College Entrance Exams

ACT Mean Scores

Figures not available for 1971 and 1972. SAT and ACT are equally popular in Florida and Texas. In Washington, a state exam is given instead of the SAT or ACT.

SAT scores are up at Manchester High

Manchester High School students exceeded state, regional and national averages in their scores on both the verbal and mathematics sections of the Scholastic Aptitude Tests given last year.

In a report to the Board of Education Monday night, MIS Principal Jacob Ludes said mean verbal scores for the class of 1985 were eight points higher and math scores 12 points higher than those of the previous class.

When he announced the scores during the board meeting at Martin School, School Superintendent James P. Kennedy expressed optimism that the scores were on the upswing. But both Kennedy and Ludes cautioned against direct comparisons of school districts based on the SAT scores.

Kennedy said the SAT "is a pretty good indicator of success in college." However, he said, "We have to be cautious about making comparisons from year to year."

He said the class of 1985 had done well on the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test and was expected to do well on the SAT.

This mean score received by MIS students on the verbal section was 458, compared with 440 in Connecticut, 436 in New England and 431 nationwide. The mean math score was 499, compared with 475 statewide, 473 regionally and 475 nationally.

A spokesman for East Catholic High School in Manchester said today that the parochial school has not yet received a report on SAT scores of its students.

A total of 236 out of 482 students in the Manchester High School class were tested last year.

On the verbal section, one student scored in the 700 to 800 range out of a possible 800 top score. Twenty-six students scored from 600 to 699; 85 from 500 to 599; 89 from 400 to 499; 49 from 300 to 399 and 16 from 200 to 299.

On the math section, seven students scored over 700; 45 over 600; 70 over 500; 63 over 400; 45 over 300 and six over 200.

Ludes called the increase in scores over 600 on both sections "healthy." Last year, 18 students scored in the 600 range on the verbal section and 31 scored over 600 on the math section.

A significant drop of 90 points in the combined mean 1983 SAT scores prompted an extensive investigation of the testing process, administered by the Educational Testing Service of New Jersey. No definite flaw was pinpointed.

State scores follow local, national trend

HARTFORD (UPI) - Connecticut high school students had higher average scores on the Scholastic Aptitude Test this year marking the fourth straight year of improvement, state education officials say.

Nearly 30,000 students in the state took the college entrance examinations and had average scores of 440 on the verbal portion and 475 on the mathematics portion, the state Department of Education said Monday.

The verbal average was four points higher than last year while the average math score was up seven points to reach the highest point in 10 years, the department said.

The gains from 1984 results represented the largest single-year improvement in scores on the SAT since the Department of Education began reporting the data in 1969, officials said.

A total of 29,669 students in Connecticut took the SAT, the best known of the tests in the College Board's admissions testing program, which also includes Achievement Tests and the Test of Standard Written English.

This year's average verbal score was nine points above the national average while the average math score equaled the national average for the first time in a decade.

"I am especially excited to see the combination of increased participation and higher averages on the test," Education Commissioner James F. Fogarty, Secretary of the Board of Directors of the State Department of Education, said Monday.

He said that during the conclusion of serving during rush hour, the inspectors would not be able to do so well as the restaurant management.

Debbie Kermode, assistant manager of the Adams Mill Restaurant at 165 Adams St., took a different view. She, too, said she is not concerned over the prospect of increased participation in the test.

"I am especially excited to see the combination of increased participation and higher averages on the test," Education Commissioner James F. Fogarty, Secretary of the Board of Directors of the State Department of Education, said Monday.

'85 a banner year? Consumer prices steady

By Vincent Del Giudice United Press International

WASHINGTON - Consumer prices, despite a leap in housing costs, increased in August by only 0.2 percent for the fourth straight month, holding the annual inflation rate to what promises to be a 15-year low, the government said today.

Without the month's price acceleration biased on rising housing costs, the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index for the month would have shown no increase.

"Nearly 80 percent of the increase is due to shelter costs," said Labor Department analyst Patrick Jackman, who helped prepare the report. "There were declines in food costs, energy costs and the cost of used cars."

With the slight price index increase - the same recorded in May, June and July - the annual U.S. inflation rate through August stood at 3.3 percent, marking a 15-year low.

If the year ends with the same low rate, 1985 will be the best year for inflation since 1972.

The Consumer Price Index for August was 323.5, equivalent to a cost of $23.50 for the government's sample "market basket" of goods and services that cost $100 in 1967.

As students returned to the classroom for a new school year, school books and supplies increased by 0.8 percent, the Labor Department said.

The only major categories to jump as much as housing were medical care and a miscellaneous category, including cigarette prices, each up 0.5 percent, the Labor Department said.

Used car prices were off again in August, by 1.2 percent. An Analyst at Georgia State University in Atlanta said the enormous public enthusiasm for clearance sale loan rates offered for 1985 automobiles is creating an unusual glut of used autos.

The overall price index for housing increased by 0.5 percent, the most since a 0.6 increase in May. Furniture prices went up, but utility prices decreased, mirroring the drop in energy costs.

Natural gas recorded a sharp price decrease of 1.1 percent, but telephone bills surged by 0.6 percent.

Food and beverage price hikes continued to be remarkably moderate, holding to a pattern of tiny declines or increases that first appeared in March, going up only 0.1 percent in August, the same as June and July.

Prices of fruits, vegetables, beef, pork, chicken, fish, eggs and dairy products were off for the month, while baked goods and cereal costs went up.

U.S. beef prices in August were 7.7 percent below their cost last December, but many analysts predict beef prices will rebound in early 1986.

The transportation index reflecting the lower used car and fuel costs as well as cheaper auto financing - was down by 0.4 percent, the Labor Department reported. It was the fourth monthly decline in a row.

Reagan among Nobel nominees

OSLO, Norway (UPI) - President Reagan and New Zealand Prime Minister David Lange are among 99 nominees for the 1985 Nobel Peace Prize, the awards committee said today.

Jakob Sverdrup, secretary of the Norwegian Nobel Committee, said 60 individuals and 39 organizations had been nominated for the 1985 Peace Prize, including Reagan and the New Zealand leader, an outspoken opponent of French nuclear testing in the Pacific Ocean.

The peace prize will be announced in Oslo on Oct. 11, he said. Reagan and Lange have been at odds since Lange's government moved to its times that of nuclear armed or powered warships.

Book has last word on acronyms

By Ken Ross United Press International

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. - Don't worry if life becoming an alphabet soup where the meanings of once snappy terms like SALT and START or SWAPO and SWAT have got your head swimming.

Help is on the way.

Merriam-Webster Inc., the company that produces America's best-read dictionaries, has come out with the first pocket-sized guide aimed at lending meaning to the prose of writers and speakers who play fast and loose with abbreviations and acronyms.

Webster's Guide to Abbreviations, which will hit bookstore shelves in October, explains abbreviations for 12,000 words and phrases, the Springfield-based company said Monday.

"Of course there's far more than that in our language," said Kathleen Doherty, the guide's editor. "These are just the more common ones you come across in everyday reading."

The world has become increasingly filled with truncated words used by everyone from bureaucrats to technocrats, Doherty said. People often have a hard time understanding what not a precise one, she said.

Most remember President Jimmy Carter's generous use of SALT during his administration and somewhat less vividly recall Ronald Reagan's initiation of START. But Doherty questions whether the public recalls the acronyms' literal translations to Strategic Arms Limitation Talks and Strategic Arms Reduction Talks.

SWAPO in its heyday made appearances both in the news and in graffiti, but few now remember the South-West African People's Organization. SWAT, familiar to those who watch cop shows on TV, stands for police departments' Special Weapons and Tactics squads.

The guide clears up confusion when the same acronym means different things, such as ERA translating equally well to Equal Rights Amendment and a baseball pitcher's Earned Run Average.

In addition to meaning, the book also contains itself with style, such as proper capitalization and punctuation of its meaning but not a precise one, she said.

There are more complete abbreviation guides to be had, Doherty said, but the bulky books are normally found only in reference sections of well-stocked libraries. The most complete guide comes in two volumes, selling for about $125 each, she said.

The new pocket-sized version retails for $3.95.

OPINION

How about a Marshall Plan for American cities?

WARRENTON, Va. — Twenty years ago, when a hundred U.S. cities erupted in rioting, many mayors and black leaders called for a "Marshall Plan for Cities." They said, "If the federal government could help rebuild Europe after the war, why not do the same for our own cities?"

The high-water mark of federal aid to cities came during the Carter Administration's "National Urban Policy" when the Urban Development Action Grant Program was created.

Since 1980, many city programs have been cut back, and this year Congress voted to end revenue sharing in 1986. Further, Reagan's tax bill would wipe out rehabilitation tax credits that have stimulated the rebuilding of many downtowns.

And it would end tax credits benefiting old smockstock industries still left in cities.

But it is a mistake to blame all of this on a Republican president whose base of support is non-urban.

"The cities have lost political influence because they have lost population," and because their needs "seem to have no end," said Paul Porter, a former assistant administrator of the original post-war Marshall Plan.

He also said, "The economic condition of many cities has improved significantly during the last decade. The gains are obvious enough to cause many people to reject the idea of an existing urban crisis."

They would be the emergence of a world economy has permanently injured a string of cities tied to the auto and steel industries along an "economic faultline" from Gary, Indiana through Detroit, Toledo, Cleveland, Akron, Youngstown and Pittsburgh to Bethlehem, Pennsylvania," said Porter.

IRONICALLY, SOME CITIES clearly do not need more federal aid. In fact, the mayor of Columbus, Ohio, has said his city requires no more help. Many New England cities such as

Northern Perspective
Michael J. McManus

Boston, Stamford and Lowell are similar, with low unemployment, solid job growth and a rebuilt downtown.

Therefore, Porter proposed a bold new strategy patterned on the original Marshall Plan, at an Airline House retreat in Warrenton, Va., hosted by the Northeast-Midwest Institute and various Cleveland institutions.

"Aid should be reserved for cities whose economic base is poorly suited to their population," he said. "It should be temporary and used primarily to make future aid unnecessary. As soon as feasible — say, no later than three years from now — all federal aid to cities should be subject to the terms of individual recovery compacts."

"They would be negotiated agreements between a city government, the federal government and state government whereby in return for a commitment by the city to pursue agreed recovery goals, federal and state governments would agree to provide relevant assistance."

Porter, a tall white-haired man of 78, noted that in the original Marshall Plan, 16 war-ravaged countries were told that there would be a limit of $17 billion of U.S. aid (of which only $13 billion was ultimately given out). Therefore, those recovery plans had a four year limit. And each nation's proposals had to be reviewed by the 15 other countries competing for funds. That helped cut fat from the proposals.

Based on that experience, Porter outlined how a new Marshall Plan for Cities might work:

1. EACH CITY'S RECOVERY PLAN "would seek to make the city more competitive with its suburbs as a place to live" and work.

2. "Some proportion of state matching funds would be a condition on federal aid etc."

3. "The city would have broad discretion in how it uses the assistance. Knowing that the aid will come to an end, it will have an incentive to use it to the best effect."

4. "The city government would be required to provide evidence of collateral support by private institutions such as banks, corporations, labor unions, foundations, universities, civic bodies, media, etc."

5. "A high level of private support should result in more, not less, assistance from federal and state governments."

6. "The aid from the federal and state government would not be confined to grants," but would include loan guarantees, etc.

7. "The received aid should stimulate... jobs, improve housing, neighborhoods. A central aim of urban policy should be to make the nation's cities a more attractive magnet for capital than Mexico or Brazil."

8. "Another major element of a recovery compact should be a commitment by the city to enlarge the horizons, opportunities and civic responsibilities of the city's youth."

9. "The state should require reasonable support from suburbs that derive sustenance from the city. Tax districts comprised of suburbs could contribute to renewal of a city's aging infrastructure."

10. "A recovery compact should have a duration of four or five years and should be renewable in the case of cities with greatest need."

PORTER NOTED that the recovery of the Chrysler Corp. involved such a compact. Federal loans were given on the condition of a wage freeze, a profit-sharing plan, etc.

Finally, he asserted, "In seeking broad public support, cities will be poorly advised to rely mainly on sympathy. A better strategy will be to earn the admiration that people give to an endeavor valiently overcoming its handicaps."

When he finished speaking, I rose to say that in the eight years I've written this column, I had never heard of a more sweeping or realistic proposal for cities, and asked for reactions.

Cleveland Mayor George Voinovich, who is also president of the National League of Cities, said, "The plan makes sense. The Kettering Foundation has demonstrated with its 'Negotiated Investment Strategy' in Gary, Columbus, and St. Paul, that the federal government and state government can agree to pool resources for individual cities. What's proposed is taking NIS into a broader context. It's a great idea."

Another who heard the Porter plan was Deborah Steelman, deputy assistant to the president in the White House. Last week she said, "There is a great deal of interest here. What I'm shy of is making this a federal proposal. I would like to see it emerge from a federal-state-city layer cake."

Under the guidelines, approved by an advisory panel Monday after more than seven months of public comment, each use of gene therapy must be approved by local review committees and the federal government, The Times said.

The guidelines were approved by the Reorganized DNA Advisory Committee of the National Institutes of Health at its fall meeting in Bethesda, Md. Scientists at the meeting said the vote marked an important step toward the practical use of gene therapy.

Bomb rips bank in Vienna

VIENNA — A bomb exploded in front of a Hungarian bank on a famous Viennese shopping street early today, tossing shards of window glass a block away and injuring eight people, police said.

The explosion at 12:42 a.m. on the Kaerntnerstrasse at the Hungarian Central Exchange and Credit Bank wounded eight pedestrians, police said. No one claimed responsibility for the attack.

Police said all but one of the injured was Austrian and identified the other as a Thai. It was the first explosion in Vienna this year. Last November, small bombs exploded in front of Israeli Airlines El Al offices in downtown Vienna and inside the entrance of the British consulate.

Gene therapy rules get OK

NEW YORK — A government panel has approved guidelines for a revolutionary type of medical treatment known as gene therapy, which is used to correct hereditary diseases. It was reported today.

The treatment involves transplanting genes, the body's basic blueprints for cell construction, to correct genetic defects that cause the illnesses. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration said it was the first time the agency has approved such a procedure.

The guidelines, approved by an advisory panel Monday after more than seven months of public comment, each use of gene therapy must be approved by local review committees and the federal government, The Times said.

The guidelines were approved by the Reorganized DNA Advisory Committee of the National Institutes of Health at its fall meeting in Bethesda, Md. Scientists at the meeting said the vote marked an important step toward the practical use of gene therapy.

Two brothers die in fire

CENTRAL FALLS, R.I. — Two brothers, ages 8 and 9, died early this morning in a fire which swept through a four-story, wooden-frame apartment building on the city's east side, authorities said.

The youngsters, identified as David Licarde, 9, and his 8-year-old brother, Michael, were trapped in their bedroom on the third floor by the flames, which forced 17 others, including the boys' mother, Julia, to flee the burning building.

The two-alarm blaze erupted about 11:45 p.m. Monday on the third floor of the seven-unit tenement at 43 Fletcher St., on the city's east side, a fire department spokesman said.

The cause of the blaze was not immediately known, but the spokesman said investigators had no reason to believe it was suspicious. The fire, he said, started in or near the boys' bedroom.

China accepts safeguards

VIENNA, Austria — China announced today it will join the four other nuclear superpowers in voluntarily placing some of its civilian nuclear power plants under international safeguards.

The surprise announcement came in a speech by Zhou Ping, vice minister of China's Ministry of Nuclear Industry, to the 29th conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency.

"We wish to state here that the Chinese government has decided to voluntarily offer to place some of its civilian nuclear installations under IAEA safeguards at an appropriate time and will have consultations with the agency on this matter," Zhou told the second day of the five-day conference.

The Soviet Union announced in 1983 it would place some of its nuclear power plants under safeguards and the first IAEA inspection of a Soviet installation was conducted in April 1985. The other countries acknowledged to possess nuclear weapons — the United States, Britain and France — are all in the safeguard program.

Durable goods orders up

WASHINGTON — "Big ticket" factory orders jumped 3.4 percent in August, with all of the gains posted by the aircraft and defense industries, the Census Bureau said today.

Orders were helped by a record $107.9 billion after seasonal adjustment, $3.5 billion more than July. The total was helped by a large increase in military orders, which run independent of the state of the economy. Without the military orders the month's gain would have been less, at 2.5 percent. And without aircraft orders there would have been no improvement at all on the civilian side, one government analyst said.

Orders in July dropped a revised 2.3 percent. One positive note in the figures was a 1.5 percent increase in the important category of non-defense capital goods, the new machinery and construction gear that industry needs to modernize and expand. However, increases there have been sporadic since that category last peaked in May of last year.

Nantucket awaits Henri

BOSTON — Residents and weather officials on Nantucket Island are watching and waiting for the possible onslaught of tropical storm Henri, expected to touch down off the island Wednesday.

If the storm stays on its current course, it will pass 100 miles east of Nantucket Island by Wednesday afternoon, said Gary Schmeling of the National Weather Service at Logan International Airport.

The storm was about 140 miles south-southeast of Atlantic City, N.J., Monday evening and moving north at less than 10 miles per hour, Schmeling said.

"Gale warnings were in effect from Virginia Beach, Va., north to Cape Cod. The storm was expected to travel along the coast of Delaware and New Jersey early Wednesday, and by afternoon was expected to be 150 miles south of Providence, R.I. By 2 p.m. Wednesday the storm is expected to pass 100 miles east of Nantucket."

Plane crashes in Virginia mountains

By Pope Bolnest
United Press International

WEYERS CAVE, Va. — Rescuers struggled through fog up the side of a rugged Blue Ridge mountain today to bring back the remains of 14 people killed in a commuter airliner that crashed and disintegrated on impact.

The wreckage of Henson Flight 1517, which was en route from Baltimore to Shenandoah Valley Airport in Weyers Cave near Harrisonburg, was found late Monday. There were no signs of survivors.

"The area is very nasty and that's not unusual for this part of the country," said Harold Driscoll of the Appalachian Search and Rescue Crew.

"We're looking at a pretty rocky terrain," Driscoll said. "If it rains like they're calling for, we'll be at a definite disadvantage."

A Civil Air Patrol helicopter spotted the smoldering wreckage of the flight in dense woods more than eight hours after it disappeared from radar screens on its flight from Baltimore.

About 20 rescuers from the National Park Service, Civil Air Patrol, Virginia State Police, National Transportation Safety Board and the Appalachian Search and Rescue Crew went to the site overnight, said Driscoll. More rescuers were sent to the scene early today.

"The terrain was incredibly severe and rough," said Mike Chumbley, a Henson spokesman.

Col. David Carter, a Civil Air Patrol spokesman, said the airliner's pilot told the FAA in his last radio contact that the plane's localizer — an essential part of its navigation system — had malfunctioned.

The plane then was 11 miles southwest of the airport and waddered in the fog and clouds before crashing eight miles east of the airport near Grottoes, Va. The fog obscured the top of the mountain ridge. He was flying in the clouds," Henson Airlines spokesman John Presburg said.

The State Police launched a massive ground and air search for the plane after the Federal Aviation Administration reported it missing at 10:30 a.m. EDT Monday.

The airliner did not carry a flight data recorder or a cockpit voice recorder. Only planes with 30 or more seats are required to carry the so-called "black boxes."

The passengers' names were withheld until relatives could be notified. Chumbley said the pilot was Martin Burns, a veteran with more than 5,400 flight hours. The co-pilot was Zilda Wolan, who had been with Henson for three months, he said.

Henson Airlines, headquartered in Salisbury, Md., was formed in 1981, but became an airline with regularly scheduled flights in 1982.

Shevardnadze did not show up to hear Shultz' 45-minute address Monday to the General Assembly.

Secretary of State George Shultz, delivering a toughly worded U.S. review Monday to the General Assembly, dismissed Soviet complaints about "Star Wars" as "propaganda."

Shultz also said the nuclear arms talks in Geneva, Switzerland, which resumed last week, have been marked by slow progress.

"Thus far, the Soviet Union has not negotiated with the responsiveness that the talks require. Nonetheless, our decision to reach an equitable agreement has not wavered."

The British official said that in his talk with Shultz, Shevardnadze also pushed the Soviet proposal of a superpower moratorium on Western space-based anti-missile systems until the November summit in Geneva between Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Guidelines about AIDS

The only certainty about AIDS is that there are no certainties.

When public health officials talk about the disease, they generally couch their language in phrases such as "it appears that" and "doctors presume."

This is one of the factors which has led to the overwhelming public fear of the disease. It is also one reason why state education officials are dabbling in such shaky public-relations practices as issuing guidelines on the handling of vomit and other body fluids in schools.

State officials recently issued the guidelines even though medical evidence so far suggests that it is impossible to get AIDS through anything other than intimate sexual contact or contaminated blood.

There is not one documented case that a health worker or family member has contracted AIDS through casual contact with a patient. Nor can doctors document a single case in which a child has passed the disease to another child.

From an AIDS-prevention standpoint, therefore, there appears to be little reason why a janitor should don plastic gloves to clean up after a sick student.

No matter. Those who formulate policy at the state level probably feel the same kind of helplessness and frustration that health-care professionals throughout the country are feeling when trying to deal with the killer disease. Coming up with guidelines — no matter how useless — might make some of them feel useful.

One wonders if such attempts help stem the tide of fear which the disease is causing, however. If ever there was a time for public policy makers to set an example by acting cautiously, that time is today.

Teachers in Manchester reacted to the guidelines by asking for more guidelines. Their point was well taken — why pass such strict guidelines and then have a dental program such as "swish and spit" in which children rinse their mouths with a fluoridated solution? It does seem to appear to be inconsistent with the new state guidelines, and School Superintendent James P. Kennedy was right to put the classroom program into the hands of the school nurse at each school.

But, again, one wonders if the guidelines do anything but build upon the fear that already exists.

Homeowners or homesteaders, aren't we paying enough taxes? If your home is on the market now, or you are possibly thinking of selling, this concerns you.

Homeowners will have a chance to speak to their senators and representatives against the paying of the conveyance tax burden placed on homesteaders at the upcoming hearing at Lincoln Center (behind the town hall), Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

The added conveyance tax was placed on homesteaders about a year ago to increase state revenue.

Upon selling your home, you pay the state one-half of 1 percent of the selling price of your home. With a $100,000 selling price, you will pay $500 to the state for the privilege of selling your home. In one year the state has collected a record-breaking state surplus of $566 million dollars. Should property owners be singled out to help pay for all the state revenues? You are already taxed heavily through local property taxes, the capital gains taxes and also the $1.10 per thousand dollars of purchase price retained by the municipalities.

It ultimately hurts in the pocketbook and penalizes homesteaders, and also homebuyers, in terms of higher prices. In the case where a homeowner is selling his $80,000 house, the $400 tax amounts to 10 percent of equity. If the seller has a 95 percent MGIC mortgage outstanding.

Should a homeowner pay extra dollars just because... he has got to sell? Can you afford $500 or $1,000? It may be one-half of 1 percent today and 1 percent or 2 percent tomorrow. Tell your senators... It's one tax the state can afford to repeal, not merely reduce.

Conveyance tax a costly burden

GTB fund loss a bad situation

To the Editor:

The state of Connecticut recently announced that Manchester was one of the very few towns to lose GTB (Guaranteed Tax Base) funding for next year. Over $787,000 less state aid to education will be given to Manchester for the 1986-87 school year. I believe it is important that all citizens understand why that occurred.

The GTB formula is an intricate formula which, in part, balances town wealth against town effort to fund education. If a town's effort to pay for education does not match its ability to pay, a town is penalized by a reduction in state aid. This is exactly what occurred in Manchester. Between the 1982-83 and the 1983-84 school years, Manchester's ability to fund education increased 12 percent while town money used to fund education only increased 2 percent. This results in a loss of $787,000 in state aid. It is a tragedy that Manchester's lack of support for education has meant that the town is now spending below the state average per pupil for education, and has lost some GTB funding for next year.

The Manchester Education Association finds this situation unacceptable. We strongly urge the Board of Directors to correct its past errors by setting realistic budget limits for education beginning with this year's budget. By doing this, Manchester's public schools will again be allowed to keep pace with the rest of the state.

Scholarship plan comes under fire

WASHINGTON — For the second time in 18 months, a federal program to award a grant that grants scholarships to American Indians for the summer of 1985.

The surprise announcement came in a speech by Zhou Ping, vice minister of China's Ministry of Nuclear Industry, to the 29th conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency.

"We wish to state here that the Chinese government has decided to voluntarily offer to place some of its civilian nuclear installations under IAEA safeguards at an appropriate time and will have consultations with the agency on this matter," Zhou told the second day of the five-day conference.

The Soviet Union announced in 1983 it would place some of its nuclear power plants under safeguards and the first IAEA inspection of a Soviet installation was conducted in April 1985. Bridge

The finesse goes round and round

By James Jacoby

My friends who play rubber bridge claim they have more fun than those of us who travel the tournament trail. They certainly play more deals in an afternoon, since they don't have to wait for slow players to catch up. If they're defending they try to beat the contract. If declaring, they try to make the contract. In either case, extra tricks can go you know where (unlike, of course, the contract is doubled).

That homespun philosophy can lead to some unusual plays. Do you think only a rank beginner finesses first one way and then immediately the other way? How about a top expert? And how about the play being correct? South was a shade light for his jump to three hearts after partner's takeout.

But on it. If there's enough for second helpings, it will be of something you can stand.

Connecticut In Brief

Belaga to run for governor

HARTFORD — Deputy House Majority Leader Julie D. Belaga has filed papers to run for next year's Republican nomination for governor, saying the state needs to rebuild pride in its government.

Belaga, a five-term legislator from Westport, filed papers Monday with the secretary of the state's office creating a campaign committee and becoming the first woman to actively seek the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

Belaga attacked Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill said she was not running for governor and said state residents are becoming embarrassed by reports of problems and irregularities in state government.

"I think the governor has not really set a standard of excellence," she said, citing reports that the state paved over manholes and that a top tax official used a state car to run personal errands during work hours. "I really think it's time for the state of Connecticut to rebuild pride in this government."

Belaga, who joins at least four candidates for the Republican nomination, said she feels "very good" about being the first woman to actively seek the party's nomination. She said she hopes to raise $3 million for her campaign, acknowledging that she needs to become better known around the state.

Lieberman hits charity fraud

CROWELL — Charity fraud threatens to sour the public on worthy causes and cheats those who donate to them, Attorney General Joseph L. Lieberman said in a speech Monday before the state chapter of the National Society of Fund Raising Council. "Retarded children, children dying of cancer, the handicapped, the elderly, missing children, famine victims — anything they can conjure up, just to make a buck."

The attorney general's office and the Department of Consumer Protection have 15 active joint investigations into possible charity fraud in the state, Lieberman told the fundraisers.

The state Public Charities Unit receives calls daily that provide new leads in the investigation of charity schemes, he said. The recent allegations against the Genie Project in Waterbury started with such a call. In that investigation, the state has filed misdemeanor charges against the founders of the Genie Project, which Lieberman claimed misled funds raised to grant the last wishes of dying children.

Tolls may end earlier?

HARTFORD — Toll collections at eight plazas on the Connecticut Turnpike may end in November, at least one month earlier than planned, state transportation officials say.

State police said Robert V. Phillip, 26, of Bridgeport was released on $5,000 bond pending an Oct. 3 court appearance following the crash Sunday evening along the Wilbur Cross Parkway.

Police said Phillip was traveling north on the parkway when his car struck the rear of a car driven by William Sullivan of Stratford. The impact launched Sullivan's car over the median divider and into the path of a car that was being driven south by Djin Tan, 62, of Cheshire, who was killed.

O'Leary miffed

HARTFORD — A Democratic legislative leader says hearings being held by Republican lawmakers to get public opinions on what to do with the state's surplus are a farce and unfair to Democratic lawmakers.

Senate Minority Leader Cornelius O'Leary, D-Windsor Locks, said he is urging Democratic senators to "underscore the unfairness" of the hearings, which are being conducted by Republican lawmakers only.

GOP legislators in Waterbury held hearings of their own Monday night as a prelude to regional hearings starting later this week on whether the General Assembly should meet in special session to spend the surplus.

Republican legislative leaders say Democratic lawmakers are welcome to speak but cannot otherwise participate in the hearings. O'Leary said he would like to do so in official legislative committee hearings.

O'Leary said he will not attend the hearings and is urging Democratic senators to do so to "underscore the unfairness" of the hearings and "expose this farce for what it is."

O'Leary said he decided to hold the hearings as a compromise between House Republicans who derailed an effort by Senate Democrats to call a special session to spend about $55 million in unallocated surplus funds.

O'Leary said the Republican majority should have called a session where the hearings would have been held by "duly called committees of the Legislature, duly authorized to conduct public hearings."

He charged the Republicans are holding the hearings to let the public say they couldn't agree among themselves on

Carbide prep for layoffs

SOUTH CHARLESTON, W.Va. — Salaried employees at Union Carbide operations in the Kanawha Valley — most of them at the South Charleston Tech Center — have until Sept. 21 to decide whether to accept early retirement or voluntary severance options before the company starts forced layoffs, a company spokesman said Monday.

Spokesman Dick Henderson said as part of a corporate restructuring program announced in late August, which includes a drive to reduce salaried staff across the nation by about 4,000, Carbide has first offered employees the chance to voluntarily retire or look for other jobs.

Education proposals unveiled

O'Neill backs commission's reforms

HARTFORD (UPI) — Gov. William A. O'Neill is urging adoption of sweeping education reforms commensurate with a plan to pay all public school teachers a minimum salary of $18,500 by the next school year.

O'Neill said Monday he will ask the Legislature to act on the proposals from his Governor's Commission on Equity and Excellence in Education when lawmakers convene their next regular session in February.

O'Neill received the commission's final report at the Capitol Monday and then traveled to Hamden where he pushed the recommendations before corporate and government officials at a conference on education.

"By the opening of the 1986-87 school year, there must be a reasonable and competitive minimum salary for teachers throughout our state," the governor said, arguing the proposed $18,500 minimum be adopted by November. O'Neill also backed a one-year, cost-of-living adjustment of $1,000 over a wide discrepancy between starting salaries among school districts.

THIS SCHOOL YEAR, starting salaries range from a high of $20,222 in Fairfield to a low of $11,497 in Colebrook. Average starting salaries in Hartford County range $1,800 to $2,000 higher than Windham County.

Teachers have been denied a "decade wage," O'Neill said, and "that period of denial must come to an end."

In addition to higher salaries, the Governor's Commission on Equity and Excellence recommended higher standards for teacher education, certification and career development.

"The future of Connecticut is entrusted to our teachers, and that awesome responsibility requires that teaching standards and salaries be raised," O'Neill said.

The education commission, made up of leaders in education, business, industry and government, said there is

Bond denied suspect linked to '79 killings

HARTFORD — A federal magistrate has denied bail to a Wells Fargo robbery suspect, calling him a paid member in a Puerto Rican terrorist group who took part in the slaying of two U.S. sailors in 1979.

U.S. Magistrate F. Owen Eagan ordered Orlando Gonzalez-Claudio, 38, held until trial in the $7 million heist, which the government claims was a "prelude to regional hearings starting later this week on whether the General Assembly should meet in special session to spend the surplus."

WOODBRIDGE (UPI) — A Bridgeport man was charged with drunken driving and manslaughter with a motor vehicle following a three-car accident that killed a Cheshire man and injured six other people.

Massachusetts ready to repeal surtax in '85

By William Poole United Press International

BOSTON — Repeal of the state's decade-old 7½ percent surcharge on its income tax seems all but certain this year as a result of the latest action by a legislative panel.

The Senate Ways and Means Committee helped sound the death knell of the surcharge Monday when it called for immediate repeal of the 10-year-old levy, which currently collects about $250 million in annual surtax revenue.

The House already has passed a bill that would phase out the surtax over three years and provide a sliding scale of income tax liability similar to the Senate proposal.

McGovern said the assumption by the state of the federal excise on cigarettes would bring in an additional $55 million in revenue and the state tax on smokeless tobacco another $2 million.

SAT scores rise in state

Senator Gerald N. Tirozzi said in a statement announcing the scores. "We are no longer behind the national average in mathematics and we maintain a strong lead over the national average verbal scores," said Tirozzi, who said the increases reflect the state's efforts to promote higher standards in schools.

The College Board said the participation rate is the most significant factor in evaluating the scores because in general when the percentage of students taking the test is higher the average scores are lower.

Elm Water troubles spark anger

By George Lovng Herald Correspondent

COVENTRY — The Town Council Monday again postponed action on the troubled Elm Water Co. because the town attorney did not finish drafting a legal opinion on the matter. The delay prompted sharp criticism from both council members and residents served by the utility.

"I am really upset," said Councilwoman Sandra Pesce. She said Town Attorney Abbot Schwebel "appears to have taken a nonchalant attitude."

About 15 residents stormed out of the special meeting Monday night after the council voted to discuss the matter at its next regular meeting, on Oct. 7. The matter had also been tabled at the Sept. 15 council session.

"This town doesn't have its act together," Maureen Danehy yelled as she and others left the room. Councilman Michael Cleary said the council was prepared to act Monday, but had to postpone any action until it received guidance from Schwebel. He said there could be "a tremendous amount of liability" if the council acted on its own.

Cleary said the sentiment of council members is to forgive $52,000 owed to the town by the estate of George Koppelman, the owner of the utility until his death in April 1983. The current court-appointed manager, John Wittenzeller, has offered to purchase the company if the town abates the $52,000 in back taxes.

A West Hartford probate judge has set a Nov. 1 deadline for the case to be resolved. If the town does not act on the tax lien by then, the town of Coventry could be ordered to foreclose and accept ownership of the property.

Titanic mission illustrates gains in sea technology

By Gino Del Guercio United Press International

WOODS HOLE, Mass. (UPI) — The discovery and dramatic photography of the sunken luxury liner Titanic 2½ miles below the surface of the North Atlantic Ocean marks the start of a new era in undersea exploration.

No longer must oceanographers descend into the crushing depths aboard miniature submarines. Now they can use platforms containing still and television cameras from surface ships. Riding aboard the platforms will be small robots, which descend to the ocean floor to take close-up 3-D pictures and bottom samples.

THE TINY MANNED SUBMARINES, which have been the mainstay of ocean exploration since the early 1970s, made some dramatic discoveries, but are tediously slow in their ability to map the ocean bottom. Scientists must climb aboard, dive to great depths, remain on the bottom for only a short time, and then return.

Ballard expects to survey a 120-mile section of the mid-oceanic ridge between San Diego and Manzanillo in December. Using this new equipment, in 20 days Ballard will chart a section as large as that which has been explored in the last 12 years.

Tales of tragedy confirm great risk of hitchhiking

DEAR ABBY: "Tama Reader" asked, "What measures can a driver take to reduce the risk of being picked up by a hitchhiker?"

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Your answer was 100 percent correct. In essence, the hitchhiker is saying with his thumb: "You pay for the car, the gas, the upkeep and maintenance, the insurance, drive me where I want to go as far as you can, but if you have an accident, I may sue you!"

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago, my son, who was 21 at the time, had just re-enlisted for his second term with the U.S. Navy. He wanted to make it his career. He picked up a hitchhiker, a decent-looking young man about his age who said he was going home to visit his mother.

DEAR ABBY: I was happy to read your advice: "Never pick up a hitchhiker!" You should have stressed more emphatically that the person who is "hitching" a free ride also puts him/herself at risk.

DEAR ABBY: I think it was lousy of you to advise people to never pick up a hitchhiker. I've hitched rides all over the United States and Canada, met some wonderful people and seen a lot of territory I never would have had if I had not been picked up.

DEAR READER: No. Diverticulosis is an exceedingly common disease of middle and late adulthood. It is unlikely to have been a factor in causing your diverticular disease.

A special state exposition and a number of country fairs will be held in New England's top attractions during the weekend of Sept. 27-29.

Checks should be made payable to International Education and sent to geography tour, care of Dr. Thomas Lewis, professor of geography, Lowe Building, MCC.

DEAR DR. GOTT: For more than two years I have taken a Gris-PEG for a fungus under my toenails. A recent proctoscopy detected diverticular disease in my colon. Could the Gris-PEG be a factor?

DEAR READER: No. Diverticulosis is an exceedingly common disease of middle and late adulthood. It is unlikely to have been a factor in causing your diverticular disease.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Does gas in the colon cause diverticular disease? What is the recommended treatment for the disease?

DEAR READER: I think that outward pressure from intestinal gas may contribute to diverticulosis. That is not one of the current theories, of which there are many.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have been a diabetic for 25 years and was on a regular NPH insulin regimen. I recently had a diabetic reaction. I'm now on Humulin N and R insulin and have had several reactions—not bad, but reactions nevertheless.

Cousins gather at reunion

Few who came for the reunion were able to go exploring in their old homes. Most homes are owned and occupied by other families but others have been torn down. In their place are garden apartments, Cape-style homes or a piece of the highway.

IT WAS the demolition of a home in 1957 which gave rise to this weekend's reunion.

The impetus came from Katherine Cheney Chappell. She lived in a home on the south side of Hartford Road until she was 12. The building was demolished to make way for what is now Interstate Route 384. She moved with her parents, George and Mary Cheney, to Farmington.

"It was a really wrenching experience. They put a road right through my house," she said.

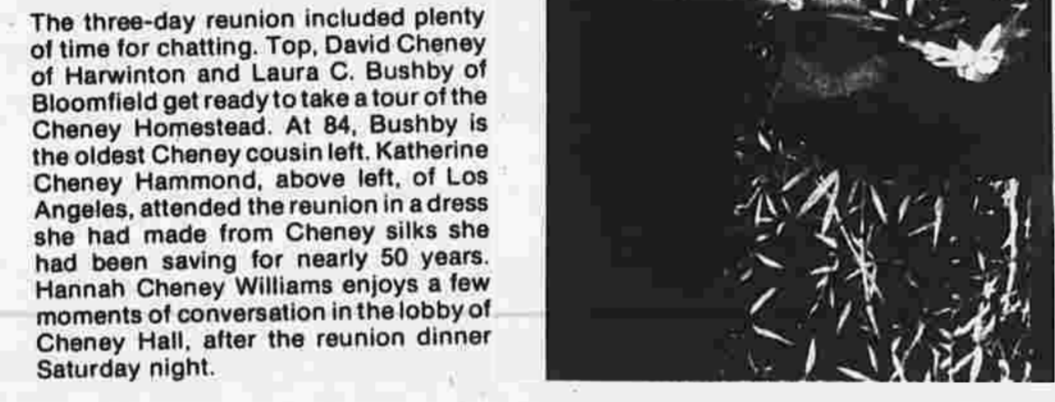

Saturday. "I felt that I'd missed something, that if we stayed here I would have gotten to know more about my family."

So it was that her parents, Mary and George Cheney Jr., organized this reunion. "This was given to me by my father's side of the family," said Phyllis Cheney of Noank, another coordinator.

"Cousin George," who is also "Grandpa George," was particularly proud of the smallest of the reunion guests, his grandson (and namesake) George.

BACK HOME in Kennebunkport, Maine, the little flaxen-haired tyke is known simply as Bud. But as soon as he hits Manchester, "Just Plain Bud" is replaced by George W. Cheney IV.

"It's unbelievable. I think this town knows more about Cheney industries than the Cheneys," he said.

The three-day reunion included plenty of time for chatting. Top, David Cheney of Harwinton and Laura C. Busby of Bloomfield get ready to take a tour of the Cheney Homestead. At 84, Busby is the oldest Cheney cousin left. Katherine Cheney Hammond, above left, of Los Angeles, attended the reunion in a dress she had made from Cheney silks she had been saving for nearly 50 years. Hannah Cheney Williams enjoys a few moments of conversation in the lobby of Cheney Hall, after the reunion dinner Saturday night.

Cheney answers listed

1. John Cheney arrives on the Lion.
2. Ruth Cheney and Charles Goodwin, married 1912.
3. In an oak tree on the Great Lawn.
4. The "flier" was Douglas Hume, a well-known levitator who could lift people with mental exertion, and cause furniture to fly around the room. He was a great favorite of the first Ward Cheney. The story goes that when Anne Wells Cheney was visiting her uncle back in 1829, Hume caused the dining table to rise into the air and float about the room. It rotated in mid-air, and came down so that Anne, then 3, could not reach her pudding. Hume is supposed to have levitated the table again, twisted it back to its original position, and set it down so that Cousin Annie could once again spoon up her dessert.
5. Right up until last year, roller skates were attached to the lower limbs of some trees on the Elm Street side of Cheney Hall. These branches were so long that they were scraping back and forth on the pavement. The roller skates were to allow the branches to slide back and forth easily, and prevent them from breaking. Family members don't know who first installed the skates.
6. Miss Ginny A' Jones and Black Spider were games played every Thanksgiving by the Cheney cousins.
7. Charles Cheney II took Mary E. Bell DeFreyne as his second wife. Seth Leslie Cheney married Katherine Bell.
8. Charles Cheney, 1803-1874.
9. Electa Lillian Cheney Goodman refused to go to the performance. Thomas Langdon Cheney said Saturday that his grandfather, Knight Dexter Cheney, was thrown out of school for attending a Sunday Bernhardt performance.
10. Elizabeth Cheney married Clifford Cheney; George Cheney married Mary Cheney; and James Cheney married Harriet Cheney. There were other cousins' liaisons, but these are the only ones where both spouses had the Cheney name.
11. Throughout the reunion, Frank Cheney Platt was claiming to be his own third cousin, because his parents were second cousins.
12. It was "Meddlesome Marjory," Marjory Bacon Cheney.
13. It was the eulogy to Ednah Dow.
14. Ellen Waitstill Cheney (known in the family as Nell) married Alexander Lambert in 1895; Knight Dexter Cheney married Ruth Lambert in 1896.
15. General Sherwood Cheney.
16. Louis Richmond Cheney.

The religious right Mainstream churches at odds with fundamentalists

By Judi Hosson United Press International

WASHINGTON — Civil libertarians and mainstream churches are sounding alarms over attempts by the religious right to influence public policy, judicial appointments and who gets a job in the federal government.

"The religious right owns this administration," said Rev. Charles Bergstrom, director of government affairs for the Lutheran Council. "They are making headway" in challenging the separation of church and state.

While represented most visibly in the past by such leaders as the Rev. Jerry Falwell of the Moral Majority, there are others in the religious right actively working together and individually, to further the movement.

The American Coalition for Traditional Values, a major fundamentalist Christian group founded last year, maintains it has made progress in promoting policies encouraging traditional values of family, home and church.

Curtis Maynard, administrative assistant to ACTV's leader, Tim LaHaye, said he believes the movement has allies within the administration.

"It's not a question of trying to push Christianity on the government, but it's a matter of standing up for the moral value system the country started with," Maynard said.

Those raising questions about the religious right's influence, however, were particularly concerned about Christopher Sununu, a political appointee at the Treasury Department, who recently wrote a scathing letter to a man who complained about the distribution of a speech with religious overtones by the Education Department.

Gerald Lieb had sent his complaint to the Education Department's regional office in Denver. Sundseth, a self-described Christian activist based in Washington and in a different cabinet department, got hold of the correspondence and fired off a reply.

"THIS COUNTRY WAS FOUNDED BY Christians who were escaping the same kind of small-minded tripe you espouse," Sundseth wrote, signing "You are a truly amazing, pathetic creature."

Sundseth told reporters he did not remember how he got Lieb's postcard complaining about an Education Department official raising questions about religion in government.

Two members of President Reagan's own cabinet have taken on the issue of religion and the Religion and politics have long been bedfellows, and the religious right has had substantial influence in this administration. That distresses John Buchanan, at right, former Congressman and now chairman of People for the American Way, who wants the Republican Party to disassociate itself from the fundamentalist groups.

Dean Kelley, director of religious liberty at the National Council of Churches in New York, a moderate group of church organizations, noted there has been a "greater degree of overt religiosity of the fundamentalist character in public office recently, more so than I remember coming all at once at any time before."

Freedom of Information Act "to find letters of antireligious zealots."

"I was a Christian before I came to government," Sundseth said. United Press International in a recent telephone interview. "I don't think I have to quit being a Christian because I'm in government."

An Education Department spokesman said the department regretted that Lieb received the "unpleasant" reply, and expressed doubt that the Freedom of Information Act had been used to find Lieb's letter.

Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., called on the Treasury Department to investigate Sundseth's actions.

"Our position is that we can expose" these incidents, she said. "Not a whole lot can be done about it when the administration lets it go on."

The Sundseth case and the controversial speech that preceded it are not the only incidents raising questions about religion in government.

Two members of President Reagan's own cabinet have taken on the issue of religion and the separate recent speeches to the Roman Catholic Knights of Columbus, Education Secretary William Bennett and Attorney General Edwin Meese called for an end to government disdain for religion.

Meese, the nation's top law enforcement official, warned of a threat to religious liberty and said the Reagan administration will resist "this idea of religious nihilism as a principle of government."

Bennett, in his speech, attacked the Supreme Court for "misguided rulings that have removed religious influences from the public schools."

He said the administration would work to nullify the effect of a recent Supreme Court ruling limiting public aid to parochial schools.

Asserting that Catholics had been the targets of discrimination in the past, he said religious intolerance has given way to "a new aversion to religion."

Rams defense prominent in Seattle sacking

SEATTLE (UPI) — Despite impressive statistics, Doug Reed figured Dave Krieg would have a difficult time against the Los Angeles Rams Monday night.

Krieg was the top-rated passer in the NFL last week and the Seattle Seahawks were 2-0. But last night, Krieg was sacked seven times for 61 yards and intercepted twice as the Rams downed Seattle 35-24.

"It was not a surprise to me," said Reed, the Rams defensive end who had a game-high three sacks for minus-24 yards. "If it happens in practice, it's going to come in the game. We're a bad group of guys, so it's really hard to keep us out."

"We shut down the run, too," Seattle's Curt Warner ran for just 32 yards and Seattle managed only 44 yards rushing. Meanwhile, LA's Eric Dickerson made his 185th rushing attempt, completing 12 of 24 attempts, including a 19-yard scoring toss to wide receiver Bobby Duckworth. Krieg spent much of the evening on his back but still managed to complete 23-of-46 passes for 267 yards and a touchdown.

Dieter Brock, the former Canadian Football League quarterback also proved he can play in the NFL, throwing for 203 yards and completing 12-of-24 attempts, including a 19-yard scoring toss to wide receiver Bobby Duckworth. Krieg spent much of the evening on his back but still managed to complete 23-of-46 passes for 267 yards and a touchdown.

"Eric had training camp the first three quarters," Robinson said. "The fourth quarter was regular season for him. Seattle was after Dickerson all night and Eric wore them down."

Rams coach John Robinson said his star running back caught up on missed pre-season work during the first three periods.

Three left in tourney

They're down to three teams in the Manchester Rec Department Fall Six-Pitch Tournament. The Main Pub advanced to tonight's winner's bracket game at Fitzgerald Field by blanking Nassiff Arms, 2-0. The Pub faces Lathrop Insurance at 6 p.m., with the winner assured of a berth in Tuesday night's finals.

Nassiff rebounded to eliminate J.C. Penney, 9-4, in Monday's second game. Nassiff will play at 7:30 p.m. tonight against the loser of the 6 p.m. contest. The victor of the late game goes to tomorrow.

Scott Gayton issued a five-minute shutout to pace Main Pub. Ed White and Dan Socha led the hitting attack with two safeties apiece.

Nassiff finally broke out of its offensive slump by erupting with a five-run sixth inning rally to oust J.C. Penney. Kevin Comeau struck three hits for the winners, while Paul Frenette hammered a two-run home run and a single. Rick Nicola and Steve Cianci also added two hits each for Nassiff.

Ralph Banning and John Bass cracked three hits apiece for the losers, while Ray Sullivan and Ed Tyska contributed two each.

Cardinals' Terry Pendleton (9) gets a hug from Tito Landrum after St. Louis beat Pittsburgh Monday night, 5-4. Pendleton's double in eighth inning drove in the winning runs.

Martin incidents unresolved as Yanks back at Stadium

By Mike Tully United Press International

NEW YORK — Having introduced the lie detector test to the national pastime, the New York Yankees return home tonight without dignity or much hope of contention.

Phil Niekro will be aiming for career victory No. 309 when he pitches his first home appearance since manager Billy Martin became involved in two separate scandals over the weekend.

The most serious of the incidents involved Martin and right-hander Ed Whittson, Whittson's lawyer, Tom Reich, said the pitcher's version of the fight differed from Martin's, and he added his client was willing to take a lie detector test.

It was learned, Martin, who suffered a broken right arm in the fight with Whittson, will continue as manager through the remainder of the regular season Oct. 6.

A club spokesman said Whittson, 26, is disappointed to have been signed to a $4.4 million free-agent contract last winter, was not listed in the club's starting rotation through Thursday.

"Not until all the facts are ascertained will there be any judgments about any actions," a team official said.

Although principal owner George Steinbrenner has not fined anyone, he is disturbed that several other Yankee players, including Dave Righetti, Dale Berra, Ricky Henderson and Rich Bordi, are known to have been in the bar during at least one of the incidents.

"As much as I'm concerned about the fights, I'm even more upset about the curfew and the fact so many players were in the bar that late at night before a day game," Steinbrenner said from Tampa, Fla. "Otherwise I don't have anything else to say until I get the reports."

Steinbrenner sent General Manager Clyde King and Woody Woodward, the vice president for baseball administration, to Baltimore to investigate the circumstances of the fight between Martin and Whittson.

"I'm not going to do anything at all before I know all the facts," Steinbrenner said. "I'm not going to do anything until I have a chance to talk to Billy. I intend to do that sometime later this week."

Even before Friday night's incident, when Martin got involved in a shoving match with a young man, report developed that he would be relieved as manager at the end of the season and would be assigned other duties for next year.

Hall of Fame membership to swell to 30 Friday

For half a century, has been selected for this community-oriented honor.

Although tickets were not available until after Labor Day, a sell-out crowd of 400 is expected. Due to several cancellations a limited number of tickets will be available at the door.

Notes on the cuff

Most popular age bracket of inductees, including this year, is 60-69 with eight including Bycholski and Vincek of the 1985 group. Seven others were in their 70's, five in their 80's, four each in their 40's and 50's and two over 90.

Bob Digan will emcee Friday night's program and for the second straight year there will be no guest speaker, the honorees sharing the spotlight. Also, a head table will be eliminated and as in the past all honorees will sit with their families at choice tables.

The year 1985 will be one to remember for Buck Bycholski who was inducted earlier into the Greater Hartford Twilight Baseball Hall of Fame and will enter the local shrine Friday night.

Committee members will handle the presentations to the new Hall of Famers and the special award winners.

Cardinals exciting

One Man's opinion: St. Louis would be a more exciting team to watch in the World Series than the New York Mets because of their speed. The stolen base is still one of the most exciting moves in baseball and the Cardinals have a quintet of fly boys in Vince Coleman, Willie McGee, Lonnie Smith, Andy Van Slyke and Terry Pendleton.

Patience paid off for Dave Kaplan. Runner-up to Scott Gottlieb in the 1984 Rec Tennis Tournament, Kaplan came back this season to annex the singles honors, winning all in straight sets. He's a former champion playing out of the Neipisic Tennis Club.

Canny Gambolati, trainer of Spend a Buck, recently purchased a 1300-acre farm "in Cooper City, north of Miami. The trainer of the Kentucky Derby winner will see his 36th birthday Sunday. The horse, in the running for 3-year-old honors, has been retired to stud.

Mets step sprightly at start

By Joe Ciolini United Press International

PHILADELPHIA — With their hopes for the NL East pennant dependant on a successful 10-game road trip, Gary Carter made sure the Mets began on the right foot.

"Tonight was a big win, a big boost," said Carter, whose 30th home run of the year in the third inning led the Mets to a 4-1 victory Monday night.

"Coming off losing two of three over the weekend to Pittsburgh at Shea, we feel we have to have a good trip and we're off to a great start," Carter added.

The triumph leaves the Mets three games behind the St. Louis Cardinals in the N.L. East.

The Mets play the Phillies today, then go to Chicago for two games, to Pittsburgh for a three-game weekend series and finish the trip with three games against the Cardinals at Busch Stadium. They finish the season at home against Montreal.

Mets' outfielder George Foster said the team had a players-only meeting Monday to discuss the road trip.

"We just let everybody know that even though we're three games out, we had 13 games left to go and we've had some good road trips," said Foster, who walked and scored the Mets' third run in the fourth inning on Mookie Wilson's double. Carter had put the Mets up 2-0 with his two-run homer in the third.

The Phillies got their lone run on Mike Schmidt's 30th home run in the fourth inning before New York finished the scoring when pinch hitter Len Dykstra walked and scored on Wally Backman's double in the sixth inning.

Schmidt's home run marked the 11th season he has hit 30 or more homers.

New York's Keith Hernandez said the Mets can't be concerned about the Cardinals, who came from behind Monday night to beat Pittsburgh, 5-4.

"We can't worry about what St. Louis does until we play them," he said. "They have the schedule advantage (because they play most of the rest of their games at home), but we just have to win and play one game at a time."

Rick Aguilera, 9-6, went six innings for the win for New York and Roger McDowell finished up for his 16th save of the season.

Fred Toliver, 0-2, started in place of John Denny, who came to the ball park with a 101-degree fever.

WE DELIVER

If you haven't received your Manchester Herald 5 p.m. weekdays or 7:30 a.m. Saturdays, (Buck) Bycholski, Henry (Hank) Vincek, (Yosh) Vincek will be joined posthumously by Herman Bronkie and John Falkowski.

It was six years ago that the sports shrine was established to pay tribute to men and women who have distinguished themselves in the world of sport on local, state, national or worldwide competition.

It's not been an easy job by any means for the selection committee to decide each year since 1980 on its annual choices.

The number of inductees each year has varied, from nine in the baptismal year to three each in the next two years and five for the last three years.

The original list of nominees numbered over 100. This year the 11-man committee scoured a sheet that contained nearly 60 names. Consideration was given to nominees of more than 300 of the 400 present at last year's dinner, plus a listing that has been reviewed since 1980.

The winners were the top three from a list of 10 among living athletes and the top two from a list of five of deceased one-time local sports figures.

Since the local shrine was born, only one woman, former national No. 1 duckpin bowler in the United States, Cathy Dyak, has been chosen.

Tigers 2, Red Sox 1

Detroit (49-47) won from Boston (53-42) 2-1. Detroit's Steve Carlton pitched a strong game, allowing only one run on four hits and striking out eight. Boston's Dwight Gooden pitched well, but couldn't get the job done.

Dodgers 5, Astros 3

Los Angeles (52-44) won from Houston (49-47) 5-3. Los Angeles' Steve Garvey hit a home run and drove in two runs. Houston's Nolan Ryan pitched a solid game, but the Astros couldn't score enough.

SCOREBOARD

Take the next football barrier to be broken in the pole vault, multiply by the scorecard position of Tommy Herr, add the highest numbered word that can be carried in a golf bag, and subtract the number of seconds a basketball team has to get the ball past midcourt.

High performance tires increase in popularity

The fastest-growing market for passenger tires is the high-performance tire segment according to General Tire. There are basically two categories classified as high performance tires — performance appearance and speed-rated. The largest segment is performance appearance — those tires whose profile is 70 series or lower, have raised white-lettered sidewalls and either metric or P-metric sizing.

Speed-rated tires also fall in this category but there are a number of differences between this class and regular street tires or performance appearance tires.

Although similar in appearance, the differences lie in construction. High performance speed-rated tires are made with special rubber compounds and tread patterns, stiffer sidewalls and more sophisticated belt arrangements to handle the speed and handling requirements. These tires have excellent traction, cornering power and car-handling performance and the tires can perform safely at the vehicle's maximum operating limit.

The speed ratings currently being used are established by the European Tyre and Rim Technical organization. They take into account speed and load factors. The four major ratings are: S — up to 112 m.p.h.; T — up to 119 m.p.h.; H — up to 130 m.p.h.; and V — over 130 m.p.h.

General Tire recently introduced two high performance passenger tires for the American market — the XP2000, the first T-rated tire to be built by a domestic tire manufacturer and the XP2000H, their H-rated tire. †

Aid for auto rattles

Hear a rattle or two? Begin by checking the rattle-prone areas of your car. A bit of glue may solve your problem.

Is the taillight lens juggling? A bead of Elmer's Six-All will help fill the gap and hold the lens in place.

Check the metal trim. If it's loose, insert some of this new glue between the car and trim and press down. If the trim pops up, tape down with masking tape for approximately six hours. Use a dry cloth to clean adhesive before it dries.

Do your repairs when you are finished using the car for the day. This will allow the adhesive to cure. In fact, it is a good idea to extend the repair time a bit longer than overnight, if possible, so the glue can reach its full strength, particularly if your car has a rocky road to travel.

Polish your profits:

Run a community car wash & wax event

An ideal way to raise money for your community group is to organize and run a car wash. With a little organization, 20 to 30 ambitious individuals can gross a few hundred dollars on a sunny Saturday with little or no cash outlay. The community car wash can be either a one-shot event or a weekly activity, depending on your group's needs. Here are some tips from Borden's Car Care Products Group to make your community car wash a huge success and a great deal of fun.

Choose a location that allows you access to both water and electricity. School or church groups can use their respective parking lots. Should these not be available, get permission to use a portion of your local shopping center or supermarket. An unused area of a service station on a busy street makes a good location, and a telephone call to the gasoline company that owns it can usually get your group the necessary permission.

Once you have set the location, your next and critical step is the pre-wash publicity. Word of mouth among your friends, family and neighbors can go a long way toward insuring a successful car wash. Send a picture to local newspapers with five or six crew members dressed in overalls, carrying buckets, sponges, vacuum cleaners and towels and posed next to a car. Perhaps a well-known local personality can be your first publicly announced customer. Enclose a short news release about your group and the car-wash project. Specify the date, time, place and price. Remember to set a rain date. Send a similar story to radio, and, if available, television stations in the area for use on their community calendars. Finally, have handbills mimeographed and distribute them at the supermarkets and shopping centers in the area.

The final publicity should be done the day of the car wash. Prepare a couple of large signs reading "Service Club Car Wash Just Ahead!! Price $2.00." Check with your local police as to whether you can mount them on various telephone poles around town.

So much for publicity, now for the actual car-wash work. Again, the key to success is to be well organized. Timing is also important. Aside from the fact that the customer hates waiting for his car, the more cars you wash per hour, the more money you will make.

When the customer drives in, he should stop his car at your first station, the interior cleaning area where the car should be dusted and vacuumed. This area should be well separated from the washing area, since vacuum cleaners will be used, and water and electricity are a dangerous combination.

The window washers then move the car to the next station, the washing area. To save time, the exterior of the car should be washed while the interior windows are also being cleaned. You will need three separate washing stations to save even more time and not let cars and customers back up. These stations ideally require a hose, but if no hookup is available, buckets and water will do adequately. A good quality detergent solution, such as Borden's Rain Dance® Car Wash in liquid or powder, washes dirt off quickly and leaves a beautiful, shiny, clean finish. In addition, you will require a mountain of water-absorbing towels which crew members can borrow from home. A hard long-bristled, short-handled brush will help you do a good job on the wheels.

If you can find an old-fashioned wringer for wringing out the wet towels, great. If not, you simply use a little more elbow grease. Another handy product for this project is "No. 7" Tar and Bug Remover which will remove road and tar and oil resistant to soap and water.

Crews should be made up to man each wash station, and each person should have an assigned task. To illustrate: The tallest person washes the roof; the shortest washes the wheels. One person on each side does the doors, fenders and windows on the outside. Another cleans the hood and grill, while still another does the rear of the car. When the wash job is completed, the car is dried in the same manner. Then, before the car is turned over to the customer, one crew member, acting as foreman, checks the car from top to bottom. One person should be assigned to man the cash. Remember to have $10.00 worth of change in hand at the beginning of your venture.

For the very ambitious, you might want to offer a complete wash and wax package. Bear in mind that waxing takes more work and time, but the financial rewards can make it worth your while. For this job, it pays to use a high-performance product like Rain Dance car wax. It goes on easily and leaves a shining, long-lasting, water-beading finish.

If the weather is bright and sunny and you have done a good job on the publicity, you will have a very busy day. Be sure to have relief workers available as washing cars may be fun, but it does take work.

Eventually the different station areas will want to take a well-earned break. With two or three stations operating efficiently, you should be able to wash fifteen to twenty cars an hour.

Remember the key to a successful community car wash is to be as organized as possible. This cooperative venture is a great way to raise money and give your group a deserved sense of unity and purpose. Plan, organize and work hard, and you will be assured of a successful day. †

Environmental Protection Agency reminds:

Car care means clean air

It's time to think about car maintenance again! Let's look back at the wear and tear of the summer peak driving months and prepare for the demands of winter. In many areas, fair weather for outdoor repairs and tune-ups is already waning. The promotion of October as "Car Care Month" offers you the resources of commercial and public interests committed to problem prevention and detection. You can save money, reduce risks of unforeseen repairs, extend a car's useful life, and improve the air you breathe.

We have all experienced the inescapable frustration of being surrounded by an exhaust cloud left for us to inhale by a passing car or truck with some apparent mechanical failure. This experience can leave concerned motorists cynical about air quality objectives required of them, yet ignored by indifferent offenders. The truth is that you and your family are primary recipients of your own car's exhaust gases. Carbon monoxide (CO) is lethal in a closed garage. Carbon particles and hydrocarbons (HC) are caustic irritants when inhaled in any of 400 petrochemical combinations. Most exposures to exhaust gases occur when concentrations are at their highest — during cold start and idle. These are often the times you are entering, exciting, or stationary in a vehicle, least protected by safe, sealed compartments and the car's forward motion. So, pity the obvious polluters, for they are hurting themselves most of all. Car Care Month can start you on the road to annual maintenance checks that will improve the air you and your family breathe.

A survey conducted for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency found that 26 percent of the light duty vehicle fleet had their major emission control devices tampered, altered, or disabled intentionally. Also, 14 percent of the gasoline in vehicles is designed to run on unleaded. Tampering and misfueling are illegal because they are abusive to our environment. They are misconceived because they are more costly in the long run than proper vehicle maintenance.

The types of tampering most often done by both motorists and their mechanics include removing exhaust gas recirculation systems, disabling air pumps, removing vacuum lines, punching out gas inlet restrictors, removing idle limiter caps, altering air/fuel mixtures, and replacing catalytic converters with straight pipes. Their reasons, including attempts to boost horsepower, performance, or fuel efficiency, are consistently discredited by objective and informed study. The Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association states that misfueling costs the vehicle operator 19 cents a gallon in reduced fuel economy, engine performance, and increased maintenance.

Misfueling will require more frequent (2-6 times) oil and spark plug replacements. Misfueling can ruin a catalytic converter or clog an exhaust air flow, creating a safety hazard. Removing the catalytic converter reduces needed engine back pressure and leads to a 400 to 600 percent increase in air pollutants. Unhooking electronic engine controls resets all operations into default modes that take dollars out of your pocket every driving day because of decreased fuel economy. The proper operation of some emission controls depends on an additional supply of air. These systems are designed into the engine and are critically tied to performance. Yet these systems are driven by only a one-quarter horsepower air pump. It is a misconception that removing hoses, lines, or belts will bring any substantial increase in horsepower.

Your car is designed to run best when it is polluting least. A simple tailpipe test, available at automobile dealer service departments, many repair shops, and all state emission testing facilities, identifies parts of the engine system in need of maintenance. In the opinion of the American Automobile Association, emission testing is one of the most efficient diagnostic tools available to you at low cost.

A GLEAMING FINISH on your car provides the final touch to proper car care.

The tailpipe test identifies levels of idle HC and CO. High CO indicates rich air/fuel mixtures, blocked air filters, a defective choke at idle speeds, or faulty carburetors. High HC indicates an ignition, vacuum or valve problem at idle speeds, or simple spark plug misfire. Fluctuations of HC and CO tell you there may be carburetor imbalances.

Car Care Fairs are being promoted nationwide during October. Look for one in your area and inquire about free emission tests and maintenance checks. Commercial shops and automobile parts manufacturers are offering their own discounted services, and the American Lung Association, American Automobile Association, and U.S. Environmental Protection Agency are providing assistance in many U.S. cities.

Prepare your car for another year's reliable driving and help clean up the air you breathe.

MANCHESTER HERALD, Tuesday, Sept. 24, 1985

You will pay later for car neglect now

"It all started when my owner began neglecting me, Doctor. My hoses were rotting, my air filter was filthy, and it had been over two years since he'd bought me a new set of spark plugs. Then came that terrible night. We were driving through the rain. I began coughing and sputtering and finally could carry on no further. I broke down right there.

"My owner didn't know what to do; there was no one in sight. Finally, he abandoned me to go for help. "He wasn't gone long before two men, who seemed to come out of nowhere, made their assault upon me. They knocked in my windows, stripped me of my wheels and tires, my stereo, and robbed me of my owner's valuables. By the time my owner returned I was but a fragment of my former self. He was shocked at what he saw.

"In spite of all my problems, though, I'm going to try to look on the bright side. He's sorry now and wants me back in good working condition. It's really going to be expensive to repair the damage that's already been done. I only hope that he's learned his lesson and will be more aware of my needs in the future. A little preventive maintenance is all I ask for."

When your car breaks down on a lonely road, there may be little you can do but raise the hood, tie a handkerchief to the antenna and walk... or, better yet, wait for help.

You can help prevent future car trouble with regular checkups and maintenance. Don't wait for symptoms to worsen before looking into the problem.

How do you know when your car needs attention? You don't have to be a mechanic to know when it's time to see a mechanic.

Be aware of the following:

- Engine: Hard to start, uses gas excessively, sluggish, smokes or noisy?
- Transmission: Slips on shifting, noisy, shifts erratically?
- Battery: Won't hold a charge?
- Exhaust: Hisses, rumbles, roars?
- Steering and suspension: Wanders, pulls, shimmies, shakes or bounces?
- Lights: Out of focus, burned out, turn signals inoperative?
- Windshield wipers: Smear, streak, chatter?
- Body: Rusted, paint deteriorated?

If any of the above apply to your trusted car (or if it has been a while since you've had your car in for service), get it checked today. You might save yourself a long walk, a missed appointment or just plain frustration!

Practical pointers for contented cars

For safe, trouble-free and cheaper driving, you'll be more likely to keep your car purring contentedly if you follow these "Ten Commandments":

1. Every other gasoline fill-up, check your engine oil. U.S. car-makers now generally recommend, for most cars for most driving conditions, oil of S.A.E. (for Society of Automotive Engineers) 5W-30 viscosity, or flowability. The low number with the "W" designates an oil that flows easily in the cold. The higher number with the W means the oil lets you have it both ways: it also retains body in the heat.

With the trend to smaller engines running harder and hotter for more power, there's increasing focus on "man-made" synthetic oils like Mobil 1. They can out-perform a conventional "natural" lubricant because of the way they're made.

To make a conventional lubricant, you start with crude oil. A series of refinements removes most unwanted substances—but not all; wax, for example. You end up with several thousand kinds of hydrocarbons, working together more or less.

In contrast, a synthetic is tailor-made for a specific lubrication job, being assembled from a few chemical "building blocks" chosen for special capabilities. It's better at retaining its rated viscosity in extreme temperatures. It has no wax, and lubricates with less contamination, engine wear and friction, thus increasing fuel mileage or horsepower. Synthetic Mobil 1 comes in two viscosities: (1) 5W-30, used by more than half the winners through most of 1985 in Sports Car Club of America's endurance races for show-room stock cars, the kind you can buy from your dealer; (2) new Mobil 1 Formula 15W-50, for high-performance cars, as used by Roberto Guerrero in finishing third in the 1985 Indianapolis 500.

OIL PAN IS CLEAN (above) after engine ran 128 hours using synthetic Mobil 1 motor oil in test that was double the length required to earn top oil rating. Contrast is provided by oil pan (below) from engine using conventional premium oil.

2. Hold your keys in your hand when you close the door after parking. You'll never have to fish with a wire coat-hanger through a window crack for your keys inside your locked car. And you'll never see three-year-old Joey driving down the hill when you come back from returning whatever you borrowed from your neighbor.

3. Your car waits patiently for you. Give it a friendly look around when you leave it (lights out?) or return (any unexplained puddles under the car? If water has condensed out of the air-conditioner, that's OK. Other water—or leaks of a slippery or colored kind—bear checking). Are the tires up?

4. Before you start, look around inside, too. Gas OK? Brake pedal firm and high? Windshield and windows clean? Rear-vision mirrors adjusted? And fasten your safety-belt.

5. Every other gasoline fill-up, or at least once a week, check radiator fluid level (but not when the engine's hot). Replace once a year—anti-rust inhibitors "wear out."

6. Every other gasoline fill-up or weekly, check tire pressure with a reliable gauge, and keep at recommended pressure for safety, ease of handling, long tire life and fuel economy. Tires often are too soft. Once a month check for cuts and excessive wear, and replace if worn.

7. Every third fill-up, or monthly, check and replenish other fluids as needed—brakes, transmission, windshield-washer, battery if yours isn't a sealed unit. Brush corrosion off battery cables. Do you need to wipe oily dirt off your wiper blades, or replace worn blades?

8. Test lights monthly—front, rear, brake, park, low and high beams, turn indicators.

9. Inspect drive belts, hoses and clamps monthly. Replace if frayed or spongy.

10. Get a check on your air-filter every three months; replace if dirty.

OCTOBER IS

NATIONAL CAR CARE MONTH

Don't overlook transmission check

Three people out of four pump their own gas. That's the good news for the dollar-conscious motorists. The bad news is that most people are negligent about checking their cars, according to Car Care Council.

Among the most neglected under-the-hood-checks is the automatic transmission fluid. It should be looked at every month or two and even more often when the car is subjected to "severe service" driving, definition of which is detailed in car owners manuals.

Procedure for checking the automatic transmission is simple, says the Council. Be sure the engine and transmission are at normal operating temperature. Generally this would be after about 15 or 20 minutes of driving. Park the car on level ground and apply the parking brake, and/or block the wheels. Move the shift lever through all positions and back to Park or Neutral, depending upon the make of the car (again, refer to the owners manual).

Then with the engine idling, remove the dip stick, wipe it off, and reinsert it all the way. Remove it again and note the fluid level with relationship to the "ADD" or "FULL" marks. Add fluid if needed, but do not overfill. Excessive fluid can cause fluid loss or erratic shifting.

Be sure to add fluid of the correct type for your particular car. Check the label on the can for this information.

The fluid should be red, not brown or burned in appearance. If it has lost its clear, red appearance and/or if it has a burned odor, then it should be drained and replaced and a new filter installed.

Consider, too, installation of an auxiliary transmission cooler to prevent further overheating.

Replacement of fluid and filter should be a periodic procedure to protect the transmission.
