By David E. Anderson
United Press International

DALLAS — The long march of fundamentalists to seize control of the Southern Baptist Convention did not miss a step during the three-day annual meeting of the 1.3 million-member church.

Despite the best organized efforts to slow the 7-year-old fundamentalist juggernaut, the ultra-conservative wing of the generally conservative church succeeded in its two primary goals.

The election of the Rev. Charles Stanley of Atlanta to a second one-year term as president.

The naming of a fundamentalist-backed slate to the crucial committee on boards, which nominates members of the boards of trustees of the denomination's six seminaries and 20 national program agencies.

The record-setting 45,431 messengers (delegates) also voted to establish a 22-member "peace committee" to study the causes of and make recommendations for resolution of the disputes that have bitterly divided the nation's largest Protestant body and that threatened to undermine its mission efforts.

The feud has been growing the last seven years since fundamentalists, charging liberalism was creeping into the seminaries and church programs, began a concerted drive to take over the denominational machinery.

Richard denies report

PAWTUCKET, R.I. (UPI) — Ralph Richard has denied making many of the statements attributed to him in a police affidavit that implicates his wife in the death of their 4-month-old daughter, Jerri Ann, his lawyer says.

Lawyer John O'Connor of Providence said Thursday he has not heard the tapes of police conversations with Richard but that his client has denied making many of the accusations.

Mengele writing offered

MUNICH, West Germany (UPI) — The son of Auschwitz concentration camp doctor Josef Mengele will provide authorities with a handwriting sample and a photograph of his father, family spokesman said today.

Clues give positive ID of Mengele

SAO PAULO, Brazil (UPI) — Handwriting in documents believed written by a man who drowned six years ago has been positively identified by American and Brazilian experts as that of Nazi war criminal Josef Mengele, police said Friday.

Police said their "preliminary conclusion" was that the Nazi war criminal was dead.

Federal police chief Romeu Tuma said the comparison of documents he believes written by the dead man with authenticated documents sent from Berlin is positive.

Legal experts said the finding did not definitively prove that the man who died in the 1979 drowning incident was Mengele, known as the "Angel of Death" and charged with the murder of 400,000 death camp victims during World War II, but was strong corroborative evidence.

"We have made a firm positive identification, there is not a shadow of a doubt these documents were written by Josef Mengele," said American graphologist David Crown, who was sent to Brazil by the U.S. government.

Crown was head of the CIA document verification unit from 1967 to 1983.

Graphologist Gideon Epstein, also sent by the U.S. government, said: "This is an absolute positive conclusion. If we had any shadow of a doubt we would have offered a qualified conclusion."

Police and graphologists compared genuine Mengele script with medical notes, letters and other items handed over by people who knew the man known as Wolfgang Gerhard in Brazil.

"This handwriting evidence shows that the man who lived in four different places in Brazil was Mengele," Tuma said, adding this "leads us to the preliminary conclusion that the body exhumed last week in Embu was that of Mengele."

Earlier Friday, forensic experts said they had matched the teeth and age of the man who drowned in 1979 and whose remains were exhumed from a grave near Sao Paulo grave on June 6 with those of Mengele.

"According to information from the coroners, the skeleton is of a man who died at about the right age to be Mengele," Tuma said. Mengele would have been 58 years old when the mysterious man buried as Gerhard drowned.

Dental specialists examining the skeleton said two old-fashioned silver amalgam fillings matched pre-war records of Mengele's teeth, but stressed this finding alone was not firm proof of identity.

The forensic experts have already determined that the skeleton closely matched Mengele's wartime height of 5-foot-4 1/4.

Sales tax revenues rebound

By Mark A. Dupuis
United Press International

HARTFORD — State sales tax revenues grew by an adjusted 17.2 percent for April, surprising budget officials who had predicted last month that a two-year surge in revenue from the state's worst-case tax had ended.

The state collected more than $11.6 billion in taxes on April sales, up nearly $13 million from the same month a year ago, the state Department of Revenue Services said Friday.

The April figures represent a 12.4 percent increase but the figure grows to 17.2 percent when adjusted to reflect a revenue loss from a sales tax exemption on clothing that took effect April 1.

The sales tax is Connecticut's largest single source of revenue and the April bonus is likely to add to a budget surplus already projected at more than $300 million for the current fiscal year.

The adjusted 17.2 percent growth rate compared to a 13 percent target set by budget officials, who had predicted last month that a two-year surge in sales tax revenues was coming to an end.

Sales tax growth rates were down in February and March and budget officials thought a trend was developing, said Edward Balda, chief of revenue and economic forecasting in the Office of Policy and Management.

"That is a very strong performance," Balda said, "especially when you look at the fact that the national economy has been very weak for the last three quarters."

"We thought that the prior two months seemed to point to a moderation in the growth, but it just turned right around," Balda said, citing the decline in February and March growth figures.

Balda said officials will be looking at figures from the corporations tax and interest and dividends tax in the next couple of weeks to see how the surplus will be affected "but the sales tax is definitely a plus."

He said the national economy has been weak for the past three quarters, or nine months, and Connecticut usually follows national trends.

"Connecticut seems to be in a very unique situation," Balda said, adding that the fact the state enjoys one of the lowest unemployment rates in the country has boosted consumer confidence.

Sales tax revenues for the 1983-84 fiscal year grew by 21.3 percent over the previous year and figures for this fiscal year probably will come in more than 15 percent over the 1983-84 year, Balda said.

S. Africans raid Botswana

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — A South African soldier staged a lightning raid into neighboring Botswana Friday, attacking the homes of black African National Congress dissidents and killing 13 to 15 people, the military said.

To protest the incursion, the United States announced it was recalling the ambassador to South Africa, Herman Nickel.

Raided Botswana said among those killed in the pre-dawn raid were a 6-year-old child with his uncle. It said some victims were shot at close range inside their bedrooms.

South African Defense Chief Gen. Constand Viljoen said the raiders included both black and white soldiers in camouflage uniforms. He said they attacked 19 houses in which ANC "terrorists" lived in Gaborone, Botswana's capital. He said three women were among those killed.

The outlawed ANC is fighting South Africa's white minority government.

In Washington, the announcement of Nickel's recall was linked directly by a State Department spokesman to the incursion into Botswana and to the capture last month of a South African patrol in Cabinda, Angola, apparently on a mission to sabotage the U.S.-operated Gulf Oil refinery there.

"We have decided to recall Ambassador Herman Nickel because of the U.S. Department's view of the situation," State Department spokesman Bernard Kalb said.

The attack "raises the most serious questions about South Africa's sincerity" in negotiations with the United States on bringing about a peaceful resolution to southern Africa's problems.

Radio Botswana said the raiders attacked shortly after midnight and fired heavy and light machine guns and mortars for about half an hour in at least five locations of the city 10 miles north of the Botswana-African border.

At the Dutch Embassy in Pretoria, First Secretary Jacobus van der Elden said one of those killed was Somaliborn Achmed Geer, who once fled to Holland and was given refugee status.

His wife Roelien Geer-Stoffer, 37, a Dutch citizen, was shot in both legs and was being treated at a hospital.

They had recently moved into a house that previously was occupied by ANC members, according to Western diplomats in Gaborone.

Botswana president Quett Masire called the raid an "act of brutality and violence" and said it was "particularly deplorable" because he had repeatedly assured Pretoria he did not allow guerrillas to use Botswana as a springboard for attacks on South Africa.

Gaborone residents were awakened by scattered bursts of gunfire, Radio Botswana said. The attackers advised neighbors through loudspeakers to stay indoors and keep their lights off.

South Africa has repeatedly warned neighboring states it would make cross-border raids to destroy bases of anti-government guerrillas.

Hijackers say they'll kill more

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Shiite Moslem gunmen who hijacked a U.S. airliner carrying 153 people killed a hostage in Beirut Saturday and threatened to kill an American passenger every five minutes if their demands were not met, officials said.

The hijackers identified the victim as a U.S. Marine.

The gunmen seized the Boeing 727 and its hostages mostly Americans — over Greece Friday and forced it to Beirut where they released 19 passengers. They flew on to Algiers where they released 21 more before taking off for Beirut five hours later.

The male hostage was shot aboard the red-and-white jetliner shortly after it landed in Beirut at 2:20 a.m. Saturday (7:20 p.m. EDT Friday) with just one or two minutes of fuel left. His body was then hurled onto the tarmac.

The gunman repeated an earlier demand that Israel release Shiite prisoners and transfer them to Lebanon under Red Cross escort, officials said. The gunman threatened to kill an American passenger every five minutes, officials said.

"I don't want to talk to you, I'll only talk to (the Shiite Moslem) Amal (militia)," one hijacker told an army negotiator in the control tower. "You are trying to gain time, you don't believe me."

"Well, take this (U.S.) Marine, one of the Marines who shelled national Beirut," said a hijacker, and then witnesses saw a man shot aboard the plane and his body shoved through the door.

The hijacker was referring to the shelling of the mountains southeast of Beirut by the battleship USS New Jersey in 1983.

"They just killed a passenger," the captain of the jetliner said.

"You did a bad thing, you shouldn't have killed him, he was an innocent person," an Amal official told the hijackers.

The body, wearing black trousers and a T-shirt, was later picked up by Amal militiamen and loaded on to a station wagon, witnesses said.

"Did you see Beir El-Abed, 89 people were killed," a hijacker said. "These Marines destroyed Lebanon." A car bomb exploded in the Shiite suburb of Beir El-Abed March 4.

The shooting came just minutes after the plane came to a halt on a runway at Beirut airport with its engines running and lights on, a mile from the air terminal at the end of a runway, returned to the airport's VIP lounge just before 8 p.m. with 21 passengers.

Within a half-hour, the aircraft taxied onto one of Houari Boumediene International Airport's two runways and took off five hours after it had landed in Algiers.

The Boeing 727, seized minutes after it departed from the Athens airport Friday for Rome, was first forced to land at Beirut international airport where 19 passengers — 17 women and two children — were freed in exchange for fuel, TWA officials said.

Group planning Korea memorial

Veterans' groups have banded together in an effort to erect the town's first memorial to Manchester residents who died in the Korean War.

Mayer Barbara B. Weinberg, honorary chairman of the committee planning the memorial, said Friday that the group has been meeting for several months but waited until Memorial Day to announce their plans "so that there would be no competition."

Unlike the Vietnam memorial, which cost nearly $20,000, the Korean veterans are hoping to raise $7,500 for their memorial, she said. Weinberg said a public fund-raising drive would be started within several weeks.

"I would like 7,500 people to give $1," she said. One veterans' organization has already agreed to donate $300, she said.

A site for the memorial has not yet been chosen, although the committee is strongly considering a parklet at East Center and Porter streets, she said. Other sites being considered include land near a cemetery on Hilltown Road and a parklet on Adams Street.

Among the groups represented on the committee are the Veterans Council of Manchester, the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Disabled American Veterans, the Marine Corps League and the Army & Navy Club.

At least four Manchester residents died in the Korean War, Weinberg said.

Karen Ann Quinlan The whole world was at her deathbed

By George Andros

PARENTS JOSEPH AND JULIA QUINLAN leaving funeral for their daughter

MOUNT ARLINGTON, N.J. — A priest Friday eulogized Karen Ann Quinlan as an "ordinary young woman" who brought the world's mind to bear on such deep concerns as "the right to die" and "death with dignity."
Quinlan, 31, who died Tuesday night after spending 10 years curled in a fetal position in a coma, was buried after a one-hour funeral mass at Our Lady of the Lake Catholic Church.
Montagor Thomas Trapasso, the spiritual adviser who helped Quinlan's adoptive parents, Joseph and Julia, through the 18-year ordeal, said in his eulogy that he was "certain that millions of people shed tears for the girl they had come to know and love simply as Karen."
The church overlooks scenic Lake Hopatcong, a favorite summer hangout of Quinlan before she slipped into a coma apparently caused by drugs and alcohol in 1975.
After they were told she would never recover, the Quinlans filed a lawsuit that eventually resulted in a landmark decision by the New Jersey Supreme Court in March 1976, allowing the withdrawal of her respirator.
"When people and kings die, the world somehow becomes reverently silent," Trapasso said. "When their death comes, cathedrals and palaces are draped in mourning."
"How incredible it is that the whole world should have been at the deathbed of an ordinary young woman from Landing, N.J.," Karen Ann Quinlan said.
He said Quinlan's life was not only in God's hands, but "also the hands of men and their technology."

Republican legislator gets time off for good behavior

By Dennis C. Milwinski
United Press International

BRIDGEPORT — A veteran state lawmaker from Stamford was released from jail Friday in time to celebrate his 17th wedding anniversary with time off for good behavior on contempt-of-court charges.
Republican Rep. Christopher Shays walked out of the Bridgeport Community Correctional Center about 10 a.m. after serving seven days of a 18-day sentence. He was first jailed in March and returned to jail Tuesday to finish his term.
"I'm a free man and delighted to be out of jail," Shays, 39, said later from his home. "I didn't enjoy one bit my time spent in jail, but I have no regrets. I've lived up to my word. It's all behind me."
Hartford Superior Court Judge Norris L. O'Neill found the six-term lawmaker in contempt in March when he refused to leave the stand during a hearing on possible disciplinary action against a prominent attorney.
An apology could have spared Shays from jail, but he refused and continues to level strong charges against attorneys Alexander A. Goldfarb, William Gaulty and retired Probate Judge James Kinsella.
Shays was released after state Attorney General Joseph Lieberman cited an obscure section of the state constitution and challenged the right of a judge to jail a lawmaker for contempt while the Legislature was in session.
The Legislature adjourned last week and Shays, who works as a consultant, asked another judge to allow his return to jail so he could put the episode behind him.
"I never contested the right of the judge to sentence me," Shays said. "He had the right. I think he misused the right — it was absolutely crazy to send me to jail — but I had to comply."
Shays, who said he was treated well by guards and inmates, continues to demand strong action against Goldfarb and Gaulty for their handling of a wealthy West Hartford widow's estate.
"I did my time. I settled my account with the judiciary and now the issue is what the judiciary does against attorneys who are important step in reforming the courts."
The long delays in the estate case have convinced Shays the issue will end in a "whitewash."
"The judiciary is on trial and the question is does it have the ability to clean its own house," he said. "I was tried and convicted in one day and sent to jail, so I know the system can work quickly when it wants to."
Shays, who planned to spend a quiet evening on his anniversary with his wife Betal, said legislation passed to tighten grievance procedures against attorneys was an important step in reforming the courts.
The law replaces local grievance committees with a statewide panel, opens hearings to the public and provides staff and deadlines for action.
"Unfortunately, you still have judges deciding what will happen to lawyers," Shays said. "The judges used to be lawyers, and the lawyers hope to be judges. When I say the courts are on trial, I'm not kidding."

Money for art's sake

J. Paul Getty Jr. is in a magnanimous mood these days. Not only is he giving $25 million to Britain's National Gallery of Art with plans to donate $37.5 million more, he's also giving Class von Bulow a job.
Von Bulow, cleared Monday of charges he tried to kill his wife for her money, says he and his girlfriend, Andrea Reynolds, will be moving to London to work for Getty, whose father once employed the Danish financier.
"It was more than we dreamed of," gallery chairman Jacob Rothschild said Thursday.
"The nature and scale of Mr. Getty's gift is such that all citizens of the United Kingdom will have cause to be grateful to him in the years ahead," said Lord Gowrie, Britain's arts minister.

Starr visits Bay State

Former Beetle Bingo Starr, visiting a Cambridge, Mass., hospital Friday where his brother-in-law is a doctor, grabbed a stethoscope and approached a nurse, joking, "Don't worry, my eyes are closed."
Starr and his wife, actress Barbara Bach, toured Santa Maria Hospital in Cambridge, where Bach's brother is director of pulmonary medicine.
The hospital visit came during a break of a trip Starr and Bach are making to several East Coast colleges. They are with Francesca Gregorini, Bach's daughter by a previous marriage, who will attend college in the fall.

Ventriloquism for nuns

Eleven Japanese nuns have completed a ventriloquism course in hopes of preaching the gospel to children through marionettes and puppet shows, Vatican Radio said.
The sisters, who studied under Spanish ventriloquist Jose Luis Merene in Tokyo, decided it would be a novel and useful way "to transmit the Christian message to children, above all to interest them in Bible stories," Vatican Radio said earlier this week.

Another weekend of showers?

The National Weather Service forecast for Connecticut: Mostly sunny Saturday. Highs 70 to 75. Increasing cloudiness Saturday night with showers. Highs near 70. Today's weather picture was drawn by Jennifer Merrill, 9, of Florence Street, a fourth-grade student at Nathan Hale School.

Commerce Department satellite picture taken at 2:30 p.m. Friday shows a large area of clouds producing showers and thunderstorms from south of Louisiana across Florida into the Atlantic. A band of clouds from South Dakota into Illinois and into Canada is producing some isolated thunderstorms and locally heavy rain showers. Clouds in Washington and northwest Oregon are producing rain showers west of the Cascades. Isolated light rain and rain showers are being produced by clouds in the Northeast.

National forecast

For period ending 7 p.m. Saturday. Showers are forecast for portions of the northern Plains, upper and middle Mississippi Valley, upper and lower Great Lakes, Ohio Valley, east and west Gulf Coast, north, middle and south Atlantic Coast regions. Elsewhere, weather will be fair in general. ## School board OKs pay hikes

The Board of Education this week approved a salary of $87,415 for Superintendent James F. Kennedy for the 1985-86 fiscal year.
The approval, which came at a board meeting Monday night, gave Kennedy a nearly $3,000 increase in salary. Combined with his retirement and increase, the overall package is 7 percent higher than this year, said Joseph V. Campos, chairman of the board's Personnel and Finance Committee.
The board also approved salary increases for other school administrators who are not represented by a bargaining unit.
The new salaries range from $21,151 for the cafeteria director to $49,913 for Assistant Superintendent Wilson E. Deakin Jr.
The increases were 7 percent for all administrators except Cafeteria Director Mary Uppling's, which was 9 percent. The increases were similar to the increases received by principals, Deakin said.

Parade to spotlight abortion

A group of anti-abortion advocates from throughout central Connecticut will parade through downtown Manchester today in what they are billing as the first annual "Stroll-a-thon" to focus attention on the issue of abortion.
Six chapters of the Christian Action Council and their supporters will carry balloons and banners and sing hymns as they walk on Main Street from Bennett Junior High School to Center Park. The parade begins at 10 a.m.
One of the parade organizers said participants will not carry signs showing aborted fetuses that are often seen at anti-abortion protests.
"Today we just want to affirm that life is precious," said Peggie Lewis, community relations chairwoman of the council's Manchester chapter.

Pay up for the pup

Dog owners have until June 30 to register their pets for the upcoming year.
License fees are $4 for spayed females or neutered males and $8.20 for dogs not spayed or neutered. Dogs may be registered at the Town Clerk's office from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. on weekdays. Owners should bring registration papers with them.

Vets to gather at Willie's

About 30 World War II veterans, members of the anti-tank company of the 109th Infantry Division of the Connecticut Army National Guard, will gather for a reunion June 21 at Willie's Steak House.
Some are expected from as far away as Louisiana, but a number of former members still live in Manchester.
The 10th headquarters in Manchester, served in the Pacific Theater during World War II.

Educators to join state board

Two Manchester school principals were recently named to positions on the Connecticut Association of Secondary Schools.
Manchester High School Principal Jacob Ludes was named chairman of the Board of Control of the Connecticut Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, an arm of C.A.S.S.
Hilling Junior High School Principal Richard E. Lindgren was named to the Board of Control for Middle Level Schools of C.A.S.S. according to an announcement at the Board of Education's meeting Monday.
Ludes has served on the CIAC board for the past six years. The governing board for 196 high schools in the state rules on eligibility and on matters related to intercollegiate athletics.
Lindgren most recently chaired the Professional Studies Committee of C.A.S.S. The Middle Level Board of Control makes decisions on activities related to middle and junior high schools throughout the state.

Church puts fire in sermon

ANDOVER — Members of the Andover Fire Department will be honored at the First Congregational Church of Andover Sunday with a special sermon, "On fire."
The service will mark the first time a community group has been honored by the church.
"The members of the fire department were chosen for their selfless service to individuals and families," the church said in a news release.
All department members have been invited to attend the service. The sermon will be given by the church's pastor, the Rev. Richard H. Taylor. A social hour will also be held at the church after the service so that church members can meet the firefighters.

Summer sign up set

ANDOVER — Sign-up for the summer reading program at the Andover Public Library will begin June 20.
The program, "summer is an adventure," will feature a large assortment of mystery, suspense and adventure books. The program will consist of two story hours for children between the ages of 5 and 10 on Wednesday afternoons and a bedtime story hour for preschoolers, also on Wednesday. The program begins July 10.
No story hours are scheduled for July 31. Instead, a full-length feature film starring John Wayne will be shown.

Library goes video

ANDOVER — Besides books, patrons of the Andover Public Library will be able to check out videotapes starting in July.
The library is offering a small selection of videotapes for three months as part of a pilot program. The tapes will be loaned on a two-day basis and will be available only to library cardholders.
For more information, call the library at 742-4668 after July 1.

Church has drawing course

HEBRON — A course in landscape drawing will be offered at St. Peter's Episcopal Church this summer.
Carol L. Hayes, an art instructor at RHAM Senior High School, will teach the course. The course is open to beginning and advanced art students in grades 9 to 12.
The course will consist of six, 3½-hour workshops on Wednesdays from 9 to 11:30 a.m. Students will do paintings and drawings of local sites.
The cost of the program is $35. For more information, contact A.H.M. Youth Services at 282-4488.

State revamps mortgage plan

HARTFORD (UPI) — The state will use $75 million in pension funds to offer a seventh round of "Yankee Mac" mortgages and for the first time will offer four different types of loans, officials said Friday.

Loans of up to $250,000 will be offered at fixed interest rates of about 11.1 percent to about 11.4 percent in the latest offering under the Yankee Mac program established in 1981 by state Treasurer Henry S. Parker.
Participating banks will take applications for Yankee Mac funds from June 24 to July 3, Parker said, and a random computer selection process will be used to choose who gets the loans if the demand exceeds the pool.
Parker said his office decided to revamp the program and offer different types of loans this time around "to creatively accommodate the needs of the Connecticut home buying public."
The $75 million offering will probably be the only Yankee Mac pool offered this year, Parker said at a news conference.
As with previous Yankee Mac mortgages, 50 percent of the pool will be offered first to state employees and other workers who contribute to the pension fund that will provide the $75 million pool.
The newest offering includes the conventional mortgage instruments now available, but also adds three new types of programs, including a "Yankee Mac Jumbo" loan for mortgages from $150,000 to $250,000, Parker said.
The Yankee Mac Jumbo, offered at a rate of 11.375 percent plus 3 points with terms of 15 to 30 years, will allow higher-income state residents to take advantage of the Yankee Mac program, Parker said.
Parker established the Yankee Mac program in 1981 to invest state pension funds to provide more loans for mortgages in the six previous pools, providing about 7,000 mortgages, including more than 2,700 for newly built homes, Parker said.
Parker said the program again is offering competitive rates to prospective homebuyers while also providing a prudent investment of the state's pension funds.
"As always, the interest rates are more than competitive for homebuyers; and yet, the mortgages will earn a rate of return comparable with many other financial instruments now available," he said.
"By offering these variable opportunity mortgages at a fixed rate, we are providing a stable investment to more of our citizens, while at the same time enhancing the liquidity of the vital component of our state pension fund portfolio," he added.
In addition to the Yankee Mac Jumbo, the other loans include:
• Conventional loans at 11.375 percent plus 2 points with a term of 20 to 30 years. Loans will range from $25,000 to $150,000, and the monthly payment on a 30-year, $50,000 loan carried to term would be $450.50.
• Buy-down loans at 11.125 percent plus 3 points with a term of 20 to 30 years. Loans will range from $10,000 to $20,000, and the monthly payment on a 30-year, $50,000 loan carried to term would be $429.29.
• Equity builder loans offered at 11.125 percent plus 2 points with a term of 15 years. Loans will range from $2,000 to $10,000, and the monthly payment on a $5,000 loan carried to term would be $37.23.
A homebuyer who opted for the buy-down loan would save $2,916 in interest over the term of the loan compared to a conventional loan while the savings on an equity builder loan would be more than $73,500.

Carrying the torch

Special Olympian Al Crittenden carries a torch through the center of Manchester Friday morning in a one-mile leg of the 210-mile Special Olympics Torch Relay. Running alongside Crittenden are Jim Miller and Adeline Kearney. The four-day run through Connecticut started Tuesday at the U.S. Coast Guard Academy in New London and concluded Friday night in Storrs with the opening of the Connecticut Special Olympics Summer Games on the University of Connecticut campus. Some employees of the corporations that helped sponsor the event ran with the olympians in the relay.

'Rate shock' possible for cable TV

HARTFORD (UPI) — Cable television customers could face higher rates and poorer service if cable companies are successful in two suits pending in federal court, Attorney General Joseph I. Lieberman said Friday.
The state has intervened in a case pending before a federal appeals court in Washington, D.C., demanding an end to state regulation of the rates cable companies can charge for basic service.
The case was prompted by a Federal Communications Commission ruling that cable rates cannot be set by regulators in areas where viewers can pick up three or more stations over the air without cable service.
If the FCC ruling is upheld in court, Lieberman said all of Connecticut's cable systems would be freed from the state rate-setting process by Jan. 1, 1987, or earlier for cable franchises that change owners.

Iraq announces cease-fire

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Iraqi President Saddam Hussein said Friday his nation would halt attacks on Iranian cities and towns within 24 hours to give "a new opportunity for the Iranian rulers and population to think about peace."

Hussein told the official Iraqi News Agency, INA, monitored in Beirut, that the Iraqi cease-fire on civilian targets will begin at 8 a.m. Saturday (1 a.m. EDT) and last for two weeks.

Hussein also called for a complete cease-fire, a troop withdrawal to the international border, a full exchange of prisoners and direct negotiations for a peace accord based on "mutual respect and non-intervention."

Initial contacts between the two sides could be made through a third party before direct negotiations, Hussein said.

Iraq's cease-fire, which Hussein said was called at the request of Iranian dissidents opposed to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's rule, will give "a new opportunity for the Iranian rulers and population to think about peace."

Suicide-bomber kills 11 people

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A suicide bomber rammed a car packed with explosives into a Lebanese army post in west Beirut Friday, killing at least 11 people and injuring 42 others.

Witnesses said a man sped up the wrong side of the road in a car packed with an estimated 440 pounds of TNT that exploded after soldiers of the army's Shiite Moslem Sixth brigade stopped him.

The Christian Voice of Lebanon radio said at least 11 people were killed, including three soldiers, and 42 others were injured.

The explosion also damaged several buildings.

"The driver waited until a crowd of soldiers came round the car and then opened the back as ordered," said one witness, who was thrown off his balcony by the force of the explosion.

Shiite Amal militiamen and soldiers quickly sealed off the scene — the first suicide bomb attack on the Sixth Brigade since Palestinian gunmen and their Lebanese allies started raiding Amal and Sixth Brigade posts last week.

U.S. questions spy suspects

FRANKFURT, West Germany — U.S. and West German authorities detained and questioned the crew of two Soviet helicopters suspected of spying on a U.S. military base while returning from the Paris air show, officials said Friday.

The two civilian Soviet helicopters were later permitted to continue their flight to Prague and Warsaw.

A spokesman for the Rhein-Main U.S. Air Force Base at Frankfurt said the questioning took place at the adjacent Frankfurt International Airport, where the helicopters landed for refueling on their way home from the Paris air show.

He declined to give details of the incident. But government sources in Bonn said one of the helicopters flew under the radar screen at the Bitburg U.S. Air Force Base on the Luxembourg border and apparently monitored traffic at the base.

The Bitburg base is home to the 38th U.S. Tactical Fighter Wing.

Cheese makers 'sick at heart'

LOS ANGELES — Mexican-style cheeses believed to have caused the deaths of 28 people were pulled from store shelves in eight states Friday, and makers said they were "sick at heart" to learn they may be the source of a deadly bacteria.

Officials with Jalisco Mexican Products Inc., told reporters that about 99 percent of the company's products have been removed from supermarket shelves and the suburban plant where the cheeses are manufactured was voluntarily shut down.

"As of this morning, we have no information as to the possible sources of this bacteria," Jalisco President Gary McPherson said. "We are cooperating fully with federal, state and county authorities and will continue to do so."

He said the recall will remain in effect "until we are certain where the problem lies and can guarantee the public that our cheese is safe."

Executives guilty of murder

MAYWOOD, Ill. — Three corporate executives were convicted of murder Friday in what is believed to be the first time company officials were held responsible for the death of one of their employees at the workplace.

Cook County's chief prosecutor vowed to seek "substantial" sentences for the three officials of Film Recovery Systems Inc., a defunct Elk Grove Village, Ill., firm where cyanide was used to extract silver from used X-ray film.

Cook County Circuit Judge Ronald J. Banks returned the guilty verdicts against the three after the two-month trial. The three were convicted of the Feb. 10, 1983, death of Stefan Golab, a 61-year-old Polish immigrant who allegedly died of cyanide poisoning after working over cyanide-filled vats at the northwest suburban plant.

State's Attorney Richard Daley vowed to seek "substantial" sentences for Steven O'Nabandian, president of the company; Daniel Rodriguez, a plant foreman; and Charles Kirschbaum, a plant manager.

Persecution 'a real obstacle'

WASHINGTON — The State Department Friday detailed a Soviet crackdown on Jews and said the persecution "constitutes a real obstacle" to improved relations with the United States.

"We call upon the Soviet Union to end this tragic and needless campaign. Soviet commitments freely undertaken at Helsinki and elsewhere require it, and simple human decency demands it," a department statement said.

The statement referred to the 1975 Helsinki Accords signed in Helsinki, Finland, by 35 nations, including the United States and Soviet Union, supporting "fundamental freedoms including the freedom of thought, conscience, religion or belief."

The department said at least 14 Jewish cultural activists, including three Hebrew teachers this month, have been arrested by Soviet authorities since last July.

Pilots union talks continue

CHICAGO — The United Airlines pilots' union Friday pressed through another day of study of a tentative settlement to end the 23-day-old strike that stilled the nation's largest air carrier.

The Master Executive Council of the Air Line Pilots Association has a Saturday deadline to approve the tentative agreement.

An ALPA spokesman said representatives of the Association of Flight Attendants also met with United to discuss a back-to-work agreement of their own.

"They're deliberating on the issues today and I think they intend to meet for as long as it takes," ALPA spokesman Sam O'Daniel said. "Hopefully, we can all work out a back-to-work agreement to everyone's liking."

Cold front brings record lows

A cold front that had a humble beginning in the Midwest pushed record low temperatures into the East and throughout the Appalachian region Friday, while showers and thunderstorms soaked the Plains.

Twenty record lows were reported from the East to Appalachian states.

Knoxville, Tenn.'s 82-year-old record of 48 degrees was broken when the mercury hit 44 and Asheville, N.C., saw its 48-degree mark from 1968 fall with the 44 degree low.

The chill in Montgomery, Ala. dropped temperatures to 55, breaking the mark of 57 set in 1963. Record lows were also set in Richmond, Va., 56 degrees; Memphis, Tenn., 56 degrees; Raleigh, N.C., 46 degrees; Huntville, Ala., 51 degrees; and Jackson, Miss., 55.

Solidarity activists are jailed

GDANSK, Poland (UPI) — Three Solidarity activists were sentenced to up to 3 1/2 years in prison Friday for planning a 15-minute strike to protest government food price hikes and for leading operations at the outlawed Solidarity underground headquarters.

The three also were accused of attempting to overthrow the communist system in Poland.

The 15-minute strike was canceled when authorities postponed the price increases but a very small number of workers did not get word in time and briefly walked off their jobs.

In Washington, the State Department said it was "deeply distressed" over the jailing of the Solidarity activists and is looking at possible actions to retaliate against the Polish government's trend of growing oppression.

"These developments mock the professed commitment of the Polish government to national reconciliation," spokesman Bernard Kalb said. He did not specify what sort of actions are being considered.

The United States has recently eased some of the economic sanctions imposed against Poland in 1982 because of the martial law crackdown on the Solidarity movement.

Judge Krzysztof Zielenki, who had presided over their three-week trial in the Baltic port city of Gdansk, sentenced Fraszyniak to 3 1/2 years in prison, Michnik to 3 years and Lis to 2 1/2 years.

The verdict was seen as a bid to crush dissent in Poland and a warning to Solidarity founder Walesa, who was at a meeting with the three dissidents when they were arrested. The Nobel Peace Prize laureate was not arrested and not charged.

In a statement distributed to reporters, Walesa said the "verdict evokes indignation and reflected a 'sickness' of the Polish authorities."

Shuttle crew optimistic

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The shuttle Discovery's international crew — including an Arab prince — arrived at the spaceport Friday optimistic for a Monday launch despite stormy weather expected through the weekend.

"We hope to give you a big, big flame on Monday morning," commander Daniel Brandenstein said. "We're down here for the real thing now and we feel we're all trained and ready to go," he said.

"Hopefully, the weather man will cooperate and by Monday morning all this will have gone away and we can go fly."

Thick clouds and drizzling rain at Kennedy Space Center greeted Brandenstein, co-pilot John Creighton and crewmates Shannon Lucid, Steven Nagel, John Fabian, Frenchman Patrick Baudry and Prince Sultan Salman Al-Saud of Saudi Arabia.

They arrived at the spaceport about 1:45 p.m. EDT from Houston to begin final launch preparations. Discovery's countdown was scheduled to start at 2 a.m. Saturday. If all goes well, countdown clocks will hit zero at 7:33 a.m. Monday for Discovery's blastoff on the 18th shuttle mission.

It will be the first spaceflight to include crew members from three nations.

"I'd like to express our thanks and warm feelings for the hospitality and good training we got from NASA," said Saudi, 26, a nephew of King Fahd of Saudi Arabia and the first Arab to get a space flight.

"I look forward to a very good mission. The ideal situation right now would be ... if you would send that rain to Saudi Arabia and we'll send you some of that sun for the launch day."

Air Force weather officers said heavy clouds and storms were expected through Sunday. A spokesman for the weather office said forecasters were "cautiously optimistic" about launch conditions Monday.

An arrival, a departure, an incomplete itinerary

Mayor Barbara Weinberg had more on her mind this past week than sewers. Weinberg and her husband, Stanley, were on a trip to Tokyo, attending a meeting of the Friendship Force Board of Directors. Among their fellow travelers were former President Jimmy Carter and his wife, Rosalynn.

Manchester Spotlight

James P. Sacks

Eleanor Colman.

Colman, who replaced Arnold "Ike" Kleinschmidt on the ticket two years ago, announced recently that she would not seek a second term.

A former member of the Board of Education, Colman is a soft-spoken lady whose friendliness hides a great deal of political savvy. While in public, she is far from the most vocal member of the Democratic majority. But fellow party members say she inspires action in closed caucuses.

Among the achievements with which she has been substantially credited are getting full funding of the school board's budget request this year — something that hasn't happened often — and winning the quintessential nod from the party for town sponsorship of a shelter for homeless people.

Colman's departure will surely leave a segment of the town population with less vocal support behind closed doors. Look for her place on the ticket to be filled by Peter DiRosa, the board's former Republican minority leader and traditionally one of the highest vote-getters in town.

When the Republican Town Committee attacked the issue of the Buckland firehouse this week, it didn't have to stop halfway. The GOP — which has been the minority party in town for more than 10 years — has been trying to develop an image of coherence, and has met with some success of late.

One thing the party has chosen to take a stand on is the question of whether the town should sell its firehouse on Tolland Turnpike. The firehouse is located in Buckland, a rapidly developing area where the town's paid fire department has been held by the courts it can't provide protection. That right is held by the Eighth Utilities District fire department.

But attempts by the district to buy the Buckland station have been rebuffed by Manchester Democrats, who say it still serves three quarters of the structures it was intended to. The Republicans resolved Wednesday that Manchester should indeed sell the station, calling the Democratic position "arrogant." But their resoluteness didn't say anything about who the buyer should be, something that leaves a few loose ends in their position.

It would be interesting to know why the Republicans declined to come out and say the station should be sold to the district. It's hard to see how Manchester fire protection would improve if the Buckland station were sold to the Grossly Growing Ganglion Greenery. Apparently, the GOP is still hesitant to really take a stand.

Patrick J. Buchanan, the White House director of communications and this to say in a recent interview with the New York Post concerning "negative reports" about staff bickering. "Oh, I don't know what's up. I don't even answer my telephone calls! How would I know what's going on. But isn't that all about a month old? I mean haven't we survived the Tet offensive?"

Pity on the editors of President Reagan's speeches after they've been through the communications office.

FEMA wields security stamp with abandon

WASHINGTON — "The cheaper the crook, the greater the matter," an amused Sam Spade observed of Wilmer, the tough-talking gunman in "The Maltese Falcon." In Washington bureaucratic circles, this fact of life translates: The less an agency has to hide, the more it is obsessed with "security."

Surely the glorified air-raid wardens of the Federal Emergency Management Agency are the most paranoid bureaucrats in the government. Desperate to make their little agency appear to be a vital cog in national defense, they stamp security classifications on just about every document but the cafeteria menu. The latest figures from the Information Security Oversight Office, which keeps track of the way federal agencies handle classification, shows the true absurdity of FEMA's infatuation with its rubber stamp.

According to the oversight office's statistics, FEMA stamped a whopping 30 percent of its classified documents "top secret." By contrast, the Defense Department, which handles far more sensitive information than the civil-defense agency, stamped only 1 percent of its classified material "top secret." And the CIA, which has information so secret that even its classification is secret, puts the "top secret" stamp on only 5 percent of its restricted material.

Rep. Glenn English, D-Okl., chairman of a House subcommittee on government information, has asked the Information Security Oversight Office to investigate "this apparent disproportionate use of 'top secret' at FEMA." In a letter to the office's director, seen by our associate Donald Goldberg, English suggests, "It may be that the phenomenon of 'prestige classification'... is a fact of life at FEMA."

GRAY MARKET BLUES: Former White House adviser Mike Deaver isn't the only American who found a bargain in a German car this year. Through the end of April, about 20,000 German cars — mostly the fancier BMW and Mercedes models — have been imported through the "gray market" that saves a purchaser as much as 45 percent of the cost in this country.

Little change in 20 years

Is there an American child alive today who is unfamiliar with Prince and Madonna, two superstars so outrageous that Elvis or John Lennon seems like the boy next door, and so sexually explicit that neither could possibly be suspected of chastity? Looking backward from this side of the sexual revolution, it's nearly unbelievable that something as ordinary and necessary as contraception was illegal in Connecticut as recently as 1965.

Yet, one day last week was the 20th anniversary of the Supreme Court decision to overturn Connecticut's prohibition against dispensing birth control information and supplies.

In large measure, the 1879 law was a grand hypocrisy. Condoms were sold at every drug store for the euphemistic purpose of disease prevention. Women could obtain contraception from their private physicians. But this was not a help to women too poor to afford their services.

Efforts to repeal the law in the state Legislature repeatedly failed. Clinics opened by the Planned Parenthood League in the 1930s were quickly closed by the authorities. Carloads of women were transported for years to out-of-state clinics where they could obtain the reproductive health care and birth control unavailable here. Planned Parenthood deliberately broke the law in 1961 by opening a clinic in New Haven. The arrest of the clinic's manager and medical director led to the landmark Supreme Court case.

The high court made it clear that birth control is a private matter in which the government has no business interfering. With that ruling, along with the development of the pill, women won at least the theoretical right to decide for themselves when and if they will bear children. But 20 years later, there is still no form of contraception offering 100 percent protection; in too many instances, concern about preventing unwanted pregnancies remains women's work, and the many men who would welcome the chance to take a simple pill are not given that choice for none is yet on the market.

Nor have coping skills kept pace with new freedoms. The teenage pregnancy rate in the United States is the highest in the industrialized world. A major study of this phenomenon concluded that adolescents in the U.S. have the worst of both worlds. They are inundated with sexual messages from entertainment and advertising. But the suggestion of physical pleasure is not accompanied by an equally clear communication about the consequences of conception, or an education in the responsibilities of bringing up a child. The difference between relationships of deep mutual commitment and those of transitory gratification is not fully understood.

The vision of Margaret Sanger, the founder of Planned Parenthood, is still but a benevolent wish. "When motherhood becomes the fruit of a deep yearning, not the result of ignorance or accident," Sanger said, "its children will become the foundation of a new race."

Hero would be the adversary

To the Editor:

The state Legislature just named Nathan Hale our state hero. He said, "I regret but I have one life to give to my country." By country he did not mean Coventry; he meant the concept of individual freedom — the idea that man had the right to control his own life, the idea of the American Revolution. Hale believed he was responsible for his own life. He chose to give his life for the concept of freedom rather than be controlled by the tyranny of government. The same Legislature that looks to this man as a hero suppresses its wishes on people in the form of a mandatory seat belt law.

The concept of freedom is more important than life itself. If Nathan Hale were here today he would turn down the honor. The Legislature's hero would be its adversary.

Banks complete merger

HARTFORD (UPI) — Two major banks in Connecticut and Massachusetts Friday completed their long-awaited merger only days after the U.S. Supreme Court upheld the interstate banking laws enacted by the two states.

The merger between CBT Corp., the parent firm of Connecticut Bank and Trust Co., and Bank of New England Corp. of Boston took effect at the close of business Friday, the two banks announced in a joint statement.

The merger was the first completed under interstate banking laws enacted by Connecticut and Massachusetts in 1983 but put on hold until the Supreme Court issued its ruling Monday.

The high court rejected a challenge to the interstate banking laws that prevent banks based outside of New England from merging with banks within the two states.

Several bank holding companies, including New York's Citicorp and Northeast Bancorp of Connecticut, had challenged the regional banking laws limiting interstate banking to New England states.

The merger of CBT and Bank of New England was consummated earlier than anticipated because all parties to the Supreme Court case agreed to accept the ruling without further legal action, the banks said.

The merger will create a banking company with $4 billion in assets and more than 250 offices and 10,000 employees in Connecticut and Massachusetts.

Town can't collect bill for Reagan

FAIRFIELD (UPI) — Republican town leaders still hope to recover some of the $15,000 spent on President Reagan's October campaign visit, despite the refusal of the Secret Service to pay part of the tab.

Town officials claim they were assessed security costs and other expenses would be reimbursed after the Reagan rally on the historic Town Hall Green, and have considered possible legal action to collect the debt.

The Secret Service has refused to cover about $9,000 for police protection and a motorcycle escort, while the Reagan-Bush campaign committee balked at another $6,000 in public works costs, mostly for sand-filled dump trucks.

The only payment made so far has been $600 for a decorative bunting used inside the Old Town Hall, said town officials, who would like to see the town reimbursed until they receive an official rejection in writing.

The Secret Service does not reimburse towns and cities for police assistance, Special Agent Jack Taylor of the agency's bureau of public affairs office said Thursday.

"I was told by the Washington office that the New Haven region of the Secret Service would be handling our claim," said Gerald Malafrente, administrative assistant to Republican First Selectman Jacquelyn Durrell.

The town also is awaiting word from the Reagan-Bush organization on whether it will reconsider its stance about paying for public works overtime, lumber and supplies to build barriers and a plank platform on the tree-shaded green.

The committee dismissed the $6,000 bill since the bulk of the funds were for workers posted around the rally site in sand-filled dump trucks Reagan officials consider part of security measures, Malafrente said.

The trucks are used as blockades to guard against vehicles ramming through the crowds to reach the president, he said, and would be any possible bombing attempts.

Taylor said the Secret Service could not possibly afford to reimburse cities and towns for every appearance made by the president or visiting foreign dignitaries.

"During a three-month period last year we had something like 150 public domestic stops for the president," he said. "At such times, we explain ahead of time to the local officials that we rely on them to assist us in protecting the president."

Fairfield officials ranging from police to the first selectwoman's office insist they were promised reimbursement for the town's visit Oct. 28, 1984, which drew thousands to the affluent suburb about 50 miles from New York City.

Durrell, who actively campaigned for Reagan's re-election, said she has been disappointed by the money spent for security.

She said she had spoken to officials in Hackensack, N.J., which also hosted a Reagan rally last year, and found they were unable to collect about $25,000 spent on that visit.

Connecticut In Brief

Torrington police chief quits
TORRINGTON — Police Chief Anthony Anthony A. Neri, 64, whose department is being sued for negligence and is the target of a grand jury investigation, has announced he will retire in September.

Neri, whose own appointment in 1983 to succeed ousted Police Chief Domenic Antonelli is under grand jury review, is the third top city official who plans to leave office this year.

The 37-year veteran policeman gave written notice to the Board of Public Safety Wednesday night.

The board also accepted official notice of the retirement of Fire Chief Francis A. Yank, also, 64, and Democratic Mayor Michael J. Conway announced last month he would not seek re-election.

Antonelli was forced out after his 1982 arrest on gambling charges and the appointment of Neri was one of the focuses of a grand jury investigation by Superior Court Judge Anthony V. DeMayo.

The judge is investigating illegal gambling and corruption in the Torrington area. It is a continuation of a grand jury overseen by Superior Court Judge John D. Brennan that began as a probe into gambling and other illegal activities within the police department.

Dump site may be historic

SOUTHBURY — Archaeologists are anxious to start digging around the proposed site of a municipal waste dump where they believe they may find Indian artifacts dating back thousands of years.

The leader of the survey, Kevin McBride of the University of Connecticut, said field work might start as soon as Monday.

The team expects to find remnants of an isolated 17th century hunting village based on the discovery of trading beads, European ceramics and other items made by Southbury residents over the years.

The Paugussett Indian Tribe also has suggested the heavily wooded site owned by Northeast Utilities might be an Indian burial ground. The Eagle Wing Press, an American Indian publication, has paid for the study.

"The discovery of a 17th Century village would be of far greater importance, since little is known about Indian life at this time," said McBride, a professor of anthropology who has conducted similar searches in the state.

Runaway girl held in slaying

MILFORD — A 15-year-old girl has been charged with murder in the slaying of a man, 64, whose body was found in a motel room last week, police said Friday.

The unidentified teenager was arrested Thursday in Norwalk and held Friday on $100,000 bond in a New Haven juvenile detention center, Milford police said.

The girl faced arraignment in Juvenile Court in New Haven on a felony charge of murder. A hearing was expected within one month to determine if the case will be transferred to Superior Court for prosecution, authorities said.

The defendant is a runaway from the Bridgeport area and police refused to release her name because of her age.

Seaport scrap a stalemate

BRIDGEPORT — The owner of a Bridgeport marina is planning another skirmish in the so-called battle of the seaports, with tourist dollars at stake in a simmering trademark dispute.

The feud between Captain's Cove Marina and Mystic Seaport and Museum pits a Revolutionary War village replica British warship against Connecticut's Yankee whaling past.

The state has refused to grant a trademark for Captain's Cove Seaport in Bridgeport and the non-profit Mystic group claims it has exclusive rights to the term "seaport."

"They may allow us the use of the mark, or they may tell us to do battle," said Kaye Williams, who rescued the rotting replica of the British frigate that was the scourge of New England during the Revolution.

State loans to create jobs

HARTFORD — The Connecticut Development Authority has awarded 12 mostly small and medium-sized firms a total of $16.2 million in low-cost industrial financing, it was announced Friday.

Economic Development Commissioner John J. Carson said the projects are expected to create 150 new permanent jobs and represents "expansions in a wide-ranging cross-section of industrial and geographical areas."

The largest award went to North Haven Partners for the acquisition of land and a building in North Haven.

The company received $6.4 million in industrial revenue bonds to acquire the land and the 224,000 square-foot building of the City Printing Co. as part of the overall acquisition of the printing firm.

Obituaries

Anna Mae Smith
Anna Mae (Hosling) Smith of South Windsor, formerly of South Windsor, died Friday at the Manchester Memorial Hospital.

She was the wife of the late George J. Smith.

She was born in Saratoga Springs, N.Y., July 6, 1897, and she lived in Manchester for 45 years before moving to South Windsor in 1942.

She is survived by two sons, Dr. Robert W. Smith of Muncie, Ind., and Dr. Edward G. Smith of South Windsor; six grandchildren; and a niece.

The funeral and burial will be held at the convenience of the family. There are no calling hours. Holmes Funeral Home has charge of arrangements.

Memorial donations may be made to the South Windsor Visiting Nurses Association, 91 Ayers Road, South Windsor 06074.

Wholesale prices up slightly, but factory production down

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Wholesale prices hardly moved in May, increasing just 0.2 percent, but factory production fell again, particularly at auto plants, government economists said Friday.

The reports were mixed news for the economy, showing inflation remains subdued but that factory workers and farmers are being squeezed harder by the slow economy.

The Labor Department's Producer Price Index has moved up at an annual rate of only 1.8 percent since the beginning of the year, no different from last year that ended with a modest 1.7 percent increase at wholesale.

But the cross currents that kept prices stable were a 1.1 percent decline in food prices that helped balance the 3.4 percent increase in gasoline prices for dealers.

Wholesale food prices have not gone up any month this year. As a result prices received on the farm keep dropping, perhaps as much as 2.1 percent in May, one analyst said. Many farmers are unable to meet big debt payments as consumers are benefited.

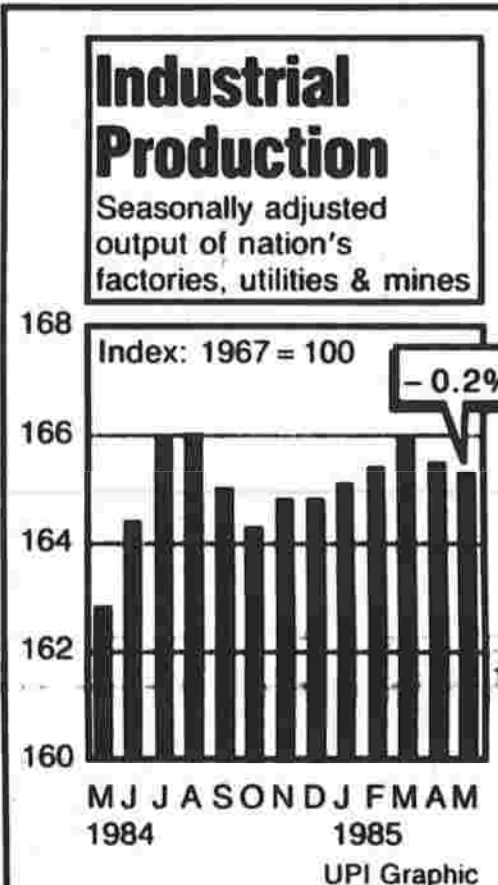

Beef prices dropped 3.8 percent in May, the third straight month of large declines.

The Producer Price Index, measuring price changes for nearly 3,000 goods sold in bulk, was set at 294.2, equivalent to a cost of $2,942 for goods that cost business $1,000 in 1967.

About 21 percent of the index represents prices of machinery and other business equipment. That category showed no change at all for the second month, a sign that fierce import competition is preventing any mark up.

Another report Friday, from the Federal Reserve, reflected the same import pressure. Industrial production dropped 0.1 percent in May after slipping 0.2 percent in April. Most telling was the weak growth for all of the past year of only 1.5 percent.

U.S. industry has blamed a strong dollar for giving its products a price disadvantage on world markets and for turning imported machinery and equipment into bargains. The same strong dollar is given much of the credit for forcing American manufacturers to hold the line on price increases.

Advice Thrift lesson earns reward for both son and father

DEAR ABBY: As a father, I made a lot of mistakes (my son is now 14), but I know I did at least one thing right, and I'd like to share it with you.

father had it framed, and when we brought him here last year to live with us, he carried it in his hands for fear it might get damaged or lost.

When my son was 3 years old, I started giving him an allowance of 50 cents a week. There was one catch — he could spend 25 cents on anything he wanted, but the other 25 cents he had to put in his piggy bank. He could spend his piggy bank savings any way he wanted, but only after it reached $10.

Each week he spent his 25 cents on candy and gum, but he never really thought much about his savings — until he got his $10. When he realized what he could get if he saved up his money, he began saving all his allowance.

Every year on his birthday, his allowance was increased 50 cents, so he had 25 cents more he had to save. Also the amount he had to save increased $10.

He now has his first after-school job, and he's saving for a new car and a school trip to France. I have never talked to him directly about the virtues of saving, but he saves money like no other teen-ager I know.

You gave your son a gift that will last him a lifetime: a lesson in the value of saving.

After decade of hardship, the Whites hit sunny times

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Buck White once supported his country music habit by sunbathing as a plumber back in Texas and Arkansas.

But the head of The Whites, which includes daughters Sharon and Cheryl, really doesn't recall the years of struggle, hardship and rejection with bitterness.

"There were some hard times in that we were wondering where our next payment was coming from," said White. "We were loving our music and really into our music and enjoying that part. That part was not unhappy."

"It was unhappy that we were really wanting to be recognized and wondering why our records would not be played on the radio. That's an unhappy feeling. We believed in ourselves enough to think we had something."

Sharon White remembers the frustration. "When we moved here (in 1971), we couldn't get 'em to listen to anything," she said. "We cut our own just of what we could do and took it around to get somebody to listen to us. They wouldn't even listen to the tape."

It seems everybody has a different formula for success in country music and Buck White's may stem from his early appreciation of the dobro guitar, that sometimes delectable, delightful mood-setting instrument that is unique to country music.

NOW WHEN THE WHITES perform it's Jerry Douglas who kicks them off.

"It's a distinctive identifiable sound. You hear that and the next thing you hear is going to be our voices," Sharon White said.

"When he came in and started playing, we were doing now — the old traditional country. But when he came, we finally began to sound like we had been trying to sound like a dobro does. They don't sustain. They are a staccato-type instrument and most banjos sound good fast and don't sound good slow. A dobro can sound good fast or slow," she said.

They toured with Emmylou Harris while she was promoting a very traditional country album to her in 1979 and the exposure helped the Whites.

"That proved a point," said Cheryl White. "The timing was just right and enough doors were opened. It showed that the market was there. It made a lot of people in Nashville open their eyes and we set a record contract."

"It takes a lot of determination. Cheryl White. "The timing was just right and enough doors were opened. It showed that the market was there. It made a lot of people in Nashville open their eyes and we set a record contract."

Sharon White, who is married to country music singer Ricky Skaggs, said until 1979 they had used a banjo in their act and then they decided to hire Douglas, whom they had known for several years and had played some on their albums.

Sharon White said about that same time their music "broadened and opened up" and Buck White started playing more piano.

Nearly 200 people from throughout central Connecticut parade on Main Street Saturday to protest legalized abortion.

Manchester debates abortion

By Susan Vaughn
Herald Reporter

Twelve years after a Supreme Court decision legalized abortion on demand in this country, the question of whether it is moral remains the focus of a bitter dispute.

In Manchester, as in other towns throughout the United States, advocates are squaring off on both sides of the question. Few on either side say they are willing to compromise on the issue.

The Christian Action Council and other anti-abortion groups are calling for an end to legalized abortion under all circumstances. Their position is being fought vigorously by some women's groups and others who say that a woman's right to control her body is at stake.

Until now, the major battles over the issue have taken place mostly in large cities. But with the parade Saturday and a pro-choice group's recent letter-writing campaign, Manchester area residents have been entering the fray in ever-increasing numbers.

Since the Supreme Court's 1973 decision in the "Roe vs. Wade" case, abortions have been available in Connecticut.

But the three state legislators from Manchester say they personally oppose legal abortion in all but the most extreme cases, such as rape or incest — echoing the sentiments of the Reagan administration and many conservatives.

Theirs is a position, say pro-choice groups, that directly threatens the constitutional rights of women.

Turn to pages 4 and 5 for overview of the march, an overview of the situation in Manchester, and stories about the legislators' views and the recent letter-writing campaign.

Town Lotto millionaires to pay bills

By Susan Vaughn
Herald Reporter

"Fantastic" was about all Richard Cokash of Manchester had to say this morning about winning the $3-million grand prize in last week's Connecticut State Lotto drawing.

He made the comment during an interview in the office of Manchester State Bank President Nathan Agostinelli.

The soft-spoken Cokash, 24, was more concerned about calming the cries of his two-year-old daughter, Amber — and with getting to work at Larry's Auto Supply in South Windsor by noon — than with discussing his fortune.

Cokash and his wife, Susan, 26, deposited the first of 20 $125,000 payments at Manchester State after picking up the check at state lottery headquarters in Newington. The payments will represent their winnings after taxes.

Cokash said he did not know until Sunday when he returned from a trip to Ohio that he had won the grand prize Friday with a "quick-pick" number of 4, 24, 27, 31, 35, 39. He said he bought his usual four weekly tickets at 7:45 p.m.

Friday at Pero Fruit Stand on Oakland Street in the North End.

He said he buys only the quick-pick tickets and doesn't play other lottery games.

Susan Cokash, who is about six months pregnant, said she "didn't think to check" the lottery numbers while her husband was away over the weekend. She said her husband had the tickets with him anyway.

The Cokashes said they plan to buy their first home, pay all their bills and go on a cruise with their winnings. "Anywhere we don't have to fly," said Susan Cokash.

Discovery takes off for satellite launch

By William Harwood
United Press International

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Five Americans, a Frenchman and a Saudi Arabian prince thundered into orbit aboard the shuttle Discovery to launch four satellites and help carry out the first "Star Wars" experiment in space.

"We're trucking along," commander Daniel Brandenstein told mission controllers about an hour and a half after the spectacular blastoff as the shuttle soared over the Pacific Ocean.

Brandenstein, co-pilot John Creighton and crewmates Shannon Lucid, Steven Nagel, John Fabian, Frenchman Patrick Baudry and Prince Sultan Salman Al-Saud took off on time at 7:30 a.m. and climbed smoothly into the morning sky trailing streams of smoke and flame.

The ship's international cargo includes three communications satellites owned by Mexico, the 21-nation Arab Satellite Communications Organization and American Telephone & Telegraph Co. Also on board is a small astronomical observatory.

for itself," launch director Robert Sieck said after the liftoff. "The team did an excellent job and the shuttle system performed as advertised."

Shuttle manager Thomas Utzman said the only glitch during an otherwise flawless countdown was a power outage early today at the launch complex, which was corrected about an hour later.

Discovery, making the 18th shuttle flight, rode into space atop a brilliant plume of flame from its two solid rocket boosters. Hundreds of international visitors watched the spectacle for nearly three minutes until Discovery disappeared from view.

About 40 minutes after liftoff, Discovery's twin orbital maneuvering rockets fired for about 3 minutes to place the shuttle in a circular orbit 216 miles high and about an hour later, the crew was given permission to open the ship's payload bay doors.

Adding to the international flavor of space this week, two Soviet cosmonauts worked aboard the Russian Salyut 7 space station in their 12th day of Earth orbit. NASA was paid about $30 million to ferry the three relay stations to orbit.

Criminal justice review to get under way

HARTFORD (UPI) — The 14 members of a commission established in February to examine the state's criminal justice system start its work Wednesday amid questions about the role of politics in the state.

The eight Republicans and six Democrats have a lot to do at their first meeting.

They have to agree on ground rules, choose a deputy counsel and decide whether to have a third counsel, where to meet, and even what to call their commission.

McCarthy as chief counsel. McCarthy, 72, of Westfield is a former Republican state legislator, a former Superior Court judge and retired general counsel for Travelers Cos.

On Wednesday, the commission is expected to choose Thomas D. Clifford as deputy counsel. Clifford, 52, is a Hartford lawyer with considerable criminal law experience, and a Democrat.

The commission co-chairman Rep. Reginald J. Smith, R-New Hartford, is pressing to hire a third counsel, a Republican, giving each party a counsel, and retain McCarthy as the general

Senate Majority Leader Smith insisted Republicans be in command.

While denying that the aim of the commission is to embarrass Democrats, Smith acknowledges Republicans stand to score some political points in the investigation.

"I think we can end up with a solid image of the Republican Party if we come up with some good solid recommendations for improving the criminal justice system," Smith said.

Democrats wanted the commission to be bipartisan, but Republicans, led by products for several weeks. May can supplement your calcium needs with pills. With time, since acne tends to clear with age, you may be able to enjoy dairy products once again.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Why do adults have such a tough time learning new languages? I used to speak Spanish, but now I cannot pick it up again. How can I relearn the language? I cannot afford to relocate.

DEAR READER: Children appear to learn languages more readily than adults because there are more "open circuits" and youngsters really can throw themselves into the learning process.

Your problem, I think, is not learning a language, but remembering it. I'm no language expert, yet I'll tell you a few things that return you to a Spanish-speaking environment, a neighborhood with foreign country or language lab.

If you say you "cannot" pick it up again, you won't. That's true of any skill. Rather, take the position that you "will" — and so you shall.

To get you started (or fish you off), call the adult education department of any university or one of many language schools listed in the Yellow Pages. You may not be able to relocate, but you certainly could take two or three days (or evenings) a week to regain your fluency.

Send your questions to Dr. Gott at P.O. Box 9128, Cleveland, OH 44101. Due to volume of mail, individual questions cannot be answered. Questions of general interest will be answered in future columns.

Could this indicate the possibility of clotting or other serious complications?

DEAR READER: Nosebleeds can result from a variety of causes, including high blood pressure and clotting deficiency. Some medicines for hypertension can affect the blood, so I recommend you check with your doctor to make sure that your blood pressure is under control and you haven't developed a complication of treatment.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have been having a lot of trouble sleeping lately. I always eat a big meal around 9 p.m. Could be disturbing my sleeping patterns by eating like this so late in the evening? Are there certain foods one should avoid at so late an hour?

DEAR READER: Your sleep pattern may be altered by a large and late evening meal.

Although several European cultures find it fashionable to have late evening meals, they are usually eaten at the main meal at midday, followed later by tea (or a stupa), a light late-evening meal and bed after midnight. This pattern seems to work for them; they don't retire with full stomachs.

Americans have chosen a different custom, which includes light breakfast, early lunch, a heavy dinner and bed usually before midnight. If you are eating sparingly during the day and then "piling on the carbs" at night, your digestion may be in high gear by the time you roll into bed. The situation can be worsened if you are consuming lots of rich and indigestible food at dinner.

Try eating dinner earlier in the evening. Perhaps you might experiment with eating your main meal in the middle of the day. Or go to bed later, if your schedule permits.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Whenever I eat dairy products, I develop acne. A friend who has had acne would never to drink milk. I was recently tested, and I am not allergic to dairy products. Are dairy products especially acne-forming?

DEAR READER: Dairy products contain fats and oils that may encourage acne. This is not a usual pattern, but it can happen.

Cholesterol in cow's milk is commonly the culprit. Therefore, drinking skimmed or powdered milk may help. If that doesn't solve your problem, try giving up milk

Big snake wasn't part of the raid

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Police raided a home for the marijuana and heroin they were looking for, and something they weren't — a 13-foot python curled up in the bathtub.

The snake was taken to an animal shelter and officials said the reptile is 16 feet longer than allowed to be kept under city law. People may keep snakes only up to 5 feet long, said Lloyd Ross, director of the Animal Control Bureau.

"Although it is not a poisonous snake, it can injure a person by squeezing," he said.

Ross said the animal shelter is not equipped to keep the snake and wants the city to take it. If the zoo refuses, "it will be euthanized because we just can't house a snake for a long time. Our facility is primarily used for dogs and cats," Ross said.

Police arrested Elizabeth Berry, 48, and her son, Bryant, 19, during Thursday's raid on the Baltimore house. A second man, Vincent, 19, surrendered later.

In addition to the python, police seized three small packets of heroin, a small amount of marijuana and $1,300.
