An unidentified rescue official teams with firefighters Dan Lingard, Michael Tomkunus and Bob Watts to pull injured driver James Moriarty, 59, from his overturned truck in the Hockanum River Tuesday afternoon. Moriarty remained in serious condition this morning at Manchester Memorial Hospital.

Rescue prevents drowning

Paramedics, Eighth Utilities District firefighters and a passing truck driver saved a South Windsor man from possibly drowning in the Hockanum River Tuesday, after his truck rolled off North Main Street and overturned in the river.

The driver of the overturned truck, 59-year-old James Moriarty, remained in serious condition this morning at Manchester Memorial Hospital.

The driver of the overturned truck, 59-year-old James Moriarty, remained in serious condition this morning at Manchester Memorial Hospital. A hospital spokeswoman did not have any details on Moriarty's injuries, but police and firefighters said it appeared he had suffered neck injuries and may have been in shock when he was taken to the hospital.

Eighth District Fire Department spokesman Thomas O'Marra this morning gave much of the credit for saving Moriarty's life to another truck driver who, after seeing the accident, waded into the knee-deep river and held Moriarty's head above the water until rescue teams arrived.

O'Marra tentatively identified the passing truck driver this morning as Harry "Bill" Hoover, a driver for the Maaco Auto Painting and Body Works shop on North Main Street. Hoover left the scene of the accident Tuesday before rescue officials could talk to him, O'Marra said.

O'Marra said firefighters were called to the accident scene at about 2:30 p.m. Tuesday. Police said this morning that they are still trying to determine the cause of the accident.

O'Marra said firefighters and paramedics freed Moriarty from his truck in waters that were 4 to 5 feet deep.

MCC helps teachers help each other

Teachers sharing ideas on similar academic disciplines is not new. But teachers from different disciplines and all educational levels getting together is a first, according to the leader of a group that meets at Manchester Community College.

The new academic alliance includes MCC staff members and representatives of nine area high schools, including those in Manchester, Bolton and Coventry. They have met three times since last spring, said Lois Ryan, an English teacher who is also heading up the alliance committee under the direction of Toby Tamarkin, director of MCC's Humanities Division.

"If we are successful in doing this, we will be the only academic alliance to do this in the country," Ryan said in a recent interview.

One purpose of the alliance is to allow educators to find out how they can help each other — from sharing equipment, teachers' courses or offering advanced-level courses for students at a central location.

The alliance could also help teachers form political action groups obtain state or federal funding for projects, she said.

Ryan said the college staff members want to know what's going on in the high schools and the high schools want to know how to prepare students for college. "It is by no means 'what can we do for you,'" Ryan said of MCC's role in the alliance.

"It is good to get teachers together who still are positive and have a high energy level," Ryan said. She said the teachers seem to think the meetings are worthwhile.

One of the teachers involved in the alliance, Joan Hopper, an English teacher at Bolton High School, agreed. Hopper said she is enthusiastic about cooperating with MCC and area schools. She said she feels there is a need to educate both the students and the general public on the humanities.

Hopper said programs could be especially helpful for students with special talents because special programs are often the victims of budget cuts.

Other high schools involved in the alliance are Glastonbury, East Catholic, Rockville, East Hartford, Hartford and South Windsor.

But the government let him leave Italy on grounds the United States did not produce clear evidence that Abbas did anything more than persuade the hijackers to surrender aboard the Egyptian airliner that was intercepted by U.S. Navy jets over the Mediterranean.

The unconfirmed press reports about Abbas' role in the hijacking were liable to prove embarrassing for Prime

Doctors' union proposal sign of economic times

By John Gustavsen
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Unionization of doctors and dentists in the state is a classic worker's response to a relatively new set of problems confronting the health care industry, according to a University of Connecticut labor expert.

Formation of the Connecticut Federation of Physicians and Dentists was announced Tuesday by Dr. Joseph Dineen of Ansonia, who said the group's aim is to reduce the control of big business and government over health care.

Dineen told a news conference in Hartford that widespread new health care policies favor profit over patients, and said many doctors feel threatened by legally mandated fees, high malpractice insurance costs and a freeze on Medicare reimbursements. "This is characteristic of a situation in which doctors and dentists are increasingly working in bureaucratic organizations and thus do not share the same kind of direction over health care," David N. Cooper said.

"The policy is set by the health care organizations, not by the doctors," said Cooper, associate professor of labor education at UConn. "They're saying in essence that these policies do not allow them to exercise their professional judgment."

FORMATION OF THE CONNECTICUT UNION follows one in Massachusetts in June. Doctors or dentists have also unionized in California, Oregon, Utah, Arizona

Michigan, Hawaii and Colorado. Organizing drives are under way in Florida, Illinois, Indiana, Pennsylvania, New York and Washington.

"It's the result of the advent of large bureaucratic organizations providing health care and the new salaried status of doctors and dentists," Cooper said. "If they had their shingle outside their door ... naturally this kind situation would never exist."

Cooper also said payment by salary as opposed to fee delineates the historic distinction between those who unionize and those who do not.

"Now, many doctors receive salary, which is fixed, so there may be some reason to organize," he said. "It gives an important forum for being able to show what their views are and to create another viewpoint ... for helping to decide what proper treatment is."

THE UNION BLAMED INSURANCE COMPANIES and government agencies for changing the doctor-patient relationship "by putting cost ahead of patient care."

"We are told when to admit patients, how much and what treatment they may receive and when they must be discharged," a union recruitment letter said.

The group hopes to represent employed physicians in collective bargaining over wages and working conditions, and help in claim disputes with insurance companies and government agencies.

Dr. Arthur Wolf, a Hartford internist who is chairman of ConnectiCare, a Hartford-area HMO with 750 physicians, defended organizations such as his, which he said have helped to cut down on the rate of hospitalization.

"Of course I recognize their concerns and I think it's a legitimate concern," he said. "The intrusion into medical decisions by third parties ... compromises medical care in many instances."

"That's a fear that a lot of physicians have — that decisions will be made at a great distance for the sake of the bottom line," Wolf said.

Crestfield strikers to get union funds

A finance committee will be organized this afternoon to help allocate money to striking employees of the Crestfield Ferwood nursing home, a union official said this morning.

"Nurses' aides and other service workers at the Vernon Street nursing home walked off their jobs Monday because management has failed to negotiate a contract with District 1199 of the New England Health Care Employees Union, which represents 84 workers."

Bill Meyerson, communications director for District 1199, said today that between 6 and 65 workers have joined the strike.

Last week workers voted 38-9 to walk off their jobs. Meyerson said three strikers will sit on the finance committee, which will decide on the allocation of funds for workers throughout the strike. The committee, Meyerson said, can draw from a "multi-million-dollar" national strike fund for as long as the strike lasts.

Members of District 1199's membership at the 155-bed nursing home live in single-parent households headed by women.

District 1199 will also hold fund-raisers at home available where workers can eat, Meyerson said.

The owners contend that the union, which represents 70,000 workers in 23 states and Puerto Rico, called the strike despite a settlement agreement among its members. Co-owner Roland Castleman, a Manchester attorney, has said a minority of the 84 employees wanted the strike.

State health inspectors have been monitoring the quality of care at the nursing home since the workers walked off their jobs. Castleman said Tuesday the quality of care has been judged adequate by the inspectors.

The owners have said the strike is illegal because District 1199 did not give proper notification to state and federal authorities before workers walked off their jobs.

They have also said that union officials started picketing before the actual strike day.

Officials for the National Labor Relations Board in Hartford said today a decision has not yet been made on the owners' complaints. District 1199 was certified by the full labor board in Washington, D.C. earlier this month.

action is the right one — a claim Fogarty admitted is true. Commenting on the Republican campaign platform, which calls for more sidewalk repair and better upkeep of parks, Fogarty said he favors whatever the town can afford to provide. But he said town park crews have been given more and more work while their size has remained steady. He said he favors increasing the number of park employees, decreasing the number of school maintenance personnel and having the Park Division care for school grounds.

Manchester In Brief

Court theft put at $10,000

State police believe that about $10,000 in cash and checks was stolen last weekend in a burglary at Manchester Superior Court, spokesman Adam Berluti said this morning.

Berluti said he did not know how much of the money was in checks and how much was in cash. No arrests have been made so far in the case, he added.

Several rooms of the courthouse were burglarized sometime between the close of business Friday and about 6 a.m. Monday, when a janitor found several broken windows in the building, state police said.

Berluti would not say Tuesday which rooms were burglarized. But court officials said a vault room in the clerk's office had apparently been entered. In addition, the doors of a courtroom used primarily for arraignments were noticeably damaged Tuesday afternoon.

Hartford State's Attorney John Bailey said Tuesday that authorities have found no connection between the burglary and his investigation into the apparent embezzlement of more than $11,000 in parking fines from the courthouse.

Pegasus complies with rules

Manchester Zoning Enforcement Officer Thomas O'Marra's ruling that a Brainard Place trucking company was in compliance with zoning regulations has been upheld by Town Attorney Kevin O'Brien.

O'Marra said Pegasus Trucking at 38 Brainard Place could use the site for truck parking provided it obtained a certificate of compliance from town zoning regulators.

To receive the certificate, O'Marra said today, the company must pave the trucking lot that is across the street from the company building.

The Planning and Zoning Commission had asked O'Marra to look into residents' complaints that the trucking company was bringing excess noise, traffic and diesel fumes to the neighborhood.

Topliff commends firefighters

Eighth District Fire Chief Harold Topliff has commended firefighters in the district's volunteer department for their work during a thunderstorm Sept. 9 and during Hurricane Gloria Sept. 27.

He reported to the district Board of Directors at a meeting Monday that certificates of commendation have been awarded to two firefighters, Wallace Irish Jr. and Michael Tomkonous, for outstanding performance Sept. 9 when the department was swamped with calls.

Topliff reported that the department answered 27 calls during Hurricane Gloria and 11 alarms directly related to the storm in the next six days.

Manchester sells firewood

The town is selling firewood as part of its forestry program at town watersheds.

The wood is stacked in four foot lengths, is still green and is mostly oak. It is available for $55 a cord to those who want from one to five cords and for $50 a cord to people who want six cords or more.

The pieces are about eight inches in diameter. The wood is stored in a roadside location at the town's Buckingham Reservoir in Glastonbury.

Buyers will have to load and transport the wood without assistance and will have to assume all the risks involved.

The wood must be paid for in advance at the General Services Department in the basement of the Municipal Building at 41 Center St. When the payment is made, the buyer will be given a receipt and assigned a date and time to pick up the wood. He or she will also be given directions to the storage site.

Picking times will be Monday through Friday between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. and on Saturdays between 8 a.m. and noon. For information call 647-3031.

Blue suede Beatles

The ultimate version of "Blue Suede Shoes" was played in a London studio this week. Two ex-Beatles, George Harrison and Ringo Starr, and Eric Clapton joined Carl Perkins in marking the 30th anniversary of the rock 'n' roll classic.

"I've sung that song since 1955 exactly 30 years ago this month," the greasy-haired Perkins said. "But I never enjoyed playing it so much as here tonight with my rockabilly buddies."

The "super-group" was joined by Dave Edmunds and Rosanne Cash and they went through several rockabilly anthems from the Sun Records days like "Honey, Don't," "That's Alright Mama," "Blue Moon of Kentucky" and "Whole Lotta Shakin' Going On."

"It's been a long time," Perkins said to Ringo, who shot back "only for you; I hope you don't come back for another 25 years."

The session will be shown on cable television in the United States early next year.

Vietnam discloses report of typhoon

BANGKOK, Thailand — A powerful typhoon that swept through central Vietnam last week killed at least 670 people and left 128 missing, official Radio Hanoi reported.

The state-run radio broadcast, monitored in Bangkok late Tuesday, reported that Typhoon Cecil struck the central Vietnamese province of Vinh Tri Thien Oct. 15-16, causing serious damage and heavy casualties.

A total of 670 people were killed and 128 were reported missing, the radio said. Another 227 people were injured in the storm that blew down electricity poles and unleashed serious flooding.

"Five villages were completely ravaged by the typhoon," the Radio Hanoi report said.

The radio reported large-scale evacuations from low-lying coastal areas. It said 47,000 houses were destroyed and 182,000 damaged by the strong winds and flooding.

Fogarty keeps an eye on the 'field'

Editor's note: The Herald today continues profiling candidates in the Nov. 5 town election.

When Democratic Director James F. Fogarty makes a speech at meetings of the Board of Directors — if speech is the right word — it is always terse and often impatient.

His latest: "I think it's a waste of time."
Fogarty, almost universally known as "Dutch," made that comment in disagreeing with other board members about a study of hydropower at the Union Pond dam. The town administration had recommended that the town give up the idea of building a hydropower facility because it seemed economically infeasible. The other directors were not convinced and wanted more study.

Fogarty, however, thought the administration had proved its case.

But in general, the 61-year-old Fogarty is no rubber stamp for the administration.

"I don't think I've ever raised my voice," she says, "but I've shaken with anger."

The minority party has to be a watchdog, she says. Mercier says she likes to think she has made a contribution in the past two years.

"I've been judged on my merits," she says.

She says the Republican ticket is more unified this year than it has been in the past, echoing a recurring theme in the Republican election campaign. But Mercier says a party can't have six individuals running who are clones of one another. There are areas of expertise on the Republican slate, and that makes it a strong one, she says.

Mercier says that under the Democrats, town has kept its budget below the amount needed to provide the bare necessities. As evidence, she cites what she regards as the poor condition of walks and parks, an inadequate number of police on patrol, and some public school classes that are too large. She says residents might accept a tax increase if they knew exactly what they were going to get for their money.

In any event, Mercier says the question of better municipal services is one that must be addressed by the next Board of Directors.

THOMAS H. FERGUSON Board of Directors

VOTE REPUBLICAN ON NOV. 5th

Paid for by The Committee to Elect Thomas Ferguson, Charlene Benito, Treasurer

Dear Friends,
I Love Manchester!
When I think of coming home ... I think not specifically of my house on Hackmatack Street, but of driving into the Town of Manchester, Connecticut.
My deep feelings for Manchester derive from my familial roots here in Town. My maternal and paternal Great Grandparents settled here when they were in their early twenties. My family has continued to live here and has served Manchester for four generations.
Although I am a lifelong Manchester resident, I am mindful of the many reasons that draw new families here. My wife, Kim and I have chosen Manchester as the town to raise our children as my forebears decided to do many years ago.
My deepest desire is to continue serving on the Board of Directors and put forth a continued effort to keep Manchester the progressive and enjoyable town that it should always be!

Once again, sewer spending fails to spark interest

By Alex Girelli
Herald Reporter

Only four people who are not town officials attended a presentation Tuesday night about proposed improvements to the town sewage treatment plant, the subject of a bonding referendum in the Nov. 5 election.

The presentation was the second for the public on the question, which would allow the town to spend up to $14.3 million for the $26 million project. Only two members of the public attended the first presentation Oct. 7 at Robertson School.

Town administrators and elected officials appeared at a loss to understand the apparent lack of public interest in the question, which will play a large role in household sewer bills for the foreseeable future.

The four non-officials at the meeting Tuesday in the hearing room of Lincoln Center were Betty Sadloski, president of the Manchester Property Owners Association; Jay Giles, former town public works director; Edward Boland, a Republican candidate for the Board of Directors; and one citizen who did not identify himself.

Ten people attended an open house at the treatment plant on Otis Street earlier in the day.

If it passes, the referendum question will authorize the upgrading of the plant so that discharged waste contains less nitrogen and pollutes the Hockanum River less. The town is under state orders to make the river fit for swimming and fishing by the end of 1988.

AT THE MEETING TUESDAY, Sadloski, who has expressed her personal opposition to the bond issue, asked why the project is expected to cost $26 million now when the price tag for the same plant was only $20 million in 1983 when voters decided to authorize a bond issue for it.

George Kandra, the town public works director, said the increase is due to inflation in construction costs. Robert A. Witzgall, a project manager for Metcalf and Eddy, the engineering firm that designed the plant, explained that tracking contracts awarded since 1983 and applying the formula to the $20 million figure puts the current estimate at $26 million.

The citizen who did not identify himself said he saw no point in delaying orders from the federal Environmental Protection Agency and the state Department of Environmental Protection that require the town to upgrade the plant. But he said citizens are thrown into confusion by the dollar figures that have been published about the referendum.

KANDRA SAID it is impossible to provide an exact figure because the town does not know how much it may get in federal and state grants, if in fact, it does get the grants. General Manager Robert Weiss said the grant now available could go to the town of Winsted if it citizens vote a charter change needed to authorize a bond issue and then vote for the bond issue itself.

The language of the Nov. 5 bond authorization describes the worst scenario, under which the town would have to pay $14.3 million of the $26 million cost. If the town can get more than the minimum grants, the local cost could go down.

One possibility being explored is that the town may be "grandfathered" under an old federal schedule of grants. If it is, the local cost could go as low as 10 percent of the total construction cost.

The key to grandfathering is whether the town, when it built a trunk sewer in 1981, began the overall sewer program that includes the improvements to the sewage disposal plant.

At Tuesday's meeting, Democratic town Director Stephen Cassano, a strong advocate of the sewer improvements, acted as "devil's advocate," asking if the plans included unnecessary extras.

WITZGALL SAID that when the work was designed, federal and state officials expected to pay 90 percent of the cost and would not permit any unneeded facilities.

Cassano then asked if the plan is underwritten. Witzgall said the design flow of 8.7 million gallons a day on the average is based on the needs of a population of 63,000 by the year 2010.

When Cassano asked if federal officials would really force the town to bring the sewer plant up to current standards of sewage treatment, Witzgall said that although enforcement has been lax in the past, "What we are hearing is that the EPA is much more active now in seeking compliance."

Political Roundup

Boland backs sewer plan; fund-raisers set

Edward Boland, a Republican candidate for the Board of Directors in the Nov. 5 election, said today he is convinced that a plan for improvements to the sewage treatment plant is sound and that the town should go forward with it.

Voters will be asked to approve a bond issue for the $26 million project which limits to $14.3 million the amount of local money that can be devoted to the work.

Boland said he previously had questions about whether the town would end up spending a large amount of money for a plant that would end up technologically inferior and insufficient for future needs.

He said today that a conversation he had with Public Works Director George Kandra and an explanation at a meeting Tuesday have convinced him that the plan is a good one.

Spaghetti for sale
An "Irish-Italian Spaghetti Night with Roger and Dutch" has been scheduled Tuesday from 5 to 8 p.m. at the Army and Navy Club, 100 Main St., as a fund-raising event for the campaigns of Democrats Roger Negri and James F. Fogarty.

Negro is seeking re-election as town treasurer and James "Dutch" Fogarty is seeking re-election as town director.

Herbert Stevenson and John DiDonato are co-chairmen of the event. Marie Negri and Anthony Pietrantonio are co-treasurers. Other committee members are Irene Pisch, Pat DiDonato, Joseph Negri, Kay Bolduc, Margaret Davis, Joseph Diminico, Dolores Pietrantonio, Cindy Oliver, Joyce Bridgeman, Del "Columbe" and Geraldine Kelley.

The event, called "Weinbergfest in October," an evening with the puffed up $1 million bond set by the U.S. District Court in Hartford in cash and property, spoke at a news conference. He was joined by relatives of the other defendants and members of the United Anti-Repression Committee, a legal group trying to raise bail and legal expenses for the accused.

Twelve people arrested Aug. 30 on a grand jury indictment are still jailed and three others, including former Wells Fargo security guard Victor M. Gereza, are fugitives.

Farinacci accused the FBI of framing him and the others, and said that "if they get a fair and impartial trial they will all be acquitted."

He also denied any ties with Los Mochteros, which claimed responsibility for the 1983 robbery as well as several killings and bombings in Puerto Rico. But he called the group "a patriotic Puerto Rican organization that is fighting for the freedom of our people."

The prosecution alleges that Farinacci is a top leader of the clandestine group.

Farinacci said morale was high among the nine Wells Fargo defendants being held at the federal prison in Otisville, N.Y., despite what he called bad conditions at the facility. Another male prisoner is being held in Danbury, Conn., and two female defendants are at the Metropolitan Correction Center in New York.

Licenses probe is pursued

HARTFORD (AP) — State officials have suspended issuance of welders' licenses and asked the chief state's attorney's office to investigate possible cheating on the state-required licensing tests.

"We consider this matter to be very serious," state Consumer Protection Commissioner Mary M. Heslin said Tuesday. "Beyond that, I can't say a lot more."

Her department has jurisdiction over occupational licensing boards.

Top licensing-board officials learned Monday that some welders at the Millstone III nuclear power plant and elsewhere in Connecticut had access to marked copies of the test.

The Hartford Courant obtained copies of the test from members of Local 76 of the Plumbers and Pipefitters Union. They told the newspaper that the tests had been freely circulated among workers at the Millstone III plant, under construction in Waterford.

Heslin said she wrote Chief State's Attorney John J. Kelly to ask that his office investigate fully.

The next welder's licensing examination was to be given within the next two weeks.

Stevenson heads effort for Negro

Herbert Stevenson, Manchester's Democratic registrar of voters, has been named campaign manager for Democrat Roger Negro, who seeks his eighth term as town treasurer in the Nov. 5 election.

Stevenson managed Negro's 1983 campaign. He has also managed political campaigns for William FitzGerald, judge of probate, and Francis Mahoney, a former state representative. He has been Manchester campaign coordinator for U.S. Rep. Barbara Kennelly.

Others serving on the committee for Negro's re-election are Anthony and Dolores Pietrantonio, co-treasurers; Catherine Bolduc, secretary; Robert and Cindy Oliver, Geraldine Kelley, Margaret Davis, and Richard Dyer.

Stevenson said that during Negro's 14 years in office, "his professional administration of town funds with $2,186,125 annual interest earned by his competitive bidding and short-term investment program equates to approximately $1 million in savings to the taxpayers of Manchester."

Negro is opposed by Republican J. Winthrop Porter.

State pushes group home work

By Susan Vaughn
Herald Reporter

Plans to finish a long-delayed group home for retarded people are about a week behind schedule, but work on the Wetherell Street home should be completed by the first of January, a spokesman for the state Department of Administrative Services said Tuesday.

On-site pre-bid meetings between the department's Bureau of Public Works and the contractors doing the work will be held later this week in Manchester and at three other sites where group homes have been delayed, said Thomas Barnett, director of communications for the department.

Following the meetings, the contractors will submit bids for contracts which will be "awarded shortly," Barnett said.

Separate contracts will be awarded for each site to speed the work, Barnett said. Delays on rebidding the project stemmed from the reprinting of specifications for contractors, Barnett said.

Barnett said the pre-bid conferences are important because the contractors will be taking over projects left unfinished by another contractor. A $1.7 million contract with Leslie and Elliott of Dayville to build eight homes around the state was cancelled in August because of numerous delays.

The Manchester home was originally scheduled for completion in July 1984.

guards have shown us great respect and admiration," Farinacci said.

He also said the defendants' complaints to the warden had won them concessions, such as being permitted to meet twice a day in groups of five.

Meanwhile, United Anti-Repression Committee spokeswoman Rita Zengotta said the group is trying to raise funds to pay the bail set for six other defendants, ranging from $5,000 to $250,000.

She said the committee has already spent about $15,000 on transportation and lodging for defense attorneys and witnesses, and another $6,000 to tape the testimony of witnesses who could not stay in Hartford during the bond hearings.

Farinacci's bail was posted by members of his family.

Meanwhile in Hartford Tuesday, U.S. District Judge T. Emmet Clarke rejected a $250,000 bond that federal magistrate F. Owen Eagan had set for another suspect in the case.

Clarke, in ordering that Ivonne Melendez be held without bond, accepted federal prosecutors' recommendations that she would flee.

Prosecutors and defense attorneys had asked Clarke to review all 11 bond rulings made by Eagan, who has ruled in favor of defendants Clarke has reviewed four bond rulings so far, upholding two and withdrawing bond that had been set for two others.

Wells Fargo defendant denies Macheteros ties

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — The first of 13 people charged with the $7 million Wells Fargo robbery in Connecticut to be freed is denying he was a member of Los Macheteros, the clandestine group that claimed responsibility for the robbery.

Jorge Farinacci Garcia, who arrived here early Tuesday after posting the $1 million bond set by the U.S. District Court in Hartford in cash and property, spoke at a news conference. He was joined by relatives of the other defendants and members of the United Anti-Repression Committee, a legal group trying to raise bail and legal expenses for the accused.

State pushes group home work

By Susan Vaughn
Herald Reporter

Plans to finish a long-delayed group home for retarded people are about a week behind schedule, but work on the Wetherell Street home should be completed by the first of January, a spokesman for the state Department of Administrative Services said Tuesday.

On-site pre-bid meetings between the department's Bureau of Public Works and the contractors doing the work will be held later this week in Manchester and at three other sites where group homes have been delayed, said Thomas Barnett, director of communications for the department.

Following the meetings, the contractors will submit bids for contracts which will be "awarded shortly," Barnett said.

Separate contracts will be awarded for each site to speed the work, Barnett said. Delays on rebidding the project stemmed from the reprinting of specifications for contractors, Barnett said.

Barnett said the pre-bid conferences are important because the contractors will be taking over projects left unfinished by another contractor. A $1.7 million contract with Leslie and Elliott of Dayville to build eight homes around the state was cancelled in August because of numerous delays.

The Manchester home was originally scheduled for completion in July 1984.

State Sen. Carl Zinsser, R-Manchester, has repeatedly criticized the Department of Administrative Services for the delay on

Wells Fargo defendant denies Macheteros ties

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — The first of 13 people charged with the $7 million Wells Fargo robbery in Connecticut to be freed is denying he was a member of Los Macheteros, the clandestine group that claimed responsibility for the robbery.

Jorge Farinacci Garcia, who arrived here early Tuesday after posting the $1 million bond set by the U.S. District Court in Hartford in cash and property, spoke at a news conference. He was joined by relatives of the other defendants and members of the United Anti-Repression Committee, a legal group trying to raise bail and legal expenses for the accused.

Twelve people arrested Aug. 30 on a grand jury indictment are still jailed and three others, including former Wells Fargo security guard Victor M. Gereza, are fugitives.

Farinacci accused the FBI of framing him and the others, and said that "if they get a fair and impartial trial they will all be acquitted."

He also denied any ties with Los Macheteros, which claimed responsibility for the 1983 robbery as well as several killings and bombings in Puerto Rico. But he called the group "a patriotic Puerto Rican organization that is fighting for the freedom of our people."

The prosecution alleges that Farinacci is a top leader of the clandestine group.

Farinacci said morale was high among the nine Wells Fargo defendants being held at the federal prison in Otisville, N.Y., despite what he called bad conditions at the facility. Another male prisoner is being held in Danbury, Conn., and two female defendants are at the Metropolitan Correction Center in New York.

Robertson, bucking party, still wants special session

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — State Senate President Pro Tempore Philip S. Robertson disagrees with other Republican legislative leaders who say there's no need for a special legislative session this fall.

Robertson, a Cheshire Republican, still wants such a session so that taxes can be cut.

He shunned a series of public hearings held by legislative Republicans over the last few weeks. The GOP wanted to find out what the public wanted done with the roughly $40 million extra the state ended up with at the close of the 1984-85 budget year.

Some people called for more spending in a variety of areas. Robertson said the new spending could wait until the regular session convenes in February. Now, he said, is the time to call a special session and cut taxes.

"There's no other reason for a surplus but that you're charging people too much in taxes," he said. "The longer you delay returning that money to the people, the less properly you're serving them."

Other Republican leaders said they had concluded from the public hearings that they might as well wait, especially because the regular session is only four months away.

"My own impression (from the hearings) was that while some things need addressing, there's nothing resembling anything of an emergency nature," said House Speaker R.E. Van Norstrand, R-Darien.

"We didn't get any real compelling testimony that would give us reason to go into a special session between now and February," said Senate Majority Leader Reginald J. Smith, R-New Hartford.

The extra $40 million is now in a special fund to be used for education and teacher salary increases, and will stay there unless the law is changed and the money diverted.

Robertson swung the hearings because Democrats weren't permitted on the panels taking the testimony.

"I certainly was not in favor of some partisan type of thing," he said. "They were canceling out a large percentage of the representatives of the people. I was against that when they were handling it."

House Majority Leader Robert G. Jaekle, R-Stratford, said the GOP got an array of suggestions on ways to spend the money. There was little talk of cutting taxes.

Among the suggestions, according to Jaekle:

- more money for cities and towns for education. Jaekle said that many towns will lose money next year unless the formula for distributing school money is changed.
- helping cities and towns, as well as private business, with obtaining liability insurance.
- more money for road repairs and new highways.
- housing for the elderly and more affordable housing for everyone.
- more money to help traumatic brain injury victims.
- more money for libraries.
- eliminating the real estate conveyance tax, which amounts to one-half of 1 percent of the selling price of a piece of real estate.

O.C. Garza, chief of media relations for the Texas Tourist Development Board, points out an area of East Texas which he feels the fall foliage colors are equal to or better than those in the New England states. Garza earlier said that when it comes to the colors of autumn, New England "ain't got nothing" on Texas.

Texans claim their foliage is best

By United Press International

An old-fashioned feud seems to be brewing between tourism officials in New England and their counterparts in Texas, who claim fall foliage in the Lone Star State is the most spectacular in the nation.

"Baloney! Nuts!" said Wanda Plumer, director of Maine's Tourism Department.

Debbie First, deputy director of the Massachusetts Division of Tourism, said the claim is a "typical Texas tall tale."

"Have you ever been to Texas? There's miles between trees," First said.

The dispute started Monday when a vacation guide issued by the Texas State Tourist Development Agency said, New England, its famed autumnal hues notwithstanding, "ain't got nothing on Texas."

The guide went on to advise against journeying to New England in search of hillside splashed with gold, orange or crimson.

"East Texas national forests and state parks have the same gorgeous colors and more forest acreage than New England anywhere," the brochure said.

"Hah!" replied Pat Van Fleet of the New Hampshire Office of Vacation Travel. "Texas always thinks they have the best of everything, and I'm sure they have some nice leaves. But I find it hard to believe it could come close to ours, our yellows and our oranges."

O.C. Garza, author of the brochure, admitted Texas is not well known for its fall foliage.

"But we've got 655,000 acres of beautiful woods that are largely unknown," he said. "We were just trying to grab some attention — and we certainly got that."

OPINION

Fauliso shuttles to boost his boss

First thing first, says Joe Fauliso, the state's lieutenant governor and probable running mate again with Gov. Bill O'Neill if the Democratic chief heads his party's ticket in 1986.

And the priority now, says Fauliso, is helping Democrats win in local elections next month for mayor or first selectman. The state election next year will be along soon enough, he says.

The local elections will lead, of course, to a statewide test of the O'Neill administration next year, either by voters in the November showdown with Republicans or by former Congressman Toby Moffett and a band of Congressmen in a September primary.

Capitol Comments
Bob Conrad

So Fauliso, good soldier that he is, shuttles around the state this fall in behalf of Democratic candidates in municipal elections and — let's be honest about it — spreading the chits across the landscape like falling leaves. Fauliso manages to put in a good word for the boss now and then.

IN A MOMENT OF REFLECTION last week on how one campaign can blend in with another, Fauliso said he doesn't mind the busy schedule now. He's doing it, he said, "so they can't say 'where were you when we needed you' after the elections." His travels tell him, said Fauliso, that it looks good for the Democrats, which is another way of saying, in his book, that it looks good for O'Neill.

But some of O'Neill's more anxious supporters, we were told reliably, have been pushing the timetable a bit. And as volunteer power brokers — not necessarily speaking for the governor — they have been playing games with places on the underticket for 1986.

These missionaries have given Democrats in such touchy centers as Bridgeport and Waterbury the distinct impression that a few nominations are negotiable, depending on how well certain party people demonstrate their readiness to favor O'Neill over Moffett.

Fauliso's place on an O'Neill slate is assured, though Moffett claims he has heard otherwise from his contacts. By the same token, Julie Tashjian of Windsor is said to be securing her nomination as secretary of the state, Ed Caldwell of Bridgeport can continue as comptroller and Joe Lieberman of New Haven is all set as attorney general again. Only Hank Parker of New Haven is said to be shaky as treasurer.

EVEN SO, DEMOCRATS who are following this fall's campaign with an eye to their impact on 1986 tells us that one team of O'Neill insiders is making enticing offers in exchange for ending any flirtation with Moffett.

Meanwhile, Moffett is firing back at Democrats who want him to forget challenging O'Neill on the grounds that carrying the fight to a primary would divide and harm the party.

Moffett quotes U.S. Rep. Bruce Morrison of Hamden as saying it's nonsense to borrow trouble before it happens.

"This is a debate that needs to happen," says

Moffett, adding that the O'Neill administration has had ample time to show it can run the state, but is not doing as well as its people deserve.

A Democrat who might be expected to lean more toward Moffett than to O'Neill takes issue with the ex-congressman's performance so far. Former House Speaker Irving Stolberg of New Haven says Moffett must give voters a reason for not being with O'Neill. "He (Moffett) has got to be positive about himself," said Stolberg at his State Capitol office last week.

The two met early this week in an effort by Moffett to win Stolberg to his side. In last week's conversation with us, however, Stolberg said O'Neill has done "a pretty solid job." Moffett, he added, needs to offer voters an alternative program.

Moffett has a tough job, said Stolberg. "He can't attack Bill (O'Neill), and he's got to build a rationale for his own campaign."

'Can't tell a man by ...'

The staff at Republican state headquarters in downtown Hartford is accustomed to seeing characters who appear to be down on their luck passing the big first-floor windows. So it was a surprise when one unshaven man in poor-fitting clothes came right in one day last week.

It turned out to be Malcolm Baldrige, the former GOP state finance chief who is now the U.S. Secretary of Commerce, Baldrige, of Woodbury, was in town for an appearance at the University of Hartford's symposium on trade that night. He was in no hurry to get all dolled up early.

Baldrige, who laughed off questions about a candidacy for governor or senator next year when he was asked at a press conference, told us later he doesn't see how U.S. Sen. Lowell Weicker can do anything but run for governor.

Bhutto's daughter still a prisoner of the Pakistanis

WASHINGTON — Gen. Mohammed Zia ul-Haq, the military dictator of Pakistan, is hoping to wheedle billions more in aid from the United States by posing as a staunch anti-communist, a democrat-at-heart and a champion of the anti-Soviet freedom fighters in Afghanistan.

He seems to harbor dreams of rivaling his charismatic neighbor, Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, for the affections of Congress and the White House.

But Zia's assumed role of the white knight doesn't fit him. His anti-communism is strictly expedient. His promise to end the years of repressive martial law apparently depends on his success in revising the constitution to legalize his authoritarian regime.

Baker also is warning that the government will default and further frustration of our repercussions from that, I think, will be swift and severe.

The costs of this are going to be extremely severe," Baker said. "We're talking about added interest rates, which will further exacerbate the deficit."

Baker said he favors passage of a debt ceiling bill with the balanced-budget proposal because "deficit reduction is very attractive to the private sector and the president will not be given too much power."

ZIA HAD PROMISED Benazir safe conduct on her visit, but when her appearance inspired a massive popular turnout in spite of martial law restrictions, the general panicked and arrested her. It was a foolish thing to do. Benazir's incarceration stands as a silent mockery of Zia's attempts to portray himself as a civil libertarian qualified to receive continued military and economic aid from the United States.

Though isolated from the outside world, Benazir managed to smuggle out a letter to her close friend. It was not intended for publication, but parts of it were disclosed to our associate Lucretia Lagnado.

In her letter, Benazir gives what may seem to be a disingenuous answer to one basic question: Why in the world did she return to Pakistan, knowing that Zia's promise of safe conduct might be revoked at any time?

"I was not allowed to bury my father," she wrote. "It was essential for me to bury my brother and accompany him on his last journey irrespective of what happens."

As for the conditions of her house arrest, she wrote: "It is miserable. And one needs to be careful."

Benazir's friends explain that she is trying to keep up a brave front, determined that Zia will not get the idea that she is succumbing to the strain of her incarceration. They say it is clear that Zia is trying to break her spirit — though several years of even harsher imprisonment before her exile last year had failed to achieve this.

BENAZIR IS KEPT in virtual solitary confinement, albeit in her large house in Karachi. Family members are allowed to visit only once a week. The meetings are brief and a policeman reportedly is always present, taking notes on the conversation.

At last count, there were more than 40 armed guards stationed around the house. The telephone has been disconnected.

Benazir has been suffering. She wrote that she had asked to see her own doctor, but that the regime "sent two doctors of their own." They confirmed that her eyes and ears needed treatment.

To add to the tension, the police make frequent, unannounced "raids" to make sure no unauthorized visitors have sneaked past the guards.

Benazir's release last year to fly into exile was the result of years of effort by highly placed friends in this country and elsewhere. These friends have been trying to win her freedom once again. Setting Benazir free is one way for Zia to establish some credibility in his quest for a better image.

The recent Soviet-British retaliatory "spy" expulsions have stirred up long-festering gripes by eager beavers in the U.S. Foreign Service, most are in the State Department, but there are also specialists in Defense, Commerce and Agriculture stationed at U.S. embassies. They're all aware that assignment to the "glamour" posts in the Soviet Bloc is the best way to climb the career ladder, but for years they've been complaining that the staffs of these embassies are overloaded with CIA personnel. The spoils, masquerading as "straight" diplomats, fill the limited openings at the genuine diplomats' expense.

Mini-editorial

No challenge is too great for Marxist dialectics. Take this explanation by Polish government spokesman Jerzy Urban of why less was really more in voter turnout for the recent election. "Before, voters were conditioned by other habits and were kept by inertia, while now they are making a conscious decision. For this reason, I believe that the 78 percent figure of people consciously voting has greater weight than the 95 percent we used to record in the '70s." This ignores the point that both percentages were probably equally phony. But you've got to admire Urban's nervy effort to make triumph out of embarrassment.

Sewer plant needs votes

Few people in Manchester care, if they even think about what happens after a household toilet is flushed.

That remark was made more than a month ago as Manchester officials led Herald reporters and editors through the town's sewage treatment plant on a tour designed to show the need for upgrading the plant.

And that opinion, voiced by a town administrator, continues to be proven, to the dismay of those who rightly believe that the need is real.

Just four townspersons attended a Tuesday night meeting to hear town officials explain the proposal to spend $26 million, up to $14.3 million of it in Manchester funds, to upgrade the sewage treatment plant.

And Tuesday night's public turnout was double that of the attendance of an Oct. 7 forum.

Town administrators and elected officials are at a loss to understand the lack of interest in the referendum question. And they apparently fear that ignorance about the proposal might lead to its rejection at the polls on Nov. 5.

That fear is as real as the need to upgrade the plant, and upgrade it now.

Whether funding is authorized this year or under a court mandate five years from now, the Olcott Street plant must be improved. State and federal agencies have ordered Manchester to treat its sewage more thoroughly before it reaches the Hockanum River, which must be fit for swimming and fishing.

And the time to proceed is now, because it appears likely that state and federal grant programs will be changing to loan programs. If that happens, the free money, which could pay up to two-thirds of the cost of the project, would be gone; Manchester taxpayers would have to bear the entire cost of the project.

There's even a chance now that federal and state grants could pay as much as 90 percent of the cost of the improvements, although that possibility apparently hinges on federal interpretation of whether Manchester actually began to upgrade its plant when a trunk sewer project was funded in 1971. If such a "grandfather clause" applies, Manchester's share of the $26 million job could be as low as $2.6 million.

In any event, Manchester must be prepared to proceed with the project when the money becomes available. Authorization to proceed, and completion of the project, would not preclude an increase in sewer rates, but it would limit a rate increase. And further delays in upgrading the plant will almost certainly mean a higher pricetag for Manchester taxpayers.

A vote against the sewage treatment plant project would be a vote against the taxpayers of Manchester.

Before Election Day, Manchester residents should make the time to study the project. The next opportunity will come Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at Whiton Memorial Library, when the Manchester Property Owners' Association will host a meeting on the improvement plan. If townspersons study the proposal, they will find that a "yes" vote on Nov. 5 is the only intelligent choice.

Become leader for Girl Scouts

To the Editor:

Now is the time for all to come to the aid of your offspring. Many girls cannot become Brownies and Girl Scouts because of the lack of leadership. Your help is needed now. I know and realize many mothers have returned to work or to school to further their education, but there must be many more that could help.

We seem to depend on parents, when many times there might be some other member of the family that could replace the parent and help by being a leader. You can find out many things you have not experienced before. Your leadership can be a new way of life for yourself and a youngster.

Many girls learn a new way to live by the Scout promise and laws. They can reap a harvest of learning just given a chance to join the Girl Scout program.

If you have an interest to help, you will be offered training before or after you become a leader. A husband and wife can be co-leaders and take a troop. I now have about 25 girls from Grade 4 through Grade 6 at Robertson School that need leadership. Most of these have had a taste of scouting and had hope to continue this year.

Please answer my concern and give these girls a continued program.

If you can help in any way please call me at 648-7275 and let me explain the program or answer your questions. If you let this chance go by, you might never know what may have happened if you had become a leader. You don't have to be a parent to be a leader; you can be single over 18 years of age, a widow, office worker, and yes, even a senior citizen might be able to enjoy and teach these youngsters many things of living from your own lives.

Let me tell you all about the joys and the sorrows of being a Girl Scout leader. Believe me, there is more joy than sorrow when you become a leader.

Hope to hear from you soon.

Don't block sale of the firehouse

To the Editor:

As Manchester's municipal elections rapidly draw near, it is time for some clear thinking and some soul searching, regarding the Buckland firehouse issue.

The Democratic leadership responsible for the building of the Buckland firehouse, while a court decision was pending, should admit that they were wrong. More prudent people would have waited for the courts to rule on the issue before taking an action that could, and was, overturned.

Since the courts have ruled that the town does not have the right to fight fires in the Buckland area, it makes good sense to allow the Eighth District to do so.

After the sale is made, the town could then build another firehouse in an area where they have the right to do so. Manchester is a growing town, and as such needs a firehouse in the southern part of town.

Someone once said, "Firehouses don't fight fires — only firefighters do." All during this unfortunate incident, I have not heard a single person say that the Eighth District was not capable of doing a proper job; i.e., personnel or equipment-wise.

It is utterly ridiculous to say that the town firemen now stationed at the Buckland firehouse will lose their jobs if the Eighth District takes over. These town firemen could very easily be absorbed in other firehouses in our community.

A vote for Tom Ferguson on Nov. 5 will go a long way to help resolve this problem that has plagued our town for much too long.

I call upon the Democratic leadership to show their civic responsibility and admit that they were wrong to build the Buckland firehouse without waiting for court approval. Do not block the sale of the Buckland firehouse.

DiRosa always will get my vote

To the Editor:

The most encouraging thing I've seen in this election year is that Peter DiRosa is once again a candidate for Manchester's Board of Directors. I have always felt that Peter put his heart and soul into his work for our community. He is also one politician you can speak to and really feel he's listening to what you say. I'm happy the Democrats were smart enough to find a place for him on their slate. Peter DiRosa will always get my vote no matter what party he belongs to.

Treasury secretary urges Congress to act on budget

By Elaine S. Povich
United Press International

WASHINGTON — If Congress fails to lift the debt ceiling by Nov. 4, Treasury Secretary James Baker says, Social Security assets will have to be juggled so recipients can get their checks.

Baker also is warning that the government will default and further frustration of our repercussions from that, I think, will be swift and severe.

The costs of this are going to be extremely severe," Baker said. "We're talking about added interest rates, which will further exacerbate the deficit."

Baker said he favors passage of a debt ceiling bill with the balanced-budget proposal because "deficit reduction is very attractive to the private sector and the president will not be given too much power."

I think there needs to be some discipline quite frankly, he said. "The legislative branch needs some; the executive branch could use some. It would be very good if we could get some discipline into the process."

After Nov. 4, Baker wrote, his department will "reluctantly" have to "disinvest" Social Security and other trust funds to pay more than $6 billion benefit checks.

"Taking this action will result in additional interest loss to the funds and further frustration of our recipients of trust fund benefits, principally pensioners, about whom they have become involved the debt limit process."

Under disinvestment, Social Security fund trustees would redeem billions in government bonds they now hold, giving them room under the current debt limit to borrow enough to issue $10 billion in Social Security and other checks.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., said Baker's disinvestment proposal would "require an exchange of Treasury bonds now in the Social Security trust fund for unsecured Treasury checks. This would be quite illegal."

Reagan skips ceremony to meet Soviet official

By Barry Schweld
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan will skip a ceremony to meet Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze to meet with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

The surprising, last-minute twist in Reagan's packed schedule were announced by White House officials Tuesday, along with details that having Vice President George Bush take his place at the U.N. anniversary ceremonies Thursday slighted the world organization.

During his New York stay Reagan will make a major speech to the General Assembly that outlines U.S. hopes for the Nov. 19-20 Geneva summit with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, mingle at a reception and dine with many of the 80 world leaders assembled for the anniversary.

"There is a very solid commitment," said a senior administration official who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

Larry Speakes, the presidential spokesman, told reporters at another briefing that Reagan will have other meetings during that time frame. "He said assigning Bush to the ceremonies was 'a special acknowledgment of the importance Reagan attaches to the event.'

Separate working sessions were planned for the president with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, Italian Prime Minister Bettino Craxi, Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi and Pakistani President Mohammad Zia ul-Haq.

The anticipated meeting with Shevardnadze was not listed on the schedule, but the senior official said, "We hope the opportunity will arise and we hope it can be arranged."

Gorbachev, in a letter delivered to Reagan by Shevardnadze late last month, proposed a 50 percent reduction in U.S. and Soviet nuclear missiles and warheads. Administration officials have hinted that could be a U.S. counterproposal before Reagan saw Gorbachev in Geneva.

The Washington Post, in Wednesday's edition, quoted Defense Department sources as saying the Reagan administration is prepared to offer to give the Soviets live to seven years not before deploying defensive strategic weapons unilaterally, and to negotiate any proposed deployment.

The proposal, agreed to at a meeting of senior administration officials earlier this month, are intended as a response to Soviet demands for concessions on Star Wars, the newspaper quoted sources as saying.

The senior official who briefed reporters listed arms control last in discussing the prospective agenda for the summit meeting. He put human rights and international and U.S.-Soviet issues ahead, stressing also U.S. concern with the Soviet military occupation of Afghanistan.

To cut deficit, Senate to keep cigarette tax

By Jim Luther
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate appears ready to approve a permanent 16-cent-a-pack cigarette tax to cut the deficit, but won't go along with a 24-cent levy in the interest of discouraging smoking.

Despite White House veto threats, senators have given tentative approval to the permanent 16-cent levy rather than letting it drop to 8 cents a pack after Nov. 14 as scheduled under present law. President Reagan considers that extension to be a tax increase.

The measure also would impose federal taxes of about 2 cents per tin of snuff or three-ounce package of chewing tobacco. Senate leaders won the support of tobacco-state lawmakers for "an abuse of the revenue program of price supports for tobacco farmers."

The extended tax on cigarettes, the new levies on smokeless tobacco and the industry-backed price-support plan would cut the deficit by not only $3.1 billion over the next three years.

TUESDAY'S ACTION WAS THE FIRST TAKEN ON a package of spending cuts and revenue increases designed to reduce the federal budget deficit by $85.6 billion over the next three years. Similar bills are awaiting action in the House.

In a 66-30 procedural vote Tuesday, the Senate in effect rejected an attempt by Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., to raise the permanent cigarette tax to 24 cents a pack. Chafee hailed his amendment "an abuse of the revenue program of price supports for tobacco farmers."

The extended tax on cigarettes, the new levies on smokeless tobacco and the industry-backed price-support plan would cut the deficit by not only $3.1 billion over the next three years.

CHAFEE cited estimates that medical costs and drops in worker output associated with smoking total $65 billion a year and said his proposal would "have those who are causing the excess costs bear part of the burden."

"You're trying to accomplish prohibition by taxation," replied Sen. John East, R-N.C., who termed Chafee's proposal "an abuse of the revenue-raising system to simply tax something out of existence."

BY VOICE VOTE, the Senate killed an amendment by Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, that would have raised the cigarette tax to 20 cents. The extra money would have made up the loss caused by the second part of that amendment, which would have delayed a requirement that all state and local government employees pay taxes into the Medicare program.

Another deficit tax was raised in 1982 as part of another effort to reduce the deficit. Under pressure to cut the deficit, lawmakers are reluctant to give up the revenue from a tax that already is on the books, and thus the permanent 16-cent levy seems assured.

As their price for not opposing the 16-cent tax, tobacco-state senators convinced the Senate Finance Committee to include in the package a new program of price supports for tobacco farmers.

This program includes cutting the federal price support for tobacco by about 35 cents a pound, agreement by cigarette manufacturers to buy the government's stockpile of surplus leaf, some of it at a price of 10 cents on the dollar, and the revamping of the present support system with one financed in part by the tobacco companies.

Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., said the proposed 24-cent tax would have devastated the estimated 300,000 kidnaped by leftist guerrillas on Sept. 10 in front of a private university in San Salvador.

The original release agreement collapsed because of logistical problems with the exchange of the political prisoners and Duarte Duran, the sources said.

ETHIOPIA urges more aid

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia — A year ago today television film clips of starving Africans triggered a worldwide flood of aid, but Ethiopia says nearly 6 million people face starvation in 1986.

The Ethiopian government's Relief and Rehabilitation Commission predicted Tuesday Ethiopia would suffer a food shortfall of some 900,000 tons next year, affecting more than 5.8 million people.

Last Oct. 23, when the first television report of the tragedy evoked images of concentration camp conditions — skeletal-like people desperately foraging for food — more than 7 million people were on the brink of starvation. Relief officials give no figure on how many people have died, but say the number is tragically high.

Despite the massive outpouring of money and recent rains in parts of Ethiopia, the situation remains grim, the government said.

Mandia makes recovery

HERSHEY, Pa. — Anthony Mandia, bouncing back from his second setback in a roller-coaster recovery since receiving a new model artificial heart, is well enough to undergo a natural transplant as soon as a donor is available, doctors say.

Doctors became alarmed Tuesday when Mandia took another turn for the worse, drifting in and out of consciousness for several hours at Pennsylvania State University's Hershey Medical Center. His condition was downgraded to critical and unstable.

Doctors were unsure what caused the episode, which they called a "depression in brain function," but suspected medication or vasospasms — constriction of blood vessels feeding the brain.

Mandia later recovered and Dr. John Burnside, the center's associate vice president, said, "We are currently optimistic his condition will continue to improve."

Burnside said Mandia could receive a natural transplant as soon as a donor is found. The 44-year-old man became the first recipient of the Penn State heart in emergency surgery last Friday.

Bates dean in fair condition

LEWISTON, Maine — Bates College Dean James Carignan was in fair condition in intensive care at Central Maine Medical Center today after an attack at his home which left him with a bullet wound to the hip.

Police said they were questioning people in connection with the shooting, but no arrests were made.

Rick Denison, a Bates spokesman, said Carignan would undergo surgery to remove the bullet fragments, but that no surgery has yet been scheduled.

Carignan, 46, was apparently shot through a window by an assailant standing in the yard at the rear of the house on Mountain Avenue in Lewiston. No one else was injured.

Police questioned several people, including a Bates student who was taken from a Bates dormitory by police officers armed with shotguns. A school spokesman said the student was released after questioning.

"We are actively investigating this incident, including interviewing prospective witnesses," said Police Lt. Gerard Baril. "An arrest has not been made."

New plan on Duarte reached

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — El Salvador's archbishop says government officials and leftist rebels have reached agreement on a new plan to free the kidnapped daughter of President Jose Napoleon Duarte.

Archbishop Arturo Rivera y Damas, who has been involved in negotiations between the government and rebels in Panama this week, said Tuesday an agreement had been reached for the woman's release.

The archbishop refused to give details of the accord, but sources close to the talks said it is similar to an agreement reached last week that called for the release of 22 political prisoners in exchange for Duarte's daughter.

Duarte's daughter, Ines Guadalupe Duarte Duran, 35, and Ana Cecilia Villeda, 23, were kidnapped by leftist guerrillas on Sept. 10 in front of a private university in San Salvador.

The original release agreement collapsed because of logistical problems with the exchange of the political prisoners and Duarte Duran, the sources said.

Bolton parents get lesson at high school open house

By Christine Richardson
Herald Correspondent

BOLTON — More than 200 parents attended an open house at Bolton High School Tuesday night to learn about classes their children are taking.

"I'm pleased with the turnout," said Principal Joseph J. Fleming. "There are a lot of new faces, as well as parents who have been supportive in the past."

Parents were asked to complete the same class schedule their children follow during the day, and attend nine-minute "classes" in which teachers explained the course content and the expectations they have of students.

Parents Barbara and John McLarny said they have attended the Open House in each of the past four years. "We like the way they set it up — it's nice to see what Mrs. McLarny said, 'We think a lot of this school.'"

The couple said they have two sons attending Bolton High School. Jack, a senior and Tim, a sophomore.

"I like the way they run the open house. I wish they did it this way in the younger grades," said parent Linda Chappelle. She also went to last year's Open House when her daughter, Donna was a freshman.

During the open house, teachers explained what topics each class is covering and the projects which will come later in the year. Parents had a chance to ask questions about course content and teachers' philosophies.

Science teacher Robert White said Bolton High School is fortunate to be one of the few high schools in Connecticut that offers two lab periods a week. He said that "even some of the largest schools in Connecticut only have five or six science periods a week."

The scientific approach is fundamental to living in this mathematical world," he said.

English teacher Joan Hopper is requiring her sophomore honors class to keep journals. "This gives them a chance to express themselves and feel comfortable about writing," she said. "They can correct their spelling and grammar afterwards."

She also stressed the importance of the English department's newly acquired computer as a motivational tool for writing. "The kids are more likely to revise rough drafts when they don't have to rewrite papers over and over," she said.

Anthony Falsetta, who teaches social studies, said that Bolton High School is "probably the last high school in the state where instructors teach six classes a day." He also said that his largest class has 27 students in it. "That's just too many in a class," he said.

All teachers stressed that parents should call if they have further questions about the class or a student's progress.

Coventry to shift road priorities

By George Lovng
Herald Correspondent

COVENTRY — The town has decided to revise its priority list for road repairs.

The move comes as construction work is scheduled to begin on two streets and after complaints were made last month about Coventry's dirt roads.

The Town Council Monday instructed Town Manager Harold Hodge to get input from the chief of police and the superintendent of streets about what criteria should be used in drafting the new list.

The action follows a recommendation by Councilwoman Blanche Strater, who as finance committee chairwoman looked into complaints made by residents of Hop River Road. The residents said the town was not doing enough to repair the dirt lane.

Council members unanimously agreed that a revised list was needed.

"Things had been allowed to slide," said Republican Michael Cleary. "We need to establish new priorities."

The list we have now is out of date," said fellow Republican Phillip Bouchard.

However, Democratic Councilwoman Sandra Peste expressed concern that there has not been enough funds allocated for repair work. "Luis and committees are great, but we need money," she said.

Strater, a Republican, agreed.

She said that in the past, money has been appropriated for surveys and studies of road problems, but has been more difficult to fund the actual repairs. She said she hoped a new list would alleviate the problem.

Meanwhile, Zoning Agent and Interim Town Planner Ernest Wheeler said the installation of the Lake Street culvert will begin Oct. 29, when the cement structure purchased by the town is scheduled to be delivered. Wheeler said the work should last no more than five days.

He said Lake Street will be closed on Oct. 28 at 7 a.m. However, a detour will be set up on Monument Hill Road to accommodate the Lake Street traffic.

Wheeler said Monument Hill Road may present some safety problems because it is narrow and requires drivers to make a 110-degree turn when entering from the southbound lane of Route 31. However, he said it is better than other streets in the area that were considered. Approval of the detour from the state Department of Transportation was still pending as of Tuesday, said Wheeler.

In a related matter, the council has scheduled a public hearing on Nov. 7 to discuss the replacement of the Woodside Road Bridge. A Special town meeting is slated for Nov. 19 to vote on the $460,000 project.

Earlier this month, a second engineering study found the aging steel and concrete structure which crosses the Skungamaug River to

Town faces death suit

The mother of a Massachusetts man who died in an April car accident in Ellington has notified the town that she plans to file a lawsuit because Manchester police released him from custody after arresting him on a drunken driving charge on the evening of the accident.

An attorney for Helen Colling charged in a letter to the town that Manchester police permitted Charles H. Colling, 28, of Mansion, Mass., to "leave their custody while in an intoxicated condition" on the evening of April 19. A few hours after his release, Colling died in a car accident on Route 83 in Ellington.

Colling failed a breath test when police stopped him on Oakland Street the night of his death, but was later released on a written promise to appear in court. Police

White on fire at night time

ST. LOUIS — Frank White has erased the memory of his first World Series.

He led to 2-for-25 in Kansas City's World Series loss to Philadelphia in 1980. White has caught fire for the Royals in the 1985 matchup against the St. Louis Cardinals.

Tuesday night, he drove in three runs, two on a 430-foot home run, in the Royals' 6-1 victory over the Cardinals, cutting St. Louis' Series lead to 2-1. White is 5-for-11 in the 1985 Series.

White had said earlier in the Series he didn't expect the Cardinals to be afraid of his power. With the designated hitter rule not in effect this year, the Royals have used White in the No. 4 spot, bumping DH Hal McRae.

"What I meant to say is that I hit 22 homers during the season. If I can get my pitch, I can hit it out," White said.

He demonstrated his power when he blasted his two-run homer in the fifth of Joaquin Andujar that gave the Royals a 4-0 lead. He added an RBI double in the seventh for Kansas City's fifth run.

White, who was 2-for-4, said he

ST. LOUIS — An expectant father gave new life to the Kansas City Royals.

Bret Saberhagen, a 21-year-old with a grown-up fastball, put aside his jitters Tuesday night in Game 3 of the World Series at Busch Stadium. The right-hander, whose wife Janeane is at Kansas City awaiting the birth of the couple's first child, pitched a six-hitter and beat St. Louis 6-1, narrowing the Cardinals' edge to 2-1.

Twenty-one year-old Bret Saberhagen handcuffed the St. Louis Cardinals in Game Three of the World Series, moving his Kansas City Royals back into the hunt.

No team has ever won a World Series after losing the first two games at home, but that shouldn't bother the Royals much. They just finished an improbable comeback against Toronto in the American League playoffs.

At the very least, the Royals have forced the Cardinals to work for the title that seemed so imminent until Saberhagen's performance.

"This may have been a good thing," Cardinals second baseman Tom Herr said. "There's been a lot of talk about a sweep. Not here in this clubhouse, but subconsciously all the talk can get to you. It's a new ballgame now."

Kansas City took a 2-0 lead in the fourth inning. Jim Sundberg walked, and one out later Buddy Biancalana reached on a high popper, inducing a single. Saberhagen, who has not batted since high school, sacrificed.

Lonnie Smith doubled off diving right fielder Andy Van Slyke's glove, producing two runners.

In the fifth, Brett singled, and White hit the first pitch with a crack that filled the park. The ball landed about 400 feet away, and the game was virtually decided.

"I'm just as surprised as anyone when I hit a homer," White said.

The Cardinals scored in the sixth on Jack Clark's RBI single, but in the seventh, White doubled home Brett and scored on a fly to Biancalana.

"It's not easy to replace a bat like Hal McRae, but Frank has really made the adjustment from hitting sixth all year," Brett said. "He has done quite a job as the cleanup hitter in the Series."

Despite what Brett and White accomplished, however, neither could compare with Saberhagen's performance. In fact, only two words describe how the right-hander pitched:

Oh, baby.

High chop cut down the Cards

By Richard L. Shoek
United Press International

ST. LOUIS — You have to get those .188 hitters out.

The point was clearly driven home Tuesday night when the St. Louis Cardinals failed to retire light-hitting Kansas City Royals shortstop Buddy Biancalana in crucial situations.

Biancalana beat out a high chopper to the right of the pitcher's mound in the fourth inning, setting up Lonnie Smith for a two-run double that helped the Royals to a 6-1 victory in Game 3 of the World Series and reduce their deficit to 2-1.

"It turned out to be a big play," Biancalana said. "It's amazing that you can hit a ball that poorly and the results can turn out to be so good."

Failure to get out Biancalana in a tight ballgame is like losing to a last-place ball club during a pennant drive.

Biancalana, a 198 regular-season hitter who was without a base hit in the Series, came up in the fourth with Jim Sundberg on first and one out. He hit a "Baltimore Chop" — a high bouncer in front of the plate.

"I didn't want to hit it there," Biancalana said. "I wanted to stay away from the double play. That dirt in front of home plate is real hard, though."

"They keep it hard for their hitters, so they can get balls through the infield on it. Fortunately, it helped one of mine."

First baseman Jack Clark and pitcher Joaquin Andujar converged on the ball. Andujar fielded it, but no one covered first, and Biancalana had an infield single.

"Since he's been our shortstop, we've been winning," Kansas City manager Dick Howser said. "Some people may laugh at him, but we don't."

"He makes the plays, he advances the runners, he gets bases on balls, he has a decent on-base average," Howser said. "Give Buddy Biancalana credit."

He has completed and the results are still being digested.

However, any change in the playing rules, including the DH, must be negotiated with the players as co-owners. The union may not be anxious to eliminate the rule because it keeps older players in the game. It also may not be in the most congenial mood after the owners voted Tuesday to unilaterally terminate the drug agreement they negotiated last year.

So, it is hard to imagine this issue being resolved soon. And that means in 1987, AL pitchers probably will have a chance to extend the longest collective batting slump in World Series history.

Royals' Frank White had a big night, connecting here for two-run homer in the fifth inning. White drove in three runs in KC's 6-1 victory.

White, who was 2-for-4, said he has never considered himself a cleanup hitter.

"If Hal McRae had been available, he'd be hitting fourth," White said. "I was a little surprised when he (KC manager Dick Howser) did it, but he's got confidence in me. I accepted the challenge. All I need to do is get base hits."

White, who went 3-for-3 with a pair of doubles in Sunday's 4-2 loss, hit his first World Series homer, only the fourth by a Royal in a Series game.

White hit a sharp grounder in the first that second baseman Tommy Herr turned into a double play when Kansas City had put runners on first and second.

In the third, he drew a walk from Andujar to load the bases, but the Royals' third out ended when Pat Sheridan struck out.

It was White who knocked out Andujar with a mammoth two-run homer on the first pitch after George Brett had singled.

"When I hit a home run I am as surprised as anyone," White said. "People don't look at me as if I'm (Royals slugger) Steve Balboni."

In the seventh, Brett walked off reliever Ricky Horton, and White delivered an RBI double down the leftfield line.

Cardinals needed a loss, Tommy Herr claims

By Paul LeBar
The Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Although he might be stretching a point, second baseman Tommy Herr says a World Series setback may have been just what the St. Louis Cardinals needed.

"There's been a lot of talk about a sweep, in fact, too much talk, not by anyone on the team but by the fans," Herr said Tuesday night after a sweep was averted with Kansas City's 6-1 victory over St. Louis in Game 3.

"We never felt overconfident," he said. "This could, hopefully help us for the future."

The Cards, who took a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven Series despite hitting only .203, got only six hits off the Royals' Bret Saberhagen Tuesday night and saw their team batting average fall to .198.

"If we ever get our offense in gear, we should be OK," Herr said. "Actually, we were pretty fortunate to win the first two games."

St. Louis third baseman Terry Pendleton noted that Kansas City's pitching staff is probably the main reason for the Cardinals' tight hitting.

"Hey, they're the best in the American League. Now we know why," Pendleton said. "We hit some balls hard, but they were caught. They hit some balls hard, but they weren't caught."

Among the Royals' 11 hits, including Frank White's two-run homer, none was bigger than the two-run double by former Card Lonnie Smith. It fell in right field, but was batted over the fence.

"He wouldn't give me the outside of the plate as I did in the first out," said Van Slyke. "That may have been the turning point of the game."

Van Slyke saw the loss as only a temporary setback.

"We're going to win this thing. Just because we lost one game doesn't mean that we're down," the young outfielder said. "Nobody expected it to be easy."

Joaquin Andujar, the Cards' losing pitcher Tuesday night, blasted more than the Kansas City bat for his demise.

"I was going after the ball. It hit off the heel of my glove and popped out," said Van Slyke. "That may have been the turning point of the game."

Not allowing KC to have DH is patently unfair

By Hal Beck
The Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Whatever else one may think of the designated hitter, baseball compounds the crime by depriving American League teams of this World Series, legitimated out of business by the no-DH rule used in alternating years.

That is patently unfair.

For baseball purists, the DH is an aberration, a slur on the strategic beauty of this marvellously cerebral sport. But to have your league champion constructed to fit a particular profile and then order it drastically altered in the World Series is indefensible.

Hal McRae, a professional hitter, is Kansas City's DH and regular cleanup batter. He hit 259 with 14 home runs and 70 runs batted in this season, a significant contribution to a team whose offense is distinctly lightweight. He is, however, missing in action in this World Series, legitimated out of business by the no-DH rule used in alternating years.

In place of McRae and Co., we have the KC pitchers, batting a collective .000. The last time an American League pitcher had a hit in the World Series was 1979, when Tim Stoddard managed a single for Baltimore. Appropriately, perhaps, Stoddard now pitches, and he is in the National League.

Including Stoddard's single, AL pitchers since 1975 are collective 1-for-62. They are automatic outs and it hardly seems a fair one Series team to play with eight bats while the other uses nine.

The Royals' attack limps along in the best of times. Tuesday night's six-run production was uncharacteristic for a club that finished next to last in the AL with a .252 batting average. It can ill afford to surrender any part of its offense, much less its No. 4 hitter.

National League stubbornness, a traditional if not always quaint trait, has forced the AL into this corner. We'll play the World Series by your rules this year and we'll play by my rules next year.

In order to maintain peace in our time — something British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain discovered was not always possible — the AL swallowed hard and accepted that decree. What it really did, however, was shoot itself in the foot.

NL teams are accustomed to having pitchers bat and design their offenses with that in mind. It is no burden for them to go that way. In years when the Series is played with the DH, it merely supplies the NL champs with a useful extra bat. That is a lot nicer than being deprived of a hitter you depend upon all season long, which is what happens when AL teams must play without the DH.

Last spring, Commissioner Peter Ueberroth promised a poll of the fans to decide whether baseball should adopt the DH rule for both leagues or discard it entirely. The poll, Ueberroth's office says, has

Upcoming road trip may be crucial to the Whalers

It may sound like a lot of nonsense but this is a critical period for the Hartford Whalers. The Whalers are off to a heady 4-1 start and some fans are already talking about the Stanley Cup playoffs.

Now, that's nonsense.

Fans are quick to forget last year's 4-1 burst out of the gate. Then a split of a four-game road swing followed. And after that...

Whalers fans would rather forget. Hartford cannot dwell in the past, but the Whalers should harken back to past seasons and make sure they've learned their well.

The Whalers begin a four-game swing tonight in Chicago. The trip continues Thursday night at Philadelphia, Saturday night at the Forum in Montreal and Tuesday evening in Pittsburgh. It's then back home to the friendly confines of the Civic Center next Wednesday against the Quebec Nordiques.

Thoughts ApLENTy

Len Auster, Sports Editor

The Whalers hope some of the news they'll bring home will be of the positive nature. The biggest test will come Saturday in Montreal. The Whalers have never won there. They've come home with only four points out of a possible 40 in six years. That has to change for Hartford to move up in the Adams Division standings.

Hartford's best bet for points may come in tonight's opener. The Whalers are 3-4-3 at Chicago Stadium. The Whale is 1-8-1 at the Spectrum in Philly and surprisingly 1-2-2 in Pittsburgh where the lowly Penguins reside.

Coach Jack Evans, in the past, has expressed his desire to come home from road sojourns at 500. The new refrain is to pick up as many points as possible. Hartford appears to be an improved team from last year. For one, it has All-Star Mike Lut on goal. He is a consummate professional, unhappy that the Canadiens scored with 27 seconds left in last Saturday's 11-6 victory.

That did not sit well with him at all. He noted that could get Hartford off on the wrong foot in their next game.

The defense, with improved second-year player Ulf Samuelson, No. 1 draft pick Dana Murzyn and Tim Bothwell over from St. Louis, seems much more solid. Opposing teams do not set up housekeeping in the slot as in bygone days.

Offensively, Sylvain Turgeon must produce, ala Mike Bossy and Rick Middleton, against the good clubs. He has to be the sniper people say he can be. And, Ray Ferraro has to produce over a full season. And, like Ferraro, the Whalers have to produce for a full season — not just at the outset and down the stretch when there is virtually no pressure.

The road trip won't hurt Hartford for an entire season. But it could tell the Whalers an awful lot.

Whalers will have to sit back and take careful watch of the proceedings.

Manchesters all set for Windham clash

Manchesters all set for Windham clash

The preliminaries are out of the way; the main soccer awaits.

Midfielder Jay Martini orchestrated the scoring play at midfield. He dribbled once before sending a diagonal run from his left wing side. Caccace ran onto the pass, splitting the Ram defense, and blistered an 18-yarder into the twine.

Rockville went with a 4-4-2 alignment that did cause Manchester some problems. "They didn't stick in it but when you play 4-4-2 you have a lot of midfield play. I thought they were trying to take the midfield away from us. What we did effectively was get through midfield quickly," McCarthy cited.

"We passed the ball well from side to side, and giving credit to center midfielder Dave Kelly for helping the Indians get through the area without too many problems."

Caccace's second goal was at 21:15 of the second half. Kelly, on an indirect, slid it over to Caccace and the leading Indian goalmarker rocketed a 20-yarder into the top right corner of the cage.

Nielsen accounted for the final reading with less than four minutes left. He picked up a loose ball on his left wing slot just outside the 18-yard penalty area and sent it across field into the top right corner.

"This game (against Rockville) we knew was going to be a tough one. I'm just glad we don't have to play Windham tomorrow and that we have a couple of days to prepare for them. That's nice," McCarthy cited.

Senior striker Nicky Caccace pumped in two goals for Manchester, his 14th and 15th of the campaign, with junior David Nielsen notching his first.

Manchesters' Nick Caccace (9) had the ball at eye level in recent match at Memorial Field. Caccace kept his eye on the ball Tuesday, scoring twice in Indians' 3-0 victory over Rockville High.

HCC x-country title gained by East girls

Squads from East Catholic and Xavier High ran away with the Hartford County Conference girls and boys cross country championships Tuesday at Wickham Park.

Coach Kathy Kittredge's Eagles won the girls' championship with a team total of 38 points. St. Bernard was runner-up with 46 points followed by St. Joseph of Trumbull 110, North West Catholic 111, Mercy High of Middletown 121, St. Mary's 165, Sacred Heart 166 and St. Thomas Aquinas 199. South Catholic did not score.

East had three runners, led by Katie DeMarco, in the top ten and swept 11th thru 13th placements.

"We looked very good, very strong," Kittredge said. "I think this is what the girls needed. It showed them how strong they could be."

Mercy High's Danielle Benoit was individual winner with a time of 14:38 over the 4,000 meter (2.5 mile) course. Carolyn Palfio of St. Bernard was second with Northwest's Tracey Dowden third. DeMarco was fourth in 15:05 followed by teammates Tina Little (15:10) and Cathy Cross (15:30). The gap (between runners) is closing and that's good to see," Kittredge cited.

Jeffery Taurus led a parade of six Eagle runners in 11th place followed by teammates Noel Feenan, Sara McCauley, Kathy Byrne, Dawn Thiery and Eileen Byrne.

The boys' race was won by Xavier, which placed six in the top ten. The Falcons, No. 1 in the state, had 21 points. Northwest Catholic was second with 79 points followed by St. Joseph's 109 and St. Thomas Aquinas 277. South Catholic did not score.

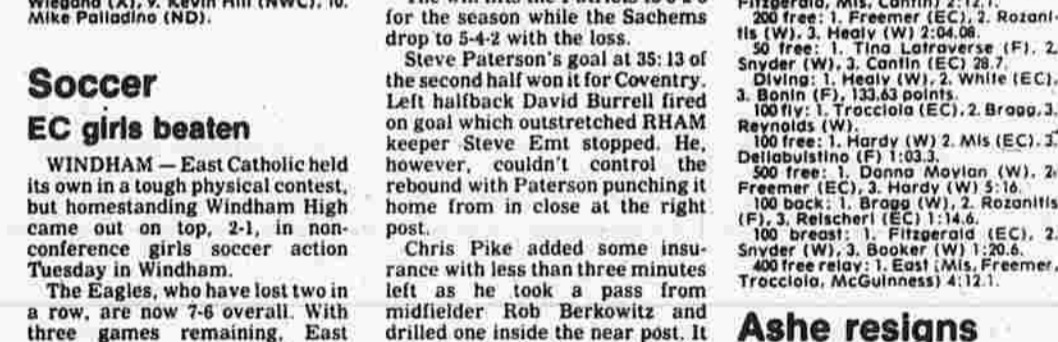

Xavier's Mark Rowley was individual winner with a time of 15:57 over the 5,000 meter (3.1 mile) course.

East's girls next action at the state Class I meet next Thursday at Wickham Park where the five-time class champion Eagles will be defending their crown. Coach Jack Kelly's team will take part in Monday's state sectional at Eastern Connecticut State University.

Coventry triumphs

COVENTRY — Not getting on the scoreboard until five minutes were left, Coventry High scored twice for a 2-0 blanking of RHAM High in non-conference soccer action Tuesday in Coventry.

The win lifts the Patriots to 8-2-3 for the season while the Sachems dropped to 5-4-2 with the loss.

Schvach's goal at 15:13 of the second half won it for Coventry. Left halfback David Burrell fired on goal which outstretched RHAM keeper Steve Emst stopped. He, however, couldn't control the rebound with Paterson punching it home from in close at the right spot.

Chris Pike added some insurance with less than three minutes left as he took a pass from midfielder Rob Berkowitz and drilled one inside the near post. It was the fourth goal of the campaign.

Coventry outshot RHAM, 19-5. Patriot keeper Bill Hines had 4 stops against Coventry. "We controlled past most of the game but like the last time against RHAM we didn't finish. I think Emst had 17 saves in that one." Coventry coach Bob Piaster said, testing his memory.

Coventry has three games left, including Friday's game at Rocky Hill High. Piaster believes his team could do well in the tournament, if. "We have moments of brilliance. It could be our finest hour."

Owners to end drug agreement

Owners to end drug agreement

ST. LOUIS — Major league owners voted unanimously Tuesday to end the 18-month-old drug agreement with the Players Association.

The decision followed a report by Barry Rona, chief counsel to the Player Relations Committee, to a committee of owners.

Rona said the PRC has been unable to make substantial progress in reaching a drug-testing agreement with the players' union.

The owners have been unable to get the players to agree to mandatory testing. The players have argued that a drug agreement is already in place and mandatory testing program violates their rights.

"I don't know much about it yet," said Donald Fehr, the union's acting executive director. "But I think its regrettable and it will prove to be a mistake. It exhibits an unwillingness on their part to come to real grips with drug abuse problems."

The owners unanimously agreed that without mandatory testing the current program would not work. They then voted to terminate the agreement.

It is extremely unfortunate for all baseball fans that we were unable to reach a testing agreement with the agreement with the players' union.

Fehr countered the owners were not interested in negotiating. The union chief claimed the owners would contact him about further meetings — then ended the press.

"We had one meeting with the owners, in which we asked them certain questions about mandatory testing, but they were unwilling or unable to answer," he said. "Ev-

Court won't keep Kelley off court

STORRS — An injunction barring the University of Connecticut from holding a disciplinary hearing for basketball star Earl Kelley clears the way for him to prepare for this season.

EARL KELLEY
... will play

"Before he's an athlete, he's a student," UConn spokesman Tim Tolokan said Tuesday. "All I know is, he's our leading scorer, heading into his senior year."
The 6-foot guard has been attending classes and practicing daily despite the pending hearing that could lead to his suspension or expulsion in connection with a campus incident last April.

U.S. District Judge M. Joseph Blumenfeld last week denied a motion to not unconstitutionally suspend or expel Kelley from UConn to hold a disciplinary hearing in connection with the charges that Kelley bullied two UConn students.

Blumenfeld reversed that decision Monday, halting UConn's disciplinary action, pending an appeal of the judge's initial decision.

Kelley's attorney, Lubie Harper Jr., appealed Blumenfeld's original decision to the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New York.
"We're on the cutting edge of creating new constitutional law," said Harper, adding it is not known how long the appeal decision will take.

Scorching Simmer boosts B's

By Ken Rappoport
The Associated Press

With 10 goals in just seven games, the best mark in the National Hockey League, Charlie Simmer of the Boston Bruins feels he's been lucky as well as good.
"I've been getting good chances and putting them in," the Bruins' left wing said Tuesday night after scoring two goals and assisting on another as Boston defeated the Los Angeles Kings 5-2. "Everybody's been playing well."
That includes Simmer's linemates, who were instrumental in setting him up to score. Ken Linseman assisted on both Simmer goals.

"I've had a couple of hot starts," Simmer said. "I think one time I had 20 (goals) in 20 games. Ken Linseman (center) and Keith Crowder (right wing) are intelligent and consistent players and that's very important."
In other NHL action, the New York Islanders and Vancouver Canucks played to a 2-2 tie and the Minnesota North Stars trimmed the St. Louis Blues 5-4.

The Bruins scored quickly — on their first two shots on goal — as Barry Pederson and Simmer gave the Bruins a 2-0 lead before the game was two minutes old. Simmer struck again with 1:13 of the second period when he took a drop pass from Linseman and connected on a five-foot, backhand shot to put the Bruins up 3-0. As it turned out, it was all the goals that the Bruins needed to improve their record to 5-1.

The Bruins remained in second place in the Adams Division behind the streaking Quebec Nordiques, who have the best record in the NHL at 7-0.

Canucks 2, Islanders 2
Mike Bossy's goal late in the third period gave the Islanders the tie.

Vancouver was in command for most of the game, outshooting the Islanders 36-23 overall, but Bossy connected on a 30-foot wrist shot at 16:43 of the third period to send the game into overtime. It stayed that way, as the defenses took over.

"We have to be a little lucky and a little thankful for this one," said Vancouver goalie Kelly Hrudey. "If we play like this in the first two periods of the next game, it's all over."
Canuck goalie Frank Corrice called Bossy's game-tying goal "a fluke."

"I was coming out to challenge him, and just as I stepped out he shot between my legs," Corrice said. "He has that quick release."
Mikko Makiela had a second-period goal for the Islanders before the game ended in a 2-2 tie.

North Stars 5, Blues 4
Tom McCarthy's first regular-season goal since last Feb. 2 snapped a 3-3 tie with 8:02 left in the second period and sparked Minnesota over St. Louis.

McCarthy, who missed the final 24 games of the 1984-85 season after suffering a concussion on Feb. 14, tripped a rebound past Blues goaltender Greg Miller.

Boston Bruins' goalie Doug Keams makes one of his 31 saves Tuesday night against the homesteading Los Angeles Kings. Keams stopped 31 of 33 shots on goal to help the hot Bruins to a 5-2 win. The B's are now 5-1-1.

proved to be the game-winner three minutes into the third period, overpowering Miller with a slapshot. Mark Hunter later scored for the Blues.

Minnesota outshot St. Louis 22-11 in the second period and 44-32 for the game.

Canadiens want Stastny punished

By United Press International

MONTREAL — The boundaries of the Battle of Quebec have been extended.
Traditionally, the rivalry between Montreal and Quebec — the most intense in the NHL — has produced warfare in The Forum and Le Colisee.

With the first confrontation of the season out the way, the Canadiens have asked the league to get involved.
President of the Montreal Canadiens, Ronald Corey, filed a complaint Tuesday with the NHL over a high-sticking incident involving Quebec's Pat Stastny.

Stastny decked Montreal rookie Stephane Richer with a cross-check to the face with 1:54 remaining in the Nordiques' 2-2 victory Monday night in The Forum.

Richer was helped off the ice bleeding from the mouth. No penalty was called on the play. Referee Denis Morel said he did not see the incident, which occurred as the players clashed to the left of Canadiens goalie Patrick Roy after the puck left the Montreal zone.

Corey telephoned NHL vice president Brian O'Neill, who said he would review game tapes and rule on whether disciplinary action should be taken against Stastny.

The incident infuriated Canadiens general manager Serge Savard. Corey filed a complaint Tuesday with the NHL over a high-sticking incident involving Quebec's Pat Stastny.

Celts' final cuts: Thirkill, Clark

By Frederick Waterman
United Press International

BROOKLINE, Mass. — Journeyman forward David Thirkill and guard Carlos Clark, a two-year member of the Boston Celtics, were waived Tuesday by the team.
The final cuts gave second-year guard Rick Carlisle the 12th and last spot on the roster. The 6-foot-5 Carlisle was also the 12th player on the 1984-85 Celtics squad.

Coach K.C. Jones, who said that telling the last players to be released of his decision was "the worst day of the year," acknowledged that Clark and Thirkill were "disappointed and bitter, which is understandable."

Thirkill, who has played with Phoenix, Detroit, Milwaukee and San Antonio during his three years in the NBA, is a 6-foot-7 defensive specialist who came closest to pushing Carlisle off the team. Clark, a 6-foot-3 shooter, never developed into the offensive threat Boston expected.

"The three of us are vastly different players," said Carlisle, who attended the Universities of Maine and Virginia. "So it was hard to gauge who was ahead at any particular time. But there was a lot of pressure. Anyone would be lying to you if they said there wasn't."

Jones said Carlisle won the competition "because of his ball-handling, his shooting and his smarts out there. We saw our needs for a forward filled by Sly Williams," a 6-foot-7 forward acquired from Atlanta.

Carlisle "has learned to play in the league" during the past year, said teammate Larry Bird. "He can play within his limitations and won't try to just score a lot of points. He can handle the ball a lot better than he could last year and now he can move with the ball while facing the defensive man."
Bird, hampered for most of the exhibition season by a lower-back problem, will play in the Celtics' season-opener Oct. 25 against the New Jersey Nets. The league's MVP for the past two years, Bird practiced Tuesday with the team.
He had pulled up lame again in Monday's practice after sitting out three of the last four preseason contests.

"I don't think this will be a nagging thing," said team trainer Ray Melchiorre. "Once he gets physically set he'll be fine."

Marathon favorite eyes world record

By Martin Luder
United Press International

NEW YORK — In a quiet midtown cafeteria, where five varieties of pasta were being sampled, four-time New York Marathon champion Bill Rodgers came together Tuesday with a surprising newcomer from Djibouti looking to set a world record. Rodgers, once the premier marathon runner in the country and a man who helped to popularize the sport, is nearing his 38th birthday and doesn't delude himself with thoughts of winning Sunday's New York Marathon. Indeed, this will be only his third marathon in two years.
"The challenge to me," Rodgers said, "is to see if I can hang close to the leaders and not fall apart. I hope I can be competitive with the pack. I can finish in the top five and break 2:12. I'll consider my race a success."
For Ahmed Salah, a man virtually unknown outside of his tiny East African country of Djibouti, where he is a national hero, winning the World Cup in Hiroshima, Japan, in April with a time of 2 hours, 8 minutes and 9 seconds, ranking him behind Carlos Lopes of Portugal and Steve Jones of Wales.

Lopes holds the world record of 2:07:11 and Jones recorded 2:07:13 winning the America's Marathon last Sunday at Chicago, where Robben Djama of Djibouti was second.
Salah, a 28-year-old army paratrooper, is paying his first visit to the marathon course, so was not about to make any rash predictions.

"I can't imagine the future for this marathon, but I'll try to break the world record," he said. "If everything is flat, I'm thinking of 2 hours, 7 minutes. I'm not a great marathon man, but I try every time to beat the record. Before that, I cannot say I'm a great marathon man. If I don't break the record this year, I hope next year."
Salah indicated that once he breaks the world record, he would give up the 26.2-mile race.
Rodgers, who lives in Sherborn, Mass., will be making his first appearance in the New York Marathon since 1980.

First-graders Joel Ansara and Sarah Hubeny are all set to enjoy pies baked from the apples, flour, spice and sugar at Cornerstone Christian School, 236 Main St. Pies were baked in the homes of students who delivered them to area people. Every student brought ingredients. The apple pie ministry is done for love and fellowship, not charity. Ferne Pasternak, coordinator of the school, said.

One employee hurt

Simsbury blast probe underway

SIMSBURY (AP) — An investigation continued today in an attempt to determine the cause of an explosion that damaged a building at Ensign-Bickford Industries Inc.

The blast Tuesday occurred while an employee was in the building. The employee, Rejeane Bizer of Enfield, was not injured. She was watching the compression of an explosive called Tetryl when the blast occurred at 7:50 a.m.

Fourteen months ago, an explosion at the company killed three employees. Investigators said a vessel the three were using to mix chemicals blew up.
OSHA has cited Ensign-Bickford five times in the past six years for violations of safety standards at its plants in Simsbury and Louviers, Colo. The company, however, has maintained that its plants are operated safely.

Bizer was taken to Hartford Hospital for observation but was released four hours later, said Timothy E. Ellisworth, a company spokesman. She then returned to the site to help investigators from the company and U.S. Occupational Safety and Health Administration determine the cause of the explosion.

"She's in good spirits, although I don't know how she does it," Ellisworth said. "She's helping us figure out what happened, although from what I've heard the whole thing is all a blur in her mind."
Bizer refused to discuss the incident.

"I'm sorry. I don't want to talk about that thing," she said.
The company said in a statement the explosion was the result of an accidental detonation, but added the incident was under investigation.

The operation where the explosion occurred is mechanized, and Bizer monitors the process through a window in a 12-inch-thick concrete wall. Bizer and a supervisor, who was not named, are the only employees working on the product. The supervisor was leaving the building when the explosion occurred, said Herman J. Fonteyne, president and chief executive officer of Ensign-Bickford.

Ellisworth said the rear of the building is designed to collapse in an explosion, leaving the operator behind the barrier unharmed.

Deputy fired at DOT

HARTFORD (AP) — Transportation Commissioner Joseph P. Trantino, 61, Friday fired a deputy because he was slacking off on the job and using a state car for personal business.

"It appears from my investigation that he worked when he felt like it," Burns said Tuesday. "I came to the conclusion that Trantino was not using his time effectively nor appropriately."

Trantino headed the transportation department's Bureau of Waterways. He was paid about $56,000 a year on the job, which he'd held since 1975.

Reached at his Old Saybrook home, Trantino said Tuesday he and Burns had arrived at the decision that he would leave "mutually."
"I've been there 11 years now," he said. "It's the strain of the job. I'll be 62 very shortly. Let's say we all like change."

"All we serve at the pleasure of the commissioner," Trantino said. "There's always a disagreement in policy over the years with any commissioner, but nothing of any magnitude (in this case)."

Burns said state motor pool officials received an anonymous letter about two weeks ago complaining that Trantino's state car had been seen at a house he was building in Old Saybrook. The motor pool officials reported the letter to Burns, who investigated the same day and found the car at the house about 2 p.m., Burns said.

Burns said he did some more checking and concluded Trantino had not been spending enough time on the job.
"He did not always report to his duty station nor did he spend full time at it," Burns said of Trantino.

Robert J. Reardon, a top official in the state tax department, was allowed to retire Oct. 4 after published allegations charged that he spent much of his time away from work and used his state car to run personal errands.

Connecticut In Brief

Lawmaker wants parkway tokens

HARTFORD — State Rep. Christine M. Niedermeier, D-Fairfield, is proposing that tolls on the Merritt and Wilbur Cross parkways be converted to accept the tokens issued for use on the Connecticut Turnpike.
Gov. William A. O'Neill ordered the turnpike tolls closed as of Oct. 9. State officials are making arrangements with banks to allow people to redeem leftover tokens for cash.
But Ms. Niedermeier said Tuesday the tolls being dismantled on the turnpike should be installed on the parkways so that the tokens could be used.

Elementary classes show increase

HARTFORD — While elementary school enrollment dropped less than 1 percent from 1983-84 to 1984-85, the number of elementary classes increased slightly, the Connecticut Public Expenditure Council reports.
CPEC, a government watchdog group, attributed the growth to a combination of enrollment stabilization and a "continuing, though slow, shift by school districts to smaller classes," in a report issued Tuesday.
The number of elementary school classes increased from 10,350 in 1983-84 to 10,363 in 1984-85, CPEC said. During the same period, elementary enrollment declined from 222,706 to 220,813. Six percent of elementary classes had less than 16 pupils in 1984-85 compared to five percent in 1983-84, and 28 percent of the classes had between 16 and 20 students compared to 37 percent the previous year, CPEC said.

Gang rape defendant makes plea

WATERBURY — One of five men awaiting trial in connection with an alleged gang rape at a Naugatuck social club last summer has pleaded no contest to sexual assault charges.
John Conway, 32, of Waterbury pleaded no contest Tuesday to charges of first-degree sexual assault and conspiracy to commit first-degree sexual assault. A no contest plea is not an admission of guilt, only a statement by the accused that he will not dispute the charges in court.
Waterbury State's Attorney John Connolly said he will recommend a prison term for Conway. Sentencing is scheduled for Nov. 29.

O'Neill nominates eight judges

HARTFORD — Gov. William A. O'Neill has nominated seven men and one woman as Superior Court judges. Five are Democrats and three are Republicans.
Six of the nominees were nominated as a result of a bill passed this year adding six judges to the Superior Court system, bringing the total to 131.
They are Salvatore F. Arena of Portland, a Democrat; Richard A. Damiani of North Haven, a Republican; Jonathan J. Kaplan of South Windsor, a Democrat; Joseph Q. Koletsky of Waterford, a Republican; Karen S. Nash of New Haven, a Democrat; and Raymond R. Norko of Hartford, a Democrat.
Also nominated to the Superior Court bench were Morton I. Riefberg of Danbury, a Republican; and Democrat Robert M. Szuadak of Naugatuck.
Riefberg succeeds Judge Sherman Drumman of Hamden, who died recently, while Szuadak succeeds Judge Joseph J. Chermaskus of Oxford, who reached the mandatory retirement age of 70 on Tuesday.

Dissident risks freedom by criticizing Botha

By Erik Von Es
United Press International

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Police shot dead a black rioter and arrested 40 others in townships around Cape Town where stoning and firebombing raged overnight, a spokesman said today.

He said at least six cars and trucks were gutted by fire and dozens were stoned by black and mixed-race rioters.

The spokesman said a riot patrol lured teargas and shoguns at "a large mob" of blacks stoning police and private cars. One of the rioters was killed.

The unrest in the Cape Town area has claimed at least 46 lives in the past 10 weeks since it erupted over a ban on a protest march to Pollamor prison. Nelson Mandela, regarded as the father of South Africa's black nationalism, is serving a life sentence there for treason.

Police said a school and two houses were torched in black townships outside Port Elizabeth, and in Soweto, the sprawling black Johannesburg suburb, cars and a bus were set on fire.

In the tense mixed-race suburbs outside Cape Town, police and army patrols maintained a high-profile presence in an effort to subdue the unrest.

Security police in Cape Town Tuesday used sweeping state of emergency powers to detain and jail Trevor Manuel, a founder of the UDF movement that opposes South Africa's apartheid racial separation policies.

Violence spread to the white suburb of Krantzen, about 15 miles northeast of Cape Town. Witnesses said rioters hurled a firebomb into a shopping mall, gutting two clothing shops and a liquor store. Police fired birdshot to disperse a large crowd of mixed-race people watching firemen battle the blaze, but no injuries were reported.

The witnesses said the shopping center was bombed after two mixed-race boys, aged 12 and 13, were shot in their arms by a passing white motorist and two motorcycle riders.

In Mitchell's Plain, a mixed-race township outside Cape Town, about 500 people stoned police vehicles. There were no injuries but one woman was arrested, police said.

Until late Tuesday, travelers along the busy N2 highway, which links Cape Town with the eastern Cape province and passes by several black townships, reported incidents of stone-throwing from the roadside.

The detention of Manuel in Cape Town came as six senior UDF leaders, including two joint presidents, Abotho Sibusiso, 67, and Archie Gumede, stood trial in Pietermaritzburg — charges of treason, which can carry the death penalty.

Manuel, who had been hiding for weeks, is one of the senior strategists for the UDF, South Africa's most powerful and largest nonparliamentary opposition group.

Social Security recipients to get small hike in benefits

By Christopher Connell
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The nation's 36.6 million Social Security beneficiaries will get a 3.1 percent benefit increase in January, the smallest increase since the checks were tied to the Consumer Price Index a decade ago, the government announced today.

It means an extra $14 a month in benefits for the average retired worker, who now draws $464. It also will boost the maximum benefit for someone retiring this year at 65 by $22, from $717 to $739 a month.

If inflation had been any lower than 3 percent, there would have been no increase at all in 1985. Three percent is the minimum trigger.

The higher benefits will cost Social Security's trust funds $5.8 billion in 1986.

They also will trigger an automatic increase in the maximum amount of earnings that Social Security taxes. The ceiling will climb from $39,000 this year to $42,000, matching the 5.9 percent growth in average wages from 1983 to 1984. That means the maximum tax will top $3,000 for the first time. It will go from $2,791.80 to $3,003, an increase of $211.20.

There are 8.7 million workers paying the maximum in 1985 and 7.3 million are expected to earn $42,000 or more next year.

The payroll tax is already scheduled to climb from 7.05 to 7.15 percent on Jan. 1 for workers and their employers.

These raises became official with the Labor Department's release today of the Consumer Price Index for September. The increase matches the inflation rate from the third quarter of 1984 to the third quarter of this year.

Benefits went up 3.5 percent in both January 1984 and January 1985 — the two previous smallest increases since the system was tied to the inflation index in 1975. The peak year was 1980, when benefits soared 14.3 percent.

The 3.7 million aged, blind or disabled recipients of Supplemental Security Income, a welfare program run by the Social Security Administration — will get the same size increase in their January checks.

However, many SSI recipients also draw Social Security, and as their Social Security checks go up, their welfare checks go down.

Due to an economy move adopted by the Reagan administration and Congress in 1981, all benefits are rounded down to the next dollar, which means most people wind up with an increase smaller than the consumer price index.

Social Security Administration spokesman James Brown said benefits will rise:

- For the average retired worker, from $464 to $478 a month, a 3.1 percent increase.
- For someone entitled to the maximum benefit who retires in 1985 at age 65, from $717 to $739, a 3.2 percent increase.

• For the average aged couple, from $828 to $842, up 1.7 percent.

• For the average widowed mother with two children, from $997 to $1,017, up 2.0 percent.

• The average aged widow, $419 to $431, up 2.9 percent.

For self-employed workers, the payroll tax is due to rise on Jan. 1 from 11.8 percent to 12.3 percent. That means their maximum tax will climb in 1986 to $5,166 from $4,672.80 — an increase of $493.20.

Brown said these other changes will also occur next year:

- Beneficiaries under 65 will be able to earn $5,790 before losing any benefits. That is up from $5,400.
- Those 65 to 69 will be able to earn $7,800, up from $7,320 without penalty. There is no earnings limit on those 70 or older.
- Workers will receive one-quarter of Social Security coverage for earnings of $450, up from $410.

The Sacramento River's humpback whale surfaces in Shag Slough where he has been swimming since last Saturday.

Whale persists in inland channel

By Rebecca LaVolli
United Press International

RIO VISTA, Calif. — Worried marine biologists may abandon their policy of leaving the Sacramento River's gray humpback whale alone and instead take steps to try to lure him 60 miles back to the Pacific Ocean.

Under guidance of the Fisheries Service, state, federal and privately financed marine biologists planned to meet today to plot a strategy for trying to save the whale.

"He is in quite a bit of danger. That's clear," James Lecky, wildlife biologist for the National Marine Fisheries Service, said Tuesday. The Fisheries Service is coordinating treatment of the lost humpback, a member of a rare and endangered species.

The whale, variously dubbed "Humphrey" or "E.T.," spent Tuesday making figure eight patterns in the shallow end of Shag Slough, which juts inconspicuously into a cove pasture about 12 miles upstream from Rio Vista.

Frustrated by unsuccessful attempts to coax or scare the big mammal to return to sea, biologists left the whale alone the past six days in hopes he would leave the river on his own.

Lecky said a noise technique involving the tapping of submerged pipes likely will be the first option for attempting to frighten the 40-foot whale out of the channel, bounded at its open end by a bridge with narrowly spaced pilings.

He noted marine biologists previously "tried everything from humpback whale sounds to killer whale sounds" in fruitless attempts to coax the mammal downstream. Specialists are baffled as to why the 45-ton leviathan, on his annual migration from Alaska to Hawaii, entered into the San Francisco Bay about 12 days ago and stubbornly journeyed up the Sacramento River.

Officials hope to coax the 40-foot-long, 45-ton whale from the shallow end slough but attempts so far have failed.

Weinberger says Soviets' missile violates SALT 2

By Richard C. Gross
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, fueling the tough U.S. talk before the superpower summit, says the Soviet Union has violated the SALT 2 arms treaty by deploying a new continent-spanning missile.

But State Department and Pentagon officials say the deployment of the mobile, single-warhead SS-25 weapon is not a surprise, and one congressional critic charged the administration's pre-summit attitude has been one of "trashing the concept of arms control."

Weinberger's disclosure Tuesday appeared to be the latest step in the superpower maneuvering before next month's summit between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev — a meeting that most likely will be dominated by efforts to slow the nuclear arms race.

Weinberger referred to the SS-25's deployment during a staunch defense of Reagan's "star wars" anti-missile research program, which Moscow has cited as a key stumbling block to a new arms pact.

Weinberger said the Soviets have displayed "a stunning degree of hypocrisy" in assailing the Strategic Defense Initiative because of their "own vigorous strategic defense programs."

U.S. officials argue deployment of the SS-25 violates the SALT 2 pact because the treaty allows each side to develop only one new intercontinental ballistic missile and the Soviets have built two.

The SALT 2 treaty was signed in 1979 by President Jimmy Carter and Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev. The Senate never ratified the pact but the superpowers have agreed to abide by it.

In March, Soviet negotiators told U.S. officials at arms talks in Geneva, Switzerland, that the SS-25 was being deployed. A senior Pentagon official said U.S. intelligence confirmed the deployment in late spring or early summer.

"We've been watching this thing for some time now," said the official. "This is not surprising. It is going the opposite direction, trashing the concept of arms control, with increasing frequency."

But a senior White House official said Weinberger's remarks were not intended to cast a pall over the summit.

"The United States has never swept under the rug problems with arms control," he said.

Weinberger, in remarks to a conference sponsored by the Ethics and Policy Center, said, "Today I can officially confirm that one of their new ICBMs, the mobile SS-25, is now being deployed and is an unquestionable violation of Soviet assurances given to us under the SALT 2 accord."

CAP WEINBERGER
... raking the Soviets

An 1837 illustration for a cider mill shows how a horse is harnessed to the sweep to drive the crusher.

Old Sturbridge Village shows visitors how cider is made

Brookfield, N.H., the village's new mill is from a farm owned first by the Lyford and then the Hutchins families. Researchers at the village say the press dates to the second quarter of the 19th century.

The mill was acquired by the Sturbridge Village about 10 years ago and has been undergoing restoration since then.

Those who visit the mill will learn that many families who lived in New England in the 1820s and 1830s still made their living by farming. Part of the proery was often an orchard which provided apples for the table and as a less obvious benefit, cider.

If one were to look in the storage cellars of families of the time, not only would there be barrels of apples among the vegetables, but also eight or 10 barrels of cider. As Thomas W. Ward Jr. of Shrewsbury noted in his farm journal on Oct. 1, 1831, "Priest picked some apples. By the length of time he is picking the apples, one would conclude there were a great many. I hope we shall have enough to make 10 barrels cider — if so, we shall do well this season."

THE CIDER THAT was so much a part of a rural family's diet was not merely the apple juice, but in reality the fermented squeezing from apples. This bulk was very important as alcohol was the investment of time, labor and money to build and maintain a cider mill.

Such a mill in most towns would look like many other small barns and sheds. Most cider mills were 20 to 30 feet long and 20 to 25 feet in width. They usually had a set of large doors in the center of their long side, which added to the barn-like appearance.

FARMERS BROUGHT their apples and barrels and straw down to the mill and ran it themselves. Usually the owner of the mill allowed anyone to use it as long as he paid a fee and, of course, didn't do any damage. Sometimes a mill owner would rent the use of a horse to someone who didn't have one, or straw to make the cheese or sell barrels or even charge extra for the help of his son.

Once the juices were pressed and filtered through straw or cloth, or some other type of sieve to remove solids, the farmer would take the juice home and watch and listen to the activity in the barrels. The yeasts that were present in the juice would start to feed on the sugars, and the juice would foam and fizz and hiss. Once this action stopped the must had become what everyone at the time would recognize as cider.

At this time it would be drawn off into clean new barrels. Many farmers would add a few "extras" into the cider at the time of the transfer to the new barrels to improve its taste or its longevity. These extras might be brandy or rum to raise the alcohol level, or egg shells or charcoal to keep the cider from spoiling.

All of the sights and sounds and smells of the mill would be familiar to someone living in a rural town. When the mill was in use, children would very often come down to sip some of the fresh apple juice or "must" as it ran from the cheese. Sometimes children came to the mill to help in the process. Someone had to poke at the apples to keep them from jamming in the mits or prod the horse to keep the mill turning. Both of these jobs were perfect for children.

5 ounces bread or pizza dough (see note below)
2 tablespoons margarine

Wash, stem and briefly steam fresh spinach, or thaw and drain frozen spinach. Set aside.

Brown sausage in a large skillet, but do not fully cook. It can be done in a microwave oven. Drain excess fat.

Stretch dough as thin as possible. You should have a rough oval that's about 18 inches long and 8 inches across. Spread spinach, crumbled sausage and shredded cheese in a wide stripe across the center of the dough. Roll and tuck dough so that the filling is completely encased. Be sure to tuck in the ends.

Preheat the oven to the highest temperature possible. Bake about 15 minutes. Bread should be well browned.

Place margarine on top of pie as soon as it comes out of the oven. Serve as soon as the margarine has melted. Serves two for lunch, or one for dinner.

Your Neighbor's Kitchen When she smells Chinese, she thinks of Thanksgiving

By Adele Angle Herald Focus Editor

Ferne Pasternak smells Chinese food and she thinks Thanksgiving. It's not surprising, really. Pasternak, a 216 Fern St. resident, grew up in Boston's Italian North End. Her father, the late Tony Merullo, owned three restaurants. The family always worked on Thanksgiving and when all the customers were served and the last dish washed, they went out to dinner themselves.

The only places open late on Thanksgiving were Chinese restaurants. "People used to come from all over Boston to come to my restaurant," says Pasternak. Helping with the family business was something she resented as a teenager.

"As an adult, though, she's grateful for her father. He was never one to write any recipe down, but he taught his daughter many secrets of Italian cooking. She's especially fond of the many soups served at the restaurant. She uses adaptations of them in her own kitchen. Linguine with broccoli soup and pasta fajoli soup are two examples."

Her father, Italian chicken, which is printed here, is a one-dish meal which is easy. "And it tastes real Italian," she says. She cuts down on the spices, especially oregano, for her own family. I remember in my father's kitchen you could always smell the oregano," she says.

Pasta fajoli soup
2 cups cooked elbow macaroni
1 can cannellini beans (undrained)
6 cups beef broth
1/4 teaspoon salt, dash pepper
4 tablespoons olive oil
3 one-by-one-inch pieces salt pork
1 large onion, chopped
2 cloves garlic, peeled and minced
1 stalk celery, chopped

Researchers hope to end tooth decay ATLANTA (UPI) — For some, heaven means never having to have a cavity filled. Dentists are trying to realize that dream by coming up with a vaccine against tooth decay.

At Emory University in Atlanta, researchers are experimenting with a capsule containing the same bacteria that causes tooth decay.

Dr. Richard Gregory, professor of oral surgery, said the most predominant strain of the bacteria, Streptococcus mutans, was isolated from saliva of five volunteers. Each strain was grown separately in large quantities, killed, freeze-dried and packaged in gelatin capsules. Each volunteer swallowed one capsule a day made from his or her own bacteria. As a result, the levels of antibody in their saliva rose and bacteria levels plummeted as much as 99 percent.

Advice
Woman needs protection from family trade wars

DEAR ABBY: Here's one for the books: Before I was married, I admired my future mother-in-law's china, so she gave us service for 12 for our wedding gift. The set was displayed along with our other wedding gifts at her home.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

After we returned from our honeymoon, we picked up our wedding gifts, and I noticed 10 pieces were missing from our set of china. My mother-in-law promptly explained that she had a party and there were 10 pieces missing from her set, so she had taken some of ours to fix for those she didn't have. She promised to return ours "soon."

Abby, how long is "soon"? It's been 21 years, and at mother's still not replaced the pieces she took from our set. Whenever I have a party, I have to "borrow" my own china from her. Immediately after, she "borrows" them from me again.

Have you any ideas on how to get my pieces back for keeps? I don't want to appear petty, but this is really irritating.

10 PIECES SHORT

DEAR 10: Your mother-in-law is short more than 10 pieces. But for the sake of peace in the family on every gift-giving occasion - Mother's Day, Christmas, birthday, etc. - add to her china until she has a complete set.

learned that my biological father was her uncle. When confronted, Mother and her uncle both verified this.

There are blood tests available that can positively determine paternity. Please advise your readers that for medical reasons it's important for everyone to know who his biological father is.

DECEIVED IN SEATTLE

DEAR DECEIVED: Thank you for a potentially lifesaving letter.

DEAR ABBY: I had a very serious commitment to a man I loved with all my heart for five years. He was everything to me, and he knew it. It has ended (this wish, not mine), and now he refers to our five-year relationship as an "experience" - but I call it a "relationship."

I am very hurt about his terminology, Abby. Would you call living together as man and wife in every sense of the word an "experience" or would you call it a "relationship"?

And can you tell me why he insists that it is very important to know who his biological father is?

END OF RELATIONSHIP

DEAR END: I would call it a "relationship," but your friend prefers to call it an "experience" when it's important to minimize importance and thus reduce the guilt.

Thoughts

"Blessed are the meek, for they will inherit the earth." Matthew 5:5. I am constantly kidded about this verse, and cartoons regularly appear on our church's bulletin board about this topic. Meekness as we use the word today is not one of the premier attitudes of our day. In fact, most people would be insulted if you referred to them as meek. To us it connotes spinelessness, subservience, an ineffective kind of person, and we Americans admire the go-getter types of aggressive personality. Aristotle used the word meek to indicate the mean between two extremes. For instance, if one extreme is a spendthrift and the other a miser, the mean is a generous person. This is the ethical norm. If excessive anger is one extreme and no anger is another, then meekness is the right proportion of anger justly used against the proper evil. Another meaning of the word is for a horse that has been broken to obey the commands of the reins. By broken here we do not mean his spirit is broken, but it responds to the control of the rider so more can be accomplished. So also we need to accept the control of our Lord Jesus, so we may more completely fulfill our personal potential. If we are meek in these ways, we will inherit the earth. James Meek, Pastor Community Baptist Church

Medication is best for gout

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am going on 68 years old and have been bothered by attacks of gout. My doctor has given me Indocin. I would like to know if there is any special food I should eat which lowers my uric acid. I am a person who does not like to be dependent on any pills, so I wonder if there is a diet that would prevent recurrence.

Dr. Gott

Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR READER: In general, animal organs contain high quantities of uric acid, the substance that causes gout attacks. Therefore, you will want to avoid sweetbreads, brains, liver and kidneys. The most satisfactory treatment of gout, however, is allopurinol - a drug that blocks the formation of uric acid. Although you may not be a "pill person," this medicine will help protect your kidneys and joints against damage from uric acid crystals. You will have more successful outcome from using this medication than from following a diet for the rest of your life.

A true anti-gout diet is much more restrictive than the simple avoidance of organ food. If you wish to try a diet-only approach as an experiment, ask the dietitian in your local hospital to review the situation with you. Indocin is not an anti-gout drug. It simply reduces the painful inflammation characteristic of the disease.

DEAR DR. GOTT: The doctor said I have arthritis. Now he has ordered another blood test and said it may be lupus. What is lupus? Is there any treatment for it? Do you get a special doctor for it? I'm so upset.

DEAR READER: Lupus erythematosus ("lupus" for short) is a disease of connective tissue. Patients appear to become allergic to substances in their own bodies. When this happens, people may suffer pain and inflammation of various body organs, including joints, skin and kidneys. You probably will need to see a specialist (a rheumatologist) and the doctor will need to identify to what extent your body tissues are affected. Depending on the amount of involvement, one or more treatments may be extremely beneficial. For example, cortisone - despite its dangers - often produces miraculous improvement in problems relating to lupus.

I'm sorry to say that lupus is a serious disease, and although it can be treated, you will need close medical supervision. I am sure that once your doctor establishes a diagnosis, he will want to sit down with you and discuss ways you can be helped - and the ways you can help yourself.

Send your questions to Dr. Gott in care of the Manchester Herald at P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101. Due to volume of mail, individual questions cannot be answered. Questions of general interest will be answered in future columns.

Try baked bean shortcut

DEAR POLLY: Do you know how to prepare baked beans that do not cause gas? My husband loves beans, but is distressed by the reaction they cause - MRS. J.B.

Pointers

Polly Fisher

DEAR MRS. J.B.: Beans do indeed cause flatulence in most people, but not all beans cause as severe problems as others. Soybeans, pink beans and pinto beans are the three top gas producers. Black-eyed peas, large lima beans and garbanzos are the three least likely to cause problems with flatulence. Small white beans, Great Northern and baby limas fall in-between these two levels. Choosing a bean less likely to cause gas - Great Northern or baby lima pinto beans or black-eyed peas instead of baby limas - is one way to approach the problem. Also, soaking beans for at least three hours before cooking will help to reduce the gas-causing starches in the beans. Soak the beans for three hours, boil them for 30 minutes, then drain and discard the water before proceeding with preparing your favorite bean recipe. The family will be able to enjoy their beans without having to put up with the distressful after-effects. - POLLY

DEAR POLLY: Try my orange-mint julep for a refreshing beverage. Place two handfuls of fresh mint leaves in a pan. Cover with two and one-half cups of water, bring to a boil, simmer five minutes, then cover and let cool. When cool, add two cups of sugar, the juice of six lemons, the juice of two oranges and the grated rind from the oranges. Heat the mixture, stirring constantly, until the sugar is thoroughly dissolved. Store in the refrigerator in a covered container or freeze. To serve, fill a tall glass with crushed ice, then put in one-third cup of the prepared mixture. Fill the glass with ginger ale or some other white soda. - MARIAN

Supermarket Shopper

Cashiers for refunds are one way out of line

By Martin Sloane United Feature Syndicate

DEAR MARTIN: Do you think it's right for supermarket cashiers to ask customers to rip box tops and labels off their purchases so the cashiers can send for refunds? Recently, it seems like I get asked to do so every time I visit the store.

NO NAME PLEASE, KENTUCKY

DEAR NO NAME: I think any supermarket cashier who asks customers for proofs of purchase is way out of line. If cashiers want to send for manufacturers' refunds, they should accumulate the required proofs on their own time.

Smart cashiers would never dream of asking customers for proofs for one simple reason - they want to keep their jobs. Cashiers who make it known that they are reexaminers are the first to be suspected when pads of refund forms disappear or when packages on the shelves are mysteriously mutilated and lose their proofs of purchase.

If a cashier asked me for a box top, I would make it clear that I felt the request was out of line. If it happened a second time, I would have a talk with the store manager. The manager should understand that such requests are bad for business. They make customers feel uncomfortable, and they slow down the checkout line.

DEAR MARTIN: This past summer, my 8-year-old son asked me how he could earn some money. I suggested that he could cut out the coupons I checked off in the newspaper and in magazines, and we agreed that he would receive two cents for each carefully cut coupon.

My son enjoyed his "job," and by the end of the summer, his clipping had earned him several dollars. We were both pleased.

MARY BETH ALLISON, MOBILE, ALA.

DEAR MARY BETH: Children are usually eager to clip coupons if they are given an incentive. Whether it be a few pennies a coupon or the chance to use a coupon to buy a product of their choice (within parental limits, of course), they pitch in with enthusiasm. I also found that my children enjoyed playing a productive role in their parents' adult world.

It is impossible to get the last ounce or two of some products out of their containers. Have you ever wondered whether you were paying for them anyway? Ninette Sargent of Cedartown, Ga., wrote to Procter & Gamble asking about the last measure of Secret Solid deodorant trapped in the base, and she passed along Procter & Gamble's reply: "Although the base of the solid can't be used, the product it contains isn't included in the net-weight statement. Each container has the stated number of useable ounces, plus enough extra to secure the product in its base." Procter & Gamble also thanked Ninette for writing and enclosed a coupon for a free package.

Tentative pact ends Chrysler strike

By Francis M. Goodwin III

DETROIT — Some 70,000 U.S. Chrysler Corp. workers who went on strike for wage parity could be back on the job Monday with even better contracts than their colleagues under a three-year agreement reached early today.

The agreement was reached after some 10,400 Canadian Chrysler workers voted Monday to accept an agreement reached Sunday by UAW-Canada. That pact gives workers wage parity with GM and Ford employees in Canada.

Workers in both countries struck at midnight Oct. 15. Under the U.S. pact, Chrysler workers will receive a pay hike of 2.25 percent in the first year and a bonus "in recognition of the contributions of workers who saved Chrysler from bankruptcy and returned the corporation to health," Bieber said.

Workers will each receive a bonus in excess of $2,000. Retired workers will receive a "lump sum" bonus of 2.25 percent based on the previous year's earnings excluding overtime. A 3 percent wage hike will go to workers in the third year.

Philly paper hits the streets

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The Philadelphia Inquirer hit the newsstands today for the first time since employees went on strike 47 days ago and the Daily News was due out later in the morning.

A contract ratification Tuesday ended the walkout by the 4,700 employees, sending them into a whirlwind of activity to publish editions today.

The edition also contained the usual food, entertainment and business sections.

The strike, which began Sept. 7 and involved nine unions, formally ended Tuesday afternoon, when the mallers became the last union to approve the pact.

'The baby boom is passing...'

NEW HAVEN (UPI) — The Travelers Cos., warning Tuesday the country will face a critical shortage of skilled workers in the coming decade, started recruiting additional retired workers to fill temporary positions.

The Hartford-based insurance giant wants to double its pool of available retired workers to about 500, expanding a successful program that found older employees most qualified for demanding part-time duties.

"The baby boom is passing through now," Donald DeWard, director of employment for Travelers, said at the "Governor's Day" exposition in New Haven.

Travelers began re-hiring its own retirees five years ago through a special job bank to fill part-time positions opened because of heavy work loads, vacations or illness among full-time workers.

China affected wheat output

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wheat production in the South increased sharply in the late 1970s, partly because of China's fear that wheat grown elsewhere in the United States might have helped the national acreage and production "boom" during the 1978-82 period.

The Chinese were thoroughly frightened by the smut spore. "They didn't want it imported into their home fields," Green said.

Generally, the spore requires 30 to 40 days to grow cover before infecting the wheat kernel. The Chinese believed there would be less reason to fear the disease would originate in the temperate Southern states.

Also, the Chinese are price-conscious, and soft wheat is cheaper at the time than hard wheat which is grown in the Great Plains as well as in the Northwest.

Eastern Utilities Associates is offering three Maine utilities and one Vermont power company 8.3 cents on the dollar for their investment in the much-delayed, cost-overrun reactor on New Hampshire's coast.

Are food stamps enough?

Agriculture official says yes, but Appalachian mother says no

By Deborah Mesce
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The head of the government's Food and Nutrition Service says the billions of dollars spent on food stamps and similar programs are filling the plates of America's hungry. But one Appalachian mother sees it differently. "When school started this year I was so happy, because I knew the boys would be fed better than I could feed them," Letia Casey, 38, told a congressional task force Tuesday.

She said that during the latter half of summer, she and her three sons had to rely solely on a monthly allotment of $153 in food stamps and a garden on their hillside acre in Roses Creek Hollow, Tenn., for their food. "If we hadn't had the garden, we would have actually starved," she said. Henry Casey, 13, who accompanied his mother at the hearing, was asked by a panel member what he usually eats. With some coaxing from his mother, he replied, "I usually eat potatoes and bread" and said he drinks about two glasses of milk a week.

Robert E. Leard, administrator of the Agriculture Department's Food and Nutrition Service, told the panel the food stamp program, along with the Women, Infants and Children nutrition program and other such government services, generally are adequate to meet the need. "The programs are out there," he said. "I think the (food stamp) program is fine just the way it is. People can live on what they get," he said, adding that food stamps are intended as a supplement and not as a total food budget. Rep. Leon E. Panetta, D-Calif., chairman of the task force, disagreed. "The fact that there's increased use of the programs shows there is a problem," Panetta said. "Yes, we need more volunteers, and yes, we need more people involved. But you also need adequate benefits provided to the people."

Leard called the food stamp program "our first line of defense against hunger."

Pickup of leaves to begin

The town will begin its annual vacuum leaf pickup Monday and continue it for six weeks. As expected, the curbside collection of debris left by Hurricane Gloria will still be in progress when the leaf pickup begins. But Keith Chapman, the town highway superintendent, said he expects the post-hurricane collection to be 95 percent complete by Saturday night.

President Reagan greets Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega as the latter was introduced to the president at a reception Reagan hosted for heads of government, their representatives and wives at the Waldorf Astoria in New York Wednesday.

Sell station, build 2 more, GOP urges

Republican candidates for the Board of Directors today proposed that the town's Buckland fire station be sold and replaced with two satellite stations, one in the northeast section of town and one in the south. At a news conference this morning, the Republicans said that if they receive a majority of the board's nine seats in the Nov. 5 election, they will contract with the difference between the two stations for a study to determine exactly where the two satellite stations should be located.

Reagan urges regional plan to eliminate world conflict

UNITED NATIONS - President Reagan, seeking a fresh start in relations with the Soviet Union, today proposed that the superpowers agree to eliminate "outrageous military involvement" and guarantee peace settlements to help resolve conflict in five world trouble spots. Following is a rough description of the six routes: The area east of Autumn, Walker, and Princeton streets, south of East Middle Turnpike, north of Highland Street, and west of the Vernon town line.

Bennet students mark UN's 40th anniversary

While President Reagan was addressing the United Nations General Assembly this morning, students at Bennet Junior High School were conducting their own ceremony in celebration of the 40th anniversary of the world organization. At the conclusion of brief talks about the U.N. by several Bennet students and School Superintendent James P. Kennedy, a white spruce tree was planted on the school grounds. The tree-planting ceremony was part of a commemorative program being conducted by young people all around the world today to mark the U.N.'s International Youth Year celebration, said Bennet student Andrea Della Rocco.

Texas tale prompts a leaf war

An old-fashioned tale seems to be brewing between tourism officials in New England and their counterparts in Texas, who claim fall foliage in the Lone Star State is the most spectacular in the nation. "Balance? Nuts," said Wanda Plumer, director of Maine's Tourism Department. Debbie First, deputy director of the Massachusetts Division of Tourism, said the claim is a "typical Texas tall tale." "Have you ever been to Texas? There's miles between trees."

Technology gains pose privacy risks

WASHINGTON - The explosion in communications technology has so outpaced privacy laws that Americans have little or no protection against a plethora of new ways for government or private adversaries to pry into their lives, a congressional agency reported today. The non-partisan Office of Technology Assessment found that 35 out of 142 domestic federal agencies use or plan to use various electronic surveillance methods, including modern devices not governed by a landmark 1968 law that circumscribed the use of wiretaps and "bugs" - concealed microphones. The agency said 36 agencies, not counting those in foreign intelligence, already have established networks to spy on people even if their own communications habits are more old-fashioned, the agency noted.

The plan outlined by the GOP candidates this morning depends on a "no" vote on the referendum question on the Nov. 5 ballot, in which a "yes" vote would mean the town must keep the station to provide fire protection and a "no" vote would make it possible to sell the station.
