Miss Ohio savors victory

Finalist doesn't lay claim to the crown — yet

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — Miss Ohio today savored her double victory in the preliminary talent and swimsuit competitions, but refused to lay claim to the Miss America crown — yet.

"I don't believe in show-ups at all," Suellen Cochran, 21, said Thursday after picking up her second win in as many nights, clinching a place among the 10 finalists.

The blue-eyed blonde, a senior at Miami University in Ohio, wore a white suit with a dramatic scooped back to win round two in the swimsuit competition.

Miss Indiana, Laurie Broderick, failed to victory in the talent category Thursday with a dazzling display of baton acrobatics.

The final round of preliminaries was to be held tonight at Convention Hall on the boardwalk. The finals will be televised nationally Saturday night on NBC.

Cochran racked up her first victory in the talent category with a rousing piano recital.

"I came here with the goal of making friends and having a good time," Cochran said. "I don't believe I'm stronger in one area over another. I really feel well-rounded."

Although she declined to lay claim to the crown as yet, Cochran's mother, Dixie Lee Landis, said she's a very determined young lady. She's going to be Miss America.

The favorite in the talent category among the 7,200 spectators was the 21-year-old Broderick, who said she used to practice her baton as much as hours a day. Her leaps and baton tricks drew bursts of applause, but she said "my aerial walkover was a little off."

Broderick, wearing a sparkling blue leotard with shimmering silver "V's" in the back and chest, said the applause "really helps me."

Despite pain from a bruised knee suffered onstage the previous night, Miss New Jersey, Toni Georgiana, appeared in Thursday's swimsuit competition without crutches.

EPCOT POLL

Friday Poll: 1985. Let's get it over with. Do you think you'll be back to Epcot Center on Friday the 13th?

What percent of the following comes closest to what you usually do on Friday the 13th?

	Total	Men	Women
I worry about it	3	1	4
I change my plans	1	1	2
I think about it but act the same	31	23	39
I ignore it	48	55	41
I look forward to it	13	16	11
Not stated	4	4	3

The Epcot Poll is a daily survey of Epcot Center's television forum. Conducted in accordance with the Harris Research Group's methodology. Sample size was 2,576 U.S. adults. The survey was conducted in August.

Triskalkedaphobia, anyone?

Most Americans ignore Friday the 13th, or don't change their plans for the date if they think about it, according to an August Epcot Poll.

The poll asked 2,576 U.S. adult visitors to Walt Disney World's Epcot Center in Lake Buena Vista, Fla., what they usually do on Friday the 13th, accounted an unlucky day by the superstitious.

Forty-eight percent of respondents said they ignore the date, while thirty-one percent think about it, but act the same as on any other day.

Only 3 percent of those surveyed worry about Friday the 13th, and only 1 percent change their plans for it. An eerie 13 percent look forward to the date. Four percent of those surveyed chose not to answer.

Proportionally more men ignore the day outright than women — 55 percent compared to 41 percent respectively. But 16 percent of males look forward to it, as opposed to the 11 percent of females who do.

Newhart's nose woes

Doctors are trying to figure out how to stop Bob Newhart's nosebleeds. Shooting of his "Newhart" series is being held up because of the problem and Newhart had to spend much of last week in St. John's Hospital in Santa Monica, Calif., after a blood vessel ruptured behind his nose.

Newhart's wife, Glady, says doctors will try to cauterize the rupture, but if that does not work he will have to undergo surgery.

Newhart stars as Dick Loudon, the proprietor of a historic New England inn.

Pleasant Valley Road at the entrance to the J.C. Penney Distribution Center in northern Manchester will be closed for two hours Sunday morning so Eighth Utilities District volunteer firefighters can test water pressure in the area.

Fire department spokesman Thomas O'Marra said this morning that the street must be closed beginning at 9:30 a.m. because firefighters plan to lay fire hoses across the road.

O'Marra stressed that there are no problems with water pressure in the area. "We just want to make sure everything's all right in case we have to use a lot of water there," he said.

Those who would normally travel between Pleasant Valley Road and Buckland Street Sunday morning should instead use Smith Street and Wheeler Road in South Windsor. O'Marra said.

Pediatrician to field queries

Parents will get the chance to ask a pediatrician questions about the health and care of their children at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday in Manchester Memorial Hospital's H. Louise Ruddell Auditorium.

Dr. Robert D. Bree will answer questions about the health and care of children during the program, scheduled to last an hour.

"This is a chance for parents to ask all the questions they forget to ask while in the pediatrician's office," Bree said in a news release from MMH.

The program is part of the hospital's new Community Education Series. Each Thursday through Dec. 5, except for Thanksgiving, medical staff members will address a health-related topic. Next week's session is the third in the series.

Satellite view

Commerce Department satellite photo taken at 4 a.m. EDT shows showers and thunderstorms over the central U.S. from Texas northward to the eastern Dakotas. Large clear areas extend from New England to the Great Lakes and from the central Rockies to the Southwest.

Town officials standing in front of the town's Olcott Street sewage disposal plant Thursday discuss plans for open houses at the plant Oct. 5 and Oct. 22. The open houses will be held to show Manchester voters what the plant is like and what improvements are proposed. In the Nov. 5 election, voters will be asked to approve a bond issue for improvements that would satisfy a federal order to treat sewage to a degree that would permit the Hockanum River to become a fishable and swimmable stream. The officials, from left, are town General Manager Robert Weiss, Public Works Director George Kandra, and Mayor Barbara Weinberg.

Penny certain UAW will seek his ouster

By Kathy Garmus Assistant City Editor

Penny said the UAW's anti-Penny campaign played a "very important role" in the 1983 election, in which he finished second to then-Deputy Mayor Barbara B. Weinberg by 95 votes, losing the mayor's seat that he had held since 1977. Traditionally the title of mayor goes to the highest voter-getter on the majority party.

But Penny, a Democrat who is also the board's majority leader, said he is not worried about the possibility, despite his contention that such a campaign cost him the majority in 1983.

"I don't think there's any question," Penny said when asked if he thought the UAW would work to defeat him in the Nov. 5 election. "Why else would they be insisting on contacting these unions?" he asked, referring to a UAW official's announcement this week that he planned to ask unions that represent town employees to delay making endorsements until the UAW met with them.

Philip A. Wheeler, president of UAW Local 378, said at the time that union members agreed at a meeting last week they had "an ongoing problem" with Penny because of his activities as a lawyer in contract disputes.

Penny said he is not worried about UAW involvement in this year's election because he does not make a living by serving on the Board of Directors.

"I serve at their (the people's) will," he said.

The UAW targeted then-Mayor Penny for defeat in 1983 because it said he was a "union-buster."

Penny, a lawyer with an office in Manchester, has often represented management in labor disputes.

Committee works out CPR training details

A plan to provide training in cardiopulmonary resuscitation for about 3,000 Manchester residents during the next three years was outlined to the Emergency Medical Services Council Thursday night.

A council subcommittee proposed to test one course for about 20 students each week in that time. Doing so would get 1,000 people a year trained in the resuscitation techniques considered vital in the first few minutes after a heart attack.

Council member Gloria Langer, who worked out the proposal along with Frederick Dowling, reported at a meeting in Lincoln Center that about 20 instructors would be needed to get started on the courses and 50 would be needed to instruct. She said she felt it would be possible to get the 20 instructors needed in order to begin the courses by early October.

The council Thursday reaffirmed its earlier decision to charge students $7 each for the course.

The report by Langer and Dowling calls for having a paid course coordinator who would work about 10 hours a week. The coordinator would schedule classes and instructors, reserve facilities, develop a program for training of instructors, maintain records and do other administrative work.

The report suggests setting up two different kinds of courses. One would involve three or four hours of instruction on one night. The other would involve two nights of instruction. She said she felt it would be possible to get the 20

Democrats defend Love Lane project

By Alex Girelli Herald Reporter

Democratic members of the Manchester Board of Directors today defended their effort to have starter houses built on town-owned land along Love Lane in the wake of Republican criticism of the project.

Democratic Mayor Barbara Weinberg said the idea of building starter houses on the land "is still solid."

"It will be done," she said.

Republican Directors Donna Mercer and Thomas J. Ferguson charged Wednesday that a snag in negotiations with J&G Builders of Windsor over a contract for construction of the 14 starter houses on 7.5 acres of land showed that the town should not get itself in such housing projects.

J&G had proposed to build the houses to sell at $55,000 each. But in the course of negotiations with the town, the contractor said the sale price would have to be $60,000.

Town officials are now negotiating with Visions Unlimited of Tolland, whose proposal, along with that of J&G, was recommended by a screening committee of the Board of Directors.

Under the plan, the town is to hold a "sleeping" second mortgage for about $10,000 on the land, reducing the initial cost to first-time house buyers who have lived in Manchester since at least Jan. 1, 1983. The board's six Democrats passed the plan this spring over opposition from the three Republican directors.

Dirney Kenneth N. Tedford, the project's chief proponent, and Democratic Majority Leader Stephen T. Penny have both said it would be unfair to award the contract to J&G at a sale price higher than in offered in its proposal.

Responding to the Republican criticism, Tedford said today: "When you take no action on something, it is easy to criticize."

Tedford said he regrets that the sale price of the houses will have to increase, but insisted the project is still workable.

Tedford said that when a citizen's committee recommended the construction of starter houses on Love Lane, which runs north-south between Olcott and Center streets, it assumed a sale price of $69,000.

The Visions Unlimited proposal calls for three types of houses ranging in price from $61,900 to $67,000.

Tedford said that not one member of the study committee recommended the outright sale of the Love Lane property to a private developer, as proposed by the Republicans.

On Thursday, Penny responded to a Republican claim that the town is "out of its element" in housing construction plans.

He said there will never be a project as complicated as the conversion of the former Bennet school building on Main Street to apartments for senior citizens and handicapped people.

He said that project involved layer on layer of negotiations. As a result, he said, "We have a highly successful complex of 45 apartments provided for the elderly at no cost to the town."

The Bennet project has been the center of a controversy over the past three weeks, following newspaper reports of complaints by tenants over problems at the complex. Those tenants said there had been a lack of responsiveness on the part of the apartment management toward solving them.

Penny said the goal of the Love Lane project is provide starter houses for Manchester residents, also at no cost to the town.

He said the task of doing the job at no cost to taxpayers is, in part, one of the reasons for the difficult negotiations with J&G.

East German may be the top spy in the world

WASHINGTON — To the general public, he isn't as well known as James Bond or John Le Carre's mythical "Karl," who many think was modeled after him. But those in intelligence circles regard Gen. Markus Wolf with the greatest respect, and most consider him to be the world's top spy master.

Robert Wagman

Wolf, 62, has been East Germany's chief of foreign intelligence for 30 years. He was born near Stuttgart to Jewish intellectual parents who were dedicated communists. With Hitler's rise and the start of the Jewish persecution, the family fled first to Switzerland and then to the Soviet Union before the outbreak of World War II.

Security in East Germany, Wolf was made director of its Institute of Economic Research. That institute became the Hauptverwaltung Aufklärung (HVA), the East German Intelligence Agency — and at 33, Wolf was placed in charge of foreign intelligence operations.

A curfew for officials

The town of Hebron, in an attempt to make its government more efficient, might impose a curfew for public officials and townspople.

In November, Hebron residents will vote on a town charter that would require all public agencies to complete meeting business by 11 p.m. or recess to a later date. Leave it to a small town to come up with a simple answer to a frequently overlooked problem of government.

The move makes sense. Most organizations operate under time constraints. The curfew would demand brevity and organization from public officials, and would make them mindful of discussions that stray from the business at hand.

Officials usually have their minds made up by the time they vote on any matter, including controversial, complex topics. A meeting curfew would not create any unrealistic burden. If business isn't completed because of a legitimate attempt to settle the issue, the meeting could be recessed to another date.

People are often impatient with legislative bodies and their mandatory 11 p.m. adjournment will help the cause. Perhaps Manchester officials might want to consider such a curfew.

Toby Moffett ignored the advice of political insiders in 1982 and ran against Lowell Weicker in a U.S. Senate race. Moffett lost badly, and Weicker came away from the fracas with enhanced political standing.

Now Moffett is bucking the wishes of the party in an expected challenge of Gov. William O'Neill. The governor may not be as charismatic as Weicker, and the problems at the Department of Transportation mount up, but he is still a formidable foe.

The Democrats' left-leaning faction may support Moffett, but that still leaves him outside the mainstream. For the good of his party and his own political future, he should abandon any idea of a primary fight. The perception of Bill O'Neill as an easy-going uncle belies his shrewd political experience.

As for the Republicans who want to steer Weicker towards a gubernatorial bid, the state would lose from this play. Weicker has achieved some influence, if not real power, in the Senate, and there's little reason to believe he won't do as well next year as he did in 1982.

WHEN MOSCOW SET UP the Ministry for State

Wolf's first major coup, which quickly established his reputation, was the 1954 defection of Otto John, the first head of West German counter-intelligence. John remained in East Germany for two years and returned to West Germany in 1956, claiming that he had been kidnapped. The West German government didn't believe him and tried him and sentenced him to prison.

Wolf's next major coup was the recruitment of Heinz Felle, who, in the late 1950s headed West Germany's anti-Soviet counter-intelligence arm. Felle defected in 1961.

UNTIL THE LATEST SCANDAL, Wolf's greatest achievement involved Guenter Guillaume, who left East Germany in 1956. After settling in the West, Guillaume became active in the Social Democratic politics and gradually worked his way up the political ladder.

One sign of Moscow's high regard for Wolf is the fact that he survived a setback that would have torpedoed a lesser man. In 1979, Werner Stilller, one of Wolf's most trusted proteges, defected to the West. Stilller, then 31, headed a network of agents who had infiltrated Western nuclear centers. Gen. Markus Wolf, East Germany's intelligence chief, has had a remarkable career spying on West Germany and gathering the West's high-tech secrets.

German agents and caused 15 others to flee. In recent years, on orders from Moscow, Wolf has focused on gathering secrets involving Western high technology — and he has apparently enjoyed his customary success.

Last year, the U.S. Customs Service was only narrowly able to avert a major disaster by seizing several of the latest U.S.-made computers in a Swedish warehouse before they could be shipped to East Germany. They had been purchased in the United States by agents working for East Germany.

A report by Bonn's Interior Ministry says that East Germany spends about $3 million annually on economic espionage, but reaps $170 million in research and development savings.

Wolf, whose fondness for hunting and beautiful women is well known, is soon expected to become head of the entire East German Ministry for State Security, replacing the ailing 78-year-old Erich Mielke.

Inventor says DOE has done him wrong

WASHINGTON — Larry Penberthy says he can sue the taxpayers $1 billion a year in disposal of nuclear waste. He says, the Energy Department won't listen to him.

The 60-year-old Penberthy is a Seattle physicist, as well as a chemist and an electrical and mechanical engineer. There was a time when the Energy Department thought highly of him, but those days are apparently gone.

The bone of contention is the glass-furnace Penberthy built for the department to demonstrate his proposed method of disposing of radioactive wastes — "vitrification," the sealing of the deadly stuff in glass rods, which would then be wrapped in lead and stored underground.

Under a $90,421 DOE contract, Penberthy built the furnace on the grounds of his Seattle company, Penberthy Electromet International, in 1980-81. The 25-ton furnace could process 6 tons of glass and waste a day.

For five weeks, Penberthy demonstrated his furnace, melting 200 tons of glass and using simulated waste from the Energy Department's disposal site at West Valley, N.Y.

Despite the department's earlier enthusiasm, Penberthy said, officials ignored his repeated invitations to come and watch the operation. Instead, they ordered work halted, and in January 1982, personnel hired by the department showed up to dismantle Penberthy's furnace and take it away.

PENBERTHY BLOCKED this move temporarily because the wrecking crew had nothing in writing. But after extended negotiations with the Justice Department, Penberthy was presented with the proper document and the wreckers returned in May 1983.

According to Penberthy, they used sledgehammers and cutting torches, removed transformers and electrodes, and dropped most of the stuff at a local junkyard.

The problem appears to be a difference of opinion over exactly what Penberthy's role in the project was to have been. He thought he would be wrapping the hot wastes in glass and another firm would handle the lead encasement and technical details of disposal. But Energy Department documents indicate that the DOE expected him to do more.

American diplomats can now breathe easier. The foggy bottom taken firm and forthright action to protect Foreign Service personnel from terrorist attacks. They have created a new bureaucratic entity, the Bureau for Diplomatic Security. It's headed by an assistant secretary of state, and its sole responsibility will be to build, repair and strengthen embassy buildings around the world. This should show those dastardly terrorists we mean business.

Betty L. Tianti confers with outgoing state AFL-CIO President John J. Driscoll in New Haven Thursday during the organization's 29th annual convention. Tianti is the labor group's first woman president.

First woman picked as AFL-CIO leader

NEW HAVEN (UPI) — Betty L. Tianti recalls that she won her first union election by only nine votes after a campaign where her opponent made her sex the only issue.

The veteran labor leader had no opposition, however, and the cheers of all of the delegates Thursday as she was elected by union members. She won re-election over the same man by a 3-1 margin.

For the past six years Tianti has been secretary-treasurer and chief lobbyist for the state AFL-CIO. She was director of the federation's Committee on Political Education for five years before that.

Tianti said she may bring some changes in style to the presidency, but will hold to the same policies and goals pursued during the 11 years she has worked with Driscoll's administration.

Tianti said the greatest challenge facing the AFL-CIO in Connecticut is to organize workers in service and clerical jobs, which are accounting for a greater percentage of the state's workforce.

When she first became active in the labor movement in the mid-1950s, Tianti said about 50 percent of the jobs in Connecticut were in manufacturing compared to about 30 percent now.

"We need to reach out to the white-collar and service sector," she said, citing women working in the insurance, banking, health care and fast food industries as targets for union organizing drives.

Tianti said she will continue to do some lobbying at the Capitol but most of the lobbying will be done by Barry Williams, another officer elected Thursday.

Last spring, the Board of Finance slashed $75,000 from the school budget and voters later backed that cut in a town referendum.

In suggesting the hearing, Stearns said that unless the board committee, asked the board at a meeting Thursday to allow the committee to research the question, although similar requests have been denied in the past.

BOLTON — After some debate, the Board of Education Thursday voted to deny a request by a parent to allow his son, a student at East Catholic High School in Manchester, to ride a bus from Bolton to ride to his school.

Most members of the board did not want to consider the request because of the potential for similar requests concerning other students who attend private schools outside the town.

Board member Pamela Sawyer said that a similar request was considered in 1981 and became an emotional topic in a meeting attended by about 50 parents. She said she did not favor bringing the subject up again because there has been no change in a state law that does not require a town school board to transport students to non-profit private schools outside the district.

Sawyer's other reason for opposing the request was that she felt busing students outside Bolton would encourage attendance of schools outside town.

"We don't want our kids to leave Bolton. We should promote local schools," she said.

Board member T. Dye Hooper was the only other member besides Cloutier who wanted to research the question. He said that it would not hurt to review the matter and give parents a more complete answer.

Cloutier conceded that there was a potential overload of students on the Cheney Tech bus if all 33 East Catholic students in Bolton asked to ride that bus.

School Superintendent Richard E. Packman said during the meeting Thursday at Bolton Central School he had received an inquiry from one other parent about similar busing arrangements.

BOLTON — The Board of Education Thursday night approved a plan to correct numerous violations of the state building code at Bolton High School.

Board members also agreed to send a letter to the town Board of Selectmen, warning the selection of future action that may be required of the Public Building Commission to fund the corrective work.

Among the more serious violations found in an inspection of the high school in March were a lack of fire-rated doors, inadequate ventilation in some rooms, improper storage of chemicals and the lack of a fire alarm system in a shop area.

Money for the code repairs will be included in the 1985-87 school budget and the town will apply for state assistance, according to a report by Packman. He said most of the work would qualify for about 58 percent state reimbursement.

Packman stressed that the code work has to be done or it might prevent state approval of a library-media center planned for the high school. The code violations were found during an inspection performed in connection with the plans for a library-media center which would feature computers and other electronic equipment.

In another matter related to physical improvements at the Bolton schools, Stearns announced that the Board of Selectmen has asked the PBC to prepare a report on the removal of asbestos from Bolton Central School and Bolton High School.

The PBC must report back to the selectmen by Dec. 3. The target for the completion of asbestos removal from the schools' boiler rooms and other areas is next summer. The project has been on the drawing board for about two years and has been delayed for various reasons.

Packman also reported that the cost had turned out to be too high for the improper storage of chemicals — have been corrected or are currently being addressed, Stearns said.

Proposal would help MCC

The $378.8 million budget approved Wednesday by the state Board of Governors for Higher Education would allow Manchester Community College to hire seven new faculty members and five other staff members for the 1986-87 school year, MCC officials said today. The budget, which is not final, calls for a 5.7 percent increase in tuition and fees at all community colleges, which would amount to a $14 per semester increase for a full-time MCC student, said Harry Meisel, dean of student affairs.

Few problems at fest

The smells of various foods filled the air at Main and Forest streets this morning as people starting to filter in during the first hour of the Manchester Feast Fest.

Most of the 13 restaurants and food distributors were set up and ready for business shortly after 11 a.m. One restaurant, the Hungry Tiger, had a slight delay when its owners were ordered by a town inspector to cover an electrical outlet before being allowed to turn on grills and ovens, said Millie Denley, a co-owner.

For the Record

Deputy Mayor Stephen T. Penny says he does not oppose the idea of allowing the volunteer fire department of the Eighth Utilities District to share the town's fire station on Tolland Turnpike. A story in Tuesday's Herald incorrectly reported Penny's position.

ENFIELD — If the first game is an indication of things to come, then forward Nick Cacace is in for one heckuva senior campaign. And that means good news for the Manchester High soccer team.

NICK CACACE

Cacace weaved his magic twice in the second half to help Manchester out of a 2-2 halftime deadlock. His tie-breaking goal came just 2:53 after the halftime break. He stole a clearing pass, walked through a couple of Raider defenders and deposited his second goal of the game with the outside of his right foot inside the right post.

These guys can play better than they think today. Maybe it was a combination of field conditions and opening day jitters. And some of our key people didn't play well either. Enfield had the first and last goals of the opening half. Mike Foley opened the scoring at 3:12 and Tim Anderson closed it at 27:54, after stealing the ball from a defender.

Enfield, after a violation on the Manchester keeper for steps, drew close with 14 minutes left in regulation with Anderson doing the honors. The Raiders couldn't come any closer. Manchester, outshot — and outworked — in the first half by an 8-7 margin when it tried to be too fancy, wound up with a 17-15 advantage. "It was the first game for most. A lot of them played summer ball but that's not as intense as high school ball. And as I told them they have to stop dancing," McCarthy said.

Cacace completed his hat trick 13:06 into the second half. He took a short pass from Kelly, dribbled free and ripped home a left footer to the right corner. "He doesn't need that much room (to get his shot off). Most guys need 1-2-3-4-5 steps, all he needs is maybe one, two steps and then his it," McCarthy said.

NLRB to investigate charges vs. Pillowtex

By John F. Kirch Herald Reporter

An investigator has been appointed by the National Labor Relations Board to study union charges against Pillowtex Corp. that the company has taken part in unfair labor practices in a strike at its plant in Manchester, an NLRB official said today.

Stephen T. Fenning will begin contacting witnesses from the United Auto Workers Local 376, which represents striking workers, and Pillowtex officials next week to determine whether the charges have merit, said Mark Kaplan, supervisory attorney for the NLRB office in Hartford. The union filed charges with the NLRB Monday and the investigation should take about 30 days.

VCR theft is charged

An employee of the J.C. Penney Catalog Center on Tolland Turnpike was charged Wednesday with third-degree larceny and illegal use of a credit card, after he allegedly charged the purchase of a video cassette recorder to a customer's account.

Police said Donald E. Custer, 19, of 14 Wells St., charged the VCR to the account of an Ossining, N.Y., woman on July 25 and then had it sent to his apartment. The total amount on the charge was $1,261.67, police said. Custer posted a $250 bond following his arrest Wednesday. He is to appear in Manchester Superior Court next Wednesday.

AL roundup Yankees close in on Toronto

By Kevin Kenney United Press International They were out the Yankees exploded full force. After Rickey Henderson walked to load the bases, Lavelle relieved and Ken Griffey drove in Randolph with a flunder's choice. Don Mattingly followed with a single to score Meacham, and then it was home to highlight a six-run rally in the seventh inning that turned 4-1 Toronto lead into a 7-5 Yankee victory, leading New York to pull to within 1 1/2 games of the AL East leaders.

"This team has got something I haven't seen around here for a long time," said Yankee manager Billy Martin, whose team has won 12 of its last 13 games. "They've got toughness. There's only one other club I've had like this, and that was in '76. These guys want to win."

Ron Guidry, 19-5, went eight innings, allowing 10 hits, striking out three and walking one to get the triumph — the fifth in his last six decisions. Brian Fisher pitched the ninth for his 12th save.

"Toronto starter Dave Stieb left the game in the seventh, having allowed two hits and seven walks while striking out five. He was charged with four runs, one earned, Reliever Gary Lavelle, 4-7, took the loss. Stieb walked Willie Randolph, who then out to start the Yankee seventh. Bobby Meacham then hit a potential double play grounder to short, but shortstop Tony Fernandez flipped the ball past second baseman Damaso Garcia for an error — one that "gave them a couple of extra outs," Toronto held off a late inning rally by St. Louis to win 7-6 and increase their lead in the NL East to one game over the Cardinals. Andujar, who was 12-1 at the All-Star break, has gone only 8-8 since. "Face it, if he doesn't pitch well, we don't win. Period," said St. Louis manager Whitey Herzog. The Mets scored four times in the first inning and twice in the second against Andujar to take a 6-0 lead, but the Cardinals pecked away and finally tied the score in the ninth on a solo homer by Willie McGee.

New York won the game in the 10th on the daring baserunning of Mookie Wilson. Wilson led off the bottom of the inning by beating out an infield hit. After Wally Backman sacrificed, Keith Hernandez lined a single off Ken Dayley, 3-2. Left fielder Vince Coleman, anticipating Wilson's speed, charged but the ball glanced off his glove and Wilson scored easily. It was Hernandez's 22nd game-winning RBI of the year, a record.

At Chicago, Greg Walker hit a two-run triple to cap a three-run third inning and Gene Nelson, 9-9, allowed seven hits over 8 1/3 innings to lead the White Sox. Walker lined his triple to left-center off loser Mike Smithson. He got behind on the count, and I was sitting on it." The Blue Jays took a 2-0 lead in the third on Ernie Whit's 16th homer, a two-run shot to right, and extended their lead to 3-0 in the fourth on Jesse Barfield's RBI single.

Angels 5, Rangers 3 At Anaheim, Calif., Mike Witt and Donnie Moore combined on an eight-inning and Ruppert Jones drove in two runs to lead the Angels. Witt, 13-7, worked seven innings, giving up a solo homer by Alan Bannister and a two-run shot to Steve Buechele. Moore picked up his 26th save.

Braves 11, Dodgers 6 At Atlanta, Brad Kominsky belted a three-run homer to highlight a six-run third inning and power the Braves Atlanta broke a four-game losing streak and ended the Dodgers' four-game winning streak. Zane Smith increased to 7-9. Bob Castillo fell to 2-2.

Reds 2, Padres 1 At Cincinnati, Jay Tibbs scattered seven hits over eight innings against San Diego's lone private school, Mt. Carmel, resulted in crude, sandlot contests. "We used no equipment," said the 6-1, 230-pound Taimanao. "There were a lot of broken jars."

Taimanao has understandably had some trouble with rule interpretations and the discipline of whistles. "But he's really conscientious and is the only one of our linemen who has improved every single day," noted Indian line coach John Hackett. "He's enthusiastic about creaming the quarterback on pass plays."

Participating on a team — in a sport where emotional ties are so critical — can only ease a young foreigner's culture shock. "Since I joined the team, I've made a lot of friends," confirmed Taimanao. "We used no equipment," said the 6-1, 230-pound Taimanao. "There were a lot of broken jars."

Niekro shooting for 300

By Mike Barnes United Press International NEW YORK — If Phil Niekro cares his 300th career victory, it will be the second best thing that happens to him Friday night.

The grand old knucklebomber still confounding batters in his 22nd major-league season, seeks to become the 18th pitcher to join the exclusive 300 club when the Yankees host the Blue Jays (8 p.m. EDT) in the battle of the top two clubs in the AL East.

"My top priority, above winning 300 games, is to play in a World Series," he said. "Everybody asks me about winning 300. Sure, I'd love that. But a milestone like that will mean more when my career is over. I know my folks and my friends would be excited about it."

"But to me, the most important thing is to get that World Series ring. I've had a long career. I've been very lucky. But, if I don't get into a World Series, I'll feel like something was missing."

For Niekro, 46, this is his second year with the Yankees after 20 with the Milwaukee and Atlanta Braves. He has reached the National League Championship Series twice with Atlanta, but each time the Braves were swept — by the Mets in 1969 and the Cardinals in 1982.

At Philadelphia, Hubie Brooks hit his first grand slam in the fifth inning to lead the Expos. Brooks connected off loser Shane Bieber, 11-7, to snap a 1-1 tie and enable Floyd Youmans to pick up his third career win. Youmans' decisions.

Astros 5, Giants 2 At Houston, Charles Kerfeld and Dave Smith combined on a double and Kevin Bass had a nuber and a triple and scored twice to lead the Astros to victory.

Mets chew up Cardinals' meal ticket, regain NL East lead

By Fred McCane United Press International The St. Louis Cardinals' meal ticket is out to lunch. Unless Joaquin Andujar can regain the form he flashed in the first half of the season, the Cardinals do not have much chance of beating out the New York Mets for the National League East title.

Andujar had another poor outing Thursday, getting shelled for six runs in two innings, as the Mets held off a late inning rally by St. Louis to win 7-6 and increase their lead in the NL East to one game over the Cardinals.

Taimanao, 17, (considered seniors) will probably see more and more action as the season progresses. "Not only are they nice kids," said head coach Ron Cooney. "They have the potential to play. They're not just bodies."

Of the two, Tanaka, a cornerback and split end from Niuhigakubo, Tokyo, has had more experience. He played for his high school team, Waseda High, that finished second in Eastern Japan last year.

"There's no variety of jerseys — just one team — and we have a fall and spring season," noted Tanaka, of a sport that not many Westerners are even aware of, played in the Far East.

One interesting difference in Japanese high school football is that there is no regular season — just one big, single elimination tournament, which means some teams practice for four weeks, lose their opening game, and wait till next year.

"Seniors graduate in March," added Tanaka. "So if we lose our first game in the fall, that's it. There's nothing left." Tanaka's team won its first 10 games last year, before losing in the finals. "He's a ball player," said coach Eric Farno, who drills the secondary. "The intensity is a lot harder than what he's used to, but he sticks his nose in there."

Taimanao has understandably had some trouble with rule interpretations and the discipline of whistles. Willie Mays accused at drug trial

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Say it ain't so, Willie Mays. Willie Mays isn't saying much, but enough was said about him by a former teammate Thursday at a federal cocaine trafficking trial to bring tears to the eyes of every sandlot kid.

Willie Mays, perhaps the greatest baseball player who ever lived, was a source of amphetamines?

Yes, says John Milner, a retired outfielder who was a teammate of Mays on the New York Mets. Milner testified that the Hall of Fame outfielder kept a bottle of liquid amphetamines in his locker

Hall of Fame. Mays says it ain't so. "I never used stuff like that," said Mays Thursday night when interviewed by KGO-TV in San Francisco.

Milner said his first introduction to a liquid amphetamine called "red juice" was from a bottle he took from Mays' locker. Milner also said amphetamines were regularly placed in his own locker when he was with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

During cross-examination on his drug use, defense attorney Adam Renfro asked Milner whether "management" had given him amphetamines, known as "red juice" or "green juice." Management wasn't giving me greenies or red juice or speed. Willie had the red juice," Milner said.

"Did he give it to you?" "He didn't give it to me. I went into the locker and got it," said Milner.

"You went into Willie Mays' locker and got it," asked Renfro. "The Great One, yes," said Milner. "I never seen him take it. It was there."

Milner said he did not like the red juice and he did not try it again but used other forms of amphetamines during his playing days. He said while with the Pirates he for pills left in his locker.

"When I'd come in before the game, they'd already be in my locker... not every game... mostly before games at the end of the season when players were worn out or a little tired," Milner answered in response to a series of questions.

Disclosures of ballplayers' illegal use of the pills in their clubhouses came during the trial of Curtis Strong, 36, a Philadelphia caterer charged on 16 counts of cocaine to major leaguers in Pittsburgh between 1980 and 1984.

Strong is one of seven men indicted on drug trafficking charges earlier this summer after a lengthy grand jury investigation into cocaine use in professional baseball. Three of the defendants have pleaded guilty and three are awaiting trial.

Milner testified that he bought cocaine from Strong several times in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. One buy, he said, took place in the restroom of the Pirates' home clubhouse during a home game in 1980.

Indians girls dominant

By Bob Pope/Herald Sports Writer

For the casual observer, it was 1984, all over again.

The Manchester High girls soccer team, thoroughly dominated by Enfield High, in a CCC East season opener at Memorial Field Thursday.

The game wasn't as close as the 4-1 score might indicate.

The Indians may be better tested Saturday, when they host cross-town East Catholic in non-conference action at 1 p.m.

Manchester, unbeaten conference champs last season and 15-2-1 overall, moved the ball at will from the outset Thursday. A depleted Enfield club could only try to get in the way and then hoped riddled goalie Jennifer Olander would make the save.

Chris Rovengo, Denise Belleville, Amy Barrera and Amy Cain scored first-half goals for Manchester. Lisa Fazzino struck for Enfield's lone tally with nine minutes left in the match.

The Indians unloaded 39 shots. The Raiders managed two, both in the second half. They all crossed the middle line and into Manchester territory just four times in the first half.

Manchester has excellent depth, and they controlled the whole game.

said beleaguered Enfield coach Bob Cressotti, who was accompanied by a mere 16 players.

Manchester mentor Joe Erardi spelled most of his starters in the second half, offering his wealth of talented young players some varsity experience.

"We played everybody," admitted Erardi. "I didn't want to embarrass anybody."

In that sense, Cressotti was appreciative. "We're short on numbers," said Cressotti, noting the painfully obvious. "But he (Erardi) played his second and third teams. He was very kind to us."

The Indians were hardly kind to Olander, who took one upstair in the same manner at 23:47 to extend margin to 3-0.

The fourth goal came via a major assist from sophomore Rachel Odell, who pressed Olander in front with two close-in shots, before a rebound squirted to the front line, took one upstair in the same manner at 23:47 to extend margin to 3-0.

The Raiders were in the negative column 8:39 into the contest, when Rovengo and Barrera, left and right, netted a sophomore in 84, opened the game at her familiar position and then saw fullback Duff later on.

"We have some real strong younger players," noted Erardi, who cited the efforts of junior sweeper Wendy Pedemonte, freshman fullback Heather Lavery, sophomore midfielder Jen Atwell, Rovengo and Barrera.

Cressotti was more impressed by the pressure of veteran senior forwards Nancy Sheldon and Sarah Nicholson, as well as the overall standout performance of Belleville.

"They did a super job," lauded Cressotti. "They have to be considered as the league favorite."

It turned out to be a physical game with 22 fouls on the home side, 11 against Bolton. We were kind of run over. It was a physical game, maybe more than we prepared for. Last year we were a sophomore in 84, opened the game at her familiar position and then saw fullback Duff later on.

Cheney opens campaign with 2-1 win

After a second half of scoreless frustration, Tom Dowd finally put one in the net with less than a minute-and-a-half to break 1-1 tie and boost homecoming Cheney Tech to a 2-1, opening day boys soccer win over Berlin High Thursday.

Cheney, 9-6-1 last year, hosts Cromwell High Saturday at 10:30 a.m.

The Beavers outshot the visitors, 22-15. Winning goal Tom Jezouit made it 2-1 in the 85th minute. Craig Reech got up with 15.

"We pretty much dominated play in the second half, we kept the ball in their end, but couldn't finish things off," said Cheney coach Paul Soucy.

At 36:33, Dowd took a centering pass from Roland Cole and ultimately broke a 25-footer to secure the triumph.

Berlin had struck first at 26:02 on a right corner deflection by Doug Morrison. Cheney came back to knot it up on an unassisted right corner kick by Doug Johnson.

Peter Albert and Don Christie played well for the Beavers.

Coventry ahead to stay with four minutes left in the half, converting a cross from Burrell.

Midfielder Noah Bavier and sweeper Matt Paton turned in solid efforts for the winners.

"We did a nice job moving the ball," said Coventry coach Bob Plavater. "And our defense did a good job marking people. But we've got to fine tune the front a little better."

The Patriots travel to Waterford High for a Saturday morning match at 10 a.m.

Walton's trade a 'basketball decision'

By Frederick Waterman United Press International

BOSTON — After six years of missing the NBA playoffs, Bill Walton staged-managed his own return to the Boston Celtics in sports history in what he said "was not a financial decision, but a basketball decision."

Since joining the league in 1974, the 6-foot-11 center has missed three seasons due to foot problems, won one NBA title, been the league MVP, and after refusing to finish his career with a losing franchise, is moving to his third team, the Boston Celtics.

"I am a team player and always have been," Walton said Thursday.

Walton, who claims to be 100 percent healthy, though not capable of playing a full 48-minute game, said, "I've made tremendous progress since my last move to the Celtics."

Chiefs knock off Raiders

By Rick Gosselin
United Press International

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Los Angeles Raiders defensive end Howie Long knows the meaning of a hard hit. Usually, though he is on the administering end.

"We just got our butt kicked," Long said after the Kansas City Chiefs beat the Raiders 36-20 Thursday night. "Sometimes you get the bull and sometimes the bull gets you. There aren't a lot of pattycaakes in this league."

The Chiefs rode the toe of Nick Lowery who kicked a club record-tying five field goals to their first victory over the AFC West rival Raiders since 1981.

The win snapped a five-game losing streak by the Chiefs at the hands of the Raiders and gave Kansas City sole possession of first place in the AFC West at 2-0. The Raiders fell to 1-1.

Lowery kicked field goals of 39, 22, 42, 58 and 21 yards in the opening 41 minutes to give Kansas City a 15-14 lead.

The five field goals tied a club record held by Jan Stenerud and his 58-yard field goal tied his own club record set against Washington in 1983.

"It's a good feeling, fighting the best and beating them," Lowery said. "It's my most satisfying victory ever. Beating any team is great but beating the Raiders is really great."

Lowery turned the scoring over to quarterback Bill Kenney late in the third quarter and he passed 25 yards to Carlos Carson for one touchdown and 5 yards to Stephone Paige for another to increase Kansas City's lead to 23-14 through 45 minutes.

Kenney completed 18-of-38 passes for 259 yards and Carson caught five passes for 117 yards. Frank Hawkins scored on a 1-yard run and Plunkett threw touchdown passes of 3 yards to Todd Christensen and 2 yards to Jessie Hester for the Raiders.

Hawkins gave the Raiders a 7-0 lead with his touchdown but Lowery answered with three consecutive field goals to put the Chiefs on top 9-7 midway through the second quarter.

Kansas City fullback Ken Lacy, fumbled the ball away at the Kansas City 30 late in the second quarter and it was recovered by Los Angeles safety Vann McElroy.

The Raiders recovered a Ken Lacy fumble and reclaimed the lead four plays later, 14-9, on a 3-yard pass to Christensen.

Lowery kicked his fourth field goal — a 58-yarder — in the final minute of the half to cut the deficit to 14-12.

Kansas City then marched 76 yards to set up Lowery's fifth field goal that put the Chiefs in front for good, 15-14.

Kenney steered the Chiefs 70 yards in eight plays for Carson's touchdown and converted a subsequent Plunkett fumble on into another touchdown.

The Lewis touchdown helped the Chiefs offset a late score by the Raiders on the Plunkett to Hester pass.

On Sunday, the Buffalo Bills and New York Jets meet and each will be looking to score its first touchdown.

The Houston Oilers, euphoric over last week's upset of Miami, meet the Redskins in Washington with Joe Gibbs' troops still licking their wounds after a 30-point beating inflicted by Dallas.

The New England Patriots shoot for a second successive victory over a NFC Central opponent Sunday when they visit Soldier Field and face the Chicago Bears.

The Patriots edged Green Bay 26-20 last Sunday and may have done the Bears a favor by knocking off the team many consider to be the Bears' principal threat for a second successive NFC Central crown.

Green Bay coach Forrest Gregg, hungry for a victory following his team's season-opening loss to New England last week, plans to realign his offense when the Packers host the New York Giants.

Gregg said he wants only veterans on his offensive line. He has benched his No. 1 draft choice, tackle Ken Ruetgers. He plans to put tackle Karl Swanne back at left tackle, Greg Koch at right tackle, Keith Ucker at left guard and play Ron Hallstrom at right guard.

Mark Cannon will be the center. In other games Sunday, it's Cincinnati at St. Louis, Dallas at Detroit, LA Rams at Philadelphia, Indianapolis at Miami, Minnesota at Tampa Bay and New Orleans at Denver.

Raider quarterback Jim Plunkett loses control of the football as he's hit by Chiefs' nose tackle Bill Maas during third quarter NFL action. Chiefs upset the Raiders, 36-20.

Fair deals
The Big E isn't the only game

By Nancy Pappas
Herald Reporter

Oxen strain to pull heavy sleds across the hard-packed dirt.

Fruit pies with golden-brown crusts stand in row upon luscious row.

Beautifully-groomed cattle are led by proud owners around the show ring.

A little boy leans on a pumpkin twice his size, which sports a blue ribbon for "largest vegetable."

It's all part of a traditional Connecticut country fair. There are eight country fairs around the area this weekend. Four are within easy driving distance.

Fortunately for the family budget, the emphasis at these fairs is on seeing, not on spending.

Of course, country fairs may include flea markets, car raffles, game booths and a midway full of rides. But according to the Association of Connecticut Fairs, Inc., which regulates the state's fairs, the emphasis of the country fair should be primarily agricultural.

There ought to be exhibits of livestock and poultry, fruits and vegetables, needlecrafts, baked and preserved goods. In most cases, the exhibits are to be judged and ribbons or other prizes are to be awarded. None of the items exhibited are sold to the public.

The tradition of the country fair goes back several centuries. The early fairs — held on town greens and later in county centers — were usually semi-annual opportunities for farm families to gather for competition and socializing.

Some of these early fairs fizzled when the farms were replaced by suburban tracts. Others continue through the present-day, or have been resurrected after several decades.

The largest agricultural fair in Connecticut, coming up the last weekend of September in Durham, was first held in 1916. About 45 minutes south of Manchester, this fair boasts more than 3,000 exhibitors displaying a range of agricultural, horticultural and culinary talents.

Those exhibitors come from all over the state — and well beyond. One year, a farmer in Alaska mailed a 50-pound cabbage to the fair, said Leonard Baginski, fair president. The man was a former Durham resident.

That Alaskan farmer shared in the largest prize pot in Connecticut. Last year the Durham Fair paid more than $24,000 in prizes (officially called "premiums") to about 2,000 non-commercial exhibitors. This year the participation and prizes will be even greater.

The Durham event is certainly one for the record books. More than 210,000 attended last year. But for those in a fair-y mood, there are plenty of smaller fairs to visit this weekend. Here's a list of those to be held between now and the middle of October:

Spectators watch an ox pulling contest. This event is one of the most popular at Connecticut's country fairs, which will go on throughout October. A team of oxen pull cement weights as the crowds cheer. Country fairs are an especially good bet for families on a budget, since most of the emphasis is on seeing — not spending.

Rhode Island expects to regain 'Ehr-Attack'

By United Press International

Rhode Island's "Ehr-Attack" was cancelled last weekend, but it is expected to return in full force Saturday.

The Rams were felled 29-13 by Delaware after Tom Ehrhardt, their record-shattering quarterback, left the game after the third play due to a hip pointer.

But the signal-caller is expected back for the home-opener against Howard, 9:1, a 35-12 loser to Maine last weekend, despite rolling up more yards on offense, Howard was unable to put the ball across the final line.

UPI's passing attack is potent, but its running is suspect, as it managed just 11 net yards against Delaware. On defense, the Rams must play the rest of the year without free safety Tony Hill, who broke his arm in the first quarter of the Delaware game.

Another Yankee Conference team, Boston University, also takes on an outside opponent Wake Forest, in what could be the Terriers' toughest game of the year.

The ACC opponent is viewed by BU's first-year coach Steve Stenson as "physically the best team we'll play. We're facing a team with more speed than we have and a more depth."

Quarterback Foy White will lead the attack for the visitors, 1-0 after beating William and Mary 30-23. White connected on 26-of-31 pass attempts for 270 yards. Topper Clemons ran for 152 yards on only 18 rushes.

The Terriers' Pat Mancini, recovered from the ankle problems which plagued him last year, returns at quarterback, and it is hoped sophomore Randy Pettus can replace Paul Lewis, New England's all-time rushing leader.

New Hampshire, led by tailback Andre Garrison, will host Lafayette, whose offense is built around tailback Ryan Priest. Both runners picked up more than 1,000 yards last year, though Garrison may have the better offensive line blocking for him. The game will be the season-opener for both teams, who are meeting for the fourth time, the Wildcats having won the previous three games.

Holy Cross will host Colgate in their season-opener. The Crusaders will be led by senior punter Pat McCarthy Jr., who earned the quarterback job this fall.

American International College will travel to Maine in another non-conference match-up. AIC has experienced lines and quarterback Terry Wales showed he can do the job last week, hurling four touchdowns in a 31-0 shutout of Plymouth State.

Maine, 1-0, is in its first year under coach Buddy Teevens. The Black Bears are hoping that the heroics of freshman tailback Doug Dorsey were not beginner's luck.

In his first college game last week, he scored three touchdowns and ran for 120 yards in the victory over Howard.

Northeastern visits Connecticut in the battle of the Huskies, although the latter team defanged and declawed itself when six potential starters were declared academically ineligible. Among these were both of last year's top rushers, Billy Parks and Gary DuBois.

Northeastern, 3-7 in 1984, will unveil its wishbone offense, with freshman walk-on Jim O'Leary at quarterback. "He handles the ball well and we think he can do the job," said fifth-year coach Paul Pawlak. Five runners are expected to see action, with senior fullback Gary Benoit likely to be prominent.

New England track champion Lonnie Hooker will also get some work at halfback.

Bo Jackson key figure for Auburn

By United Press International

After tomorrow, second-ranked Auburn and unranked Southern Mississippi — both of which logged shutout victories last week — will have less in common.

Often the biggest differences between Auburn and any other team is Bo Jackson, and because of him, when the Tigers take on Southern Mississippi tomorrow, the Golden Eagles are likely to see surrender their first points.

Jackman ran roughshod over the Rajin' Cajuns, rolling up 299 yards and three touchdowns in last week's 49-7 thrashing of Southeastern Louisiana. Tigers coach Pat Dye, perhaps feeling merciful, pulled Jackson from the game with more than 12 minutes left.

The Golden Eagles netted 439 yards and quarterback Bobby Wilson made his comments outside a state appeals court hearing room where attorneys for both the Los Angeles Raiders and the city entered arguments over who should own the team.

"We have three separate plans involving the transfer of ownership," the mayor said. "Our position would be to own the team on a short term basis and then sell the team."

In order to sell the team, Oakland will have to win its 5½-year-long legal battle to take over the Raiders and move them back from Los Angeles where the team moved in 1982 using the city's powers of eminent domain. Those powers are given to a city so that it can condemn property for public use.

The three judge panel now has 90 days to consider if Oakland should be able to take over the Raiders franchise.

Duckworth rushed for two touchdowns and 109 yards in Southern Mississippi's 28-0 blanking of Louisiana Tech.

Elsewhere Saturday, North Carolina hosts No. 10 Louisiana State. North Carolina edged Navy 21-19 last week and Coach Dick Crum is well aware LSU is a more demanding test.

"This is the kind of ball game that is going to help us get better as a football team," he said. "When you get good competition you tend to play much better."

The game is the season-opener for LSU. The Tigers went 8-21 last year and have key players back at skill positions.

Fourth-ranked Ohio State faces No. 19 Pittsburgh in its season opener and the Pitt Panthers will face their first serious challenge after knocking off Purdue.

No. 17 Maryland hopes to rebound from a disappointing loss to Penn State against Boston College. It was the Terrapins' 28th loss in 29 games to Penn State.

Temple takes on No. 9 Penn State in a bid to regroup after Saturday's sloppy performance against Boston College.

Oklahoma State has opened consecutive seasons under Coach Pat Jones with road upsets, knocking off No. 13 Arizona State in 1984 and No. 6 Washington in 1985. Colorado and Kansas will be out to improve their records to 2-0 against teams that beat them a year ago. The Buffaloes fell at Oregon 27-20 and the Jayhawks were routed at Vanderbilt 41-6.

Oakland still trying to get back Raiders

By William D. Murray

SAN FRANCISCO — Oakland Mayor Lionel Wilson says his city has three plans to sell the Raiders franchise if the state courts allow the city to take over the club under the powers of eminent domain.

Wilson made his comments outside a state appeals court hearing room where attorneys for both the Los Angeles Raiders and the city entered arguments over who should own the team.

"We have three separate plans involving the transfer of ownership," the mayor said. "Our position would be to own the team on a short term basis and then sell the team."

Big E is a biggie

There's one bit of advice you'll hear time and again about your first visit to the Big E. Don't try to do it all and see it all in one day. Every year, the fair, officially the Eastern States Exposition in West Springfield, Mass., has gotten bigger. From Ronald McDonald's kiddie park to exact replicas of the capitol buildings of each New England state, this fair has all you could imagine — and a good deal more.

This weekend, that "something more" includes The Judds, a mother-daughter duo, and one of the hottest items in country music today. They will present free concerts at 2, 5 and 8 p.m. Saturday, and 2 and 5 p.m. Sunday and Monday at the Miller Bandshell. Also free is the Budweiser Supercircus '85, with performances every two hours at the Big E Coliseum. The circus pulls out Tuesday night.

The fair runs through Sept. 22. Gates open at 8 a.m., but most buildings don't unlock their doors until 10. Admission is $6 adults; $3 senior citizens and kids 6 to 13; free children under 6.

Toys are clues to past

Playthings from other eras can teach history lessons to the youngsters of today. A cast-iron penny bank with mechanical pitcher, catcher and batter illustrates the popularity of the all-American sport of baseball. Children of the 1850s were thrilled with model trains, as the cars were then the newest way to travel.

Connecticut Historical Society will present a program at 3 p.m. Sunday on how toys can communicate information about the culture and customs of long ago. The program is recommended for adults, and children ages 7 and up, who are urged to bring one of their own favorite toys.

Admission is $2 for adults, $1 for children 12 and under. For information and reservations, call 238-5621.

Wethersfield is jumping

There are at least four festivals worth visiting in Wethersfield this weekend. Saturday is the Old Wethersfield Antiques Festival, on the grounds of the Solomon Welles House, corner of Hartford Avenue and State Street.

The show, with more than 150 antique dealers from around the region, will be held rain or shine from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The Wethersfield Grange will hold its 85th annual fair, featuring flowers, vegetables, candies and baked goods, at 138 Main St., from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. A chicken barbecue dinner will be served.

The Wethersfield United Methodist Church, 150 Prospect St., will have a crafts show and flea market Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Much of this is to be held out of doors, and it will be postponed until Sept. 21 in case of rain.

Finally, on Sunday from 11 to 5 p.m., Wethersfield's Civic Park will celebrate Connecticut's 350th birthday with a parade for kids, folk musicians presenting sea chanteys, a quilting bee, corn husking contest, hay rides, fire truck rides and more. In case of poor weather, call 563-9015.

New music is free

Soprano Marsha Hogan will present a free concert Sunday afternoon of recent music for voice and instruments. The concert will be at the auditorium of the Wadsworth Atheneum, 600 Main St., Hartford, at 3 p.m. It is sponsored by the Evelyn Preston Memorial Fund.

Mushrooms as meals

Collecting and eating wild mushrooms is the topic for Sunday's workshop at the Connecticut Audubon Society, Holland Brook Center, 161 Main St., Glastonbury. This program, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., is not recommended for children. It will be free, but registration is required. Call 633-8402.

High dive team

Members of the Coors' Great American High Dive Team perch far above the crowds at the Big E fairgrounds. The divers present five shows daily at the Flag Plaza, at the east end of the fairgrounds, West Springfield, Mass. The fair runs through Sept. 22.

Going once! Going twice!

The men's fellowship of the First Congregational Church in Hebron will have an auction of antiques, household goods, crafts and produce from 10:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday.

This event, which raises money for the church, will be held at the Hebron Red Barn, routes 66 and 85, Hebron. For information, call 228-9796.

Twain's 'shooting star'

Halley's Comet was seen the year Mark Twain was born, and again the year he died. A program about this phenomenon of ice and fire will be presented every weekend this month at the Copernican Planetarium and Space Science Center, Central Connecticut State University, on Wells Street in New Britain.

The shows are Fridays and Saturdays at 8:30 p.m. Admission is $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for children under 12.

Advice

Happy couple bridges generation gap

DEAR ABBY: I wrote you three years ago, telling you that a couple can be happily married even if there is a big gap in their ages because that is what happened to us.

I was 14 and Jack was 61 when we married 10 years ago. We still love each other dearly, and he treats me like a queen.

We now have a son named Andrew Jackson. When I found out I was pregnant, we were so surprised we could hardly believe it. And yes, Jack is Andrew's father. I have been faithful to my husband all these years and will continue to be.

So you see, Abby, two people can be happy together regardless of their ages. I am enclosing a picture of Jack, the baby and me.

JANE MCCARTNEY, DENISON, TEXAS

DEAR JANE: Thank you for the progress report. The baby is beautiful, and you and Jack radiate happiness.

Not every 14-year-old bride can live happily ever after with a husband 47 years her senior. Congratulations to your Jack who treats you like a queen, and is able to deal you a full house.

DEAR ABBY: I am sick and tired of hearing that alcoholism is an "illness." It isn't; it's a vice, a moral weakness and a lack of self-control. Although chronic excessive drinking can cause a number of diseases, it is not in itself a disease.

I wish someone who insists that alcoholism is a disease would tell

Does uterus removal affect orgasm?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I once read that the removal of the uterus lessens the intensity of orgasm. Is this true?

DEAR READER: We are reassured by gynecologists that hysterectomy does not affect orgasm or a woman's ability to enjoy sexual gratification. Of course, there are individual variations in this observation. Some women note increased intensity of orgasm, some women less. This is probably due to the influence of emotional factors. Certain females will enjoy sex more because the risk of pregnancy has been eliminated. Other women may have difficulty with orgasm, but they often give histories of less fulfillment prior to surgery.

Although it has been said before, I am a dermatologist to rule out the presence of infection or poor circulation to your fingers.

DEAR POLLY: An old flatiron (non-electric) makes an excellent bookend, doorstop or decorative accent for a hearth or laundry room. It can be spray-painted and decorated to match one's decor.

DEAR POLLY: Chopped celery leaves add much flavor to many dishes, such as salads, soups and stews. Most people discard the leaves, but I find them more flavorful than the stalks for seasoning. — MARY

DEAR MARY: Let's hear it for ending waste in the kitchen! You're so right about the flavoring value of those celery leaves. And while we're at it, let's stop discarding green onion tops, potato peels and other nutritious, flavorful parts of vegetables and fruits. Poll: AIDS alarms Americans

NEW YORK (UPI) — More than half the American people believe AIDS ranks along with cancer and heart disease as the most serious diseases and believe it can be transmitted by casual contact, a survey showed today.

A New York Times-CBS poll found more than one out of four Americans believe children with acquired immune deficiency syndrome should not be allowed in school.

The poll was taken among 762 adults Monday night. The survey said its findings indicate that nearly half the people

Newington hospital makes use for helicopter blades

By Ruh Youngblood United Press International
NEWINGTON — The high technology used to produce stronger but lighter helicopter tail-rotor blades is turning out leg braces enabling the victims of muscle diseases to walk without shackles of metal. Instead of braces forged from cumbersome steel or the bulky combination of plastic and aluminum, prosthesis specialists and engineers are confident the composite material used to reduce the weight of helicopters will revolutionize supports for the handicapped. "Progress in braces has been frustratingly slow," said Ron Altman, director of orthotics at Newington Children's Hospital. "In everyday life we're exposed to wonderful technological changes, but I'd come in here and the best modern medicine could offer was out of the Dark Ages." It is particularly frustrating for the young victims of muscular dystrophy, Altman said, with the progressive wasting of the muscles requiring increasingly heavy braces. "The extra energy required to stand and walk becomes more exhausting with the additional weight," Altman said. "As the muscles become weaker and weaker, the braces become bigger and heavier until they actually hamper movement." ALTMAN WONDERED IF THE braces have the same problem in the youngsters on their feet without weighing them down. Upon reading about the stronger, lighter braces produced by Sikorsky Aircraft, Altman thought, "Wait a minute! Why can't we try to use the material for bracing?" Engineers at the nation's largest supplier of military helicopters were intrigued. "It's turned out to be the best program I'm working with," said Adrian Cooper, senior design engineer. "Here are these patients with an irreversible disease. They end up with braces that are so heavy they have to use a wheelchair." "Hopefully, they'll be walking for two additional years with the program," he said. One of the first considerations was whether the new composite material would cause skin problems, Altman said. It did not. "We make sure the graphite fibers have no contact with the skin," Cooper explained. "The part that does is made of epoxy or polyester resin." Two months after Altman came up with the brainstorm, a 14-year-old victim of cerebral palsy became the first child to wear braces made through the use of graphite fibers embedded in epoxy. Matthew Cook, who previously wore braces extending from the hip to foot, is now walking with one-piece braces starting from just below his knees to his feet. The old six-point supports that previously were the best technology could offer have been cast away for the new one weighing only eight ounces. "The light braces not only enable the Wethersfield High School student to walk with considerably more ease and comfort but also to participate in some strenuous activities, including sports. He even visited the Sikorsky production line and examined aircraft parts made from the same material that support his legs." "Within a few years, composite graphite braces will be the standard in the medical profession, providing greatly increased mobility and comfort for the handicapped," Altman predicted. "We foresee the day when they will make life easier for patients with a wide range of muscle diseases from the very young to the elderly." Altman and Cooper are confident the tricky problem of producing knee joints for long-leg braces will be overcome by early next year so that increasing numbers of patients will be wearing prototypes and providing feedback on the benefits of the units and how they can be improved. "Developing a joint is a real challenge," Cooper said. "Instead of having steel sidebars and hinges combined with plastic, we are trying to develop one totally out of the composite material." THE BRACES ARE MADE in a laboratory at the hospital, with a cast taken of the leg and foot used to create a plaster mold. Next, graphite composite fabric is applied over the mold in layers. A plastic sock is then put over the mold. As an air vacuum is created at one end of the sock, resins are inserted at the other end and massaged into the graphite fibers. After drying, the composite material hardens into a shell that forms the stiff portion of the braces. "We can make the simplest braces in five hours," Cooper said, but a critical hurdle is bringing down the cost to the $500 to $1,500 range of conventional braces. "We face the same problem in the aerospace industry where the composites have to compete with aluminum and steel," Cooper said. "Instead of having to make a brace out of an assembly of parts, we are integrating everything. That way we can reduce the labor costs."

Wells Fargo suspects' kin charge harassment by feds

By Kenneth R. Buzine United Press International
HARTFORD — Relatives of the two suspects in the $7 million Wells Fargo robbery gathered Thursday outside federal court on the second anniversary of the nation's second largest cash heist. Relatives of the suspects said their families were physically and emotionally harmed by FBI agents during the Aug. 30 raids at homes and businesses in Puerto Rico that netted the arrests of 11 of the suspects. "The raids followed indictments against 17 people in the 1983 robbery in West Hartford, which the FBI says was plotted by Les Machetero, a terrorist group seeking independence for Puerto Rico." Speaking in Spanish and using an anonymous interpreter, the suspects' families said FBI agents entered their homes and at least one business without search warrants. "They had no search warrants," said Leticia Ayes-Suarez, mother of defendant Carlos M. Ayes-Suarez. "They did not let anyone in the house and hurt the children." Ayes-Suarez was one of 14 members of the various families to arrive in Hartford this week. Several Puerto Rican charity organizations gave the family members money for the trip, she said. "We have a serious problem with the children. They have been hurt by this," Ayes-Suarez said. My granddaughter "was snatched and taken out of the house with force." A teary-eyed Carmen Delores Silva, wife of Elias Samuel Castro-Ramos, echoed Suarez's words. "My little boy asked me if these (FBI agents) were the people who kill people because he saw the weapons," Silva said. Her family was awakened by the agents who she said "broke the door down." "I hit my head against a wall," she said, standing near her husband, Noemi. Her husband's only fault, she said, is that "he is a fighter for the independence of Puerto Rico." Wilfred Ayes-Suarez said his brother Carlos' commercial print shop was also entered during the raids. "They wouldn't let anybody in," he said, adding that computers and paperwork were confiscated by federal agents. Aida Figueroa, six-months pregnant with the child of suspect Orlando Gonzalez-Claudio, said her husband was not allowed to get dressed while a search of her home was underway. "Three (FBI agents) took a (bed) sheet away from him and he was naked," she said. "My little girl came out screaming." Gloria Ramirez-Talavera, mother of Norman Ramirez-Talavera, said she was told by the FBI agents that no search warrant was needed. "They dragged me from behind and hit my head against a wall," she said, standing near her husband, Noemi. The investigation was requested by Fairfield County Sheriff Edwin Brown and the internal affairs division of the state Department of Correction. The allegations involved sexual assaults and the exchange of contraband and money for sexual favors between inmates and sheriffs in various areas of the courthouse female lockup, Browne said. The women were in court after being charged with a variety of offenses, including prostitution, Browne said. He said the investigation is continuing and did not rule out more arrests.

Sex assault charges lodged against Bridgeport sheriffs

BRIDGEPORT (UPI) — Two deputy sheriffs have been arrested and a third was expected in court today on charges they sexually assaulted women inmates in a Superior Court lockup, prosecutors said. "It's shocking to say the least — scandalous," said State Attorney Donald A. Browne, who said the arrests followed a three-month investigation into the alleged assaults in a basement holding area at the courthouse. Harold Palmer, 22, and Teodoro Reyes, 43, who are Fairfield County deputy sheriffs and live in Bridgeport were arrested Thursday. A third deputy whose name wasn't released was expected to be arrested today, officials said. Palmer was arrested at his job and charged with four counts of second-degree sexual assault and one count of attempted first-degree sexual assault. Bond was set at $25,000. Reyes was charged with one count of second-degree sexual assault. Bond was set at $10,000. Browne said the incidents occurred between January and July while the women were in the custody of deputy sheriffs at the women's holding area in the Bridgeport Superior Court building. The deputies are charged with having sexual intercourse with the women in their custody. Palmer also is charged with attempting to force a female prisoner to have sex with him, authorities said. Superior Court Judge Martin Nigro issued bench warrants for the arrests Thursday after the three-month investigation of the women's allegations by Browne's office. The investigation was requested by Fairfield County Sheriff Edwin Brown and the internal affairs division of the state Department of Correction. The allegations involved sexual assaults and the exchange of contraband and money for sexual favors between inmates and sheriffs in various areas of the courthouse female lockup, Browne said. The women were in court after being charged with a variety of offenses, including prostitution, Browne said. He said the investigation is continuing and did not rule out more arrests.

Thousands misused by charity

HARTFORD (UPI) — The state hopes to recover some of the thousands of dollars raised by a charity to grant the last wishes of dying children but allegedly used to buy jewelry, rent a sex film and cover other expenses. Attorney General Joseph I. Lieberman said only $10,000 of the $27,000 raised in Connecticut last year by the Genie Project Inc. of Waterbury went to benefit children. At the same time, the charity used donations to pay inflated rents and salaries, buy jewelry, make unsecured personal loans to its officers and rent a video cassette recorder and a sex film, Lieberman said Thursday. "Never in my term as attorney general have I seen a charity case that makes me so angry as this one," Lieberman said. "What kind of charity would take advantage of dying children for personal profit?" Consumer Protection Commissioner Mary M. Heslin said the state is taking legal action to shut down the Genie Project and recover some of the money already raised by the charity, which has been banned from soliciting money. Officials at the Genie Project, which the state said helped five terminally ill children last year, could not be reached for comment on the charges. The charity raised money for the stated purpose of granting the final wishes of children with terminal illnesses, Lieberman said, and did send some dying children to Disney World. "But I cannot help but think of the dozens of other children who died over the past few years who could have had their last wish granted had greed not gotten in the way," he said in a news conference. Lieberman said the charity raised $27,000 last year in Connecticut but the investment firm in New Haven, which was to benefit children, "That's only 4 cents out of every dollar," he said. He said the officers of the Genie Project paid themselves more than $27,000 in salary in the 1983-84 fiscal year and gave themselves $16,000 in personal unsecured loans using charity funds. Charity funds also were used to pay rent at about three times the market rate for part of the officers' home and to buy $6,000 worth of jewelry from a distributorship the officers operated, Lieberman said. Funds from the charity also were used to rent a video cassette record and a cassette of the X-rated but popular "Sex Games," Lieberman said. He said the alleged misuse of funds was uncovered by the public charities unit operated by the attorney general's office and the Department of Consumer Protection. The unit is staffed by attorneys, an investigator and an auditor.

Man charged in infant's death

SAN JUAN, PUERTO RICO — A karate expert sought by police in New Britain, Conn., was arrested early Thursday by agents from the Puerto Rican police extradition division on a warrant issued in Connecticut. Bail was set at $100,000, police said. Navarro was charged with first-degree manslaughter, risk of injury to a minor and tampering with physical evidence in the death of 18-month-old Efrain Justiliano, New Britain police Detective Martin Rizzo said.

Moffett urges Seabrook pullout

NEW BRITAIN — A former congressman has urged state utility regulators to order Connecticut's two major electric companies to pull out of the Seabrook nuclear power plant. Former Rep. Toby Moffett, who plans to announce his candidacy for governor this fall, said it was time for the state's power companies "to cut our losses and get out" of the controversial New Hampshire project. "Connecticut electricity customers have been paying for this New Hampshire turkey for too long," Moffett, a Democrat, said Thursday at a Department of Public Utility Control hearing. He called on regulators to get involved in developments affecting the Seabrook plant since its last hearing on the $4.5 billion plant, which is partly owned by Northeast Utilities and United Illuminating Co. Exec held in prostitution case

HARTFORD — An executive with E.F. Hutton & Co. is accused of promoting a sadomasochistic prostitution operation that charged up to $250 for beatings and whippings of clients from around the country, police said today. Martin J. DeGennaro, 33, of Woodbridge, a vice president and account executive for the investment firm in New Haven, was charged Tuesday with promoting and patronizing a prostitute known as "Lady Carla," police said. DeGennaro, a father of four, was released on $1,000 bond pending an appearance Sept. 24 in Hartford Superior court. Police Lt. Michael Conroy said DeGennaro was charged on a warrant issued following a two-month investigation that led to the arrests of two other suspects June 12 at a Hartford condominium.

Family woes tied to asthma death

CHICAGO (UPI) — Asthma is rarely fatal, but when a child dies it is usually more going on than a medical problem, a Denver researcher says. Conflicts with parents and doctors may play a crucial role in whether a child with severe asthma will die from the disease, says Dr. Robert Strunk, of the National Jewish Center for Immunology and Respiratory Medicine. "Asthma is not primarily a physiological disease," Strunk explains. "You still have to have a physiological set of circumstances." But he says, "once a child has the asthma, how he reacts to it and how his parents react to it seem to determine the outcome, good or bad." Death from asthma in teenagers is rare, but a yearly fatality rate of 0.3 per 100,000 in the general population, but it does happen and it's on the increase, Strunk said in a telephone interview. "It's safe to say there's an increased incidence of death due to asthma," he said. "It was first noticed in the '60s but it seems to be getting even more prominent in the '80s." Adolescent asthma deaths have tripled in the last 10 to 15 years, Strunk said, prompting a study on the problem, reported in a recent issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association. Strunk and his colleagues evaluated records of 21 children who had been hospitalized between 1973 and 1982 for treatment of severe asthma and who later died. The average age at death was 13 years. These patients were then compared to 21 other children with equally severe asthma who did not die, and eight variables were found to discriminate the two groups. Five of these were psychological in nature, Strunk said, and "if you look at just the purely medical ones, they probably have a role in the psychological variables as well." Strunk said children who died from asthma were more likely to have had conflicts with their parents or doctors over treatment, were depressed about or ignored their asthma symptoms and did not take appropriate care of themselves.

Nicaragua says U.S. funds death

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (UPI) - Nicaragua's security chief charged in testimony before the International Court of Justice that thousands of Nicaraguans died because of anti-Sandinista guerrillas supported by the United States.

The Nicaraguan vice minister of the interior, Commander Luis Carrion, traced U.S. support for Nicaraguan rebels Thursday in the opening day of world court proceedings.

Carrion, who described himself as a U.S.-educated expert on subversion, said the insurgents were weak and disorganized before U.S. involvement began in 1981 with $15 million grant to the "Contras."

"There have been 3,886 people killed on the Nicaraguan side, the Nicaraguan government side. I make this distinction," he said, "because a good majority of the Contras are peasants recruited by force, and they also die in this way."

Testimony scheduled to resume today was to include a statement by a former CIA intelligence analyst, David C. MacMichael, who was employed by the agency from March 1981 to April 1983.

No U.S. presence was present at the proceedings Thursday. "Today we face empty seats on the side of the respondent state," said Nicaragua's chief representative and ambassador to the Netherlands, Carlos Arguello, in opening the case before the court's 15 judges.

"This is not the first time this has occurred. Just five years ago, this court and the United States government under President Carter faced the same empty chairs when Iran failed to appear before this tribunal during the hostage crisis," he said.

Nicaragua filed the suit April 9, 1984, charging the United States with violating international law by "conducting military and paramilitary activities" against Nicaragua.

The suit followed revelations that the CIA attended the mining of Nicaragua's three main harbors in early 1984.

Reagan preaching tax reform

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's tax reform gospel has not aroused much enthusiasm among congressional leaders but he is preaching it to voters as economic salvation for all groups — the old, the young, the entrepreneur.

On the third road trip of his fall campaign for enactment of tax reform this year, Reagan told 2,500 elderly citizens of Tampa, Fla., "Every group in America will be better off — and anybody who tells you otherwise doesn't understand."

The CIA followed revelations that the CIA attended the mining of Nicaragua's three main harbors in early 1984.

At least 12 vessels, including ships from Japan and the Soviet Union, were damaged by mines in the Pacific ports of Corinto and Puerto Sandino and in the Caribbean harbor of El Bluff.

New York's school boards in suit to bar AIDS victim

By Carol Rosenberg
United Press International
NEW YORK — The city's 32 community school boards will join a suit by two Queens boards seeking to bar a 7-year-old AIDS victim from public school, the head of the School Boards Association said.

The decision came late Thursday after schools Chancellor Nathan Quinones failed to provide answers to questions concerning how deeply acquired immune deficiency syndrome virus is transmitted, said Philip Kaplin, president of the association.

Quinones was questioned by the group at a meeting which City Health Commissioner David Sencer also attended, Kaplin said. Sencer, asked afterward if he could guarantee healthy students would not catch AIDS from a student with the disease, acknowledged: "There are no such things as absolute guarantees."

The attorney for the unidentified AIDS victim said his client would become a "pariah" if the effort to block her admission to school is successful.

ATLANTA (UPI) — Federal health officials say they have identified an early symptom of AIDS — a tongue sore first noticed among victims in San Francisco four years ago at the start of the AIDS epidemic.

The national Centers for Disease Control urged health-care providers to watch for the sore as an important diagnostic tool for early recognition and treatment of acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

BUSINESS

Ro-Vic's one-man show has become big business

Parrott knows more than soap

By John F. Kirch Herald Reporter

In 1952, while working as a corporate pilot for the Fuller Brush Co., Roger E. Parrott Sr. toyed in his basement with a formula for a hand cleaner.

The formula worked and he began selling the cleaner — named K'Lene — to the public. He was a one-man show, making, marketing and selling the product.

Today, that one-man show has grown into a 45-employee operation that includes 18 full-time salesmen, five delivery trucks and a new 20,000-square-foot distribution center.

Parrott, 69, has created a distributorship called Ro-Vic Inc. that knows more than soap. Although maintenance products represent a good portion of its business, Ro-Vic sells and distributes everything from floor disinfectants and 1,000-rpm burnishers to wedding announcements and decorations.

"We found you couldn't be successful with just one item," Parrott said in a recent interview at his office.

His original K'Lene product has since faded into history, being replaced by Ro-Vic's own private-label products as well as the national-brand items it distributes throughout Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

Parrott said he worked part-time on his cleaning products while flying for Fuller Brush until 1970, when he decided his growing business needed more attention.

Earlier, in 1955, the business had taken the name of Ro-Vic — "Ro" for Roger and "Vic" for Victoria, his wife.

"I'd come home from work, change to some comfortable clothes and work until two or three o'clock in the morning," he said.

"When I started I was playing with it. Then as I grew, I thought, wow, this can be a business. This is what I had in mind, but I didn't think it would get to this proportion."

Parrott said he began working for Fuller Brush in 1945, flying business to meetings across the country. He has owned 39 airplanes. A model plane sits on top of a bookshelf and a picture of an amphibian aircraft rests on the wall of his Sheldon Road office.

At first glance, the amphibian looks like a boat.

"It is," Parrott said enthusiastically. "It's an amphibian. Mr. Fuller figured we could land on the water, closer to the cities."

Ro-Vic's new distribution center is an addition to its Sheldon Road headquarters, which it moved into nine years ago. It was the third move in the company's 30-year history.

There, Parrott has set up a retail outlet with party goods, wedding announcements, decorations and paper goods the public can buy. Across the room is his showcase, where large commercial cleaning equipment is displayed.

Roger E. "Gene" Parrott Sr. sits in his 146 Sheldon Road office as chairman of Ro-Vic Inc.

Ro-Vic customers talk with the company's major suppliers during Thursday's product show at 146 Sheldon Road. Ro-Vic is holding the three-day show in its new distribution center to give customers a chance to see where their maintenance products are coming from and to celebrate the company's 30 years in business.

Ro-Vic opens new facility

Ro-Vic Inc., a Manchester-based distributor of building maintenance equipment and supplies, marked its 30th year in business Thursday with the opening of a new 20,000-square-foot distribution center on Sheldon Road.

The company, which was founded by Roger E. Parrott Sr. in 1955, is also holding a product show at the center, where business accountants throughout southern New England can meet with major suppliers. The show will last until Saturday.

Suppliers such as Hoover, Clarke, Mastercraft, Windex and others whose products Ro-Vic distributes have set up booths to show their products. It is the first time Ro-Vic has had such a show, which Parrott said will help people understand his business.

Ro-Vic is a distributor of national-brand and private-label products. The maintenance equipment is sold mostly to businesses such as hotels, factories, malls, manufacturers and hospitals for their janitorial staffs.

The company began in 1955 as a one-man operation that sold a hand cleaner. It has expanded to 45 employees and a "mixed" product line.

"We're going to continue to grow," Parrott said during an interview Tuesday. "You have to." Ro-Vic has a retail outlet at its Sheldon Road building. The outlet is open to the public and sells wedding announcements and decorations, paper goods and party supplies.

Ro-Vic has also moved into maintenance training and consulting. With videotapes, slides and personal instruction, salesmen teach homeowners how to keep their houses cleaner. The company is also starting to provide consulting services for businesses.

Coleco goes with a winner

By United Press International

Seabrook nuclear plant officials shrugged off an adverse court ruling in Massachusetts on the eve of another crucial decision involving the New Hampshire Seacoast project.

In a unanimous decision Thursday, the Massachusetts Supreme Court upheld an April order by the state Department of Public Utilities that said utility investors — not ratepayers — were responsible for continued spending on Seabrook's first reactor.

The four Massachusetts utilities affected by the court decision own about one-fourth of Seabrook.

In their 5-0 ruling, justices said Seabrook 1 had an "extremely disappointing past history" in predicting its future costs and completion dates.

The reactor, which had a price tag of $466 million in 1972 and a projected completion date of 1979, is now expected to cost $4.5 billion and be on line in October 1986. Seabrook's second reactor has been conditionally canceled.

WEST HARTFORD (UPI) — Coleco Industries, which scored a hit with the Cabbage Patch Kids, is turning to the creator of the popular dolls for another toy line.

Xavier Roberts, who created the Cabbage Patch Kids dolls and accessories distributed by Coleco, granted the company exclusive rights to mass-produce and market Furkins bears.

Original Appalachian Artworks of Cleveland, Ga., which was founded by Roberts, will continue to produce and distribute the bears dressed in straw hats and work boots to gift and specialty stores.

Roberts also designed the Furkins line, which was introduced in the smaller shops and stores earlier this year, Coleco officials said Thursday.

Each of the bears "has a different look and personality" and is dressed in casual clothing such as flannel shirts, straw hats and work boots.

Coleco's line will include smaller-sized bears styled after the originals, with shipments to mass merchandisers, chain, discount and department stores scheduled to start in early 1986.

The company will spend at least $10 million in advertising for Furkins during the first three years of the agreement, said Arnold C. Greenberg, chairman and chief executive officer of Coleco.

Coleco has sold more than $550 million worth of Cabbage Patch Kids and accessories since June 1983. Sales for the first six months were $65 million, and the company expects 1985 sales to exceed last year's total of more than $540 million.

The response to the dolls, which are "adopted" when sold and come complete with birth certificate, startled even company officials.

"No other product in the toy industry has ever had this kind of impact to reach this level in this time period," said Coleco spokeswoman Barbara C. Wruck. "We're hoping it will enjoy the longevity of a model product like Barbie (a long-popular doll) has."

Early shortages of the dolls brought unauthorized high black market prices and Coleco continues to wage legal battles to stop bootleg dolls from being sold as authentic Cabbage Patch Kids.

The Coleco line has expanded to include "preemies," twins, ponies and pets of uncertain species called Kosas. Accessories range from diaper and sleeping bags to strollers and clothing.

Cabbage Patch fans have sent their dolls to summer camps, taken them on trips to Europe and had dentists fit the toys for braces.

"They are willing to spend the time and money to stay a part of the Cabbage Patch phenomenon," said Wruck, who added company analysts see no slackening in demand for at least several years.

LawPhone makes legal help a call away

The California airline stewardess dropped off her car at a neighborhood repair shop one morning and received a written estimate of $300. When she picked up her car on her way to work that evening, the mechanic handed her a bill for $600. To her objection, the mechanic gave her an ultimatum: "Pay up or we keep your car!"

The woman threatened to call her lawyer, but the mechanic didn't believe her. At a pay phone in the repair shop, she called an 800 number and got a lawyer on the phone who explained that under California law, a repair shop cannot charge more than the estimate unless authorized by the customer. The mechanic still refused to give her the car, so she put the lawyer on the phone. In specific terms, he explained the law and threatened to have the Bureau of Automobile Repair on the mechanic's doorstep by morning. He finally accepted the $300 and she drove off.

The stewardess was a client of a prepaid legal service — a service under which growing numbers of customers are getting legal advice over the phone. Anyone they think they have a legal problem, a toll-free phone calls puts them in touch with an attorney. Many large companies provide telephone legal service as an employee benefit. The cost to a company can be as low as $40 per person per year.

You, as an individual, also can purchase prepaid

Your Money's Worth

Sylvia Porter

legal phone services for about $75 to $100 annually, says Stuart Baron, a founder of LawPhone, a national telephone legal service.

Employer-paid programs now cover about 80 percent of the 7 million Americans who use prepaid legal assistance, which supporters say is becoming as popular as employee benefits as dental coverage in the '80s.

More than 700,000 members of the United Auto Workers are provided legal counseling as part of their benefits package, and Baron predicts 25 million people will be covered by 1990 and 50 million by the year 2000.

An estimated 85 percent of all legal problems can be settled with a phone call: routine matters such as car repair rip-offs or landlord problems — not a Union Carbide litigation. Phone lawyers deal with family matters, consumer rights, property owners' and tenants' rights, etc. Most often, client questions are as simple as the proverbial barking dog.

The major prepaid legal-service plans provide unlimited access to the attorney — and in most cases, the attorney's advice, his follow-up phone call or his letter resolves the problem.

As a guarantee against conflict of interest, LawPhone's attorneys are prepaid on a per-enclosed member basis rather than fee-for-service and are prohibited from taking cases beyond telephone service.

Experience indicates the typical individual will need legal advice or consultation between four and six times a year. Many people never get help because they fear the high cost of legal service, aren't sure if their problem is legal or simply don't know how to get this advice.

LawPhone is the first service operated by a major national company; McKesson Corp., ninth largest among America's top 100 service companies. McKesson plans to apply its experience in prepaid drug benefit programs to its new legal venture, its Pharmaceutical Card System (PCS) subsidiary is administrator of prepaid prescription drug plans which cover 8 million individuals. PCS processes drug claims for 84,000 pharmacies.

"Most people are afraid of lawyers and afraid of getting our bills," admits Baron, who says the American Bar Association favors legal service by phone because it makes legal service available to the typical family.

"It will help on the phone, the average working person is more likely to overcome fear and call a lawyer."

For employers, prepaid legal benefits pay for themselves many times over by reducing employee stress and anxiety.

For employees, troublesome questions are solved, such as how to handle incorrect department store billing statements and how to force a car dealer to honor a warranty, thereby reducing time off from work.

Just Oct. 31, a one-year extension of Section 120 of the IRS code was enacted, exempting prepaid legal benefits (like other employee benefits) from taxable income. Congress is studying the costs of all employee benefits, but legal benefits cost only a little anyway.

Oil and other credit card companies are now negotiating with prepaid legal services for as little as $10 a month. This is good news for lawyers, for frightened consumers — and for Americans up and down the line.

Traveling workout keeps busy execs in shape

By Ruth Youngblood

BARKHAMSTED — Corporate executives successful in every venture except keeping themselves fit are traveling away from the office with the advice and camaraderie of an exercise consultant who makes house calls.

Driving a van loaded with trampolines, bikes, weights, rowing machines, a cross-country ski simulator, treadmill and body-monitoring equipment, Douglas C. Comstock visits the homes of busy professionals whose careers have outpaced their bodies.

"These people realize the importance of fitness, but it's the last thing they have time for," Comstock said. "Still, they don't want to look or feel like jellyfish."

Endless exercises of business conferences, phone calls and trips were keeping many from participating in any exercise program, Comstock said. "What they needed was a personalized, professional service in their homes," regardless of the hour.

Although an initial attempt to generate interest by mailing 2,500 letters to prominent executives failed to spark a single response, Comstock said, "I was the kind of guy who got excited, ran out and bought all the equipment I could find, but could never force myself to use it. My home was a sportsman's paradise."

"I must have signed up for six different courses at health centers and never showed up," he added.

Bronson met Comstock at a sports equipment shop where he went to buy a new treadmill.

"Doug said he wouldn't sell me one, that what I needed was motivation, not fancy gadgets," Bronson said. "He decided to give the 13-week program a try providing Comstock showed up at his home at 5:45 a.m."

Comstock or his instructors, all with degrees in physical education, provides the motivation frenzied professionals need.

REICHARD BRONSON, a 40-year-old developer of shopping centers and office buildings who also produces rock 'n' roll concerts, maintains the kind of hectic pace typical of Comstock's clients.

An admitted "sports-machine junkie," Bronson said, "I was the kind of guy who got excited, ran out and bought all the equipment I could find, but could never force myself to use it. My home was a sportsman's paradise."

"I must have signed up for six different courses at health centers and never showed up," he added.

"Doug said he wouldn't sell me one, that what I needed was motivation, not fancy gadgets," Bronson said. "He decided to give the 13-week program a try providing Comstock showed up at his home at 5:45 a.m."

"I needed discipline, and he put together a plan that worked," Bronson said, adding he lost 20 pounds, has lower blood pressure and a more relaxed attitude.

After finding success in the one area that had eluded him, Bronson admitted Comstock's concept of gradually increasing exercise was hardest to follow at the beginning.

"I'm kind of compulsive, and it was very frustrating starting off slow and then quickening the pace. I wanted to do everything faster and Doug had to hold me back initially."

In dealing with success-driven people, Comstock says he has tried to develop a program that is practically fail-proof. He contacts his clients' doctors to learn if there are any special problems, and every session begins by measuring physical dimensions.

As Comstock guides each participant through the hour of stretching, weight lifting and aerobics, he logs pulse rates, intensity of workouts, repetitions, durations and makes recommendations for the next class.

AS PRESIDENT of a firm providing health and maintenance programs at corporations, the 30-year-old Comstock said he noticed those who didn't attend the sessions were often top executives who needed the exercise the most.
