Reagan degree prompts debate at Harvard

By Ken Fronckling
UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

PRESIDENT REAGAN
... man or the office?

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — At Harvard, where it is said the faculty will debate anything, the hottest issue up for discussion is whether America's oldest college should give President Reagan an honorary degree at next year's 350th convocation.

Harvard said no decision has been made on the degree question. Some faculty members take the view that Harvard would be honoring the office of president, not necessarily the man who holds it. The other side argues that Reagan has not earned a Harvard honorary doctorate by virtue of intellectual attainment.

Albert Carnesele, academic dean at Harvard's John F. Kennedy School of Government, raised another question — the wisdom of giving an honorary degree to a sitting president.

It has been a long time since Harvard has given a degree to a president in office. It is a question of making sure we don't pander to people who are in power," Carnesele said in an interview.

In the past, Harvard has bestowed honorary degrees on King Juan Carlos of Spain, and Benny Goodman, the king of swing. West German leaders Schmidt and Willy Brandt; oceanographer Jacques Cousteau and authors Alexander Solzhenitsyn and Barbara Tuchman.

The last time the college bestowed a degree on a sitting United States president was to Andrew Jackson in 1833. John Quincy Adams, who Jackson defeated in 1828, called the degree "a disgrace."

President Grover Cleveland attended Harvard's 250th birthday celebration in 1896 but refused an honorary doctorate of laws, saying he was unworthy of it.

Franklin Delano Roosevelt, a Harvard graduate, spoke at the college's tercentenary in 1938 but received no honorary degree because he had been given one in 1929 when he was governor of New York.

The word "disgrace" rose again on campus last week in debate on whether Reagan should be given a degree.

George Wald, Nobel prize-winning biologist, said it would be "disgraceful" for Harvard to give Reagan an honorary degree.

"An institution whose motto is 'Veritas' (truth) has no business giving any honorary degree to a man who has undertaken a constant deception of the public for so many things, including arms control and Central America," Wald said.

But Henry Kissinger, former secretary of state and former Harvard professor, said it was "disgraceful... almost obscene" for Harvard to question whether it was appropriate to give Reagan a degree.

Dangers of trucking

Sitting in a truck for 10 hours a day, bouncing across 2,700 miles a week, stress and smoking too much greatly increase the risk of heart trouble for truck drivers, says a fitness professor who has come up with a special diet and exercise regimen for truckers.

Almanac

Today is Monday, May 13, the 133rd day of 1985 with 222 to follow.

The moon is in its last quarter. The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Jupiter and Saturn. The evening star is Mars.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Taurus. They include composer Sir Arthur Sullivan (Gilbert and Sullivan) in 1842, novelist Daphne Du Maurier in 1907, heavyweight boxing champion Joe Louis in 1914, and singer Stevie Wonder in 1950 (age 35).

On this date in history: In 1607, English colonists landed near the James River in Virginia to establish Jamestown, their first permanent colony in the New World.

In 1946, the United States declared war on Mexico. In 1912, Britain established the Royal Flying Corps. In 1975, U.S. forces recaptured the American merchant ship Mayaguez, which had been seized by the Cambodian navy in the Gulf of Siam; 41 U.S. servicemen were killed and 50 wounded in the rescue operation.

In 1984, a Kuwaiti oil tanker was damaged by an Iranian missile in the first reported shipping in the Persian Gulf war.

A thought for the day: French writer-philosopher Voltaire said, "Common sense is not so common."

about keeping their kids alive," said Kathy King. As Kane told the Board of Education in December, "We neither condone nor condemn drinking. What we want to do is save lives."

Officer Gary Wood, a spokesman for the Manchester Police Department, said it is difficult to determine what impact the Safe Rides program has had on alcohol-related accidents in town. But he said the town has enjoyed a low injury rate so far this year.

"Every bit helps," Wood said. "I think they're handling it quite well." Anyone wanting to be a Safe Rides volunteer must complete training that includes instruction in first aid, crisis intervention and the use of citizens band radios.

Not all volunteers have to be a driver's license, since they work in teams of two, using their own cars, Kane said. A third student volunteer acts as a dispatcher.

The group has been chartered as a Boy Scout Explorer Post and the Boy Scouts of America have provided nearly $5 million worth of liability insurance for the program, Kane said.

When going out on a call, the student volunteers remain in constant radio contact with headquarters, using a set of codes designed to help preserve the confidentiality of clients and minimize any agitated behavior on the part of a severely intoxicated person.

The Safe Rides program was provided with free office space at Moriarty Brothers. The program usually operates every Friday and Saturday night during the school year from 9:30 p.m. to 2 a.m.

An adult volunteer is on duty at headquarters each night the program operates, but it is the students who do the work, Kane said.

With the exception of one night when a bleeding man came to Moriarty Brothers seeking help, the group has not been faced with medical emergencies or unruly drunks, Kane said.

Former Manchester Mayor Matthew Moriarty Jr., who the state has taken hold as last as Manchester's, according to Kane.

The town group has received the backing of Manchester Memorial Hospital, the Town-wide PTA Council, the Board of Education, the Rotary Club, the Kiwanis Club and the Manchester Community College Student Senate, among other groups.

The time is ripe for these programs, Kane said. "The awareness is there. Opponents have become proponents."

offered to let Safe Rides use the space at his auto business, said last week there have been no problems with the arrangement.

"I'm very pleased with what the kids are doing," he said. For insurance reasons, only people under 21 years of age may use Safe Rides, Kane said. The few adults who have called the group's phone number have been referred to the local taxi company, he said.

Few of the other chapters in the state have taken hold as last as Manchester's, according to Kane.

The town group has received the backing of Manchester Memorial Hospital, the Town-wide PTA Council, the Board of Education, the Rotary Club, the Kiwanis Club and the Manchester Community College Student Senate, among other groups.

"I don't think this program will ever die," said Bob King.

He likened the delay in getting the town finished to having "too many cooks" in the kitchen.

But town Building Committee Chairman Paul Phillips said Friday that the renovations were "going along perfect" and according to schedule.

Phillips called the complaints about the art rooms "a nuisance" but said the town will not lose one day of school, he said. "Somebody's had to be inconvenienced."

But Hewey said the production room, where jewelry and other metal crafts are made, has ventilation that does not work and lacks the proper cabinets for chemical storage. Air compressors and other equipment also do not work, he said.

Opinions differ on responsibility for work at MHS

By Kathy Gormus
HERALD REPORTER

Nearly two years after renovations to Manchester High School were supposed to be complete, some rooms are still unfinished — and those involved in the project are denying responsibility for the remaining work, school officials say.

High school principal Jacob Ludes said last week that the unfinished work ranges from unpainted rooms and doors to lack of a public address system in the office. The most serious problems are in a suite of three rooms used by the art department, where some duct, ventilation and other finishing work needs to be completed, he said.

The rooms were almost completely redesigned under the $5.5 million renovation project, Ludes said.

One art teacher contacted by the Herald last week charged that some of the work was designed poorly and carried out improperly by the contractor.

"It's not finished. It's not going along perfect," he said. "The architects didn't know what they were doing."

A "punch list" of unfinished items compiled in January lists several items that were improperly installed or designed in the art room, including cornice corner tops and vents.

ASSISTANT SUPERINTENDENT of Schools Wilson E. Deakin acknowledged Thursday that there were some design problems.

He said there is a possibility the general contractor could absolve himself of responsibility for completing the work.

"He could say, 'Hey look, I built what you guys designed,'" Deakin said.

He likened the delay in getting the town finished to having "too many cooks" in the kitchen.

But town Building Committee Chairman Paul Phillips said Friday that the renovations were "going along perfect" and according to schedule.

Phillips called the complaints about the art rooms "a nuisance" but said the town will not lose one day of school, he said. "Somebody's had to be inconvenienced."

But Hewey said the production room, where jewelry and other metal crafts are made, has ventilation that does not work and lacks the proper cabinets for chemical storage. Air compressors and other equipment also do not work, he said.

"You ask for water and you don't get it, you ask for gas and you get too much," he said. Hewey said the room does not meet federal safety codes — a claim that could not be verified by either Ludes or Deakin.

When asked about the lack of chemical storage cabinets, Ludes said the school has a number of such cabinets approved by the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

"You ask for water and you don't get it, you ask for gas and you get too much," he said.

Hewey said the room does not meet federal safety codes — a claim that could not be verified by either Ludes or Deakin.

When asked about the lack of chemical storage cabinets, Ludes said the school has a number of such cabinets approved by the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

HEWEY SAID SOME of the existing problems could have been avoided if the architect had consulted the teachers who used the rooms. In the meantime, "everybody's arguing about who got it wrong," he said.

Jerry Jacquot, project manager for Custom Concept Builders of Connecticut Inc., the Simsbury-based general contractor for the project, said he was working with the Building Committee to resolve the problems. But he said the unfinished work was not the responsibility of Custom Concept Builders.

"We feel the items that are our responsibility have been completed," he said. "That's been sort of a bone of contention," said architect Charles Gunnels of the Farmington-based architectural firm of Gunnels and von Dohlen Inc., which designed the renovation project.

"The whole idea is to let the contractor get out there and finish," Gunnels denied that parts of the project were poorly designed, which ensures that the work will be completed at no cost to the town if the contractor goes bankrupt, Phillips said.

Renovations to the 29-year-old building were begun in December 1981 and were expected to be completed by the start of the 1983-84 school year.

The project suffered a setback in June 1984, when a state inspector cited the high school for over 150 violations of state building, fire and safety codes.

School officials have said that most of the violations stemmed from changes in the codes that occurred after the project was designed.

The state is currently awaiting a response from the town on how it intends to correct the violations, said Richard S. Kraisinger, an architect with the state Department of Education. The Manchester Board of Education has hired a local architect to design the work required to meet the code, as well as renovations to four of the town's oldest elementary schools.

Kraisinger said the problems at Manchester High School are "not unusual" for a renovation project that extensive.

Ludes agreed, saying that when only punch list items are left on a project, the contractor and others involved often try to say the items are someone else's responsibility.

"The project should have been done some time ago," Ludes said. "I think you're down to the classic punch list problem."

Manchester In Brief

Claims continue to fall

Filings for unemployment benefits in Manchester have continued to decrease, with the average number filed during the two weeks ending May 4 dropping 10.2 percent from the previous two-week period, according to the state Labor Department.

A weekly average of 1,030 claims were filed in Manchester during the period, including an average of 91 initial claims and 939 continued claims.

Statewide, the number of claims filed during the period decreased 8.2 percent from the previous reporting period, to a weekly average of 23,383.

Spill cleanup cost bill high: A New Haven firm has submitted a bill for well over $5,000 for cleaning up more than 400 gallons of oil that spilled into Lydall Brook from a leaking fuel line at Buckley School last January, assistant Superintendent of Schools Wilson E. Deakin said today.

Deakin would not reveal the exact amount of the bill. But he said he is trying to bargain with East Coast Environmental Service of New Haven to reduce it.

In February he predicted that the cost would exceed $2,000. Deakin said today that he has not been able to reach company officials to discuss his request for a reduction. He said that in any case, Superintendent James P. Kennedy will report on the cleanup bill to the Board of Education at the board's regular meeting tonight.

The board will meet at 7:30 p.m. at Robertson School.

Longest seeks another term: Sam Longest, a member of the Eighth Utilities District Board of Directors for the past nine years, said today that he will seek a fourth year-term.

The terms of Longest, district president Walter Joyner and Director Joseph Tripp are up this year. Neither Joyner nor Tripp has said whether he intends to run.

Longest currently acts as the board's commissioner of public works.

"I see a lot of uncompleted work I want to see accomplished," he said of his decision to seek re-election. Although he refused to elaborate, he said he supports the district's decision to build a satellite fire station on Buckley Brook from a leaking fuel line at Buckley School last January, assistant Superintendent of Schools Wilson E. Gov. James Thompson of Illinois answers a reporter's question Sunday after commuting Gary Dotson's 25-30 year prison sentence for the rape of Cathleen Crowell Webb to time served.

Dotson goes free, but pardon denied

By Pamela Sherrod United Press International
CHICAGO — Gary Dotson is free today, but his release from prison has not solved the mystery of whether Cathleen Crowell Webb lied eight years ago after she said Dotson raped her — or this spring when she changed her story.
Gov. James Thompson Sunday commuted Dotson's 25- to 30-year sentence to time served. But he refused to accept Webb's claim that she had not been raped in 1977 or to pardon Dotson, who vowed to prove his innocence at a new trial.
Thompson said the testimony of 24 witnesses, including Webb and Dotson, during a three-day hearing before the Prisoner Review Board convinced him that Dotson was innocent of a criminal offense.
"If anything, the evidence before me was stronger than at the trial," Thompson said. "I believe that Cathleen Webb was raped on the evening of July 9, 1977."
Thompson said his decision to commute Dotson's sentence had "nothing to do with the guilt or innocence of a criminal offense," but "with the larger quality of mercy — of compassion for one's fellow man."
There are two victims in this case — society and Cathleen Webb. Society has imprisoned Gary Dotson for six years. Cathleen Webb has told us that she does not want to see him imprisoned any longer," Thompson said.
"I have decided that no good purpose would be served — that justice would not be served — by

Israel imposes stiffer terms for talks

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israel imposed stiffer terms for entering peace talks with a Jordanian-Palestinian delegation, ruling out participation by anyone committed to the charter of the Palestine National Council.
"Israel is prepared to conduct negotiations with a Jordanian-Palestinian delegation that will not include members of organizations which are bound by the Palestinian Covenant, and is opposed to talks within an international framework," the Israeli Cabinet said in a communique issued Sunday.
Israel has said it would not talk to "declared members" of the Palestine Liberation Organization.
The statement Sunday appeared to rule out talks also with members of the PNC, regarded as the Palestinian parliament in exile.
The charter, or covenant, was approved by the PNC in 1968 and declares basic Palestinian aims, including "armed struggle" to replace Israel with a Palestinian state.
A Jordanian-Palestinian accord on Feb. 11 called for talks between all parties involved in the Middle East conflict, including the PLO, and the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council — the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain, France and China.
Secretary of State George Shultz learned of the new Israeli restrictions on terms for entering peace negotiations at a breakfast with Prime Minister Shimon Peres before he left for stops in Egypt and Jordan, but made no comment (Story on page 1).
"The implications of the harsher Israeli terms were not clear, but Cabinet spokesman Yossi Beilin said he believed it was "not impossible" to form a Jordanian-Palestinian team acceptable to Israel.
"We believe there are Palestinian leaders in the West Bank and Gaza and maybe not only there — who are not committed to the Palestinian Covenant and who are willing to participate in such a delegation," Beilin said.
But the PNC has never named the occupants of the approximately 180 seats reserved for residents of the occupied territories of the West Bank and Gaza.

Benefits freeze at issue House joins Social Security battle

By Elaine S. Povich United Press International
WASHINGTON — The House took up the budget battle this week and Democrats leaders vowed that they — not President Reagan — will keep his campaign promise not to touch Social Security.
The Republican-led Senate last week approved, by the margin of Vice President George Bush's tie-breaking vote, a budget that would cut $36 billion from the more than $200 billion deficit next fiscal year and delay for a year scheduled cost-of-living increases for Social Security recipients.
While denying the 36 million Americans who get Social Security checks an inflation-related increase, the budget allows military spending to grow enough to make up for inflation.
Reagan, who pledged in his election campaign not to touch the Social Security program, signed on to the Senate plan and lobbied for it while on his 18-day European trip.
House Budget Committee Chairman William Gray, D-Pa., said Sunday on CBS' "Face the Nation," "I don't believe the House is going to do to senior citizens ... what obviously the president and his party did."
Trent Lott of Mississippi, the assistant House Republican leader, also appearing on CBS, said "a majority of the Republicans in the House ... are opposed to" a cap on the Social Security COLA.
"There are a lot of programs that were left on the table by the Senate that could be reduced further," Lott said, citing Amtrak, the Food and Drug Administration, foreign aid, mass transit and the Job Corps.
Budget director David Stockman said on CBS that acceptance of the Senate package "is going to be difficult in the House."
Stockman said there can be no further cuts in Pentagon spending and Democrats "have no other alternative than to look at those reductions that we have proposed or to come right out and tell the American people that they would like to have a massive tax increase."
House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass., said Saturday in a radio interview "there is no way" the House would accept a delay in Social Security cost of living increases.
A group of moderate Republicans last week introduced a budget plan that would freeze most federal spending and cut several programs but does not address the Social Security issue. The plan was said to reduce deficits by $275 billion over three years.

Rep. Trent Lott, R-Miss., right, takes hold of budget director David Stockman's arm as he makes a point Sunday during CBS' "Face the Nation." Lott, the assistant House GOP leader, said that further reductions in the Senate's budget can be made. Stockman predicted tough sledding in the House for the Senate package.

Mother plans return to R.I. for charges

PAWTUCKET, R.I. (UPI) — A former Pawtucket woman has waived extradition from Indiana and is expected to return to Rhode Island within two weeks to face charges she killed her 4-month-old daughter.
Ronald Waicukauski, prosecutor for Monroe County, Indiana, said Donna Richard, 33, waived extradition Sunday.
Meanwhile, Pawtucket police were scheduled to hold a news conference this afternoon that may shed light on the November 1984 beating death of Jerrri Ann Richard, whose beaten and raped body was found in an alley not far from her parents home.
Mrs. Richard was arrested at her parent's home in Bloomington, Ind. Friday and held without bond in the Monroe County Jail.
Waicukauski said there was no rush to return Mrs. Richard to Pawtucket.
"There is no urgency. It's just a question of making the arrangements. She can stay in our jail just as well as she can in a Rhode Island jail," he said.
The child's father, Ralph, has not been ruled out as a suspect in the killing, according to Pawtucket Police Chief Theodore King.
"We still think he may have had some involvement. To what degree, I don't know," King said.
Investigators have refused to discuss what evidence they used to arrest Mrs. Richard. They have also declined to say why she was arrested last week despite earlier announcements that no arrests would be made until the case was reviewed by a grand jury.
Mrs. Richard's arrest has also left unanswered the question of who sexually assaulted the infant. An autopsy last year indicated that the youngster had been raped.
Jerrri Ann's mysterious disappearance on Nov. 11, 1984 touched off a massive search and the discovery of her beaten and raped body four days later in an alley about a block away triggered a nationwide search for a suspect.
Ralph Richard is free on $25,000 bond in an unrelated Colorado case. He surrendered earlier this month on kidnapping, aggravated robbery and conspiracy charges connected to a narcotics investigation in that state in July 1983.
King said the Jerrri Ann case is far from over.
"We've got some way to go yet," he said. "A lot of things depend on what falls into place."

Jury to get kidnap case

VIRGINIA CITY, Mont. (UPI) — A jury must decide whether a young mountain man is guilty of kidnapping an Olympic skier and killing a man who tried to rescue her — or whether his backwoods father made him do it.
In a swiftly moving trial that began last Monday, the court-appointed defense attorney for Don Nichols, 54, dominated the youth to the point where the defendant could not make a responsible decision.

Reagan team firm on budget
WASHINGTON — President Reagan has reached the "bottom line" on his 1985 fiscal year budget package, passed last week by the Senate, and will not make further concessions to win House passage, a White House spokesman said today.
Deputy press secretary Larry Speakes told reporters: "I don't see him giving in on taxes or defense."
"This is really for us the bottom line as far as the major budget package is concerned," said Speakes. "This is what we want."
Reagan arranged to return to the White House later today from Camp David where he rested following his exhausting 10-day European tour. He will be meeting this week with Treasury Secretary James Baker to make final decisions on a modified tax reform plan that probably will be submitted to Congress next week.

Tutu gladdened by protests
SAN FRANCISCO — South African Bishop Desmond Tutu told a rally of 4,000 opponents of South Africa's apartheid racial policies that "you are not wasting your time" by staging protests in which hundreds have been arrested.
"God has given me the privilege and the honor to say thanks," the Nobel Peace Prize-winner told the rally Sunday at San Francisco Civic Auditorium. "It is a tremendous thing you do."
Tutu, the 1984 Peace Prize recipient and the second-highest Anglican bishop in South Africa, arrived in the United States Thursday on a five-day tour aimed at raising $20,000 for anti-apartheid causes.

Docs need liberal studies
BALTIMORE — People who want to be doctors should study the liberal arts, says the dean of prestigious Johns Hopkins School of Medicine, which announced it will drop the Medical College Admissions Test.
The test, once considered an indicator of probable success in medical school, focuses almost exclusively on the sciences. But medical school Dean Richard Ross said Sunday doctors need a broader education.
"I challenge leaders of other medical schools to make the MCAT optional and send a powerful signal that medical schools mean what they say about wanting applicants with a broad general education," Ross said.
The emphasis on high MCAT scores created a "premed syndrome" in which undergraduates began specializing early and taking an unreasonable number of science courses to the exclusion of liberal arts classes. Ross said.
Norman Anderson, dean of admissions at Johns Hopkins Medical School, said the MCAT would become optional in September unless raised questions about the usefulness of the standardized test. Surveys show the MCAT often fails to predict accurately overall performance in medical school or practice.

Senator plans CIA probe
WASHINGTON — The vice chairman on the Senate intelligence committee says he has started an inquiry into several CIA operations, including a agency-trained anti-terrorism squad that went on "runaway" mission — a March car bombing that killed 80 people in Lebanon.
Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said Sunday he wants to know more about several operations, particularly ones about which he believes the committee was not fully informed — including the Middle East counterterrorism squad created on an order signed by President Reagan.
"We're going to review six or seven operations on our own," Leahy said, adding that he did not know the Lebanon plan until he asked about it a month ago. He refused to give further details.
The State Department and the White House pushed to establish the CIA operations, the Washington Post reported, in part because of Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's reluctance to use conventional force in dealing with terrorism.
The Post said the congressional committees responsible for intelligence matters were briefed on the operation last year but only the committee "specifically directed" that only the committees' chairmen and vice chairmen be informed.

Italians go to the polls
ROME, Italy — Italians began voting in two days of local and regional elections that are a crucial test of strength between the largest Communist Party in the West and the center-left coalition government.
Polling places, which were open for 14 hours Sunday, were scheduled to reopen early today.
More than 44 million voters were choosing councils for 15 regions, 86 provinces and 8,582 cities in the two-day election. The cities include Rome, Milan, Turin and Genoa.
Election officials said initial computer projections will be announced late today and final results early Wednesday.
Although voters were electing only bottom-rung leaders such as provincial councilmen and mayors, the elections could determine whether Socialist Prime Minister Bettino Craxi's five-party center-left coalition remains in power.
Craxi, 51, whose government's 2 1/2 months in power marks the fourth longest Italian government since World War II — has said he will resign if the coalition suffers a major setback.

Jurors concerned for man
FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Jurors who convicted an elderly man in the death of his incurably ill wife say they hope his sentence will be reduced, even though they insist he murdered his wife.
Roosevelt Gilbert, 75, said he shot his wife Emily twice on March 4 after she begged him to end her suffering from Alzheimer's disease and osteoporosis, but the jury found him guilty of first-degree murder and sentenced him to life in prison with a minimum of 25 years before parole.
She said jurors could not ignore the condition of Gilbert's wife of 51 years, but she could not say how she felt about the jury's decision. She said she was concerned about her own appearance and dress well and apply makeup.
"There's no in-between and that's the fault of the law," said juror Vivian Feigenbaum of Pompano Beach. "I hope he dies peacefully, but I hope he gets some help."
But jurors agreed from the beginning that Gilbert could not be acquitted and spent more than four hours determining the degree of his guilt. On the third vote, several who had held out for a manslaughter conviction were convinced Gilbert committed first-degree murder.

Dutch leader stresses differences with Vatican

By John Phillips United Press International
THE HAGUE, Netherlands — Prime Minister Ruud Lubbers told Pope John Paul II today the Vatican makes some Dutchmen "uneasy if not downright suspicious" and said both sides must work to build trust.
The pope traveled from Utrecht, where he was greeted Sunday by widespread rioting, to the Hague, Holland's center of government, for an audience with Queen Beatrix and the meeting with Lubbers.
About 1,000 police were mobilized for the pope's tour of The Hague today — exactly four years after the pontiff was wounded by a would-be assassin in St. Peter's Square.
"Sometimes Rome seems a very long way away from here," said Lubbers, a Catholic. "Indeed, to be quite frank, simply the word Rome makes some people uneasy if not downright suspicious."
"However, I imagine that from Rome, the Netherlands seems no less distant and unwelcoming an equal among equals," the prime minister said.
"The similarity of impressions and approaches gives rise ... to a task to build bridges and to restore confidence."
The pope began his day in The Hague by celebrating mass for the sick and handicapped and those who assist them.
"All of you have been called to be apostles and witnesses of Christ, whether by your suffering or your loving care for those who suffer," he said.
He was to speak at the International Court of Justice in The Hague later in the day before meeting leaders of other Christian churches and joining in an ecumenical prayer service.

Kids use noodle
BOCCA RATON, Fla. (UPI) — Hundreds of children tugged on a bunch of pasta until it was stretched 400 feet long to set a new record for the world's longest noodle — but afterward it was unceremoniously dumped in the trash.
The sponsor of the event cited sanitary reasons for tossing the noodle. "We are still, unfortunately, far from a world in which such fundamental values are universally respected, but we cannot give up this struggle for whenever the dignity and rights of any individual are denied, every man, woman and child suffers an injustice."

Mexico, U.S. reach accord on drug war

By Teresa Kramer United Press International
QUERETARO, Mexico — U.S. and Mexican lawmakers agreed at the end of three days of talks Sunday to form congressional study groups in each country to combat the lucrative narcotics trade.
"We are in agreement that a mechanism should be created to formally establish a consultative body between the two legislative bodies with the aim of improving coordination and cooperation in the war against drugs," said the joint resolution of the 29th Inter-Parliamentary Conference.
The Mexican delegation submitted a formal protest to the 14 U.S. congressmen who attended the meeting over the traveler's advisory for the Mexican state of Jalisco, which was passed by the House of Representatives Thursday, a source who asked not to be identified told United Press International.
In their concluding statement Sunday, the Mexican delegates emphasized the travel advisory would have a strong negative effect on the tourist trade in the state of Jalisco.
Throughout the talks in Queretaro the Americans were confronted with Mexican opposition to Reagan administration policy in Nicaragua.

In their concluding statement Sunday, the Mexican delegates emphasized the travel advisory would have a strong negative effect on the tourist trade in the state of Jalisco.
Throughout the talks in Queretaro the Americans were confronted with Mexican opposition to Reagan administration policy in Nicaragua.
The Mexicans complained that Reagan's trade embargo undermined the efforts of the Contadora Group, a four-nation body including Mexico, which is seeking to negotiate a settlement to the armed conflicts in Central America.
"The Mexican delegation insists on non-intervention in Central America," said Sen. Celo H. Delgado, of Mexico's ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party. "Economic measures are not the most adequate way to help Contadora in this regard."
"Mexico has expressed its concern that Contadora is still valid, that those who form the group, and those that do not, should respect autonomy of all peoples, and not bring an East-West dimension to the conflict."
SEN. PHIL GRAMM, R-TEXAS, chairman of the 14-member U.S. delegation, defended the Reagan administration policy.
He said the economic embargo, which cut off some $3 billion in U.S. exports from Nicaragua and severed air and ship traffic, was needed "to not let communist aggression interfere in the area."
Delegates reported greater progress on trade and anti-drug issues during the 29th annual Interparliamentary Conference in the colonial city of Queretaro, 110 miles northwest of Mexico City.
The Mexicans complained of U.S. protectionism while the American lawmakers count with demands for Mexico to participate in the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, a multilateral treaty that lays down a code of conduct for international trade.
U.S. officials said the two governments would soon begin talks on ways to abolish import tariffs.
Sen. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., who chaired a House committee on narcotics abuse, said the U.S. team aimed "many frustrations" over a seeming lack of progress in combating drug traffic in Mexico.
He pointed to the slow Mexican investigation into the February kidnap-killing of Drug Enforcement Administration agent Enrique Camarena Salazar as the spark that set off tensions.
"I hope this conference will break the tensions that exist between our two countries," Rangel said.
Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Texas, said he hoped the conference would open the way for overtalks with Mexican officials.
"We must stop all the petty, hidden animosities toward each other," he held out.
Delgado said the conference had provided a "profound analysis of the mutual problem against drug trafficking."

"Money For College: Where Does It Come From?"

A free seminar for students and parents.

What's it about?
The seminar is about financial opportunities — and there really are quite a few — to get a college or graduate school education. They may be CSLF Student Loans, Parent Loans, or financing through Home Equity or Personal Loans. You'll also get some good tax advice and hear some planning advice for students graduating from high school years from now.
Who's invited?
Graduating seniors from all the area's high schools. Their parents. All students — and their parents — who one day would like to go to college, but just don't know where the money will come from.
Where and when?
East Catholic High School, 115 New State Road, Manchester. Tuesday, May 14, 7:30 p.m. Reservations encouraged. Telephone Mrs. Anders at the bank, 646-1700. Remember, the seminar is free.

'Lifeworkers' dedicated, committed

By Warren L. Prelesnik

This week, May 12 to 19, more than 7,000 hospitals across the country will be celebrating National Hospital Week, which recognizes the efforts of all those associated with hospitals — employees, physicians, volunteers, trustees and auxiliaries alike.

Everyone who works in some way on behalf of a hospital and the patients it serves is, to me, someone special. I know. I work for a hospital. I have chosen to pursue my career in a hospital setting, as have millions of other individuals in this nation.

The theme of National Hospital Week 1985 is "Lifework," to signify the conscious, deliberate decisions of my fellow workers to devote our working careers to serving patients. From medical technologists to X-ray technicians, from accountants to nurses, from environmental technicians to secretaries — they have all chosen positions in the health care field for one important reason: They enjoy people and wish to help and serve their friends and neighbors.

HERE IN MANCHESTER, we have a hospital steeped in a tradition of community involvement and social concern. We have always been attuned to the needs of the greater Manchester area and have responded to them responsibly and promptly. I firmly believe that one of the major reasons for the high quality of life enjoyed in Manchester has been the presence of Manchester Memorial Hospital. As the major provider of health care in the community, we have contributed significantly to the physical health of area residents. As one of the largest employers in Manchester, we have impacted profoundly on the economic health of the region.

And through our employees, we have added to the social, cultural and recreational climate of the community. We exist to serve our friends and caring that they bring to their jobs extends into their many community activities, where they are also committed to making life better for us all.

WE ARE WELL-AWARE, however, of the health cost concerns expressed by many area residents. Be assured that we remain committed to do all we can to maintain that very delicate balance between reasonable costs and the need — no, the demand — for high quality, absolutely perfect health care.

For after all, Manchester Memorial is a community hospital. We exist to serve our friends and neighbors: responsible, concerned citizens like yourselves who are motivated by a social concern not found in many organizations today.

We are socially conscious institutions and we are expected to be. We offer support groups, educational programs, health seminars all at no or reduced charges in the interest of wellness and prevention. We maintain unprofitable services simply because we feel that as a full-service community hospital we must have them available.

And we maintain our services 24 hours a day. We are there because the community wants us there — to be ready just in case a husband, wife, child or parent needs us at 3 a.m.

HOW ODD THEN to wake up one day and discover that we have become villains — accused of pushing up the cost of health care out of our own greed. That is nonsense.

All the new regulatory pressures from the federal and state governments will only be good for our citizens as long as we do not lose sight of the values of compassion and concern that have driven the hospital system in the past.

Knowing the dedication and commitment of the "Lifeworkers" at Manchester Memorial Hospital, I know that Manchester area residents can rest assured that their hospital will meet the challenges and continue to provide high quality care.

Warren L. Prelesnik is executive director of Manchester Memorial Hospital.

Oman bullies its way into U.S. contract

WASHINGTON — There must be something fishy about a multi-million-dollar Pentagon contract that's what appears to have happened to a $50 million contract for the operation of three U.S.-built military bases in the strategic Sultanate of Oman.

At the insistence of the Sultan and his British advisers, the caretaking contract was supposed to be awarded to a British firm, Airwork Ltd., which took on an American partner, Vinnell Corp., to make the deal less offensive to the Pentagon.

The Pentagon and other U.S. agencies didn't want to turn over super-secret American code machines and other equipment to a foreign company.

But as we've reported, the Sultan of Oman is an absolute ruler whose whim is law in the desert nation that dominates the vital Strait of Hormuz.

If the contract doesn't go to the British firm, the United States might be unceremoniously deprived of its royally granted privilege to use the Omani bases for military emergencies and intelligence.

SO THE PENTAGON reluctantly agreed to give the contract to the British-American consortium as a "sole source" supplier — despite previous competitive bidding. The announcement was to have been made last December. The Omanis were officially, though privately, informed that their demands were being met.

But the U.S. companies that had been bidding for the contract — which ultimately may be worth $2 billion — protested. One of them had spent $1 million in its bid preparation. The whole matter was held up pending review by various U.S. agencies.

Then, about three weeks ago, we got wind of the situation and began making inquiries. The response was electrifying. The budget also includes money for major renovations on both the Storrs and Hartford law school campuses and funds to correct violations of the Omani and their British advisers "want complete access to the bases where our classified material is stored."

That was alarming enough. But Watto also reportedly insisted that the civilian contractor "report directly to the SOA/P (Sultanate of Oman Air Force) commander of each base." It was not clear whether the contractor was supposed to report to the base commander before the U.S. Air Force — or whether he would report to the Americans at all.

One thing was clear, though: The United States was losing control of the bases it had spent hundreds of millions of dollars building and upgrading.

The situation is particularly sensitive right now, because the 1980 U.S.-Oman agreement allowing American use of the bases is up for a mandated five-year review. In fact, a team of Pentagon and State Department representatives was scheduled to be in Oman this week to discuss the review.

THE CASE HAS some disturbing ramifications. "This is one of the first times that a leader of a country, after making agreement with the United States to interfere with operations of the U.S. government," a source told us. It is also one of the few times a government has insisted that a U.S. contract be awarded on a non-competitive basis to a foreign company, he added.

What if everyone started behaving like the Sultan of Oman?

Anyone who believes the conservative Heritage Foundation's policy decisions are set in concrete (or chiseled on the wall of a Stone Age cave) should consider these recent developments:

• U.S. Synthetic Fuels Corp.: The foundation has long been critical of the government-funded Synfuels program as a waste of taxpayers' money. But in a new analysis, while reiterating its opposition to Synfuels' long-term existence, the foundation makes this significant exception, writing:

"The federal government should meet the commitments it has made to investors on which those companies rely. Eliminating the corporate tax obligations for the rest of the staff. If there is not enough money left in the category near the end of the fiscal year, then an additional appropriation can be requested. Just like they do in any other category that runs short."

• International Fund for Agricultural Development: This United Nations program, intended to promote self-sufficiency in Third World nations, has been a favorite target of conservative, who see it as one more extravagant U.N. boondoggle. In fact, the Reagan administration balked at upping the substantial U.S. contribution in the face of a cutback by OPEC nations.

But a Heritage Foundation official in a recent speech voiced praise for the IFAD program for helping to meet the challenge of the Third World's persistent problems of hunger and low productivity, and said the agency deserves continued U.S. support.

Your Neighbors' Views Do you think Mother's Day is too commercialized?

Vince Sheehan, East Hartford: "Absolutely. Everybody's making money but mother."

John C. Rivusa, Manchester: "No. I think some ways, yes it is slightly commercial, but it's not too bad."

Harriet Sheehan, East Hartford: "I have no opinion."

Mary Boyle, Rockville: "No. I love Mother's Day. It's a time for all the kids to get together. We don't commercialize it that much."

Anthony Sale, Manchester: "Let's make it more commercial. It's Mother's Day all the time. Don't forget the mother."

Melissa Wagner, Manchester: "Absolutely. It's OK if the kids cook breakfast but the cards and gifts are too much."

Gretchen Wieda, Bolton: "Absolutely. It's OK if the kids cook breakfast but the cards and gifts are too much."

Connecticut In Brief

Boys found chained to bed
NEW HAVEN — New Haven police are investigating the case of two young boys found chained and padlocked to the bed in their apartment.

Police said they received a report of the incident at 12:30 p.m. Sunday and found two brothers, aged 11 and 12, chained to the bed. The incident was reported by a 12-year-old neighbor the boys resounded to call the police.

Firefighters freed the boys and police are looking for their father. They said their father had left them "for a few hours" to go to work.

UConn wants national rank
STAMFORD — Additional space for scientific research is a top priority for the University of Connecticut which would be committed to spending $1.5 million for a new science building under a budget proposal.

The UConn Board of Trustees approved a $33 million capital improvement budget for 1986-87 Friday that would provide $1.5 million to design a $11.5 million science tower for biology and materials science.

The capital budget also includes money for major renovations on both the Storrs and Hartford law school campuses and funds to correct violations of the Omani and their British advisers "want complete access to the bases where our classified material is stored."

That was alarming enough. But Watto also reportedly insisted that the civilian contractor "report directly to the SOA/P (Sultanate of Oman Air Force) commander of each base." It was not clear whether the contractor was supposed to report to the base commander before the U.S. Air Force — or whether he would report to the Americans at all.

Suspect wants charges out
WATERBURY — One of two men convicted of killing three Purulor Security guards wants a judge to drop the charges rather than await a trial because of a prosecutor's conduct.

Donald Costure, 30, of Wallingford claims the prosecutor's conduct at his first trial was so deliberate and prejudicial that another trial would constitute double jeopardy.

Costure and Lawrence Pelletier, 40, of Waterbury were sentenced to 75 years to life in prison after a jury found them guilty of ambushing the guards in 1979 during a $1.8 million heist at a Purulor depot in Waterbury.

Edward T. Gody of Vernon, a 26-year Hartford police veteran working part-time for Purulor, Leslie A. Clark of Plymouth and William West of Cromwell were cut down in a half of semi-automatic gunfire in the pre-dawn raid.

Last month, the state Supreme Court overturned Pelletier's 1982 conviction on three counts of murder. The high court found that Costure's conviction in December. In both cases, the Supreme Court ruled Assistant State's Attorney Walter Scanlon was guilty of misconduct when he addressed the jury with his closing arguments.

Residents wary of imports
HARTFORD — The latest Connecticut Poll shows state consumers pay attention to whether goods were made in the United States or abroad, but even so, most say they consider the quality and value more than the origin.

At the same time, a two-to-one majority said they favored trade restrictions on Japanese goods, unless Japan voluntarily reduces the amount of goods it sells in the United States or agrees to buy more U.S. products.

The Connecticut Poll was conducted by the Institute of Social Inquiry at the University of Connecticut for the Hartford Courant. It was based on telephone interviews between April 16 and 26 with 500 adults chosen randomly from throughout the state. The margin for error is plus or minus 3 percentage points.

Nearly 85 percent of those polled said they considered the trade imbalance with Japan "very serious" or "somewhat serious." Only 4 percent said it was not a problem and 11 percent considered it "not very serious."

Racist image irks Bloomfield
BLOOMFIELD — Residents are upset that their ethnically diverse community has been labeled racist after three black parents were arrested for sending their children across town lines to the suburb's schools.

What people here are eager to point out is that 20 percent of the town's 18,000 population are black and 60 percent of the public school students are black.

Tiny infant spends special day at home

BLOOMFIELD (UPI) — A local couple celebrated Mother's Day at home with a tiny baby no one ever expected to live long enough to go home.

The smallest infant to be born at Hartford Hospital and survive.

Kathryn Finn, 27, gave birth to the 1-pound, 1-ounce infant December 27. The child was delivered 13 weeks premature by Cesarean section after the mother developed serious complications.

"Try to imagine a pound of butter or hamburger," said Kathryn Finn, trying to describe how small her daughter was at birth.

Jessica Finn now weighs four pounds, 13 1/2 ounces, and went home Saturday with her happy parents.

"We're so excited she's finally coming home with us," her mother said. "We've been coming here every day for four months to see her. It's been hectic and nerve-racking."

The first two days were the worst for the parents.

"At first they said, 'Let's see if she makes it through the first three days.' Then they said, 'Let's see if she makes it through the first week.'" Kathryn Finn said. "After the first week I knew she was going to make it."

Robert Finn, 30, said he was not as confident as his wife that the child would survive. "I had doubts even after the first month," he said.

Hugh Fritch, a research analyst at the state Department of Health Services, called Jessica's survival "quite incredible."

The latest state statistics show babies born weighing less than 500 grams, or less than 1 pound, 2 ounces, have virtually no chance of survival, he said. Those weighing more than 500 grams have a 50-50 chance.

Jessica Finn weighed 482 grams. Hartford Hospital researchers said the smallest baby on record to have survived was born in England in 1928. That child weighed only 10 ounces at birth and had to be fed hourly through a fountain pen.

Jessica Finn was also the smallest ever to be operated on at Hartford Hospital. Two weeks after she was born, doctors had to close a blood vessel in her chest. Her heart and respiration may have to be monitored for as long as a year.

Robert Finn, an auto mechanic, said at first he was afraid even to touch his child. "I looked at how small she was, and then at how big, rough hands, and I was nervous."

But the child's doctor, Leonard Eisenfeld, said such touching and talking to the baby was vital to her development.

"The Finns have been fantastic," he said, "coming in every day, stroking her and talking to her."

Legislators have spotty attendance record

HARTFORD (UPI) — Connecticut legislators have a variety of excuses, but they missed nearly one-fourth of all their committee meetings and hearings this year, and some have missed more than half.

The Legislature's committees' jobs are now done, as the House and Senate meet to act on the 3,500 bills that are now before the Legislature.

Edward T. Gody of Vernon, a 26-year Hartford police veteran working part-time for Purulor, Leslie A. Clark of Plymouth and William West of Cromwell were cut down in a half of semi-automatic gunfire in the pre-dawn raid.

Last month, the state Supreme Court overturned Pelletier's 1982 conviction on three counts of murder. The high court found that Costure's conviction in December. In both cases, the Supreme Court ruled Assistant State's Attorney Walter Scanlon was guilty of misconduct when he addressed the jury with his closing arguments.

It's a citizen legislature and you're going to have absences," said House Speaker R.E. Van Norstrand, R-Darien. "Plus, I always say it's not how much time you spend. It's what you did with the time you spent."

But House Minority Leader Irving J. Stolberg, D-New Haven, said, "There are people who don't measure up."

He said the meetings of the Government Administration and Elections Committee conflicted with those of the Environment Committee. However, records indicate the two committees met at the same time only once, and Candelori missed both.

The legislative leadership also had poor attendance records. They said, however, that their leadership duties make it less important for them to be at every committee meeting or hearing.

Senate Majority Leader Reginald J. Smith, R-New Haven, said, "You can't be in three places at once. Our game plan was to have some leadership people on key committees for better coordination, but not have them involved in the committee routine."

Cheshire cache linked to group sought in heist
CHESHIRE (UPI) — The FBI has found small quantities of what could be raw materials for making bombs in a garage rented by a fugitive linked to a bloody 1981 British armored car robbery.

In a copyright article Monday, The Hartford Courant reported that an FBI spokesman said the garage had been rented to Marilyn Sue Buck, who was arrested Saturday.

The FBI said the garage on South Main Street may be just one of several "safe houses" or storage areas rented in Connecticut by the terrorist group calling itself the May 19 Coalition.

Buck dodged authorities by moving within a network of safe houses after the botched robbery that left two police officers and a guard dead and three others wounded, federal officials say.

They probably have other safe houses in the state we haven't found out about yet," FBI agent Jerry Schumard told The Courant.

Pay raise problems

Members of Congress may be more worried over a growing rebellion than the one in Nicaragua — a move to make it more difficult for them to raise their $75,100 salaries.

Last month, Arizona became the 13th state to ratify a proposed constitutional amendment forbidding members from raising their pay until an election is held.

Those who can't remember the introduction of such an amendment are forgiven: It was proposed in 1789 and ratified by only six states before being lost to history.

The obscure amendment was dug up by a Texas student, Gregory Watson of Austin, in 1982. Disturbed by the back-door ways congressmen typically go about raising their own pay, Watson is crusading for passage of the constitutional amendment forcing them to take the issue to voters.

Thirty-eight states are needed for ratification. Watson predicts victory by 1989 — the 200th anniversary of the U.S. Constitution.

"Sure it's an effective weapon. But we should add radar guidance, heat-seeking and Stealth capabilities, and multiple knotheads... uh... which end is the handle?"

Work space blues

Federal bureaucrats chafed when President Reagan, in 1983, ordered a cutback in the average work space of government office employees from 164 square feet to 135 square feet by October 1986.

By October of last year, however, the average worker still had 162 square feet of space — a drop of less than 2 percent — and the program was hopelessly off schedule.

Now comes word from the Office of Management and Budget that the space-reduction program actually may be costing more to implement than it is saving.

Federal agencies spent about $1.4 million to draw up plans for reducing space, and another $0.7 million to remodel smaller quarters. However, the cost of carrying the vacant space on the government's inventory reportedly is as high as $20 million a year.

Blood red

Limerick writer George N. Lucas penned this one in honor of President Reagan's trip to Germany:

A wreath for Der Fuhrer's war dead? We should honor the Russians instead. Fighting Nazis, they died On America's side.

But, of course, all their bloodshed was Red.

"We're going to be the FRIENDLIEST bank to go under this year."

Three reasons for the defeat Here're figures on land, library

To the Editor: I would like to thank the residents of Bolton who voted for me in the May 6 town election. In the past few days I have tried to objectively review why I was not re-elected to the Board of Education. I believe there are three reasons:

1. The derogatory remarks I made about the Board of Finance members. This did not get me any votes and in all probability cost me. This will not happen again.

2. Name recognition. I have lived in Bolton for eight years but there are still some people who do not know me. I will try to change this in the next couple of years.

3. Democrats did not vote. Of 29 positions in the election 29 of them went to Republicans and nine went to Democrats. The approximate number of voters in town are 870 Republicans, 820 unaffiliated and 807 Democrats. It appears that the Democrats turn out in greater numbers than the Democrats. This is discouraging for the Democratic candidates who work hard to be elected. I can not believe the Republican candidates are that much better than the Democratic candidates.

For the next town election, in two years, I will have to try to get the Democratic voters out. The fact that I was not re-elected is only a temporary setback for me. I have already become member of the Advisory Council to the Library Media and Computer Center. I did not have time for this committee prior to this. I will remain active. I enjoyed the two years that I served on the Board of Education and would like to serve again. If the opportunity presents itself, Thanks again for your votes.

Major changes are ahead for Taurus in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 485, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10101.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) People whose support you need will back off today if they think you are disguising your true motives. Lay all of your cards on the table.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Plan your moves carefully today so that you don't get mixed in a sticky situation where it becomes necessary for you to be impartial.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) It's important that you know when to stop selling today or you might make a poor deal for yourself and then talk the other guy out of it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Focus completely on the activity at hand today, if you decide upon a fun involvement, don't feel guilty about duties you're temporarily shoving.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 31) The aspects indicate that you may have a tendency today to cater to your wasteful whims regardless of what your common sense tells you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Do not be too hasty to point the finger of blame at others today without examining your own behavior. You may be the culprit, not they.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Poor decisions will be the result in important matters today if you worry too much about the life and maybe instead of concentrating on the here and now.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Put your faith in one who has proven loyal to you previously, not in an individual who you hope may be able to do something for you in the future.

THE long and the short of it

By James Jacoby

Pre-empting with a long suit has one main disadvantage: You inform your opponents that you are probably short in other suits. A declarer has to remember that tables of probability of distribution do not apply when one defender is known to have a long suit.

After North had responded one no-trump, he had sufficient values to show his second suit at the three level when the three-diamond bid took away his bidding room. North was happy to raise to game, even though his diamond king was poorly placed.

The defense started with two diamond tricks. Next came a club, and declarer took the ace. A spade was played to the queen in dummy and a heart back to the king. The contract was safe, but a decision needed to be made for the overtrick. Normally, Trooper Augusto R. St. Silva, assigned to the force at the recommendation of an internal review board, said St. Silva pulled over the motorist on Oct. 1, on Route 121 in Newton, allegedly on a speeding violation, then began writing tickets for two charges of driving to endanger.

As St. Silva spoke to the motorist he discovered they were both in the same law and justice course at the University of Massachusetts Boston campus, and then offered not to report the driving violations if the motorist turned over his term paper several days later.

"He didn't believe what happened," Trubacco said of the driver, who called police headquarters. Police then observed the driver handing the paper over to the trooper in the school cafeteria at St. Silva tore up the tickets, Trubacco said. Trubacco would not name the motorist.

Motor homes like cars

Court eases rules on searches

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court, limiting the constitutional privacy rights of people who live in motor homes, ruled today that police can search the hybrid vehicles without a warrant. The 5-3 ruling, which reversed a decision by the California Supreme Court, said motor homes — such as the elaborately outfitted recreational vehicles favored by some vacationers — are more like cars than houses as far as law enforcement searches are concerned.

Writing for the majority, Chief Justice Warren Burger said the Fourth Amendment "protects the right of people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects" and in such areas a warrant is required before a search. However, he said, "There are of course exceptions to the general rule that a warrant must be secured... To fail to apply the exception to vehicles such as a motor home tends to use as an instrument of illicit drug traffic and other activity."

Police surround radicals' home

MOVE members had been living for about four years, was filthy. Neighbors said MOVE keeps dozens of stray cats and dogs, and the house is infested with rats. The Philadelphia District Attorney's Office last week conducted interviews with residents about possible criminal violations by MOVE members, after increasing pressure from neighbors.

Assault charges lodged

An East Hampton man was arrested early Saturday after police said he assaulted two Manchester brothers at a Hartford Road restaurant. Donald D. Clough, 25, was charged with one count each of second- and third-degree assault. Police said they learned of the altercation after a patrol officer saw Clough's car speed out of the parking lot at Luigi's Restaurant at 704 Hartford Road. When the officer stopped Clough, he found him covered with blood, police said.

The other victim was Thomas Kibbie, 28, of 17 Edgerton St. Clough was released after booking on a $200 non-arrest bond and ordered to appear Wednesday in Manchester Superior Court.

East suffers famine in loss to Stratford

Stratford — From feast to famine. East Catholic, which scored 25 runs in a one-sided victory Friday over Aquinas, managed just two tallies Saturday afternoon as it fell to Stratford High, 4-2, in the annual James W. Penders Memorial Scholarship Game at Penders Field in Stratford.

The loss was the eighth in 14 outings for the Eagles with one tie. East must win five of its final six games — and then beat Aquinas whom it tied earlier in the campaign — if it hopes to qualify for state tournament play. At this point East coach Jim Penders isn't sure his team is up to the task. "I was quite disturbed by our kids' effort," he voiced his displeasure. "For some reason we were very flat going into the game."

Senior rightshander Larry Stratford, 23, absorbed the losing for East. He walked five while striking out four. Jim Zdru was the winning hurler for Stratford. He walked only two and fanned three. Riggs collected two of East's six hits. East is back in action Tuesday night against HCC foe Xavier High at Palmer Field in Middletown at 7:30 p.m.

Bolton whipped

BOLTON — With Steve Press going 6-for-6, East Granby whipped Bolton High, 17-4, in non-conference baseball multi-up action Saturday at the Bulldogs' field.

East Granby is now 6-7 for the season while the Bulldogs are winless in 14 outings.

Todd Tobias slugged a two-run homer in the first inning for Bolton.

Bolton's next outing is Tuesday at Rocky Hill High at 3:15.

West Hartford resident Grant E. Richardson was charged with drunken driving Friday night after police said he drove his car over the center line on West Middle Turnpike and collided with another car.

Police said that both Richardson, 21, and the other driver, Nancy S. Bertram, 27, of 476 Adams St., suffered head and leg injuries and were taken to Manchester Memorial Hospital. A hospital spokeswoman said that Bertram was treated for her injuries and released but said there is no record of Richardson having come to the hospital.

Police said Richardson admitted at the hospital that he had been drinking with a friend at a Manhattan bar shortly before the accident.

Three people hospitalized last week at Manchester Memorial Hospital after a May 4 automobile accident in Manchester have been released, a hospital spokeswoman said today.

Brian DeLaney, 24, of Farmington, the driver of one car and the most seriously injured of the three, was released Sunday.

Two passengers in the second car, Pearl Hill and Susan Durance, were released from the hospital Thursday and Friday, respectively. A hospital spokesman said last week that Durance suffered a hip injury. The spokesman refused to give details of the other injuries.

Police held DeLaney at fault for the accident, which they said occurred when he drove into the unlighted intersection of West Center and McKee streets shortly before 3 a.m. A drunken driver had crashed into an electrical pole less than an hour earlier, cutting power to the area.

He has not been charged in connection with the accident.

Celtics play 'scared' in slam-dunking 76ers

BOSTON — The Boston Celtics were good and scared. They evened his season record at 3-3, and raised his career win total to 252.

How important are 300 wins? "It's a lot tougher to pick up at the start of the year and go traveling around the country," he said. "It's the single most motivating factor for continuing to play. Playing is not nearly as much fun as it used to be."

"It's a job, a job I enjoy. But I have a lot more involved now. I have to think about more than just going out and pitching," Sutton said. "There are considerations at home that I have to be concerned with."

"As long as nobody in my support group says 'stay home,' I think I've got an excellent chance. But if somebody tells me they can't take it any more, that they don't want me to be away, that's the day to go home. It's that simple."

Nothing could have been simpler than Sutton's first four innings. He retired the first 12 hitters he faced until Tony Armas broke up the string of perfection with his ninth homer of the year. Sutton went on to allow Armas' 10th homer and another solo shot by Rich Gedman before being removed.

"Mechanically, this is the best I've thrown all year," Sutton said. "I've had loose mechanics lately, and at this stage of my life, I can't get out and expect to win unless everything feels right."

Armas' second homer was the 20th of his career, and it came against the team he started his career with. Rogers Clemens, 34, took the loss with nine strikeouts in seven innings. He was lifted in the eighth following singles to Mike Heath and Bill Buckner.

Heath took third on Davis' hit and scored when Dusty Baker's grounder to first eluded Bill Buckner.

Kevin McInnis scored a playoff career-high 28. Robert Parish settled and Larry Bird added 23 as the Celtics' starting frontline outscored the Sixers counterpart 77-73.

Game 2 will be played Tuesday at Boston Garden. Sixers center Moses Malone registered 19 points and 11 rebounds while forward Charles a full 46 minutes. When you're playing Philly, at no point can you let up against them. "We didn't want Moses to hurt us down low so we doubled down as much as we could," said Boston guard Danny Ainge. "We wanted to let (Maurice) Cheeks beat us from the outside, if he could."

The Sixers guard scored a team-high 27 points, hitting 8-of-14 from the floor and all 11 free-throw opportunities. The Celtics, who have won 18 of their last 19 home games, are seeking to become the first champions to successfully defend a title since their 1963-64 counterparts. By sweeping Milwaukee in four games, Philadelphia had a week to prepare for Boston, while the Celtics did not finish their semifinal series with Detroit until Friday night.

"We had to transfer our minds from the Detroit Pistons," said Jones. Philadelphia coach Billy Cunningham said that for Game 2, his team "must be ready at the start and we have to make sure we're more prepared." The Celtics think they know what the changes will be.

Patrick Ewing to do his talking in New York

By Mike Barnes United Press International NEW YORK — Now we know why Patrick Ewing spent his four seasons at Georgetown avoiding reporters — he was saving his voice for the New York media onslaught that awaits him.

The Knicks were preparing a red-carpet welcome for the man who led the Hoyas to two NCAA championship games, New York's last in the NBA in rebounding, lost its top two centers to injuries last season and finished with a 34-50 record, third worst in the league.

Center Bill Cartwright missed the season with a broken ankle and backup Marvin Webster was sidelined with hepatitis. Bernard King led the league in scoring despite missing 16 games with various ailments, including a career-threatening knee injury with three weeks left in the season.

"We've had our share of bad breaks but hopefully this is the start of a new regime," said Knicks executive vice president Dave DeBusschere, who was a nervous wreck in the last few moments of the lottery. "Ewing's a player that's got to help us. I hope all the bad breaks are behind us."

DeBusschere was the picture of composure six years ago as a star player with the Knicks. But on Sunday, while sitting on the dais waiting for Stern to announce the lottery winner, he was sweating. DeBusschere held his head in his hands as the No. 2 envelope was opened. He was sweating. DeBusschere raised his fist and wiped his brow as the crowd of 200 roared.

"I'd rather be taking the last shot in a game than waiting for a card to be opened," said DeBusschere. "When you sit there and have to control over anything, it's murder. There's no strategy, no mental preparation, nothing. You just sit there and hope you're lucky."

"I sure hope I'm never in one again. It was no fun sitting up there." Minutes after the announcement, DeBusschere unveiled a Knicks No. 33 jersey — Ewing's name in cursive — with the 7-footer's name on the back. New York fans got an inkling of the good fortune ahead when, on Saturday night, the first number of the state's "Pick Six" lottery was — you guessed it — 33.

"We interpreted that as a good sign," a club spokesman said. Ewing, who has the legs of the seven non-playoff clubs were placed in sealed envelopes. Stern plucked the envelopes from a Plexiglas container and put them in slots numbered one through seven. The commissioner then opened the envelopes, beginning with No. 7. The six-minute ceremony, which took place at the Waldorf-Astoria, was telecast live nationally at halftime of Game 1 of the Boston-Philadelphia playoff series. It replaced the live telecast of the lottery. The pre-lottery mood was festive. Indiana coach George Irvine played his time playing gin with Pacers coach Herbert Simon's daughter and Knicks publicity director John Cirillo walked with a horsehoe tucked under his arm. The consolation prizes in the lottery figure to be Benoit Benjamin Creighton, Wayman Tisdale of Oklahoma, Karl Malone of Louisiana Tech, Chris Mullin of St. John's, Detlef Schrempf of Washington or Xavier McDaniel of Wichita State.

Cooper hits brakes to Brewers' losing

By Collins Yearwood United Press International

The Milwaukee Brewers were on a three-game losing skid when Cecil Cooper applied the brakes. Cooper's first homer of the year capped a five-run fifth inning Sunday to lead the Brewers to a 7-4 victory over the California Angels.

SF's Gott gets to trot around the bases a lot

By Joe Sexton United Press International

In his first three years in the major leagues, the only home run trot Jim Gott ever made was back to the dugout after giving up one Sunday.

The right-hander, who before this season had never taken a major-league at-bat, blasted two solo homers to twice rally the Giants and pave the way for San Francisco's 3-1, 10-inning victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

In addition to becoming the first pitcher to hit two home runs in one game since Met Walt Terrell in 1983, Gott laid down a sacrifice bunt to help the Giants score

Royals' Quisenberry puts stop to Yankees

By Rick Gosselin United Press International

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Dan Quisenberry again qualifies as a relief ace and the American League champion Kansas City Royals can blame Triple-A hitting.

The Kansas City right-hander came on to strike out Rickey Henderson with runners on second and third and two outs in the eighth inning of a 5-3 game Sunday and his Royals then made Quisenberry the winning pitcher by scoring twice in the ninth for a 6-5 victory over the Yankees.

Quisenberry has been struggling all season and reached what most considered his low point last Wednesday night when he was summoned to mop up against Baltimore in the ninth inning of a 4-3 game and promptly yielded four runs. But Quisenberry himself didn't consider that his low point.

At San Diego, Dave Dravecky, 2-2, and Rich Gossage combined on a seven-hitter and the Padres took advantage of a two-run throwing error by first baseman Keith Moreland to post the victory.

Dodgers 2, Pirates 0

At Los Angeles, Bobby Castillo, making his first NL start since 1981, pitched a four-hitter over 6 1/3 innings and Greg Brock drove in two runs with a homer and single to lead Los Angeles. Castillo struck out six to give his first decision of the year. Lee Tunnell, 0-4, absorbed the loss.

Los Angeles' Terry Whitfield (45) is back safely as Pittsburgh first baseman Lee Mazzilli tries to tag Whitfield going back to the base in second-inning action. Dodgers blanked the Pirates, 2-0.

Four slots open at Indy

By Gary Kule United Press International

INDIANAPOLIS — Four slots remain to be filled for the starting grid in the May 26 Indianapolis 500 and those vacancies should be occupied by the close of next week's second round of qualifying.

Weather conditions were not ideal for most drivers waiting to take qualifying runs Sunday. Although only two made the attempt to increase the field to 29, both were successful.

Steve Chastney made his way to No. 28 in the field as he established a record for V-8 stock block engines with a four-lap average of 264.224 mph in a March.

After the one-year-old track driving 210 mph by Tom Goewia was broken twice in the first four qualifying runs, excessive winds and warm track surfaces negated all efforts to lower the new standard.

Chet Philip, in a Lola Cosworth, was the only other driver to make a qualifying run Sunday and he finished a 203.661. So far the slowest car in the field is the Lola-Cosworth of Derek Daly at 203.082. The field average is 207.672.

After the field is filled, possibly by next Saturday, drivers still have an opportunity to bump the slower cars from the grid.

Slimmer, quicker Ivan Lendl able to turn back McEnroe

By Martin Lader United Press International

NEW YORK — A year ago, John McEnroe laid down a challenge to all those who dared to test him on the tennis court.

By winning 71 of 73 matches, capturing Wimbledon and the U.S. Open Championships along the way, McEnroe set himself far apart from the rest of the field.

And at the age of 28, with his competitive fire, it didn't seem likely that McEnroe would allow his game to fall apart.

After Ivan Lendl lost to McEnroe in the U.S. Open final last September, his sixth loss of the year to him, Lendl said he accepted the challenge. He embarked on a severe diet and physical training program in an effort to make himself stronger and faster.

quicker feet was highly visible Sunday when Lendl crushed McEnroe, 6-3, 6-3, in the final of the 1985 U.S. Open.

It was Lendl's 18th consecutive match victory and his fourth tournament success in a row. The competition on the court of Forest Hills was sponsored by Shearson Lehman Brothers.

"I'm playing better than I ever did in my life," Lendl said after accepting the winner's check of $80,000. "I was a lot of pressure on him. Everytime he missed a first serve he knew a big forehand was coming."

"I was able to read him a little better than normally." From the beginning, it wasn't meant to be Lendl's afternoon. The two-time defending champion had the second point of the match taken away from him following a protest by Lendl, and was trailing 4-6 before he got on the scoreboard.

"I started off on a bad foot," McEnroe said. "I had some chances after that but I didn't use in the big points."

McTavish said he hoped his life and hockey career can resume.

"I want to put my career together," he said. "I'm going to the Edmonton Oilers, but I don't want people to think I'm running away. I'm not. I've been around here for seven years and I've got a good opportunity to turn my life around and start new in a new area with new surroundings."

England soccer stadium engulfed, 51 are dead

By United Press International

BRADFORD, England — Firemen fought 21 bodies Sunday in the charred ruins of the Bradford City soccer stadium, another person died in the hospital and 211 people were injured in a flash fire that engulfed the grandstand during a game.

"We now have the dreadful, long, meticulous process of identification ... and this is where patience is needed," said West Yorkshire Police Chief Colin Sampson.

He said 80 people were unaccounted for after Saturday's blaze at the stadium in the industrial city of Bradford, some 200 miles north of London. But that figure included the dead, all as yet unidentified.

Many people reported missing in Saturday's panic may now be home and safe, a police spokesman said. In Birmingham, there was another soccer stadium tragedy. A 15-year-old boy died and at least 75 were injured when a wall collapsed during a riot Saturday. The wall collapsed as some 200 police, many with riot shields, fought scores of rowdy fans who showered the field with iron bars and bricks at a game between Birmingham and Leeds.

Police said 123 people were arrested. Ken Evans, the West Midlands assistant chief constable, said it was the worst violence he had ever seen at a soccer game.

The blaze at Bradford engulfed some 3,000 spectators in the 60-year long stand in four minutes just before halftime in Saturday's Third Division English League game between Bradford City and Lincoln City. The game was abandoned when the fire broke out.

Some people died in their seats. Others were crushed against padlocked gates at the back of the stand. Some probably suffocated and died from lack of oxygen as the flash fire roared through the bleachers, rescuers said.

Seventy-two people were still in the hospital, police said, including three police officers. A total of 23 police were injured in the incident. Sampson said there were some reports claiming there was "no evidence" of arson.

"But there are other stories which may lead men and my officers to different conclusions," he added. "I am not prepared to come down on either side."

Prime minister Margaret Thatcher spoke by telephone with the chairman of Bradford City soccer club before meeting with cabinet ministers Sunday to review the tragedy.

Pope John Paul II offered his condolences Sunday. Cardinal Agostino Casaroli, the Vatican secretary of state, sent the telegram to Bishop William Gordon Wheeler of Leeds in the pope's name.

Saturday's fire was the deadliest incident at a British soccer stadium since 1971 when 96 fans were crushed to death during a game at Ibrox Park in Glasgow, Scotland.

Football supporters gather on the pitch at Bradford City Saturday. Fifty-one died.

Eastwood comes from behind

By Mike Rubin United Press International

IRVING, Texas — Bob Eastwood and Payne Stewart produced yet another chunk of evidence Sunday to reinforce the belief held by all who have ever held a putter — that golf is a crazy game.

Over the course of a few minutes on a steamy afternoon, Stewart went from a certain winner to a frustrated, but philosophical, runner-up in the Byron Nelson Golf Classic.

Eastwood, meanwhile, could only look at a first-place check for $200,000 and wonder, "Where did this come from?"

It is hardly unusual to see big leads disappear during the last nine holes of a tournament — as Curtis Strange found out at the Masters this year.

But see a three-shot lead disappear on the final hole is certainly out of the ordinary. That is what happened Sunday to Stewart, who then compounded his woes by playing the first hole of sudden death like a weekend hacker.

Eastwood didn't do much better, but the bogey he made on the first playoff hole brought him his third tour victory.

"It all happened so quick, I don't know what's going on," said Eastwood, who played a dozen years on the PGA tour before acquiring his first victory.

"I know I was a know Payne will be very dejected about it because he had the tournament wrapped up. But it's one of those things."

The two wound up deadlocked at 12-under 272, three shots in front of Curtis Strange, who posted a splendid 66, and third-round leader Mac O'Grady, who likes his privacy and maintained it Sunday by quietly fading to a three-over 74.

Two shots further back at seven-under 277 came Craig Stadler, Lee Trevino and Chi Chi Rodriguez, who with his $18,250 paycheck became the 51st player to win $1 million on the tour.

Stewart began the day three shots back of O'Grady and quickly made those up. Bodecked in red and blue knickers, he fought off a charge by Watson and had at least a two-shot lead throughout the back nine.

The lead was at three as he stood on the 18th tee. His tee shot on the par-4 hole, however, hooked into a bunker, and as Stewart was walking up the fairway, Eastwood was running in a 45-foot birdie putt.

That meant Stewart had to at least bogey the hole to win, but his second shot landed in a greenside bunker, his next shot sailed all the way over the green into another bunker, and he needed three shots from there.

The double bogey forced a playoff, and on the par-4 16th hole Stewart drove into yet another bunker. The ball was buried in the lip of the trap and all he could do was blast about 20 yards down the fairway.

From there he knocked the ball over the green and once again needed three shots to get the ball in the hole. Eastwood hit a poor second shot, but his bogey was good enough for the win.

"I guess I can look at it like I just won $54,000," said Stewart. "But winning is what you want to do. Maybe I'll just have to win Colonial (next week in Fort Worth, where a year ago he bogeyed the final hole and lost in a playoff to Peter Jacobsen). I'm sure going to try."

Whitworth triumphs at Sleepy Hole SUFFOLK, Va. — Kathy Whitworth overcame her loss of confidence and three bogeys to capture a $200,000 LPGA tournament at the Sleepy Hole Golf Course. Along the way, she also snared her 88th career win.

Whitworth, 45, the all-time professional victory titleholder, ended Sunday's three-day tournament with a nine-under-par 207. Her third round scoring was even at par.

But Whitworth, who finished 66-66-72-207, said she was not pleased with her final round of play.

"I just didn't have any confidence on the greens," said Whitworth, who pocketed $20,000 for her win. "I wasn't concentrating as well today as I did yesterday."

Nevertheless, she found herself one stroke ahead of defending champion Amy Alcott, who ended with a 69-71-68-208 and the second-place purse of $18,500.

Alcott, who won the 1984 tournament at the Portsmouth course, shot a 4-under-par 206 for the day and finished the tournament with an 8-under-par 208.

Elsewhere Sunday, Memphis stopped Houston 17-15 and Tampa Bay downed Jacksonville 21-10.

At Memphis, Tenn., Mike Kelley ran for two touchdowns and a strong Showboats defense stopped Houston in the closing minutes to hold on for their third straight victory and snap a three-game winning streak for the Gamblers.

Houston is 8-4 and Memphis improved to 7-5 to Birmingham for third in the East.

At Jacksonville, Fla., running back Gary Anderson rushed for one touchdown and passed for another to lead the Bandits.

Tampa Bay improved its Eastern Conference first-place record to 9-3. Jacksonville fell to 6-6.

Later Sunday, Denver topped Arizona 42-28.

San Antonio, Texas (UPI) — Don January became the first player to top the $900,000 mark in career winnings on the PGA Seniors tour Sunday by rallying for a two-stroke victory in the $200,000 Dominion Seniors Invitational.

January fired a 5-under-par 67 to finish at 10-under 206 and win the $20,000 first prize by two strokes over Gary Brewer and three over Al Balding and Miller Barber.

Second-round leader Ben Smith, who qualified Tuesday for the tournament, Lee Elder and Peter Thomson each finished at 211.

It was January's 19th victory on the Seniors Tour, besting his career winnings to $914,000, and his third victory of the season.

He has earned $122,700 this season, putting him in first place ahead of Thomson. January began the day a shot behind Smith, who has been a professional golfer for only three years. He pulled into a tie on the back nine with Brewer and Balding and took the lead for good when Balding had a double-bogey on No. 16 and Brewer a bogey on No. 15.

The Dallas resident then closed with two straight birdies to win his second Texas tournament to go along with Brewer and Balding and took the lead for good when Balding had a double-bogey on No. 16 and Brewer a bogey on No. 15.

The turning point of the round, January said, came when he saved par from 10 feet at the 12th hole.

"It was a solid round outside of a hole or two," January said.

Millers celebrate 60th

More than 100 friends and relatives celebrated the 60th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. John Miller of 49 Cornell St. at a dinner April 21 at Fiano's Restaurant in Bolton. The former Lillian E. Bengtson and Miller were married April 25, 1925, at Emanuel Lutheran Church by the late Rev. F.J.O. Cornell. Among the guests were the couple's wedding attendants, Anna (Bengtson) Pontillo of Manchester, who was maid of honor, and Oswald Bauerle of Hartford, who was best man.

The Millers are the parents of two children, Durward J. Miller of Rumney, N.H., and Lorraine M. Warren of Yarmouth Port, Mass. The couple has seven grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren. Before the couple retired, he worked at Hess Oil Co. and she worked at Connecticut Bank and Trust Co. A "Book of Memories," compiled by the guests, was presented to the couple.

Chevy beats Ford; an iris tops the rose

One of my life patterns is sitting at the same table, with the same three men, during our breaks at work. We've been doing it for years. Morning coffee break, lunch break, afternoon coffee break — same seats, same guys. We're jealous of our territory.

We get into some serious talks during these breaks. Lately, though, I've been getting annoyed at two of them. They both own — and swear by — Mustangs. These guys, Mustang is the best car ever. Ever. Do you hear me?

As far as I'm concerned, that's balderdash! Mustang is made by Ford, and there's no way in the world that a Ford is better than a Chevy. No way! Chevrolets are the best cars.

AND THAT'S not all. Here are some more things that are the best. Believe it or not — like it or not.

DEAR ABBY: I applaud those parents who made their sons walk to school and back (a total of 14 miles) for five days when the boys were suspended from the school bus for bad behavior.

As a man writes in accusing those parents of "child abuse," "Beloney! Thanks Abby, for saying you thought the parents should be commended."

Our 15-year-old son was kicked off the school bus for three days for roughhousing. The streets and roads where we live are impossible to walk on and there are no sidewalks, so I drove him. However, he had to pay me the going rate for taxi service. He hated to part with his own money, but he had no choice.

You had better believe that kid never roughoused on the school bus again.

Parents who had kids walk are running with the crowd

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Three cheers for the parents who made their sons walk to school and back (a total of 14 miles) for five days when the boys were suspended from the school bus for bad behavior.

As a man writes in accusing those parents of "child abuse," "Beloney! Thanks Abby, for saying you thought the parents should be commended."

However, he had to pay me the going rate for taxi service. He hated to part with his own money, but he had no choice.

You had better believe that kid never roughoused on the school bus again.

DEAR MOM: Stay tuned for a few words from two bus drivers.

DEAR ABBY: I applaud those parents. I drive high school, junior high and elementary school children. I have 75 lives in my hands, and when I have to keep looking in my rearview mirror to see which kids are ripping up the seats, fighting and throwing things, I can't drive and watch the road the way I should.

In our system, a child has to be "written up" three times for bad conduct before he is suspended. Most kids don't care if they're suspended because either their parents will drive them, or they'll just stay home from school.

I'd love to see parents ride the school bus with their kids just once. They'd never want my job.

My husband rode with one and said, "Never again — it's suicidal!"

Don't use my name. I need this job.

DRIVER (NUTS) IN WISCONSIN

DEAR ABBY: Two gold medals for those parents who made their children cause a disturbance on the school bus. As a school driver, I wish there were more parents like them.

Parents don't realize how much danger is involved when kids misbehave on a school bus. I have my back turned to at least 50 children, and it's not easy to keep track of who's doing what. One junior high school student threw his metal lunch bucket at another boy, missed him and hit me in the head. I was dazed and went off the road, but fortunately I was able to recover in time to keep from going off a bridge! What a terrible tragedy that could have been!

I love children, but this new crap we have coming up is a different breed.

I wish more parents would back up the bus drivers and suspend their kids.

Eating habits lead to gas

Dr. Gott

Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am writing about my very embarrassing problem. I am 68 and in good health. The problem is gas; it doesn't matter what I eat. We like to eat out once in a while, but I am too embarrassed. What can I do?

DEAR READER: Intestinal gas has two components: swallowed air and the products of bacterial action.

Many people have the unfortunate habit of gulping air when they swallow, because they eat too quickly or have a natural tendency to swallow air when they drink. Of course, carbonated beverages provide carbon dioxide, which, when ingested, can cause abdominal distention and gurgling. If you are a gulper, you can significantly reduce intestinal gas by analyzing your eating habits, slowing down and making an effort to avoid air swallowing.

The gas produced by intestinal bacteria is quite another matter. When certain foods are partially digested and enter the large bowel (colon), the normal bacterial inhabitants of the intestine break down these foods. I'm oversimplifying the process, but the end result is gas. Gas-producing foods are a traditional source of jokes, but there is no doubt that beans and legumes do encourage bacterial action.

Recently, nutritionists have discovered that the non-absorbable sugar, sorbitol — a common non-caloric sweetener — is a primary source of gas due to bacterial action. "Sugaries" chewing gum and candy, for instance, can turn an otherwise harmless person into a social liability.

Anyone who suffers the indignity of intestinal gas can usually improve the situation by eating carefully and eliminating spicy foods. An over-the-counter medicine called simethicone often can aid gas reduction.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have been having trouble with weak knees for several years. I am 81. I cannot get up from any sitting position without pushing up with my hands. I am a fairly active housewife. Is there some exercise that would help this problem? I am not overweight; I have always been slender.

DEAR READER: I cannot tell from your question whether your difficulty is due to weak knee joints or weak thigh muscles. I think you ought to see an orthopedic specialist, for example, medicine may help you. On the other hand, muscle weakness is more serious and could represent either an early nerve disorder or a primary muscle disease.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband developed very bad breath. After trying all the usual things, we discovered that half a glass of buttermilk after each meal did away with the odor. Perhaps you could tell us just what the buttermilk does to cure this. It is caused by some kind of body-chemical disorder that some folks have?

DEAR READER: Buttermilk contains, among other things, harmless bacteria called lactobacilli.

Supermarket Shopper

New Jersey toddler joins couponing act

By Martin Sloane
United Press Syndicate

Who is America's youngest couponer? Nancy Costa says her daughter should qualify for the title.

DEAR MARTIN: My husband and our 18-month-old daughter, Kristen, went shopping last Saturday. He dropped me off in front of the supermarket and they went to the all-purpose store.

He found a shopping cart in the parking lot with an advertising circular in the bottom of the child's seat. He left it there, thinking it would help to keep Kristen's bottom clean.

As they strolled down the aisles, Kristen gradually worked the paper out from underneath her and began to play with it. She continued to play with it as my husband loaded one dozen 2-liter Pepsi Cola bottles in the cart. They were on sale for 89 cents a bottle, and my husband thought it was a great bargain.

When they got to the cash register, Kristen held the paper out to the cashier just as she was about to ring up the Pepsi Cola.

"Would you like me to take the coupons off now, or would you like me to take them off at the end?" asked the cashier.

My husband didn't know what she was talking about. "I don't have any coupons," he stammered, slightly bewildered.

"Your daughter just handed me a whole page of Pepsi coupons. Each one is worth 25 cents off a 2-liter bottle," the cashier said.

He was shocked. Kristen had just saved him $3. My husband couldn't hardly wait to tell me the news. We laughed about it but I'm really not surprised. After all, Kristen has been watching me hand my coupons to the cashier for more than a year.

NANCY COSTA, FLEMINGTON, N.J.

DEAR NANCY: Thank you for the "kid couponing" story. I think other mothers will relate to it because one of the best ways to keep a toddler occupied is with a few brightly colored coupons.

Of course, the experts advise against shopping with a young child, but I am sure many readers have no choice. If you are one of them, and have a special way to keep things under control, please write and tell me about it. Write to me in care of this newspaper.

MAZOLA Margarine #1 Savings. Send the required refund form and the net-weight statements from two packages of Mazola margarine, any form. Expires March 9, 1985.

Here's a refund form to write for: Free Sport Bag or $1.50 cash refund. EVEREADY Cash Refund-Free Sport Bag Offer. 165 East Post Road, Westport, CT 06880. They offer expires March 1, 1985. While waiting for the form, save three proofs of purchase (the package with the plastic removed) from three of the following: Eveready Super Heavy Duty Battery packages, in any combination: "AA" 4-pack, "C" 2-pack, "D" 2-pack or 9-volt 2-pack.

Award goes to Pauline Baatz of Fort Wayne, Ind.: "Our supermarket had a special on Hungry Jack mashed potatoes. It was on sale for 69 cents, with a regular price of $1.42. The store also doubled my 15-cent coupon, so I only paid 39 cents. When I got the package home, I noticed 45 cents worth of coupons printed on the box. That same week I went back and got another box for 39 cents. But my savings weren't over. No longer that! I found a Hungry Jack $1.50 refund offer that asked for two Universal Product Code symbols. How is that for saving money!"

Very nice, Pauline. Pauline and other readers whose smart shopping experiences appear in this column receive a copy of my book "The Guide to Coupons and Refunds." Write to me at P.O. Box 1149.

Future purchase of Fleischmann's Egg Beaters

DEAR ABBY: I applaud those parents who made their sons walk to school and back (a total of 14 miles) for five days when the boys were suspended from the school bus for bad behavior.

As a man writes in accusing those parents of "child abuse," "Beloney! Thanks Abby, for saying you thought the parents should be commended."

Our 15-year-old son was kicked off the school bus for three days for roughhousing. The streets and roads where we live are impossible to walk on and there are no sidewalks, so I drove him. However, he had to pay me the going rate for taxi service. He hated to part with his own money, but he had no choice.

You had better believe that kid never roughoused on the school bus again.

DEAR MOM: Stay tuned for a few words from two bus drivers.

DEAR ABBY: I applaud those parents. I drive high school, junior high and elementary school children. I have 75 lives in my hands, and when I have to keep looking in my rearview mirror to see which kids are ripping up the seats, fighting and throwing things, I can't drive and watch the road the way I should.

In our system, a child has to be "written up" three times for bad conduct before he is suspended. Most kids don't care if they're suspended because either their parents will drive them, or they'll just stay home from school.

I'd love to see parents ride the school bus with their kids just once. They'd never want my job.

My husband rode with one and said, "Never again — it's suicidal!"

Don't use my name. I need this job.

DRIVER (NUTS) IN WISCONSIN

DEAR ABBY: Two gold medals for those parents who made their children cause a disturbance on the school bus. As a school driver, I wish there were more parents like them.

Parents don't realize how much danger is involved when kids misbehave on a school bus. I have my back turned to at least 50 children, and it's not easy to keep track of who's doing what. One junior high school student threw his metal lunch bucket at another boy, missed him and hit me in the head. I was dazed and went off the road, but fortunately I was able to recover in time to keep from going off a bridge! What a terrible tragedy that could have been!

I love children, but this new crap we have coming up is a different breed.

I wish more parents would back up the bus drivers and suspend their kids.

NEW HAMPSHIRE BUS DRIVER

DEAR ABBY: My mail has been running 100-10-1 in favor of the parents. Tomorrow, a reprint from an Illinois psychologist who couldn't wait to write — so he sent me a telegram.

PRIZE

THE BEST THERE IS

DEAR POLLY: When I'm knitting a sweater with a fancy pattern that requires working with more than one strand of yarn at a time (different colors), my yarns are always getting twisted and tangled. I spend more time straightening them out than knitting! Is there any way of making this kind of work easier? — SANDY

DEAR SANDY: Many of our readers use a neat trick with those 2-liter soda bottles. Cut off the top quarter or third of a plastic 2-liter soda bottle, then slip your ball of yarn inside. Replace the top so that it slips just inside of the bottom of the bottle (to hold it on securely, leaving the neck of the bottle open). Your yarn is now tightly corded in the bottle and you can work away without the ball or skein of yarn flying around or getting tangled. When you're working with multiple strands, do this with each separate ball or skein of yarn. It works best with balls, but can also be used with pull-strings, and

Soda bottle avoids tangles

Pointers

Polly Fisher

You'll find that keeping the strands in order will be much simpler. I'm sending you a copy of my new newsletter "Sewing and Needlework Tips," which has more handy ideas to help you when you're knitting, crocheting, sewing or doing other needlecraft projects.

Others who would like this issue should send $1 for each copy of POLLY'S POINTERS, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1211, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to include the title. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY: I now have an easy way to dust my silk flower arrangements. I spray a dusting of baby powder on a clean cloth, brush it to the flowers. It's easy to get the dust out of the inside of each flower this way. — JANE

DEAR POLLY: Plants can be watered during vacations without the care of another person. Cut a strip of cloth about one inch wide. Put one end of the cloth into a pail of water. Bury the other end of the cloth in the soil of the plant, near the roots of the plant. Set the pail of water slightly above the level of the plant. As the water level in the pail falls, the plant will draw water from the pail to other plants. — GRACE

Latest 'Peyton Place' pales compared to today's soaps

By Joan Hanover
United Press International

NEW YORK — Watching "Peyton Place: The Next Generation" is like going to your high school reunion — it's fun to see what everybody looks like after 16 years and to catch up on the news.

That's the best part of the "Peyton Place" movie to air tonight on NBC from 9-11 p.m. Eastern time. The worst part is that even though the story of sex and skullduggery in a small New England town has been jizzed up for the 1980s, it is tame compared to the goings-on among the Ewings of "Dallas" and the Denver-based Carringtons of "Dynasty."

FAMILIAR FACES APPEARING IN their original roles include Dorothy Malone, Barbara Parkins, Tim O'Connor, Ed Nelson, Pat Morrow, Evelyn Scott, Ruth Warrick, James Douglas and Chris Connolly.

Some have withstood the years better than others, and the contrast between then and now can be cruel when the movie switches to black and white clips from the old series that went off the air in 1969. In the case of Parkins, however, she really has gotten better, not older.

The story begins on the 20th anniversary of Allison Mackenzie's disappearance just before her wedding to Rodney Harrington. That event will be meaningless to anybody under 30 — and to a lot of people over 30 — but it was a major moment in "Peyton Place."

A young woman who looks stunningly like Allison did 20 years ago

BUSINESS

You must be in charge

Follow these basic rules with your new job

Within the next four to six weeks, millions of high school and college graduates, school dropouts and "others" will be trying to enter or re-enter the U.S. job market. The climate is only "fair." While the economy is still in an expansion, the upturn is now maturing and is slowing down. Unless you possess extraordinary skills, you, the job seeker, will be facing fierce competition from the already unemployed as well as new would-be employees.

Your Money's Worth
Sylvia Porter

The business cycle is far from conquered in our country. But even if you are trying to enter at a challenging time, you need not fear the challenge — if you know and truly understand the rules.

Before you make any move whatsoever, find out if you do know yourself. What things do you do best? What things do you enjoy most? What things would you like to do in your future career? If you were laid off from a previous job, do you know what happened to cause your termination? You can, if you have learned from that miserable experience, guard against repeating old mistakes and build on positive new discoveries.

Morin, president and chairman of the outplacement firm of Drake Beam Morin and authors of "Parting Company," says: "If overall you are happy with what you are doing, it will allow you to consider yourself a success." Other questions you are asked, as "Parting Company" puts it, "how willing you are to accept unglamorous but necessary projects by doing small things quickly and well."

• Don't knock your former employer. If you're re-entering the workplace after being terminated, keep your feelings about your former employer to yourself. Those who are interested in your feelings may wonder whether you might describe them in the same terms in the future. Others may wonder — rightfully so — if you're really over leaving your last job.

• Respect your peers and subordinates. When starting a new job, deal as conscientiously with your peers and subordinates as you do with your superiors. The people who work for you are the individuals who can make you great. Deal with the "people" side of your business and job before you immerse yourself in business-jargon decisions.

Rising phone bills may leave millions with no service

By Thomas Ferraro
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Local telephone rates nationwide soared 20 percent the past year and if unchecked, they may force up to 6 million people to go without service, two consumer groups say.

The Ralph Nader-founded Public Interest Research Group and the Consumer Federation of America examined telephone rates in 33 states — covering 85 percent of the nation's population — in wake of the 1984 breakup of American Telephone & Telegraph.

In a report, "Ringing Off the Walls: Alarming Increase in Residential Phone Rates, 1984-1985," released Saturday, they said:

• Residential rates rose by about 20 percent, or $2.5 billion, in 1984.

• Since Jan. 1, local phone companies in 15 states have asked for residential rate hikes, even though 14 of them were granted increases last year.

• "If this trend continues through the rest of 1985 and state regulators grant the same percentage rate requests as in 1984 (47 percent), residential rates will rise another $1.5 billion."

• "1984's residential rate increases plus 1985's projected residential rate hikes may force over 6 million people to go without phone service by the end of 1986 unless state and federal policy makers to preserve affordable phone service."

"Baloney," replied Joe Gagen, a spokesman for the U.S. Telephone Association that represent nearly all of America's 1,400 telephone companies. "They are painting a worse-case scenario that isn't close to reality."

Gagen said federal statistics show the average urban residential monthly flat rate charge in 1984 was $13.80, up from $12.50 in 1983. The flat rate charge is for an unlimited number of local phone calls.

He said the average monthly urban residential bill for budget service rose from $6.25 to $7.50. Budget service is for a limited number of local calls.

In rural areas last year, he said, the average monthly flat rate and budget rates last year were $10.15 and $6.25, respectively.

"Our data shows that people don't disconnect because they can't afford local rate service, 57 or 62 a month," Gagen said. "They disconnect because they can't afford 95 in long distance calls."

In their report, the consumer groups noted that effective June 1, residential rates will rise $1 a month as a result of the Federal Communications Commission's approval of a telephone access charge.

Gene Kimmelman, the consumer federation's legislative director, said the report's figures were based, in part, on a model devised for AT&T to project the impact of rates changes and demands for phone service.

Don't lie in hunt for job

By Gail Collins
United Press International

NEW YORK — When executive headhunter Gilbert Dwyer queried other businessmen about resume falsification, he expected about 10 percent of them to admit to it.

Instead, 26 percent of the 50 executives interviewed said their company had hired employees in the past year who had misrepresented their job qualifications, educational credentials or salary histories.

"That's staggering," said Ward Howell, president of Ward Howell International, a large executive search firm.

"I wouldn't be surprised if there's another 25 percent who haven't discovered the falsifications — or won't admit it."

Ward Howell's own experience, however, seems to indicate the proportions are typical. As part of a proposal by Black and Warner Construction Co. of Farmington to install a hydro facility indicated the plan might not be workable if the town and Catalyt evenly split the estimated $338,000 cost of the work.

"We find a startling incidence — as much as a third — of the resumes we look at have some sort of inflation, exaggeration, misrepresentation," Dwyer said. "Most often they relate to the responsibilities a person has had in prior employment — accomplishments he reports, exaggeration of job qualifications. That's by far the most frequent."

Although most of the applicants Dwyer deals with are long past college age, many still cannot resist hyping their academic credentials. "You'd be surprised," he said. "Not infrequently, accomplished people feel it's necessary to embellish or exaggerate when it really isn't."

One job hunter claimed his degree had come from a school he attended briefly, but left, because it was "more prestigious" than the one he eventually graduated from, Dwyer recalled. "This is a man who had been out of college 12 years and has a fine track record. I don't care what school he went to, but I do care he lied to me."

Among the executives interviewed in the Ward Howell survey, 17 percent said they had hired people within the last year who turned out to have misrepresented their job qualifications. Another 7 percent reported distorted or misleading educational credentials.

Nine percent found exaggerated salary histories and 5 percent reported their organizations encountered misrepresentation in all three areas.

While it is "not uncommon" for applicants to try to avoid revealing their age, Dwyer said job seekers generally do not lie about how old they are. "I don't remember a case when someone misstated his age," he said.

If job-seekers feel they are well-qualified for a position, but lack some crucial requirement like an advanced degree, Dwyer said, they should be honest and hope for the best.

"Even if you don't get caught, you live with the fear of being caught. A failure of trust in an employment relationship is so critical, it's almost irrevocable. You have to trust somebody to be able to delegate responsibility to him. If you have evidence you can't trust him, you just can't work with him," Dwyer dismisses any argument that the problem might be a two-way street, with employers at fault for imposing artificial requirements for jobs.

Shultz talks arms control with Gromyko

VIENNA (UPI) — Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko arrived today for talks with Secretary of State George Shultz that are expected to focus on arms control, the Middle East and superpower friction.

Under tight security, Gromyko was met at Vienna airport by Austrian Chancellor Fred Sinowatz, then headed for the Soviet Embassy where he and Shultz were scheduled to meet for the 11th time. The last meeting came Jan. 8 in Geneva.

The veteran Soviet official said he was happy to be in Austria for celebrations marking the 30th anniversary of the signing of the Austrian state treaty, which freed the country from occupation by Allied troops.

But Gromyko declined to answer any questions from reporters about his meeting with Shultz. "I can only say ... that there are questions which must be discussed with my colleague," he said.

Foreign ministers from 10 other countries, including Britain, France, West Germany and Italy, were also due to arrive for the treaty celebrations today.

Shultz, who arrived Monday, said there were no time limitations set on the meeting with Gromyko, but other U.S. officials said it would probably last three to four hours. There were no plans for a second meeting.

The talks would include discussions on arms control, the Middle East and recent Soviet-U.S. friction such as the March killing of U.S. Army Lt. Arthur Nicholson, who was shot by a Soviet sentry while on an intelligence-gathering mission in East Germany.

"We will talk about all subjects across the board ... touch all the bases," he said. "I think this meeting is timely because, after the first Geneva meeting on arms control we can open up other areas."

Shultz left behind his chief Middle East aide, Richard Murphy, to continue efforts to put together a procedure that would lead to the opening of direct negotiations between the Arabs and the Israelis.

Three reported killed in shootout

PHILADELPHIA — Three members of the radical group MOVE were killed in a shootout with authorities two hours after police bombed their fortified headquarters, setting off a fire that destroyed 80 row houses, a newspaper reported today.

The Philadelphia Daily News said the three MOVE members, a woman and a 9-year-old boy — both suffering from burns — were taken from the house after the bombing Monday.

"It's not going to be over until we search every bit of that ground and find where the tunnels lead," City Managing Director Leo Brooks said.

Police and city officials would not confirm the report. Police prepared to enter the ruins of the house today to look for bodies and survivors and search for secret escape tunnels. A woman and a 9-year-old boy — both suffering from burns — were taken from the house after the bombing Monday.

The concussion bomb, dropped from a police helicopter, smashed through a crude wood-and-steel barriement stop the house and collapsed on the roof. A fire, fanned by hot winds, spread to as many as 60 surrounding structures, and gunfire from within the building kept firefighters from dousing the swirling flames for about an hour, Fire Commissioner William Richmond said.

At least two people in the house, including a 9-year-old boy, suffered burns, and three MOVE members with guns fired escaped into a maze of alleyways, Mayor Wilson Goode said.

Puzzling array of options Mortgages no longer simple

By Steven W. Svrce
United Press International

The good old days of buying a mortgage were more than cheaper — they were a lot less complicated.

The times when shopping for a mortgage simply meant looking for the lowest rates are long gone. Now the home buyer has to consider adjustable rates, caps, indexes, leases, points, APRs, margins, buydowns, short or long terms, and — heaven forbid — the possibility of something called negative amortization.

That's only part of it. Read on. A decision between two different kinds of mortgages may not come down to which is a better deal, but finding the one whose terms make it possible for you to be approved.

A bank will offer several kinds of mortgages with variations available on each. It can get complicated.

"I've found the most knowledgeable individuals need to be told about a product at least three times before he understands what you're talking about. The average person may not be as knowledgeable about figures," said Helen O'Donnell, vice president of residential mortgages at Fleet Financial Group in Providence, R.I.

FIXED-RATE 30-YEAR MORTGAGES were recently hovering around 13 percent, give or take a half percent. Adjustable-rate mortgages, or ARMs, for 30 years were around 10 percent, some a little lower.

Fixed-rate mortgages may vary by the amount of fees charged or some special incentives — making it difficult to figure out what the best deal is over the long run.

That's one thing the buyer doesn't have to worry about. The lender is required to disclose the annual percentage rate, the effective rate of the mortgage with all the complications considered.

Fees are figured in points, one point equaling 1 percent of the loan amount.

Choosing an ARM involves the obvious risk of higher interest rates in the future, but also the quality of some hedges against that possibility built into a mortgage.

"The customer can't just shop for a rate," said John Battaglia of the Boston Five Savings Bank. "They have to see what the caps are, and what the margin is."

Adjustable-mortgage rates are all based on some kind of index and interest rates are adjusted accordingly to it, usually every six months or year, sometimes every three years.

Caps limit how much the interest rate can change in any given period, and the highest rate the homeowner will ever have to pay through the life of the mortgage.

The most common caps on a 30-year ARM adjusted annually are 2 percent a year and 5 percent for the entire loan.

The lender also builds in a profit margin to the ARM that takes effect at the time of the first adjustment, as much as 2.5 percent. If the mortgage (2 percent cap) is taken out at 10 percent, the first adjustment will be 12.5 percent at the end of the first adjustment period, the interest rate still goes up to 11.5 percent.

Some mortgages cap payment increases but allow the interest rate to fluctuate. If the rate goes higher than the payments, the difference is added to the balance, an effect known as negative amortization.

The choice of a mortgage may also have a lot to do with what is available to an individual homeowner. Banks use a variety of criteria to decide whether a borrower should be approved — but a couple of general guidelines play a big part.

Typically, lenders don't want the homeowner's principal, interest and tax payments to exceed 28 percent of gross income. They don't want those payments plus all other outstanding debt to be more than about 36 percent of gross earnings.

If the higher interest rate of a fixed mortgage makes those figures just slightly out of reach, the same applicant might qualify for a variable loan.

If the applicant has some cash but not a high enough salary, a buydown might help.

A homeowner who uses a buydown literally buys the opportunity to lower the interest rate for a period of time at the beginning of the mortgage. A one-year buydown lowers the interest rate for the first year, probably by 1 percent, for a certain sum of money.

A buydown can cut the interest rate one point for a year, at a cost of one point up front. A 1 percent buydown on a $100,000 mortgage at 13.25 percent would cut monthly payments by $78 — a savings of $936 over the year that costs $1,900.

BUYDOWNS CAN COVER UP to the first three years of a mortgage. A buydown of 2 percent the first year and 1 percent the next two years would save $1,900 over the year that costs $1,900.

Borrowers who need a buydown to qualify usually need to show they'll probably make more money in the near future, often young newbies whose parents are paying the points for the lower rate.

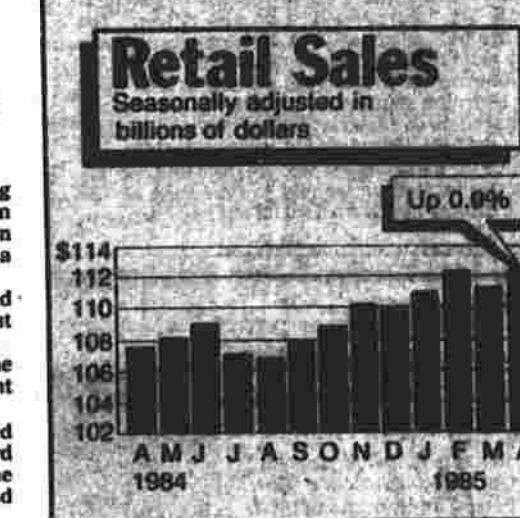

Then there's the question of downpayments and length of the mortgage. Homeowners who want to build equity faster and can afford higher monthly payments may choose a 15-year term, but the vast majority take the 30-year route.

Downpayments can vary, sometimes down to 2 percent. The best deal is available to veterans, who may be able to get a Veterans Administration-backed mortgage without putting a penny down.

A sharp eye for computations can see through this unique Panasonic solar-powered, clear calculator. The JE-580U's acrylic keyboard uses specially-designed transparent circuits and easy-to-read keys. Features include ability to operate under a minimum of 50 lux of light, eight-digit LCD display and three-key memory as well as sign change and square root keys.

Retail sales up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. retailers saw sales improve 0.9 percent in April, the seventh increase in eight months, while the big drop in March turned out to be quite a bit less than originally reported, the Commerce Department said today.

The March revision and the April increase were enough to repair what economists viewed as an important negative trend. It made April's $112.2 billion in sales larger than the first quarter average of $111.1 billion and so started the second quarter with an advance.

March sales were originally reported to have plummeted 1.9 percent but later data changed that to an only 0.7 percent decline.

Retail sales figures, covering both domestic and imported merchandise, are a key indicator of consumer sentiment that in turn is a major pillar of the economy.

Auto sales for the month were up 1.6 percent after falling 2.3 percent in March. But building materials sales slipped back 1.2 percent, a reverse from the 4 percent increase in March and the advances for several previous months. Furniture stores also reported sales down 1.3 percent on top of the 0.4 percent drop in March.
