Record crew takes off on shuttle flight

West Germany runs international flight

By William Harwood
 United Press International

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The shuttle Challenger flashed to life and raced toward space today with a record crew of eight on a historic Space Shuttle flight paid for and managed by West Germany.

Earlier concerns about threatening rain and thunderstorms evaporated as the morning wore on and at noon EST, right on time, Challenger leaped away from the launch pad and quickly climbed above puffy clouds to begin the 22nd shuttle voyage.

Trailing thick clouds of smoke and streams of incandescent flame from its twin solid rocket boosters, Challenger, making its ninth flight, majestically rolled and arced out over the Atlantic Ocean. It headed up the East Coast toward an orbit ranging up to 87 degrees on either side of the equator.

At the controls were commander Henry Hartsfield, a veteran of three shuttle missions, and co-pilot Steven Nagel. Their NASA crewmates were James Buchi, Guion Bluford and Bonnie Dunbar, the seventh American woman to fly in space.

Joining them for the Space Shuttle D-1 mission — the "D" stands for Deutschland — were physicists Ernst Messerschmid and Reinhard Furrer, both of West Germany, and European Space Agency astronaut Wolf Oetke, also a physicist, of the Netherlands.

The crew members were awakened today in the staggered shifts they will maintain in orbit.

The shuttle fliers plan to work in two shifts around the clock throughout the mission in the European-built Spacelab module in Challenger's payload bay to carry out 76 experiments in a variety of fields, most dealing with materials processing in weightlessness and life science.

The previous record for a shuttle crew was seven. Dunbar said before launch she did not know whether to call the crew a "gaggle, a flock or a herd."

The only problem during Challenger's smooth-running countdown came early today when one of the shuttle's three electricity-producing fuel cells gave erratic readings but NASA engineers decided it was performing acceptably and the countdown proceeded to launch.

For the first time in the shuttle program, Challenger's experiments will be managed by scientists at the German Space Operations Center in Oberpfaffenhofen, about 15 miles from Munich, via a commercial satellite link from the United States.

The shuttle's operation after launch will be directed, as usual, from the Johnson Space Center in Houston.

The flight is seen as a major step toward full European cooperation in NASA's planned space station of the 1990s and it is the first of at least two and possibly more German Space Shuttle missions planned for the shuttle program.

The German Aerospace Research Establishment paid NASA about $67 million to charter Challenger for the Space Shuttle mission. The overall cost of the flight is about $180 million.

The majority of the experiments are housed in the Spacelab module carried in the shuttle's 80-foot cargo bay and connected to the crew cabin by a 19-foot tunnel.

"We're delighted that the Germans and NASA have worked very well as a team in pulling this payroll together," said shuttle chief Jesse Moore. "It's a very impressive payroll and we're very much looking forward to an outstanding mission in terms of the scientific return."

Landing is scheduled for Nov. 6 at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., where a new shuttle steering system will be tested for the first time. It is expected to reduce the tire and brake damage that has marred most shuttle landings.

David Coon of Manchester vacuums the copper bell that until recently hung in the tower of the Clocktower Mill. The bell is now in the former chapel of the Cheney Bros. mill, which is being converted to 185 apartments. Coon works for the contractor on the conversion.

Town seeks historic bell found in ex-Cheney mill

By Susan Vaughn
 Herald Reporter

Mayor Barbara B. Weinberg has asked the owners of the Clocktower Mill apartments to donate a copper bell that once hung in the clocktower of the old silk spinning mill to the town of Manchester Historical Society.

Weinberg wrote to Marc S. Levine, president of Dwelling Development Corp., one of the partners developing the old mill into 185 apartments, asking that he consider donating the bell because of its historical significance.

Robert Harrison, town parks and cemeteries superintendent, identified the date of 1841 and the name of the bell's maker, G.H. Holbrook, on the bell during a recent visit to the former Cheney Bros. mill on Elm Street, Weinberg said today. Harrison collects antiques and found a picture in an antique magazine of a similar bell made by Holbrook in 1841.

An unidentified workman at the Clocktower Mill office said today that the contractors are looking for a way to remove tar from the bell, which is currently on concrete blocks in the chapel room. The old chapel is one of the main entrance foyers for the apartments, which are now occupied by more than 20 tenants. Levine said. Full occupancy is scheduled for the spring, he said.

Reagan calls for an end to 'paranoia'

President keeps up pre-summit pressure

Combined Wire Services

WASHINGTON — President Reagan says the most he can get out of the November summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev is to "eliminate some of the paranoia" between the superpowers.

In an interview with the British Broadcasting Corp., taped Tuesday at the White House and aired today, Reagan also said he believes the futuristic "star wars" space defense is the "most momentous in the century."

He said he would be willing to share the space weapons technology with the Soviet Union and disclosed that "leading scientists who are involved in this say they can foresee achieving this ... in a matter of years."

The 30-minute interview with the BBC was the first in a series of interviews with foreign news agencies before Nov. 19-20 summit in Geneva, Switzerland.

"I think the most we can get out of it (the summit) is to eliminate some of the paranoia," Reagan said. "If we could reduce the hostility between our two countries, the reduction of arms will easily follow because we will reduce the feeling that we need them."

The White House also announced that the president will be interviewed by four Soviet journalists in the Oval Office on Thursday in what is hoped was a sign of a new and more open information policy on the part of the Soviet Union.

The four journalists who will interview Reagan flew in from Moscow solely for the interview, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said. They include a representative from the Soviet news agency Tass, the Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda, the Soviet government newspaper Ivestia and a Soviet news service Novosti.

Reagan said he believes testing of "star wars" weapons is permissible within the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty, which was negotiated with the Russians in 1972. "I believe that the Soviets have gone through the biggest military buildup in the history of man" and they could eliminate suspicion and fear by reducing their military involvement in regional conflicts.

He said he did not intend to make a big issue of human rights at the summit and did not believe that with fingers pointed at each other.

The black cat finds Halloween unlucky

CHICAGO (AP) — The sight of a black cat can send chills up the spines of trick-or-treaters on Halloween, Tass, the Soviet news agency, said. Howland, whose not-for-profit organization handles an estimated 20,000 animals a year in the Chicago area.

In another case, several young women were found to have been going to animal shelters and adopting cats. Each time, the women had used false names, Howland said.

"There's nothing worse than a cat's scream," he said.

Ex-actor Lodge found spot on Reagan team

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former American ambassador and Connecticut Gov. John Davis Lodge, a one-time movie star, is dead at age 81.

Lodge was pronounced dead on arrival at St. Clare's Hospital at 11:20 p.m. Tuesday, said hospital administrator Margaret Rizzitello.

She said he suffered a heart attack at a Republican dinner in his honor in New York City.

Several unidentified family members were with him, she said. Lodge, like Ronald Reagan, was a former movie star and governor of a state.

Lodge starred in "Bulldog Drummond at Bay" and several other films. He also served as governor of Connecticut from 1951 to 1955.

In 1980, Lodge campaigned for Reagan against the incumbent president of the United States, Jimmy Carter. The victorious Reagan appointed Lodge U.S. representative to the United Nations and later, in 1983, as ambassador to Switzerland.

Previously Lodge had served as ambassador to Spain and Argentina and as a congressman from Connecticut when he replaced Rep. Clare Boothe Luce.

Lodge starred as Bulldog Drummond in a series of movies made to be shown in England while Englishman Ronald Colman played Drummond in the Hollywood version.

He played a variety of roles during his movie career. He was Katharine Hepburn's boyfriend in "Little Women," Shirley Temple's father in "The Little Colonel," and Marlene Dietrich's lover in the "Scarlet Empress," to name a few.

He said a kissing scene with Marlene Dietrich was spoiled because 50 extras and technicians were watching and the action took place in a hayloft, a sad setting since he had his fever.

As U.S. representative to the UN, he saved his best lines for the Russian delegate and liked to turn the verbal screw. The Russian claimed, for example, that the United States was exploiting the internal problems of Poland and spoke of the right of Poles to resolve their own problems.

"As we all know, Russian troops remain in Poland precisely to prevent Poles from resolving their own problems," Lodge said. Then he reminded the delegate of Russia's World War II association with Adolph Hitler.

"Forty-three years is surely too short a time for any of us to forget the Russian invasion of Poland in the pact of August 1939," he said. "It was just after his signature that on Sept. 1, the Hitlerite armies attacked Poland from the west, while from the east Hitler's Russian allies invaded the very same Poland whose right to solve its own problems Moscow asserts today."

During the early years of World War II, before the U.S. entry into the conflict, Lodge left the cast of Lillian Hellman's play, "Watch on the Rhine," to join the Navy. He served as a liaison officer between the French and American fleets. Gen. Charles de Gaulle awarded him the Croix de Guerre and the French Legion of Honor.

After the war ended, Lodge went into politics, at a time when

Political leaders trade rhetoric on consolidation

Democratic Town Chairman Theodore R. Cummings today vehemently denied a charge by his Republican counterpart that the Democratic Party tried to lease space in the Eighth Utilities District from which to launch a drive for consolidation of the district and the town.

Cummings labeled the consolidation effort report "desperate nonsense."

Curtis Smith, the Republican town chairman, charged today that the Democrats sought a six-month lease on a property in the Eighth District. Smith said the quest was evidence of a Democratic drive to consolidate the town and the district, which each operate a fire department and a sewer service.

"The town has a fire station in the territory of the independent utilities district and the two are often at odds. A question about whether the Town Fire District should keep the station in on the ballot in Tuesday's election and has been the subject of heated controversy."

"I think the bottom line is that they're going to use the Buckland firehouse issue to press for consolidation," Smith told the Herald.

"Unold sums of campaign money have been used to convince voters that the station should be kept — an unusually heavy commitment for an issue the Democrats have swept under the carpet for years," he added.

Smith also said Cummings threatened in July to work for a change in the Town Charter that would allow forced consolidation. In response to those charges, Cummings said Smith and Walter Joyner, a Republican president of the Eighth District, have made a deal under which the district could buy the town's Buckland fire station on Tolland Turnpike at a low price and Joyner would win support for a bid to be elected to the General Assembly, in which he formerly served.

Cummings said the Republicans "are realizing that they are on the wrong side of every issue in the current campaign and have grown desperate."

He said the Republicans "fell flat on their faces" in an attempt to petition the town earlier this year for sale of the firehouse to the highest bidder who offered more than $400,000.

A counter-petition by the Democrats put the question on the ballot.

"Ted is a master of diversion," Smith said of Cummings.

Manchester In Brief

Neighbor finds boy's helmet

Tom D'Avanzo's missing helmet has been returned. After seeing a picture and story about the 15-year-old and his missing helmet in the Manchester Herald Saturday, neighbor Chris Turkington knew it was Tom's helmet he had found in the woods and returned it, said Marge D'Avanzo, Tom's mother.

"We are flying on a cloud," she said, adding that Turkington declined to take any reward for finding the $107 helmet.

The loss had almost grounded Tom, a dwarf and hydrocephalic who needs the helmet to protect his head when he rides his motorbike.

School board salutes teacher

Robert Borello, chairman of the public school system's elementary science department, was recognized by the Board of Education Monday night for his participation in a program for math and science teachers.

Borello was selected as a United Technologies fellow for the Project to Increase Mastery in Mathematics and Science at Wesleyan University last summer. The six-week program, which was sponsored by real corporations, was started in 1979. It was recently expanded from a secondary school program to include elementary school teachers.

Borello told the board Monday that he benefited greatly from the program, which he said gave him many ideas to improve the teaching of science.

Counselors attend conference

Several members of the counseling staff at Manchester schools will attend the annual conference of the New England Personnel and Guidance Association in Hyannis, Mass., this weekend.

Those who will attend the conference are Angela Phelan, guidance chairwoman, and Stephen Hubbard, Grade 8 counselor, both of Hiling Junior High School; Joel Chaison, guidance chairman, George Wilk and Charles Viani, guidance counselors, and Joan Lingard, social worker, all of Bennet Junior High School; and Phil Griffin, school psychologist at Bennet, and Verplanck and Nathan Hale elementary schools.

Cooney top moderator in town election

Attorney John W. Cooney has been named chief moderator for the town election Tuesday. His appointment was announced today by Herbert J. Stevenson, Democratic registrar of voters.

Republicans and Democrats alternate in the role of moderator through the whole thing — he chooses the moderators for each of the town's 12 polling places. This year it is the Democrats' turn.

The following is a list of the moderators for each polling place:

- District 1, Robertson School, Maureen F. Gallo.
- District 2, Bowers School, Malcolm F. Barlow.
- District 3, Buckley School, Edith F. Gottlieb.
- District 4, Martin School, Helen T. Ramey.
- District 5, Senior Citizens' Center, Philip E. Freedman.
- District 6, Nathan Hale School, Debra K. Pietranonico.
- District 7, Wadell School, Mary E. LeDuc.
- District 8, Verplanck School, Virginia D. Lessard.
- District 9, Keeney Street School, William F. Ryan.
- District 10, Manchester High School, John J. Smith.
- District 11, Mahoney Recreation Center, Bette J. Kramer.
- District 12, Howell Cheney Regional Vocational Technical School, Michael M. Darby.

Breakfast set in Coventry

COVENTRY — The North Coventry Fire Department will have a pancake breakfast Sunday from 8 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at the department's firehouse on Route 31.

The cost of a breakfast is $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for children.

For the Record

Police officer denies candidate's claim

By Kevin Flood
Herald Reporter

The police officer who arrested Board of Directors candidate Peter J. McNamara early Monday morning on motor vehicle charges today denied McNamara's claim that police would not let him call an attorney when they took him into custody.

"He didn't even ask for a lawyer," Officer Edwin Ciolkosz said. "He was very noncompliant as an officer who was passing by and thought Ciolkosz was arresting someone on a warrant."

"But he went on his way as soon as he realized it wasn't a warrant arrest," Ciolkosz said.

Ciolkosz confirmed McNamara's allegations that a fourth cruiser drove by the scene of the arrest, but said it was driven by an officer who was initially called to serve as a back-up. That officer, John Pikiell, was stationed in the district where the arrest took place but was ordered off the call by an officer who was already on Summit Street, Ciolkosz said.

"He probably just wanted to make sure everything was okay," he said.

McNamara said today that four cruisers stopped in front of his house as soon as he pulled into his driveway. In an interview Monday, he charged that "they were there waiting" for him.

Ciolkosz said today that McNamara was "very uncooperative" throughout the proceedings.

Key to clean living

Rolling Stone Keith Richards, noted authority on living life to excess, says of one period in his life, "The only thing I was topping the charts in was 'One Most Likely to Kick the Bucket.'"

In an interview in Spin magazine Richards talks about the fast-lane lifestyles and draws parallels between the deaths of two other notorious hard-livers, ex-Stone Brian Jones and actor John Belushi.

"Something in Brian was in Belushi," he says. "The more they got, the more in installments they were." Richards says personality is the most important thing in making a rock 'n' roll survivor. "There's a certain equilibrium between your personality and your ego and your physical makeup," he said. "Woody's (Ron Wood, the Stones' other guitarist) that way. Tough always. Mick (Jagger) too."

Hooked on seat belts

Country singer Barbara Mandrell, her life saved a year ago by a seat belt, has taped a public service television commercial urging the public to buckle up.

Miss Mandrell taped the 30-second public service announcement Tuesday for the U.S. Department of Transportation, the National Safety Council and the American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons. It will be aired beginning Nov. 24.

Miss Mandrell, 36, suffered a severe concussion, a broken leg, a broken ankle and an injured knee in a two-car accident in September 1984. The driver of the other car was killed.

Weinberg leads pack in raising campaign funds

By Alex Girelli
Herald Reporter

Democratic Mayor Barbara B. Weinberg has raised $6,940 in her campaign for re-election to the Board of Directors — more than any other candidate in Tuesday's local election, according to reports filed with the town clerk.

The next closest candidate is Peter DiRosa, a former Republican director now seeking election to the board as a Democrat. DiRosa's campaign committee has collected $5,100.

Other candidates for the board reporting receipts in excess of $500 were: Republican incumbent Donna R. Mercier, $4,266; Republican incumbent Thomas H. Ferguson, $3,327; Democratic incumbent Stephen T. Cassano, $2,175; Democratic incumbent Kenneth N. Tedford, $2,025; Republican challenger Edward F. Boland Jr., $1,999; Libertarian Party candidate Peter J. McNamara, $1,973; and Republican challenger Carol M. Lenihan, $813.

The other candidates for the Board of Directors reported that they have not raised more than $500. They are Stephen T. Penny and James F. Fogarty, Democratic incumbents; William J. Diana, a Republican incumbent; and Gloria D. DeLore, a Republican who is seeking election after having served on the board previously.

Weinberg will be trying Tuesday to retain the mayor's seat she captured from Penny in 1983. The post of mayor traditionally goes to the highest vote-getter in the majority party.

Some observers have speculated that Manchester's election results are much higher than those reported in the 1983 local election, meaning that more candidates are vying for the mayor's post.

GOP's Boland echoes party stands

EDWARD BOLAND Jr., Republican candidate for the Board of Directors, seems to be enjoying himself as he makes his first campaign for a municipal office.

Edward F. Boland Jr., a Republican candidate for the Board of Directors, seems to be enjoying himself as he makes his first campaign for a municipal office. For Boland, campaigning has mainly meant knocking on doors and talking to people on the street.

Although Boland, 29, who runs a Manchester fuel distribution company, has a lot to say in private, he sometimes lets others do the talking in public. At a recent news conference on the town's proposed Comprehensive Plan of Development, for instance, Boland supported the party line and said little himself.

Other Republicans, Boland has argued, should do what they can to help pay for badly needed repairs to parks, sidewalks and curbs.

But he said a tax increase to pay for maintenance is not his favorite idea.

"I just can't see it at this time," he said. "There's going to be a good hard look at the budget."

Boland said his experience as president of Boland Bros. Inc. and Manchester Ice and Fuel would benefit the town if he was on the seat on the board.

"I have the experience," he said. "I've run a business for nearly two years but was concerned that he would not be able to put in enough time. When he determined he could give the board a sufficient effort," he decided to seek the position, he said.

least 10 years if adopted. After 400 people packed the Wadell School auditorium earlier this month, most of them to protest against the plan. Boland and other politicians spoke out against the proposed designations for housing density.

"There is only so much land," he said. "And I don't think we have to squeeze people in because there isn't enough housing. We can't overcrowd residents because other people want to come in."

Boland particularly criticized the plan's proposals for the southwestern area of Manchester, saying higher densities would ruin its rural character.

"There are all different types of neighborhoods in Manchester," he said. "We have to take it neighborhood-by-neighborhood."

Boland said the Buckland area, where the plan proposes a special mixed-use district that would include commercial, industrial and high-density residential development, would be an "ideal" place for a apartments and condominiums.

Police, state offer Halloween safety tips

To ensure a safe Halloween this year, Manchester Police Chief Robert D. Lannan and state Consumer Protection Commissioner Mary M. Heslin have issued safety tips for "trick-or-treaters" and their parents.

Children should be escorted by a parent or responsible adult and should not visit homes outside their neighborhood.

"Trick-or-treat" should be done only in the early evening hours, while there is still some light left.

Children still out after dark should wear reflective tape to make sure passing motorists see them.

Anyone spotting suspicious activity in their neighborhood should call the police department, he said.

Lannan also cautioned motorists to "be alert and exercise extreme caution while youngsters are making their rounds."

Labels that do not mean a costume will not catch fire, Heslin warned, but it does mean it will resist burning.

Bolton panel hits conditions at library

By Susan Vaughn
Herald Reporter

BOLTON — The Bolton High School library is not meeting the needs of the school's students and should be redesigned, an advisory committee has concluded.

The committee reported that the Library Media Center Advisory Committee said the high school library was too small and lacked storage and seating space, audio-visual equipment and amenities.

The committee arrived at its conclusions after comparing the library at BHS to libraries at seven other area high schools, including Manchester High School, committee Chairman Raymond Ursin said.

The library facilities at BHS were also measured against the state's recommended minimum requirements for school libraries.

The committee reported that Bolton High's 1,500-square-foot library is considerably below the state recommendation of 2,800 square feet.

The advisory committee was appointed by the Board of Education after voters narrowly defeated a proposal to build a library-media center at the high school in a referendum last year.

Ursin said the committee is a very active group — "not a rubber stamp group" — of about 30 people in the community who are "dedicated to improvement in the education of our students."

A grant of $485,971 to construct a 2,000-square-foot library and media center has already been allocated by the state Department of Education, based on a request the town made more than two years ago.

The next meeting of the advisory committee is scheduled for Nov. 13 at 7:30 p.m. at Bolton High School. The committee plans to make its final recommendations to the Board of Education on Dec. 12.

'Mini-courses' a success in Bolton

By Christine Richardson
Herald Correspondent

BOLTON — Students at Bolton Center School are getting a taste of computers, first aid, Rembrandt, debate and carpentry.

Those are just a few of the topics covered in mini-courses that 7th- and 8th-graders at the school can elect to take each semester.

The last class period of each day is set aside for the mini-courses. Students attend two graded academic mini-courses a week and one that is recreational and is not graded.

"It's a nice way to end the day," Principal Anne Rash said recently. "The kids get to expand on an interest and the teachers get a chance to do something different with a smaller group of kids."

The courses are taught by regular academic instructors and the art teacher, music teacher, physical education teacher and librarian. The mini-courses are less formal than regular classes and have fewer students.

This is the second year the school has offered the academic and recreational courses. There was a similar program many years ago at the school, but "it had become mostly recreational," Rash said.

Teachers seem to enjoy the mini-courses as much as the students do, Rash said.

"I THINK MOST of them would prefer teaching a mini-course than supervising a study hall. It's more work, but it is also more rewarding," she said.

Grades of "pass," "fail" or "honors" are given for the academic mini-courses, but the grades do not have any bearing on whether or not a student will pass into the next grade and are not figured into the honor roll, Rash said.

"Most of the students get honors grades because they choose a mini-course which they enjoy and excel in," she said.

The students can select a different recreational mini-course each quarter. The courses include about places that they wanted to visit.

Greg Owen, an eighth-grader involved in the computer club, said he likes the minicourses.

"I learned about computers at home, but I do a lot more computer work now," he said.

Project Rembrandt students Alana Schiavone, Scott Magrath and Stacey Donbach said they like the time the mini-course gives them to work on special art projects, such as enlarging pictures of favorite cartoon characters.

Regular art classes do not afford them the time to work on such projects, they said.

Eighth-graders in the math club said they like the challenge it presents. Most of them were involved in different mini-courses last year, including gymnastics, computers and "world traveler," a course in which students learned about places that they wanted to visit.

ALL MATH CLUB members said that snacks brought in by participating students were a good part of the minicourse. As seventh-grader Paul Sauer explained, "A different person brings in the snacks each time we meet. It definitely motivates us to work harder."

Rash said the courses were scheduled for the last class period of the day because "it's not the optimum learning time and the mini-courses are not high-pressure classes. The students don't have to worry about having a test at the end of the day or losing their homework before the last class."

Rash said the mini-courses have been successful largely because of the cooperation of both staff and students.

"It is really super," she said.

Gauvin favors spirited school debate

By Kevin Flood
Herald Reporter

ANNE GAUVIN, Republican candidate for the Board of Education, says the school board should lobby harder for capital improvements when the town Board of Directors reviews school budgets.

Anne Gauvin, a Republican candidate for the Board of Education, says the school board should lobby harder for capital improvements when the town Board of Directors reviews school budgets.

Gauvin said in a recent interview that when faced with budget constraints, previous boards have been forced to abandon capital improvements in order to keep money for programs and other items that have a more immediate impact on students.

"I understand the reasons for that," said Gauvin, 35, a former Manchester teacher and president of the teachers' union who is seeking her first term on the school board.

"In trying to maintain programs for kids, you cut in your budget as far away from the child and the classroom as possible," she said.

"I think that's a philosophy we've all had, because what we want is the best program possible for kids."

But she added, "I think now we need to lobby as heavily for capital improvement projects as for programmatic kinds of projects."

Gauvin, who now coordinates pupil services for the West Hartford schools, cited as an example the board's decision last spring to ask voters to approve an $8.3 million bond issue to renovate five town schools. Some of the repairs are needed to bring the buildings up to state fire and building codes.

The board first wanted to put the issue on the ballot in November, but decided not to when it learned that a $26 million bond referendum for improvements to the town's sewage treatment plant would appear on the ballot.

To get capital improvement money in its budget, Gauvin said, the school board will have to be much more insistent when the Board of Directors reviews the budget.

"Things have been status quo for a long time," she said. "Every year you get (before the directors) every year your budget's cut 'x' number of dollars, and every year you get a new issue with that in a real concerted way."

With the exception of last year, Gauvin said, recent boards have reviewed "almost seemed pre-arranged. You just went through the motions, and I don't think that's the way it ought to be. I think there ought to be a lot of active debate, a lot of active lobbying."

Gauvin also said members of the school board should ask school administrators more questions about issues before voting on them.

"I think they need more information about how the school system operates so that when they make a decision, they'll understand what they're voting on. For example, if you're making a policy decision, how does that reflect on the classroom? How does that reflect on the K-12 grades?"

As a former president of the Manchester Education Association, Gauvin helped negotiate the current teachers' contract. While happy with the current minimum annual salary of $17,500 for teachers, Gauvin said the current maximum salary — $28,325 — needs to be raised.

"If you look at how well

Manchester pays its veteran teachers we don't rank very well at all," she said. "We have not really made the same kind of commitments to them that we have made to newer teachers. I don't think you can address the question of starting salaries without looking at salaries across the board."

A public-relations push by angelic Republicans

State Republicans continue to milk — and who can blame them — that fringe benefit that goes with majority status on Capitol Hill, attention by the press, as they market their political soap. And they do it so well.

The latest example was the highly successful "road show" by GOP legislative leaders to invite public opinion on what to do with some $40 million in surplus funds from the 1984-85 state budget.

The tour turned up predictable feedback in calls for tax cuts, more money for schools and roads, and thumbs down to a special session now. But in going to the people, listening to them and putting legislators on display to their thumbs, the GOP got great coverage and high marks.

On a smaller scale is a GOP effort to trim the high cost of wooing delegates to party conventions by candidates competing for nominations. Here is a motherhood-type issue involving more hope than hype, but the GOP chalks up another public relations score by stressing reform.

Then there was the earlier classic aimed, with considerable fanfare, at opening primary elections to unaffiliated voters. Republicans put on the white hats for this one, pumping out a message of "liberation" for independents while quietly counting up what this traffic could mean in votes down the road. And they've put the Democrats on the defensive.

Capitol Comments
Bob Conrad

THE LIST GOES ON, of course, and will lengthen when legislators go back onstage in February. Republicans learned quickly enough in 1985 how to make the most of media respect for the new majority. Press coverage for a GOP budget, or welfare reform? Unheard of in the recent past. But now, the GOP watchword is "go for it!"

An incident last week demonstrated how GOP brass loves public relations even when it can cause some strain within the party rank.

Senate Majority Leader Reginald Smith of New Hartford was reporting to the party's "board of directors" — the Republican State Central Committee — on how the "road show" had gone: Smith spoke, as one critic charged, in "plattitudes." John Anglace of Shelton and Edward Ulozas of Cheshire demanded specific information on what people at those hearings said about the surplus. After all, they told Smith, this was the party's policy committee and was entitled to know.

"Sorry," said Smith. The information was being held until the next day when he and House Speaker R.E. Van Norstrand of Darien and Majority Leader Bob Jaekle of Stratford would divulge it at a State Capitol press conference. Obviously the leaders saw it as more important to the party in terms of public relations if they could hit statewide media than to observe someone's idea of protocol the night before.

PUTTING A VOLUNTARY CAP on what candidates may spend to woo delegates to party conventions in an idea which GOP State Chairman Top D'Amore of New Hartford is pushing, will all due attention to media pipelines to the public. Already, however, it has put a little distance between some of the candidates for governor next year.

"It has all the ingredients for losing elections," says Dick Bozuto of Watertown, a former state senator who wants the gubernatorial nomination. Bozuto says D'Amore's figures ($4.5 million) on what GOP candidates spent prior to 1983 conventions are much too high. Bozuto says a voluntary cap could not be enforced and could be unfair to a candidate who tries to comply but is outdone by a rival who says to heck with it.

Gerald Labriola of Naugatuck, another former state senator seeking the nomination for governor, says the D'Amore proposal "sounds reasonable."

Labriola adds, though, that its success would depend on what those limits were — not so tight as to "paralyze" a campaign. State Rep. Julia Belaga of Westport says "the concept is on target — I am very supportive." She calls the proposal a welcome starting point for reducing such costs.

Still another former state senator who, like Belaga, eyes the race for governor says D'Amore "makes sense." Romeo Petroni of Ridgefield would be interested, he says, if he becomes a candidate.

Republicans believe they are on the side of the angels in these issues, naturally. No point in being there, though, if voters don't know it. So look for more of the public relations push often in 1986.

Color us red, as in blue

Has GOP Chairman D'Amore dyed his "green" T-shirt — the one we mentioned in this column recently — bright red? No, it's been red all along. We have trouble with color names sometimes, which is why we didn't make it into the Marine Corps many years ago.

Editorial

Vote 'yes' to keep firehouse

Question 2: "For the protection of the lives and property served by the Buckland Fire Station No. 5 the Town of Manchester shall continue to own and operate the station for public safety?"

This question should not be on the Nov. 5 ballot. Instead, there should be concurrent referendums in the Town Fire District and Eighth District. District voters' opinions on shared use of the firehouse and the creation of a liaison between the two jurisdictions to best serve the people of Manchester.

But the question does indeed appear on the ballot in the Town Fire District. And the answer should be affirmative, because a "yes" vote will offer the best opportunity for the town to best serve the people. A "no" vote will mean nothing.

ation of the firehouse. And there is widespread disagreement over the meanings of "yes" or "no" votes.

There is also uncertainty about whether the question, if approved, will bind the directors in perpetuity. If it does, it is bad law. But the town attorney believes a future Board of Directors could change it to abandon or dispose of the firehouse. Politically, that seems unlikely in the near future.

The firehouse issue, which has come to symbolize strained relations between the town and the Eighth District, has emerged as a major issue in the 1985 election campaign. It should not be a political issue; the matter of public safety cannot be subject to the whims of partisan rhetoric.

Fire protection is a responsibility of government. The Town Fire District has rightly assumed that responsibility, and must continue to do so. While the Buckland firehouse can not legally serve its immediate vicinity, it is needed to serve other areas of northern Manchester.

Those who urge a "no" vote on Question 2 may be right in their conclusion that the firehouse, built in the midst of a jurisdictional dispute in Buckland, was ill-conceived. But that argument, along with many others about the history of fire protection, is irrelevant. The face of Buckland and the rest of northern Manchester has changed much since the firehouse was built 10 years ago. A full-service town firehouse is needed, and the existing station in Buckland is strategically located to serve the need.

Of course, a "yes" vote on Question 2 could bring Manchester the dubious distinction of having two firehouses, manned by different fire departments, within 500 feet of each other. But if the leadership of the Eighth

District acts responsibly, that will not happen.

The Eighth District, too, has a right and responsibility to provide fire protection. Unfortunately, it appears that the Eighth District recognizes no responsibility to serve the best interests of the people.

The best approach for the Eighth District would be to share, in some manner, the facilities of the existing town station in Buckland. But Eighth District leaders, who say they must build their own firehouse, refuse to consider sharing. The Eighth District's board of directors must also be held accountable, by district electors at their annual meeting.

If the Eighth District directors are waiting for a "no" vote on Question 2, in the baseless hope of buying the town's Buckland firehouse, they should forget it. A "no" vote would not necessarily be interpreted as an order that the town sell the firehouse; it would mean simply that the proposal to continue ownership and operation had failed. In other words, it would mean nothing.

Question 2 is not a "sell-don't sell" question. Instead, it is a question of how the town can best provide fire protection. Because the Buckland firehouse is needed to provide that service, "yes" is the only reasonable answer.

The town directors who will be elected Nov. 5 must interpret a "yes" vote as a mandate to recognize anew their responsibility to the people, and to cooperate with the Eighth District to provide fire protection to all of Manchester.

In return, the Eighth District must cooperate with the town. Although the results of a Town Fire District referendum cannot force the cooperation of an autonomous fire-and-sewer authority, an affirmative vote Nov. 5 should send a message to the Eighth District.

Vote "yes" on Question 2.

Envoy, once insider, now feeling the chill

WASHINGTON — Anatoly Fyodorovich Dobrynin, Soviet ambassador in Washington since 1962 and an intimate of high-level officials in both Democratic and Republican administrations, has been virtually frozen out of current arms-control negotiations by the United States, despite his years of dealing with such matters.

The reason, we suspect, is that intelligence reports have convinced the hard-line anti-communists in the Reagan administration that Dobrynin is the top KGB official in the Washington embassy. And they can't bring themselves to confide in the bogeyman.

Normally, the KGB "residents" or chief is among the top five officers in a Soviet embassy, but not the ambassador. Exceptions in the past have included the ambassadors to Cuba, Indonesia, Afghanistan, Morocco and Colombia, according to our intelligence sources. So Dobrynin is a rarity among top-flight Soviet diplomats.

Of course, the general Dobrynin, who will be 66 on Nov. 16, has been a rare bird in other ways. His tall, portly frame and cordial, almost shy demeanor don't fit the mold of the dour, suspicious, light-lipped Soviet envoy typified by Vyacheslav "Iron Pants" Molotov and Andrei Gromyko. Dobrynin has long been a favorite on Washington's diplomatic party circuit and is now the senior member of the city's diplomatic corps.

WHEN KISSINGER BECAME secretary of state, he arranged for Dobrynin to be allowed to drive right into the department's underground garage and be whisked by a private elevator up to the secretary's seventh-floor office. This privilege was continued during the Carter administration.

Former Secretary of State Cyrus Vance credits Dobrynin with being the indispensable negotiator of the SALT II treaty. Then-national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski was another fan — even though he was ambassador consistently beat him at chess during hours-long private battles.

The big chill set in with the sudden ferocity of a Russian winter when Ronald Reagan was inaugurated. In fact, Dobrynin learned of the change in political climate on Jan. 29, 1981, when he drove up to Foggy Bottom's underground entrance intending to pay his respects to the new secretary of state, Gen. Alexander Haig. He was turned back and had to use the main entrance like any other ambassador. His access to top administration officials is now no greater than any

HE IS ALWAYS STAINCH and vigorous in his defense of the Soviet Union, no matter how indefensible the Kremlin's latest shocker may seem to non-Soviets. But he usually employs a puckish sense of humor, which combines with his gold-rimmed spectacles to give him the appearance of an almost saintly, latter-day Ben Franklin.

Dobrynin's debut in Washington was hardly auspicious: He lied to Attorney General Robert Kennedy in October 1962, when asked if the Soviets were installing offensive nuclear missiles in Cuba. There are some who still insist that he didn't lie, that he was genuinely unaware of what his bosses in Moscow were up to.

Whatever the case, Dobrynin soon enjoyed a unique status among foreign diplomats here. He became the White House's chief contact with the Kremlin on a wide range of matters. President Johnson even gave him his private phone number — and Dobrynin used it at least once.

Henry Kissinger elevated Dobrynin to an even more exalted status when he was President Nixon's national security adviser. The two were on an easy, first-name basis, and it was their secret conversations that nailed down the SALT I and ABM treaties. Once Kissinger flew to Moscow secretly with Dobrynin, the American ambassador had no inkling of the visit until Kissinger was about to leave.

Why should Manchester save the Buckland fire station?

By Stephen T. Penny

Why was it built?

The Town of Manchester Fire Department was organized in 1957 out of the volunteer South Manchester Fire District. With that organization came responsibility for fighting fires in the Buckland section of town. Nevertheless, when the first fire in Buckland occurred, both the town and Eighth District fire departments responded, and a fight nearly ensued. It was not until the town board decided to build a new station three-quarters of a mile closer to Buckland than the McKee Street station. Indeed, the district's chief said, "For God's sake, and the sake of the safety of the people in this town, build a station and properly man it... in Buckland."

The town board considered this request reasonable and acquiesced.

In 1972, the town was informed by the Insurance Services Office in Boston, which does all the area fire insurance ratings, that the response time of the Eighth District to Buckland was excessive as its fire personnel to be well trained and highly motivated. The district continues to attract young and interested personnel, and it has always maintained a high level of quality equipment.

Second, the decision was not a first step in an eventual consolidation effort. The Eighth District has emotional as well as service roots in our community. Any effort to consolidate should originate with people in the district.

The decision of the town to improve its fire service in the northwest section was deliberated and decided in the best interest of the entire town. To reverse that decision now would be unfair to residents served by the Buckland firehouse, as well as irresponsible to those in the middle ground.

Yes, the district and the town actively cooperate in a mutual-aid pact. Why not simply extend this pact to include a first-response service similar to agreements between fire companies in more rural areas? In those areas, the closest station to an alarm responds to the alarm regardless of jurisdictional lines. These agreements in some western states are mandated by state law.

In Manchester, the two fire chiefs would develop a first-response system that would assure every resident in town of an equal service as possible. The closest station to the alarm would make the initial response. If the responding station is outside its jurisdiction, it would be relieved as soon as the jurisdictional station responded, and could safely assume as low a response time as possible to all residents regardless of location.

In addition, I would suggest the periodic stationing of Eighth District equipment and personnel at the Buckland station. For example, during peak dry periods, or as available, I do not think a permanent arrangement is feasible, since the station is a work site for full-time firefighters, and a combination work site, home away from home, for the volunteers.

This arrangement can be expanded to include mutual training exercises, exchange of personnel, shared use of equipment, and so forth. Expansion of mutual aid would require some give and take between the two fire services. The thrust of this proposal is to call upon two professional firefighters, the respective chiefs, to use existing personnel, equipment and facilities in a mutually cooperative way to provide the best protection possible to all of us. It is not a perfect solution, but it can work elsewhere, why not here? The town should retain the Buckland station, but open its doors to the mutual benefit of its neighbors, in cooperation with the Eighth District.

John W. Thompson, a Democrat, was a member of the Manchester Board of Directors from 1971 to 1977, serving as its chairman and deputy chairman.

Meanwhile, the Republican Party chairman, in order to curry favor with district partisans, attempted to petition on the ballot an ordinance which would have forced the sale of the town's Buckland fire station, in spite of the large area which it serves. That effort fell flat on its face, as well it should have. The question which is on the voting machine would require the town to keep the Buckland fire station in service for the protection of the lives and property of those of your neighbors who live in west and northeast Manchester. Vote "yes" on Nov. 5 to save the Buckland fire station.

Steven T. Penny, an attorney, is Democratic majority leader of the Manchester Board of Directors. He has served on the board since 1977, four years as its chairman, and is seeking re-election Nov. 5.

The history of the Buckland firehouse — and the future

By John W. Thompson

As a member of the Board of Directors who participated in the decision to build the Buckland firehouse, may I comment on that decision and its relationship to the ballot question.

At the time of our decision, the Eighth District was providing service to sections in the northeast and northwest corners of the town under a contract with the town. The town manager and fire chief made an analysis of the town's ability to resume direct responsibility for these two sections. It was their conclusion, and recommendation, that the Town Fire Department could safely resume this responsibility. This original recommendation did not recommend the immediate construction of a firehouse.

At a public hearing on this recommendation, members of the Eighth District spoke against it. Then-Eighth District Chief Ted Lingard argued that the town could not provide the same level of service as the district in the northwest corner unless the town built a firehouse in that section. This same argument was not made against the town reclaiming responsibility for the northeast corner.

As a result of the public hearing, and the concern about the firehouse, further action was taken to include the Buckland firehouse as an integral part of the overall expansion of fire service in the town. It was after this decision had been made that petitions were circulated in the northwest corner to allow residents of that area to become part of the Eighth District. The rest of the story has been too well documented to repeat. May I comment, however, on some of the misunderstanding and divisiveness that has resulted from that decision.

First, the decision was by no stretch of the imagination a criticism of the Eighth District Fire Department. The town had contracted to the district for services in the past, which had been satisfactorily provided and gratefully received. Our decision was based on the town's ability to resume its responsibility in this area.

The Eighth District Fire Department continues to enjoy a fine reputation in the fire service. I have always regarded the district fire personnel to be well trained and highly motivated. The district continues to attract young and interested personnel, and it has always maintained a high level of quality equipment.

Second, the decision was not a first step in an eventual consolidation effort. The Eighth District has emotional as well as service roots in our community. Any effort to consolidate should originate with people in the district.

The decision of the town to improve its fire service in the northwest section was deliberated and decided in the best interest of the entire town. To reverse that decision now would be unfair to residents served by the Buckland firehouse, as well as irresponsible to those in the middle ground.

Ratings of records won't solve problem

To the Editor:

I am upset every time I read that parents should decide for themselves if a record is all right for their child to listen to. My question is "how?" If there are lyrics with the record, they are usually inside the jacket which is covered with cellophane. Once I open that record to read or listen to the lyrics, I cannot then return the record.

If I feel the record does not meet the moral standards which our family lives by, I can then throw that record away. However, I have, by purchasing such record, supported the very group that is recording this trash. I cannot keep buying records to listen to and then throw away. While a rating system may help some, it will not solve the problem. Lyrics have to be put on the outside of the jackets and/or stores must have more liberal return policies.

Records are one of those few products that consumers must buy sight-unseen. I, as a parent, cannot afford, morally or financially, to keep buying these unknown products.

Consider Desmond for town constable

To the Editor:

Bill Desmond's candidacy for re-election to the office of town constable deserves the special consideration of all Manchester voters.

After returning from his career as a dedicated high school teacher, Bill has immersed himself in a broad variety of community service activities. He has served with distinction on the Manchester commission for the Cheney Historic District. Bill's commitment to human services has further been demonstrated by the many hours of service which he and his wife, Lucy, have given to the Food Pantry of Manchester Area Conference of Churches.

Connecticut In Brief

Social workers protest proposals

East Hartford — A dozen state social workers picketed the offices of the Department of Mental Retardation to protest a plan they claim will cut services to clients. The protesters, all members of District 1199 of the New England Health Care Workers Union, Tuesday said a plan by Mental Retardation Commissioner Brian Lenzink violates a court decree ordering mentally retarded clients at the Mansfield Training School be placed in community settings. "One of the problems is that our members did speak to Lenzink, and our members thought they had an agreement with him and they feel that he reneged on that agreement," said union spokesman Bill Meyerson. "So that's the purpose of the picket line."

The union claims Lenzink is proposing that case managers hired to monitor clients also serve as social workers.

Teen charged in grandmom's murder

BRIDGEPORT — A teenage boy will be tried as an adult in connection with the stabbing death of his grandmother. Juvenile Court Judge William McGrath Tuesday found probable cause to try Robert Dean, 14, as an adult for the stabbing death.

Christina Dean, 74, was found beaten and stabbed Oct. 17 on the garage steps of the home she shared with her adopted son William Dean and his son, Robert.

Dean will be tried along with Jerosimos Victoratos, 15, also of Bridgeport. Victoratos' case was also transferred to the adult division. As adults, the two face prison terms of 25 year to life.

Bethel raid nets 2 pounds of cocaine

BETHEL — A Bethel man is being held on $1 million bond in connection with a weekend raid at his home that uncovered about 2 pounds of cocaine worth $50,000 and $8,000 in cash, police said. Barry Calder, 39, was held in lieu of bail at the Bridgeport Correctional Center after his arraignment Tuesday in Danbury Superior Court. Calder was charged with possession of narcotics and possession with intent to sell.

Calder turned himself in Tuesday morning to Bethel police, said Detective Sgt. Christopher T. Godialis. Police armed with a search warrant also seized drug paraphernalia and transaction records at Calder's home, Godialis said.

Police sought the warrant after Donald Staib, 34, of the same address, was arrested Friday on a charge of first-degree assault. Staib allegedly beat Calder's wife, Deborah, 27, who Friday underwent emergency surgery for head injuries sustained in the attack, Godialis said. She was listed in stable condition Tuesday at Danbury Hospital.

Student testifies about teen gang

DANBURY — A shaking Danbury High School student testified Tuesday he was with a black gang when it conspired to harass the defendant in a stabbing death last Jan. 2.

Derek Perkins, 16, said the group of which he was a member singled out the defendant, Roselyn Hawkins, 18, "because of her color," and "the way she acted."

Hawkins is charged with murder in the stabbing death of Kerry Latham, 17.

Perkins told the court during the third week of testimony the group met outside the main office at the high school the day of the stabbing and that Latham agreed to go upstairs to the fifth-floor and wait for Hawkins outside a chemistry classroom. He identified Essie Anderson, 17, as the ringleader of the group.

Defense attorney Vincent Sciozzafava argued Anderson appointed Latham "to do her dirty work" because she had been threatened with arrest if she didn't leave Hawkins alone.

Utility worker comes out of coma

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — A utility worker severely injured in a fall cleaning up after Hurricane Gloria has snapped out of a coma and returned to his hometown, officials say.

James Wilson, 37, a meter and service representative for Western Massachusetts Electric Co., was transported to the Springfield unit of Baystate Medical Center Tuesday from Norwalk Hospital in Connecticut, officials said.

Wilson volunteered to be part of a team set up to restore power to Connecticut residents whose homes were knocked out by the storm. It has not been determined how Wilson fell from a ladder Sept. 29 while working to restore power in the town of Weston, a WMECO spokesman said.

Wilson regained consciousness 18 days after the fall. He suffered head and pelvic injuries and remains in traction, officials said.

Tape raises tempers in Bridgeport

BRIDGEPORT — Mayor Leonard S. Paoletta is defending paying $2,500 in city funds for coaching in how to handle the media, but was so incensed when a television reporter asked him about it, he jumped off camera.

His aide Richard Bisi then shoved the station's cameraman out of the office.

Paoletta at a Tuesday news conference defended spending city funds on the videotaped training program conducted by the city's public relations agency, Robert Henkel and Associates of New York City.

Paoletta's Democratic opponent released the training tape Monday, which shows Paoletta being coached by the city's public relations consultants on how to answer reporters' questions.

Candidate Thomas W. Bucci said it would all be very well if it were only questions about economic development. "Because some questions were about potential political rivals, however, and because Paoletta paid for the coaching out of the city treasury, Bucci is crying foul."

Man faces sex charges

TORRINGTON (UPI) — A man who had just finished serving a prison term in New York for sex offenses has been arraigned on more than 160 separate counts of sexual assault and risk of injury to a minor.

Robert H. Shick, 53, was charged with 82 counts of risk of injury to a minor and 81 counts of second-degree sexual assault. Assistant State's Attorney Andrew Wittstein said Tuesday.

The maximum possible penalty on each sexual assault count is 10 years in prison, Wittstein said.

Shick was held in lieu of $50,000 bond and the arrest warrants, which were issued in April, were sealed because the victims are minors, Wittstein said.

Torrington police detectives arrested Shick on Monday outside the Orange County Jail in Goshen, N.Y., where he had served a six-month prison sentence for sexual abuse.

A 1985 City Directory lists Shick as an employee of PIC Aerospace in Bantam.

Historic tower becomes obsolete

GROTON (UPI) — Film star Esther Williams swam in it and thousands of submariners trained there over a half-century, but the U.S. Navy will replace a 135-foot-tall water tower that has become an area landmark.

The Navy broke ground this week for construction of a $2.6 million training center, which will render the deteriorating but possibly historic tower obsolete.

Some historic groups want the tower preserved, but a Navy spokesman said Tuesday the structure visible from the Connecticut Turnpike is scheduled to be demolished in April 1987 when the new building is completed.

Sailors will then enter a swimming pool outfitted with special chambers and taped noises simulating the escape route in submarines. Instead of braving the dangers of the old tower for a fast and frightening ascent to the surface.

From 1930 to 1982, tens of thousands of students at the Naval Submarine Base learned how to escape from their boats in the tower.

They entered near the bottom of its 112-foot column of water without the aid of air tanks and learned a lesson about physics not likely to be forgotten, said Chief Warrant Officer William P. Kenney. "I'm going to be sad to see it go," said Kenney, who is director of the escape training program. As the sailors rose to the top, water pressure around them decreased and caused gases in the lungs to expand.

To survive without injury or death, the swimmers had to exhale constantly, using a "ho-ho-ho" technique to rid the lungs of gases. It was dangerous, just as a real-life submarine escape would be, Kenney said.

In 32 years, there were about 50 injuries caused by embolisms — the obstruction of blood vessels due to air bubbles that form in the body during the expansion of the gases, he said.

There also were "a couple of deaths," Kenney added, although he did not know the exact number. About 5,000 to 6,000 students each year completed training in the tower, which was featured in a 1958 television documentary about the submarine school.

Esther Williams, a former Olympic athlete and film actress, hosted the "Omnibus" program, which was presented by journalist Alistair Cook.

The highest point on the North American continent is Mount McKinley in Alaska. The lowest is Death Valley, Calif.

5th Choate pupil fined

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — A fifth former student of the Choate Rosemary Hall prep school has been placed on probation for one year and fined for his contribution to a 1984 cocaine-buying trip by schoolmates to South America.

Robert B. Levine, 19, of Palm Beach, Fla., was one of 14 former students of the prestigious private school in Wallingford to plead guilty to a misdemeanor charge of aiding and abetting in the possession of cocaine.

Levine admitted giving $200 to two schoolmates with the intention of receiving five grams of cocaine when they returned from a three-day trip to Caracas, Venezuela, in April 1984. The two were arrested when they arrived at Kennedy Airport in New York.

U.S. District Judge T.F. Gilroy Daily on Tuesday fined Levine $1,000 and ordered him to perform 300 hours of community service. If Levine successfully completes his one-year probation, his record will be cleared.

Levine currently is a student at Columbia University.

Progressive Pumpkin Party

Keep the thrills and chills of Halloween, complete with costumes, games and special party foods for your goblin' goblins, but make the holiday a safe one. A Progressive Pumpkin Party gives the youngsters a double treat and divides the party preparation between two families. Grown ups can escort the kids-in-costume parade from the early evening supper party to the final stop for games and Halloween desserts — and join in the fun. Each of the Halloween treats pictured is prepared with canned pumpkin. Smooth and natural, with no artificial ingredients, solid pack pumpkin adds a bonus of nutrients to delectable party recipes.

PUMPKIN FACE SLOPPY JOES

1 pound ground beef	2 tablespoons firmly packed brown sugar
1/2 cup chopped onion	2 tablespoons prepared mustard
1 clove garlic, minced	2 teaspoons chili powder
1 cup solid pack pumpkin	1 teaspoon salt
1 can (8 oz.) tomato sauce	8 hamburger buns, split

American cheese slices

In large saucepan or skillet, brown meat; drain. Add onion and garlic; cook until tender. Stir in pumpkin, tomato sauce, sugar, mustard, chili powder and salt. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat, simmer 10 minutes. For each sandwich, cover bottom half of bun with meat mixture. Top with cheese cut-outs to make pumpkin face. Broil until cheese begins to melt. Top with top half of bun. Yields 8 servings.

PUMPKIN PARTY PUNCH

46 ounces apple juice or cider	1 quart vanilla ice cream
1 can (30 oz.) pumpkin pie mix	1 quart lemon lime soda, chilled

Combine apple juice and pumpkin pie mix; mix well. Chill. Just before serving, combine pumpkin mixture and ice cream in punch bowl; stir until smooth. Gently stir in soda. Yields 4-1/4 quarts.

PEANUTTY PUMPKIN SPREAD

1/2 cup solid pack pumpkin	2 tablespoons chopped peanuts
1/2 cup peanut butter	Celery stick brushes
2 tablespoons honey	Carrot sticks
1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon	Apple slices

Combine pumpkin, peanut butter, honey and cinnamon; mix well. Chill. Before serving, top with nuts. Serve with vegetable and fruit dippers. Yields 1 cup.

PARTY PUMPKIN POPCORN

2 cups firmly packed brown sugar	1 teaspoon baking soda
1 cup solid pack pumpkin	1/4 teaspoon cream of tartar
1/2 cup butter or margarine	2 cups dry roasted peanuts
1/2 cup light corn syrup	4 quarts popped popcorn
1 teaspoon salt

Preheat oven to 250°F. Combine sugar, pumpkin, butter and corn syrup in medium saucepan; bring to boil, stirring constantly. Continue boiling 15 minutes over medium-low heat, stirring frequently. Remove from heat; add salt, soda and cream of tartar, stirring until well-blended and foamy. Stir in peanuts. Pour over popcorn; toss until well-coated. Spread on two greased cookie sheets. Bake 50 to 60 minutes or until golden brown, stirring every 15 minutes. Remove immediately from cookie sheets. Spread on foil, breaking popcorn into pieces. Cool. Coating will harden on cooling. Yields 3 quarts.

JACK O' LANTERN CAKE

Cake:	1/2 cup shortening	2 teaspoons ground cinnamon
1-1/4 cups sugar	1 teaspoon ground nutmeg
2 eggs	1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
2-1/4 cups flour	1 cup solid pack pumpkin
2 teaspoons baking powder	1/2 cup milk
1 teaspoon salt	1 ice cream cone
1/2 teaspoon baking soda

Preheat oven to 350°F. Beat shortening and sugar until fluffy; blend in eggs. Sift together flour, baking powder, salt, baking soda and spices. Add dry ingredients alternately with combined pumpkin and milk, mixing well after each addition. Spoon into two greased and floured 6-cup fluted tube pans. Bake 30 to 35 minutes or until cake tests done. Cool 10 minutes; remove from pans. Cool completely on wire racks. Trim, if desired. Invert one cake on serving plate; frost with orange frosting. Place second cake bottom end down, on top; frost. Make pumpkin face decoration on cake with green frosting. Top with ice cream cone for stem.

Frosting:

9 tablespoons butter or margarine, softened	6-3/4 cups sifted powdered sugar
1-1/2 tablespoons vanilla extract	1/2 cup orange juice
1-1/2 teaspoons grated orange peel	Red, yellow and green food coloring
Dash of salt

Cream butter; blend in vanilla, orange peel and salt. Add sugar alternately with juice, beating until fluffy. To 1/2 cup frosting, add green food coloring to desired shade of green. To remaining frosting, add red and yellow food coloring to desired shade of orange.

Variation: Prepare cake as directed except spoon into two greased and floured 9-inch layer pans. Bake 30 minutes or until cake tests done. Fill and frost with orange frosting. Decorate with green frosting.

GREAT PUMPKIN COOKIES

2 cups flour	1 cup granulated sugar
1 cup quick or old fashioned oats, uncooked	1 egg, slightly beaten
1 teaspoon baking soda	1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon	1 cup semi-sweet real chocolate morsels
1/2 teaspoon salt	Assorted icings or peanut butter
1 cup butter or margarine, softened	Assorted candies, raisins or nuts
1 cup firmly packed brown sugar

Preheat oven to 350°F. Combine flour, oats, baking soda, cinnamon and salt; set aside. Cream butter; gradually add sugars, beating until light and fluffy. Add egg and vanilla; mix. Alternate additions of dry ingredients and pumpkin, mixing well after each addition. Stir in morsels. For each cookie, drop 1-1/4 cup dough onto lightly greased cookie sheet; spread into pumpkin shape, using a thin metal spatula. Add a bit more dough to form stem. Bake 20 to 25 minutes. Remove from cookie sheets; cool on racks. Decorate; using icing, peanut butter assorted candies, raisins and nuts. Yields 19 to 20 large cookies.

Busy cook swears by her 'be prepared' motto

By Nancy Pappas Herald Reporter

When you mention cooking to Tracy Parkinson, her eyes light up. "I have a lot to say on that topic," she said last weekend. "I guess you could say I'm a crusader."

Parkinson's crusade is on behalf of hearty, relatively exotic foods — and the way a working mother can fit the preparation of those dishes into an extremely exacting schedule.

Dinner at the Parkinson home on Fairview Street generally consists of a meat or fish dish, a cooked vegetable, tossed salad and homemade bread or muffins. A home-made dessert is frequently offered, as well.

SINCE THERE ARE never any large chunks of time for putting together the daily meals, Parkinson has learned to "divide and conquer." She plans meals at least a week at a time, and divides the tasks which will be necessary to get those dinners onto the table.

When she is preparing a night's supper, for example, she will try to get ahead on preparing the appetizer, cutting up the fruit, grating the cheeses or performing other tasks pertinent to dinners coming later in the week.

stews, lasagna, and breads may be turned out if there are a few hours of free time in Parkinson's Sunday afternoon schedule.

Parkinson saves time by getting things planned and processed as soon as she gets home from the supermarket. As she is unwrapping her packages, she will throw chicken and inexpensive cuts of beef into a marinade, prepared simply from a standard Italian oil-and-vinegar dressing, seasoned with whatever herbs strike her fancy.

IN A DAY or two, the chicken is ready to be cooked; after four days of marinating and turning, the beef is tender and well-flavored.

Her family is adventurous and enthusiastic in their eating habits. At eight, Tim is delighted to sit down to a whole plate of raw cherrystone clams, said his mother. For a special treat, the family may visit an all-you-can-eat seafood buffet. FOR THIS, Parkinson says she is grateful. But most of the original enthusiasm for fine food came from her husband, K.C. When they were first married, he was a sales representative for fine china and silver, and was servicing accounts at expensive restaurants.

Cory Parkinson, 4, reaches for one of her mom's blueberry muffins. Tracy Parkinson of Fairview Street prepares meals in advance whenever possible.

"He'd come home having spent the afternoons with go-and-so from Pier One (a famous seafood restaurant in Boston), and I'd be serving hot dogs and beans," Parkinson said. "You can see how well that was going over. I learned to cook pretty fast."

Here are a few of the recipes she recommends. She learned to prepare the blueberry muffins when she lived on a farm in Maine. The squash casserole may be assembled ahead of time; the fish creole is made quickly in the microwave oven.

Blueberry muffins: 2 cups flour, 1 tablespoon baking powder, One-third cup sugar, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 1 egg, beaten, 1/4 cup milk, 1/4 cup melted shortening, 1 cup blueberries.

Fish creole: 1 chopped onion, 1 chopped green pepper, 1/2 cup garlic salt, 1/4 cup margarine, 1 16-ounce can tomatoes, 1 tablespoon minced parsley.

3 chicken bouillon cubes, 2 cups sugar, 1 can (15 ounces) pumpkin, 2 cups all-purpose flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon soda, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons jack-o-lantern, 1/4 teaspoon cloves, 1/4 teaspoon ginger, 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg, Blend eggs, oil, sugar and Saute onion, pepper and garlic in margarine in a 2-quart casserole in the microwave oven. Add 2 minutes add undrained tomatoes and parsley, bouillon cubes and Worcestershire sauce. Cook 5 minutes. Blend cornstarch and water, stir into tomato mixture. Cook 2 minutes, or until thickened. Cut fish into 1-inch pieces and add to tomato mixture. Cook 3 or 4 minutes, stirring once. Serve over cooked rice.

Squash casserole: 2 or 3 yellow summer squash, or zucchini, 2 or 4 fresh tomatoes, Scant 1/4 cup chopped onion, 1/4 to 1 green bell pepper, to taste, 2 tablespoons margarine, 1 pinch salt, Salt and pepper to taste, Sprinkle of Parmesan cheese, 4 eggs.

Beat egg, add to milk and shortening. Pour this into dry ingredients. Fold in berries. Divide among greased muffin cups. Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven 20 to 25 minutes. Makes a dozen.

Israeli liqueur helps season dishes

By Tom Hope The Associated Press

Back in the 14th century, they were called elixirs and they were distilled by monks in their laboratories. Today, offshoots of these primitive medicines are known as cordials and are usually served after dinner.

Many of these cordials still bear the names of the monasteries that first made them, such as Chartreuse and Benedictine. They are being mainly sweet, cordials were usually used in recipes for dessert. Orange-flavored liqueurs proved good as a marinade for fruit, alone or included in a tart or pie.

Chocolate and coffee-flavored cordials were spooned over ice cream, while almond-flavored liqueur was used in pound cake. Soon cordials were acquiring a more important role in the kitchen, as an aid in the making of crepes, suzette and souffles. Orange-flavored liqueurs usually dominated these sauces.

In recent years, chefs in various lands have branched out and are using cordials in seasoning soups, vegetables and even pastas. Israel is one of the leaders in this field, with its Sabra liqueur, a blend of Jaffa oranges and chocolate. The Israelis offer Sabra as an ingredient in every course of the meal, from appetizer to dessert.

Chicken Supreme: 1 broiler, cut into quarters, 1/4 cup Sabra liqueur, 1/2 cup ketchup.

I cannot imagine missing something as important as National Supermarket Child Safety Month, but it happened in September, and I didn't learn about it until the middle of October.

Actually, this past September was the first Supermarket Child Safety Month, and it was sponsored by a new organization, The National Supermarket Child Safety Committee. But even though the organization is relatively unknown, and the month has passed, the work of the committee is definitely worth thinking about.

How many toddlers are injured in supermarkets? When I recently wrote a series of columns on the supermarkets that had pioneered the concept of "Nanny Aisles," several of the letters I received from readers spoke of toddlers falling out of shopping carts while reaching for candy. I wondered about the number of toddlers injured in shopping cart accidents and made a note to investigate it.

I didn't have to wait long to find the information. I spoke to Barney Paul Giampavolo, "Our belts are the finest quality nylon and the mechanical parts meet military specifications."

Concerned readers can help the committee reduce infant shopping cart accidents by clipping out this column and giving it to a supermarket manager. If you believe it's important, please let him know.

U.S./World In Brief

Senate will be heard but not seen

WASHINGTON — The public will be able to tune in to Senate proceedings on radio, but not see them on closed-circuit television, pending adoption of committee recommendations on media coverage.

Arafat: harsh words for Reagan

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat warned President Reagan the Middle East could be another Vietnam for the United States if Reagan continues "interfering in the Arab-Israeli conflict."

Dual hijacking probes under way

ROME — Italy's highest appeals court ruled today the investigation into the Achille Lauro hijacking will be handled by Genoa prosecutors but it also upheld a Sicilian arrest warrant for Palestinian leader Mohammed Abbas.

Sakharov's wife can travel

BONN, West Germany — The Soviet ambassador to West Germany said today he believes the wife of Soviet dissident Andrei D. Sakharov has official permission to travel to the West for medical care.

Convict dies of heart attack

THOMASTON, Maine — Philip Adams, convicted earlier this year of bludgeoning a 25-year-old cocktail waitress to death in Fort Fairfield in 1965, has died of a heart attack at the Maine State Prison.

Art theft experts expect ransom

NEW YORK — Nine famous art works stolen from Paris' Marmottan Museum are more likely to be ransomed than fenced into the art underground, but experts say it may be months or years before ransom demands are even made.

Humphrey still remains landlocked

RIO VISTA, Calif. — Humphrey the landlocked whale has been going nowhere for the past two days, like the experts trying to solve the problem of how to get the 45-ton leviathan to return to the Pacific Ocean.

Marion Burgess is assisted back to her restaurant in the Bucktown area to survey damage from flood waters which spilled into the New Orleans area after four days of torrential rains caused by Hurricane Juan. Burgess said it was the first time she's been flooded in the 15 years she has been here.

Hurricane leaves six dead in La.

By Guy Coates
The Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Sandbags and pumps were precious commodities today as levees in New Orleans suburbs and smaller south Louisiana communities strained to resist while waters left behind by Hurricane Juan.

Fast-moving Juan leaves offshore workers stranded

Commercial helicopter companies planned to resume an airlift of hundreds of workers back to offshore rigs and platforms evacuated in the Gulf of Mexico during the weekend.

Deficit at new record

By Martin Crutinger
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The government's main gauge of future economic activity rose a barely perceptible 0.1 percent in September as the country's trade deficit soared to a record, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the trade deficit, the difference between imports and exports, surged to an all-time high of $15.5 billion in September, 57 percent higher than the August deficit of $9.9 billion.

The big jump came from a 21.8 percent surge in imports, which put them at a record high of $33.3 billion. Exports posted a much lower 1.8 percent increase, putting them at $17.7 billion, still below the level of last March.

The big jump in the trade deficit combined with the weak performance of the Index of Leading Indicators was certain to fuel pessimism about the economic future.

Some economists had been expressing moderate optimism based on a belief that the worst of the country's trading woes might be over with the decline in this year in the value of the dollar.

The huge trade deficit has been the principal factor holding back economic growth this year. The United States has lost 346,000 manufacturing jobs since January as American producers have seen markets evaporate under the onslaught of foreign competition.

When the August trade deficit dipped to its lowest level this year, some analysts had said that the fall of the dollar, which began in March, was finally beginning to have an impact.

However, other analysts disputed this contention, maintaining that it will take until the first part of 1986 for the positive effects of a falling dollar to be felt.

A strong dollar makes imports cheaper and more attractive to Americans while making it harder to sell U.S. goods overseas.

The slight 0.1 percent rise in the leading index was sharply lower than the revised 0.9 percent August gain and the 0.7 percent July increase.

The sluggish change in the index, which is designed to forecast the future course of the economy, was in line with the modest expectations of many private economists.

The Reagan administration, however, contends that the sharp rebound in activity which took place from July through September will continue into next year.

The gross national product, the broadest measure of economic health, rose at a 2.3 percent annual rate in the third quarter, up sharply from the 1.1 percent pace in the first six months of the year.

While the Reagan administration has said growth in the current quarter will be even better, many private economists expect the GNP to slump as consumer demand moderates under the weight of heavy debt loads.

Sewer suit is seen as a real threat

By Chris Rose
Scripps League Newspapers

WASHINGTON — If Manchester, Conn., fails to comply with federal water-quality mandates for the Hockanum River by July 1, 1988, the government might take the town to court, according to an Environmental Protection Agency official.

"We've got to move toward making municipalities comply with regulations just like industries have been forced to comply," Michael Quigley, deputy director of municipal pollution control, told the Herald's Washington correspondent.

The EPA is pressing 160 lawsuits for noncompliance with Clean Water Act mandates. Sixty are against municipalities.

Manchester voters will be asked in Tuesday's election to approve an appropriation of $2 million for improvements to the sewage treatment plant, with no more than $14.3 million to come from a bond issue that will be paid off by sewer charges.

Town Director Stephen Cassano, who has been following the course of the sewer grant program closely, said today he is sure that Quigley's view of the situation is right. Cassano said that the EPA has given Manchester eight years of extensions and that if the EPA does not take enforcement action, it will be undermining its own regulations.

In recent years, congressional extensions on clean-water deadlines have given municipalities additional time to come up to code. The 1977 deadline for most municipalities was first extended to 1981, and then to 1988.

Those extensions specify the deadlines by which construction plans must be completed, with or without federal grant money.

With both the administration and Congress calling for a phase-out of construction grants, however, extensions are becoming less attractive, according to Quigley.

In June the Senate approved legislation to phase out the program by 1994. The bill authorizes $18 billion for grants and loans for construction of sewage treatment plants.

The Senate proposal authorizes grants totaling $9.6 billion for 1986 to 1990, and grants to states to establish revolving loans to help finance local sewage works. The state grants for loans would amount to $8.4 billion from 1989 to 1994.

The House-passed bill authorizes $12 billion for fiscal years 1986 to 1990 in federal grants for construction of local sewage treatment works, and $9 billion in grants to states from 1986 to 1994 to establish revolving loan funds.

A conference committee has been appointed to work out a compromise. House and Senate conferees say the compromise will be out by the end of this calendar year.

"But it isn't at all clear whether the president will accept the bill," said Quigley, explaining that the administration wants to authorize only $6 billion for a four-year construction grant phase-out.

Many in Congress claim the abrupt end to the program violates an agreement they thought they had with the administration in 1981 to phase out construction grants with $23 billion over 10 years.

Construction grant amounts received by each state annually are set by Congress. The House bill leaves unchanged the amount of the grant program in current law, which favors Frost Belt states. The Senate adopted a new formula that favors Sun Belt states to reflect the shift of U.S. population to the Southwest.

Connecticut, like all other states, determines which of its waterways must comply with primary, secondary and advanced federal EPA water quality standards. It then uses a point system approved by EPA to assess which waterways are most in need of federal assistance, and allocates grants accordingly.

George Kandra, the town director of public works, said Quigley's statement came as no surprise. He said the town received notice in August that it must complete the sewer plant improvements by Dec. 31, 1988.

Town General Manager Robert Weiss said he has felt all along that the federal action against the town "is a real threat," and he hopes the voters see it that way Tuesday. Town officials have been saying for some time that the town to get substantial federal funds for the work.

Craxi ready to start again

ROME (UPI) — President Francesco Cossiga today rejected Prime Minister Bettino Craxi's Oct. 17 resignation and ordered his five-party coalition to go before Parliament for a confidence vote.

Cossiga ordered the 51-year-old Socialist leader to waste no time in trying to resurrect his coalition government, which collapsed over Craxi's handling of the Achille Lauro hijacking.

Craxi met with Cossiga for only 30 minutes before the president issued his directive, aimed at resolving the 2-week-old crisis as soon as possible.

Craxi was virtually assured of surviving the confidence vote as a result of prior negotiations with the leaders of the five parties in the coalition that fell apart two weeks ago.

All five parties — Christian Democrats, Socialists, Republicans — agree on the need to get the government operating quickly so that a tough package of budgetary and anti-inflation measures can make it through Parliament before a Dec. 31 deadline.

"I am happy that this solution has been reached," Craxi told reporters shortly after the meeting.

"I always thought this crisis might be able to be resolved quickly since I always felt the motives that caused it were insufficient to provoke a rupture among the parties of the governing coalition."

Craxi said he did not plan any changes in his Cabinet before the confidence vote.

Cossiga originally accepted "with reservations" the resignation of Craxi's government but asked the prime minister to stay on in a caretaker capacity and to try to reconstruct a new government from the same five parties.

Today's decision to formally reject the Oct. 17 resignation, essentially a time-saving measure, removes the need to form a new government and allows the old government to stay in power provided it can demonstrate its ability to command a majority in parliament through a confidence vote.

Even by Italy's convoluted political standards, the decision was unusual. The maneuver has been employed only four times since World War II and has succeeded three times, Italian historians said.

The step had been expected since Craxi reached agreement with his squabbling coalition partners Wednesday and announced, "The crisis has been overcome."

The wide-ranging agreement — reaffirming government policy on terrorism, the Middle East and shared decision-making — smoothed over the major points of contention among coalition members, especially with Defense Minister Giovanni Spadolini who caused the government crisis.

Nurses said to back Crestfield strikers

By John F. Kirch
Herald Reporter

Nurses who work at the Crestfield-Fenwood nursing home have signed a petition asking the home's owners to negotiate a contract with employees who went on strike Oct. 21, officials of the union that represents the striking workers said Wednesday.

A nurse who asked not to be identified confirmed Wednesday that a petition had been signed in support of the 40 striking workers, who walked off their jobs after owners of the 155-bed facility on Vernon Street refused to negotiate a contract with the union that represents them. She said the nurses would make an official announcement of their support at a news conference outside the home later today.

About four nurses are currently honoring the picket line, Wilcox said.

"They're the nurses really want us back," said Mary Vallee, a nurse's aide who was picketing outside the Vernon Street home Wednesday.

Vallee and others said nurses inside the home were working double shifts to keep up with the work.

"Things aren't good inside right now," Fortier said.

Gary Spierer, the home's administrator, disagreed. "Administrative personnel have pitched in to do what they don't normally do," he said. He said conditions were pretty much the same at Crestfield-Fenwood as they had been before the strike.

Workers voted 46-40 last December to have District 1199 represent them in contract negotiations, but the home's owners challenged certification of the union. The owners said District 1199 had improperly severed its ties with another union, leaving workers confused as to what union they were voting for.

The Hartford office of the National Labor Relations Board ruled against the owners, who then appealed the decision to the full

Crispino's store sold to United Developers

By John Kirch
Herald Reporter

The building on Hartford Road that has housed Crispino's Supreme Foods for 23 years has been sold to a West Hartford development firm, grocery owner Sam Crispino said today.

Adjacent property was also sold, Crispino said.

Crispino would not disclose the price paid by United Developers Inc. for the property, but said it was "substantially higher" than the $1.2 million figure cited by other sources on Wednesday. The deal was closed today, he said.

Property included in the sale includes the grocery store at 485 Hartford Road, a building at 485

Hartford Road that houses La Strada West Pizza & Giant Grinders, a branch of the Savings Bank of Manchester, The Whole Donut and an unidentified laundromat, and a single-family house at 178 Lyness St. that is currently occupied, Crispino said.

Crispino said he thought United Developers planned to develop the buildings as a small shopping center.

Crispino said he did not sell the supermarket business — just the buildings and property. But he said "substantially higher" than the $1.2 million figure cited by other sources on Wednesday. The deal was closed today, he said.

The sale is set up so that I could liquidate the business and not be hurt financially," he said. "I really don't know what I'm going to do now."

Gloria action on hold

HARTFORD — The General Assembly's Energy and Public Utilities Committee decided today not to consider any legislation in connection with Hurricane Gloria until it meets with officials from the state Office of Civil Preparedness.

The civil preparedness people didn't show up for our hearings," Sen. Carl Zinsser, R-Manchester, co-chairman of the committee, said today. "It was very interesting. We wanted to hear from them. They had information we needed."

Zinsser's committee held hearings in Hartford and New Haven two weeks ago to review allegations that Northeast Utilities and other state utilities were ill-prepared for Hurricane Gloria and did a poor job of restoring power to state residents in the wake of the Sept. 27 storm.

Attendance at the hearings was poor, with only six residents testifying at the Hartford hearings and none testifying in New Haven. Zinsser said following today's meeting that the committee will try to meet with civil preparedness officials Nov. 12.
