman, and brought her unto the man."

Women have one more rib than men.

FUNDAMENTALIST: DEAR FUNDAMENTALIST: With all due respect to the Old Testament, he who seeks the knowledge of the number of ribs hath man and woman had been shown on the X-rays of both. Then let him go forth and compare.

CONFIDENTIAL TO S.G.J.,

Symptoms for hypertension vary

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 37-year-old male and was recently diagnosed as having high blood pressure. My doctor prescribed 80 mg of Inderal a day, which I have taken regularly.

I feel much better now, more relaxed, less anxious and with less pressure in my chest. However, everything I read says that hypertension has no symptoms and can't be felt by the patient, yet I think I felt it. Can you explain this?

DEAR READER — When you say that you feel better, you are not telling me that some pain has disappeared. The fact that hypertension has no symptoms does not mean that one may not feel tense. A tense person who has high blood pressure in response to tension may feel much better when the high blood pressure is controlled. Most people like this probably have "adrenaline personalities."

Adrenaline is the "fight or flight" hormone that is released during stress. It speeds up the body's motor to prepare for a crisis, and this can increase one's blood pressure. Inderal and other beta-blockers neutralize this adrenaline effect. With that adrenaline stimulation gone, one then feels better. Many people who have high blood pressure do not even have the tense, anxious adrenaline feeling you must have had.

You will want to read The Health Letter 15-8, Your Vital Blood Pressure, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed

DEAR POLLY: Is it all right to leave a food like soup stock out of the refrigerator for some time, and then use it for soup? My husband thinks it's OK as long as you boil the stock when fixing the soup. — J.L.B.

DEAR J.L.B.: Soup stocks and similar foods should be left at room temperature for no more than an hour. They must be stored in the refrigerator to ensure protection from harmful bacterial growth. Some of these bacteria may not be killed by boiling, but others are.

For example, Graves refers to Claudius' father, Drusus, as Tiberius' brother, but in "A.D." — and in Suetonius — he is the son of Tiberius.

For entertainment, "A.D." is no match for "Claudius," which stuck with the manically wicked and sexually perverted caesars and was helix together by superb performances, including Derek Jacobi as Claudius and Stan Phillips as Livia.

There is much worth watching in "A.D.," but it also has long slow periods. This is the kind of show that is fun to watch while doing something else, glancing up from time to time when you hit a hot spot, most of which occur in Rome.

"A.D." airs March 31, 8-11 p.m.; April 1, 2 and 3, 9-11 p.m.; and April 4, 8-11 p.m., all Eastern time.

Thoughts

There is a currently popular song with the lyrics, "Hindsight is 20/20 vision." How true that is. It's easy to be a Monday morning quarterback, but it's hard to play the professional football game on Saturday or Sunday afternoon.

Trying to see what is, and making a decision about it at the moment is difficult. It requires of us insight and a knowledge of the truth, the ability to see a thing as it is. Unfortunately, some people never see the truth. They never see

TRENTON, N.J.: The Trenton Times is no more immune to typographical errors than any other newspaper, but sometimes it's wise to leave bad enough alone. I submit an amusing exchange that appeared in this space five years ago to illustrate that point.

DEAR ABBY: My mother recently passed away after a brief illness. In the obituary published in our local newspaper, her age was given as 89.

Abby, my mother was only 80, so it was apparently a typographical error. Now this may not seem very important to some people, but Mother was a very vain and envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. A person who has had the response you had should avoid caffeine, as found in coffee, tea and some colas. Caffeine has an adrenaline effect, as does the nicotine in cigarettes. Coffee and cigarettes will make Inderal less effective.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 50-year-old female. I have a hiatal hernia and take Lanoxin once a day for the valve in my heart. When I'm sleeping, I sometimes wake up and can't get my breath. This lasts for a little while, but it scares me because I think I won't be able to get my breath. I get out of bed and fling my arms out and just try to breathe, but there's really nothing I can do. Could I die from being unable to get my breath? What causes this? My doctor doesn't seem to know.

DEAR READER — It is often difficult to know what a patient has when

DEAR POLLY: A simple and easy needle-threader for crewel embroidery, or for threading any needle with a large eye, can be made with a bit of lightweight fishing line. Cut a 4-inch length of prideful woman who would never tell her age.

Because of this typographical error in her obituary, everyone will think she was nine years older than she actually was.

Should we ask the newspaper editor to publish a correction? I submit an amusing exchange that appeared in this space five years ago to illustrate that point.

DEAR OUTVOTED: Sometimes it's better to leave bad enough alone. In support of my advice, I offer the following from the California Newspaper Publishers Association. It is an example of a typographical error in the classified section of a small-town newspaper, and the subsequent disastrous attempt to correct it.

(Monday) "FOR SALE—R.D. Jones has one sewing machine for sale. Phone 948-9707 after 7 p.m. and ask for Mrs. Kelly who lives with him cheap."

(Is your social life in a slump? Lonely? Get Abby's updated, revised and expanded booklet, "How to Be Popular — for people of all ages. Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Abby, Popular, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038."

(Thursday) "NOTICE—I, R.D. Jones, have no sewing machine for sale. I smashed it. Don't call 948-9707, as the telephone has been out. I have not been carrying on with Mrs. Kelly. Until yesterday she was my housekeeper, but she quit."

The other possibility is that you accumulate fluid in your lungs because of your heart condition. I don't know the exact nature of your heart problem, so I can't say for certain. This does happen with some heart conditions and causes attacks of breathlessness, or paroxysmal nocturnal dyspnea.

It sometimes helps to improve the heart's function, and particularly to eliminate excess body water. The seriousness of the problem depends on its cause.

Guard computer against the hacks

Your Money's Worth

Sylvia Porter

A new generation of true "home computers" combining useful features with relatively low prices has now been introduced in the marketplace — following personal computers for the office, video games for the kids and the like. But if you're a buyer, be warned: Along with their unusual rewards, these machines offer the potential for unusual new problems, too.

Computers are not just valuable in themselves; they are repositories for data that are potentially even more valuable and certainly easier to lose. And even more threatening than losing data is allowing the confidentiality of the data to be compromised.

As Susan Nyeum, a practitioner of computer law and partner in the high-technology firm of Gaston Snow & Ely Bartlett, says: "In most instances, there are no broken locks or fingerprints left behind even to indicate that there has been a 'break-in.'"

If you are the owner of a home computer, you should treat data stored on disks, as well as the programs that access them, the same way you treat any other valuable papers in your home.

1) You wouldn't leave a video recorder and a food processor turned on and unattended if children or other untrained, unauthorized persons were around. The same goes double for a computer.

2) You should be even more cautious about the "home hacker," who can unintentionally erase data you need or lose a floppy disk. You would be wise to copy smart professional computer owners who make backup copies of the valued data, and thereby minimize the dangers of mishaps.

3) Get into the habit of backing up your data. It's like buckling your seat belt, and — unlike making a pile of photocopies — it doesn't take much longer to buckling your belt.

4) To get maximum protection of your most valuable records, store a copy in a place that is free from fire and flood as well as from computer malfunctions. Your 1/4-inch disk wouldn't take much space in your safety deposit box, so you might as well take the same disk that holds financial records and an inventory of your possessions, a list of life insurance policies, your credit card numbers, emergency phone numbers, similar data. Then you can store this information with a sense of security, too.

5) If your P.C. has a modem and you connect to outside data bases and other services such as your bank or broker, be even more cautious about security. Your computer can be used as a gateway to the world, just as your telephone can — only it's more powerful and more vulnerable. There are consumer laws that protect you from misuse of your credit cards by setting limits on your liability, but it's difficult to show how theft or forgery of your card occurred if the access was from your own home computer.

6) Seemingly less pernicious is the "system hacker," but this hacker can do enormous damage by using your home computer to browse through other people's computer systems. Do not allow your family members and friends such misuses. Draw the line between education and malicious mischief. You may be encouraging a crime.

7) One "computer crime" is becoming so commonplace that even honest home computer users are tempted: making copies of licensed agreements, says attorney Nyeum.

This whole area is bound in by rules. You must find out what programs you buy can and cannot do for you and what you can do if you're disappointed with a licensed program. If your disk is defective, will the seller repair or replace it? Perhaps — but most sellers will not stand behind the software itself or any results it gives you.

At the very start — even before you buy a home computer — find out your rights and what protections you have. Minimize, even if you can't eliminate, your problems.

Japanese maintain car limits

TOKYO - Japan has decided to maintain voluntary restrictions on car exports to the United States by limiting shipments to between 2.2 million and 2.3 million units, government sources said today.

The Ministry of International Trade and Industry, which oversees Japan's foreign trade, will negotiate with the nation's 11 major automobile manufacturers on quotas for their shipments to the United States for the year beginning April 1, the sources said.

The outcome of the negotiations will be reported by International Trade and Industry Minister Keijiro Matsuzaki at a Cabinet meeting scheduled for Friday.

According to trade ministry calculations, Japanese car exports to the United States would reach 2.7 million units in fiscal 1985 if self-controls are totally lifted.

The 2.2 million to 2.3 million ceiling set by the ministry still represents an increase of about 25 percent or $3 billion in value over the current year.

The ministry decision is expected to arouse strong discontent among auto industry leaders, who have made clear their opposition to the government position on the car issue.

The Japanese automobile industry, under pressure from Washington, has exercised voluntary restraints on exports to the United States since 1981.

The ceiling for the year ending March 31 was set at 1.85 million units.

The Reagan administration earlier this month said the United States would not seek an extension of the Japanese car import controls during the year beginning April 1.

Japan's huge trade surplus with the United States, amounting to $4.7 billion last year, apparently was a factor behind the ministry decision to continue voluntary car export curbs, the sources said.

Japanese automakers, asserting they will preserve "orderly marketing," have called for the lifting of the voluntary limits.

"It's nonsense. The matter should be left to the discretion of auto makers," said Takaishi Iahbara, head of the Japan Automobile Manufacturers' Association and president of Japan's second largest automaker, Nissan Motor Co.

Hardhats rally to keep wage

By Lynda Phillips
United Press International

HARTFORD - Under the watchful eye of union construction workers who packed the gallery, the state House took no action on a bill that would raise the trigger price for payment of the so-called prevailing wage.

More than 1,000 construction workers came to the Capitol Tuesday to support the existing law requiring municipalities to pay a set wage for any construction project using federal funds.

Critics said that prevailing wage is usually union scale, artificially inflating the cost of municipal construction and forcing non-union bidders out of contention for contracts.

Ray Hanley of Madison, an electrical worker at Bristol-Meyers in Wallingford, said the present law "is good legislation. It's been in place a long time." To change it would be "a step backward for everyone," he said.

William Shae, of West Haven, an electrical worker at the Millstone nuclear power plant in Waterford, said union construction was better, "more efficient, better trained. A non-union contractor who bids the prevailing wage doesn't mean he pays them."

The trigger price is now $50,000 for new construction work and $100,000 for renovation work. The bill before the House would raise the limits to $500,000 for both new construction and renovations.

Lawmakers haggled about the trigger price all day. Democrats prepared amendments to raise the trigger price to $150,000 for new construction and $50,000 for renovations, with an automatic inflationary escalator built into the law.

After an hour-long rally and negotiations with the Republican majority leaders, the House delayed action on the bill, which had been expected to pass the Republican-controlled chamber on a party-line vote.

House Majority Leader Robert G. Jaekle, R-Stratford, said the bill would probably not be ready for passage for several weeks because "I gave my word that many would be consulted in arriving at a figure."

When that figure is agreed upon, Jaekle said the House Republicans would present their own amendment to the bill.

Military honors slain American in Berlin

BERLIN (UPI) — U.S. Army top brass, officials and soldiers gathered today for a memorial service for the American liaison officer shot and killed by a Soviet guard in East Germany.

An Army spokesman in West Berlin said a congregation of fewer than 100 people — including Lt. Gen. Thomas Dyers, deputy commander of the U.S. Army Europe — attended the service at the American Community Chapel in the U.S. sector of the divided city. Nicholson's wife Karen and 8-year-old daughter also were at the service.

No journalists were allowed into the small church for the ceremony at the request of the family of Maj. Arthur Nicholson who was killed on an intelligence-gathering mission at a Soviet installation in East Germany Sunday.

A military spokesman in Frankfurt said Nicholson's body will be flown Friday to the United States. He is expected to be buried Saturday in Arlington National Cemetery, with no press coverage allowed.

On Wednesday, the United States said it made a strong diplomatic protest to the Soviet Union over the death and cut short a Pacific coast tour by a Soviet naval officer.

U.S. officials held out the prospect of further diplomatic moves, some of which may be revealed by Secretary of State George Shultz during a World Affairs Council

Chiefs meet to investigate fire incident

By Sarah Posselt
Herald Reporter

The chiefs of the Manchester's two fire departments said today that they met Wednesday night to compare the results of their separate investigations into a reported altercation between firefighters from each department at the scene of a house fire Tuesday on Adams Street.

Town Fire Chief John Rivosa and Eighth Utilities District Fire Chief Harold A. Topliff Jr. both said today that Wednesday's meeting brought out questions about some details of Tuesday's incident, which police said ended after a deputy chief of the town department punched a district firefighter in the chin.

Rivosa and Topliff said they are continuing their questioning of firefighters who were at the scene to get answers to the questions that arose at their meeting. The two expect to meet again tonight.

"Our respective departmental inquiries shall continue until we are satisfied with all aspects of the situation," Topliff said this morning in a prepared statement. Topliff spent several hours Tuesday night interviewing district firefighters who were at the scene.

Police reports say that town and district firefighters shoved each other and called each other names while a fire was burning in a back bedroom of a two-family house at 377 Adams St.

Rivosa said he is still looking for "what triggered this thing, because prior to it everything was going smooth."

The altercation began when police mistakenly dispatched the town department to the fire. According to a transcript of the emergency radio communications between police and fire departments that was released today by police, police were unsure if the house was in town or district territory and the town fire department said its records indicated the address was inside its jurisdiction.

The transcript indicates that firefighters on the way to the scene realized the fire was in the district as they approached West Middle Turnpike, the district's southern boundary.

The transcript also indicates that a police dispatcher notified district dispatchers of the fire about 3 1/2 minutes after dispatching the town fire department at 6:32 a.m.

Town and district officials have refused to comment publicly on the incident, saying that any decision about disciplinary action on either side is up to the fire chiefs. Manchester General Manager Robert B. Weiss said he met with Rivosa and Assistant Manager Steven Werthner this morning to discuss Rivosa's investigation, but he refused to comment on the substance of the meeting.

Officials on both sides have said privately that they were surprised Tuesday to learn it was Deputy Chief William Griffin who was accused of assaulting district firefighter Raymond P. Fredericksen II. Griffin, a 30-year member of the department, is widely respected, they said.

Griffin remains on active duty, pending the completion of the investigation. Neither Rivosa nor Topliff gave any hint today of what administrative action they may be considering.

"We expect and demand that both our departments will cooperate on the fire ground without animosity or rancor, as has been our practice and tradition," Topliff said in his statement this morning.

The fire left the family of Wayne and Linda Babinew without a home.

MX missiles up for last House vote

By Elliot Brenner
United Press International

WASHINGTON — MX missile foes scrambled today to change a few minds in an effort to stem the flow of presidential votes on the controversial missile.

President Reagan won the first three of four required votes on turning loose $1.5 billion for 21 of the missiles in fiscal 1985, and a final vote was set for noon EST.

Missile opponents, stung by Tuesday's 219-213 victory by the administration, Wednesday opted to use the extra day before the vote for a final drive to seek converts and turn it around.

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass., said the task was "difficult to do" but an "all-out attempt will be made. I don't know how successful it'll be."

O'Neill said that once the cost of hardening Minuteman 3 silos is added to the cost of the 10-warhead MX, the price tag exceeds $40 billion. "I've never seen an all-out effort as" the administration mounted. "They pulled out all the stops," he said.

Regardless of the outcome of today's final vote, Congress will fight the battle again this year, but on missiles in the fiscal 1986 budget. The administration is seeking $4 billion for 48 missiles, and many who supported the $1.5 billion for fiscal 1985 said they were doing so because of the Geneva arms talks but that they would oppose or trim down the 1986 request.

The elaborate procedure requiring two votes in the Senate and two in the House was established last fall as part of a compromise that kept alive administration hopes for getting some missiles this year.

Before an agreement was reached to cut down on debate time, missile opponents and backers met on the House floor Wednesday, raising the same arguments as they did the day before. Opponents even wanted to cut things short and get it over.

Rep. Joseph McDade, R-Pa., argued. "The issues were laid out yesterday. I'm not aware of any issues that were not discussed. The body made a judgment and new Soviet leader, Mikhail Gorbachev.

"We're not trying to hype this case, to make it into something it's not," said one official who briefed reporters at the State Department. "But it is a serious event. An American military officer has been killed for no reason."

A Pentagon official told reporters the administration would like to hold "military-to-military" talks with the Soviets to help ensure such a shooting does not happen again.

Nicholson's body is expected to arrive in the United States today. He is to be buried Saturday in Arlington National Cemetery, with no press coverage allowed.

An opposition leader, Charles Bennett, D-Fla., said, "It's not a good weapon. Weapons should do harm to your enemy. This particular weapon has as much chance of doing harm to us as the enemy."

The administration hopes eventually to buy 223 missiles, putting 100 in Minuteman 3 silos, with the rest set aside for testing and spares. Basing the missiles in the silos, which now hold some of the nation's three-warhead Minuteman missile force, is what concerns many of the opponents. They say the missiles would be less vulnerable in a mobile deployment.

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev accused the United States today of using the arms talks in Geneva, Switzerland, as a "screen" to cover plans for a military buildup.

The statement, carried in the form of a letter to a West German peace group, also warned that the Soviet people believe the deployment of new nuclear-armed U.S. missiles in Europe means West Germany is again presenting a threat.

"The Soviet-American talks which have begun in Geneva have given rise to many hopes," said Gorbachev's letter, carried by the official Tass news agency. "It must be noted, however, that things accompanying the beginning of the talks cannot but put one on guard."

"Already now, with the talks started, one gets the impression from statements by high-ranking representatives of the U.S.A. that they need talks as a screen for carrying through their military programs," he said.

The new Soviet leader criticized Tuesday's House vote approving funding for another 21 MX intercontinental-range missiles.

Gorbachev also condemned President Reagan's "Star Wars" anti-missile program.

Social Security layoff plan hits hurdle

By Elaine S. Povich
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The head of the Social Security Administration is going ahead with plans to cut 17,000 employees in the next five years but says the layoffs do not necessarily mean field offices will be closed.

Members of a Senate Appropriations subcommittee said the layoffs would create chaos, result in office shut downs, and were devised without sufficient study simply to meet budget-cutting goals.

Martha McSweeney, acting Social Security administrator, said Wednesday more use of computers and streamlining agency operations would take up the slack created by staff cuts.

McSweeney acknowledged the Social Security Administration is studying field offices and has set out criteria for evaluating under what conditions offices might be closed.

"I maintain we have no plans to close any specific office at any specific time," McSweeney said, while adding, "Based on the reviews, it may be necessary to do that."

Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia, a subcommittee member, asked why no study had been done of the effect of laying off 17,000 workers, 25 percent of the agency's employees, by 1990. He noted the House Select Committee on Aging estimated 21 field offices would be closed by the staff cut.

McSweeney said a study of workloads is being done that might lead to changes in the staff reduction plan.

Subcommittee Chairman Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., charged the plan was imposed by the Office of Management and Budget to reduce spending without any thought to its effect.

"Before office closing takes place," Weicker said, "please give (information) to the subcommittee that it has a basis in fact, not just because (budget director) David Stockman has to get X amount out of the SSA so he can give X amount to the Defense Department."

OMB spokesman Edwin Dale had "absolutely no comment" on Weicker's charges.

"There clearly has been as scare campaign put on by some people about closing of offices which is simply not true," Dale said. "The automation of offices should result in fewer personnel."

Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., revealed an internal Social Security memo predicting layoffs could result in an increased error rate and shifting workers to other offices, and would require considerable re-training.

A Social Security spokesman said the memo was written in response to a different proposal — to cut 19,000 employees over three years — and did not address the proposed 17,000-worker cut over five years.
