Gloria called worse than ice storm

State applies for federal disaster aid

By Mark A. Dupuis

Commuters crept through fog and unlighted highways and intersections, most schools closed and more than 210,000 customers remained without power today as Connecticut struggled from the effects of Hurricane Gloria.

More than 7,500 telephones also remained out of service since Friday when Gloria's winds clocked at 92 mph tore down thousands of trees and blacked out a record 725,000 customers.

As of 8 a.m., Northeast Utilities, the state's biggest power supplier, reported 160,000 customers without service. United Illuminating Co. said about 50,000 of its customers, mostly in southern sections, remained without power.

Southern New England Telephone Co. estimated 7,500 customers without service and expected that figure to rise as businesses reopen and find their lines disconnected.

Northeast Utilities said its repair costs run as high as $20 million and one marina in Clinton estimated damage at $2 million alone.

Northeast also disclosed the utility's insurance to cover storm damage costs had been dropped on July 1 by Lloyds of London.

Northeast Spokesman Emmanuele Ford said today Lloyds of London had decided "it was not cost effective for them" to continue the policy which had a $5 million deductible.

"Of course, we are going ahead and restoring all service and worry about the costs later," said Ford. He could not give an accurate damage estimate but said "it would not be less than $10 million, but nobody's counting."

But the cost of repairs "would become another legitimate expense of doing business" in any future rate hike request, as was the case after the 1973 ice storm, he said.

State police said heavy early fog early today added to problems on roadways where thousands of traffic lights remained knocked out. The interstate's usual traffic slowdown was doubled in many areas, state police said.

Most schools systems that shut down Friday were forced to remain closed today due to a lack of either water, power or both.

The worst power outages the state has seen meant no water in some areas and Gov. William A. O'Neill warned state residents not to expect business as usual in many parts of the state when the workweek began today.

"We are still in a cleanup stage which may, especially in eastern Connecticut, continue for several days," O'Neill said Sunday before leaving for an auto tour of hard-hit areas in the southeastern part of the state.

With power company officials predicting it could take two to four days more to restore service to most customers, local school districts canceled classes for today and state officials continued around-the-clock emergency operations.

"The public should be aware that schools, day care centers and many other public facilities will not have water and will not be in a position to serve them, even if their places of business have reopened," O'Neill said.

At least five storm-related deaths were reported in the aftermath of the hurricane. In West Hartford, David J. McClure, 17, was burned critically when he touched a fallen wire as he picked flowers early Sunday in Hartford's Elizabeth Park. He was airlifted to Brigham and Woman's Hospital in Boston.

A total of 550 utility crews were working to restore power, including 187 from Hydro-Quebec in Canada, and officials said the number of customers without power was reduced by more than 100,000 during the day Sunday.

However, Anthony Castagno, another spokesman for Northeast, said it could take from three to five days to fully restore all power.

The power outages had a "rippling effect," cutting off electricity needed to pump water from wells and refrigeration needed to protect food in both homes and at stores.

O'Neill said the state was providing water to storm victims and consumer protection inspectors were checking stores to check the condition of food supplies.

O'Neill has applied for federal disaster assistance and said damage assessment crews will fan out across the state today to begin putting a dollar-figure on the losses from the hurricane.

Schools closed; water use limited

Damage to power lines in the Manchester area from Friday's hurricane was worse than that done by the famous ice storm of 1973, a spokesman for Northeast Utilities said this morning.

But Alfred Rogers, manager for the power company's Hartford district, said that power would probably be restored throughout town by midnight Tuesday.

Rogers said during a morning news conference at Manchester police headquarters that the six main power feeders into Manchester have already been restored.

He called the damage from Hurricane Gloria, which struck Manchester early Friday afternoon, the worst in the history of the Connecticut Light and Power Co. in this area. The storm brought gusts of wind up to 75 miles per hour and about an inch and a half of rain. The worst of it struck just after 1 p.m., closing almost everything in town, and lasted less than two hours.

Today, a ban on outdoor use of water remained in effect and schools remained closed.

Water is still available at firehouses, and Manchester High School remains open for people who want to take showers. Residents are asked to bring their own containers to the firehouses and soap and towels to the showers.

Rogers said about nine of 27 emergency crews brought in from Quebec will join six CL&P crews in the effort to restore power in town. They will give priority to crucial areas, including the Globe Hollow water-treatment plant, which this morning was still operating on an emergency generator, he said.

Town General Manager Robert B. Weiss said the ban on outdoor use of water will continue as long as the plant is on emergency power. But he stressed that the water is safe to drink.

No water pollution occurred, Weiss said. The weekend ban was imposed on the use of water because of power failures.

In addition to the power failure at Globe Hollow over the weekend, power failed at the Highland Park pumping station. A generator there went into service, failed because of a bad fuel pump, was repaired and put back into service. Power has since been restored.

Rogers asked citizens to keep clear of fallen wires. He said even those that are not carrying power may become charged as repairs are made elsewhere.

"Treat all downed wires as if they are alive," he said.

That caution was one of several issued at the news conference, which was called by utility and municipal officials to assess the situation in town after a weekend of work by emergency crews.

Rogers reminded householders to unplug appliances so that they will not be damaged by a surge of power when power comes back on.

He said fully frozen food will keep for five to seven days in a freezer that has been kept closed during a power failure. But Rogers said some of the food that has been in refrigerators will have to be discarded.

Police Chief Robert Lannan said drivers should treat all intersections at which traffic lights are out as though those intersections had four-way stop signs. Mayor Barbara B. Weinberg said there are about 25 intersections with inoperative lights.

Weiss warned that children face a twofold hazard on the streets.

Besides the danger of live wires, he said, there is the problem that motorists cannot see children behind limbs piled at the side of the road.

He asked citizens to try to keep sidewalks clear if they can do so.

Lannan suggested that whenever a motorist sees a police cruiser or other emergency vehicle stopped in a road, he should assume that something is going on and not drive by it at 35 or 40 miles an hour.

School Superintendent James P. Kennedy said that schools will probably be closed Tuesday as they were today. But he said a decision will be made and announced later.

He said six schools are still without power. They are Verplanck, Martin, Nathan Hale, Bennet, Keeney and the Regional Occupational Training Center.

Kennedy said students need the protection of traffic lights before they can safely walk to school. He

Hurricane claims to inundate insurers

HARTFORD (UPI) — Insurance officials in the city billed as the insurance capital of the world say they expect to be inundated with claims resulting from Hurricane Gloria once independent agents open today.

Spokesmen for Aetna Life & Casualty, The Hartford Insurance Group and The Travelers Cos. said emergency claims centers operating since Gloria struck the Atlantic coast Thursday have assisted in tabulating losses, but have not determined overall damage estimates.

"It hasn't been as big a catastrophe as we first thought," said Henry Savage, a spokesman for Aetna, which called in about 60 people from the Carolinas to handle hurricane-related claims in New England.

"Probably by Monday we'll have a good idea of the extent of the claims," he said Sunday.

Jack Daly of The Hartford also said his company, which opened emergency claims centers in Connecticut and on Long Island, N.Y., would have an idea of the extent of the damages after independent agents are contacted.

"Generally, it's the agents that people approach with claims," he said. "We believe we can handle our claims locally. We have other people on ready alert, but we haven't had to call them in yet."

A "disaster headquarters" was opened in Hartford by The Travelers, said Scott Bushnell, a spokesman for the company.

"Our main interest is to get the claim, get the adjuster out there, and get the money to the people," he said.

Estelle Whiting of West Hartford was among the first people to get a claim check, Bushnell said. A large tree limb plunged through her roof at the height of the storm Friday leaving a hole large enough for several people to climb through.

"Our adjuster was out there this (Sunday) morning and gave her a check for $10,000," Bushnell said.

Emergency claim centers are routinely put into operation when a storm like Gloria is expected, the spokesman said.

Notifying independent agents not to write casualty policies just prior to an expected catastrophe is another procedure routinely undertaken by insurance companies.

"That does sometimes happen before a hurricane or tornado," Savage said. "We would say to the person trying to purchase the policy, 'No, let's do it after the storm.'"

Reagan aides question fairness of new Soviet proposal

By Sean McCormally
United Press International

WASHINGTON — U.S. arms control negotiator Kenneth Adelman said today a Soviet arms control proposal, which is expected to include a 50 percent cut in nuclear weapons, is a "mixed bag" that includes some elements that are "blatantly one-sided."

Adelman said on the NBC "Today" program that the expected Soviet proposal "may have new elements and it's too early to really decide if those elements on balance are positive or negative."

Asked about reports the proposals to be presented at the arms control talks in Geneva, Switzerland, will include a 50 percent reduction in nuclear weapons, Adelman said, "We understand that it is a 50 percent cut ... on a category that would favor them quite a bit. I think that it's important to realize that parts of the Soviet elements ... can be positive. Other parts are just blatantly one-sided."

One such one-sided element, Adelman said, is that the United States scrap its Strategic Defense Initiative, commonly referred to as "Star Wars."

... another interview on the "CBS Morning News," President Reagan's national security adviser, Robert McFarlane, said of the Soviet 50 percent proposal, "Really what the question has to be at the end of the day is this: Will the Soviet Union maintain a unilateral first strike capability while the United States has no corresponding capability or not? Will there be Soviet systems excluded from those reductions but U.S. systems included in an imbalanced way. Will the Soviet Union be entitled to keep building new systems while the United States is forbidden to do so?"

"These are the some of the ambiguities that seem to be masked by a rather appealing headline."

The issue of President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative project — to create a space-based shield against nuclear weapons — has been a major stumbling block in U.S.-Soviet negotiations, but Secretary of State George Shultz said Sunday a shift in Moscow's stance may open "a way of getting around the preconditions."

Shultz, questioned on NBC's "Meet the Press" about the expected Soviet proposal, declined to confirm specifically reports Moscow will suggest a 50 percent cut in nuclear weapons but said it is "clear" the Soviets "will bring forth a proposal dealing with offensive missiles. ... They'll put some counterproposals on the table and we welcome that."

Panama combats refugee problem with 'peace battalion'

By Elizabeth Love
United Press International

DAVID, Panama — The increasing number of Central American refugees fleeing war and collapsing economies have begun to trickle into Panama, and a nervous armed forces wants to defuse what it calls the "immigration bomb" before it can be armed.

Thousands of refugees, mainly from Nicaragua, El Salvador and Guatemala, have immigrated, legally or illegally, to the United States and Mexico over the past six years of continuing violence and unrest in the region.

Thousands of others, mainly poor and rural, have settled in Honduras or Costa Rica, while Guatemala has become the new home of hundreds of middle class and wealthy Nicaraguans and Salvadorans.

Up until now, the flow of refugees into Panama is modest. An estimated 20 to 25 undocumented immigrants slip across the border a day compared to 450 which enter Costa Rica daily, according to Maj. Armando Cordova of the Panamanian Defense Forces.

But Panamanian officials argue Costa Rica is quickly exhausting its ability to absorb the refugees, most of them Nicaraguans.

"Costa Rica is already filling up, and now the drops are going to fall to the other glass, which is Panama," said Gilbert Salazar, general director of Costa Rica Communications.

Cordova calls it "an immigration of crumbs" and fears it will appear to be a serious problem until it is too late.

"We are now seeing cattle being stolen and tomorrow they will attack, kidnap and threaten," he said during a tour with journalists in David, 275 miles northwest of Panama City.

In a move to avoid violence, Armed Forces Chief Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega recently announced the formation of the 700-man "peace battalion" to patrol the border and foster development programs for peasants.

"Panama has the latent threat of an immigration bomb, which some think is already overwhelming Costa Rica," said Noriega.

The battalion will be based in the northern province of Chiriqui, where a tiny guerrilla group sprouted and was quickly quashed in 1968. Some observers speculate the battalion might have another purpose — of reassuring Costa Rica to the north, which has no army.

"Everybody fears the new immigrants."

"That is not cancer, we need manpower in quantity," said a Chiriqui colonel who was asked not to be identified.

The new battalion would turn undocumented immigrants over to immigration authorities for processing, explained Cordova.

Yet Felipe Alberto Estribi, spokesman for the National Unit on Refugees, or ONPAR, said, "There is a great quantity of refugees that are rejected, but we are doing absolutely nothing so that they leave. There are no mechanisms for deportations or exits."

Estribi complained that the United Nations High Commission for Refugees give his organization enough funds to care for just 300 refugees, although ONPAR has granted that status to 1,251 people.

Broken down, the $54,000 granted in aid for food and $13,500 for housing for 1985 come out to about 4 cents a day for meals and 12 cents for shelter for the 300 refugees.

"Only 4 cents? You can't even buy a hot dog with that," said a Nicaraguan refugee woman with a 6-month-old child, who identified herself only as Dolores.

Estribi said the aid, ideally, should last from six-months to a year, during which time the refugees is supposed to become integrated into Panamanian society. Yet a 20 percent unemployment rate, coupled with a labor code that allows only one foreign technician per 100 workers, makes such integration difficult.

"And if you are not a technician, what do you do?" asked Cesar, a 21-year-old Nicaraguan. "No business is going to pay fines for a foreigner when there are so many Panamanians unemployed."

Some Salvadoran refugees have been receiving aid since 1981, said Estribi. "The truth is that they are not going to get any work," he explained.

So far Panama has only one refugee camp, which houses some 2,000 Salvadoran immigrants and has been self-sufficient for several years. The new battalion is aimed at preventing others from springing up.

Major Agustin de Gracia, Panama's military attaché to Costa Rica, summed up the prevalent attitude: "Panama belongs to the countries that signed a law to accept refugees, but who wants so many?"

Approaching the bench again

Perry Mason will once again be frustrating prosecutors and making lying witnesses squirm on the stand. Raymond Burr stars in a two-hour Mason movie and says it didn't take him long to get back into the role.

"When I sat next to Barbara Hale (who plays Della once again) I was back in character in two seconds," he said.

Hale and Burr are the only original cast members in the movie but Hale's son, William Katt, will play the son of detective Paul Drake. The idea of doing a two-hour show with the Eric Stanley Gardner hero appealed to Burr because "I finally have the opportunity to do justice to the Gardner books. In the one-hour format we had to cut multiple clues and other dramatic elements that made Mason a great fictional character and which gave the stories complexity.

Burr says he is working on a couple of movies and plays but has no desire to do another series. "Twenty years are enough to give your life to the pace and demands of a weekly show," he said.

U.S. must show the way

Former President Jimmy Carter, speaking at the dedication of the Edmund S. Muskie Archive at Bates College in Lewiston, Maine, said the United States must provide world leadership in human rights.

"In order to be truly great, we must use our power for the enhancement of peace for ourselves and for others," Carter said at ceremonies Saturday honoring his former secretary of state.

"This includes forgoing belligerence and force wherever possible and relying wherever possible on diplomacy."

In a swipe at the man who defeated him in 1980, Ronald Reagan, Carter noted that all recent presidents, except Reagan, have been able to agree with the Soviets on some sort of arms control.

"All my predecessors, and I have been very successful in negotiating arms control with the Soviet Union, in spite of those who see the Soviet people as an 'evil empire,'" Carter said. "Those opponents of good-faith negotiation provide a foundation for our nation's position that there is little hope for a reduction of nuclear stockpiles," he said.

The Muskie Archive will house more than 5 million documents that span Muskie's years as governor of Maine, U.S. senator and secretary of state. Muskie is a graduate of Bates.

Making a run at racing

The only racing Bruce Jenner, the 1976 Olympic decathlon champion, does now is an auto race tracks. He won his first race, a pro-celebrity race in 1978, and said to himself, "Hey, this is fun."

He's been in six races this year and finished in the top five in all but one.

"Auto racing is a way for me to continue to race," said Jenner, who will be competing in Columbus, Ohio, next month. "I quit doing it with my feet. But this is something in which you can be very competitive and it's fun."

Despite his enjoyment and success, Jenner has no desire to move up to Indy-car racing.

"To go five miles an hour faster wouldn't mean that much to me," he said. "I want to be as safe as I can and still be competitive. I'm just a kid at this." As for people who don't consider race-car drivers to be athletes, Jenner says, "I'd take anybody, put them in the passenger seat of my car and challenge them to say it doesn't take athletic skill to get it around the race track."

Sexy diet for Angle

Someone caught Angie Dickinson eating two calorie-laden desserts at the recent AIDS fundraiser in Hollywood.

"When I'm working on a series I always look for ways to keep that extra 15 pounds off but I don't believe in giving up dessert," she told People magazine.

She was asked what her secret diet was and revealed it has two main components.

"Oh, that's easy," she said. "Grapefruit juice and young men."

Few traffic woes though signals out

Two cruisers in accidents

Manchester police handled about 20 motor vehicle accidents over the weekend, as Hurricane Gloria left trees and power lines in roads and left many intersections without traffic signals.

Police records indicate that of the 20 accidents that occurred between about 11 a.m. Friday and 9 p.m. Sunday, four involved injuries. But no one was seriously injured in any of the accidents, police spokesman Gary Wood said this morning.

"Actually, everybody seemed to do quite well" despite the traffic conditions, Wood said. He said he expected few traffic problems today, since schools and many businesses were closed.

Wood said police officers would be posted at many of the town's intersections to make sure traffic moved safely.

Two of this weekend's accidents involved police cruisers.

At 5:35 p.m. Friday, police said, officer Howard Beeler's cruiser collided with a 1985 Mercury Marquis at the intersection of Keeney Street and Hartford Road. Police identified the driver of the other car as Ralph Armstrong, 66, of 115 Wetherell St.

Beeler had been traveling along Hartford Road when he came to the intersection, looking at the traffic light, and "saw nothing," a police report said. At the same time, the other car was traveling along Keeney Street and had a green light, the report said. The two cars collided when Beeler entered the intersection, the report said.

No one was injured, though Armstrong's car suffered extensive damage on its left side. Beeler, whose cruiser suffered a damaged front bumper and left signal light, was issued a verbal warning for failure to obey a traffic signal.

In the second accident, Officer Wayne F. Rautenberg's cruiser bumped into a utility pole on Hilliard Street at about 10:15 p.m. Friday, after Rautenberg had parked his car across the street to divert traffic from the area.

Rautenberg had just gotten out of his cruiser when he saw it rolling toward the pole, police said. He ran back into it and hit the brake just as it hit the pole, police said. Rautenberg, who suffered a scraped knee in trying to stop the car, said he had placed it in park just before getting out.

Volunteer effort well-oiled machine in wake of Gloria

By Susan Vaughn
Herald Reporter

Seventy volunteers for the local chapter of the American Red Cross worked around the clock from Friday morning until Sunday night to provide food, shelter and showers for area residents in the aftermath of Hurricane Gloria. Red Cross officials said today.

Phil Vaglia, disaster coordinator for the Connecticut Valley Emergency branch of the Red Cross, said that he "couldn't have asked for better cooperation from the town and its various agencies and units."

"It worked like a well-oiled machine," he said of the relief effort that started Friday afternoon. The branch — which operated out of the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce building at Hartford Road — served Manchester, Bolton, East Hartford, South Windsor, Glastonbury and Marlborough.

Vaglia expressed appreciation to merchants who reopened their stores so the Red Cross could get food for its shelters.

At the beginning of the storm on Friday, seven shelters were open. But only three remained open during the weekend, Vaglia said.

The shelter at Manchester's Senior Citizens' Center remained open until 7 p.m. Sunday and had to work on auxiliary power provided by a generator most of the time. An estimated 25 to 30 people from a 10-month-old baby to a 90-year-old woman — stayed at the shelter at various times and about 150 people had meals there, Vaglia estimated.

JOE DIMINICO, activities director at the center, and Scott Sprague, town recreation director, split the duties of operating the center.

Auxiliary sites at Manchester and South Windsor high schools had shower facilities open to residents, Vaglia said. Manchester Memorial Hospital also opened up its shower facilities.

The Red Cross office operated during the height of the storm Friday without power, then had an auxiliary generator working until full electrical power returned late Friday night, said Elaine Sweet, executive director of the area office.

"It was through the goodness of all our volunteers that we accomplished all we did," said Sweet. She said many volunteers left their homes during the storm.

The Red Cross also relied on The Bears, a Manchester-based amateur radio club, to communicate with its shelters, Sweet said. A radio operator was at the center all Friday until 11 p.m.

The town homeless shelter and Manchester Memorial Hospital also provided shelter from the storm.

lights, Johnson said. Food from the soup kitchen was also brought to the shelter on Friday, he said.

Manchester Memorial Hospital had a "very, very busy weekend" feeding and providing emergency care for a large number of people, said Andrew Beck, hospital spokesman.

Beck said the emergency room treated 114 people on Friday, 134 on Saturday and 157 on Sunday. Much of the treatment was for burns from camp stoves, cuts, splinters and sprains from cleaning up debris and bee stings, said Beck.

"For some reasons, the bees were out in full force after the storm," he said.

Most motor vehicle accident victims were treated and discharged, Beck said.

Some people suffered from asthma attacks and chest pains following the hurricane, Beck said. A handful of people who use electrical respirators and other emergency equipment were admitted to the hospital, he said.

The hospital's cafeteria also was put to full use by area residents during the weekend, Beck said. He said it was good that the hospital had ordered extra food prior to the storm.

THE HOSPITAL provided 55 meals on Sunday for the emergency shelter at the Senior Citizens Center.

There was also an increase in people visiting patients over the weekend, probably by family members trying to reassure hospitalized relatives that they were all right. About 150 people had meals there, Vaglia estimated.

The hospital switched over to its own generator Friday morning before the storm hit and stayed on it throughout the day, Beck said. Extra doctors and nurses were brought in for both emergency and regular hospital care. Some were brought in by local and area police, he said. Day care was also provided for children of staff workers.

"We realized we had a community obligation and we did all we could to help. We did what we do best," Beck said.

JOE DIMINICO, activities director at the center, and Scott Sprague, town recreation director, split the duties of operating the center.

Auxiliary sites at Manchester and South Windsor high schools had shower facilities open to residents, Vaglia said. Manchester Memorial Hospital also opened up its shower facilities.

The Red Cross office operated during the height of the storm Friday without power, then had an auxiliary generator working until full electrical power returned late Friday night, said Elaine Sweet, executive director of the area office.

"It was through the goodness of all our volunteers that we accomplished all we did," said Sweet. She said many volunteers left their homes during the storm.

The Red Cross also relied on The Bears, a Manchester-based amateur radio club, to communicate with its shelters, Sweet said. A radio operator was at the center all Friday until 11 p.m.

The town homeless shelter and Manchester Memorial Hospital also provided shelter from the storm.

The Manchester shelter at 466 Main St. remained open through Friday, prompting spokesmen at the town homeless shelter and Manchester Memorial Hospital also provided shelter from the storm.

MANCHESTER (UPI) — Nineteen-year-old Abigail Rodriguez, who gave birth to a 6-pound, 8-ounce baby girl as a ferocious hurricane rampaged up the eastern seaboard, had no trouble picking a name for her new infant.

She named the girl Gloria.

An unusually high number of women reportedly went into labor during the storm, and some were taken to hospitals to hypothesize about a link between the arrival of a storm and the arrival of a baby.

"You may not find any doctor who will admit it, but anyone in the maternity business knows that hurricanes cause women to go into labor and right now, our delivery rooms are filled up," Susan O'Brien, a spokeswoman at St. Margaret's Hospital in Boston said Friday.

In all seven babies were born Friday at St. Margaret's, where eight more women were waiting to deliver — a tally hospital officials say is higher than normal.

Keep cool

Manchester-area residents who lost their power during Friday's hurricane wait in line for ice Saturday at Manchester Ice and Fuel Inc. on Bissell Street. Owners of the company estimated they sold about 50 tons of ice over the weekend as traffic jammed Bissell Street and lines of people with coolers grew constantly longer.

Dave Krupen of Manchester leaves Manchester Ice and Fuel on Bissell Street Saturday after a long wait for ice. Krupen was one of many area residents looking for ice after losing their power Friday to hurricane Gloria. Many people were still without power today.

Business brisk at restaurants

By John F. Kirch
Herald Reporter

Manchester-area residents pined for open restaurants today, while business at grocery and hardware stores was mixed in the aftermath of Hurricane Gloria. "The minute we opened the door we got loads of people," said Glenn Foster, who manages Denny's Restaurant at Vernon Circle. He said the restaurant was packed for most of the weekend as people — many of them without power in the wake of the storm — sought hot meals.

Asked how business this weekend compared to other Saturdays, Foster laughed and said it was "much better." Other restaurants reporting brisk business were the Friendly's on Tolland Turnpike, Antonio's on Main Street, Willie's Steak House on Center Street and Johnnie's Brasserie on Main Street. John Johns, who owns Johnnie's, said business had tripled over the weekend. "People were asking me to stay open for dinner Saturday," said Johns, who closes at 3 p.m. on Saturdays. "But I didn't have anything left over from Saturday."

Other restaurants that were able to open had lines stretching out their doors when observed by reporters during the weekend. But many were unable to open and lost revenues because they lacked power. "Every place that I've seen with power has been packed," said Howard Atkins, a chef at Vitello. He said the restaurant has lost "quite a bit" of money because it had been unable to open since Friday, when power was lost. "I'm sure if I were open Saturday, people would be looking for that," Rival said of chain saws and other such equipment. "No one was concerned with the cleanup during the initial storm." Rival said the store's losses may be compounded since Friday, Saturday and Monday are his busiest days.

Channel Home Centers at the Manchester Parkade was also forced to close Friday when power went out. John Irtter, operating manager at the Manchester store, was restored after 6 p.m. Saturday. Before that, the store opened briefly Saturday as workers took orders down on paper and used flashlights to assist customers.

Among other things, Irtter said, batteries, flashlights, lamp oil and chain saws sold fast. "Oh, of course, none of those things are left," he said.

Not is there a sufficient amount of canned food at grocery stores, managers contacted this morning said. "Non-perishable items sold fast before and after Gloria hit, they said.

Tuna fish and other canned goods, potato chips, ice cream and charcoal were the products they said sold out first. "Before the storm we got hit really heavy," said Shop Rite Supermarket manager Thomas Vautrin. "Friday we also got hit. Saturday it was a little lighter than normal, but we were still busy."

"THEY'RE BUYING" the get-ty-through-today sort of thing," said Guillan Monaco, manager of Stop and Shop at the Parkade. "Our perishable sales just weren't there this weekend."

"Business was rather brisk," said Dave Withan, manager of Crispino's Supreme Foods on Hartford Road. "It was almost like a holiday business."

"We have an ice machine and you couldn't make it fast enough," he said. Grocery-store managers said milk and bread were also fast sellers. Withan said he normally does not get a milk or bread delivery on Sunday, but received one this week because stocks were low.

Like other store managers, Withan said he will order a bit heavier this week, anticipating more business as residents regain power. "I figure it will be a little heavier," Withan said. "It all depends on how hard the wholesaler was hit. I imagine a lot of what I order I won't get."

Asked about business in general, the chairman of the board of the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce said he thought it was "spotty." Chamber Chairman Richard Metuski, a vice president at Savings Bank of Manchester, said: "We're okay as a bank, we only have two branches that are closed."

"I don't have any information at this point," said Anne Flint, president of the chamber. Flint said she would have more information on the impact of the hurricane on business in the next day or two.

Many without cash as banks lose lights

By Kathy Gormus
Assistant City Editor

Some Manchester residents who needed a quick fix of cash after Hurricane Gloria passed through town Friday found themselves going through withdrawal when power to some banks was knocked out.

Others found themselves writing checks by candlelight, as some of the banks struggled to take care of customers caught short of money. The main office of the Heritage Savings and Loan Association at 107 Main St. cashed checks, took deposits and handled other limited transactions on Saturday despite the lack of power. Executive Vice President Raymond Juleson said.

"We had lanterns going, people with flashlights," he said. "It was kind of exciting." However, the bank's main office and a branch at 23 Main St. were still without power, Juleson said. He said bank officials decided to keep the main office open on Saturday because they were concerned about people who might have been low on food, gas and money.

"Now we have to deal with all that work we ended up doing the system," he said. Despite the inconveniences caused by the power failure, Juleson said most of the bank's customers on Saturday were grateful that it stayed open. Heritage branches at the K-Mart plaza in Manchester, and in Tolland, South Windsor and Coventry were all fully operable today, he said. Most of the branches were open Saturday except for Coventry, where "it was just too dark," Juleson said. The bank also lost one of its two automatic tellers to a power outage, he said.

Nearby Manchester State Bank also lost power at its main office at 1941 Main St. and was closed Saturday and today. Its branch at 185 Spencer St. was not affected and remained open on Saturday and today, a spokeswoman said. The Savings Bank of Manchester fared better, with its main office at 923 Main St. retaining power throughout the storm.

"We have been extremely busy," Lillian Lloyd, assistant treasurer and manager of SBM's main office, said today. SBM branches on East Center Street, Hartford Road, North Main Street and at Burr Corners all lost power, as well as branches in Andover, Bolton, East Hartford and Ashford, Lloyd said.

Four of the bank's seven automatic teller machines also lost power, she said. Bank officials restocked one automatic teller machine that was working on Saturday to keep up with the demand, she said. Lloyd said the lobby of SBM's main office was "extremely busy" on Saturday. "We did an enormous amount of check-cashing," she said, adding that the bank tried to accommodate people who were not regular customers.

Both SBM and Heritage reported that their money supplies were sufficient. Manchester State Bank President Nathan G. Agostinelli was not available for comment this morning. All branches of Connecticut Bank and Trust were closed Friday and Saturday, but all except one reopened today, a spokeswoman said. The branch on North Main Street remained closed, she said. The same held true for Connecticut National Bank. All branches except the one on downtown Main Street were open today.

Manchester, Bolton have highest number of outages

By Kevin Flood
Herald Reporter

DeJonge placed the number of outages in Bolton this morning at 62. He said, however, that many more Bolton outages may be included in the Manchester figure, because residents of the two towns often share the same circuits. NU spokesman said today. NU spokesman Bob DeJonge said more houses and businesses in Manchester and Bolton remained without power than in any other town in the Hartford District as a result of Hurricane Gloria, which struck Friday. The district includes Hartford, East Hartford, Rocky Hill, Wethersfield, Windsor and Bolton.

Southern New England Telephone company spokesman Mike McCann did not know how many SNET customers in the immediate area of Manchester were without phone service this morning. But he said the number without service in the company's entire capital district was 7,716.

In addition to Manchester, McCann said, the capital district includes Hartford, East Hartford, West Hartford and other towns as far north as Enfield. He said he expected the number of SNET customers reported without service to rise today, as businesses reopened to find they were without service.

For some NU customers in Manchester and Bolton, it will be a matter of days before power is restored, DeJonge said. He said for the bulk of residents, "power will be back on in two days," but that it may take longer for some customers. "There'll be probably be some stragglers — individual customers who will take a little longer to hook up," he said.

DeJonge did not know this morning how many repair crews NU had working in the area. But he said they were being assisted by about 35 crews from Hydro-Quebec, a Canadian utility. This morning, DeJonge said, NU was contending with a total of 158,000 outages statewide. There were 12,164 outages in the Hartford District, he said. Of that number, 1,685 were in Hartford.

The power outages cut cable television service to thousands of area residents, officials of Cox Cable of Greater Hartford and United Cable Television Corp. of Connecticut said this morning. Sebastian Listro, vice president and general manager of Cox Cable, said about half of the company's 12,188 subscribers in Manchester still had no cable television this morning. "Our main problem is electricity," Listro said. "We don't have enough electricity to transmit the signal."

Even though a household may have power, if an area along the transmission line is dead, cable service will be interrupted, he said. "A lot of people are calling and saying, 'Look, I've got power, why don't I have cable?'" he said. "Cable is more important to them than anything else."

Al Wieserna, vice president and general manager of United Cable, said company crews could not get to some problem areas until electrical workers were finished clearing branches from power lines and restoring power. "We're at the mercy of the power company," he said.

United Cable serves about 900 households in Bolton and 600 in Andover, Wieserna said. He said he did not know how many customers still were without service this morning.

When asked this morning how long it would take to return phone service to all SNET customers, McCann said, "That's impossible to predict. I can say it will take at least through the week. Beyond that, it's hard to know."

McCann said that although SNETCO does not have to reconnect the number of customers NU does, the telephone company faces a somewhat more difficult task. "What we're dealing with is a lot of lines running to individual customers," he said. "You can only do them one at a time, not 1,000 at a time like NU can."

NU spokesman Robin Brown did not know this morning how many NU customers in Andover and Coventry were without power. But he said NU's Northern District, which includes the two towns, had about 10,538 outages.

In addition to Andover and Coventry, NU's Northern District includes Willimantic, Franklin, Scotland, Sprague, Chaplin, Mansfield, Windham and part of Lebanon.

Brown said most of the outages in the district seem to be concentrated in Mansfield and Lebanon. About 8,000 customers in the district will still be without power by tonight, he said, "but about 90 percent of them" will have power again by Thursday evening.

McCann, the SNET spokesman, said all of the state's utilities have been lucky because of the good weather that came in the wake of Gloria. "We got a lot of wind and rain now, things could take quite a bit longer," he said.

Donald Badstuebner, left, and Ken Berry cut a tree that fell in front of 68 Highland Road in Coventry down to a manageable size on Sunday. Like other towns in the area, Coventry had its share of downed trees and wires.

Bolton and Coventry give emergency help

As parts of Bolton and Coventry remained without electrical power today, the towns were providing emergency services such as drinking water, temporary power and food for residents, town officials and police said. In Bolton, people needing drinking water can get it at the Bolton firehouse on Notch Road or at the Herrick Park drinking fountain, administrative assistant Karen Levine said this morning. In Coventry, a tanker truck parked by the Town Office Building will provide drinking water, a police spokeswoman said. Residents are asked to bring their own containers, she said.

Residents needing water to flush toilets or for other non-drinking needs are being advised to fill containers at Coventry Lake, she said. Coventry High School will be open from noon to 8 p.m. to offer hot food and showers to residents without power, the police spokeswoman said. The Bolton Fire Department will help minimize food damage by running a generator for one to two hours at homes around town, Levine said. However, she stressed that there are few generators and that they are in great demand. Anyone wanting such assistance should call 649-3910 to be put on a waiting list. Senior citizens or others who are low on food can call the fire department at 649-3910 or the selectmen's office at 649-8743 for assistance, Levine said. Bolton businesses that have kerosene or bottled gas include Cropley's Lawn and Garden Center on Route 6 or at Main Line Florists on Route 44, she said.

Other Bolton emergency numbers are police, 643-6604; and fire department, 872-7333. Elsewhere, Plains shiver under frost

Frost coated the Plains early today, setting record lows in several cities and the Gulf Coast from Texas to Florida bore heavy thunderstorms and flood watches. Freeze warnings were posted for northeast and south-central Nebraska, the Texas Panhandle and western parts of the Oklahoma Panhandle, as well as the northeast central plains and northwest plateau of New Mexico. Early today, showers and thunderstorms reached from the lower Mississippi to southern and eastern sections of Texas and Florida's east coast. A flood watch was in effect in the eastern Plains and across the middle and upper Mississippi Valley to the western Great Lakes. Wet snow mixed with rain over sections of Iowa and South Dakota.

Corpus Christi, Texas, received 2.16 inches of rain in a six-hour period ending at 2 a.m.

Blackouts continue in region

Gloria kills 10 in New England

By United Press International

While sunny skies made Hurricane Gloria a distant memory for most New Englanders, hundreds of thousands remained without electricity today as officials assessed property and crop damages from the killer storm.

Gloria was responsible for the death of at least 10 New Englanders, including a Rhode Island sailor who was struck by the boom of his 38-foot boat. More than 400,000 customers in the six-state region remained without electricity, including some 210,000 in Connecticut, about 110,000 in Massachusetts, some 15,000 in Maine, 62,000 in Rhode Island and 3,200 in New Hampshire.

"The power thing is really the problem," said Larry deBour, spokesman for Connecticut Gov. William A. O'Neill. "It really has a ripple effect that involves almost every aspect of life you can think of and that's what the real problem is."

While power company officials in Maine hoped to have most power restored by today, Boston Edison officials said many of its customers would have to wait several more days for the lights to come on. The wires are tangled in the trees which need to be moved by city personnel and Edison crews have to be there to coordinate so no one gets shocked or injured," said Boston Edison spokesman Jim Webster.

Webster said crews from as far away as Canada and North Carolina had joined round-the-clock effort to help restore power lines. Utility officials warned students returning to school today to stay away from downed power lines and to treat all wires as live ones.

Although officials said a total property damage estimate was still impossible to determine, the region's apple growers reported millions of dollars in damages to their crops. In Massachusetts, officials estimated that $5 million to $7 million of the state's average annual apple crop of $25 million had been destroyed along with about half of the $600,000 peach crop and 30 percent of its $13 million silage crop. In New Hampshire, orchard owners said they lost up to a third of their McIntosh apples, but managed to save a large part of the state's top agricultural crop through use of the chemical Alar. Five were killed in Connecticut: Tren Long, 55, who was killed Saturday when two cars collided at an intersection in New Haven, where a traffic light was out of service. Storm-related traffic deaths were also reported in Bethel, Middlebury, Cheshire and New Hartford.

Property damage was expected easily to reach several million dollars in Boston, where just the bill for preparations and cleanup reached about $2 million. Officials Saturday found the body of Robert Chaleki, 50, of Portsmouth, R.I., on his boat in Bristol Harbor. Bristol, R.I., police said he was struck in the face by the boom while working on his boat Friday evening. A man in Scituate, R.I., was also killed by a falling tree.

Other deaths included Albert M. Cheney, 66, of Pittsfield, N.H., who suffered a heart attack Friday while clearing tree limbs from his home. A Vermont utility worker struck by a car while he was trying to untangle power lines, Robert Otto, an off-duty Dedham, Mass., firefighter, was killed when a tree he was cutting fell on him.

Meetings canceled

The public hearing on proposed Plan of Development will not be held in Lincoln Center tonight. No new date has been set. Planning Director Mark Pellegrini said.

Justice Powell: a pivotal vote on the top court

By Elder Witt

WASHINGTON — The remarkable ability of Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. to stay in step with the zigzag dance of the contemporary Supreme Court makes some observers wonder if he has actually been calling the tune.

The justice, who turned 78 on Sept. 19, is recuperating from his second operation of the year. He could become the first member of the high court to leave the bench since 1961, and if he does, the effect on the court's rulings in several areas could be dramatic.

During his 14 years on the court, Powell has agreed with his decisions more often than any of his colleagues. Last term, he was in the majority in 91 of the 98 cases in which he participated.

When an issue divides the justice closely, Powell is one of the most powerful men in the nation, often determining the outcome with his single vote. Only Justice Byron R. White has occupied the swing-vote position more often in recent years.

Powell's power was underscored in the final days of the 1984-85 term. By joining the liberal members of the court — William J. Brennan Jr., Thurgood Marshall, Harry A. Blackmun and John Paul Stevens — Powell created the majority that reaffirmed the principle that the First Amendment's guarantee of religious freedom requires careful separation of church and state.

BUT ON ANOTHER CASE, he voted with and spoke for the court's conservative members — Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, William H. Rehnquist, Sandra O'Connor and, in this instance, White — in refusing to extend the First Amendment's free-speech protection to libel defendants accused of publishing falsehoods on matters of purely private, not public interest.

Powell, a Virginian who spent most of his life in his native state, was already a well-respected member of the nation's legal establishment when President Richard M. Nixon named him to the court in 1971 to succeed Hugo L. Black, who resigned. He had been senior partner in a prestigious Richmond, Va. law firm; had served as president of the city's school board and of the state board of education, and had served in 1966 on Lyndon B. Johnson's Crime Commission.

During his years on the court, Powell has generally voted with the conservatives on questions of criminal law and government power.

But he brought to the court a deep concern for the individual's abortion rights and church-state separation.

Powell's vote on abortion rights is now pivotal. A member of the 7-2 majority that ruled in 1973 that states could not ban abortion altogether, Powell spoke for 6-3 majority 10 years later when the court reaffirmed that Roe vs. Wade decision despite intense political pressure to abandon it.

With Chief Justice Burger thought to be wavering in his commitment to Roe vs. Wade, there may now be only five firm votes in favor of retaining it. If Powell were to leave the court, Reagan could well tip the balance through the appointment of an anti-abortion justice. And the court has agreed to decide two major abortion cases in the term that begins Oct. 7.

THE SINGLE MAJOR ISSUE on which Powell consistently finds himself in the minority is the proper balance of power between federal and state governments.

In 1976, he was part of a five-man majority that, for the first time in decades, told Congress that it should keep its collective nose out of a state's internal affairs.

But in a series of subsequent rulings, the court refused to enlarge on that decision, and in 1985 it was reversed, 5-4.

With uncharacteristic vehemence Powell lambasted the majority: "Members of the immense federal bureaucracy are not elected, known less about the services traditionally rendered by states and localities, and are inevitably less responsive to recipients of such services than are state legislatures, city councils, boards of supervisors, and state and local commissions, boards and agencies," he wrote.

"It is at the top state and local levels — not in Washington as the court so mistakenly thinks — that 'democratic self-government' is best exemplified," he concluded.

Elder Witt writes for Congressional Quarterly.

Quake compounds Mexico problems

WASHINGTON — The tragedy in Mexico City could have repercussions that, like another monstrous earthquake, could rock the United States. The disaster adds terrible new pressure upon Mexico's wretched masses to burst across the U.S. border in search of a better life.

Even before the earthquake brought new misery to millions of Mexicans, the Defense Intelligence Agency warned that Mexico is a tinder box, and a spark could send desperate refugees overrunning the border.

In the words of one warning, Mexico will be "the No. 1 security problem for the United States in the next 10 years." With this in mind, the CIA has made a secret study of how many Army divisions it would take to seal off the 1,933-mile Mexican-American border.

While the Reagan administration wants to keep illegal Mexican workers out, ironically, the administration of Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid is worried that the United States wants to take more Mexicans in.

Diplomatic digest

King Hussein of Jordan is being touted by the State Department as a "moderate" Arab leader and at least a potential friend of Israel.

U.S. INTELLIGENCE intercepted a private conversation last year between de la Madrid and two of his cabinet ministers in Mexico City. One of the ministers, according to a top-secret report, suggested that Mexico might secede from Mexico and join the United States.

Executive memo

The U.S. Information Agency is evidently afraid its message isn't getting across. So a major study of USIA publications has been ordered; it will look at the "purpose, content, form, audience distribution and effectiveness of USIA magazines and pamphlets" all over the world. The investigators will talk with U.S. ambassadors and other embassy personnel, foreign journalists, businessmen and government officials to determine if the agency's output is regarded with respect or — as the critics have charged — viewed skeptically as propaganda.

Mini-editorial

Swedes have a reputation for taking life and themselves very seriously; some of their Scandinavian neighbors, in fact, consider them downright stuffy. But strange things seem to be stirring in Sweden: Donald Duck emerged from the recent general election with 291 votes for Parliament. That's 107 votes more than the irascible little water fowl got on his last outing three years ago — a whopping 58 percent increase. We don't mean to suggest there's a trend developing, but Donald's showing might be enough to worry the winner, Olaf Palme, making him even stuffer. He's making it in.

HERE ARE JUST A FEW of the pressures, now aggravated by the earthquake, that could cause a massive rupture in the Mexican-American border:

- One-third of all Mexicans today are undernourished. They live in poverty but their living conditions are getting worse.
- The upper half of the population hogs 90 percent of the income, leaving the lower half with less and less.
- The Mexican government is on the brink of bankruptcy. It is saddled with a staggering $90 billion in foreign debt; with no credit left to satisfy the demands of a booming population.
- The government is corrupt from top to bottom, with 2 million bureaucrats feeding like leeches off the national income. In past years, the CIA has made a secret study of how many Army divisions it would take to seal off the 1,933-mile Mexican-American border.

Three months ago, we wrote that "it's five minutes to midnight in Mexico." The minute hand, unhappily, is still moving remorselessly.

Under the dome

Members of Congress are constantly besieged by lobbyists, constituents, colleagues, staffers and federal bureaucrats, all in favor of or just for information, if it's small wonder that sometimes they don't know whether they're coming or going. The other day, for example, we asked Rep. William Hendon, R-N.C., about his schedule by saying: "What do you have on for today?" Before checking with his secretary, Hendon replied: "The only thing I know I have on today is my pants."

Tax break on clothes New laws take effect Tuesday

By Mark A. Dupuis United Press International

HARTFORD — Nathan Hale becomes the state's official hero and laws dealing with the trolleys of drunken drivers, shoppers' tax breaks and other consumer conveniences will take effect Tuesday in the state.

The new drunk driving penalties will require a person convicted of a first time of driving under the influence to serve 48 hours in jail or 100 hours of community service, with the courts deciding the penalty imposed.

While many of the new laws deal with serious topics such as drunken driving, a good number of the new statutes deal with some of the more novel topics taken up by the 1985 Legislature.

Effective Tuesday, Nathan Hale will be designated as the official state hero. The colonial school teacher was hanged as a spy by the British during the American Revolution and is remembered for his last words: "I only regret that I have but one life to lose for my country."

Another new law repeals obsolete statutes enacted in past years regulating street railway companies — trolleys — while others require the governor to annually designate an Altheman Day and Powered Flight Day.

The battle over meat packaging also will officially end as a new law takes effect repealing the requirement that meat sold in retail stores be packaged so a consumer can see 70 percent of the bottom or the cut. Also effective Tuesday will be a law lowering maximum interest rates that can be charged on retail installment loans and most auto loans but leaving intact until at least Oct. 1, 1987, the 18 percent maximum on credit cards.

Another new law will prohibit banks in most cases from holding inactive checks for more than four business days and out of state checks for more than seven business days before funds can be drawn on the checks.

Other new laws effective Tuesday include measures that will require that as of June 1, 1986, all dogs are vaccinated for rabies before a dog license can be issued.

Moffett, a former congressman, plans to announce his candidacy in November but already has a campaign headquarters and staff at work on his bid to unseat O'Neill.

The challenge has prompted O'Neill to announce that he will form a campaign committee within the next few weeks, earlier than the January or February start he originally planned.

O'Neill defended the record of his administration, saying the problems of government are nothing new and that the state is in good economic and physical shape.

The latest political liability for O'Neill surfaced last week when a top state tax official admitted missing a state tax. O'Neill ordered the man fired, though he was later allowed to retire.

O'Neill said a series of similar problems "certainly isn't a plus," and although he expects Maloney to be a campaign liability, he expects to survive the attacks.

"I would be a logical tool for an opponent to use, however. I think the vast majority of the people in the state of Connecticut realize that is not the case in general."

O'Neill at first said little about the challenge by Moffett. For example, in announcing he was creating a campaign committee earlier than first planned because of a challenge, he didn't even mention Moffett's name.

In the interview last week, O'Neill delivered one of his most stinging attacks to date on Moffett when asked why he believed the former congressman was challenging him.

"Maybe because he doesn't see that there's anywhere else for him to go, maybe because he's unemployed," O'Neill said. "But I really don't why because he has no real reason, from a party perspective, he has no real reason from a perspective of the people of Connecticut."

O'Neill said he doesn't expect the campaign to be too much of a change from what he is doing now. "I guess I am a constant campaigner. If I don't have a function to go to on the weekend I feel like I'm cheating," he said.

While his favorite part of the job is meeting people, the accompanying publicity does have its limits for O'Neill. He said his greatest dislike about being governor is a lack of privacy.

"You really do not have any privacy at all. I think that's a concern anyone would share," O'Neill said. "No matter where you are, you're the governor, as it should be. But you do not get any privacy."

Prosecutor's attendance record cited by workers

HARTFORD (UPI) — State officials say they have no plans to investigate reports that a high-ranking prosecutor regularly missed work for days or weeks at a time during the past two years.

Past and present workers in the chief state's attorney's office confirmed the substance of a complaint brought over the attendance record of Deputy Chief State's Attorney Richard E. Maloney, a published report said Sunday.

The Hartford Courant said past and present workers said that during the past two years, and particularly since the fall of 1984, Maloney was absent from work more than he was present.

Maloney denied that he frequently had been absent, the newspaper reported, and said that any criticism of his work stemmed from disagreements he had with former Chief State's Attorney Austin J. McGuigan.

Maloney said McGuigan had dismantled his job, leaving him with no authority or responsibility. "I was foreclosed," said Maloney, who has been deputy chief state's attorney since 1979.

Chief State's Attorney John J. Kelly, who replaced McGuigan in July as the state's top prosecutor, said he was aware of the reports that Maloney had a poor attendance record.

However, both Kelly and James J. Murphy Jr., chairman of the state Criminal Justice Commission, which appoints prosecutors in Connecticut, said they have no plans to investigate the matter.

Kelly said Maloney has had excellent attendance since Kelly became chief state's attorney. "If I had to rate him, I would say excellent," Kelly told the Courant.

"He is one of the first guys in the morning and the last guy out. If everyone here was like him, we'd have a much better office," Kelly said.

Murphy said he also had no plans for the Criminal Justice Commission to look into the allegations, which were made in a complaint to the commission from a former secretary in the chief state's attorney's office.

Washington: a town of believers

By John Kidner

WASHINGTON — This is a town of believers. That is, most Washington officials — elected, appointed, or part of some bureaucratic dynasty — believe that people in the World Beyond the Potomac (WBP) believe most of what is said in the capital.

There are two reasons for Washington believers' belief: campaign promises are one, and what people in the WBP are reported to believe is the other.

Traditionally, campaign promises are cliché and bromides, tossed about with the same mean-spirited abandon as "Have a good day." For example: "I will reduce the size of government, cut the deficit, balance the budget, curb federal spending, and make big business pay its fair share of taxes."

For years these same campaign promises have been repeated in good faith. That is, the promoters have faith that the promises will once more take everything in customary good humor.

And why not? The promoters are re-elected, appointees remain in place so long that edifices are built around them, and bureaucrats stay in place so long they become legends.

The politicians also know there is always a chance that the gods of circumstance will allow a lucky course of fiscal, social, and political events to combine to make a promise work out on its own. When this happens — bonanza!

WHAT PEOPLE IN THE WBP are reported to believe is another matter entirely. It gives rise to such confidences as "If they'll believe that they'll believe anything. So let's go on record that he'll do something about acid rain."

These images are stimulated by stories such as the recent one involving the Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, nationally known master of transcendental meditation, or TM.

Some of his students — six men and one woman — have brought suit against him in U.S. District Court.

It seems they attended the Maharishi International University in Fairfield, Ohio, believing that if they studied faithfully and transcendently meditated long and hard enough, they would become clairvoyant masters of nature. They would control the laws of nature as well as man. Why, they would even be able to fly!

However, no matter how hard they tried, things didn't seem to work out. After meditating for the long periods supposedly necessary to master the universe, they didn't have time to develop normal academic or social facilities, thereby adding to a natural retardation.

Worse yet, try as they might they could not become airborne by hopping, even while sitting cross-legged in the prescribed lotus position. All they succeeded in doing was bruise their legs and knees.

AS A CONSEQUENCE of not achieving aerodynamic levitation, and being deprived mentally through prolonged meditation, they went to court. In a word, Maharishi is being sued for not delivering what was promised.

There is something frightening about this legal action. If the students should win, what would become of politics? I shudder to think of it.

Either campaign promises would have to be so carefully written that nobody but lawyers and federal bureaucrats could understand them, or those doing the promising would have to deliver. One would be the joviality and shell-game levity that give campaigns their carnival air.

What I'm saying is, I'd have to start writing my own stuff.

Worse yet, try as they might they could not become airborne by hopping, even while sitting cross-legged in the prescribed lotus position. All they succeeded in doing was bruise their legs and knees.

AS A CONSEQUENCE of not achieving aerodynamic levitation, and being deprived mentally through prolonged meditation,

Jefferson warning applies to U.S. spending dilemma

By N. La Veri Christensen

"This is the tendency of all human governments — and the fore horse of this frightful team is public debt. Taxation follows that, and in its train wretchedness and oppression," wrote Thomas Jefferson, third president and principal author of the Declaration of Independence.

This writer also has a Jefferson statement, clipped from the Congressional Record years ago, which seems appropriate right now in view of these facts:

- In less than a dozen peacetime years, federal spending has more than tripled, from $270 billion in 1974 to $950 billion in 1985.
- During the same period, the national debt has soared from $48 billion to $1,520 trillion. Congress has been asked to raise the debt limit to $2,078 trillion to permit continued borrowing and keep the coffers from going dry.
- The per capita share of the national debt now approximates $8,000. Back in 1930 it was only $12.
- To preserve our independence, we must not let our rulers lead us with perpetual debt," Jefferson said in the statement inserted in the Congressional Record by then Rep. James M. Collins, R-Tex.

"We must make our election between economy and liberty, or profusion and servitude," the Statesman said. "If we run into such debts, we must be taxed in our meat and in our drink, in our necessities and our comforts, in our labors and our amusements, for our callings and our crews, as the people of England are...

Jefferson's warning applies to the U.S. spending dilemma. The U.S. Information Agency is evidently afraid its message isn't getting across. So a major study of USIA publications has been ordered; it will look at the "purpose, content, form, audience distribution and effectiveness of USIA magazines and pamphlets" all over the world. The investigators will talk with U.S. ambassadors and other embassy personnel, foreign journalists, businessmen and government officials to determine if the agency's output is regarded with respect or — as the critics have charged — viewed skeptically as propaganda.

How should South play for greatest safety? He should combine various plays to improve his chances. First, nine tricks will be there for the taking if diamonds divide 3-3. All South needs to do is force out the ace of hearts. What if diamonds do not divide? Then

So it was today. De-clarer quickly reached three no-trump, won the opening spade lead with the queen and went to dummy with a diamond to take the club finesse. West won the king and removed declarer's remaining spade stopper. When the club jack did not fall, the contract was down two.
How should South play for greatest safety? He should combine various plays to improve his chances. First, nine tricks will be there for the taking if diamonds divide 3-3. All South needs to do is force out the ace of hearts. What if diamonds do not divide? Then

London's Brixton area returning to normal

By Daniela Iacono
United Press International

LONDON — Commuters picked their way past broken glass and boarded-up windows on their way to work today in London's Brixton district, where police reported some 250 arrests in weekend rioting sparked by the shooting of a black woman who left 65 people injured.

Police riot squads, armed with shields and crash helmets, withdrew their cordon around the run-down, predominantly black district around 3 a.m. today, permitting traffic to flow freely through the area again.

About 50 people were arrested Sunday, at least two cars were burned and the local police station came under a fusillade of stones and bottles for a second day. Fifty-three people were injured and nearly 200 arrested in more severe rioting Saturday.

Police said two white women were raped by gangs of black youths early today. One was dragged off the street and raped in a park and the other was attacked when her house was invaded.

The Daily Telegraph said one of the women was the daughter of a Conservative member of Parliament but Scotland Yard refused to confirm the report.

As daylight broke today, police and citizens began counting the cost of two nights of violence triggered by the police shooting of Cherry Groce, a 38-year-old black woman.

An aura of tension still hung over fogbound Brixton as commuters set off to work. Broken glass still littered many streets and sidewalks, a few burglar alarms were ringing uncontrolled and rows of shops were boarded up with plywood.

Groce was accidentally shot early Saturday when police raided her home looking for her son. Her son later surrendered to police and was charged with illegal possession of a sawed-off shotgun.

Doctors said Groce was paralyzed with bullet fragments lodged in her spine and that they would not know until later this week if the paralysis was permanent.

The officer who shot her immediately went on sick leave and was reported to be in shock.

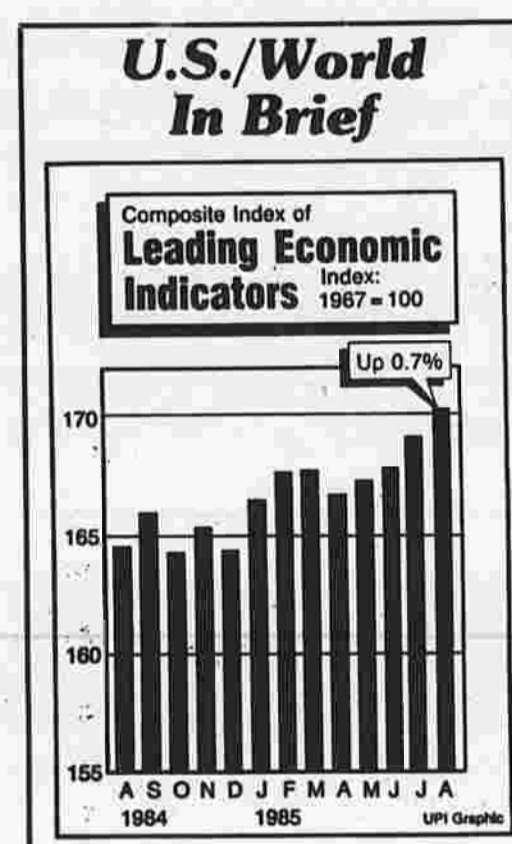

From her hospital bed, Groce appealed for calm. "Fighting is madness and I don't want to be associated with it," she said.

The first of some 250 people arrested in the trouble were due to appear in local courts today. Many others were free on bail and due to appear in one week's time.

Altogether 65 people were hurt in the trouble, including 10 policemen. One black officer was lucky to escape serious injury when a stone hit his forehead, dropping on him from an upstairs window.

Police and residents walk past a looted jewelry store Sunday in the south London suburb of Brixton. Trouble flared after police accidentally shot a black woman Saturday.

Heckler, under siege, asks for talk with boss

By Norman D. Sandler
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler, angered by a reported drive by top White House aides to ouster her, arranged a meeting with President Reagan today to discuss her future.

Her request for a private audience with Reagan followed disclosures last week that Heckler had complained to associates that officials, including chief of staff Donald Regan, were behind a move to replace her.

"She's certainly not pleased to see all the stories," said Heckler's spokeswoman, Claire de Real.

De Real refused to comment Sunday on the expected substance or possible outcome of the Heckler-Regan meeting but, "It's about time this all got resolved. And only she and the president will know what that means."

Officials said Heckler, who assumed the post in 1983 after losing a bid for a ninth term in Congress as a moderate-to-liberal Republican from Massachusetts, asked to take her complaints directly to Reagan after turning down an invitation for a meeting with Regan, who wanted to head off an Oval Office confrontation.

Regan is one of several top aides said to be working to have Heckler replaced at the Health and Human Services Department — and sent to Dublin as ambassador to Ireland.

Rumors of the ambassadorial post surfaced in August, Heckler remarked. "That's a lovely position for somebody else."

In the past, Regan has been reluctant to become involved in the personality clashes and turf battles among his subordinates — but sometimes have surfaced in public — and has even been less inclined to dismiss anyone in his administration.

However, his loyalty to Heckler has not been shared by some of his aides, who have come to regard her as a weak manager and a questionable exponent of conservative administration policies.

Heckler told The New York Times over the weekend that she "cannot decipher the reason" for White House dissatisfaction with her performance.

"There is no issue of substance dividing me from the White House staff," she said. "I have faithfully carried the president's portfolio."

Although some administration conservatives have been critical of Heckler, Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, chairman of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, praised her for doing "a terrific job."

Thursday, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said there had been "no discussions at the top level of the White House" — by Reagan or Regan — with Heckler about "any change in her position."

However, administration officials predicted Heckler would leave her post.

Indicators show strong gains

WASHINGTON — The government's sensitive economic trend detector, the index of leading indicators, recorded a 0.7 percent increase in August. Just the first of two years ago, when improvement, government economists said today.

The August increase and an upward revision for July that also brought it to a 0.7 percent gain were the biggest increases since February although still far from exceptionally strong.

Six of the month's individual indicators will contribute to a stronger economy, the Bureau of Economic Analysis said, led by an expansion of the money supply.

Also up building permits, the length of the average work week, the formation of new businesses and orders for consumer goods. A slowdown in claims for unemployment benefits was also counted on the plus side.

Tripoli defenders repel foes

TRIPOLI, Lebanon — Syrian-backed militiamen battled Moslem fundamentalist Tawheed fighters on the outskirts of Tripoli early today in a bid to break into the city they lost two years ago.

Supported by a barrage of shells and rockets from Syrian-controlled hills, the pro-Syrian forces Sunday night mounted a third attack against the Tawheed defenders, some of them holed up in a 12th-century Crusader castle.

Sunni Moslem Voice of the Nation radio said 70 attackers were killed and 150 wounded in the first two assaults during the weekend. Military sources said the pro-Syrian forces gained just 150 yards in those attacks.

Study doubts eye operation

SAN FRANCISCO — A controversial operation to correct nearsightedness performed on more than 100,000 people may have serious drawbacks, says the head of a research team conducting a five-year study of the procedure.

Dr. George Waring, ophthalmology professor at Emory University in Atlanta, said Sunday one-third of the 435 patients examined during the second year of the study had suffered visual fluctuations long after their eyes were expected to heal from the operation, which is called radial keratotomy.

"Our most important finding was that about one-third of the patients still had fluctuating vision during the second year. This is a big problem," Waring told the annual meeting of the American Academy of Ophthalmology. "We were surprised that in fact the cornea may take two to three years to heal in some people," he said.

The results of the "Prospective Evaluation of Radial Keratotomy" study seemed to support critics of the operation, who insist that it is only a cosmetic change. They say that myopia can be corrected with glasses.

Leak closes part of I-391

CHICOPEE, Mass. — A dangerous chemical leak forced the closing of a section of Interstate 391 for part of the weekend.

State police Lt. David Baker said the 5,000-gallon tank of formic acid at the Hercules Chemical Co. sprang a leak at about 11 p.m. Saturday and formed a gas cloud.

The cloud traveled over a field before the wind blew it over the highway, prompting state police to close a section of the highway and detour traffic.

The leak was patched and the remaining formic acid was pumped into another tank.

Three electrical workers from Montreal, Quebec, Canada, prepare to go to work this morning at Spruce and Maple streets in an effort to restore power to some of the areas hit by outages on Friday. From left are Willie Marchand, Yves Villeneuve and Jean Guy Methot. The three arrived in Connecticut Saturday morning after Northeast Utilities called for additional help.

most of their time working on generators.

About 22 streets in town still have places where they are fully blocked.

Some of them are Woodland, Foster, Oak Grove, Chambers, Bissell, Lydall east of Vernon, Walnut, High, Lilac, Middlefield, Washington, Vernon Street in more than one spot, Tollard Turnpike near North Main, Perkins, Clinton, Spring, and Greenwood.

Town crews have already begun clearing away roadside clutter and will continue all week from dawn to dusk. The work is being done with front end loaders and backhoes coupled with the town's dump trucks.

In addition, the landfill on Olcott Street will be open every day until 7 p.m. this week.

Chapman said two wood chippers have been in use and the shelter at the Senior Citizens' Center closed Sunday. If the weather gets cold, shelters will be established, Weiss said.

State seeks disaster aid

Most people who had sought refuge in emergency shelters had returned home by Sunday, although officials said there still may be people staying in shelters set up by cities and towns.

In New Haven, only about six or eight people remained in shelters Sunday, compared to about 1,000 who sought refuge when the storm hit Friday, Mayor Biagio DiLieto said.

New Haven police had 15 reports of looting and 13 arrests for burglary Friday, but police increased patrols Saturday night and there were virtually no reports of looting, DiLieto said.

The Red Cross continued to operate shelters Sunday in East Hampton, New London and Westport to feed people who were left without power to cook and refrigerate food, state officials said.

As the cleanup continued, there were signs of progress Sunday. All but five of the 190 state roads blocked at the height of the storm were reopened and in many cases they were partially passable.

All of the sewage treatment plants that were knocked out of service during the storm also were back in service, although officials maintained a ban on shellfishing until waters near the plants could be checked today.

Be on lookout for hazards

Though the immediate danger of Hurricane Gloria has passed, Manchester residents should still be on the lookout for hazards in the next few days as they try to light their homes with candlelight and drive through streets still littered with downed power lines.

Eighth Utilities District Fire Department spokesman Thomas O'Marra said this morning that residents using candles to light their homes should place them in sand or take other precautions to keep them from tipping over.

"If you have to use a candle, make sure it's secure," O'Marra said. "And don't leave it unattended."

O'Marra said district firefighters have already been called to two minor fires caused by fallen candles. The first fire, at a apartment at 360 Oakland St., started shortly before 11 p.m. Friday when a candle left in a bathroom fell and ignited a plastic sink. No one was injured, he said, though the bathroom was damaged.

In the second fire, which started at about 12:30 a.m. Sunday at an apartment at 101 Tudor Lane, a candle fell into a hamper and ignited it. No one was injured there and damage was minor, O'Marra said.

While firefighters have been urged to be careful with candles, Northeast Utilities officials have been asking them since Friday to stay away from downed utility wires. "It may look dead to you," spokesman Robin Brown said, "but a crew could be switching on a circuit as you pick it up, and there could be a lot of juice running through it."

Officials have been asking residents to report downed lines as soon as they see them. Spokesman Jose Chavez also asked Friday that residents give NU officials as much information as they can about the line. "For instance," Chavez said, "if people hear a loud bang just before a line goes down, it could mean that a fuse is blown. That kind of information is helpful."

Manchester police have also urged that residents use caution in approaching intersections where signal lights are not working.

Glastonbury opens bulky waste sites

Actress Simone Signoret, 64, loses battle to cancer

EURE, France (UPI) — Actress Simone Signoret, known for the sensuality and gutsy wisdom she projected on the screen, died of cancer, her family said. She was 64.

Signoret died at her country home, her daughter, Catherine Allegret, said.

"She fought right to the end," Allegret said. "She died as she lived, with courage."

Signoret, who was married to French singer Yves Montand, lived in Aubthuil-Autheil, in France. She was known as much for her strong political stands and writing as for her movie career.

Signoret rejected the trappings of movie stardom throughout her successful career. She made no effort to preserve an image of youth as she grew older, but let the wrinkles come and her waistline expand.

"I go with the way women who aren't actresses grow old," the Oscar winner once said.

Simone-Henriette-Charlotte Kaminker was born in Wiesbaden, Germany, March 25, 1921, to Andre and Georgette Kaminker. Her father was an army officer and the two sisters later, while vacationing, two brothers grew up in an intellectual atmosphere. The family later moved to Paris.

The Nazi invasion of France brought great changes to the young actress. In 1945 Signoret received two major French film awards for her portrayal of a streetwalker in "La Ronde." The picture received considerable publicity in the United States, where it was banned in New York state as immoral before the Supreme Court ruled against censorship in 1954.

In 1953 she won the British Film Award for her performance as queen of the Apaches in "Casque d'Or" and appeared in the successful "Therese Raquin."

A year later Signoret again won the British award as best foreign actress for her portrayal of Elizabeth Proctor in "Les Sorcieres de Salem." Jean-Paul Sartre's adaptation of Arthur Miller's "The Crucible."

Manchester shaded by Ha in defensive duel

By Paul Orfio
Herald Correspondent

WEST HARTFORD — Manchester High's defense stood up to Hall High's potent attack — and yielded just six points.

Unfortunately for the Indians, the Warrior defense was one touchdown taller, hanging on to a narrow 6-0 victory in non-conference football action Saturday at Hall High in West Hartford.

The game was a match-up of physical strength, biceps vs. curls," noted Manchester coach Ron Cournoyer.

"Hall has a great defense, but I can't say enough for our own," added Cournoyer, also elated by his team's virtually mistake free game. The Indians, who were penalized seven times for 77 yards in their season opener a week ago, did not have a single yard walked off against them.

Manchester's record slipped to 0-2 while Hall upped its mark to 3-0.

The Indians travel to South Windsor High for their first Central Connecticut Conference Eastern Division contest Saturday afternoon at 1:30 p.m.

The Indians, coming off a 35-12 defeat at the hands of No. 3 ranked Glastonbury High, were thrown back into the storm Saturday against No. 9 ranked Hall High.

And Manchester responded with a sparkling defensive effort, forcing five turnovers and holding Hall's air attack to only 48 yards.

"They stunned us," said victorious Warrior coach Frank Robinson. "They were coming from everywhere."

"Manchester is a good solid team, their defense did a nice job," Robinson pointed out.

Yanks sweep to stay alive

By United Press International

NEW YORK — The New York Yankees are making more progress in the American League East race than Baltimore manager Earl Weaver is making with umpires. In a double-header that saw Weaver ejected from both games, New York swept the Orioles 6-0 and 2-0 to retain slim hopes of catching first-place Toronto.

The Yankees play the Jays three times over the weekend and hope to arrive in Toronto with the race still undecided.

If we go into Toronto alive, we'll be a highlight film in the 1980s," said New York's Dave Winfield, who homered and drove in three runs in the nightcap.

"Everyone has counted this club out, but it would be a new season if we could be three back for those three games in Toronto," added Don Baylor, who chipped in a homer and four RBI in the second game.

In the opener, Don Mattingly hit a pair of homers to support the combined three-hit pitching of Joe Coker and Dave Righetti.

Despite the sweep, the Yankees remained 5½ games behind the first-place Blue Jays, who beat Milwaukee 13-5 Sunday to reduce their magic number to three.

New York now has beaten Baltimore in 11 of 12 games this year, which might account for Weaver's frustration.

In the first game, Weaver conducted a 10-minute argument in each of the first two innings and when he left the dugout in the third for another argument, was immediately ejected by crew chief Jim Evans.

In the second game, Evans ejected Weaver when the Baltimore manager took the Orioles lineup card to home plate and attempted to re-open the argument.

"It's tough enough to deal with unintelligent people," Weaver said. "It's worse when they tell you untruths. Ignorance always seems to prevail."

In the nightcap, Rich Bordi, 6-8, allowed three hits over six innings for the victory. Rod Scurry went the final three for his first save as a Yankee. Brad Havens, 6-1, took the loss.

The Yankees scored another run in the eighth on Mattingly's RBI single.

Carter's home run keeps Mets in contention

By Mike Tully
United Press International

When New York General Manager Frank Cashen traded Hubie Brooks for Gary Carter last December, he never suspected that both players would help him in the pennant race.

On Sunday, with each player providing a key hit hundreds of miles apart.

In Pittsburgh, Carter smashed a two-run homer with one out in the 10th inning to enable the Mets to pull within three games of first-place St. Louis with a 9-7 victory over the Pirates.

In Montreal, Brooks keyed a three-run seventh with a two-run triple in the Expo's 7-5 victory over the Cardinals.

Brooks was one of four players Cashen sent to Montreal to acquire Carter. His triple put some punch into New York's three-game showdown with St. Louis beginning Tuesday night. Brooks believes the Cardinals will win.

"No matter what the score is the Cardinals keep coming at you and you're trying to give them," he said. "They never stop. Even though we beat them 11 times, they'll still be in the World Series."

Carter hit the first pitch thrown to him by reliever Larry McWilliams, 6-9, for his 13th homer of the month and 32nd of the season. It followed a one-out single by Keith Hernandez. The victory ended the West Division race.

"We wanted to go to St. Louis more than three games behind," said Carter. "Now we have to win three out of three here."

The Mets tied the score 7-7 in the ninth when Howard Johnson led off with his 11th home run of the season. He hit a 1-2 pitch over the right-center field wall off reliever Cecil Gant.

The Cardinals owned a 5-4 lead, but their usually reliable bullpen faltered.

"Yesterday I got some good work from our bullpen, but they let us down today," said St. Louis manager Whitey Herzog. "That three-game series with the Mets is the most important of the season. That will give us a chance to do it ourselves. The Expos have given us problems all year. They have beaten us 11 out of 18 games."

The Cardinals kept coming at you and you're trying to give them," he said. "They never stop. Even though we beat them 11 times, they'll still be in the World Series."

Carter hit the first pitch thrown to him by reliever Larry McWilliams, 6-9, for his 13th homer of the month and 32nd of the season. It followed a one-out single by Keith Hernandez. The victory ended the West Division race.

Three-run fifth and Bob Welch and Tom Niedenfur combined on an eight-inning Sunday to help the Dodgers complete a sweep of the Braves. Rick Camp, 3-6, was the winner. Lance McCullers, 0-2, took the loss.

Cubs 6, Phillies 2

At Chicago, Keith Moreland drove the pace for the Cubs with two singles, helping extend Philadelphia's losing streak to 10 games. Moreland also extended his hitting streak to 18 games. His teammate Ryne Sandberg for the league high.

Giants pull one out

By Joe Ciolini
United Press International

PHILADELPHIA — Fortune seemed to be frowning on the New York Giants in the last four minutes of their game Sunday against the Philadelphia Eagles, but then they got lucky.

After seeing Philadelphia tie the game on an interception return and then miss a game-winning field goal, the Giants got an unexpected return of their own on a tipped ball in overtime to post a 16-10 victory.

"It was just one of those crazy tipped-ball things," Eagles quarterback Ron Jaworski said. "It was just one of those fluky things."

The Eagles had earned a 16-10 tie on a 3-yard interception return by Herman Edwards but Paul McFadden's 42-yard field goal try was wide to the left with only 32 seconds left in the game.

New York's Elvis Patterson then picked off Jaworski's pass and returned it 29 yards for the winning TD just 55 seconds into overtime.

"You have to win some of these games," New York coach Bill Parcells said. "We were flipping. We missed a field goal. They missed a field goal. But we had the break."

The Giants were leading 10-3 on a 49-yard field goal by Jess Atkinson and a 26-yard TD pass from Phil Simms to tight end Mark Briscoe. McFadden missed a 20-yard field goal by Jess Atkinson and a 26-yard TD pass from Phil Simms to tight end Mark Briscoe.

Philadelphia's 2-0 lead was wiped out by a 23-yard field goal by Jess Atkinson.

Atkinson missed a 23-yard field goal with 7:19 left in the fourth quarter and the Eagles took over on offense. Starting quarterback Randall Cunningham injured his left ankle on the first play and was replaced by veteran Ron Jaworski.

The Eagles moved to their own 45 and were forced to punt but Mike Horan's kick was downed on the New York 4 with 3:58 to play and Philadelphia's defense took over.

Simms was almost sacked for a pass as he threw incompletely on a first down and a running play lost 1 yard. On third down, defensive end Reggie White hit Simms as he released the ball and it popped into the air.

Edwards camped under it and fell into the end zone for the tying touchdown.

"It was like a punt," Edwards said. "I was worried about somebody trying to grab me. My main concern was to catch it. If I drop it, 70,000 people boo me. If I catch it, I'm the hero."

New York failed to move the ball on its next possession but punter Sean Landeta's kick traveled only 23 yards as it took a bad bounce and was downed on the Giants' 41.

Jaworski moved the Eagles to the 24, but McFadden, whose 41-yard boot in the third quarter gave Philadelphia a 3-0 lead, missed his kick and the game went into overtime.

The Eagles coach Marion Campbell picked up his doubts about going for the field goal.

"I'd put my house on Paul," he said. "Not with a kicker like Paul would I consider going for the TD."

McFadden said he thought he had made the field goal.

"To tell you the truth, I had a smile on my face," he said. "I like those kind of pressure situations. That's what it was all about. Maybe I was a little too pumped up."

The Eagles won the toss and elected to take the ball in overtime but on the second play, Jaworski's pass went off Mike Quick's hands to Patterson, who ran down the left sideline late in the end zone.

"I saw the ball being tipped by Quick," Patterson said. "I was playing the zone deep and in the deep zone, I knew I had to get up there. I saw the ball being tipped and grabbed it and ran for the touchdown."

Jaworski said the Eagles' luck must just have run out.

"If it wasn't for bad luck, I wouldn't have any luck at all," he said. "Paul missed that field goal. He's one of the best kickers around. It was just one of those things."

Simms agreed the 3-1 Giants were lucky to escape with the win. "This wasn't the toughest game I played but I sure was savage," said Simms, who completed 14 of 27 passes for 228 yards. "I looked like we were going to give the game away."

Defense dominated the first half of the contest, as New York had the only scoring chance but blew it when rookie running back George Adams coughed the ball up on the Eagles' 3 and Ray Ellis recovered.

UConn, Yale disappointed

By Kenneth R. Bozinet
United Press International

YALE COACH Carm Cozza says he was disappointed but understood the decision to cancel the Elis 27th game with intrastate rival Connecticut after Hurricane Gloria left the Yale Bowl without power and water.

And the Huskies coach, Tom Jackson, boasting of his team's week-long preparations for the matchup, said he was equally upset at not being able to renew the rivalry which this year "was going to be one heck-of-a game."

"Well, we're all very disappointed," Cozza said Sunday, speaking for his team and coaching staff. "I feel very down about the decision because our seniors have never beaten UConn's varsity."

UConn has beaten the Ivy League school the last three years, but the Elis are still up 28-17 in the series. Cozza and Jackson, however, will have to wait until next year to continue the series because Connecticut's only NCAA Division I-AA football teams.

New Haven Mayor Biagio DiLieto canceled the game because of the weather, but electricity and running water were out at the 70,000-seat Yale Bowl.

UConn officials attempted to move the game to the 16,200-seat Memorial Stadium on the main UConn campus in Storrs, but they ran into the same problems here that they did in New Haven," Jackson said.

Marino responds well to Elway's challenge

By Dove Raffo
United Press International

Dan Marino played his best game of the season Sunday in freezing weather and against a strong pass rush — and with the man drafted 26 picks ahead of him on the opposite sideline.
"He loves a challenge," Dolphins coach Don Shula said of his quarterback who threw for 300 yards and three touchdowns in a 30-26 victory over the Broncos in Denver.

Denver quarterback John Elway (7) sticks out his tongue as he runs through a hole in the Miami defense during first quarter action.

"I've never seen anyone who likes to win the way he does. He's a great quarterback."

Marino outdueled John Elway, the No. 1 draft choice in the 1983 draft. He was selected out of Stanford by the Colts, then dealt to Denver. Marino, out of Pittsburgh, was the 27th pick and sixth quarterback selected in the same draft.

"I don't have any grudges," said Marino, who was 25-of-43 without an interception. "I can understand how things happened. I didn't play well."

"Denver's defense did great today," Marino said. "They had a good rush and really pressured me. They double up on our outside receivers, and the inside guys were one-on-one. So we fell over the middle would work."

The Broncos, 2-2, scored on Winder's runs of 7 and 1 yards. Gene Lang's 10-yard run and on Rich Karim's 43-yard and 44-yard field goals.

In other games, Chicago crushed Washington 45-10, the Los Angeles Raiders defeated New England 35-20, New Orleans shocked San Francisco 20-17, Kansas City crushed Seattle 28-7, Detroit beat Tampa Bay 30-9, Dallas edged Houston 17-10, Minnesota shaded Buffalo 27-20, the New York Giants topped Philadelphia 16-10 in overtime. St. Louis took Green Bay 49-28, the Los Angeles Rams dropped Atlanta 17-6, Cleveland upset San Diego 21-7 and the New York Jets held off Indianapolis 25-20.

Tonight, Cincinnati is at Pittsburgh.

Hot pitchers to clash in Royals-Angels series

Angels' Rod Carew tries to score in fourth inning action Sunday but was out at the plate with Cleveland catcher Jerry Willard applying the tag.

Two of the league's hottest pitchers — John Candelaria of California and Bret Saberhagen of Kansas City — meet tonight to open a four-game series that could determine the winner of the AL West.

Candelaria, 6-2 since acquired from the Pirates in August, has stabilized the Angels' staff. In his only start against Kansas City this season, he pitched a four-hitter in a one-game lead in the series. The second-place Royals lost to Minnesota Sunday, 5-3.

Iowa goes Long way

By Lisa Harris
United Press International

No. 1 Auburn's loss to unranked Tennessee Saturday may have had a double impact on the No. 3 Iowa Hawkeyes.

Considering that No. 2 Oklahoma had struggled to beat Minnesota, it is conceivable the Hawkeyes can find themselves atop the rankings after their 57-3 rout of Iowa State. But there's more.

Auburn running back Bo Jackson left Saturday's game with an undetermined ankle injury and may miss the rest of the season, which should improve Iowa quarterback Chuck Long's chances of winning the Heisman trophy.

"There were 11 guys out there who knew what Jackson's number was," Tennessee coach Johnny Majors said.

And the way Long is throwing, the entire nation will know what his numbers are. Long passed for 223 yards and three touchdowns and completed 19-of-32 passes, including a 46-yard scoring toss to split end Scott Helverson, before leaving the game midway through the third quarter.

Ronnie Harmon added 103 yards rushing to lead Iowa to its third consecutive lopsided non-conference win. The Hawkeyes have outscored their opponents 153-23 in their first three games. Iowa is now poised for its highest placement in the rankings since it finished No. 2 in the final 1960 ratings.

"From a prestige standpoint, if they want to put Iowa No. 1, fine by me," said Iowa coach Hayden Fry. "There's no way to say whether we've earned it or not. All I know is we're 3-0 and our youngsters have played well."

Iowa's defense, the best in the nation, forced three turnovers in the second quarter and held the Cyclones to 49 total yards the second half.

Scott Helverson, who finished with eight catches for 154 yards, and Harmon each scored two touchdowns for Iowa. Harmon also caught five passes for 56 yards, and kicker Rob Houghtlin set a school single game record with 13 field goals.

The Hawkeyes will open Big Ten play next week against Michigan State. The two teams are scheduled to meet at Michigan State.

In other games involving ranked teams it was, No. 2 Oklahoma hanging on to beat Monmouth, 13-7, No. 4 Ohio State 48, Washington State 32, No. 5 Florida State 24, No. 20 Kansas 20, No. 6 Penn State 17, Rutgers 10, No. 7 Oklahoma State 45, Miami of Ohio 10, No. 9

Michigan 20, Maryland 0, and No. 10 Alabama 40, Vanderbilt 10.

Other scores were, Washington 21, No. 11 UCLA 14, No. 13 Arkansas 45, New Mexico State 13, No. 14 Nebraska 43, Oregon 10, Arizona State 24, No. 16 Southern Cal 0, Navy 17, No. 17 Virginia 13, No. 18 Air Force 49, New Mexico 12, and No. 19 Texas 38, Stanford 34.

No. 1 LSU and No. 12 Brigham Young were idle.

At Minneapolis, Tim Lashar kicked two field goals and Earl Johnson scored on a 1-yard run and the Sooners survived a frantic fourth-quarter comeback by Minnesota to win their season opener.

At Albuquerque, N.M., quarterback Bart Weiss passed for one touchdown and ran for another to lead Air Force, which is 3-0 in Western Athletic Conference play, and kicker Rob Houghtlin set a school single game record with 13 field goals.

In a notable achievement outside of Division I, Eddie Robinson tied Bear Bryant as college football's winningest coach when Grambling beat Oregon State, 22-6, in Shreveport, La. It was Robinson's 32nd victory since arriving at Grambling in 1941. He also has 103 losses. Robinson is currently 12-7 over the Prairie View team Saturday against Prairie View in Dallas.

WEST HAVEN (UPI) — Tailback Ron Andronovits scored on a fumble in the end zone through interceptions were returned for touchdowns as Los Angeles defeated New England, 35-20.

The Patriots led 20-14 at the half but never scored again while the Raiders' opportunistic play ended a two-game losing streak.

New England gained just 97 yards running on 32 rushing attempts. Afterwards, frustrated running back Tony Collins lamented: "We didn't come at them in the second half. The killer instinct — we didn't have it, from the coaching staff on down to us."

Raiders' quarterback Rusty Higer believes his team was reverting to its winning habit. "We got back to basics, the good hard-nosed football the Raiders are known for," he said.

FOXBORO, Mass. — The Los Angeles Raiders have a history of making the big plays, the New England Patriots' past is one of frustration. Nothing changed on Sunday.

Advice

Forget windows when tornado hits

DEAR ABBY: I am a regular reader of your column in the Cape Girardeau (Mo.) Bulletin Journal, in which I read a letter from a Texas asking about tornado information. Your advice to open two windows is no longer correct, according to Robert Hamilton, meteorologist-in-charge, National Weather Service Forecast Office in St. Charles, Mo.

For many years, we also advised people that in the event of a tornado warning, to open a window (or windows) on the side of the structure away from the approaching storm.

However, in the last few years, we instructed people to stay away from windows, and immediately seek shelter in the basement, in a closet under a stairway or in any strong supporting structure.

Abby, also tell your readers never to try to ride out a tornado in a mobile home or vehicle. There is much more safety under a substantial structure, or in a ditch or culvert. Two-thirds of the persons killed in the Wichita Falls, Texas, tornado of '79 were trying to escape the storm in their cars.

BRIAN MILLER,
COORDINATOR, OFFICE OF EMERGENCY PREPAREDNESS, JACKSON, MO.

DEAR BRIAN: Thank you for updating my information. And a standing ovation to all of the weather spotters who volunteered long hours, day and night, on some storm hilltop, watching for approaching storms. It's a miserable and dangerous job, and your weather spotters deserve all the praise and recognition you can get.

DEAR ABBY: This problem has me frustrated. I'm an independent 27-year-old single woman. I have a full-time job, I take courses at college at night and have little time for social life.

My parents live about an hour's drive from me, but in heavy traffic, it takes two hours each way. I visit them faithfully at least once a week — usually on the weekend. I also try to spend every holiday with them, but every time I go there, I'm asked why I don't come more often. They tell me I'm a selfish, ungrateful daughter who doesn't care about her lonely parents. I hear this lecture for the first 30 minutes I'm there. And when I start to leave, whether I've stayed for two hours or 18, they say, "You're leaving already? You just got here. You always have to rush off. Come back when you have more time to visit."

I lost a constant complaining about how little time I give them makes me angry. I honestly do my best I can, but I don't stay off, I won't visit them as much in the future as I have in the past. Please help me. I dread those visits home.

HASSLED

DEAR HASSLED: If you're giving them as much time as you can, try harder in a loving way to make them understand. And let them know that you are very hurt by their complaints.

You can't change your parents, but you can reduce the anger and frustration by talking openly about your feelings.

DEAR ABBY: I had to write after reading the letter from "Speechless in Santa Ana," whose dinner guests canceled at the last minute because another couple couldn't make it.

The same thing happened to me an hour before this couple was to arrive. She phoned and said, "Can we have a rain check?"

I said, "Sure. Call me the next time it rains for 40 days and 40 nights!" Then I hung up.

I lost a regular, but retained my phone number. You're right, Abby. Who needs friends like that?

WHY NEWSPAPERS?

A political candidate today is faced with the problem of combining traditional campaign techniques with the effective, informative and imaginative use of mass media. The success of a campaign can be attributed to how effectively modern advertising media is used.

Because campaign funds are usually hard to come by, it is important to determine which medium can give you the most valuable for the dollar spent. The newspaper offers clear-cut advantages.

- Believability — The printed word carries authority, conviction and believability. According to Roper's mass media attitude study spanning the years 1959-71, newspapers continued to lead television in acquainting people with candidates for local office.
- Acceptability — Newspapers occupy a unique position in a reader's daily life. They are read for current news events and are, therefore, a well-accepted source of information.
- Economy — Newspaper advertising production costs are relatively inexpensive. Also, it is difficult to be professional on television with a low budget.
- Assurance — Newspaper circulation can be verified by circulation audits, giving you the assurance of knowing exactly how many dollars are being and that the advertisements ran as scheduled.
- Flexibility — Newspapers allow readers to read, digest and refer back at leisure to your messages. You can provide all the details necessary to adequately state your case. It can be studied and evaluated at the reader's own convenience and pace. People do not have to be in a particular place at a particular time to see an advertisement.
- Localness — The new climate of the newspaper provides a perfect background for local political advertising. Page after page is devoted to subjects that are important to the community and its people. Local news is basic, and you and your campaign are making local news.

Use vitamin C to treat fruit

Polly Fisher

DEAR CAROL: Yes, you may crush vitamin C tablets and dissolve the powder in water. If your freezing directions call for teaspoon crystalline (pure) ascorbic acid, it is equal to 3,000 mg. Therefore, you would need to use three 1,000-mg. vitamin C tablets or six 500-mg. tablets to equal 1 teaspoon pure ascorbic acid. The advantage of using vitamin C tablets or pure crystalline ascorbic acid instead of commercial anti-darkening products is that you can

Big catch nearly sinks boat

FORT MYERS, Fla. (UPI) — The Coast Guard has found three fishermen who wish the "big one" had gotten away.

The men were aboard an 18-foot boat that capsized in heavy seas, apparently because it was carrying too many fish. The anglers clung to the craft for 12 hours until they were hoisted unharmed Sunday into a Coast Guard helicopter.

They told us they caught several large groupers and a 600-pound Jewfish. Coast Guard spokesman Joe Gibson said. "They had a lot of weight in the small boat and it's possible they may have overloaded the boat with the fish they had."

The huge fish swim away, Gibson said. The fishermen, Jody Weiss and Bill Gankler, both of Marco Island, and Jeff Smith of Naples, did not require hospitalization.

A search for the fishermen began Saturday night when other boats spotted an emergency flare in the Gulf of Mexico off the coast of Fort Myers.

Joseph Scheels, a passenger on the 72-foot Getaway II, said the vessel's captain, Bob Pitts, saw the flare and searched for the men for several hours.

"We circled around and searched them a few times, but out on the water you don't know which way the sound comes from. They were very lucky."

Officers aboard the Coast Guard boat also nearly overboarded in the water but could not find anyone in the darkness.

get the vitamins or ascorbic acid without added sugar. The commercial anti-darkening products usually are a mixture of ascorbic acid and sugar. While the quantity of sugar is probably not so great, you may wish to avoid added sugar in your frozen and canned foods. Also, vitamin C tablets are fairly inexpensive and handy to use if you already have them.

Treasure hunter scoffs at sceptics

WELLFLEET, Mass. (UPI) — A treasure hunter, who claims he has found the wreck of a pirate ship that sank Oct. 1717 laden with millions of dollars in booty, plans to prove his point by bringing up a ship's bell from the ocean floor off Cape Cod this week.

Barry Clifford plans to bring up the bell of what he claims is the Whidah on Tuesday or Wednesday while reporters watch, a published report said Sunday.

"We're right smack into the heart of the ship," Clifford told The Boston Herald. "We're going to bring up the bell, and there's the possibility that it will have the ship's name on it. If that doesn't convince people, nothing will."

Clifford said he found the wreck about one-quarter mile off shore from Wellfleet in July 1984. But critics have disputed his claim and the state Board of Underwater Archeology has refused to certify that the wreck is the Whidah.

The Whidah, a three-masted galleon captained by Sam "Black-Bellamy," sank in an April 1717 storm believed laden with millions of dollars worth of treasure.

Clifford said he has unearthed a total of $14 million worth of gold, silver and precious artifacts so far, including $4 million worth of goods in the past three weeks.

"We've got stuff worth $14 million at this point and we haven't even started," said Clifford.

Clifford resumed his hunt for the ship early this month after waiting for more than a year for an excavation permit from the Army Corps of Engineers.

Clifford said the items he has recovered so far include gold bars, jewelry, swivel guns, cannon balls, cannons and the ship's anchor.

"The stuff is in amazing condition," said Clifford. "The cold water preserved it perfectly."

Clifford made a five-year effort to bring up all the treasure and hopes to build a pirate museum near Faneuil Hall in Boston to display the booty.

DAVID STOCKMAN
... tax hike needed

Ex-budget chief wants action on deficit

By David E. Anderson
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Former budget director David Stockman, in an end of the fiscal year review, says "the joy ride is over" and the nation needs new tax increases and spending cuts to stave off economic disaster.

Stockman, who during his government tenure was known for his frankness, also said Sunday President Reagan's desire for a revenue-neutral tax reform package in the face of a $200 billion federal budget deficit is "unrealistic."

"I think the events of the last couple of weeks indicate the joy ride is over," Stockman said on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley." "We just can't live with these massive deficits without traumatic economic dislocations. I think if we're going to get out of this situation and restore any semblance of national solvency and fiscal discipline, it's going to take a very major tax increase — larger than we've ever had or contemplated — at least 2 percent of gross national product or about $100 billion a year," he said.

Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, appeared on the same program and predicted there would be a tax reform bill this year "if the House passes it — at the very latest — by Nov. 1."

But if the Senate doesn't get it by that time, "We can't make it," he said.

But Stockman took issue with Reagan's revenue-neutral proposal, in which the government would get no new revenue as taxes are lowered.

"I think the idea of a revenue-neutral tax reform is preposterous," he said. "The loopholes we close, the revenues ought to be put in the Treasury to pay our bills, not to give further tax cuts. We can't afford the one we already have."

Stockman, who for 4 1/2 years ran the Office of Management and Budget and engineered sweeping budget cuts and the 1981 tax cut, made the television appearance a day before the end of the 1985 fiscal year. It was his first interview since leaving the budget director's job Aug. 1 to join a Wall Street investment firm.

Stockman said the current economic situation is not "a depression in the classic sense where the economy grinds to a halt," but, "I think it is close to a depression in selected senses," citing as examples troubles in the farm, steel, textile and other sectors of the economy.

To deal with the economy, Stockman said, "We need a kind of across-the-board national sacrifice."

In addition to a tax increase, he also called for a two-year freeze on cost-of-living increases; a similar freeze on defense spending; middle class entitlements and tax breaks; as well as the elimination of a number of federal programs such as the Small Business Administration and Urban Development Action Grants and other programs.

Stockman said the reason for the current situation is that both parties have abdicated their political responsibilities in dealing with the deficit.

Guard battles oil spill

By Robert Engler
United Press International

CLAYMONT, Del. — The Coast Guard battled today to contain 45,000 gallons of crude oil that gushed into the Delaware River from a ruptured supertanker and spread for 20 miles, threatening water supplies and wildlife.

"It's stretching out and thinning like a piece of licorice when someone pulls it," Coast Guard spokesman Robert Mitchell said. "It is a major spill and we're concerned about the impact it can have."

Gov. Michael Castle called it the worst oil spill ever on the Delaware.

The DelBay, a recovery ship owned by a cooperative of eight petroleum companies, was skimming up the oil that spilled Saturday from the 800-foot Sunoco Grand Eagle after it ran aground and gashed a hole in its starboard

The Coast Guard used booms to block the oil from intakes for the water supplies of Wilmington and New Castle, and officials said they were confident they could prevent contamination of drinking water.

Cleanup crews boomed off creeks and waterways leading to waterfowl marshes in southeast Pennsylvania and northern Delaware, including the Bombay Wildlife Refuge, the largest on the East Coast for migrating Canada Geese.

Volunteers were collecting stricken birds for treatment by environmental agencies.

Coast Guard spokesman Mike Kelly said the trail of oil stretched for 20 miles early today from Wilmington to Philadelphia and the slick was breaking up into dozens of smaller ribbons and collecting in pockets along the shoreline.

The slick will flow with the tide. The unknown factor is just how much the DelBay can scoop up and how fast it can do it," said Jack Wilson, Delaware's secretary of Natural Resources and Environmental Control.

The Panamanian-registered tanker, loaded with 22 million gallons of crude, ran aground in shallow water at Cherry Island near the Delaware Memorial Bridge, then freed itself and steamed ahead to its destination, a Sunoco refinery in Marcus Hook, Pa.

The ship spilled 9,000 barrels, or 452,000 gallons of North Sea crude oil from its damaged hull as it moved.

Castle criticized the tanker pilot for continuing to the refinery after the accident, saying it caused a five-hour delay in alerting Delaware officials of the spill.

Designer wins treasure hunt

KEY WEST, Fla. (UPI) — A fashion designer won a $50,000 gold bar from a sunken Spanish galleon and an emerald worth $10,000 by outwitting 151 other contestants in Key West's week-long treasure hunt.

"It feels fabulous. It was a thrill to win," Debra Benedict said upon claiming her prizes.

Area merchants sponsored the treasure hunt, hoping to make it an annual event to promote tourism in the Florida Keys. Benedict plans to sell her winnings and donate part of the proceeds to a local charity.

"It's quite impractical to have a gold bar sitting around your house," she said.

The 152 contestants ranged in age from 19 to 78 and came from as far away as the Cayman Islands. Sometimes they stayed up all night to unravel clues found in Key West's streets, alleys and backstreets.

Benedict, who moved to Key West from Pittsburgh last year, discovered the final clue Saturday beneath the Garrison Bight Causeway Bridge.

She found a note: "Your treasure hunt is not done. This is your final clue. Return to Ocean Key (house) and ask Bleth if it's true."

"Bleth" is Bleth McNeely, vice president of Mel Fisher's Treasure Salvors Inc.

Almost half have electricity restored

The number of Northeast Utilities customers in Manchester and Bolton without electrical power dropped from about 4,500 to 2,400 between Monday night and this morning, an NU spokesman said today.

Spokesman Jose Chavez said NU would stick with its earlier estimate that nearly all residents will regain power by midnight tonight. But he cautioned that some "problem areas" will take longer to restore.

Chavez said those who have partial power or only kept power for a short time after it was turned on before losing it again.

Chavez said NU has hired private contractors to repair those lines, at no cost to the customer.

When asked about NU's priorities in deciding which customers should get their power back first, Chavez said, "The best analogy I can use is a tree. We must restore power first to the trunk, which are the main lines. After that comes the smaller branches and the leaves, or homes."

Chavez said NU crews are first repairing those lines which serve the largest number of customers. For example, he said, a crew will work on line that services 60 people before it works on one that serves 20.

The danger to school children from fallen wires is one reason the schools have been kept closed. Another is that some school buildings are still without power.

Meanwhile, water is being distributed at firehouses to people with containers. Manchester High School is open until 8 p.m. tonight for people who want to take showers.

Town crews are continuing their curbside pickup of limbs from down to dusk, while the sanitary landfill on Olcott Street will be open from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m. for the rest of the week.

Despite the progress reported by NU, several customers said this morning that they have only partial power or only kept power for a short time after it was turned on before losing it again.

Chavez said those who have partial power should report the problem immediately to NU's customer service department at 249-5741. He said the problem occurs when only one of the several wires that make up a power line is power first to the trunk, which are the main lines. After that comes the smaller branches and the leaves, or homes."

Don Gurrette, a lineman from the Coken utility company in Providence, R.I., spent his 49th birthday in Manchester Monday, helping to repair downed power lines left by Hurricane Gloria. Gurrette, who lives in Bristol, said that his company was put on standby Thursday and that he had been on the job here since 7 a.m. Friday.

Cost of Gloria's fury a relief to area insurers

By John F. Kirch
Herold Reporter

Phones are ringing off the hook at Manchester-area insurance agencies in the aftermath of Hurricane Gloria, but agents say the claims are not as serious as they had first expected.

After what was one of the worst hurricanes in Connecticut history, agents interviewed Monday and this morning said they were breathing a sigh of relief. Before Gloria faded through the Manchester area Friday afternoon, insurance companies projected billions of dollars worth of damage, stopped writing property damage policies or increasing coverage, and braced themselves for large claims.

But most of the agencies interviewed said that while the volume of calls was high, the claims were not as serious as they had feared.

"I think we have a lot to be grateful for," said Thomas A. Moeller, personal lines manager at Wolff-Zackin and Associates of Vernon, which insures the town of Manchester.

Moeller said his office had spoken with more people regarding damage claims this weekend than he had during the average month. He said Wolff-Zackin brought eight additional adjusters from the Midwest to help assess damages in Connecticut. But he said the claims won't cost as much as the company had originally projected.

"I think we're going to escape this thing from a dollar standpoint," Moeller said.

"It's the same as everywhere," Roy Smith, the owner of K.L. Smith Agency in Willimantic, said of his business. Smith said he had many claims but that there was "nothing major."

"We've been lucky as far as the dollar amounts go," said Laura Aldrich, office manager at the Urbanetti Insurance Agency on East Center Street. "It wasn't as serious as the insurance companies predicted."

Aldrich estimated that by Monday, the agency had between $8,000 and $9,000 worth of claims. She said she had predicted the amount would be twice as high before the hurricane actually hit. She was the only agency representative of five interviewed who gave a dollar estimate.

Other agents said they did not know the estimated cost of damage claims that had been filed since the weekend. But most said between 45 and 50 calls had come in since Saturday.

"It'll be a lot of money, but I wouldn't want to guess at what it would be," said Bill Rood, who works at the Crockett Agency on Main Street. "As an agent we don't get involved in that."

Rood said the agency had received about 50 claims since Friday. But he said none had been as serious as they would have been had the hurricane been worse.

$32,000 penalty proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The federal government today cited Union Carbide for willful negligence in producing safety procedures at its pesticide-producing plant in Institute, W.Va., and proposed more than $32,000 in penalties.

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration said the violations result from an investigation into an Aug. 11 leak at the plant that resulted in the hospitalization of six employees and about 135 area residents.

OSHA said the release of vapors resulted from the "uncontrolled decomposition of aldicarb oxime," the active ingredient in Temik, a pesticide.

Patrick Tyson, acting assistant secretary of labor, said the citations included three alleged "willful" violations with maximum proposed penalties of $10,000 each, plus three alleged "serious" violations with proposed penalties ranging from $600 to $800 each.

Union Carbide owns the pesticide plant in Bhopal, India, in which a leak Dec. 3, 1984, of methyl isocyanate was blamed for the deaths of at least 1,700 people.

An OSHA news release said Union Carbide was cited "for willful neglect of numerous safety procedures" as the result of the investigation.

Tyson said events leading to the West Virginia accident began Aug. 1 when a tank also containing dichloromethane was overladen with aldicarb oxime. A portion of it later was moved to another tank where it remained until Aug. 7.

On Aug. 7, all but 4,000 pounds of the mixture was moved back to the original tank, Tyson said. The remainder was inadvertently heated on Aug. 11 continuous heat produced a reaction that ultimately caused a rupture of gaskets on the oxidation reactor and the tank, releasing toxic vapors into the atmosphere.

In the citation, OSHA alleged several safety violations including failure to follow standard company procedures and to monitor material in storage.

Employees were exposed to the danger of a "rupture of a pressure vessel" due to the decomposition of aldicarb oxime as a result of the transfer of the toxic mixture to an oxidation reactor tank without following company standard operating procedures.

OSHA said an inadequately designed liquid level gauge failed to show the reactor still contained several thousand pounds of the mixture after return of the material to the original tank, employees failed to monitor the material in storage for temperature and pressure change and there was no backup system to check the alarms.

Engineering controls to prevent air contamination were not implemented. The agency said the company failed to ensure the second reactor tank was designed and constructed to hold the mixture, the design of the emergency venting system did not ensure proper venting, and the control room where the employees worked was not designed to prevent air contamination.

Emergency respiratory protective equipment was stored where it was neither quickly accessible to all employees in the control room nor adequate in number.

OSHA charged Carbide with serious violations including no emergency respiratory equipment for employees temporarily assigned to the aldicarb production unit; inadequate written standard operating procedures concerning the number of necessary emergency respirators and improper spacing and location of electrical cords.

Soviets detail arms proposal

GENEVA, Switzerland — The Soviet Union presented more details at the superpower arms talks today of a plan to slash offensive nuclear weapons in exchange for scrapping the "Star Wars" space arms project.

Negotiator Viktor Karpov, in his first public comment on the contents of the Soviet offer, told reporters the new proposals linked any limitation on existing long-range and medium-range nuclear weapons to a scrapping of the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative.

"Every sane man shouldn't want the 'Star Wars' project," Karpov said before entering today's plenary where his team was expected to answer questions about the offer first outlined at a 40-minute plenary session Monday.

Star Wars "leads to more danger of war," despite all words to the contrary," Karpov said. But President Reagan said again last week that the SDI program is not negotiable.

Karpov, the chief Soviet delegate, told reporters Monday that the proposals would provide "drastic solutions" to all issues at the talks.

The negotiations comprise three major areas — long-range strategic nuclear weapons, medium-range arms and space systems.

Officials in Washington said Moscow proposes cuts of up to 50 percent in nuclear arsenals but only if the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative — known as the "Star Wars" space defense program — is abandoned.

In Geneva, U.S. delegation leader Max M. Kampelman called the proposals "interesting" and said they would be studied carefully.

Although both sides in Geneva maintained tight secrecy on details, senior U.S. officials in Washington Monday questioned Soviet sincerity in offering the deal before the November summit.

Kenneth Adelman, director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, said the proposal contained some "blatantly one-sided elements" — like the demand that the Strategic Defense Initiative, or "Star Wars" program, be scrapped.

National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane said Moscow may be seeking to limit U.S. weapons programs while remaining free to continue work on new systems of its own.

Since the arms talks began March 12, the Soviet Union has insisted that reductions in long-range and medium-range nuclear weapons could be considered only if Washington accepts a ban on all space systems.

Master essayist E.B. White dies

BROOKLIN, Maine (AP) — E.B. White, the master of simple writing whose works included the classic children's story "Charlotte's Web" and some of The New Yorker's most memorable essays, died today at his home at the age of 86.

White's death was announced by the Jordan Farm Home in Ellsworth, J. Russell Wiggin, publisher of the weekly Ellsworth American and a longtime friend of White, said the author and humorist had suffered from Alzheimer's disease for about a year and his condition had worsened steadily.

White, who revised a respected guidebook to prose style, was one of the writers most closely associated with the early days of The New Yorker. For 12 years, he wrote the editorial essays in the magazine's "Notes and Comment," and he worked closely with cartoonist and author James Thurber.

He was born Elwyn Brooks White on July 11, 1899, in Mount Vernon, N.Y., where his parents moved from Brooklyn, presumably, White said, "because Mount Vernon sounded tonier."

He married Katharine Sergeant Angell, The New Yorker's first fiction editor and mother of New Yorker writer Roger Angell, and in 1937 they moved to a 160-year-old white clapboard farmhouse beside the sea in North Brooklin. His wife died in 1972.

His children's story, "Charlotte's Web," about a spider who saves a pig's life by helping it outwit a tourist attraction, was so popular that White said it had "kept me alive, been my bread and butter" for many years.
