Crises at savings and loans prompt calls for reform

Reform is desperately needed of the system of deposit insurance that protects our accounts in the nation's banks and savings and loans. It's coming—perhaps not this year, but it's on the way.

The days of the private insurance system are numbered. This system has been rocked by crises, first in Ohio, more recently in Maryland. Only six states still maintain private insurance systems.

As many as 10 percent of the savings and loan associations in the nation are considered in jeopardy. Some observers question whether the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. (FSLIC) can handle the possible problems of the S&L.

A record of 847 of the nation's 14,800 federally insured banks are on the problem list maintained by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC). "Most banks on the list don't fail," says Alan Whitney, an FDIC spokesman. Still, they require close supervision until they correct the problems that put them on the list to start with.

Less than half of 1985 has gone, but already federal and state regulators have closed 35 banks. The total for all of 1984 was 78.

Several proposals are under review by regulators, industry representatives and trade groups. The American Bankers Association, for instance, commissioned a study about reform of the deposit insurance system that is slated for release to the public within a few weeks.

Among the proposals that have attracted the most attention:

• Phasing out of private insurance; three bills that would accomplish this have been introduced in the House. Private insurance operate in Maryland, Ohio, Pennsylvania, North Carolina, Massachusetts and Georgia.

• Establish risk-related premiums so that well-managed institutions do not pay for the errors of poorly managed ones. Both the FDIC and FSLIC favor this, but some bankers and S&L officers worry that assessing premiums this way will be difficult and costly.

• Raise the amount of deposit insurance from the current $100,000 maximum. Proponents realize that a blanket increase won't cure any ills and argue, instead, for prorating premiums on coverage about $100,000 on a risk-related basis.

• Merge the FDIC and FSLIC. "It's a terrible idea," William B. O'Connell, president of the U.S. League of Savings Institutions, told my research

Nevertheless, this idea has powerful champions—Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker and FDIC Chairman William Isaac.

Intervene more quickly when banks and S&Ls run into trouble and take any necessary action before an emergency develops.

Some of these ideas require legislation to carry them out. Both the FDIC and the FSLIC have sent packages of legislation to Congress to underscore their attitudes of urgency.

The FSLIC proposals include increasing the insurance premiums and tightening the supervision over the kinds of investment S&Ls can make. In addition, the FSLIC suggests the establishment of risk-related premiums.

The FDIC also wants risk-related premiums. Its package includes measures to boost its enforcement powers as well.

And, in a rule that takes effect in January, the FDIC will disclose the names of banks and bankers involved in enforcement actions. It recently invited comment about two new proposals to control (curb) risk-related by banks.

The message to banks, S&Ls and others in our financial services is unmistakable: Move fast on your own to clean your houses and restore confidence in your institutions! If you don't, the regulatory agencies will take over and move for you. It's that clear.

E.F. Hutton faces Connecticut hearing

HARTFORD (UPI) — The state will hold a hearing in July to determine if E.F. Hutton & Co., which pleaded guilty to federal fraud charges, should be barred from doing business in Connecticut.

State Banking Commissioner J. Brian Woolf said Thursday he will hold a hearing July 9 at which the New York-based investment firm will be asked to show why its registration in Connecticut should not be suspended or revoked.

Under state law, the banking commissioner has the right to revoke or suspend the registration of a broker-dealer or investment adviser convicted of a felony.

Woolf said he decided to call the hearing after consulting with state Attorney General Joseph I. Lieberman about Hutton's recent guilty plea to federal mail and wire fraud charges.

On May 2 the Justice Department announced that Hutton, the nation's fifth largest brokerage firm, had pleaded guilty to 2,000 criminal counts of mail and wire fraud in an elaborate check-writing scheme to obtain interest-free funds from banks between 1980 and 1982.

The Justice Department charged that Hutton systematically overdraw hundreds of his own checking accounts and moved money between some of its 650 banks to take advantage of delay in the collection of funds, Woolf said.

Hutton agreed to pay $2.75 million in criminal fines and prosecution costs and to make restitution up to $8 million to any banks that were defrauded.

"By committing a felony, E.F. Hutton has jeopardized its registration as a broker-dealer in Connecticut," Woolf said. "The hearing I have scheduled will give the company an opportunity to fully present its case."

E.F. Hutton has been registered as a broker-dealer in Connecticut since October 1984 and as an investment adviser since June 1981.

The company has branch offices in Hartford, New Canaan, New Haven, New London and Stamford, and has 15 registered representatives in the state, where it writes an estimated 700 orders a day, Woolf said.

Tornadoes hit U.S., Canada, killing 43

By United Press International
A series of tornadoes swept through Ohio, Pennsylvania and southern Canada Friday, killing and injuring hundreds of people. Pennsylvania authorities reported that at least 16 people were killed in the western corner of the state near Erie.

In Ohio, scores of people were reported injured or fleeing the tornado. It's all associated with a cold front that is moving eastward, said Charlie Chilton, a forecaster for the National Weather Service in Washington, D.C.

Dozens of tornadoes whipped through the northeastern corner of Pennsylvania, destroying houses, trees and power lines. The tornadoes hit some five counties in the early evening, knocking out some telephone lines and closing communications to many communities.

"There is damage in a wide area and we have some national guardsmen out on voluntary basis," said David Ruckles, a spokesman for Pennsylvania Gov. Dick Thornburgh. "We do have emergency management people there and are in the process of seeing what steps we need to take at the immediate times."

At least 16 people died in Erie and surrounding counties, Pennsylvania state police said. The tornado hit at 5:08 p.m. EDT and was over in minutes, said state police spokesman Jack Waller.

House backs more aid for state's elderly

HARTFORD (UPI) — The House voted Friday to spend another $4.2 million on the state's "circuit breaker" program, which provides property tax relief to elderly residents.

The measure was proposed by Sen. Majority Leader Benjamin J. Smith, R-New Hartford, the co-chairman of the special committee, who voiced concern that law enforcement agencies would be reluctant to provide information if they thought it could become public.

The measure was supported by Rep. Frederick A. Geisl, D-Enfield, who urged approval of the added money while retaining the current formulas.

The 16-member special committee was created to study the criminal justice system including the chief state's attorney's office, state police and the one-man grand jury system.

House Democrats opposed the secrecy provision and the fact that an official with the state Freedom of Information Commission had worked with Smith to draw up the provision.

"Shame, shame on Freedom of Information," said Rep. David Lavine, D-Durham. "I don't think this sort of negotiation is becoming of an agency under this government everyone else to high standards."

Rep. Alan R. Schlesinger, R-Derby, said the bill would provide additional assistance to law enforcement agencies that would provide aid to renters as well as people who own their homes.

"Today we have the opportunity to give aid to seniors who are really hurting in the state," said Schlesinger, a prime proponent of the new program and $4.2 million increase in circuit breaker funding.

But Rep. Pauline Kezer, R-Plainville, said, "Not everybody stays or gains under this program." She complained lawmakers

Illing students beat fund-raising goal for Frank

By Kathy Gormus Herald Reporter
A Manchester teenager who was in a coma since an April 22 trail bike accident in Litchfield was reported to be semi-conscious Friday night as nearly 500 of his classmates packed a dance at Hilling Junior High School to help raise money to pay his medical bills.

Peter Frank, 13, of 52 Constance Drive, was listed in stable condition at Hartford Hospital late Friday night and was semi-conscious, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Students and teachers at the dance in Illing's cafeteria were apparently unaware of the latest development in Peter's condition.

One of his teachers said many of Peter's classmates were been frustrated by a lack of news about his condition since the early days following his accident.

"They're scared to ask," said Judy Morganroth, a language arts teacher.

Peter had been an extremely active and popular student and his accident was difficult for both students and teachers to accept, she said.

He has a real enthusiasm for life — it's hard to imagine him not active," Morganroth said.

Joseph Erardi, Peter's former gym teacher at Buckley School, said the outpouring of support at the dance was greater than organizers had expected. Between $700 and $800 was raised, he said.

"We were hoping to make a couple hundred," Erardi said.

Erardi and Peter Stred, the student council adviser at Illing, said many people who didn't know Peter pitched in, including the deejay from Springfield, Mass., who agreed to spin records for one-third his usual price.

"We hope that the community is going to reach out and help, too," Erardi said.

Peter, a seventh-grader at Illing, was injured April 22 when the trail bike he was driving while visiting his father in Litchfield went out of control and crashed into a tree.

A passenger on the bike and a classmate, Jason Nevins, suffered minor injuries in the accident.

Although several of those at the dance said that students do not often discuss Peter's accident at school anymore, he was on the minds of many who came.

"I took the news really bad," said Laura Roberts, a seventh-grader at Illing. "He was one of my good friends. I'm here because I really care about him."

"He had a lot of friends," said seventh-grader Laurie Smith, fighting to be heard over the roar of the music and laughter.

Lee Magowan, a ninth-grader at the school, said he came to the dance "to have fun," but quickly added, "and to raise money for Peter."

The dance was scheduled to kick off a fund-raising drive planned by friends and teachers to help raise money to pay for some of his medical bills. Erardi said Peter's mother, Marjorie Frank, has estimated bills run about $4,000 a month once Peter is transferred to a facility for long-term care.

Marjorie Frank attended the dance for a short time, as did a sister of Peter's.

Scientist says there's a lot of fuel

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Parts of comets, meteorites and other planets that struck the earth millions of years ago may have caused the formation of natural gas as well as the decomposition of plants and animals, a Cornell University scientist said Friday.

If the theory is correct, Dr. Thomas Gold predicts substantial new discoveries will dramatically increase world fuel supplies and even the geographical distribution of natural gas.

Gold, an astronomy professor at Cornell, believes that hydrocarbons inside the earth as a result of such events.

When 19th Century scientists first postulated that hydrocarbons were produced organically they did not know that hydrocarbons could possibly be the result of cosmic events, he said.

Gold's best known for his studies on topics ranging from the solar system to the working of the human ear, and he was the first scientist to explain pulsars — rapidly rotating neutron stars — and to deduce that the moon's surface was made up of a fine powdery dust long before astronauts landed there.

"Many European countries are a lot more cautious about accepting this theory," Gold said.

"I also ... must point out that geologists in the Soviet Union are beginning to think much the same way I am."

Gold said that Sweden may be the best laboratory to prove his theory. Swedish geologists plan to drill a 15,000-foot well this fall in search of a pocket of methane. Gold told scientists at the concluding session of the annual meeting of the American Association for Advancement of Science.

Sweden, a country comprised mostly of granite rock and which contains little of the sediments known to produce methane, imports most of its fuel, he said.

Gold chose Sweden as the site for his dig because he believes the granite could be obstructing the upward movement of methane.

"Tests so far revealed the presence of methane beneath the rock. Gold explained, "Most or all of" deep ocean floor also has shown evidence of methane, and seismic data has proved this as well," the scientist said.

Even if the controversial theory proves correct the question still remains on how to get methane from the ocean floor to the surface of the earth.

Gold proposes using a drilling plant that involves injecting warm water through pipes that extend deep into the ocean to force the methane upward. As the gas is pushed closer to the surface, it can be retrieved in the usual way.

Books Author links Elvis' fame to mother's untimely death

By Jim Lewis United Press International

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Elvis Presley had always been a "mama's boy" but ironically it was her son's fortune and world-wide acclaim that actually killed Gladys Presley, the author of a new book concludes.

Elvis Presley was a well-known "mama's boy," but author Elaine Dundy concludes his fame and fortune eventually killed her. Dundy's new book is entitled "Elvis and Gladys."

But, Elaine Dundy in "Elvis and Gladys" (MacMillan, 351 pp., $18.95) argues that Gladys was not a "dementedly possessive mother" to the rock 'n' roll king. Dundy's meticulously researched book is the first on Elvis to pinpoint the matrilineal genealogy of the superstar.

"I think that you are either a mama's boy or a daddy's boy," Dundy said in a telephone interview. "I think he was a mama's boy. You are generally one or the other."

School bus crash kills 6, injures 22

SNOW HILL, N.C. (UPI) — A fiery collision between a military supply truck, a school bus and three other vehicles killed a trucker and five children Friday afternoon and injured 21 others, at least five critically. The driver of the military vehicle apparently fell asleep at the wheel on two-lane U.S. 13, 80 miles southeast of Raleigh. The truck careened into the left lane and ran head-on into the school bus and a truck carrying grain. "The whole left side of the bus was tore off," said Dennis McKinney, who witnessed the crash. "When I got around there kids were everywhere because he just went down the whole side of the bus — he just opened it up like a sardine can. "By the time I got down there, two kids were dead," McKinney said. "The rest of them were tore up pretty bad. Some of them were laying there unconscious. Blood was everywhere." McKinney, 28, of Goldsboro, N.C., was driving one of the vehicles involved in the pileup. He said some of the young bodies inside the school bus were mangled. "They were all twisted," he said. "One kid, one leg was about gone. All of them were in shock. They weren't screaming, but all of them were calling 'Mommy' and 'Daddy'." The driver of the military truck and four children died four hours later. Officials refused to release the names of the dead until relatives could be notified. Two children, both in critical condition, were taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital in Greenville and 20 youngsters were rushed to Wayne Memorial Hospital in Goldsboro. "We have a 13-year-old Jane Doe in critical condition with a head injury," said Georgette Hendrick, a spokeswoman at Pitt Memorial. "We also have a 9-year-old Bryan Christman."

Governor signs water bill

SOMERS — Gov. William A. O'Neill has signed legislation providing $7 million to make well water safe for 1,500 homeowners in 53 towns affected by pesticides and other contaminants. O'Neill signed the bill Friday at the home of Peter V. Budington, selected because the governor met there in September with Somers residents to discuss the problem and afterward decided to support the legislation. Officials praised the new law which went into immediate effect. "It's been a long time coming, and it's been tough on the people who have the problem," said Somers First Selectman Steven D. Kominski. Many of the affected households are in the north-central section of the state, where the pesticides EDB and dieldrin have contaminated more than 765 wells. The House and Senate unanimously approved the bill Wednesday night. O'Neill also has signed legislation that will raise Connecticut's legal drinking age to 21 this fall, the governor's office announced Friday.

Group fights phone charge

HARTFORD — A consumer group Friday asked state utility regulators to spare low-income telephone customers from paying newly instituted charges for long-distance phone service. The Connecticut Public Interest Research Group said it filed a petition with the Department of Public Utility Control asking for a hearing on whether low-income people should be exempted from paying the access charges. Effective Saturday, customers of Southern New England Telephone Co., which serves all but a handful of Connecticut's 169 cities and towns, will begin paying the $1 monthly access charge. However, COMIRC said the Federal Communications Commission is allowing state regulatory agencies to waive 50 percent of the charge for low-income customers as long as local exchange rates were cut 50 percent, for a $1 decrease.

California man gets post

HARTFORD — A California legislative consultant has been named deputy commissioner in charge of programs for the state Department of Mental Retardation, officials announced Friday. Charles Galloway of Sacramento, Calif., will succeed George Moore, who served as acting deputy commissioner since the late 1970s. Galloway took over recently as a senior consultant for the California State Assembly Office of Research and Information, director of a training project in California. He will assume the Connecticut post June 15. With Galloway taking over as deputy commissioner, Moore will devote his time to implementing a court order requiring the department to move most of the residents of Mansfield Training School to community-based facilities.

School suit keeps going

HARTFORD A Superior Court judge has refused to dismiss a Hartford City Council suit challenging the city teachers' contract scheduled to take effect July 1. Saying the case raises factual issues that must be determined through court proceedings, Judge George D. Stoughton ruled Thursday the council may go forward with its bid to enjoin the Board of Education from honoring the contract. Although the contract was agreed to during a binding arbitration process, the council contends it cannot take effect without council approval because it was reached before the deadline for a binding decision. The State Board of Education and Hartford's Local 1018 of the American Federation of Teachers say the council's interpretation of the state's binding arbitration law is incorrect.

Shellfish subject of ban

GROTON — Health officials have banned the taking of shellfish from the Groton coastline because high levels of algae are producing a poisonous toxin possibly resulting in a loss of muscle coordination. Malcolm Shute, a sanitarian with the state Department of Health Services, said all commercial and private taking of shellfish has been banned as a result of "red tide." The department is urging people not to eat clams, oysters or mussels from the area. "We'd also be concerned about conch and moon snails in the same area, since they are predators of (other) shellfish," Shute said. Officials also have found neurotoxin in levels as high as 114 micrograms per 100 grams of shellfish in Falmer Cove.

State Senate acts to prevent 'rate shock'

By Dennis C. Millewski
United Press International

HARTFORD — Stiff electric rate hikes to finance Connecticut's share of the Millstone III and Seabrook nuclear power plants would be spread over at least three years under a bill passed by the state Senate. The Senate Friday rejected two Democratic amendments that would have spread rate increases over a minimum five years and split interest costs stemming from the phase-in between utilities and their customers. The House-approved bill was passed without opposition in the Senate, despite heated debate over the amendments. The measure now goes to Gov. William A. O'Neill, who made the defeated proposal for a five-year minimum. The bill would require the state Department of Public Utility Control to phase in the higher utility bills and ease "rate shock" over a period of between three and 10 years.

No clocks for judges

HARTFORD — The state Senate Friday crushed an attempt by its leading critic of the judiciary to require judges to buy time clocks and use them to record the hours they work. Sen. Andrew J. Santaniello, R-Stratford, who has protested for years against the way the state selects judges, said judges are well paid and have a pension plan "second to none." "I don't think the hours are too killing," said Gunther. "I still think we can have an accounting for 40 hours a week." Gunther offered an amendment to a judicial pay raise bill that would have required judges to buy time clocks and record the time they arrive at work and leave. The amendment failed 23-2. Sen. Andrew J. Santaniello, R-Norwalk, said the amendment had some merit in that some judges do not put in as much time as others, but said as a whole judges work long hours.

As the state Senate works toward adjournment Friday, members wear some rather novel t-shirts. Democratic Minority Leader Cornelius P. O'Leary displays a "Dick Who" shirt, referring to his predecessor, Richard Schneller. Majority Leader Reginald Smith wears a "Send in the Clowns" shirt, with the reverse side stating they were already present.

Documents show 10 years of bribes

WATERBURY (UPI) — Documents made public for the first time allege that former Waterbury prosecutor Arthur M. McDonald took bribes to fix criminal cases more than 10 years ago. McDonald pleaded not guilty in Superior Court to 16 charges that he took bribes to influence the disposition of criminal cases and a conspiracy charge alleging a pattern of bribe-receiving began in September 1973. The 66-year-old McDonald also pleaded not guilty to attempted bribery-receiving in October 1984. McDonald's attorney, Timothy C. Moynahan, charged Thursday that state police arranged McDonald's two arrests "in a manner meticulously choreographed... to depict the defendant as a guilty villain." McDonald was first arrested April 15 and charged with four counts of bribe-receiving and one count of conspiracy to tamper with a witness. He was arrested a second time, May 18. Moynahan moved to dismiss all 23 charges pending against McDonald and to dismiss the continuing grand jury investigation that led to his arrest. The statute of limitations on bribe-receiving is five years. But state and U.S. Supreme Court decisions have held there is no statute of limitations on conspiracy, and that charge against McDonald indicates the state has evidence dating back to September 1973.

Avco workers settle

STRATFORD (UPI) — Members of one union striking against the Avco Locomotive Corp. reached a tentative agreement with the turbine engine manufacturer Friday while negotiations continued with the second union. Officials with United Auto Workers Local 1010 and company negotiators came to terms at 4 a.m. The 2,100 production workers represented by the local will meet Sunday to consider ratifying the contract and said they would continue picketing until then. No details of the agreement were made public.

Russell W. Parson

Russell W. Parson, 65, of Smallwood Trail, Coventry, died Friday at Windham Memorial Hospital. Born in Manchester, he had lived in Coventry for the past 30 years. He was employed by the E & S Gage Co. in Manchester. He was a World War II veteran of the Army Air Corps. He is survived by his wife, Faith O'Brien Parson; three sons, Richard W. Parson of Manchester, Russell D. Parson of Coventry and Kenneth Weis Parson of Manchester; a daughter, Cheryl L. Lewis of Coventry; and four grandchildren. The funeral will be Monday at 11 a.m. at the John F. Tierney Funeral Home, 219 W. Center St. Burial will be in East Cemetery. Calling hours are Sunday from 2 to 4 p.m. and 8 to 6 p.m. Memorial contributions may be made to the American Heart Association, 310 Collins St., Hartford.

For the love of Cassie

Teresa Pruett struggles to raise her paralyzed daughter

By Margaret Hayden
Herald Reporter

Cassie Pruett stroked Charlie, her kitten. "He's black and white. He touched my chin," the 3-year-old said as she petted the kitten she had received the day before. His dark fur contrasted with her fine, blond hair and fair skin. She got out crayons and went over to a table in her 33 Lilley St. home. "I'm going to make grandma a picture," she said in a soft, clear voice as she wheeled her red chair to the table. Her voice is not what it might have been. Neither is Cassie. Since she was 18 months old, she has been paralyzed from the chest down from a blood clot on her spine. Cassie's mother, Teresa Pruett, declined to say more about the reasons for her daughter's condition on the advice of her lawyer, Thomas P. Fitzgerald. A civil lawsuit is pending in Tolland County Superior Court in Rockville. HELP HAS COME from different sources. Cassie goes to Verplanck School on a bus for the handicapped. She is in a Head Start program from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. The Manchester Area Conference of Churches is planning to build a wheelchair ramp for the Pruets. SHE IS matter-of-fact about Cassie and the challenge of caring for her. "In the beginning, it was real hard," the 25-year-old mother said. Her 2-year-old son Michael was a week old when Cassie was paralyzed. She was hospitalized for two months. "It was a time of grief and stress. When she came home, she would lie in one spot, have a tantrum and bite her legs when she couldn't reach something she wanted. She didn't have any place to put her energy," Pruett said. The loss of feeling prevents Cassie from knowing if something is scratching or bruising her. "One of the hardest things is not letting her get hurt," her mother said. Cassie has come many miles since her two-month hospitalization. Today she moves around in her wheelchair, shuts doors, turns the television on and can reach for some of the things she wants. "At first I didn't know what to do next. Now things are falling into place," Pruett said. "Michael has to be patient," she said. Cassie's condition hasn't been easy on him, either. Cassie gets much of her mother's attention. Often, he's left with a sitter so she can take Cassie to an appointment. The constant demands of the lively 2-year-old and Cassie take up almost all the mother's time and energy, leaving little of either for other interests. "We have a doctor's appointment every couple weeks," the mother said. She must wear a back brace most of the day for curvature of the spine. She is also incontinent. "The way she is, is the way she'll be," Pruett said. CASSIE'S MANY PROBLEMS have been hard on the whole family. Last November her parents, Michael Pruett and Teresa Pruett were divorced. "There was a lot of stress. She was in hospitals a long time and we couldn't share the grief," Pruett said. Cassie's problems were at least partly to blame for the divorce, she said. Her husband could not be reached for comment. Last week Cassie and her brother played together as their mother watched them. "Michael has to be patient," she said. Cassie's condition hasn't

Suit against MMH pending

Cassie Pruett and her parents, Michael and Teresa Pruett, have filed a malpractice suit against Manchester Memorial Hospital, according to records in Tolland Superior Court, Rockville. No court date has been set for the lawsuit, which was filed on May 22, 1984. In the lawsuit, Dr. Firoos Golkar and others were charged with malpractice for failure to employ a reasonable amount of attention and observation, and failure to admit her for further diagnosis on April 21, 1983. On that day the child had been brought to the emergency room after unusually severe and unexplained crying, listlessness, fever and constipation, according to the court file. According to the lawsuit, the hospital diagnosed the problem as a stomach virus and constipation. The document states the hospital failed to observe she had motor loss and dysfunction of the lower extremities, symptoms of a neurological injury. Also, according to the lawsuit, the hospital was brought to a pediatrician on April 25, 1983, who diagnosed her problems as paraplegia and urinary retention and referred her to Hartford Hospital. At Hartford Hospital, a blood clot was found compressing her spinal column, causing massive damage and destruction of neural elements of the spinal column. On April 28, 1983, according to court papers, she underwent a procedure to remove the clot. The sustained compression of the spine totally paralyzed her lower extremities. She will continue to suffer urinary incontinence, bed sores, great anxiety, mental anguish, according to the document filed by the law firm of Phelan, Squatrito & Fitzgerald. The hospital is represented by Donald W. O'Brien, of O'Brien & Tanaki, CityPlace, Hartford. The pleadings for the case have not been closed, according to the court's clerk. Andrew A. Beck of the public relations department of the hospital said, "It is not our policy to comment on pending legal action."

Catholic high schools — how Catholic are they?

By Patricia McCormack
United Press International

NEW YORK — Roaringly clicking, long skirts swishing, nuns, priests and brothers ran most Catholic high schools for scores of years. There was no question about the schools being 100 percent Roman Catholic. What of the scene in the schools today when 75 percent of the teachers — some three out of four — are not ordained and do not belong to religious orders? In Catholic circles, such faculty members are called lay teachers. The ascendancy of the lay teacher on the Catholic high school scene has brought something else that didn't exist in the old days when celibates such as clerics and nuns dominated. It has put married people, including some divorced, in front of many classes. Advice

Memories prove priceless at their 50th anniversary

DEAR ABBY: I used the idea I got from your column and prepared a book of memories for my parents' 50th wedding anniversary. Out of 82 requests for "a memory," I received 71 replies from their friends in the form of pictures, cards and letters. I mounted them all in a beautiful leather-bound album, and when I presented it to my parents, they were overwhelmed. No gift for any amount of money could have thrilled them as much as this book of memories. On the enclosed sheet, we ask that you write one memory or experience that you have shared with them and return it to us by (1). We believe that the loving memories they have shared with you, their friends, would be the most treasured gift they could receive; therefore, we request that no other gift be sent.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

THEIR SON
DEAR SON: Thank you and your parents. You could combine them by having each signed by you and your parents.

Readers, in case you wonder what my "idea" was, when sending out 50th anniversary invitations, include with them the following message:
"We request your help in compiling a book that recalls memories from our parents' first 50 years of marriage. On the enclosed sheet, we ask that you write one memory or experience that you have shared with them and return it to us by (1). We believe that the loving memories they have shared with you, their friends, would be the most treasured gift they could receive; therefore, we request that no other gift be sent."

DEAR ABBY: My mother swears every time she opens her mouth, Abby, how can you honor your mother when she has such a foul mouth? I love my mother, but I hate the way she talks. She's

See specialist for drooling

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 8-year-old son has a tremendous drooling problem when he is 5. He has a minor speech defect, but the major problem is his drooling. He still drools a lot. Is this normal? What should we do about it?

Dr. Gott
Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR READER: You should have him re-examined by an ear, nose and throat specialist—and maybe a plastic surgeon. Drooling is not a normal state of affairs. He may have other abnormalities in his mouth that cause this, or some of the original surgery may have to be revised. A qualified otolaryngologist will be able to help him.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have had viral hepatitis A for three months. I am now resting at home, but my gums won't stop bleeding. Can you shed any light on this? I had two shots of vitamin K, but the bleeding goes on.

DEAR READER: You may have developed a bleeding tendency due either to a chemical anticoagulation defect or to a loss of clot-forming blood cells (platelets). Hepatitis more usually affects the chemical components of clotting. You need an investigation of the coagulation components. This can be accomplished through the use of outpatient blood tests, but it should be performed under the supervision of a physician who is familiar with the complications of liver infection.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have acne and have been seeing a dermatologist intermittently for the past year and a half. He gives me medicine, but there is little improvement. Should I just give up and face the fact that I'm going to always using dirty words and telling dirty jokes. It just makes me cringe. It's worse because I have small children who hear her, but that doesn't seem to bother her. So, please tell me how I can honor my mother under the circumstances. I feel terrible about this.

ME IN LEBANON, MO.

DEAR ME: When you use the term "honor," you are no doubt using it in the biblical sense. To "honor" means to show respect, devotion, admiration and love. I am not defending the foul mouth, but surely you can find some reasons to honor your mother. Look harder. And in the meantime, "Judge not, that you be not judged." (Matthew 7:1)

DEAR ABBY: If anyone had asked me if there was one person in this world who I knew everything, I would unhesitatingly have replied, "Abigail Van Buren."
Imagine my surprise when in a letter and response in tonight's Ledger-Star you wrote, "I thought all the angels were in heaven. Some must have settled in Virginia."
Dear Abby, don't you know where heaven is? I'm already there.

MAYNARD HATCHER, PORTSMOUTH, VA.

be an adult (in my 30s) with acne? Is my dermatologist ripping me off? Is there a cure for adult acne?

DEAR READER: Some forms of acne, especially the adult type, are difficult to cure. Nonetheless, there have been many new advances in the treatment of this unpleasant skin disorder. I believe that if one doctor cannot cure you, you have every right to try another. Either by request a referral or seek help from the dermatology department of a university teaching hospital. Unfortunately, dermatology is an exact science. There is an old joke about the courses for dermatology treatment: If it's dry, wet it. If it's dry, wet it. Of course, skin specialists do not find this kind of jocularity amusing. But certainly, dermatologists' bills are no laughing matter, either. So before spending more money and not getting anywhere, talk to your dermatologist about making a change.

standable reaction," it shifts the attention away from the woman's recovery and forces her to worry about the man, McEvoy said in a recent interview.

"She doesn't need that additional burden, to worry about the man," McEvoy said. "She may feel she caused the first violent action, and will feel guilty about being the cause of more violent behavior in the man."
Even though the man desperately may feel that he has to do something, McEvoy says he should be passive about the rape.

Demanding that she go straight to the police or demanding to know why she was in that neighborhood at that time will only add to the woman's sense that she has lost control of her life.
"Many men, especially fathers, will overprotect a rape victim," McEvoy says. "This absolutely is the wrong thing to do. Young victims especially should go back to their normal daily activities as soon as possible."

THE NEW YORK CITY POLICE department ordered 500 copies of "If She is Raped," and McEvoy says "we have to change the way men view rape—it's an act of violence, not an act of sex. Once that's changed, men can stop feeling jealous after a rape," he said.

McEvoy, with psychologist Jeff Brookings, has written "If She is Raped: A Book for Husbands, Fathers and Male Friends."
McEvoy, who describes the book as the first of its kind, says nearly 40 percent of relationships end within a year of an attack, and 20 percent of rape victims attempt suicide.

Those statistics can be greatly reduced, McEvoy says, if men give practical suggestions rather than threatening to kill the guy.

tears and bowed heads. The actor placed his hand on the shoulder of the minister, and said, "I reached your eyes and ears, my friends, but this man reached your hearts. I know the Shepherd's Psalm, but this man knows the Shepherd."

Again we are reminded of that personal emphasis in the Psalm, "The Lord is my shepherd." It is in commitment to Him that we find the fulfillment of life's desires.

Column to concentrate on local happenings

Opportunities like this one come around much too infrequently to pass up. Several weeks ago I approached Len Anaster with some ideas about running in Manchester and offered a suggestion for expanding its coverage.

On the Run

Steve Gates

During the workout we talking about recent training, recent races... your basic running talk. We ran one heck of a workout and I agreed to meet him the following Wednesday night. In Greg, not only had I stumbled on a runner who could give me all I could handle and more on the track, but we shared many of the same observations about the running scene in Manchester.
