O'Neill gives OK to appeal open primary

By Mark A. Dupuis
United Press International

HARTFORD - Gov. William A. O'Neill today announced the state will appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court a ruling allowing state Republicans to open some of their primaries to unaffiliated voters.
"I feel the question is who does run the election process, political parties or the state? I believe the state should," said the Democratic governor.
O'Neill told a news conference at the Capitol that the cost of an appeal would be minimal compared with the costly changes in election procedures the state would have to make to comply with an Aug. 8 decision by a federal appeals court.
The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New York upheld a decision by U.S. District Judge Jose A. Cabranes in Hartford that the state GOP could open some of its primaries to unaffiliated voters.
State Attorney General Joseph I. Lieberman said he was prepared to go forth to the high court to argue essentially the same claims made earlier that political parties do not have the right to dictate legislation.
"I do not intend to call them (legislators) and waste taxpayers' money," said O'Neill.
O'Neill said the Republican-controlled Legislature wasted a special session in July when it refused to deal with ways to provide property tax relief from the budget surplus.
He said, however, "if they get their act together I will have legislation ready for them to act on."
Comptroller J. Edward Caldwell announced Tuesday the state ended the fiscal year June 30 with a record surplus of more than $385 million and is running toward a surplus of $38.6 million in the current fiscal year.
O'Neill called the Republican-controlled House and Senate into a special session in July to use some of the surplus to increase state aid to cities and towns, but GOP leaders took no action on the request.
Senate Republican leaders tried to collect petition signatures from lawmakers to call a session to discuss tax cuts or other ways to use the surplus, but the petition drive failed in the House.
Noting that the petition drive failed, O'Neill said he wanted to make sure he wouldn't be "wasting the taxpayers' money" by calling a special session only to have the GOP-controlled Legislature take no action during the session.

Federal OK sought for Main St. plan

By Kathy Garmus
Assistant City Editor

The state Department of Transportation has asked the Federal Highway Administration to approve the latest plan for the reconstruction of downtown Main Street.
Public Works Director George A. Kamra said this morning that federal approval of the $4.8 reconstruction plan is expected in a few weeks.
Under the plan, more than 100 on-street parking spaces, most of them major reconstruction plan to go to the state for review. The first one, which was more expensive and elaborate, was rejected following a public hearing.
The most recent plan also faced opposition from downtown merchants during a public hearing in November. Most of those who spoke said they objected to the loss of on-street parking, but the addition of several off-street lots to make up the difference.

Mixup postpones key weapons test

By Richard C. Gross
United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI) - A counting mixup forced a postponement of the first U.S. test of an anti-satellite weapon in space but the Pentagon has rescheduled the exercise for later this month and the Soviets are threatening to follow suit.
Putting U.S.-Soviet relations on a collision course over the issue, the Pentagon said Wednesday it will go ahead with the test, in which a weapon will be fired from the F-15 fighter jet to destroy a dead satellite now orbiting Earth.
The test will be conducted at least six weeks before the Nov. 18-20 summit between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and likely will be an issue in their talks.
In response to the rescheduling, the Tass news agency said the Soviet Union will be freed from its 2-year-old moratorium on testing anti-satellite weapons if the United States goes ahead with a weapons test.
"If the United States holds tests of anti-satellite weapons against a target in outer space, the Soviet Union will consider itself free of its international commitment not to place anti-satellite weapons in space," Tass said Wednesday in a statement authorized by the Kremlin.
The test had been scheduled for Wednesday but was canceled at the last minute to avoid possible objections from Congress over the timing, officials said.
President Reagan told Congress Aug. 20 a test was necessary and would be held some time after a required 15-day waiting period, which expired midnight Wednesday.
But some senior Pentagon officials thought the waiting period that began Aug. 20 expired midnight Tuesday and scheduled the test for Wednesday, officials said.
After debate within the Pentagon Tuesday, the test was put off "to avoid getting into the possibility of overstepping the bounds set down by Congress," an official said.
One Air Force official told CBS News the mixup was "pitiful" and

China hails Nixon

PEKING (UPI) - Former President Richard Nixon, receiving red-carpet treatment from his Chinese hosts, met today with Premier Zhao Ziyang and Communist Party Chief Hu Yaobang.

Nixon, whose historic 1972 trip to Peking ended nearly 25 years of hostility between China and the United States, was scheduled to meet Friday with leader Deng Xiaoping.
Nixon met with Hu today at the Communist Party headquarters in Zhongnanhai, a heavily guarded compound in central Peking that is the center of the Chinese government.
Nixon, on his fifth visit to China, thanked Zhao for taking time out from talks with Spanish Premier Felipe Gonzalez and other state matters to meet with him.
Zhao replied it was an honor to meet Nixon, reflecting the high esteem with which many Chinese hold the former U.S. president.

Katie's first day of 'K' is a crowning success

By Susan Vaughn
Herald Reporter

The first day of kindergarten isn't easy. Children leaving their parents for the first time have to learn new rules and they may even get a spanking - if it happens to be their birthday.
Katie, who turned 5 on Tuesday, shyly nodded when asked if she was looking forward to school. The experience was not so easy for others, however. One little girl cried and clutched her doll when her mother put her in line with the rest of her classmates.
Katie's mother, Mary Breen, has been through the kindergarten experience twice before with her two older daughters. "It's still not easy," she said Wednesday.

Cosgrove takes reins as Herald publisher

RICHARD W. COSGROVE
... New Herald publisher

Richard W. Cosgrove is the new publisher of the Manchester Herald. The appointment, effective today, was made by Richard M. Diamond, New England regional vice president of Scripps League Newspapers, who has served as Herald publisher since March 1981.
For the past three years Cosgrove, 41, was publisher of the Clearwater (Fla.) Sun. Before that position, Cosgrove served as editor and publisher, from 1977 to 1982, of the Coos Bay World, a Scripps League newspaper in Oregon. From 1973 to 1975 he was the advertising manager of the Manchester Herald.
"I am excited about the prospect of having an individual with Dick Cosgrove's ability and experience taking over the reins at the Herald," said Diamond. "For the past year or so, my duties as regional vice president, along with other company responsibilities, have prevented me from becoming as active in the community as I would have liked," Diamond added.
Cosgrove has had a long record of distinguished community service during his career. In Coos Bay, Ore., he served as president of the chamber of commerce and chairman of the Coos County Economic Development Corp. While in Clearwater he was a member of the chamber's board of governors; a member of the Morton Plant Hospital Foundation board; chairman of the hospital's long-range planning committee; and vice president of Pinellas County Junior Achievement. His wife, Susan, a former retail operations executive with Allied Stores, was also active in community affairs, serving as vice president of fund raising and 1983 president of the Florida Orchestra Guild, North Suncost Chapter; a board member of the Florida Golf Coast Fine Arts Society; fundraising chairman for several local events from fashion shows to golf tournaments; and chairman of a state senate-appointed task force concerning local governmental issues.
During his years as a publisher, Cosgrove's newspapers received numerous awards for outstanding journalistic achievement. In 1981 his newspaper was named the top newspaper in Oregon.
"I am proud of the progress that has been made at the Herald in my four-and-one-half-year tenure and I am fully confident that, under Dick Cosgrove's leadership, we will make even greater strides," Diamond said. "The Herald will continue to be part of my New England vision, and I look forward to watching the implementation of many new ideas and improvements."
Cosgrove, who is buying a home in Manchester, said, "I am happy to be returning to Manchester, a place I've always held in high regard. It will be good to renew old acquaintances and make new friends."
"We will continue the mission started by Rick Diamond of restoring the rich journalistic tradition of the Manchester Herald provided the citizens of this community for the past 104 years," Cosgrove said.
Cosgrove said Herald readers could look forward to some exciting improvements in the months to come.

During his years as a publisher, Cosgrove's newspapers received numerous awards for outstanding journalistic achievement. In 1981 his newspaper was named the top newspaper in Oregon.
"I am proud of the progress that has been made at the Herald in my four-and-one-half-year tenure and I am fully confident that, under Dick Cosgrove's leadership, we will make even greater strides," Diamond said. "The Herald will continue to be part of my New England vision, and I look forward to watching the implementation of many new ideas and improvements."
Cosgrove, who is buying a home in Manchester, said, "I am happy to be returning to Manchester, a place I've always held in high regard. It will be good to renew old acquaintances and make new friends."
"We will continue the mission started by Rick Diamond of restoring the rich journalistic tradition of the Manchester Herald provided the citizens of this community for the past 104 years," Cosgrove said.
Cosgrove said Herald readers could look forward to some exciting improvements in the months to come.

Richard W. Cosgrove is the new publisher of the Manchester Herald. The appointment, effective today, was made by Richard M. Diamond, New England regional vice president of Scripps League Newspapers, who has served as Herald publisher since March 1981.
For the past three years Cosgrove, 41, was publisher of the Clearwater (Fla.) Sun. Before that position, Cosgrove served as editor and publisher, from 1977 to 1982, of the Coos Bay World, a Scripps League newspaper in Oregon. From 1973 to 1975 he was the advertising manager of the Manchester Herald.
"I am excited about the prospect of having an individual with Dick Cosgrove's ability and experience taking over the reins at the Herald," said Diamond. "For the past year or so, my duties as regional vice president, along with other company responsibilities, have prevented me from becoming as active in the community as I would have liked," Diamond added.
Cosgrove has had a long record of distinguished community service during his career. In Coos Bay, Ore., he served as president of the chamber of commerce and chairman of the Coos County Economic Development Corp. While in Clearwater he was a member of the chamber's board of governors; a member of the Morton Plant Hospital Foundation board; chairman of the hospital's long-range planning committee; and vice president of Pinellas County Junior Achievement. His wife, Susan, a former retail operations executive with Allied Stores, was also active in community affairs, serving as vice president of fund raising and 1983 president of the Florida Orchestra Guild, North Suncost Chapter; a board member of the Florida Golf Coast Fine Arts Society; fundraising chairman for several local events from fashion shows to golf tournaments; and chairman of a state senate-appointed task force concerning local governmental issues.
During his years as a publisher, Cosgrove's newspapers received numerous awards for outstanding journalistic achievement. In 1981 his newspaper was named the top newspaper in Oregon.
"I am proud of the progress that has been made at the Herald in my four-and-one-half-year tenure and I am fully confident that, under Dick Cosgrove's leadership, we will make even greater strides," Diamond said. # Trading places Maine lady vies for governor as Independent

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — When Sherry Huber campaigned for the Republican gubernatorial nomination four years ago, she noticed a lot of support for her candidacy among Independents — people who couldn't vote for her in the Republican primary.

She ran a strong campaign, but ultimately lost the nomination to Republican stalwart Charles Cragin. He, in turn, lost to the Democratic incumbent, Gov. Joseph Brennan.

It's a scenario that Mrs. Huber doesn't intend to see repeated.

This week, Mrs. Huber took the first, and perhaps the most important, step in her second try for the Blaine House: she went to the Falmouth town offices and removed her name from the rolls of registered Republicans.

Now she's an Independent — just like those voters who seemed to respond so well to her campaign four years ago. Now, she can run for the governorship directly, without having to go through the primary process.

"I have a lot of respect for the two-party system, I've worked hard for it, but from a practical standpoint I think I have a better chance of attracting voters in a general election," said Mrs. Huber, who served three terms in the state House of Representatives as a Republican.

"While in some ways I regret feeling that it has to be that way, I do think it will be done if I am to achieve the Blaine House."

Selecting candidates through the party primary system leaves the selection up to an extremely narrow band of voters, Mrs. Huber said, and leaves out many more citizens than it lets in.

"A primary is not a very active place to run a candidacy," she said. "You only have about 11 percent of the enrolled voters participating in a party primary in Maine, and when you have three candidates like last time the winner gets the nomination with the blessing of only about six per cent of the voters."

The issues facing gubernatorial candidates haven't changed much in the past year, she said — improving education, developing new jobs, protecting the environment, finding new energy sources.

"I think government has an obligation to plan ahead, to try to look down the road to see what kind of state we want to be, and how we should get there," she said.

Mrs. Huber won't talk about specifics of her campaign, and won't even confirm that she will be a candidate. "Otherwise you wouldn't come to my news conference," she said.

But she has scheduled a news conference for Sept. 23 in Augusta. And the party candidates, remembering Independent Jim Longley's upset victory in 1974, will be watching Sherry Huber very closely.

Columnist Erma Bombeck shows her elation about being named grand marshal of the 1985 Rose Parade. The Tournament of Roses President Frederick D. Johnson Jr. holds the newspaper testifying to that fact.

Bombeck readily admits, however, that the thrill could have been bigger.

"For a woman who started a career at 37 and up until that time made her living sorting socks, this has got to be the most exciting moment I've ever had," she said Wednesday after her title was announced.

Still, she would have preferred to have been chosen Rose Queen, but decided "I just couldn't hold my breath or my stomach in for two hours."

"Lovely Rita," the meter maid who inspired a Beatles' song, is retiring and says ticketing Paul McCartney's car 18 years ago was the highlight of her career.

Meta Davis was writing out a citation for McCartney's car near the Beatles' Abbey Road studio once when the songwriter walked up.

"He saw that my name was Meta and he laughed and said, 'That would make a nice jingle. I could use that,'" Davis said. "We chatted for a few minutes and then he drove off. He was one of the more pleasant people I have dealt with."

That was the last Davis thought of the matter until the album "Sergeant Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band," featuring "Lovely Rita, Meter Maid," came out.

Davis' retirement closely follows the departure by another song-inspiring law enforcement officer: Stockbridge, Mass., Police Chief William J. "Officer Obie" Oshanben recently quit after a career that included arresting Al Gurbie for littering, giving birth to the song "Alice's Restaurant."

Admiral resigns commission

British actor Alan Devlin was hit by a mid-life career crisis in the midst of the opera "Pinafore" and stormed off the stage. Devlin was singing "I Am the Ruler of the Queen's Navvy" when he stopped and uttered an oath that neither Gilbert nor Sullivan wrote into the script.

"Oh dash this," he said. "I'm going home."

He climbed off the stage, walked down the aisle and out of the theater, leaving behind his admiral's uniform as he departed. The show had run rave notices from the critics and is destined for London's West End, the Broadway of Britain. Devlin, who once won an award as best supporting actor in London, said he was considering going into some other field of work.

Miss. coast disaster area

GULFPORT, Miss. (UPI) — President Reagan has declared Mississippi's hurricane-ravaged coast a disaster area eligible for millions of dollars in federal aid to rebuild wrecked homes and businesses.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency, which will coordinate the relief effort, said Wednesday the storm damaged or destroyed 2,700 dwellings and 1,400 businesses when it slammed into the 60-mile resort coast on Labor Day.

"FEMA said 'millions of dollars' in federal assistance would be available, but said official estimates of Elena's damage were not yet available.

But civil defense spokesman Richard Glazier speculated the storm damage in Mississippi, Florida, Alabama and Louisiana may exceed the $2 billion damage caused by Hurricane Frederic in 1979.

"The damage from Elena is less than Frederic," Glazier said, "but the dollar amount is greater because of inflation."

FEMA said 3,000 homes were damaged so severely that temporary housing must be found for the occupants.

Paul E. Hall of FEMA's Atlanta office, who will head the relief effort, said homeowners may borrow up to $100,000 for repairs and up to $20,000 for personal property and the Small Business Administration will authorize loans up to $500,000 for businesses damaged or destroyed in the storm.

The 30-year loans will carry interest rates of 4 percent or 8 percent, depending on the borrower's credit rating, Hall said.

Red Cross spokeswoman Terry Gaultier estimated the homes of 25,000 people were damaged in Mississippi, Alabama and Florida — most of them in Mississippi — and said, "These are just middle figures and they will increase."

Glazier said 49,000 people still were without electricity in the three counties along Mississippi's coast and about 1,000 homes had no running water.

The Salvation Army estimated that 40,000 meals have been served since Elena blasted the coast and the Red Cross provided many more meals.

"To my knowledge, no one is going without food," said Glazier.

Police and National Guard troops were enforcing a dusk-to-dawn curfew to control looting. Officials said eight looters have been arrested, so far, four in Harrison County and four in Gulfport.

Across the nation

Scattered showers and thunderstorms will reach from the upper Mississippi Valley to New England and from the Tennessee Valley and the lower Mississippi Valley to the Gulf Coast and Florida. Thunderstorms will dot the central Rockies and the Plains. Rain will be likely along the northern Pacific Coast, with scattered showers across the northern Rockies.

High temperatures will be in the middle 60s and 70s from northern New England to the upper Mississippi Valley and from the northern Rockies to the northern Pacific Coast. Highs will be in the 90s across the central and southern Atlantic Coast and from the southern and central Plains to the lower Mississippi Valley. Readings will be near 100 from central Texas to Kansas.

Manchester In Brief

Burkamp gets some results

Manchester businessman Kenneth Burkamp Wednesday got some results from his complaint against the state Motor Vehicle Department, which denied renewal of his public service driver's license in July because he is an insulin-dependent diabetic.

As the result of Burkamp's request to review his complaint, Gov. William A. O'Neill has ordered Motor Vehicles Commissioner Benjamin A. Muzio to have the department's medical advisory board review the matter. The review has been scheduled for Sept. 13.

Burkamp said action by the governor is a "good step forward." He said the battle hasn't been won, but "at least the door is open." The attitude of the Motor Vehicle Department before, he said, was, "We don't care."

Burkamp had held a public service license which allows a person to drive a limousine, bus or taxi, for 31 years prior to the denial. The application was denied because of a change in the medical forms which required a more detailed report on a person with diabetes.

Main-flushing to continue

The Water Department will continue flushing water mains next week from East Middle Turnpike at Woodbridge Street east to the town line and north to Highland Street.

There may be temporary discoloration of water and reduced pressure during flushing. Homeowners should try to avoid using water until it clears.

If water remains discolored for an extended period of time, homeowners can call the Water Department at 647-3115.

Poucher retiring from town

Berence Poucher, who has worked in the office of the town's general manager for 28 years, will retire at the end of September.

Mrs. Poucher is now a personnel technician. She began work under Richard Martin, former general manager.

Poucher said Wednesday that she has no special plans for retirement, but she does hope to relax.

Her retirement luncheon is planned for her Sept. 18 at Vito's Restaurant, 60 Villa Louisa Road, Bolton.

Anyone interested in buying tickets for the event should phone Sue Price at 647-3124 no later than Friday.

PZC OKs Red Roof change

The Planning and Zoning Commission Wednesday approved a zone change for almost 26 acres of land on Buckland Street that clears the way for a motel to be constructed on the site.

The change was from Rural Residence and Industrial to Business III for two parcels equaling 25.3 acres.

Red Roof Inns of Hilliard, Ohio, has proposed to build a motel on the site.

School enrollment on target

The total number of students enrolled in Manchester public schools on the first day of school Wednesday was 7,006. The figure is within one-half of one percent of a projected enrollment of 7,050. School Superintendent James P. Kennedy said today.

The total includes 208 students who enrolled at Manchester High School but did not pick up their schedules in homeroom Wednesday. Kennedy said. The high school had enrolled 1,841 students prior to Wednesday.

Students in the elementary schools numbered 3,336 and secondary-school students numbered 3,334. At the Regional Occupational Training Center, enrollment was 111. Seven students enrolled at the Bentley Day Care program and 18 at the Adolescent Day Treatment center.

Last year on the opening day of school, there were 7,036 students at all levels.

Although a few classes had more than the desired 25 students Wednesday, Kennedy said he will act today to authorize only one more teacher, for a class of 30 at Martin School. The other larger classes have only 26 or 27 students, he said, and can be handled with an extra teacher's aide.

Zone change lets Purdy Corp. expand

The zone change passed Wednesday on a 4-1 vote, with William Bayer the only dissenting member of the commission. Bayer said it was wrong to allow the expansion of an industrial complex so close to a residential area, especially with little buffering between homes and the plant.

"I don't think it's right to impose an industrial site in these people's backyards," Bayer said.

When Purdy expands, it will be required to install trees to shield the residents' view of the plant and a light roof fence to prevent automobile headlights from causing a nuisance to neighboring families.

The question of further buffering could arise when Purdy applies for a special exception, which the company will need to develop the site because it is more than four acres.

Many neighbors of the plant turned out at a public hearing in July and complained that the industrial use of the site would hurt their views and decrease their property values. Some said they would not have bought their houses in the first place had they known they would be so close to an industrial plant.

PZC puts Spring Street rezoning on hold

Residence AA was the best type of zoning for the Spring Street parcel.

"The proposal seeks to make a logical extension of AA property," he said.

A substantial portion of the land on Spring Street and around Lookout Mountain in southeastern Manchester has been developed by Analdi, Janenda said. The area was called "Analdi country" by Janenda, who argued that the Spring Street parcel flowed right into Residence AA land that already has been developed by Analdi.

Janenda said Andrew Analdi Jr. and Sr. have a reputation for building quality houses and being sensitive to the environment.

"One of the things the commission must consider is who is the applicant," Janenda told the PZC. "Mr. Analdi and his father have spent a lot of time building a reputation for quality. They have a concern for what's going to happen to this area."

But Planning Director Mark Pellegrini opposed the zone change sought by Analdi. He said the area is a "unique scenic area for Manchester" and should stay that way.

Most of the land in the area is zoned Rural Residence. Pellegrini said keeping it that way would minimize development and preserve open space. Janenda said that although a Residence AA zone would give Analdi the right to build more houses per acre, "it doesn't necessarily mean you're going to have more lots."

"This doesn't represent a threat to the environment at all," Janenda said. Real estate appraiser James Flanagan, who appraised both Analdi sites, said Residence AA zoning had brought quality housing and a high demand to live in a prestigious area.

Concerning the other Analdi application, Janenda argued that the 1.2-acre lot at 279 Bidwell St. was perfect for the Planned Residence Development zone requested by the developers. The land is currently zoned a combination of Rural Residence and Residence B.

Natural vegetation that surrounds the area would serve as a buffer between the proposed apartment complex and other residential areas, Janenda said.

The PZC has 65 days to act on both applications.

In other action, the PZC granted a special exception that will allow Bob Riley Oldsmobile to move from its present Center Street location to a larger building at 259 Adams St. Riley needed a special exception because the site was more than four acres and because automobiles will be stored outside. Riley still needs state permits before he can begin his move, he said Tuesday.

The board also approved the rezoning of two lots on Irving Street into three lots.

Jaycees honor Harry Reinhorn

Harry W. Reinhorn has been selected by the Jaycees as the recipient of the 1985 Citizens' Recognition award for his involvement in various community activities, the Jaycees announced Wednesday.

He will be presented the award Oct. 3 at a dinner at Willie's Steak House.

Reinhorn, 63, who is retired and lives on Spring Street, is the founder of the Manchester Neighborhood Crime Watch program. He is also a volunteer chief chef each Friday at the Shepherd's Place, the soup kitchen operated by the Manchester Area Conference of Churches at Center Congregational Church.

Reinhorn serves on the board of directors of MACC and is co-chairman of the MACC committee directing the renovation of the former Nazarene Church at 465 Main St. The building is being converted to a permanent shelter for homeless people and a new site for the soup kitchen. (See story on page 4.)

Reinhorn formerly was a trustee of South United Methodist Church. He served as chairman of the mayor's Water Study Committee, which made a 2½-year study that led to improvements in the town's water distribution and treatment system.

Reinhorn is a member of the Republican Town Committee and is leader of the Fourth Voting District Committee. He is vice chairman of the Zoning Board of Appeals, and a town representative in the Capitol Region Council of Governments. He is also a director of River East Home Care Inc., which provides meals on wheels and other services.

Reinhorn, a lifelong Manchester resident, attended local schools. He attended Hillier College in Hartford and Cambridge College in England. He is a retired regional sales manager for a pharmaceuticals company.

The Oct. 3 dinner at which Reinhorn will be honored by the Jaycees will begin with a cocktail hour at 7 p.m., followed by presentation of the award and dinner.

The public is invited to the presentation and may reserve dinner by calling Robert Faucher at Reale Realtors, 646-4525, by Sept. 19.

The dinner selections are roast prime rib of beef, baked stuffed shrimp and chicken cordon bleu. The price is $12.50 per person.

Fund drive enters a new phase

A drive to raise $300,000 in public contributions for the renovation of Cheney Hall will begin Monday with the distribution of a three-page brochure to residents of Manchester.

The exterior of the historic hall in the midst of the Cheney Historic District has already been renovated and plans are being prepared for work on the interior.

The interior work is expected to cost about $500,000. About $500,000 is expected to come from contributions of more than $5,000 each and the remaining $300,000 from smaller public contributions, organizers said Wednesday.

Mary Blish, chairman of the Cheney Hall Executive Campaign Committee, said that to publicize the drive, a banner will be strung across Main Street and posters will be distributed throughout town. Fliers providing information about the project will be circulated as well.

The brochure, titled, "How you can enjoy a restored Cheney Hall," describes how the hall on Hartford Road, which was completed in 1867, can be used once it is renovated. It provides information on various levels of contributions from $100 for "friends of the hall" to $5,000 and more for "benefactors."

But Blish emphasized that the categories of contributions are suggestions for people who would like their names permanently associated with the restoration project. She said any contribution is important to the drive.

Once renovations are complete, the hall will be used for performances by the Little Theater of Manchester and other performing groups. It also will be available for weddings, dances, fashion shows and community events.

Accompanying each brochure will be a self-addressed, postage-paid return envelope for use by residents who want to send contributions to the restoration committee.

Contribution checks should be made payable to LTM/CHARM and sent to Manchester State Bank, 184 Main St., or to the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce, 20 Hartford Road, Manchester, 06040.

All contributions are tax deductible, Blish said. The names of those who contribute will be listed in the Cheney Hall Book of Records.

Blish encouraged people to apply for matching grants from the companies for which they work. To date, the committee has received matching gifts from Hartford Steam Boiler, Stanley Works, Travelers and United Technologies, she said.

Members of the Cheney Hall Committee of LTM have spent the summer planning for the drive, according to Blish. The committee is headed by Fred T. Blish.

Members are Adrienne and Robert Blechman, Mary Blish, Allan and Joan Coe, Toni Fogarty, Betty Lundberg, David Newirth, Gretchen Wiedie and Cathy Ziska.

The brochure was designed by Charnas Associates, a Manchester advertising agency. On its cover is a pen and ink sketch of the hall by Thomas Coletta, a Hartford artist. Copies of a signed edition of the drawing will be given to all people who contribute $5,000 or more.

Town shelter to open tonight

By Alex Girelli
Herald Reporter

Manchester's permanent shelter for homeless people will open tonight in a former church building at 466 Main St.

Nancy Carr, executive director of the Manchester Area Conference of Churches, which operates the shelter, said Wednesday that temporary rehabilitation of the building has been completed.

The town has not yet bought the building and is awaiting approval from state housing officials for the purchase. But until the sale is closed and the required approvals gained, MACC is leasing the structure from its owner, Wesley Gryk, and has established offices in it.

Under an agreement approved by the Board of Directors this spring, MACC is committed to the town to operate the 46-bed shelter for a period of 10 years and Carr said she hopes tonight's move into the building will be the last move for the shelter. It has been operating in a number of places, mostly church buildings and buildings owned by the town, for the past few years.

Last night the shelter was at Concordia Lutheran Church. It moved there temporarily from St. Mary's Church two weeks ago because the 466 Main St. location was not yet ready for occupancy.

Throughout the summer, between 15 to 19 persons have used the shelter each night, Carr said.

Volunteers were doing last-minute cleanup chores at the new site Wednesday and Ronald Kraatz, the town director of health, inspected the building and approved it for use tonight.

For the time being, the Shepherd's Place soup kitchen operated by MACC will remain at Center Congregational Church. Carr said extensive and expensive changes will have to be made at 466 Main St. before any food handling can be undertaken there.

permitted firefighters to drive apparatus around the building.

Before the reconstruction began, town workers installed catch basins and drain lines. Slotted piping was used to drain off water in the ground. The drain project was designed to minimize flooding of the properties along Lawton Road north of the senior center property.

The work will add about 20 parking stalls to the lot, bringing the total to about 70.

State asks insurer to finish group home

By Kathy Gormus
Assistant City Editor

The state has asked an insurance company that holds a bond for the construction of a group home in Manchester and several others throughout the state to assume responsibility for completing the homes, a state official said today.

Thomas Barnett, director of communications for the state Department of Administrative Services, said the state asked the Firemen's Fund Insurance Co. of New Jersey to take over the project in a letter mailed Thursday.

"We expect an answer from them any time now," he said. Should the company agree to the state's request, it would take the bond put up by the original contractor and hire a new contractor to finish the work, Barnett said.

In the meantime, an architect is compiling a list of what needs to be done to complete the group home on Wetherell Street, two in Danielson and one in Groton, he said.

The state last month canceled a Dayville firm's $1.7 million contract to build the four homes after lengthy delays were encountered. The homes were originally scheduled to be finished in July 1984.

The Wetherell Street home is to be occupied by eight mentally retarded adults who currently live at the Mansfield Training School. The would-be residents are now bused to Manchester every day to work in a sheltered workshop.

State Sen. Carl A. Zinsser, R-Manchester, has strongly criticized the state for the delays in the project and last month urged the state to hire subcontractors to complete the homes. Leslie and Elliott has agreed to work with any subcontractors on the project, he said last week.

Zinsser could not be reached for comment this morning.

At Zinsser's urging, officials from the state Bureau of Public Works, a division of Administrative Services that is overseeing the project, agreed to meet with Leslie and Elliott to discuss the status of the group home.

Barnett said this morning that he did not think any meeting had taken place.

OPINION

Why Falwell talks about South Africa

Among the different kinds of Republicans to be seen waxing fat and assy in Washington is the guy who refers to black people by a word that has a double gee in the middle of it. When questioned about using a word that causes such pain and anger he will explain that everyone knows he is so free of racial prejudice and so purely motivated that people just automatically know when he says the double-gee word it's all in good fun. "With my record on civil rights and racial justice everybody knows where I stand," he may say and then turn around to his black secretary to solicit her agreement.

Nicholas Von Hoffman

After a while, though, you ask yourself what record on civil rights and racial justice? When, if ever, did this little white doughboy get his ticket punched.

The same questions well up when listening to Jerry Falwell explain that he is such an incontestably fine friend of the black man that he is entitled to go to South Africa, insert himself in the grim quarrel there, and call Desmond Tutu names. The reverend is a little white doughboy, a kid who never got his ticket punched. Far from accepting the gentleman's bona fides, we might wonder, does he and the ministers he's in political alliance with even like black people? Has he ever stood up for black people?

Millions of us haven't and that's no shame. Heroes are always few but there are not going thousands of miles to somebody else's country to denounce that local Christian clergy and sprinkle holy water on the jails. We are not heading up a campaign to raise a million dollars to help the South African government push down on the neck of the black people until we can hear the vertebrae

WHY HAS THIS CLERGYMAN put himself at the head of a crusade to veto President Reagan he has enough support to veto the South African sanctions bill when it hits his desk? Mr. Falwell says he's doing it because he cares for the black people of South Africa and doesn't want them injured by an American business pullout. Would that Rev. Falwell had raised a million dollars for an American business pulling for jobs for the black people of his own state of Virginia.

Given his record as a Christian politician there is no reason to believe this truculent evangelist will keep the Kremlin out. By this reckoning every noble and ganglion in the reverend's body is so swollen with anti-Marxist zeal the man's judgment is gone, common sense wasted by what ails him.

It could be but there is another explanation for the timing of this nasty little crusade against the downtrodden. At least there is a coincidence here Mr. Falwell might want to explain, which is: Why now? His friends, the South African blacks, have been there many years needing his help. Desmond Tutu has been plying his trade for many years, too. So why has the pitiless little minister waited until this year to hang out on the television networks praising the South African government? Why now?

BECAUSE IT HAS ONLY BEEN in the last months that American blacks have begun making a serious agitation for their country to do something to help the black people of South Africa. Jerry Falwell had no interest in mounting million-dollar campaigns to aid the South African government until American blacks and, now increasingly American whites, have been getting themselves arrested in protests against apartheid.

Falwell has changed this controversy from one about American foreign policy and the wisdom of sanctions into argument over decency to a large body of our fellow citizens. Many American blacks identify with the black people of Southern Africa as many of Jewish extraction do with Israel. Irish with Ireland, Poles with Poland, and so on.

South Africa, then, for a minister politician of the Falwellian stripe, can be used to play racial politics in America: It's a switch with which to sting our own black fellow citizens. But question not the Dr. Doughboy; his record entitles him to use the double-gee word.

Hutton tries to control the damage

WASHINGTON — E.F. Hutton's long-awaited internal report on the check overdraft scam that led to a $2 million criminal fine is supposed to be released today. Prepared by former Attorney General Griffin Bell, the report is expected to identify just who in the firm was responsible for the elaborate scheme that bilked banks out of several million dollars in interest over a 20-month period.

At a time when interest rates were fluctuating around 20 percent, Hutton branch personnel manipulated deposits through temporary overdrafts, obtaining the use of an estimated $1 billion in interest-free funds. On May 2, the company placed credit to 2,000 counts of fraud.

Though Hutton drew the biggest fine ever handed out in a white-collar crime case, there was widespread criticism that no company executive spent so much as a night in jail.

Since the settlement, Hutton has mounted a sustained damage-control operation in various forms, including testimony before Rep. William Hughes, D-N.J. The congressman went to Attorney General Edwin Meese that "defendant Hutton seems to be presenting a substantially different version of events regarding the settlement discussions and agreement" than the Justice Department's.

Our associate Tony Capaccio has compared statements made by Hutton executives before Rep. Hughes and the Connecticut Banking Commission with statements and actions by the Justice Department. To say that Hutton put the best face possible on its embarrassment would be charitable. Here are some examples:

• Hutton executives told Hughes: "It is our feeling that many banks became aware of what Hutton was doing and agreed to it."

Prosecutors told federal Judge William J. Nealon in a private conference before the settlement: "The banks did not knowingly participate in the (overdraft) activity."

• Hutton has stated: "The Justice Department never charged that there was anything wrong with the company's basic approved cash-concentration system, but only the deviations" that led to the massive overdrafts.

It is true that the department never brought criminal charges against the "concentration" system, but it did obtain an injunction forbidding Hutton from "engaging in two additional practices not charged in the criminal indictment."

• Hutton told Hughes that the abuses were committed by branch-office personnel who deviated from corporate policy. "Some of our (branch) people became aggressive and you are familiar with the results," a Hutton executive told Hughes. Another Hutton executive said he knew of "no reason to believe anybody in senior management devised" the breakdown which led to the illegal conduct.

But the Justice Department concluded that "branch office personnel did not create the scheme and, except for a few instances, did not comprehend its illegality."

A Hutton executive told the Connecticut Banking Commission that the financial incentives which might have encouraged branch personnel to juggle the checking accounts were "a very small part of compensation." He didn't feel "that was the motivation for these (abuses)," he said.

But Justice Department prosecutors told Judge Nealon: "We can state generally that senior management provided an inducement for this activity to occur by granting credit or interest or monies to various branch personnel to induce them to, in fact, overdraft these accounts."

Right at home

When several thousand Ethiopian Jews, known as Falashas, were secretly airlifted out of their famine-plagued Marxist country to Israel several months ago, there was serious concern about whether these primitive rural blacks would be able to adjust to the bustle and bustle of their new homeland. But they're doing quite nicely, thank you. The Falashas are chatting in Hebrew and dressing like Sabras, and many of them were seen at a flag-waving ceremony in Jerusalem, honoring Theodor Herzl, the founder of Zionism.

Confidential file

The CIA apparently is still trying to make amends for its abysmal failure seven years ago to predict the ultimate ouster of its big-spending puppet, the shah of Iran. But what's left of the CIA's Iranian desk may be overpromising now. They've been predicting the imminent death of the shah's successor, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, with a regularity that approaches clockwork. Still the old buzzard hangs on. Since death is a 10-out-of-10 proposition, the CIA can't lose. Sooner or later, its prediction will come true.

Mini-editorial

Mark Aug. 27 on your calendars, fellow wastewatchers. That was the red-letter day when Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger announced the cancellation of a weapons program: the Army's trouble-prone "Sergeant York" anti-aircraft gun. This was the first time in two decades that the Pentagon has killed a major weapon that had reached the production phase. We're particularly gratified at Weinberger's belated acknowledgement of reality; for several years now, we've been trying to tell the brass hats that Sergeant York wasn't worth the money that was being pumped into it. Our only complaint is that the lemon wasn't dumped $1 billion ago.

U.S./World In Brief

Strikes idle 130,000 pupils

Chicago teachers prepared for classes today after state officials helped them work out a contract that ended their third strike in three years, while teacher walkouts in six states kept more than 130,000 students out of school.

Strikes affected 52,000 students in Michigan, 43,500 in Seattle, 13,000 in Pennsylvania, 12,000 in Rhode Island, 10,000 in Illinois, and 1,200 in Ohio. Striking Seattle teachers kept 43,500 students from attending their second day of classes today. The 3,700 Seattle teachers voted to strike Tuesday over the issues of class size, discretionary funds and an extra paid work day.

Explosion rips R.I. home

NORTH PROVIDENCE, R.I. — A powerful explosion leveled a house and injured at least two people this morning at a home near far from where another blast destroyed a grocery store eight days earlier, authorities said.

The explosion and ensuing fire occurred about 7 a.m. at 30 George St., said North Providence police Sgt. Joseph Vitolo. The fire was placed under control by 7:40 a.m.

The cause of the blast was not immediately known, but investigators at the site speculated it might have been caused by a natural gas leak. Investigators from the state Fire Marshal's office and the Providence Gas Co. were sent to the scene.

Kenneth Setzer, 20, was rushed to Rhode Island Hospital suffering from extensive burns. He was listed in critical but stable condition, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Players ready to testify

PITTSBURGH — At least three players are awaiting early calls to testify in the federal trial of a man accused of selling cocaine to some of major league baseball's better known players.

Kansas City's Lonnie Smith, who says his baseball skills were eroded by his cocaine use, Keith Hernandez of the New York Mets and Lee Lacy of the Baltimore Orioles missed games Wednesday night because of protracted jury selection in the trial of Curtis Stengert.

Five women and three men finally were seated at 5:20 p.m. Wednesday to judge the 16 counts of federal drug violations against Curtis Stengert, a Philadelphia caterer who formerly served the Phillies clubhouse.

Suspect spied for 17 years

BONN, West Germany — A secretary in the president's office betrayed top military and diplomatic secrets to East Germany for 17 years before she was discovered, witnesses told a committee of Parliament.

They said the secretary, Margarete Hoek, 50, who was arrested last month, was recruited by East Germany in 1968. But she passed a security test a year ago.

Whites fire at crowd near Cape Town

By Brendon Boyle
United Press International

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Whites opened fire on crowds hurling gasoline bombs today in racial violence that erupted in the white suburbs of Cape Town for the first time and riot squads fatally shot two youths and wounded another, police said.

Whites in Cape Town's suburban Kraaifontein district opened fire with revolvers and shotguns on a group of about 100 youths hurling gasoline bombs and stones at their homes, police said.

The homeowners drove off the mob before police could arrive, one resident said.

Two men of mixed-race, or "coloreds" as they are officially designated in white-ruled South Africa, later told police they had been hit by shotgun pellets but there were no reports of other injuries.

In another incident, two white residences in the town of Amalinda in eastern Cape Province were attacked by black youths hurling gasoline bombs, and the Durban home of anti-apartheid activist Fatima Meer was hit and burned.

In Cape Town's Elsies River suburb, police said they fired pistols to disperse a large mob of mixed-race people throwing rocks, killing two of the rioters and seriously wounding another.

Police said they arrested at least 35 people in scattered overnight violence, most occurring near Cape Town and a man and woman throwing rocks in the port city's segregated Steynville neighborhood were wounded by a resident firing a rifle.

Today's unrest marked the first time violence has erupted in Cape Town's white suburbs during a year-long wave of racial strife over the white-minority government's policy of apartheid, a system of racial discrimination and separation.

Racial unrest erupted in Cape Town last Wednesday after police broke up a protest march on the prison where black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela is serving a life sentence for treason and sabotage.

The death toll is now at least 34, all but a few victims shot by police.

On Wednesday, a group of singing mixed-race children gathered at a shopping center in Cape Town were dispersed by police who attacked them with whips.

Brian Lombard said a dozen policemen began to "lay into" about 20 children as they sang softly outside the luxury Golden Acre center in Cape Town's Adderly Street.

"The kids scattered in all directions and most were severely beaten," said Lombard, who witnessed the incident. "Several of the kids were banded into two police vans and driven away."

A police report confirmed that officers dispersed people "who had gathered illegally" and arrested four children and an adult.

Witnesses said the youngsters were softly singing "We are the World" — a song made by a number of famous artists to raise funds for starving Africans — when police arrived and attacked, apparently without warning.

Lombard said about a dozen policemen drove up and began to "lay into them with whips." He said he did not hear any warning or order to disperse from police.

Another witness said, "Any kid who ran got slammed with a jambok (whip)."

"They obviously just went for young colored schoolchildren, but they couldn't have known who were the ones singing," the witness said.

Independent Capital Radio said 712 people have been killed in racial violence across South Africa since Sept. 3, 1984.

The anti-government Detainees Parents Support Committee, which monitors political imprisonment in the country, put the death toll at 636 and said 3,284 people had been detained without charge.

International condemnation of heavy-handed police efforts to crush the uprising and pressure to reform the South Africa's race laws sent South Africa's currency — the rand — plummeting on the Johannesburg foreign exchange market Wednesday.

The rand fell by 16 percent to 26 U.S. cents as the Reserve Bank limited its spending of dollars to buttress the currency. The rand recovered to 41 cents when export earnings came onto the market late in the day.

Gold stock prices improved as investors welcomed the collapse of a black miners' strike but National Union of Mineworkers leader Cyril Ramaphosa vowed to resume the strike after seeking a court order to prevent mine operators from firing strikers.

Ramaphosa called the strike action a test of black union power, said the battle with the mining giants was "still undecided."

The surplus belongs to the taxpayers

The ball is now in Bill O'Neill's court. Thanks to House Republicans, the majority party hasn't mustered the support to force a special legislative session on the state's $385.5 million budget surplus. It's up to the governor to call the Legislature back to Hartford, and he should do it to complete the unfinished business of 1985 session.

Back in January, Republicans were rushing to get tax-cut legislation into the hopper before there was any clear picture about the revenue side. They beat Gov. O'Neill to the punch and called for a sales tax exemption on clothing under $50. Breaking previous practice, the Republicans decided tax issues first and then set spending within the available revenue.

The call for the clothing exemption was just one of several pleas for relief by legislators. Others included sales tax exemptions on meals, cuts in utility taxes, reduction of the gross revenue tax on natural gas, and simplified tax relief for senior citizens.

We now know what the spending picture is like for the state. Although we should expect no rapid economic growth, neither should we expect a recession in the near future. In addition to the fiscal 1984-85 budget surplus, the state comptroller announced Tuesday there is a surplus of $38 million for the first month of this fiscal year. Why don't House Republicans feel the need for the session now?

The issue needs to be addressed now. With the pinch on federal expenditures, state aid to cities and towns is even more crucial. It's the only way to provide relief from excessive property taxes, especially in the smaller communities that are struggling to meet the demands for public services. The state has the ability to provide assistance. This surplus belongs to the taxpayers.

Renters: Call, write, register

To the Editor:

The recent well-publicized tenant problem on Spruce Street does much more than point out one tenant who was having trouble getting his landlord to properly maintain his building. It shows us the Building Department is not doing its job or has not been directed to enforce the building codes established by our elected government.

This Spruce Street problem should also not be seen as a unique problem and it should bother citizens of Manchester, renters and homeowners alike, that a lifelong town resident had to go through more than two years of problems and runaround from town officials and finally had to go to a public meeting of the town Board of Directors to get his landlord to make the repairs the law requires so that he and his family could live in a safe home.

This local election season, if the Buckland firehouse can be put aside for a second, I would like to see the candidates for the board address the important issues of housing code enforcement, renters' rights and what protection a renter has if he complains. Unfortunately, renters do not make up a large number of voters in Manchester. Perhaps if more of us did bother to vote we might see the proper enforcement of legislation designed to keep our homes safe and secure. I would urge renters to go out and register to vote. I'm sure if enough of us were on the voting rolls it would be very easy to get the candidates to address our rights and our landlords' responsibilities.

I am lucky. I have lived in the same apartment for three years, have caring and understanding landlords and have had any problem rectified by just asking. I truly believe that most landlords are decent people. People who will not take advantage of others or risk their tenants' safety to make a buck. Unfortunately there are those out there that have given the word "landlord" a bad sound. That Manchester's leaders have allowed this to happen should give all of Manchester's people a bad feeling. Our leaders do what they feel the majority of us want. Let's show them we want renters to be treated decently, our homes kept up to at least the standards required by law, and our Building Department to make sure these laws are enforced.

I urge you to call or write the Board of Directors candidates or this newspaper and urge the candidates to speak about renters' issues and rights. Also, if you're not registered to vote, do so.

To the Editor:

As many others have done, I wish to applaud the efforts of the Manchester Herald in airing conditions at the Bennet Apartments.

Basically, the greatest responsibility lies with the majority members of the Board of Directors for their acceptance of the super-complicated financial arrangements and the steamroller tactics employed — regardless of the many questions and doubts raised by concerned townpeople.

It seems incredible after all the sales pitch and assurances by Mr. Cassano and proponents that so much could go wrong.

Where was the supervision of the work by the architect and the job supervisor? Was there a certificate of occupancy issued by the Building Department before the occupants moved in? Who could conceive of a building redesigned for largely elderly and handicapped people with too little heat for their expressed needs and comfort?

One question concerning fire safety is of vital importance and should be addressed if there are any doubts.

Unfortunately, the methods used in pushing this project through by the board is too typical of many instances where they have shown an insensitivity towards the views of townpeople.

One example was the aid and sympathy extended to Multi-Circuits, as opposed to the efforts of the neighborhood to protect their property. Their pleas were to no avail. It did not pay off, as the problems that followed have cost the town in time and money.

Another instance is the effort of the majority members of the board to block any and all ways for the Eighth District to build or buy a firehouse, which shows a meanness of spirit and attitude. It little becomes a governing body of responsible people, and all because they made a mistake initially and refuse to admit it.

The project planned for housing on Love Lane bids fair to be another mistake. It is being proposed against all accepted forms of agreement between owner and contractor and the usual bidding process. It negates good and true value for the buyer.

It could be that the best solution for a new and brighter outlook for Manchester would be a new Board of Directors — and with a Republican majority.

The "No Place Like Home and How to Buy One" seminar.

An informative, free seminar for any would-be buyer of a first, even second home.

What comes first? Looking for a home is one thing. Buying one is another. Both can involve a lot of time, decisions and, eventually, money.

The Savings Bank of Manchester — through this free seminar — may save you much confusion about such matters as questions for a realtor, the newer types of mortgages, closing fees, taxes, buying for investment purposes, and much more. The bank encourages you to, please, bring your questions. The seminar's three speakers will provide you with straight answers.

Who's speaking?
Allan D. Thomas, an attorney in private practice in Manchester.
Carl A. Zinsser, who heads up a Manchester real estate firm.

Harry S. "Chip" Gaucher III, Assistant Vice President, Mortgages, the Savings Bank of Manchester.

Who's invited?
Any and all of you who are thinking of a new home — the first one, a second larger one, a smaller one for your old age, a vacation home, a place to invest in and rent out, etc., etc.

Where and when?
Manchester Community College, the Program Center in the Lowe Building. (Parking available in Lots B & C — excepting areas marked "faculty & staff")
Wednesday, September 11, 7:30 p.m. Reservations encouraged. Please telephone Mrs. Anders at the bank — 646-1700.

Remember, the seminar is free and open to the public, another community service of the Savings Bank of Manchester.

Zitser exits the utility war after 11 years

By Mark A. Dupuis
United Press International
HARTFORD — State Consumer Counsel Barry S. Zitser says he will resign this fall to join a private law firm, calling his eight years of battling utilities enough "to leave you a mark."

DPUC sets profit cap for utility

NEW BRITAIN (UPI) — North-east Utilities will be required to set aside any profits in excess of 15.9 percent in a fund to offset future rate hikes under an order issued by state utility regulators.

State seeks fines against Somers home

HARTFORD (UPI) — The state is seeking fines of $1,000 a day against the operator of a Somers nursing home accused of misusing funds designated to cover patients' personal needs.

mark, and I do have a lot of outside interests," said Zitser, who has represented consumer interests in utility cases since November 1977.

Under the order, beginning with last month Northeast will compute its monthly profits on an annualized basis and set aside any amount over 15.9 percent in a reserve account, Blood said.

The money that accumulates in the reserve account will be used against the company's next general rate increase case, which Blood said is expected to be filed with the DPUC this fall.

North-east is expected to file the rate increase request in anticipation of the May 1986 scheduled start-up of the Millstone 3 nuclear power plant, which is under construction in Waterford.

Officials predict the utility will seek a sizeable increase since it will be allowed to reflect the costs of building Millstone 3 in its rates outside the plant goes into service.

The increase will be spread out over several years, however, under "rate shock" legislation passed this year to prevent the utility from passing on all of the costs of the plant in a single rate increase case.

State Consumer Counsel Barry S. Zitser said he expects Northeast to file notice this month that it will seek a "massive" rate hike and to follow up with a formal application in October.

Nursing home residents who receive Social Security or Supplemental Security Income payments are allowed to keep $1,000 a month for personal needs with the rest of the payments going to the home to pay for their care.

He also predicted that Northeast will eventually acquire United Illuminating Co., which serves the Bridgeport and New Haven areas and owns the second largest share of the controversial Seabrook 1 plant.

Before he leaves office, Zitser is expected to make another pitch this month for the state Department of Public Utility Control to order Northeast and United Illuminating to pull out of the Seabrook project.

Zitser said he hopes to leave office by mid-October to give his successor time to prepare for a "massive" rate increase request expected to be filed this fall by Northeast in connection with the start-up of Millstone 3.

"There's never a good time to leave," he said. "I would like to be around for the Millstone 3 show-down but I believe the consumers will be well represented."

Zitser said he plans to handle a variety of cases in private practice and also may get involved in politics, working for candidates and causes but not planning to seek office himself.

"It would be good to look at something other than rate applications after eight years," he said.

United States goes ahead. In a warning carried on the official news agency, the Soviets said: "If the United States holds tests of anti-satellite weapons against a target in outer space, the Soviet Union will consider itself free of its unilateral commitment not to place anti-satellite weapons in space."

State Department spokesman Pete Martinez said the threat has "little practical meaning since they have had for several years an operational ASAT (anti-satellite) system."

Directors to hear of Bennet

By Alex Grell, Herald Reporter

If the formal agenda for Tuesday night's meeting of the Board of Directors is an accurate indication, the meeting will be relatively free from controversy.

Most items on the agenda are on the consent calendar, which means the directors can approve them in a single motion without discussion.

The directors' meeting will begin at 8 p.m. in the Lincoln Center hearing room with public hearings on 12 appropriations.

The directors will also consider a plan to add parking stalls at Charter Oak Park. The Park and Recreation Advisory Committee has recommended a plan that would add about 20 more stalls.

Some directors want to add 10 more than that by paving an area near the warning hut by the skating pond.

The recreation committee members want to preserve that area as green space, but some of the directors are convinced that since people have been parking there and traffic is heavy, the spot will never survive as a green area anyway.

were afraid like their classmate, but most of them shouted, "No."

She told the children she remembered being afraid on the first day of school because she didn't know where the bathroom was.

She also assured the children that their mothers would be waiting for them when school ended at 2:35 p.m.

Bagley then demonstrated her "birthday spanking" by giving gentle pats to a brave volunteer. In an effort to convince Katie that it wouldn't hurt, the teacher also pulled on Katie's ear as part of the birthday ritual.

Next on the kindergarten agenda were the rules of the classroom. The three rules Bagley explained were simple: Listen to the teacher and each other, don't run, and put things away.

The biggest problem for several was sitting still for long. Some wandered off from the group.

KATIE AND the other children practiced their skills at counting, coloring, cutting, making cat sounds, and reciting nursery.

The children also had an opportunity to speak individually when they were asked to talk about their summer vacations.

When one boy said he went to Maine and caught two baby fish, Katie piped up that her grandma and grandpa also went to Maine.

Children brought an interesting assortment of nutritious foods from home for snack time.

Throughout the afternoon, Bagley's concern for each child was apparent as she alternately gave support and hugs and firm reprimands as needed.

Bagley noticed that several of the children appeared tired and hot by the end of the day.

"You do good work. We're going to be OK. We have a lot of smart kids," she told them.

She asked if they had a good time and were excited about coming back the next day.

Daryl Bagley pulls Katie's ears five times and once more to "grow an inch" as part of a birthday tradition in Bagley's kindergarten classes. Katie is surrounded by her new classmates and, at left, student teacher Chris Doucette.

Katie Breen has 2,340 days of school ahead

By Susan Vaughn, Herald Reporter

On Wednesday, 5-year-old Katie Breen of 3 Academy St. began her first day of kindergarten at Nathan Hale School.

But Katie is likely to have smaller classes if declining enrollment rates continue as they have in the recent past, said School Superintendent James P. Kennedy.

TODAY IT COSTS the town of Manchester about $3,500 to educate each child in the school system for one year.

English, reading, math, science and social studies courses. But the content and method of teaching those courses is likely to change over the course of her school career, based on current trends.

For example, in English courses, Katie will be required to take more writing courses than previous students, said Allan Chesterton, director of curriculum for the Manchester public schools.

The Manchester High School English department recently added a semester-long writing course and a writing clinic.

By the end of this year, Manchester schools will have a completely revised math curriculum.

Manchester is taking the lead in this new approach to math, Chesterton said.

Katie's reading, education will begin in kindergarten with the "Language Experience Approach," using things she says and an adult writes down, said Daryl Bagley, her kindergarten teacher.

The entire kindergarten curriculum was re-written by Bagley and a committee of other kindergarten teachers during the summer.

Some of it will be implemented during the current school year, she said.

IF TRENDS CONTINUE, computers are expected to play an increasing role in education—both for acquiring computer literacy and as aids to learning basic skills.

Chesterton said he didn't expect much more extension of computer education below the current fifth-grade level in Manchester schools.

Katie's future social studies courses will lean more toward contemporary issues, Chesterton said.

State stands by its position on expressway information

By Kevin Flood, Herald Reporter

HARTFORD — A member of the state Freedom of Information Commission said Wednesday he plans to issue a recommendation in the next two weeks on a citizens' group's request to see environmental documents on the proposed expressway between Bolton Notch and Windham.

Deane C. Avery, the commissioner who held a hearing Wednesday on the request by the Eastern Connecticut Citizen Action Group, said after the hearing that he expects lawyers for both sides in the case to submit briefs to him by Sept. 12.

After Avery issues his recommendation, the full FOI commission will vote on the matter.

The state Department of Transportation opposes the ECGAG request, arguing mainly that it cannot release the documents the group wants because they belong to the federal government.

The DOT also has argued that the documents should not be released because they are still in "rough draft" form and subject to change. The documents in question deal with revisions to an assessment of the environmental impact of the planned 11-mile expressway that was released in May 1984.

James Sullivan, director of environmental planning for the DOT, testified Wednesday that the DOT has suggested revisions of that assessment based on public comments about it.

ECCAG members say they want access to the revised assessment so they can make a better case against the highway before federal officials.

Elizabeth Dole, who is expected to soon decide the fate of the highway. The state has been seeking the release of $145 million in federal funds for the project, known as the Relocation of Route 6 or the Eastern Connecticut Expressway.

Wednesday's hearing was the second on the ECGAG request. Lawyers for the DOT and the ECGAG agreed to rehear the matter last week, after the DOT's lawyer asked to submit new evidence in the case.

Hollywood takes summer beating

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The summer of Hollywood's discontent officially ended this weekend, with ticket sales 17 percent lower than last summer's and with only three movies keeping their momentum month after month. Tri-Star's "Rambo," with $146 million in ticket sales, and Universal's "A View to a Kill," with $120 million, are the summer's only big hits, the New York Times reported Tuesday.

Filling out the top five were 20th Century-Fox's "Cocoon" with $69 million, Warner Bros. "Goones" with $61 million, and MGM-UA's "A View to a Kill" with $50 million. A lot of movies flopped this summer. Disney's "Return to Oz" cost $28 million and sold $11 million in tickets. Disney had to spend a reported $6 million on prints and advertising for the film and with the movie's distributor getting less than 30 percent of the box-office revenues, "Return to Oz" may be $29 million in the hole. Columbia's $20 million "Perfect Frenzy" flopped at the box office. Paramount's $25 million space teenagers "Explorers," and Cannon's $25 million space vampires film, "Lifeforce," also were disappointments. Other poor showings were made by Disney's "My Science Project," Columbia's "The Bride," Orion's "Secret Admirer" and "Heavenly Kid," MGM-UA's "Red Sonja" and 20th Century-Fox's "Man With One Red Shoe." In the pay-cable and independent television station market, John Huston's adult comedy "Prizzi's Honor" collected a respectable $24 million for producer, ABC Motion Pictures and distributor 20th-Century Fox. The big losers were Disney's $25 million animated film "The Black Cauldron" and Columbia's $33 million "St. Elmo's Fire." Distributor Tri-Star's profitable "Rambo" should help make up for its flops. "The Legend of Billie Jean," "Real Genius" and "Life Force," which it distributed for Cannon.

Pre-School Classes

These classes are designed to establish in the three and four year old a sense of rhythm, build better coordination, establish right and left directionality and improve gross motor skills. Through ages four and five, a youngster's play is still a major channel for exploring, practicing and consolidating new knowledge. Dance class can provide part of the variety of stimuli necessarily needed, at this stage of development.

Science Museum sells the moon

BOSTON (UPI) — The Boston Museum of Science is in the real estate business. And they're dealing the moon. The commute is tough — 238,856 miles each way and the temperature's not much better — a sizzling 243 degrees in the sun — but for $25, Barry Burlingham will sell you a piece of the moon. Burlingham, the museum's director of development, kicked off moon real estate sales Wednesday, offering property ranging in price from a small crater at $25 to $1,000 for a piece of the Sea of Tranquility. Side-by-side his and hers craters go for $150, and $500 buys a small sea or ocean. "It's beautiful real estate," boasts Burlingham. "All our lots are on the sunny side of the moon, with a good view of earth." Burlingham is not new to extraterrestrial real estate sales. He sold stars a few years back, and once unloaded the Sun for $10,000. "Over the years we've raised about $175,000 selling celestial real estate," he said. "The money goes to pay for exhibits and educational programs for about 200,000 kids a year. It's expensive to run a museum this size."

Investors receive a lunar map to help plot their exact location on the moon. The property comes complete with "moonwalking, flag-planting, earth-watching, settlement and hitchhiking" rights. But there is a hitch. Settlers must agree to respect habitat rights of "little green men and moon maidens."

Chirico teaches communications at MCC. The winning slide is from his 20-minute multi-media show, "A Year in the Fields," which has been shown on Connecticut Public Television.

He will teach "Create Color Slide and Sound Shows for Business and Pleasure," a new five-session course at MCC, starting Sept. 21 from 10 a.m. to noon. A freelance writer and photographer, Chirico has produced multimedia shows, staged with two slide projectors and sound, for educational purposes.

His production, "MCC: Coming of Age," was used at the dedication ceremonies of the college's Lowe Building last fall. His latest, "The Edge," is about the MCC Humanities Division and is used for student orientation. A former newspaper and magazine writer and photographer, Chirico has been a member of the MCC faculty since 1967. He is a South Windsor resident.

Advisory panel hits 'exit tests'

By Mark A. Dupuis
United Press International

HARTFORD — The state should spell out what high school students are expected to learn before they graduate but should not require students to pass an "exit test" in order to get a diploma, an advisory committee says. The Advisory Panel on Graduation and Course Requirements recommended in a report to the State Board of Education the adoption of a "common core of learnings" spelling out what students should know by graduation time. However, the committee chaired by Clinton School Superintendent Joseph J. Cirasulo said in the report that it was overwhelmingly opposed to requiring students to show what they know on an "exit test" before graduation. The State Board of Education discussed the report at a meeting Wednesday and will likely have further discussions before acting on the recommendations at a future meeting. Chairman Abraham Glassman said, "I think it's food for thought. I think we're going to be discussing it," said Glassman, who said board members seemed to favor a recommendation for creating another committee to develop the "common core of learnings." The advisory panel's report said support for exit testing stems from a perception that many students who graduate from high school cannot read or write, which the panel said is not so. The committee said its research found that at least 98 percent of 12th grade students in Connecticut cut's 12 urban school districts pass the state's minimum competency tests. The panel also said exit tests would not motivate students and teachers and that teachers would spend an inordinate amount of time teaching students the skills covered on the test rather than offering a comprehensive education. "We have decided to call for the development of a common core of learnings, which would define what all students should possess before they graduate," the advisory committee report said. "The panel has taken the further position that this core should be a comprehensive reflection of everything high school graduates should know. No one test could measure the extent to which students possess such a core."

Ear infections have many causes

QUESTION: Our dog has had an ear infection on and off for more than three years. We have her treated by our veterinarian and always use the medicine as he says. Usually the infection clears up but then it comes back in a month or two.

Now, the doctor says that the best thing to do is operate on the ear. Do you honestly think an operation could do any good, or is our vet just trying something new?

ANSWER: A veterinarian cannot properly evaluate the reason for your pet's recurrent ear infection (otitis) without an examination, so from that standpoint I would have to have more information. However, your question is the starting point for a general discussion of otitis and what may be the cause and the possible treatments.

Many dogs and cats are afflicted with an infected ear or ears. Treated with medicines, these infections respond rapidly and never recur. The infection can be caused by any of a number of factors including ear mites (a mite-type of mite) which invade the ear, bacteria, fungi, foreign bodies such as grass material in the ear or injuries to the sensitive tissues in the ear. We also observe cases of ear infections for which we cannot establish a definite single cause.

Some of these infections appear to clear up only to return in a short period of time. Each recurrence causes some scar tissue to form in the ear and this usually makes the ear more susceptible to another infection. One of the results of scar

Pet Forum

issue is to narrow the ear canal so that it is not as exposed to the air and further hampers nature in ridding the ear of the natural ear wax (cerumen) that normally accumulates.

Repeated infections or recurrences result in an ear canal that contains so much scar tissue that it is virtually impossible to treat the condition with medicines and get a satisfactory response. My guess is that the problem you have asked about falls into this category. That is the bad news.

The good news is that there are several accepted and time-tested surgical techniques which not only provide relief from the present infection but in the great majority of cases result in an ear canal that never again becomes infected.

The surgical procedures are varied and most veterinarians obviously use the one with which they have had the best success. Essentially, all the surgical procedures accomplish the same thing: They open the ear canal and establish permanent exposure to the air and at the same time allow the normal ear wax to be eliminated to the outside. The surgery itself, regardless of which technique is used, is not a simple matter. For that reason, a veterinarian is reluctant to recommend it unless he or she has first used the medical approach and the condition is a recurrent one.

Based on the information in your question, it is my opinion that an operation is indicated and could solve your pet's problem. You may be pleasantly surprised by the results. It sounds to me as though your veterinarian has followed a prudent course of treatment so far, and he or she is certainly not just trying some new fad.

Based upon the results from our clinic as well as those of our colleagues, it is my opinion that the surgical approach should be considered more often and earlier in the case of recurrent ear infections.

Scientist says Titanic in pieces

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland (UPI) — A scientist exploring the wreckage of the Titanic with a robot submarine said today the vessel appears to be broken into pieces and should be left as "a gravestone and memorial for 1,500 souls."

Dr. Robert Ballard, senior marine scientist with the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute in Massachusetts, told ABC's "Good Morning, America" today that his team would be leaving the site soon.

"We're wrapping it up now," he said. "We're retrieving our camera that's been down all night. We took approximately 12,000 color pictures last night and we'll be processing those pictures in our lab and recovering our acoustic transponders and heading home."

A joint U.S.-French expedition found the Titanic Sunday about 370 miles southeast of Newfoundland in North Atlantic waters 2 1/2 miles deep. It was located with a robot submarine with special sonar and underwater camera equipment and scientists spotted luggage and dishes amid the debris Wednesday.

The Titanic was on its maiden voyage from Southampton, England, to New York in 1912 when it struck an iceberg and sank.

sending 1,503 of the estimated 2,200 passengers and crew to their deaths. Valuables in the ship's strongroom are said to include diamonds that were worth some $7 million in 1912, although the Titanic Historical Society, based in Springfield, Mass., maintains there is no evidence of any fortune aboard.

Dr. Robert Ballard, senior marine scientist with the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute in Massachusetts, told ABC television today that salvaging the wreckage for any treasures would be a mistake.

"They'd have to salvage it in several pieces. It's not intact. I don't see the point of it (salvaging). I can't believe it has any commercial value and it seems to be such a bad thing to do. It's a gravestone and memorial for 1,500 souls."

Ballard had earlier said he thought the vessel was intact, but told Canadian television late Wednesday. "We are still searching for the stern. We can't find it. It does appear to be disconnected."

Ballard, who heads the 47-man expedition on board the U.S. Navy-owned Knorr, said exploring the Titanic is "like going back in time. The fact the ship is in total darkness adds to that feeling of eeriness." "It's like an old friend," Ballard said. "It's so nice to see it, to know exactly where we are as we move across the ship."

Ballard said scientists have concentrated on photographing the bow and bridge area of the Titanic and its first deck.

"The debris area, where the boilers came out, took a lot of material with them — china, dishes, porcelain and baggage. (The Titanic) is in a remarkably good state of preservation," he said.

Ballard was uncertain whether anyone could legally attempt to recover the Titanic, but he expressed hope the U.S. and French governments will declare it an underwater memorial. He has asked the U.S. Navy officials to check the legal implications of declaring the ship off-limits to fortune hunters.

Texas oilman Jack Grimm, who has financed two expeditions to look for the Titanic, has said he would make an attempt to salvage it. In London, the Commercial Union insurance company said Tuesday it would be willing to listen to proposals for salvaging the 45,000-ton vessel.

The crew exploring the wreckage of the Titanic with a robot submarine said they spotted luggage and dishes amid the debris. Photo shows bow area and cracks in the hull (lower left).
