Tax shelters mean billion dollar disappearing act

Editor's Note: Sheltering income from taxation is virtually a time honored tradition in America, and not one the Internal Revenue Service necessarily disapproves with. In today's era of tax protesters, however, new questions are arising over what is a legal tax shelter and what is an illegal tax scam.

There is a little red tape, but what it comes down to is this: On paper you're poor as a pauper but you live like a king. You own nothing, so there is nothing to assess. You make nothing, so you pay no taxes. The "trust" you set up collects all your salary. The expenses are all deductible. The people who sold it say it is perfectly legal.

David White, shown posing with some of his tax literature, is one of several promoters the Internal Revenue Service has prevented from distributing material which means they would be in a lower tax bracket. And since most children earn very little, their tax on the dividends also is low. An "irrevocable trust" cannot be broken until 10 years and one day after it is established. In another Patriots' case, the government secured an injunction last year stopping Gerard Savoie of Sulphur, La., from assisting the Louisiana Caucus Club in the preparation of fraudulent withholding statements.

right to be wrong" cost them thousands of dollars. Dan McMorris met a Patriot organizer on a construction job. The couple joined the Patriots and allowed Sugarman and an associate to fill out their tax forms.

THE MCMORRISES, WHO TESTIFIED for the government at last fall's injunction hearing, were not alone. The activities of the Virginia Patriots led the IRS to assess penalties on 27 people — many workers at Newport News Shipbuilding. The key tax principle in the Virginia Patriots plan argues that receiving a salary from an employer is simply an exchange of property — labor for wages.

People attending meetings of White's "Minnesota Society for Educated Citizens" were urged to send the IRS letters modeled after ones contained in the "Patriots' Kit." The kit showed how to eliminate taxable income by listing occupations as "contractors" and fraudulently reporting a business loss, the IRS claimed.

POINTS out the IRS does not oppose all trusts. For instance, parents wanting to fund a child's education may set up a "revocable trust." Things like dividend-paying stocks are put into the trust. The parents would pay tax on the dividends as they accumulate but the offspring would pay no tax when the money ultimately was drawn out.

Another LEGAL TRUST is an "irrevocable trust." Parents would put stocks into the plan and again allow dividends to accumulate. But as dividends are paid the child pays the tax. The advantage is that the parents are not included in their income.

Two Koreas search for successors

By Michael Ross
United Press International

SEOUL — For the first time, North and South Korea are simultaneously confronted by uncertain succession scenarios — a coincidence that could create political instability on the Korean peninsula.

In the South, President Chun Doo-hwan's plans to pick a successor before his constitutionally limited single term expires in 1988 have been complicated by emergence of a new opposition party led by dissident politicians Kim Dae-jung and Kim Young Sam.

Many South Koreans fear the presence of a strong opposition could cause Chun to reconsider his plans. An added uncertainty is the lack of an obvious successor.

In the North, the heir is more apparent. Kim Il Sung, the emerald dictator who has presided over a chillingly Orwellian regime since Korea was divided after World War II, plans to transfer power to his son, Kim Jong Il. But when it will happen and what will follow are unknown.

Despite enormous differences between the nations, the successions are linked because each side views the other as a security threat — and sees that threat to justify its authoritarian controls.

Although Chun has made political reforms, many remain skeptical that he will keep his promise to step down in 1988. The doubts are fed by last year's assassination of Chun's predecessor, Park Chung Hee, was slain by an assassin's bullet. His predecessor, Syngman Rhee, was forced out by civil unrest.

"No Korean leader in the past 500 years has ever graciously surrendered anything," said a Western diplomat. "So of course people are skeptical."

Still, Chun has good reasons for stepping down. He has said so often that he will leave in 1988 that to break his pledge would entail an embarrassing loss of face for himself and the military that backs him.

"For the military, it is a question of honor," said a political analyst.

"Chun would have to have very persuasive reasons for them to Dissident leader Kim Young Sam concurs. "If Chun continues, he risks meeting the same fate as his predecessors."

Another reason for Chun to keep his promise is that several months after his term expires, Seoul is to host the 1988 Olympics.

For South Korea, hosting the Olympics is a symbol of acceptance in the world. Any attempt by Chun to remain in office would almost certainly spoil the victory and invite a Soviet boycott.

However, some diplomats believe there is one reason that could force Chun to stay on, or at least give him a pretext to do so — a sudden increase in the threat from the North.

Setting up that threat is difficult because of North Korea's erratic behavior. However, South Korean officials argue the history of provocations by the North — from invasion tunnels dug under the DMZ to a bomb that killed more than a score of South Korean officials in Burma 18 months ago — show the North is still trying to destabilize the South.

Little is known about the North, which 40 years after Korea's division remains one of the world's most hermetically sealed nations. But in recent years it has become clear that Kim Il Sung is preparing to step aside in favor of his 42-year-old son.

About the younger Kim little is known except that he hates the West and reportedly permits his hair to grow.

However, there have been rumors of opposition to the dynastic succession within the North Korean hierarchy and speculation that Kim Jong Il may also not be the best of heirs.

Water level low, but race still on

By Kathy Gormus
Herold Reporter

Competitors in Sunday's Hockanum River Canoe Race will not have to brave the rapids behind Economy Electric on Oakland Street this year because of low water, the race coordinator said today.

The rapids — which usually provide the most excitement for spectators and the most frustration for canoeists — are impassable because the water is so low, coordinator Lee Watkins said.

"Barring rain, everyone's going to have to carry around the rapids," he said. But, he added, "the water level is going to rise in the next few days."

Weather forecasts call for a chance of showers on Friday and Saturday, but no significant accumulation, Watkins said.

The low water has prompted a number of people to call Watkins asking whether the race would be held at all, he said.

"We are going to have a race," he stressed.

While the absence of the rapids might deter some race enthusiasts from entering, the river should provide a number of other challenges for entrants, Watkins said.

"The water level of the rest of the river is higher, he said, but rocks and other obstacles, and a low water velocity should keep the race from becoming boring for either participants or spectators.

"It won't have the dramatics of the rapids, but it's going to present a great technical challenge to the canoeists," Watkins said. "Anybody who can read the water well is going to have a big advantage."

The race is scheduled to begin at 8:30 a.m. alongside the Steak Club Restaurant near the Vernon-Manchester town line. The race will conclude a 2 miles later along Burnside Avenue in East Hartford.

Watkins said the best places for watching the race should be along New State Road and Adams Street.

A number of marked hiking trails along the river should provide ample choices for spectators, he said.

This year's race will feature canoeists from 13 states. Watkins said, "The computer station should be able to generate results within one minute after the last canoeist crosses the finish line, he said.

In past years, as many as 20 minutes have passed before results were posted, he said.

So far, 25 people have registered for the race, Watkins said. Canoeists can enter the morning of the race, and Watkins said he expects about 80 canoeists to race.

A nice day could bring out 100 canoeists, he said.

The race is in its ninth year. Awards will be given for the first three places of each of the 12 classes.

The woes of Wham

Wham's historic concert tour in China was marred by an unusual incident. Officials say a backup musician with the pop group stabbed himself in the stomach and barged into the cockpit of a Chinese airliner, forcing the domestic flight to return to Peking.

Wham members George Michael and Andrew Ridgeley were not aboard. A British Embassy spokesman said witnesses to Monday's incident reported the man, a Portuguese musician, had to be restrained after forcing his way into the cockpit.

The plane returned to Peking and unloaded the man without incident. Wham and an entourage of more than 100 people arrived in China last week for two unprecedented rock concerts.

Superintendent opposes 'family life' proposal

By Bill Yingling
Herold Reporter

School Superintendent James P. Kennedy said Tuesday he opposes pending legislation that would mandate family-life education in all Connecticut public schools.

Kennedy said he doubts the measure will pass the Legislature this year. But even if it were to pass, he said, it would have little impact on the Manchester schools.

The bill, which would require all public schools to develop a family-life education program for kindergarten through 12th-grade students, passed the General Assembly's Education Committee on Monday.

The bill is now scheduled to be reviewed by the Appropriations Committee. It seeks $240,000 with which the state would hire a coordinator and a staff. In turn, they would train public school personnel around the state to develop and teach family life education.

Kennedy said he is opposed to any state mandate on a family life curriculum.

"THE STATE," he said, would have to develop methods to enforce the law, which would involve additional regulations. "And regulations can be very restrictive," he said.

But the superintendent said he did not object to the state offering incentives—such as funds for staff and materials—to implement family-life programs.

Kennedy said that if the bill is approved by the Legislature, the effect will be minimal in Manchester.

Town officials fete DiRosa

Peter DiRosa has jumped from the fire into the frying pan. DiRosa, who resigned from the Board of Directors on April 2, was the guest of honor at an informal dinner Tuesday night at the Birch Mountain Inn.

Among the gifts DiRosa received was a chef-quality frying pan. DiRosa and several other men in politics are taking cooking lessons.

Another gift was a transcript of a portion of the April 2 meeting of the directors at which several directors lauded DiRosa for his service to the town.

Mayor Barbara Weinberg, master of ceremonies at the dinner, remarked that politicians seldom win such high praise until they leave office.

DiRosa has vowed to return to politics someday, however. About 25 people, mostly directors and others involved in politics or government, attended the dinner.

Arts Council plans brunch

The Manchester Arts Council will host an arts brunch on Sunday, June 2, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. to benefit Cheney Hall. Plans for the brunch were described by program chairman Diane Morrison at the council's monthly meeting Monday night at Lincoln Center.

Cheney panel seeks space

By Alex Girelli
Herold Reporter

Members of the building subcommittee of the Cheney Hall Foundation tried Tuesday night to find a location for performing their rites.

But the subcommittee was hampered by not knowing just how the storage space must be arranged to meet the group's ceremonial requirements.

It will be difficult to find that much space available in the building, subcommittee members agreed during their meeting in Lincoln Center. The most likely storage place mentioned was the loft in the highest level of the hall.

Donald Kuehl, a subcommittee member, said he will try to find out as soon as possible exactly what the group's storage needs are.

Subcommittee members said they do not know if the fact that there are dressing rooms planned for the basement of Cheney Hall might reduce the amount of storage space the Masonic group would need.

The group might be interested in renting the hall for about six rehearsals and six presentations a year, and for a few other occasions, members of the subcommittee said.

Kuehl said he would arrange a meeting with a representative of the Masons to get further details.

At the subcommittee meeting Tuesday, Edward Breen of Malmfield Associates, architects for renovation of the hall, showed plans for the three levels of the hall.

Few changes are planned in the main floor, but the stairs will be moved forward several feet. Old stairs will be removed and replaced with new ones and will be insulated and resurfaced.

But a less vocal group of parents has supported the course either through letters to the school board or through the school board meetings.

KENNEDY SAID HE BELIEVES THE bill will not pass the Appropriations Committee because both Democratic and Republican law-makers are waiting until next year to spend large amounts of money instituting new education programs.

"Anything with money attached to it probably will not be passed," he said.

An eighth-grade health course which is in the family life curriculum has been the center of a controversy since November in Manchester.

A group of about 20 parents have protested about the town health course, which is taught at Bennett and Iling junior high schools.

But a less vocal group of parents has supported the course either through letters to the school board or through the school board meetings.

One problem the subcommittee encountered is that a large cooling unit will have to be located on the grounds near the hall, and will have to be hidden in some sort of brick structure for aesthetic reasons.

Some subcommittee members felt the theatrical work area planned may be too small and the "green room" — a waiting room for people about to perform — may be too large.

One possibility mentioned was eliminating a makeup room, devoting its space to the workshop, and combining the makeup room with the green room.

The size of the fly loft will be increased.

The biggest changes will be in the basement. Most of the basement floor will be lowered about 18 inches.

The basement will accommodate a kitchen for outside caterers, a lavatory, public toilet room, an assembly room which could double as a rehearsal room, the green room and makeup room, dressing rooms and the workshop.

Few changes would be needed in the loft. Some structural work would be done on roof trusses, ducts would be installed, storage for scenery — and possibly also for costumes and props — would be provided.

Foster testified that he once watched the informant engage in what appeared to be a drug deal, but did not collect any firm evidence. Foster admitted that he spun a tale from that incident to scare the informant into cooperating.

Foster said that several hours after the Feb. 22 raid at the Thibodeau service station, he tried to talk James Thibodeau into informing on other dealers during a discussion at the FBI's Hartford headquarters.

"I can be your business partner," Foster said he told Thibodeau. "Is there anything you can do for me? I don't know what it is."

Foster testified that Thibodeau then told him about a man the FBI believes to have been Thibodeau's drug partner. Foster testified that Thibodeau also referred to a Manchester-based "boastload-quality importer" of marijuana.

Foster testified that Thibodeau said he knew of a group of dealers based east of Hartford who were expecting a 40,000-pound boatload of marijuana to arrive in Connecticut in the next week.

Foster's testimony indicated that James Thibodeau's brother Wayne Thibodeau was not seen by the FBI as having a major role in the alleged deal on Feb. 22. Foster testified that he arrested Wayne Thibodeau because he was the last person to

Milk pulled from shelves
SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — Inspectors trying to determine the source of the nation's largest outbreak of salmonella food poisoning are checking for possible causes. A state official said today.

Almost 2,500 cases of food poisoning and two deaths have been reported.

Jewel Cos. Inc. officials Tuesday indefinitely closed their Hillfarm Dairy and recalled all milk from its Jewel and Eisner food stores after a second brand of milk processed at the dairy was suspected of salmonella contamination.

Officials of the Centers for Disease Control, Food and Drug Administration, state agencies and experts on milk sanitation and production are looking for the source of the salmonella, said Chet June of the Illinois Department of Public Health.

Infant dies of heart attack
ALBANY, N.Y. — The infant daughter of a colon cancer patient died of a heart attack when every organ in her tiny body began to fail three weeks after her birth.

The child, Lillian Kathy Cedeno, delivered three months prematurely by Caesarean section on March 15, died of a heart attack Tuesday night, her doctors said.

Dr. Allan Geis, assistant professor of neonatology at Albany Medical Center Hospital said the baby's pulmonary problem, which started at birth, was "relentless in its progression," causing the baby to increasingly depend on a respirator and other artificial means. The lung problems, which doctors said are often associated with premature births, contributed to liver and kidney failure and eventually to the heart attack.

The mother, Lillian Cedeno, 21, remained in critical but stable condition, although hospital officials reported a "mild deterioration" in her overall condition. She was incorrectly injected with an anti-cancer drug that has left her paralyzed, in a coma and near death for more than a month.

"The Cedeno family was 'obviously distraught'" by the baby's death, but a hospital official declined to provide further details on the family's reaction.

U.S. offers grant for oil
KHARTOUM, Sudan — The United States in a significant show of support for Sudan's new government, offered a $40 million grant to finance oil imports and relieve acute fuel shortages throughout the country, the Sudan News Agency said today.

SUNA said David Shin, the U.S. charge d'affaires in Khartoum, met Tuesday with Sudan's new leader, Abdul Raham Sywar al-Dahab, and offered the emergency grant to help the new government meet its short-term oil needs.

Al-Dahab, the armed forces commander who led Saturday's coup, on Tuesday night named a 15-member Military Council, which scheduled meetings today with Sudan's trade unions.

The unions organized a general strike that undermined the administration of deposed President Jaafar Numeiry and set the stage for the coup, but have threatened to resume work stoppages unless there is rapid progress toward a restoration of civilian rule.

The new military council replaces a 12-man junta, including three civilians, that was set up immediately after the coup.

Rape case takes new twist
CHICAGO — New physical evidence casts doubt on the testimony of a New Hampshire woman who has recanted an 8-year-old charge of rape, sources say.

But an attorney for Gary Dotson, 28, who has been imprisoned for the rape conviction for six years, said he will use other scientific and laboratory tests requested by prosecutors are inconclusive.

Carleen Crowell Webb, of Jaffrey, N.H., testified last week in Cook County Circuit Court she lied in 1977 as a 16-year-old girl when she accused Gary Dotson, 28, of Country Club Hills, of rape.

Webb, who said she concocted the story because she feared she was pregnant with her boyfriend's child, testified last week that she was only having sex with her boyfriend in July 1977.

Two Chicago newspapers Tuesday quoted sources close to the investigation as saying that new lab tests taken last week indicate the traces of blood and semen detected in 1977 were not compatible with samples of blood and saliva taken from Webb's former boyfriend.

Refund wait may be long
WASHINGTON — The IRS announced Tuesday that it expects to pay at least $200 million in interest this year to taxpayers whose refunds are delayed beyond June 1.

Agency spokesman Steve Pyrek said the IRS is racing the clock to process tax returns, exerting "every effort" to get them done before interest payments must be made.

As of April 5, the IRS had processed 36.1 million tax returns, compared with 45.3 million done by the same time last year. But the number of refunds that have been certified is down 24 percent from last year, Pyrek said.

Publicity over trial court's main concern

By MILLY McLean
United Press International

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Intense publicity about the high society attempted murder trial of New Yorker Claus von Bulow may prompt a Rhode Island court to sequester the 16-member jury for as long as two months.

The judge in von Bulow's retrial told a courtroom packed with potential jurors Tuesday that they should be prepared to be away from their families in a hotel room paid for by the state throughout the trial.

Superior Court Judge Corinne Grande did not rule on the issue during the second day of jury selection, but she said isolating the jury "may become necessary." Jurors in the first trial were sequestered only during deliberations.

Von Bulow, 58, of New York, a Danish-born financier and socialite, was convicted in 1982 of twice trying to kill his multimillionaire wife, Martha "Sunny" von Bulow. The alleged weapon was insulin injections; the location, their "summer cottage" — the Clarendon Court mansion in Newport, the time, the Christmas holidays in 1978 and 1980.

The Rhode Island Supreme Court overturned the convictions last year on constitutional grounds. Mrs. von Bulow remains in a New York "manic hospital," where she has been since 1980.

"It may become necessary to sequester the jury," Grande told the jury pool for von Bulow's retrial. "We're estimating the length of the trial at somewhere near eight weeks."

She noted, however, it could be even longer. The court is "notoriously poor" at predicting the length of a trial, she said.

"Bear in mind, no decision has been made," Grande said. "But I thought I had better sample your feelings..." Twenty-eight of the 40 potential jurors in the courtroom at the time said they would not want to be sequestered.

Grande slashed the potential jury pool to 61 Tuesday and allowed attorneys to begin questioning the first 16 people individually.

Jury selection was to continue today and extend into next week.

A pensive von Bulow, dressed in casual sport coat and tie, spent most of the day leaning back in his chair. Occasionally he scribbled notes. Sometimes he mumbled to his lawyer. Other times he scratched his chin.

But when individual questioning began late Tuesday, he leaned forward and peered intensely at the initial group of 16. His well-defined jaw stuck out and his balding head fell back.

Assistant Attorney General Marc DeStato politely inquired about the potential jurors' marital status, occupation and experience with doctors. hypodermic needles and hypoglycemia. He had only begun when the second day ended.

Jurors are likely to be questioned repeatedly about their medical background in light of technical testimony expected.

The prosecution claims Mrs. von Bulow went into a coma because her hypoglycemic state was aggravated by insulin. The defense claims heavy alcohol and drug use helped trigger the coma.

The judge read jurors a long list of potential witnesses and others who will be mentioned in the trial. In addition to the von Bulow family and servants, the list was heavily dominated by doctors from all over the Eastern United States and as far away as England.

Also Tuesday, the judge and attorneys for von Bulow, the state and the media agreed to allow any potential jurors who are hesitant about answering questions about being crime victims to be questioned away from reporters.

Baker remains cautious

By Norman D. Sondler

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — Praising the leadership of the Japanese prime minister, the White House signaled its desire to avert an all-out trade war between the two countries but indicated promises are no substitute for results.

The administration reacted with a strong show of support Tuesday to a new bid by Yasuhiro Nakasone to lower the barriers to U.S. imports and persuade the Japanese people to buy American.

President Reagan, vacationing at his mountain-top ranch, was described by chief of staff Donald Regan as "pleasantly surprised" by the Nakasone statement Tuesday.

"It helps in solving the problem," Regan said.

Lauding Nakasone for "an unprecedented appeal to the Japanese people to embark on the path to free trade," Regan said, "I think it could be quite persuasive because of the unusual substance of the plea."

Treasury Secretary James Baker, more cautious in assessing the ultimate outcome of the latest move by Nakasone, said the true test of the market-opening measures announced in Tokyo would be whether or not they are implemented.

On Capitol Hill, lawmakers — many of whom have accused the Japanese of being too quick to offer promises of telecommunications equipment. But he also insisted "specific and concrete progress... is needed urgently" in that and three other areas now under discussion: medical equipment and pharmaceuticals, electronics and forest products.

Regan conceded the trade liberalization package announced by Nakasone, which provides for the development of an action plan over the next few months for increasing U.S. imports, contained "few new or immediate market-opening measures."

The importance, as judged by the administration, lay not so much in the substance of what Nakasone had to say, but the manner in which the appeal was made.

"This is the first time that there's been a free-wheeling television statement by the prime minister in which he pointed out to his own people the need for them to change their habits," Regan said.

"Obviously, this is pretty courageous action by the Japanese prime minister to stand up (to the issue)," Regan added. "He's risking a lot politically here."

However, Regan also attributed Nakasone's courage to pressure from Washington, contending passage of non-binding resolutions in the House and Senate directing Regan to retaliate if the Japanese did not open their markets "had a jarring effect on many people in Japan."

Regan indicated Congress should now cool its protectionist fervor in a recognition "that progress is being made."

Groups rally to protect benefits

By Thomas Ferraro

WASHINGTON — A coalition of citizen groups is accusing President Reagan of reneging on his promise to America's elderly not to cut their Social Security benefits.

The campaign estimated the average Social Security recipient would lose $1,600 over the next five years under the compromise budget plan adopted Thursday by Regan and Senate Republicans.

The losses would come from reduced cost-of-living increases as well as higher monthly premiums charged by Medicare health insurance.

Under current projections, inflation adjustments for Social Security would be cut in half — to a proposed minimum guaranteed annual increase of 2 percent next year — instead of reflecting the nearly 4 percent inflation rate.

The National Council on Senior Citizens issued a five-page list of statements by Regan during the past six months in which he said he would not reduce Social Security benefits.

Among them was the following statement made in an interview with Human Events, a conservative magazine, and published on Dec. 6, 1984:

"Well, I have to say my pledge during the campaign carried with it the clear implication that present Social Security beneficiaries would get their cost-of-living increases as well. I made that pledge and so, therefore, I feel bound by it," Regan said.

The council said the "statements make obvious the president's about-face on Social Security."

The campaign is mailing congressmen "birthday cards," which show a caricature of Regan and a member of Congress cutting a cost-of-living string supporting a birthday card.

Inside is the message: "Let's celebrate Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid... not destroy them."

Families of MIA face last chapter of lengthy drama

HONOLULU (UPI) — Military officials identified six servicemen killed in the Vietnam War and the widow of one urged Hanoi to release the remains of other fallen men so their families "can have their hearts at ease."

In Tampa, Fla., Chesnut's wife, Patti, said, "I didn't know what to say 20 years ago. I still don't know what to say. I'm very happy we got his remains back — the last chapter."

Killian and Harris were killed in North Vietnam. Sherman and Arroyo-Baez are the first American servicemen whose remains have been recovered after being captured and held in captivity in South Vietnam, the Pacific Command said.

"After 16 years, you figure he's over there and he's going to stay over there," Sherman's brother, David, 42, said. "You don't expect it when they say they're bringing your brother home."

The cave-in that Sherman was notified in June 1967 that Sherman was missing and two months later that he had been captured. The government said he died in 1968 and in 1970 two fellow prisoners who had been released told the family they had been with Sherman in captivity when he died of malnutrition.

A statement issued by the Pacific Command said, "We appreciate this return of remains and, combined with the recent Vietnamese agreement to hold a minimum of six technical meetings per year, we hope it marks the beginning of the fulfillment of the Vietnamese pledge to accelerate their search efforts."

Pacific Command officials had announced last month the Vietnamese government had turned over the remains of only five men, but the Central Identification Laboratory in Honolulu determined six bodies were contained in the shipment.

Pacific Command officials said United States and Vietnam have agreed to meet in Hanoi for three days beginning April 17 for discussions on the possible return of more bodies.

Rescue workers dig in the sand Tuesday after two boys were trapped in a cave-in at the Davis Sand Co. in St. Louis, and one of the boys died in the freak accident. Sand shifted burying two boys. Darren Ellis, 12, was rescued but Timothy Murphy was pronounced dead at the scene.

One youth survives cave-in

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — A 12-year-old boy survived more than four hours buried under the sand beneath Ellis, who was trapped to his chin when rescuers arrived, said Deputy Fire Chief George Jenkinson.

About 60 police and fire fighters began digging at the mound. Rescuers uncovered Ellis to his shoulders and gave him an oxygen mask while they moved cautiously in freeing him from the shifting sand.

"You just pray to God and work your butt off in times like this," said Fire Capt. Robert Funk. "You don't think about time."

Jenkinson credited sand company employee John Hograte with saving the boy's life.

"He kept the sand from around his head until we got here," Jenkinson said.

Hograte, a fork lift operator, said he ran to the mound when he heard screams.

"I heard the one boy yell," Hograte said. "I just went up there and his head was just about covered up. I just tried to keep the sand off him. I told him everything was going to be all right."

Ellis talked briefly to paramedics as he was put in an ambulance, saying he was not in pain and wanted an orange soda.

The boy was taken to Cardinal-Glennon Hospital, where he was listed in good condition.

The other boys escaped unharmed, officials said.

LA's Bradley has easy election win

By Niki Cervantes
United Press International

LOS ANGELES — Tom Bradley, basking in the success of the Summer Olympics and having been considered as a possible Democratic vice presidential candidate, breezed to victory in his bid for an unprecedented fourth term as mayor in the nation's second largest city.

Bradley, one of the nation's most prominent black officials, who narrowly missed being elected California governor two years ago, led City Councilman John Ferraro by 48 percent to 31 percent with more than 90 percent of the votes counted.

Only about 35 percent of the city's 3.7 million voters — the lowest turnout in several years — cast votes.

"I can rightfully claim an historic victory, an election for the fourth time with the greatest margin in the history of this city," Bradley told cheering supporters Tuesday night.

"You have shown that this city elects its leaders not based on color or sex or where one was born or where one worships, but rather on the content of one's character and the performance of that individual," Bradley said, adding, "L.A. elects the best nation into the 21st Century."

The mayor, who was interviewed by Walter Mondale as a finalist for the Democratic nomination for vice president, appeared confident throughout the campaign.

Bradley dined with his family in a hotel suite and calmly watched a telecast of the Los Angeles

New York honors Wallenberg

NEW YORK (UPI) — The city has honored the man who saved thousands of Jews during the Nazi Holocaust by renaming a seven-block stretch of First Avenue as Raoul Wallenberg Walk.

"It's not clear whether we're renaming this walk in his honor or his memory," Mayor Edward Koch said Tuesday at the christening ceremony of the stretch, which begins on the west side of First Avenue from 42nd Street to 49th Street.

"Wallenberg vanished into Soviet 'protective custody' in 1945 and spent the rest of his life in Russian jails. His fate was hidden by bureaucratic silence broken only by a cryptic announcement in 1957 that he had died in jail 10 years before — a claim rejected by Western jurists and investigators.

There were persistent reports that the Swedish diplomat survived in the Soviet Gulag until at least 1980.

Koch called on the new Soviet regime to "take whatever steps to ascertain whether Wallenberg is still alive."

By traveling freely to Budapest on business and helping confirm reports of the Nazi "final solution," Wallenberg qualified for special work by the Refugee Board and the World Jewish Congress — to save as many Jews as possible."

Leader boycotts meetings

By David Zenlon
United Press International

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Prime Minister Rashid Karami, frustrated by relentless Christian-Muslim battles in Sidon, said today he will boycott Cabinet meetings until actions are taken to stop the fighting in the southern port.

Karami, who joined two others ministers in boycotting the Cabinet, said his move did not mean he had presented his resignation to Lebanon's year-old national unity Cabinet. "I don't think we have reached such a decision," he said.

Police said fighting between renegade Christian militiamen and Palestinian-backed Muslim forces in Sidon today killed at least one person and wounded 14 others. Residents described it as some of the most intense artillery battles since the fighting erupted three weeks ago.

The Cabinet agreed earlier this month to send Lebanese army troops to the port, 24 miles south of Beirut, to serve as a buffer between warring Christian and Muslim militias.

The troops have been unable to move to the city because of inadequate equipment and objections by Justice Minister Nabih Berri, leader of the Muslim Amal militia, to the use of government troops in the city.

"Sidon is essential for the Lebanese peace process, and as the Cabinet has not been able to deal with the matter in a fruitful manner, I have decided that I will no longer attend Cabinet meetings until all previous decisions and resolutions are implemented," Karami said.

"If we cannot achieve what we went through the Cabinet, then I see no justification in continuing," Karami said.

Karami said he will "continue my contacts with the parties involved to bring about an impromptu resolution of previous decisions without which there is no point continuing anything else."

His move presented a new crisis for Lebanon's fragile unity government, formed last April to quell sectarian fighting that will stretch into its 10th year this week.

Shortly after Karami announced his decision, Education Minister Solim Hussein — himself a former prime minister — said he was in "full solidarity and complete agreement" with Karami.

Tourism Minister Walid Jumblatt and Berri have been boycotting Cabinet meetings since the start of the year, and political sources said Karami's move could lead to the collapse of the Syrian-engineered Cabinet of Christian and Muslim ministers. "Things are falling apart, and fast," said one government source, who declined to be named.

At least six Christian villages east and southeast of Sidon were pounded with heavy artillery, provoking Christian militias to launch a similar barrage on Sidon and nearby Muslim areas, residents said.

There were unconfirmed reports today of an Israeli naval attack on Lebanese targets around Sidon.

Keeping the Republican door open for 1986

If Nancy Johnson thinks pressure from the White House to vote for the MX missile was something she "ain't seen nothing yet," in the words of Ronald Reagan, as Republicans back home continue to work on her to run for governor next year — in case.

The "in case" means they want Congressman Johnson to jump in if Sen. Lowell Weicker turns them down.

The GOP's chances aren't any better than Reagan's were in trying to get to Mrs. Johnson. But leaders are trying.

The party is spending $30,000 on a poll of some 1,500 state voters to see what they think about 1986 politics. Originally, the poll was scheduled for earlier this month and should have been done by now.

It was delayed because the Republican National Committee, which is footing two-thirds of the bill, wanted to beef up the section on Nancy Johnson. So Market Opinion Research of Detroit, which will do the survey any week now, wanted to see how Republicans "enhanced" that part of it, probing for voter reaction to the lady from New Britain.

WILL THE POLL turn up much more than the Republicans don't already know about her? Not likely. But it will give her party leadership more ammunition in persuading her to stay loose until

Capitol Comments
Bob Conrad

The 1986 picture settles down. That campaign has been going on for months. The poll figures, however unsurprising they are, will be the new wrinkle.

A separate survey which was publicized last weekend shows that Mrs. Johnson would also be hot stuff as a GOP candidate for the U.S. Senate against U.S. Sen. Chris Dodd next year.

Mount Vernon Associates of Westport found that 37 percent of the Republican leaders it asked said she should be the party's candidate to challenge Dodd. On another question, however, 65 percent of those same GOP wheels said the Democratic senator could not be beaten by a Republican in 1986.

Mrs. Johnson's vote of confidence compared, in Mount Vernon's poll, with the 10 percent who said

Dodd's opponent should be U.S. Rep. Stewart McKinney of Westport. He was first elected to the House in 1970. Some party people say a term in the Senate would be a fitting cap to his career in Washington.

McKinney, by the way, may be the first time in his eight successful elections he faced with a woman Democratic candidate if he seeks reelection in 1986. State Rep. Chris Niedecker of Fairfield is cranking up to declare her candidacy for her party's nomination. She expects to have something to say about it next week.

REPUBLICAN LEADERS from state Chairman Tom D'Amore on down want to be open about the U.S. Senate nomination next year because they are fascinated by the potential of a new kid on the political block. He is Francis "Bud" Mullen of New London, until recently chief of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration in Washington.

The one-time cop in New London and then longtime FBI agent says he's interested in the GOP nomination for Congress in the state's Second District. D'Amore says that's fine, but he is asking Mullen to keep his options open so he could be available for the Senate run too. Mullen apparently is willing, maybe even more than that, to consider the Senate nomination.

Connecticut In Brief

Police defend actions

NEW BRITAIN — Police stood by their actions and defended themselves against an allegation that they could have prevented an Easter Sunday shooting spree that injured 10 people and wounded the suspect.

Police Chief Clifford J. Willis said Tuesday critics have "misrepresented the facts" in the case.

Peter Boria, 22, of New Britain, accused of firing four shotgun blasts through the front window of the La Riviera Domino Club early Sunday morning, was being held on $200,000 bond at the Morgan Street Detention Center in Hartford after his arraignment Tuesday in New Britain Superior Court.

The 10 people wounded in the shooting spree were treated for shotgun pellet wounds and released.

Susan Medina of New Britain, wife of one of the victims, said police could have prevented the shooting spree at the club by picking up Boria when police found him involved in another shooting incident three hours earlier. She claimed police told her husband to wait until 8 a.m. Sunday when detectives returned to file a complaint in the shooting.

Fire disrupts redevelopment

MERIDEN — The city's downtown redevelopment plan crumbled to ashes when a fire officials suspect was arson gutted a building and left 30 people homeless, officials said.

The fire destroyed the West Main Street structure Sunday casting doubt on a $34 million downtown redevelopment plan, officials said.

Building inspector Albert Giacco said an inspection of the building cannot be conducted until the demolition crew cleans out the debris. The work was scheduled to resume Wednesday morning and by noon West Main Street may be opened to traffic, he said.

A wrecking crew began dismantling the top floor of the four-story building at 50 West Main Street Tuesday afternoon, but Giacco said he would not know until Wednesday or Thursday whether the valuable facade can be allowed to remain standing.

Meriden Fire Marshal William Kroil said he found evidence that a flammable liquid may have been used to start the fire in a shed in an alley. The Police, however, said they have no concrete suspects.

O'Neill backs UConn branch

TORRINGTON — Still saying he has not made up his mind whether to run for re-election, Gov. William A. O'Neill said what closely resembled a campaign swing through the western part of the state.

Meeting Tuesday with 100 students at the University of Connecticut Torrington branch, O'Neill said he would fight to keep the branch open.

"I think there is a moral commitment to keep the school here," O'Neill said.

It was the first of a series of trips the governor plans to make into the hinterland, trying to get "a perspective" on how the people feel about issues. He said those feelings might not filter through the crush of legislators, lobbyists and agency staff members at the Capitol.

State installs detectors

HARTFORD — The state has installed smoke detectors in buildings housing mentally retarded people at the Southbury Training School, but officials said.

Reports from the State Department of Mental Retardation indicate the available work is inadequate to meet fire protection standards.

Gov. William A. O'Neill said Monday the emergency detector installation was carried out under a directive he issued after learning that 900 Southbury residents live in buildings that have never been protected by smoke detectors.

Investigation panel names counsel

HARTFORD (UPI) — A special legislative committee looking into the state's criminal justice system has selected a former Superior Court judge as counsel for its investigative study.

The 14-member committee agreed Tuesday on a vote to appoint Francis J. McCarthy of Wethersfield as counsel for the study, which will examine the chief state attorney's office, state police and grand jury system.

McCarthy, 66, a former legislator, Superior Court judge and retired general counsel of the Travelers Insurance Co., will be paid $100 per hour as counsel, a rate committee members agreed was a bargain.

"That seems to be a very fair hourly rate for an experienced attorney," said Senate Majority Leader Reginald J. Smith. R-New Hartford, co-chairman of the special committee.

"I find Frank to be very qualified, impartial, well-spoken," said Rep. Michael D. Byahuk, D-Hartford, who served with Smith on a four-member subcommittee that recommended McCarthy for the post.

Auditors criticize state's provisional hiring

By Mark A. Dupuis
United Press International

HARTFORD — State agencies are violating laws governing temporary and provisional hirings in a practice that erodes the integrity of the civil service system for filling jobs based on merit, state auditors said Tuesday.

The auditors, in a special report on temporary, provisional and emergency hirings, said that as of their examination, at least 20 workers in 69 agencies were working in non-permanent jobs longer than allowed by civil service laws.

The auditors said they found violations of laws limiting provisional appointments, prohibiting temporary appointments to permanent positions and governing emergency hiring of employees.

"We've got a civil service system that erodes the integrity of the merit system," said Auditor Henry J. Becker Jr.

Auditor Leo V. Donohue said the examination showed that hirings without merit examinations, which are intended by law to be exceptions to general practices, have become a routine practice by state agencies.

"In our opinion, the continued use of the practices described in this report erodes the integrity of the merit system," the auditors' report said.

Donohue said the auditors found that some employees held temporary or other non-permanent status for seven or eight years without taking an exam, making it virtually impossible for someone else to compete for the job.

Donohue also said agencies promote workers before they give promotional exams, which eliminates the urgency for such an examination.

The Department of Administrative Services, which includes the state personnel division, said the auditors' report overestimated the magnitude of the problem, noting that the department longer than six months without a civil service test.

State Personnel Director Sandra

Bilion said her agency has sought legislation to address the problems but the Legislature has rejected the bill as recently as this year.

Bilion also said the number of employees in permanent positions is small compared to the size of the total state workforce of about 45,000 employees.

The auditors' report said personnel officials blamed the inability to schedule civil service exams as rapidly as needed on a lack of staff, insufficient automation, litigation, lack of advance notice from agencies of expected vacancies and other factors.

"All of the reasons that they give are within the authority of DAS to correct," Donohue said, noting the agency underperforms its budget by thousands of dollars in past years that could have been used to address the problems.

Donohue and Becker said they had no indication that the employees in jobs longer than allowed were hired on the basis of politics. "They didn't seem to be, but how do you know?" Becker said. "Chances are there probably are some in there."

The auditors also criticized the legislation sought by the department, saying it would amend the law to allow the current practices rather than dealing with the cause of the current shortcomings.

"What are we going to do, have a bunch of agencies that are floating around the state that every time there's a statutory provision they don't like they get it changed?" Becker asked.

The auditors said the problems with temporary, provisional and emergency hirings were additional evidence to support their longstanding recommendation that the Department of Administrative Services should be broken up.

For several years, the auditors have recommended in their annual report to the legislature that the department's personnel and public works divisions should be established as separate agencies.

DOT hearing continues

By Lydo Phillips
United Press International

NEWINGTON — A state investigator defended his findings of fraud in the state's paving program during a hearing aimed at showing he did not have or try to get all the facts.

Special counsel Mark S. Shipman questioned investigator Antonio J. Lupino Tuesday about instances where he did not independently verify witnesses' statements or corroborate information provided by a DOT investigator assigned to the case.

"It was the whole picture," said Lupino, who said his 30 years as a criminal investigator for the Internal Revenue Service and then the chief state attorney's office made him expert in assessing such data.

"I would feel very, very comfortable in court," Lupino said under questioning by Shipman during a Department of Transportation hearing into allegations the state was cheated out of thousands of dollars under 1981 paving contracts.

Chief State Attorney Austin J. McGuigan sat with Lupino during the hearing, several times interrupting Shipman's examination, once to ask Shipman to stop "badgering" the witness.

Several witnesses at the DOT hearings have disputed Lupino's report, saying he distorted or misinterpreted what they said.

Lupino responded that it wouldn't be the first time he has heard people perjure themselves. "I expect people to deny what they tell me," he said.

In a report developed by the DOT last month but completed a year earlier, Lupino said the state was cheated out of at least $25,000 and perhaps as much as $60,000 by employees of Roncari Industries Inc., of East Granby in 1981.

Lupino said the $60,000 figure was provided by DOT employee Larry Pulkinen and was "for projection purposes... for which I could document only $25,000. I find no fault in making purposes," Lupino said.

Bank bill advances

HARTFORD (UPI) — The Legislature's Banks Committee has approved a bill to require banks to provide limited free checking accounts to all customers.

The "lifeline bank" bill sponsored by the committee's co-chairman, Sen. Richard S. Eaton, R-Guilford, won committee approval Tuesday on a 16-5 vote and was sent on to the Senate for consideration.

The bill would require financial institutions offering demand deposit accounts to offer checking accounts where people could deposit as little as $100 and write up to five checks a month without service charges. Supporters insisted the bill is needed to help poor people who do not have enough money in the bank to otherwise qualify for free checking.

Bank bill advances

HARTFORD (UPI) — The Legislature's Banks Committee has approved a bill to require banks to provide limited free checking accounts to all customers.

The "lifeline bank" bill sponsored by the committee's co-chairman, Sen. Richard S. Eaton, R-Guilford, won committee approval Tuesday on a 16-5 vote and was sent on to the Senate for consideration.

Soviet spies roaming free in California

WASHINGTON — While the Soviets shoot an unarmed American army officer for photographing defense facilities in East Germany, the United States leaves 32 known Soviet agents unmolested as they observe and take pictures of one of the most sensitive defense facilities in the country.

The Soviet spies concentrate on a 50-square-mile area in the Mojave desert near Lancaster and Palmdale, Calif., 60 miles northeast of downtown Los Angeles. The FBI's counterintelligence people know who the spies are and what they are doing, but do not know how to keep them under constant surveillance.

The situation is too much for one furious FBI source. "Here we have deep cover people that we know are doing all the photographic work and spying on these classified facilities, doing it every way they possibly can," he told us. "And we do nothing but monitor, at the same time as we've got a guy who takes a couple of photographs in East Germany and gets killed."

WHAT'S SO INTERESTING to Soviet spies in the sun-baked California desert? A sprawling industrial area known simply as U.S. Air Force Plant 42. Its corporate tenants manufacture, test and overhaul some of the most secret aircraft the United States has, including super-secret spy planes and the B-1 bomber.

"This is a very active facility, which was put there by the Air Force specifically for the building and test flying of military airplanes," said a source at Lockheed, one of the defense contractors housed at Plant 42. The companies have their own security forces to keep intruders out of their areas, but Plant 42's runways "are plainly visible from the public highway that passes along the edge of the facility," he said.

"As you know," the Lockheed man added, "at almost any military base in the United States, anybody who wants to take pictures of what's going on at that base from outside the base boundaries doesn't have much difficulty doing so."

Lockheed's famous Advanced Development Projects section is located at Plant 42. It's known as the "Skunk Works," after the Dugout still that produced the powerful Kickapoo Joy Juice for Li'l Abner's friends.

The Skunk Works has produced the Air Force's three most secret reconnaissance planes: the U-2, SR-71 and TR-1.

THE RUSSIANS HAVE a particular reason to want information on the SR-71, also known as "The Blackbird." They've been trying to shoot it down ever since it replaced the U-2 in the 1960s, after the shutdown of Francis Gary Powers. But the SR-71, which can fly three times the speed of sound at 80,000 feet and higher, has survived more than 900 Soviet bloc attempts to nail it.

Plant 42 is the home of other secret projects. Rockwell International, for example, is building the B-1 bomber and the space shuttle orbiters at Plant 42. Northrop is working on the Navy's F-15 fighter nearby.

"So why doesn't the FBI put the collar on the 32 Soviet spies who have identified lurking around Plant 42?" Our disgruntled FBI source said the counterintelligence squad follows the rule. "Better the devil you know than the devil you don't."

The FBI agent doesn't buy it, though. "How do we justify these incursions and let them go — let them get away with it — and we get a guy who does some marginal things and they blow him away?" he asked. "I got a problem with that."

Forgetful budget-cutters

The administration has asked for 7,500 additional examiners for the Internal Revenue Service during the next three years, estimating that they'll be able to squeeze out $2.6 billion in lost taxes by 1989. Then, instead of a level that is off or declining — as taxpayers learn the risks of cheating — the budget proposal estimates the additional revenue at $2.8 billion in 1990. How come?

The administration forgot to include the $300 million annual cost of the 7,500 examiners as it had in the 1989 estimate.

Boost teachers' pay and give them tests

Connecticut residents who answered a recent survey about education said a few things that should give the General Assembly some courage when it implements new requirements for the schools in the 1986 legislative session.

The opinions voiced in the survey also should catch the attention of officials in the state's 109 towns, including Manchester. The common sense displayed by the poll's 500 respondents is no doubt shared by many others in the state.

The University of Connecticut Institute for Social Inquiry, which conducted the survey, found that more than half of those queried believed public school teachers should be paid more money. Only 3 percent held to the ridiculous contention that teachers in Connecticut, whose average starting salary is $13,875 a year, are overpaid.

At the same time, the survey discovered widespread support for testing teachers to assure their competency. Seventy-nine percent of those questioned supported a periodic testing requirement, while about 90 percent backed testing for teachers before they are hired.

For many years, it has been clear to most of us that teachers deserve higher salaries. Whatever ideas are tried in the schools, they won't have a significant impact on the caliber of education unless a higher pay scale is used to upgrade the pool of teachers.

The need for a testing requirement has been less apparent to some groups, particularly unions. But teacher testing, like a higher pay scale, is long overdue.

First of all, we agree with the survey respondents that prospective teachers should be tested before they are given jobs. Although passing an initial examination won't be the most important thing a teacher ever does, some basic competency standard must be enforced. Anyone who argues against such a standard is out to protect the incompetent rather than to help students.

Periodic retesting will be a harder requirement to develop fairly, but it is one that needs to be adopted. If a teacher is unable to demonstrate ability in his or her field of study while presenting it to students as part of a curriculum, something is clearly wrong.

Furthermore, it is probable, but not certain, that students would benefit if some way were found to compensate teachers on the basis of merit. The concept of merit pay was supported by 69 percent of the survey respondents.

If a way can be found to compensate the best teachers without stigmatizing those who do their job well, but not exceptionally, a merit pay plan should be adopted. But intelligent objections have been raised to the proposals thus far, an indication that the matter requires further study.

Taking these steps will require a lot of money, of course. Higher salaries will mean a precipitous increase in the demand for funding, as will an incentive program for the best teachers and the implementation of an adequate uniform testing program. That means higher taxes.

But this is one case in which "throwing money at a problem" will help if it is done prudently. The survey turned up some heartening data at that rate.

A significant margin of those who responded, 47 percent, said too little is spent on the schools in Connecticut. That compared to 33 percent who found current expenditures acceptable.

Almost half, or 49 percent, said a tax increase would be worthwhile if the revenues were spent on education.

The survey's results should give both state legislators and town officials some food for thought. If the recommendations scheduled for release this summer by the Governor's Commission on Equity and Excellence in Education reflect the opinions turned up by the UConn survey last week — and preliminary indications are that they will — the politicians will have a clear mandate to get something done.

Tax for shelter is morally wrong

To the Editor:

What if I walk up to you with a gun and ask for your money? This is a crime, it is robbery. Now what if I go to the Board of Directors and they take your money and give it to me? This is legal plunder, for they have taken your money by taxes. They threaten to take your property if you do not pay. One is a crime, the other legal, yet both are morally wrong.

The Manchester Area Conference of Churches is morally wrong in that it asks the government to take money from the taxpayer to take a shelter. I'm not saying the shelter is wrong. I'm saying the method of raising the money is morally wrong. The use of force and threat is not the proper way to raise money to help the poor. It causes resentment, jealousy and, finally, hatred.

"Society in every state is a blessing, but government, even in its best state, is but a necessary evil; in its worst state, an intolerable one." — society being the voluntary act of man, while government uses its laws, coercion, threats and punishment to make man do as it wants.

MACC should go to the people to raise the money it needs, rather than going to the government and having the government take it from the people. The separation of church and state is a two-way street. If government holds the purse string, the puppet must dance to their tune.

We have resided at our present address a couple of years, but in town quite a few, and each young person has been as courteous as Bobbie.

Shuttle countdown starts

By William Horwood
United Press International

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Space agency engineers put weeks of frustrating delays and disappointments behind them today with the start of the shuttle Discovery's countdown to launch Friday with Utah Sen. Jake Garn on board.

Mark Hess, a spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, said the countdown, which includes about 11 hours of built-in "holds," began on time at 2 a.m. EST.

"We're all anxious, we're all ready," commander Karol Bobko said Tuesday after the crew arrived at the Kennedy Space Center. "The vehicle is ready, the payloads are ready and...we're all looking forward to the flight."

The carefully orchestrated countdown is scheduled to end at 8:4 a.m. Friday with Discovery's launch on what will be only the second shuttle flight this year because of a series of technical problems.

Bobko, co-pilot Donald Williams and crew members Jeffrey Hoffman, Rhea Seddon, David Griggs, McDonnell Douglas engineer Charles Walker and Garn plan to spend five days in orbit to launch a pair of communications satellites.

Garn, Republican chairman of the Senate subcommittee that monitors the space agency's budget, will serve as a congressional observer during the five-day mission as well as conduct a series of medical experiments.

Discovery's countdown heralded a week of unprecedented activity at the Kennedy Space Center.

The shuttle Challenger was towed from its hangar today to the rocket assembly building where it will be readied for blastoff around April 29 on a Spacelab mission.

The fourth and final shuttle Atlantis is scheduled to arrive at the space center Friday evening and workers plan to haul Challenger to the launch pad just three days after Discovery takes off.

NASA officials hope their double-barrel launch plan will signal a return to the agency's repeatedly interrupted launch-a-month schedule.

Gunmen adhere to crime

LONDON (UPI) — Three gunmen held up a Wimpy hamburger franchise using glue to stick the employees' hands to the floor.

Scotland Yard is looking for the three gunmen who robbed the restaurant, removed 6,000 pounds from the safe and then glued the employees hands to the floor.

"One person did not stick well so they had to tie him up," a Scotland Yard spokesman said Tuesday.

The holdup took place late Saturday when the men, carrying two shotguns, and a handgun, entered the kitchen of the central London restaurant by the back door and held up five employees, the spokesman said.

Heart man con man?

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (UPI) — The first person outside the United States to receive an artificial heart is a well-known figure with a long police dossier involving suspicion of fraud, news reports said today.

Leif Stenberg, known in the Swedish press simply as "Mr. X" through a series of fraud investigations dating back to the 1960s, Sunday became the fourth person in the world to receive a permanent artificial heart, the Swedish news agency TT reported.

Doctors announced the operation after the patient was taken off a respirator but said the patient had asked that his name be withheld.

Stenberg, 53, has never been convicted although he faces a charge of tax fraud, which has been delayed by his history of cardiac arrests. Hospital officials said they agreed to the patient's request for an artificial heart because he was too weak to undergo a transplant.

"There were no other alternatives left for our patient and he begged for an artificial heart," Professor Bjorne Semb said at a news conference three days after Stenberg received the U.S.-made Jarvik-7 artificial heart.

"We are making every effort to discharge the patient after three to four weeks," he added.

A spokeswoman of the prestigious Karolinska Hospital, home of the committee that awards the Nobel Prize for Medicine, said today the patient "is doing well."

The 10-hour operation Sunday was the first permanent artificial heart implant outside the United States, where three patients have received Jarvik-7 plastic and metal devices.

The first implant patient, Barney Clark, died 112 days after his operation on Dec. 2, 1982, while the other two are recovering at medical facilities in Kentucky.

Victory over the Celts won't hurt the Sixers

By Joe Juliano

NBA roundup

PHILADELPHIA — The Philadelphia 76ers insist it doesn't matter who they defeat during the last week of the regular season as long as they enter the NBA playoffs with some momentum.

But the fact that the Sixers gave the push to the post-season Tuesday night with a 112-104 victory over the Boston Celtics certainly won't hurt. The win enabled them to finish the season series with their archrivals at 2-3.

"We can't put too much significance on one game," team captain Julius Erving said. "We're working toward the playoffs and this is another step. We want to have a positive, optimistic attitude when the playoffs start."

"A psychological edge isn't something we put a lot of stock in. I think we came away with greater lift when we went up there (on March 29) and were involved in a four-point game after being down by 23."

This time it was the Sixers' turn to dominate. They used a 23-16 advantage on the boards to roll to a 67-52 halftime lead and boosted their margin to 23 late in the third quarter before the Celtics rallied to make the final score respectable.

The game was noteworthy for those who didn't play and those who dropped out during the evening. Out of uniform were Boston's Cedric Maxwell (knee problem) and Danny Ainge (back spasms) and Philadelphia's Andrew Toney (sprained ankle).

During the game, the Celtics lost Ray Williams with an illness and Dennis Johnson with an ankle injury that stiffened after the Sixers' 206-pound Charles Barkley fell on him following a collision.

"We can't get rid of this injury thing," said Boston coach R.C. Jones. "Everything is catching up with us now. It's difficult to rest our big guys with all these injuries. We want to rest them before the playoffs."

Philadelphia backup center Clemson Johnson returned after missing 23 of the last 27 games with a sciatic nerve condition and played 19 minutes before leaving with an ankle injury. He is questionable for tonight's game against New Jersey.

But while he was in there, it was evident that a healthy Johnson strengthens the Sixers. He and Barkley led the rebounding assault in the second quarter when Philadelphia outscored Boston, 35-22.

"That's the first time in two months we've had Moses (Malone) and Clemson on the court together."

AL roundup

Tom Seaver doesn't chug along as fast as he once did, but he still had enough steam to pass the Big Train in the record books, and earn a victory in the process.

The three-time Cy Young Award winner made a major-league record 13th Opening Day start Tuesday, and it was vintage Seaver. The 40-year-old right-hander allowed five hits and two runs in 6-2-3 innings while pitching the Chicago White Sox to a 4-2 victory over the Brewers in the season opener for both teams.

The season-opening start broke the record previously held by Hall of Famer and former Washington Senator great Walter Johnson.

"Sure it's nice," Seaver said about surpassing Johnson's record, "but now that we've won, it's much more significant."

"It doesn't matter if you do something outstanding but wind up losing the game. When you do something no other pitcher ever has, it's terrific."

Seaver's Opening Day is record-setting one

Tom Seaver appeared in his record-setting 15th Opening Day game for Chicago Tuesday and made it a winning one against Milwaukee.

Seaver raised his Opening Day record to 7-1 and collected his 28th career victory.

With the White Sox leading, 3-0, in the seventh, Seaver struck two wild pitches which led to two Milwaukee runs, and that was a signal he had run out of gas.

"I was a little fatigued," Seaver said after giving way to Bob James, who finished for the Sox.

Seaver's record-setting performance spoiled the return of George Bamberger as the Brewers manager before an opening day crowd of 52,000.

"It's remarkable that he can still throw that hard at 40 years of age," said Bamberger, who handles pitchers better than almost anyone in baseball. "Not just the variety of pitches, but his velocity. He had to be throwing at 88 mph, and that's a better-than-average fastball."

Rookie Darryl Boston drove in one run and scored another for the White Sox.

The Brewers committed five errors, and three of the White Sox's runs were unearned.

Elsewhere in the AL, Minnesota rocked California 6-2 and Seattle beat Oakland 6-3.

Twins 6, Angels 2

At Anaheim, Calif., Tom Brunansky belted a three-run homer to lift the Twins over the Angels in the season-opener for both teams. Minnesota starter Frank Viola allowed four hits over 7-2-3 innings to gain the victory.

Ron Davis pitched the final 1-3 for the save. Brunansky's blast came in the eighth inning off California starter Mike Witt, who had pitched a perfect game in his last start of 1984.

Mariners 6, A's 3

At Seattle, Al Cowens drove in two runs with a triple and two errors to lift the Mariners to their fourth straight season-opening victory. Mike Moore pitched seven innings for the victory and Edwin Nunez recorded the save. Oakland starter Chris Codiroli took the loss.

At Chicago, Rick Sutcliffe and Lee Smith combined on a six-hit and four-run victory over the Cubs. Sutcliffe pitched five innings and scored a home run and a homer to spark the Cubs. Sutcliffe, last

The Phillies, not satisfied with DeJesus' defense last season, handed the shortstop job to rookie Steve Jeltz during spring training. The 25-year-old certainly didn't justify that move Tuesday night. He committed three errors and the Atlanta Braves took advantage of them to defeat the Phillies, 6-0.

The Phillies, plagued by poor defense last season, made six errors in the game with rookie first baseman John Russell also committing two and pitcher Don Carmean one.

Rick Mahler pitched seven scoreless innings and Dale Murphy drove in two runs with a pair of singles to spark the Braves' victory.

Ryan won seven innings for the triumph, allowing three hits, striking out four and walking none. Things got better for Gary Carter in Mets' debut

NEW YORK — One of the problems with Gary Carter, according to his former Montreal teammates, is that he has too much macho in him, or at least he thinks he does.

"Carter isn't all that fired up about debating the point. He has pride and he can take care of himself, he says, and he lets it go at that."

Enough is enough, though. There comes a point where he'll swallow his pride and ask for a little help and he reached that point after the top of the fifth inning of Tuesday's season opener between the Mets and Cardinals at Shea Stadium.

"I'm getting beat to death out there," he said, half-serious and half-kidding to Mets manager Dave Johnson on the bench. "What a start! I get a hit with a pitch the first time up, then I get called out on strikes and now he (Cardinals pitcher Joaquin Andujar) goes and steals a base on me."

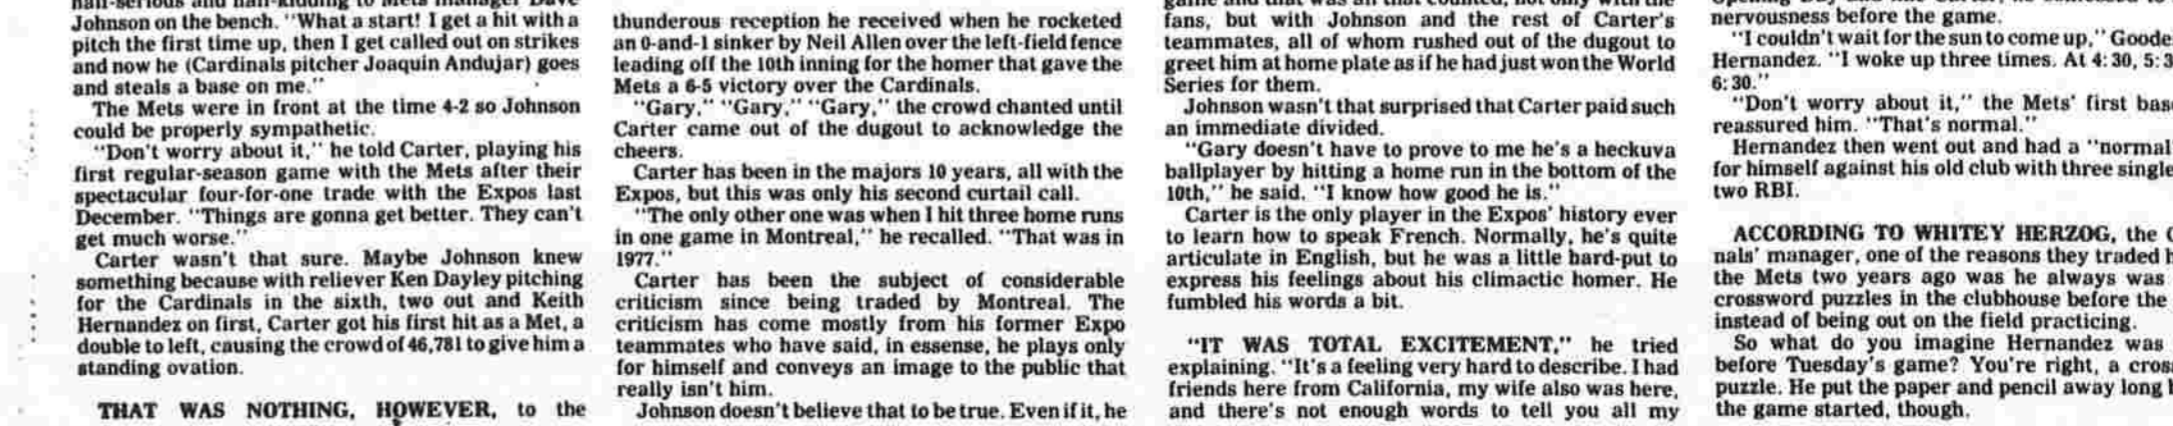

The Mets were in front at the time 4-2 so Johnson could be properly sympathetic.

"Don't worry about it," he told Carter, playing his first regular-season game with the Mets after their spectacular four-for-one trade with the Expos last December. "Things are gonna get better. They can get much worse."

Carter wasn't that sure. Maybe Johnson knew something because with reliever Ken Dayley pitching for the Cardinals in the sixth, two out and Keith Hernandez on first, Carter got his first hit as a Met, a double to left, causing the crowd of 46,781 to give him a standing ovation.

THINGS GOT BETTER FOR GARY CARTER IN METS' DEBUT

He finished with two hits and a homer against St. Louis Tuesday. Mets won in 10, 6-5.

Johnson wasn't that surprised that Carter paid such a price for himself or the Mets didn't really matter. It won the game and that was all that counted, not only with the fans, but with Johnson and the rest of Carter's teammates, all of whom rushed out of the dugout to greet him at home plate as if he had just won the World Series for them.

"Gary," "Gary," "Gary," the crowd chanted until Carter came out of the dugout to acknowledge the cheers.

Carter has been in the majors 10 years, all with the Expos, but this was only his second curtail call.

"The only other one was when I hit three home runs in one game in Montreal," he recalled. "That was in 1977."

Carter has been the subject of considerable criticism since being traded by Montreal. The criticism has come mostly from his former Expo teammates who have said, in essence, he plays only for himself and conveys an image to the public that really isn't him.

Johnson doesn't believe that to be true. Even if it, he

Major League scouts keep watch on Tampa school

By Fred McName
United Press International

TAMPA, Fla. — If he's lucky, a high school baseball coach during his career may get one of those special kids, the kind whose fastball crackles like a jet's afterburner and who has the scouts traipsing through the living room like a marching band.

Billy Reed had three of them — at the same time. Reed, the baseball coach at Hillsborough High School in Tampa, Fla., is partially responsible for the development into professional baseball players of pitchers Dwight Gooden of the New York Mets, Vance Loveless of the Los Angeles Dodgers and Floyd Youmans of the Montreal Expos.

All three got their early training in the Tampa Little League system — recognized as one of the best in the United States — and were members of the same high school team in 1981. Loveless was a senior on that team. Gooden a junior and Youmans a sophomore.

"I tell you that happens once in a lifetime. I'm very fortunate," said Reed, who has been coach at Hillsborough High for the past 10 years and also sent Oakland catcher Mike Heat to the pros.

"Actually, I had four boys from that team sign professional contracts. I had another boy sign with the Twins but he's been released."

GOODEN OF COURSE, has become the best known of the three pitchers. A right-hander whose fastball now clocks about 90 miles per hour consistently, Gooden was the Rookie of the Year in the National League last season after posting a 17-9 record with a 2.60 ERA and a major league rookie record of 276 strikeouts.

But, as strange as it might seem, Gooden wasn't the best pitcher on that 1981 team. Loveless was.

A 6-foot-5 left-hander with an exploding fast ball, Loveless was a high school All-American in his senior year and was the No. 1 pick among all amateur players in the country in the June major league draft. Selected by the Chicago Cubs, he spent two years in their organization before being traded to the Dodgers. He has spent the last two years in the Dodger organization but has yet to advance beyond Double A.

The reason is control. While Gooden has outstanding control and exceptional power, Loveless has averaged nearly a walk an inning since he has been in professional baseball.

"That's the way he's always been, even since 'Little League,'" said Reed, "Vance might walk three in a row then strike out three in a row. But you know how it is in high school. The kids swing at pitches they shouldn't swing at that are out of the strike zone. In the pros they lay off that pitch."

"I figured it would take him a while to make it. I think he's been making some progress. They haven't given up on him. I'm hoping he'll be like (Sandy) Koufax, that with maturity he'll be all right."

Koufax, a member of baseball's Hall of Fame, was wild as a youngster but developed in his late 20s into a control pitcher who used an overpowering fast ball and curve to become the dominant pitcher in baseball over a five-year period.

MIKE WYATT, AN ASSISTANT BASEBALL COACH at Hillsborough for the last eight years, remembers Gooden always keeping his pitch under duress.

"I never saw him get flustered. A guy could make an error behind him and Dwight would never change expression," said Wyatt. "He always kept his cool no matter what happened. No matter if there were errors or what, he would just go about his business."

Reed said Loveless was not one of Loveless's strong suits in high school.

"He was not as mature as Dwight," said Reed. "He would often get depressed when things didn't go right for him."

Reed thinks he may have another possible professional pitcher on his team right now. His name is Gary Sheffield and he's Gooden's nephew.

"He's a little heavier than Dwight but doesn't throw quite as hard," said Reed. "He's in the 11th grade and a few scouts have already been in to see him but they'll probably all pick up on him next year."

Billy Reed knows the ritual by heart.

Pats, Morton beaten

PORTLAND — An unearned run in the first inning cost All-State pitcher Jody Morton his first defeat in two years as Portland nipped Coventry, 1-0, in CCC baseball action at Portland High Wednesday.

Jim Bastura brushed the complete game, three-hit shutout for Portland, won 2-0. Morton, who also allowed just three hits, lost only his second game in 27 decisions, dating back to his sophomore year. He was 11-0 last year to lead Coventry to the state Class 5 championship.

Morton also rapped a pair of single-runners on a pair of errors by Coventry's offense. Kelly O'Neill had two of the Highlanders' three rallies.

Portland scored with two outs in the bottom of the first when Steve Morrison reached on a dropped fly ball, stole third and came around on a passed ball.

The 1-1 Patriots had the bases loaded with no outs in the seventh but Jamie Thurber lined a base-batter to Bastura, who doubled Ron Williams off first. Bret Laffler then flew out for the final out.

Terry Parla cuts her Italian rice cake in her dining room at her 55 Bruce Road home. The cake has a cookie bottom and top crust filled with a rice pudding.

Your Neighbor's Kitchen Family bakery taught her well

By Margaret Hovden Herald Reporter

Terry Parla is too busy to spend much time cooking but she makes a few family favorites, such as Italian Rice Cake. The cake looks like a pie, and has a cookie crust and a rice-pudding filling. The 55 Bruce Road resident gave us the cake's recipe and also agreed to disclose her secret frosting recipe, which she uses for birthday and anniversary cakes. The frosting was used by her family when they ran Creola's Bakery in Hartford. "It was basically a wholesale bread bakery but we made some pastry," Parla said. A few years ago the family sold the bakery, which was started by her parents. The bakery made about a dozen rice cakes each spring for family members but not for sale, Parla said. "For the Manchester Herald, Parla's husband, Leonardo Parla, used his algebra to reduce the recipe. It is the first time the bakery recipe has been reduced to one cake, and she tried it to make sure it worked. She usually makes several at a time and freezes some of them.

"The pork chops Italiano is a simple recipe for people in a hurry. People think it's been cooking all day. It's good for a hungry crowd. Served with Italian bread, it's terrific."

Parla enjoys cooking for her family. She and her husband have four grown children and two grandchildren. Her many activities limit her time in the kitchen. She works as a real estate agent for Corcoran & LaPenta Real Estate. She also does a lot of volunteer work. For instance, she helps bring children from Northern Ireland to Manchester to stay with local families.

through a project sponsored by St. James Church. This week she started another church project, leading a group to make craft items to sell at the sixth annual St. James Fall Festival. Parishioners gather during the year to work on crafts. "It's a relaxing time to meet others, talk and work. We have a good time," she said. Parla is also president of the Manchester Land Conservation Trust, a group dedicated to preserving the area's open spaces. As all these activities take time and energy, she keeps some treats in the freezer, ready for a surprise gift or to complete a meal.

Dieter's Almanac Thinner, beware

When it comes to losing weight, even the smartest and the wisest, the best and the most brilliant can be fools.
We are all easy "marks" for the diet huckster and the quick-weight-loss promise.
Witness the ads: Can make you skinny in 45 days... even if you cheat! Dissolves stubborn bulges and washes away years of built-up fat!
Promises persist: Shrink millions of fat cells in the first 24 hours. Melt off up to 10 pounds in four days. Fast weight loss without gnawing hunger pangs. April Fool!
In the Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. Philip L. White, the organization's director of foods and nutrition, notes: "A final example of strange things people do in the interest of thinness is body-wrapping."
"The client is smeared with 'special creams' and then wrapped in plastic. So long as sweating is not too profuse or body temperature does not rise alarmingly, there probably is a little harm (to healthy people) as there is benefit from this practice. It does, however, serve to illustrate the lengths to which people will go to avoid proper dieting and exercise." April Fool!

Follow these tips to brown food in the microwave

One of the questions most frequently asked by microwave owners and those contemplating the purchase of a microwave is, "How are foods browned when prepared in a microwave?"
Browning is a technique of preparation, and not a function of the microwave. There are many simple procedures which a microwave cook can use to achieve that lovely browned appearance on the foods prepared in a microwave.
In conventional cooking, browning occurs because of a high outside heat source which sears the surface before the center cooks.
In microwave cooking, the only heat is inside the food itself. Roasts and whole chickens or turkeys will brown to a certain degree, but smaller cuts of meat or chicken pieces are cooked so quickly that the fat does not have time to brown.
When browning is desired, it can be achieved in three ways: by pre-searing the meat in a frying pan conventionally, and finishing quickly in a microwave; by using a browning agent or sauce; by using a microwave browning dish or grill.

When browning is desired, it can be achieved in three ways: by pre-searing the meat in a frying pan conventionally, and finishing quickly in a microwave; by using a browning agent or sauce; by using a microwave browning dish or grill.
PRE-SEARING IS the same method used to brown a pot roast or chicken pieces before most heat cooking by conventional procedures. A large Dutch oven or frying pan is used. Fat is put into the heated pan, the meat is coated with flour and seared until brown on the outside, then transferred to the microwave for complete cooking.
Microwave browning agents are available at local markets in both powdered and liquid forms. Other browning agents such as Kitchen Bouquet or Gravy Master, when diluted with water or combined with melted butter, may be brushed onto the surface of the meat.
Melted butter and paprika make an excellent browning agent for poultry. Worcestershire sauce, soy or teriyaki sauce can also be used as browning agents for meats or poultry.
THE THIRD METHOD for browning is the use of a microwave browning grill. Browning grills come in various sizes to fit different-size microwaves. Several different types are available in local stores. Browning grills are made from a ceramic material with a metal oxide under the glass on the bottom side of the grill or casserole. The microwave energy is attracted to the metal which becomes very hot. Browning grills reach a temperature of 300 to 400 degrees F.
When foods are placed on the hot surface of the grills, browning occurs. Browning grills must be pre-heated. The amount of time required for pre-heating is determined by the type of food to be browned.

Bacon, egg and toast breakfast

1 slice of bread
1/2 tablespoon butter
2 to 3 bacon slices
1 egg
Preheat microwave browning grill for 4 minutes on high. Spread slices with butter. Cut a 3-inch circle from center of slice, using a drinking glass or biscuit cutter.
Place bacon in a single layer in center of preheated grill. Microwave for 2 minutes on high. Turn bacon over and move to one end of grill. Add bread slice and cut-out center to grill, buttered side down. Microwave on high for 1 minute.
Turn bread pieces over. Break an egg into the center of the bread slice in the cut-out portion. Microwave for 2 to 2 1/2 minutes on high, or until the egg is of desired doneness. Serves 1 person.
Note: Two eggs and toast slices can be cooked by placing partially-cooked bacon atop egg and toast square. Increase time for cooking eggs by about one minute.

2 tablespoons soy sauce
2 tablespoons cornstarch
Preheat browning casserole dish for 6 minutes on high; add oil. Add chicken immediately, stirring to prevent sticking. Add other ingredients, except mushrooms. Turn until sizzling stops. Cover and microwave on high for 10 minutes; stir midway through cooking time.

Hunting mousse at the Depot

About a dozen members of the Second Congregational Church of Coventry have formed a group called the Out to Lunch Bunch. The group tries a new restaurant on the first and third Wednesday of each month.
"Our new minister, Rev. David Jarvis, is really full of fun," explained Marjorie Glenney of Stage Road in Coventry. "He got this going, and now we all go out. Some people are retired, but not all. Sometimes if someone can just get away from work for lunch, they do."
The "lunch bunch" recently had a meal at the Mansfield Depot, Mansfield Center, and were particularly enchanted with the desserts. The two recipes which Glenney most wanted, she said, were the chocolate mousse and the Russian cream.
Richard Moriarty, the chef at the Depot, offered the mousse recipe. He promised to cut down the Russian cream recipe on another occasion.
Chocolate mousse
12-ounce package semi-sweet chocolate chips
10 tablespoons boiling water
4 tablespoons Cognac or Triple Sec liqueur
8 eggs, separated
Process chocolate chips to a fine powder in a food processor or blender. Add boiling water, all at once, while the machine is still running. Then add liqueur. Add egg yolks, one at a time, while the machine is running. The boiling water will "cook" the yolks. When final yolk has been incorporated, turn off the machine.
Beat egg whites until they are moderately stiff. Since this takes a few minutes, it allows the chocolate to cool. Fold the whites into the chocolate mixture.

Pour chocolate into eight stemmed glasses and chill at least 15 minutes. This is not one of those dishes which should be chilled for a long period of time, the chef said.
The longer the mousse sits in the refrigerator, the more air it loses. That's fine if you like dense mousse. Otherwise, the chef suggested, prepare this dessert just before sitting down to dinner, chill it during supper; and serve right after the meal.
Serves eight.
To have your favorite restaurant dish included in this weekly column, simply write a note telling us the name of your favorite restaurant and its address. We'll contact the chef and ask for the recipe. Include your name, address and a phone number where you can be reached during the day. (Phone numbers will not be published.) ### Advice

A split in religious belief causes family to splinter

DEAR ARBY: Our only daughter, "Sally," lives in a beautiful home 400 miles from us, but her husband, "Joe," has forbidden us to visit her in their home.

I finally wrote Joe a long letter addressed to his office (he's a successful surgeon), telling him that I thought we were entitled to come for a visit. He returned the letter on what he had scribbled, "Tell it to Dear Abby," so that's what I'm doing.

My husband is a Christian church minister - Disciples of Christ - so we sent Sally to a good Bible college, hoping she would marry a fine ministerial student. Instead she met Joe, an Episcopalian. They fell in love, and he won her over to his church. They were secretly married after graduation and we ceased all communication with Sally for several years. Last year she let us know we were grandparents.

Abby, they had our grandson christened in the Episcopalian church, and we know from the Scriptures that all must be baptized by immersion to be saved, so my husband told them they had condemned our grandchild to hell. After that they broke off all communication with us.

In your column you have said that grandparents have the right to see their grandchildren. How do we go about enforcing those

CUT OFF IN VIRGINIA

DEAR CUT OFF: There is a right that outranks grandparents' rights - it's the constitutional right under the First Amendment that grants every citizen freedom of religion. That means the right to worship (or not worship) according to one's own conscience. Your daughter, an Episcopalian, baptized her child in accordance with the rules of that church, so for you to accuse her of condemning her child to hell because your religion differs from hers is an insult. Until you respect your daughter's right to religious freedom, forget about your "rights" as a grandparent. You have none.

DEAR ABBY: Set me straight. Since when is it all right for a white woman to wear black to a wedding? I know that black is "in" now, but where I come from, it simply isn't worn to a wedding. I couldn't believe the black outfits - even the soloists wore black! Lots of white numbers, too, which I always thought should not be worn to a wedding.

Forster, tired of bit parts, tries to make own break

By Vernon Scott United Press International

HOLLYWOOD - Does the name Robert Forster ring a bell? He's the virtile actor who played a succession of heroic roles in movies and then in the "Baywatch" and "Naked" TV series, again playing heroes.

"Most of all my movies, including 'Reflections in a Golden Eye,' 'Stalking Moon,' 'Medium Cool' and 'Justine' were critical and box-office duds despite big budgets and big-name casts.

"Some of those pictures were so junky even I wouldn't see them," he said. "But while the critics panned the movies, they praised my work. I never lost confidence in myself as an actor."

"The next downward step for lesser actors are supporting roles in second rate movies and eventually TV guest shots."

"Writing the script was easy compared to raising money. I put up my life savings and tapped everyone I knew. I've extended myself as far as possible. Soon it will be up to the audience to tell me if 'Hollywood Harry' is a good movie."

There is one stumbling block - perhaps the most difficult of all. Getting a major studio or an independent to release Forster's picture. He has devoted almost three years of his life to "Hollywood Harry" and still may not succeed in getting it into theaters.

"I'm about a week from finishing post-production," he said. "Then I've got to sell it to a foreign distributor and find a domestic distributor and it will be up to them to get it into release."

Forster, with his dark, brooding good looks and muscular physique, had the potential to become the John Garfield of the '70s. But indifferent movies and poorly conceived TV series leached away his promise.

By all accounts Forster could figure himself a loser, except that his personal notices were uniformly praised: He was a good actor who gradually drifted from major films to low-budget quickies.

"I've been an actor for 20 years," he said, "and I'd made up my mind that by the time I was 50 I'd produce my own movie. Well, I'm over 40 now and it's done or die."

"My last few pictures convinced me I could do better myself, even if I had to work on a shoestring. Every step of moviemaking was new to me. But I read books and asked a lot of questions."

Slippery roads get safer

Computerized brakes change driving

By Gino Del Guercio United Press International

FOXBORO, Mass. - You're driving along during a rain storm when a dog suddenly jumps out in front of the car. You hit the brakes and they lock, sending the car into an uncontrollable spin.

Such frightening situations will become less frequent as automobile manufacturers begin putting computerized brake systems into their cars.

The new systems, called anti-lock braking systems or ABS, pump the brakes of each wheel independently just before they are about to lock. The spinning action keeps the car from skidding, thus retaining steerability and stopping the car in a shorter distance.

While the anti-locking system is working, the brake pedal flutters and a small light appears on the dashboard.

Although expert drivers have been pumping their brakes for years to prevent skids, the computerized system can pump five times faster and pumps all four brakes independently, depending on the slipperiness of the surface beneath each tire.

At a recent evening wedding here, she said, "I've got to sell it to a foreign distributor and find a domestic distributor and it will be up to them to get it into release."

Crash dieting is dangerous

DEAR DR. LAMB - I am a 42-year-old male in good health, but in the last several years I have had a weight problem. I do not follow an exercise program but I work seven days a week and walk a great deal.

I'm 5 feet and weigh 210. This is very uncomfortable for me, so I made up a weight-loss diet that consists of three cups of orange juice, one and one-half cups of 4 percent cottage cheese and three slices of bread daily. Between meals, I have a carrot or some lettuce, and I have a cup of orange sherbet in the evening. Will I be able to reach 165 without medical problems?

DEAR READER - You may get to 165 pounds on that diet, but you may not be in good health, since it's a terrible diet. A person can lose weight on any diet that restricts calories so that fewer calories are consumed than are used.

The problem with such low-calorie diets is that the thyroid shuts down to decrease the metabolism. Muscles use calories even when they are not worked, which helps to prevent obesity. The pounds may not disappear as quickly, since muscles weigh more than fat. However, as you develop muscles and lose fat, your measurements may change even when your weight does not.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I read in your column that chewing tobacco contains licorice, which contains a chemical that causes the body to lose potassium. Would licorice candy be dangerous to one's health if one ate a lot of it? I eat licorice about a pound bag of licorice in two weeks. Will this cause me to lose potassium?

DEAR READER - No. Licorice candy made in the United States does not contain real licorice, but uses an artificial flavoring. That is not true of some licorice candy from Europe, which is made from the real thing.

Sometimes natural is not best. DEAR DR. LAMB - I cannot find any skinned-milk brands with non-fat milk solids added. What are some brand names?

DEAR READER - Almost all commercial skimmed milk in grocery stores is fortified with 2 percent non-fat milk solids. Different brands taste different and you may like one brand better than another. Borden's Skim-Line is one possibility. Note that the carton reads "protein-fortified skim milk." The protein is from the added 2 percent non-fat solids. That is unusual, what the term "protein-fortified" means.

One also can use Carnation's non-fat dry milk powder, which can be mixed as rich as one wants and is particularly useful in cooking.

DEAR READER - Almost all commercial skimmed milk in grocery stores is fortified with 2 percent non-fat milk solids. Different brands taste different and you may like one brand better than another. Borden's Skim-Line is one possibility. Note that the carton reads "protein-fortified skim milk." The protein is from the added 2 percent non-fat solids. That is unusual, what the term "protein-fortified" means.

One also can use Carnation's non-fat dry milk powder, which can be mixed as rich as one wants and is particularly useful in cooking.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I am a 42-year-old male in good health, but in the last several years I have had a weight problem. I do not follow an exercise program but I work seven days a week and walk a great deal.

I'm 5 feet and weigh 210. This is very uncomfortable for me, so I made up a weight-loss diet that consists of three cups of orange juice, one and one-half cups of 4 percent cottage cheese and three slices of bread daily. Between meals, I have a carrot or some lettuce, and I have a cup of orange sherbet in the evening. Will I be able to reach 165 without medical problems?

DEAR READER - You may get to 165 pounds on that diet, but you may not be in good health, since it's a terrible diet. A person can lose weight on any diet that restricts calories so that fewer calories are consumed than are used.

The problem with such low-calorie diets is that the thyroid shuts down to decrease the metabolism. Muscles use calories even when they are not worked, which helps to prevent obesity. The pounds may not disappear as quickly, since muscles weigh more than fat. However, as you develop muscles and lose fat, your measurements may change even when your weight does not.

Monkey cells aid pot research

ST. LOUIS (UPI) - Using brain cells taken from monkeys, a professor is hoping to determine how marijuana affects human beings.

Allyn C. Howlett, an assistant professor of pharmacology at St. Louis University School of Medicine, said living neurons are extracted from the brain tissue of monkeys and then grown in an incubator.

Howlett explained that neurons are the cells in the brains that do the thinking. She will be looking at how they are affected by Delta 9-THC, the ingredient responsible for the psychological "high" humans get when they smoke marijuana.

"The active ingredient can either mimic or block messages between these neurons," said Howlett.

She said previous investigators have believed Delta 9-THC worked on the human brain like alcohol, but her research indicates it reacts like "a morphine drug."

"THC works more like certain narcotic analgesic drugs than like alcohol," Howlett said. "It re-trains the production of a chemical that acts as a messenger inside the cells to control the activity of crucial enzymes. This activity modifies the way the neurons work, changing the thinking process. Scientists have estimated more than 50 million people in the United States have used marijuana, considered the most popular illicit drug among young people.

According to the Department of Health and Human Services, marijuana can cause short-term memory impairment and slowness of learning. It can also impair lung function, interfere with fertility, impair the body's immune response and may impede heart responsiveness.

Some scientists have found some evidence a woman who uses marijuana heavily during pregnancy and while nursing may damage her baby's brain, causing tremors and affecting visual responsiveness.

Howlett said it has been difficult to prove anything conclusively about the effects of marijuana since the THC can affect the different body organs in a variety of ways."

Howlett said her study concentrates only on how marijuana affects the brain.

"This study will help us see if there are other types of drugs that will block the effect of marijuana on the brain," she said. "We will also see if there are drugs that produce effects similar to marijuana."

Howlett said she is hesitant to speculate on the final outcome of her work. She said it will be several years before this area of experimentation.

The experiment, which is funded by a grant from the National Institute of Drug Abuse, is expected to last at least three years and initiate further study on the subject.

Bridge

A two-pronged attack

By James Jacoby

Today's three-trump contract could easily be lost through careless play. South was the queen of diamonds and held a spade toward dummy's K-Q. When dummy's king was played, South played a heart to his ace and played another spade. West would win the trick once again. Here was the opportunity for careless play. Should South play another spade, West would win and knock out the ace of diamonds. Instead, after dummy's second spade has held the trick, declarer should switch suits and go after clubs. But correct technique is vital. Since West has overcalled in diamonds and shown at least three cards in the spade suit, the likelihood of club shortsness is strong. Just in case West has a singleton club honor or the nine, the king of clubs should be played first from dummy. If an honor appears from West, declarer can play one club, let it ride unless East covers it with an honor. This play assures only one club loser. If no significant card shows up on the king, declarer can still play another club. If a spade is seen if that suit will divide 3-3.

The two-edged line of play gives declarer the best line for three trumps. But note well that both clubs suits have to be attacked in the proper way or declarer will go set.

Abortion advocate fears return to back room operations

By James V. Heillon
United Press International

NEW HAVEN — The leadoff witness in a trial challenging Medicaid funding for abortion predicted poor women would return to the days of bloody, self-induced abortions if subsidies stopped in Connecticut.

"I'm 58 and I can see history repeating itself," said Dr. Joan Griggs Babbott, executive director of Planned Parenthood of Connecticut.

Babbott testified Tuesday in Superior Court that she spent eight weeks as an intern in Rochester, N.Y., in the 1950s and remembers going on ambulance calls to pick up women who had self-induced abortions, some with knitting needles.

"I can remember being a scared 23-year-old, seeing this woman lying in a big bed, a bloody mess," she said.

Planned Parenthood wants to make permanent an 1981 temporary restraining order issued by the trial judge, Robert I. Berdon, which for the past four years has forced the state to pay for medically necessary abortions, alcoholics, and taking a drug that could produce genetic defects in a fetus. She was also addicted to self-induced vomiting.

The other patient was 22, unmarried with two children, a heart murmur indicating organic heart disease, 9 to 10 weeks pregnant and taking large doses of quinine to self-induce an abortion.

Babbott told attorney Martha Stone of the Connecticut Civil Liberties Union Foundation, which represents the plaintiffs, that each year Planned Parenthood counsels 45,000 people in reproductive matters.

The organization is involved in 3,000 first trimester abortions at its clinics in Hartford, New Haven and Norwich. Of that number, 420 women are usually eligible for Medicaid, a state-federal program providing medical assistance to people who can't afford it.

Babbott said she has personally performed over the course of her career "many thousands of first trimester abortions" and said statistics show first trimester abortions are 10 times safer than carrying a pregnancy to term.

She said they showed one death per 100,000 in first trimester with 10 deaths per 100,000 in full-term pregnancies. The risk rose to 30 to 60 for every 100,000 illegal abortions, according to her figures.

Babbott was cross-examined for the state by Attorney Michael A. Arcari who said Planned Parenthood was not excluded from doing abortions for any women deemed suitable. Arcari said the only issue is who is going to pay for them.

Babbott said if no funds are available for medically necessary abortions, the policy would have the effect of singling out poor women for discriminatory treatment, a violation of the state constitution.

Moffett attacks O'Neill

TRUMBULL (UPI) — Democrat Toby Moffett, mulling a run for his party's 1986 gubernatorial nomination, launched his strongest attack to date on Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill.

Moffett, a former congressman who failed in a bid for the U.S. Senate in 1982, attacked O'Neill in calling for a "dramatic reform" in the way the state finances gubernatorial campaigns.

Moffett said Tuesday in a speech before the Connecticut Public Television Monday night that nothing can be done in the area of campaign reform and public financing of gubernatorial campaigns.

"The governor threw up his hands and said 'Too bad folks, that's the way the system works,'" he said Tuesday in a speech prepared for delivery before the Exchange Club of Trumbull.

"I simply don't think that's good enough. I think we can be more creative than that," Moffett added. "The costs of the current system of contamination are enormous."

Moffett charged that gubernatorial campaigns are now financed heavily by contributions from contractors and implied that the system in turn invites favoritism in the award of state contracts.

"The costs of the current system of contamination are enormous," he said Tuesday. "They can be found in corruption, in the perpetuation of a system which favors the few, which features a rich get richer approach to state contracts."

The speech marked Moffett's strongest attack to date on O'Neill, who is planning to seek re-election next year. Moffett has said he is considering a challenge to O'Neill for the Democratic nomination in a hitting on the potential influence of contributions in the award of state contracts, Moffett struck on a campaign theme that has been pursued for several years by Republicans.

"The GOP, both in its unsuccessful 1982 gubernatorial campaign against O'Neill and last year's successful legislative campaigns, repeatedly raised allegations that contracts were awarded in exchange for a m p a r t i n contributions."

Moffett, however, said both the Democratic and Republican parties "are guilty of a gross overreliance on campaign contributions from people who do business with the state or hope to do business with the state."

"State party fundraising events should not look like road builder conventions and competent, professional architectural and engineering and other firms should not have to be bludgeoned into contributing to campaigns in order to get on somebody's list of favorites," Moffett said.

Moffett said the state should consider public financing of gubernatorial campaigns with tough rules on which candidates can qualify for funds.

"I'm not talking about an unlimited pot of money, but I am talking about enough to insure that we substantially decrease the current contamination," Moffett said.

Niece hurls accusation at pie lady

BRIDGEPORT — The case of a lawyer's wife accused of trying to bribe "Tackles the Clown" has taken another bizarre twist with her niece claiming she was offered $500 to take the bribe for a pie-throwing prank.

The surprise Superior Court testimony Tuesday of Dorthea Tyrrell jolted Mary Diorio, 36, who rushed sobbing from the courtroom. Diorio faces a possible 10 years in prison on charges of tampering with a witness and bribery.

"She wanted me to take the bribe," Tyrrell said of her aunt while wiping tears from her eyes. Tyrrell had pointed at Mary Diorio, 36, who rushed sobbing from the courtroom. Diorio faces a possible 10 years in prison on charges of tampering with a witness and bribery.

Seatbelt measure advances

By Mark A. Dupuis
United Press International

HARTFORD — A bill to require most motorists and passengers to wear seat belts or face fines that could be set up to $99 has won approval from the Legislature's Transportation Committee.

The committee voted 25-3 Tuesday to approve the bill and send it to the House, despite strong objections from Rep. Christine M. Niedermeyer, D-Patuxet, who chaired a subcommittee that studied mandatory seat belt bills.

The bill, versions of which were drafted by coalitions including automakers, insurance companies and doctors, would take effect Jan. 1, 1986, and require motorists and passengers in motor vehicles to wear safety belts.

For the first month, violators would receive warning notices. Beginning in February 1986, violations would be considered an infraction, which carries a fine of up to $99.

Sen. Michael L. Morano, R-Greenwich, the committee's co-chairman, said the bill may be amended in the House and Senate to set a specific fine. He said he personally favors a $25 fine.

Niedermeyer charged that the version of the bill approved by the committee was "overly punitive" and didn't reflect the work by committee members since then.

Rep. Anthony J. Nania, R-North Canaan, however, said the bill was written so it could be sent directly to the House and would not have to go first to other committees where it would likely be killed.

Niedermeyer disagreed with the strategy. "Our goal should be to come up with comprehensive legislation that addresses this problem and not to shift the blame to committee members for changing the bill, but said they could be added as amendments when it reaches the full House and Senate."

"I think you will see several amendments on the floor," Morano said later. He said possible changes could include a set fine as well as forgiving the fine the first time a driver or passenger is found without a seat belt.

Niedermeyer said she feared the bill as written would require violators to go to court and also would result in higher insurance rates for people caught without seat belts.

She also said the bill needed provisions to have the state provide education programs to convince people to buckle up and to exempt people riding in older vehicles without seat belts from the law.

Patrick J. Sullivan, whose lobbying firm wrote the bill as a representative of the Traffic Safety NOW coalition, said he wasn't offended by Niedermeyer's comments when it comes to the bill.

Panel wants salary hike

HARTFORD (UPI) — A state commission next week will consider an $500 minimum teacher salary by 1986-87, 33 percent above the current average starting pay for state teachers.

A subcommittee of the Governor's Commission on Equity and Excellence in Education Tuesday worked out the details of a plan for higher teacher pay and will present it to the commission Monday.

The proposal also would encourage school districts to raise all teacher salaries.

The bill would be financed by an estimated $125 million in year extra state money to allow poorer school districts to raise salaries. It would be phased in over three years.

Star witness leaves country

By Milly McLean
United Press International

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — A former mistress of Claus von Bulow, whose dramatic testimony three years ago helped convict the Danish socialite of trying to kill his wife, has left the country and may not testify at his retrial.

The relationship of von Bulow did not divorce his wife. Jurors who convicted von Bulow said her testimony was crucial to their acceptance of the state's argument that von Bulow tried to kill his wife so he could inherit $14 million from her estate and marry Isles.

Court overturned the convictions on constitutional grounds. The fourth of jury selection was to resume this afternoon. A married man and an unmarried woman passed an initial test Wednesday for the 16-member jury that will decide the case.

Individual jurors during a final round later this month. "There may be evidence in this case that Mr. von Bulow had an extramarital affair," defense attorney Thomas Puccio said. "Is this something that would sway you one way or another?"

Hospital rejects treatment of girl

By Milly McLean
United Press International

AUGUSTA, Ga. (UPI) — A baby girl born 13 weeks premature and weighing just 1.6 pounds was in critical condition today at a hospital that accepted her after another facility ruled her "living abortion" and refused to treat her.

Waters said he did not know her actual birth weight. "If we had known the actual weight there would have been no story," he said. "We would have gone to get it if we had known the correct weight. Since they were certain that the baby was that small we chose not to go down there."

The baby was listed in critical but stable condition today at Medical College of Georgia, which accepted her and sent a helicopter to Fort Valley to bring her to the hospital. Doctors gave her a 50-50 chance of survival.

The original ship was instrumental in the settling of the American colonies and is the only North American gunship still afloat, he said. Williams wants to have the ship ready to sail around the Statue of Liberty on July 4, 1986, and wants to find the original figurehead to avoid costly and time-consuming duplication.

Retail sales drop

By Milly McLean
United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. retail sales plunged 1.9 percent in March, the steepest decline in more than seven years, with construction supplies and clothing the only categories to improve, the Commerce Department said today.

Automobile sales dropped 4 percent and were they not included, the overall sales figure would have been down 1.4 percent, the department said.

Sea of cups

By Milly McLean
United Press International

Katie Breen, 4½, looks over a sea of juice cups at a "Welcome Spring" concert Wednesday at Nathan Hale School. Six Brownie troops gathered to hear Peanutbutterjam, a children's folk group. Katie is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Breen. Her mother is a co-leader of Troop 662, which hosted the event.

The figures cover sales of both American-made goods and imports and reinforce the view that the economy, while healthy, is far from vigorous. Mixed signals in several other recent reports have confused investors and raised the possibility of a gathering economic slowdown.

Town signs rideshare pact with environmental coalition

By Susan Vaughn
Herald Reporter

The J. C. Penney Catalog Center and the Town of Manchester agreed to promote ridesharing by company employees and others who work in the Buckland Industrial Park in a settlement signed this morning.

Construction of the 2.2-million-square-foot company warehouse in the industrial park in Manchester's northwest corner. The agreement was signed by the chairman of the Economic Development Commission and town General Manager Robert B. Weiss at an EDC meeting in Lincoln Center.

It is favorable for people seeking to raise environmental questions, Eldergill said. She said the use of the Connecticut Rideshare program will benefit the town.

The company has been working with the rideshare plan for 18 months, Radabaugh said, and encourages use of other car pooling and commuter buses. The company has reserved parking spaces for car pools and has made arrangements with the state Department of Transportation to have a commuter bus stop located at the entrance to the warehouse, Radabaugh added.

1,200 parking spaces surrounding the huge warehouse, which has 45 acres of land under its roof. When asked if the environmental case ever delayed the construction or opening of the plant, Radabaugh said, "All the construction took place on time." Two scheduled
