Reagan rejects hostages' plea to negotiate

By Peter Smerdon
United Press International

BEIRUT, Lebanon - Four of six kidnapped Americans in Lebanon appealed to President Reagan in a handwritten letter Tuesday to negotiate with their captors for their release. But Reagan immediately rejected the plea.

"We do not negotiate with terrorists," White House spokesman Larry Speakes said in an announcing Reagan's response. "The president's policy has not and will not change."

"We remind the kidnappers that we hold them firmly responsible for their well being and call on them to release the hostages forthwith," Speakes said.

The appeal was contained in a package of handwritten letters tossed from a speeding car outside the west Beirut offices of the Associated Press, one day after a telephone caller said the Americans had been executed.

The four hostages said their physical and mental health was deteriorating and that they had been told one of the other two missing Americans, U.S. Embassy official William Buckley, was dead.

Four letters, dated Friday, were signed by AP correspondent Terry Anderson, Roman Catholic priest Martin Jenco, American University Hospital administrator David Jacobson, and AU dean Thomas Suberland.

State Department spokesman Bernard Kalb said the AP "believes the letters are genuine. We have not seen them and cannot verify either that they are genuine or when they were written."

The package included a note to the AP about the letters' distribution, another to all news media denying a series of claims Thursday by anonymous callers that the hostages had been killed, another to Reagan, and one to two congressmen.

"We are appealing to you for action," said the letter addressed to Reagan in Anderson's handwriting.

"We have read and heard over the past months of your refusal to negotiate with our captors and your rationale for it. We understand it but do not agree."

"You negotiated with the hostages from the TWA plane and such negotiations have been held repeatedly and successfully by other countries. You and they, did so because you believed that saving the lives of innocent hostages should be the primary goal."

"We are asking for the same consideration. There is no alternative."

"We remind the kidnappers that we hold them firmly responsible for their well being and call on them to release the hostages

Town in line for $256,000 in state cash

By Kevin Flood
Herald Reporter

Manchester could receive at least $256,000 from a new state fund to give Connecticut's towns about $20 million for road, bridge and other public works projects, town Budget Officer Robert Huestis said Friday.

Gov. William A. O'Neill announced last month that the state plans to give Connecticut's towns about $20 million for road, bridge and other public works projects, with officials in each town generally free to decide which projects they want to fund.

To get its share of the money, Huestis said Friday, Manchester must use its own money to match 10 percent of the state grant.

The state determines what percentage of the grants a town must match based on its wealth, Huestis said. The richest fourth of the towns must pay 20 percent, he said, and the second richest must pay 15 percent. The third and fourth must pay 10 percent, and the poorest fourth must pay 5 percent.

Huestis said Manchester just missed falling into the 15 percent group. "The cutoff was the 85th (wealthiest town) and we were 91st," he said.

Manchester officials will not decide what to do with the state money until February, when they begin drawing up the town's capital budget, Huestis said.

He added, however, that the money will probably be spent on one or two major projects, instead of a number of smaller ones. "I can't see it being used on 11 or 12 little programs," he said.

There are some restrictions on how the money can be used, Huestis said. It cannot be used for capital improvements, school building or recreational projects, he said. In addition, it cannot be used to supplement other state and federal grants. And the money cannot be used to match other grants.

"That means, for instance, that it could not be put toward the waste water treatment plant," Huestis said. Voters last week agreed to spend up to $14.2 million in town funds to improve and expand the waste water treatment on Olcott Street. The project is expected to cost a total of $26 million, but local officials expect federal and state grants to make up the difference.

If the town chooses not to use the state money this year, Huestis said, it could still use it in a following year. "You could theoretically put it off for a decade and put it all into a $2 million project if you have the willpower," he said.

The $20 million the state plans to give to municipalities is tied into a $214 million fund of surplus money, Huestis said. The fund is made up of $214 million in student loans, mortgages and similar social programs. The $20 million is expected to represent the interest on those loans.

Subpoena orders sailor to testify; Soviets warn U.S.

working. We know of your distaste for bargaining with terrorists. "Do you know the consequences your continued refusal will have for us? Try in your power to have some for Christmas. Will you not have mercy on our families and do so?"

The letter ended with the words, "May God be with you."

In the bundle, there also were letters from each of the hostages to their families and a confidential letter to the archbishop of Canterbury, who has offered to mediate in a bid to secure their release.

Affidavits say McDonald collected $2,200 in bribes

Former Waterbury prosecutor Arthur M. McDonald, 66, is taken from the Waterbury Superior Court Friday to begin two years in jail after being sentenced for accepting bribes to fix cases. Stories below and on page 5.

McDonald begins term in Danbury - page 5

Mary Rimkus of Naugatuck, for example, testified that she paid McDonald $200 and $250 to fix a reckless driving charge against her son, Cavanaugh said. Her son lost his license and the charge was reduced. She later complained that McDonald had done enough, Cavanaugh said.

The witness revealed that McDonald operated through several bars in Waterbury and Naugatuck and typically collected $100 or $200 to fix a case. Most witnesses said they made their first contact with McDonald through Leigh Waters Sr. of Thomaston, who with his wife operated the Bounce Inn in Naugatuck.

Waters, who said he knew McDonald for 35 years, was charged with six counts of perjury for allegedly lying to the grand jury. He initially denied any knowledge of the bribes. But under a grant of immunity, Waters revealed that he had paid McDonald to fix cases for himself, his son, his wife and his daughter before her death in a traffic accident.

Waters testified that he paid McDonald $400 to fix a variety of charges against his son, Leigh Waters Jr., between December 1982 and January 1983. The charges included breach of peace, larceny and interfering with a police officer.

John P. Reid, a convicted bank robber, testified that Waters introduced him to McDonald in January 1981 and that he paid either $100 or $200 to fix a case. Most witnesses said they made their first contact with McDonald through Leigh Waters Sr. of Thomaston, who with his wife operated the Bounce Inn in Naugatuck.

Recalling the big blackout, utilities make no promises

NEW YORK (UPI) - On the eve of the 20th anniversary of the Great Northeast Blackout of 1965, utility officials admitted Friday they can "never say never" that a similar outage will never occur.

Consolidated Edison officials said improvements in technology and better cooperation between utility companies have been the major changes since the massive blackout on Nov. 9, 1965, when the lights went out for 30 million people in New York state, New England and parts of Canada.

"You can never say never, but we've improved things a lot and the chances of a blackout are much less than they were then," said Paul Richard, a utility spokesman.

Perhaps the first result of the ## House prices on rise here

WASHINGTON (AP) - More people are buying homes than they were a year ago in several cities in the Northeast, leading to big price increases in the last year, but California is still the most expensive place to buy them, it was reported Friday.

Seven of the 11 cities in the United States with 10 percent or higher jumps are in the Northeast, but California's big cities and their suburbs still have the highest median price, with half of the homes in the San Francisco area costing $140,000 or more.

The largest year-to-year increase was a 36.1 percent jump from $102,000 to $138,000 in the Boston metropolitan area.

The New York metropolitan area experienced a 29.3 percent increase, from $106,500 to $138,200 in the median price.

Half of all resale homes went for more than the median figure, half for less.

Other cities in the Northeast with double-digit increases in the last 12 months are Albany, N.Y.; Hartford, Conn.; Philadelphia; Providence, R.I.; and Syracuse, N.Y.

Elsewhere, weather will be fair in general.

PEOPLE

Kudos for Julio

Recording artist Julio Iglesias thanked America for honoring him with the 1,844th star on Hollywood's fabled Walk of Fame, recognition he said left him in awe as a young man. "What happened today in the Hollywood Boulevard, receiving the star, is a dream come true," Iglesias, 42, said Thursday. The Spanish-born crooner is the only recording star to ever receive the "Diamond Disc" award from the Guinness Book of World Records for worldwide sales of 965 gold and 250 platinum records. For one of his biggest hits in the United States, "To All the Girls I've Ever Loved," he teamed up with country star Willie Nelson.

Surgery for Sammy

Entertainer Sammy Davis Jr. will undergo reconstructive hip surgery Monday at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, says publicist Arnold Lipsman.

Davis, 59, was reported in excellent condition at the Los Angeles hospital, where he was taken after pain in his hip interrupted a Las Vegas engagement on Nov. 1. Dr. Eugene Harris, an orthopedic surgeon, will perform the surgery, Lipsman said. According to Dr. Harris, the recovery will take four to six weeks. The surgery often is performed on athletes and dancers, Lipsman said.

Home state ties

Gov. Bill Allain of Mississippi attended both Mississippi and Notre Dame but the chief executive says he'll be rooting for the home team when the two schools meet on the football field Saturday. "Being from Ole Miss and being governor of Mississippi, you have to pull for your state team," Allain said. "I like to see all Mississippi universities win." But Allain confessed to feeling a little tug at the heart whenever the team that once boasted the likes of Kneute Rockne, George Gipp and The Four Horsemen takes to the field. "You still have a little feeling for your team," he said. "Maybe you could pray for a tie."

Rest those fingers

Entertainer Liberace, who got a clean bill of health after tests for back pain this week, plans to take time off from his concert schedule to work on an autobiography, his manager said. "He's had back pains from time," Seymour Heller said Thursday. Liberace, 66, underwent the tests Tuesday. Heller said, and "every test turned out negative. He's in very good health."

What else but politics?

The never-else mayor of New York, Edward Koch, says he'll have his second book published in January. "It's about... (what else?) politics, the mayor said Friday, and its title is (appropriately) "Politics." He said the new book, which covers politics before and during his mayoralty, is "terrible" and funnier than his previous effort, a best-seller called "Mayor" that became an Off-Broadway play. The book, to be published by Simon & Schuster at $18.95 a copy, was written with the help of William Rauch, his press secretary, who also helped him write "Mayor."

Governor of Dallas

Look quick if you want to see Texas Gov. Mark White on the Nov. 15 episode of "Dallas." It lasts 20, 30, maybe 60 seconds, depending on how fast they decide to run it by," he said of his television debut. White is well cast — playing himself at a charity rodeo where he's introduced to the crowd. White wanted to work with Linda Gray, who plays Sue Ellen Ewing, but "they cast me with the rodeo announcer who was about 6-foot-4 and not nearly as pretty." White's scene was shot near Dallas last August. "It was at least 120 degrees," he said. "I got up and did a couple of takes, then they took me down and dried me off and I went back and did it again. Actually, I got it right the first time but some of the professionals wanted to do it again." White is paid for his performance and he plans to donate the $292.63 salary to the Southwest Alternate Media Project in Houston.

Chinese love English

HARTFORD (AP) — China wants to be the largest English-speaking country in the world — and Connecticut could lead from that country's widespread use of radio and television to teach the language, says the first state education official to visit China. Robert G. Hale, coordinator of the state Department of Education's learning resources and technology unit, said Thursday that English language lessons are broadcast on government radio and television day and night. The thing I was impressed with was that it was available for everybody," said Hale, who visited China for more than a week last month and returned home Oct. 31 after a brief stop in Japan.

Pillowtex strikers deny police reports of unruly rally

By John F. Kirch Herald Reporter

Striking workers picketing outside Pillowtex Corp. on Bagin Street Friday denied a police report that said they were unruly during a union rally Thursday evening.

Robert Madore, secretary-treasurer for Local 776 of the United Auto Workers, which is representing maintenance and production workers on strike since Aug. 26, said he felt the police report was slanted against him personally when it said he did not cooperate with police at the rally. Police reported that a union rally held outside the Regent Street plant ended with striking workers throwing eggs, soda cans, tar and wood at non-striking workers who were leaving work shortly after 5 p.m. Thursday. The report said that Madore became angry when firefighters were called to put out a fire the strikers had been allowed to start in an old garbage can. The firefighters were called because strikers were throwing firecrackers into the flames, police said. But Madore said he did not become angry at police. He said he told the striking workers not to put firecrackers into the barrel. "When they say I was angry, there was no time during the night when I was angry," Madore said. He said he cooperated with police during the rally and has a tape recording of all conversations with police to prove it if necessary. Madore said he has filed a complaint with the Manchester Police Department because he is being harassed.

Police said Friday that there was no one available to comment on the matter. About 174 members of various unions, including the New England Health Care Employees Union, District 1190, which represents striking workers at the Crossfield Fenwood nursing home, joined to support the UAW's cause during the rally.

Police said they allowed strikers to have one rotation around cars leaving the facility, but that workers began hitting, kicking and throwing objects at the cars. "It wasn't unruly," said Betty Mitchell. "It was exciting. I didn't see anything thrown myself."

Madore said the union does not condone throwing material at non-striking workers, but said he did not see anyone throw anything Thursday night. "I didn't see any of it, but I was in two different driveways," Madore said. "I will do everything in my power to stop violence on the picket line. But I can't control every individual." Madore said strikers have been peaceful "since day one," and he believes it will remain that way. "We saw stuff on the ground, but we didn't see anyone throw it," said Berthe Beer, a sewing machine operator. "But what's worse, throwing stuff or running us over (with cars)?"

The workers on the picket line have said that employees the company has hired to replace the strikers have tried to run strikers over with their cars as they drive in and out of work. Beer, Mitchell and striker Wendy Bluis said non-striking workers use obscene gestures and say dirty language at them. Madore said that 90 percent of the workers on the picket line are women who are being verbally "abused" by non-striking workers. He said strikers have rights as workers on the picket line. "They're not just going to sit there and take it," Madore said. Workers on the picket line said they are becoming frustrated over stalled contract negotiations and hope a compromise is reached soon. But they added that they would stick it out for as long as it takes. "We will win this," Bluis said. Management and union officials have met at the bargaining table four times since the strike began. Madore said that at each meeting the union has made proposals without any "give" from management. Negotiations ended Monday without any progress, both union and management officials said early this week. The talks were based on a seniority system and the management's rights issue.

Eighth proceeds with firehouse

By Alex Girelli
Herald Reporter

In the wake of a decision Tuesday by voters of the town fire district, it appears the Buckland area will have two firehouses within a stone's throw of each other.

Neither the Democratic majority on the newly elected town Board of Directors nor the Republican minority has developed a plan that would keep the Eighth Utilities District from constructing its own firehouse on Tolland Turnpike, two lots away from the firehouse that voters of the town fire district said should not be sold.

But in interviews Thursday and Friday, individual directors expressed a variety of opinions on the subject of fire service to Buckland, a rapidly developing area in northwestern Manchester.

Republican Director Donna R.

Mercier said Thursday she will suggest in the Republican caucus that the town consider offering again to fight fires in the Buckland area under a contract arrangement. As an alternative, Mercier said, she will suggest that the town share its firehouse with the Eighth District, an independent entity that provides fire protection and sewer service to much of northern Manchester.

That position puts Mercier and Director Stephen T. Penny, the Democratic majority leader in the same camp.

"To my knowledge those two offers are still on the table," Penny said Thursday.

But Republican Director William J. Diana, the minority leader on the board, called sharing "unrealistic" and said both fire departments have a lot of pride.

Asked about construction by the Eighth District of its own firehouse, Diana said: "I don't see how we can stop them."

Directors of the Eighth District have set a timetable for firehouse construction that calls for inviting bids by Jan. 1 and breaking ground around April 1.

The town firehouse lies in Eighth District territory and was constructed during the 1970s, as the town and the district battled in court over who had the right to protect the Buckland area.

The district won the court battle. But town officials maintain that the town firehouse still protects areas of northern Manchester outside the Eighth District.

Mercier said she will also suggest the reactivation of a liaison committee between the district and the town. She said the committee probably should include the chiefs of both fire departments as well as directors of the town and the district. Democratic Director James F. Fogarty said: "I hope something can be worked out, anything rather than have a big squabble."

Asked about construction by the town and the district, Democratic Director Kenneth N. Tedford,

2nd hearing on new plan set at Illing

A public hearing concerning the town's new proposed Comprehensive Plan Development will be held at 7 p.m. Wednesday at the Illing Junior High School cafeteria, 229 E. Middle Turnpike, planning officials announced this week.

It will be the second hearing to be held before the Planning and Zoning Commission, which released the plan Sept. 18 after four years of work by planning officials and the public. If adopted by the PZC, the plan would be used as a policy guide for land-use decisions over the next 10 years.

The proposed plan has drawn sharp criticism from residents opposed to the housing density proposals made for certain areas of town. One group, the Southwest Manchester Property Owners' Association, has protested the high-density housing proposals made for southwest Manchester, which is now zoned for lower densities.

Critics have said that town residents did not have enough influence in developing the plan while it was being written. Planning officials have said that residents can voice their opinion during the public hearings. The officials have said revisions will be made in the plan after residents' suggestions are heard.

More hearings will be held in various parts of town, depending on the turnout at Wednesday's meeting, planning officials have said.

About 400 people attended the first public hearing on the plan Oct. 16.

The tricycle will provide a form of recreation for Jennifer, who has cerebral palsy and has been a student in Manchester schools since kindergarten, said Barone. Jennifer is the daughter of Edward and Claire Trengrove of Gardner Street.

Two strikers face charges

Two striking workers at the Pillowtex Corp. on Regent Street face first-degree criminal trespass charges in connection with an Oct. 16 incident in which they allegedly ignored a security guard's order to stay off Pillowtex property, police said Friday.

Christopher Kilpatrick, 22, of 30 Hemlock St., was arrested Thursday in connection with the incident. Kenneth Allard, 23, of 39 Ensign St., was charged shortly following the incident.

Police said a Pinkerton guard hired by Pillowtex told Kilpatrick, Allard and an unidentified third man that at about 11:15 p.m. Oct. 16 to stay off company property. But the three began calling the guard a scab and an obscenity after they overheard him tell a fellow guard he "hoped the strikers didn't come on the Pillowtex property because he didn't want to knock them out," a police report said.

The three then walked onto the property, police said, and the unidentified man called the guard a "nigger." Police said they arrived on the scene to find the three men walking toward the guards and the guards backing away from them.

Kilpatrick was released on a written promise to appear in court following his arrest.

A Wells Fargo armored car driver was arrested Wednesday in connection with an incident last month in which he allegedly carried a handgun into the McDonald's restaurant on Tolland Turnpike, police said Friday.

The driver, Kevin J. Ahern, 28, of Springfield, Mass., was charged with breach of peace and carrying a revolver without a permit.

Ex-prosecutor begins jail term

By Chris Dohi
The Associated Press

WATERBURY — Former Waterbury Assistant State's Attorney Arthur M. McDonald was taken to Danbury federal prison Friday to begin serving a two-year sentence for accepting bribes to fix cases.

McDonald, 46, also was sentenced to two years probation and fined $8,000 by Superior Court Judge Flemming Norcott Jr. as part of a plea-bargain arrangement.

McDonald last month agreed to plead guilty to six counts of bribery and to one count of conspiracy to bribe. He had been charged with accepting bribes to fix cases.

"It wasn't the easiest job to do, but it had to be done and I did it," Kely said outside Waterbury Superior Court.

McDonald resigned from the Connecticut Bar Association Friday morning before his court appearance. He was under investigation when retired from state service effective Feb. 1.

Chief States Attorney John J. Kelly said McDonald was taken to the federal prison in Danbury rather than a state prison "to avoid any hostility or harassment" from inmates who he may have prosecuted.

McDonald's case was a key issue earlier this year in the dispute between state police and former Chief State's Attorney Austin J. McGuigan. Kelly replaced McGuigan as chief state's attorney this summer and personally handled McDonald's prosecution.

"We are, all of us, morally ambiguous," McGuigan said.

McDonald, dressed in a gray suit, looked down solemnly with his hands clasped in front of him throughout McGuigan's speech. Then stood slowly when Norcott asked if he had anything to say. "I am sincerely sorry. I've been a shame to my family, my professional associates and friends," McDonald said, his voice breaking. "I wish I was more eloquent... all I can say is my sorrow is sincere."

Before sentencing McDonald, Norcott said public officials "are necessarily held to a higher code of conduct."

McDonald's case became an issue between state police and McGuigan, after state police charged that McGuigan blocked their investigation of the prosecutor. State police said McGuigan feared embarrassing the chief state's office.

McGuigan denied the charge, noting he called a grand jury on Dec. 20 to investigate McDonald. It was the grand jury investigation that resulted in the charges being filed against McDonald.

Connecticut In Brief

Minister jailed on morals charges
NEW HAVEN — A minister and former social leader was sentenced Friday to four years in prison for morals charges involving young boys.

The Rev. D. Dirk Davenport, a Madison minister and former Little League umpire, pleaded guilty in October to two separate acts of sexual abuse charges.

Superior Court Judge Frank J. Kinney Jr. sentenced Davenport to 10 years in prison, suspended after four years and five years probation on each of two counts of risk of injury to a minor.

He was also sentenced to one year in prison for a charge fourth-degree sexual assault.

All the sentences were to run concurrently, with total sentence on all counts 10 years suspended after four years plus five years' probation.

Judge orders benefits reinstated
NEW HAVEN — A federal judge has ordered the former owners of Century Brass Inc. of Waterbury to provide medical and insurance benefits which the company cut off to retirees last summer.

U.S. District Court Judge Jose A. Cabranes said his ruling Thursday was necessary "to keep them from suffering irreparable harm."

While a crowd of more than 40 retired employees of Scovill Inc. looked on, Cabranes upheld the claims of union attorneys that Scovill had promised its retirees the insurance coverage as a lifetime benefit.

The order will restore benefits to employees who retired before Century bought the brass mills from Scovill in 1976 and assumed responsibility for the benefits.

Lieberman eyes hospital merger
HARTFORD — The state attorney general's office Friday raised legal questions about the planned merger of two hospitals in northwestern Connecticut.

Attorney General Joseph I. Lieberman said he wants to know if the plan by Charlotte Hungerford Hospital and Winsted Memorial Hospital meets legal requirements concerning the application of assets held for charitable purposes.

Lieberman sent hand-delivered letters to the two hospitals asking them to delay "any further measures to implement the planned formation of a holding company" for the health-care facilities.

"I hope you agree with me about the need to thoroughly evaluate whether the terms of the proposed plan are consistent with the conditions under which (each of the hospitals) holds its assets," he said in the letters.

Turnpike traffic surprises Burns
HARTFORD — State Transportation Commissioner J. William Burns says there's been a dramatic increase in traffic on the Connecticut Turnpike in the month since the tolls were closed.

"The trucks, of course, are much more visible and when they do get into accidents, they're much more dramatic and they do cause severe injuries and longer and more extensive traffic tie-ups," he said.

"We expected some increase over a period of time — a 10 percent to 15 percent increase," Burns said. "But in fact, almost immediately, we've had increases in traffic at various points from 10 percent to over 20 percent."

In an interview with the Connecticut Radio Network to be broadcast this weekend, Burns said he attributed most of the increase to people who had previously avoided the turnpike because of the 25-cent tolls.

Escapee gets seven more years
VERNON — A man who escaped from Somers Correctional Institution in June and was captured several weeks later was sentenced in Vernon Superior Court to seven more years in prison.

James Latham was being held in Somers on bonds of more than $75,000 on charges that included kidnapping, robbery, burglary and larceny.

Officials said they believe Latham escaped from Somers by sawing off the bars of his cell. He was charged with first-degree escape and sentenced Wednesday.

Latham was captured July 1 in Stonington. Police found about $100,000 worth of silverware and jewelry in that area that they believe Latham stole while he was a fugitive.

Last year, Latham escaped from the state prison in Bridgeport. He was captured and sent to Somers because that prison had better security.

Executive faces cocaine charges
HARTFORD — A top official of Iroquois Brands Ltd. has been arrested at a Hartford hotel and charged with cocaine possession, police said.

Terence J. Fox, 47, and a female companion were arrested late Wednesday at the Summit Hotel while his limousine waited outside, police said. Authorities were notified by a hotel security guard.

Police said Fox identified himself as being in marketing at Iroquois Brands. A company official said Fox is chairman and chief executive officer, but would not comment further.

Neither Fox nor Brian Dobson, the company's vice president for corporate communications, returned numerous telephone calls to their offices Friday afternoon.

More phone credit abuse found
HARTFORD — The state auditors said Friday that their investigators had found a series of apparent abuses of a state-issued telephone credit card held by William McDonald, director of public safety at Central Connecticut State University in New Britain.

In a letter to the governor, Auditors Leo V. Donohue and Henry J. Becker Jr. said some of the calls charged to the card were made from a pay phone in Washington, Conn. McDonald's hometown, to the state's off-track betting race-results number.

At least 155 calls were placed to McDonald's home, to his relatives "and to other apparent non-business numbers," Becker and Donohue said.

Other calls were charged to the card when McDonald was on vacation and still others were made from New York and New Jersey to his Washington home when, according to his attendance record, he was on sick leave, the auditors said.

New England governors ask further study of waste sites

By Richard March
United Press International

NASHUA, N.H. — New England governors, concerned over the federal government's proposed siting of a nuclear waste dump in the region, Friday called for more time and independent study of the issue.

Submitted by Vermont Gov. Madeleine Kunin, the resolution approved by the New England Governors' Conference urges Congress to hire independent scientists to study potential sites. The resolution also asks the U.S. Department of Energy to extend the review period to one year.

"Clearly, this is a hot issue," said Kunin. She said one of the criteria federal officials were reviewing in the siting of high-level nuclear waste dump was low population density, which could create a bias toward rural areas.

"It's not just a perception. It's part of the legislation," Kunin said. "That's one of the criteria — the density of population."

The dump would be the nation's second permanent repository for spent fuel from nuclear power plants and also serve as a storage area for other high-level radioactive wastes.

Kunin said an initial federal review of 236 crystalline rock formations in the Northeast for the deep underground dump will be narrowed next month to 15 or 20 potential sites, which will face more intensive screening.

Kunin, a Democrat, said the independent scientific review should be conducted during the intensive screening.

New Hampshire Gov. John Sununu, however, played down the prospects of the dump being sited in New England, despite predictions this week by his own task force that New Hampshire would be included in the intensive screening process.

Sununu, a Republican, said the dump probably will be sited in a deep salt dome in a Western state.

"I think the most vulnerable area is the area that will come under the technical and economic and scientific criteria as being the most likely choice," Sununu said. "I think if you apply that criteria right, it will end up being a salt dome selection."

"Very frankly, I think that's not a New England site. It is a Western site. I think that's the right place for it to be. Since it is the right place, it's the most vulnerable region in the country," Sununu said.

Asked about Sununu's assessment of the issue, Kunin said she understood that federal officials were reviewing an Eastern site and a Western site for separate dumps.

"He (Sununu) assumes it's going to be located in a salt dome," Kunin said. "I'm just not that confident. Let's hope he's right."

At a meeting of Northeastern governors in August, Kunin withdrew a proposed resolution calling for regional opposition to the dump project. Sununu reportedly had pressured her to drop the issue but Kunin denied that.

She also said her resolution submitted Friday did not reflect a compromise. Kunin said the approved resolution contains enough measures to provide adequate protection for the region.

Judge orders 4th Gold trial

By Mark A. Dupuis
United Press International

WATERBURY — A judge Friday ordered a fourth trial for Murray R. Gold, ruling the former New York stockbroker is now competent to assist in defending himself in the oldest murder case in the state's court docket.

Superior Court Judge Charles D. Gill ordered the state's case against Gold readied for trial in the courtroom where Gold has gone to court three times in the slayings of his former wife's parents.

The judge set bond at $250,000 for Gold, a former stockbroker from New York who is charged with murder in the Sept. 26, 1974, slayings of Irving and Rhoda Pasternak of Waterbury.

Gold, 51, was ruled mentally incompetent in the middle of his third trial when he demanded the reversal of his conviction. John R. Williams of New Haven, and represent himself.

Gill ruled Gold is competent to stand trial after receiving a report from the Whiting Forensic Institute, a state mental hospital in Middletown where Gold had been held after a mistrial was declared in his third trial.

Gold, dressed in a dark business suit, said nothing during Friday's court proceedings where Williams asked to be excused as defense attorney. Gill told the lawyer to submit a written motion for his consideration.

Court officials said the case will be listed first on the list of cases awaiting trial in Waterbury Superior Court, but said they could not predict when the fourth trial will begin.

"All I can say is we're going to get ready for a fourth trial," said Assistant State's Attorney Walter Scanlon, who argued for the $250,000 bond set by Gill.

Transplant patient dies in Hartford

HARTFORD (UPI) — A New York college student who underwent two life-saving liver transplants while battling a rare form of viral hepatitis died early Friday at Hartford Hospital.

Christel von Gizycki, 18, of Brooklyn, N.Y., died of an infection at 12:30 a.m. with her mother, Beth Sida, at her side, said hospital spokesman Jim Battaglio. Battaglio said the young woman, comatose since the first liver transplant on Oct. 14, died of a bacterial infection. He said the second liver implanted on Oct. 19 was still functioning. "It was the infection that overcame her," he said.

Von Gizycki suffered from a rare, fatal viral hepatitis doctors said she contracted while on a vacation last summer in South America.

The Hunter College freshman had returned from a vacation in Ecuador when she became ill in August. She entered Mt. Sinai Hospital in New York in September and doctors determined she had contracted a rare and extremely virulent strain of hepatitis.

Von Gizycki was transferred to Hartford Hospital Oct. 7 because the hospital had performed a number of successful liver transplants.

At the outset, the young woman was given only a 10 percent chance of survival because of her ravaged liver and weakened kidneys.

The young woman had suffered kidney failure during the transplant and had been in shock 24 hours before the operation.

After a nationwide appeal, doctors finally located a liver in Texas and the transplant was performed by a 16-member medical team just in time. At the time, doctors said von Gizycki she had about 12 hours in life left when the 18-hour transplant operation began.

But the first liver turned out to be too large and it was replaced when the second liver became available.

Student fees up at UConn

STORRS (UPI) — The University of Connecticut Board of Trustees Friday approved six separate increases in student fees, including a $70 increase in annual dining hall costs.

The board also by a 12-1 vote agreed to sell the Branford House on the 72-acre UConn Southern campus at Avery Point Groton for development as a hotel and conference center.

The historic Connecticut granite structure was acquired by UConn in 1967 and will be developed as a conference center with a 110-room guest facility on 12 acres of shorefront property.

The Legislature this year approved a bill permitting the sale.

The sale price for the buildings, furniture and fixtures is $125,000 with UConn retaining the right to repurchase as well as to benefit from annual rental payments and proceeds of any sale or refinancing.

Several Groton area residents spoke against the sale Friday, while a representative of the developers spoke in favor of the plan.

Joseph Crisco Jr. of Woodbridge voted against the sale.

The fee increases will take effect with the summer session and fall term 1986.

Executive faces cocaine charges

HARTFORD — A top official of Iroquois Brands Ltd. has been arrested at a Hartford hotel and charged with cocaine possession, police said.

Terence J. Fox, 47, and a female companion were arrested late Wednesday at the Summit Hotel while his limousine waited outside, police said. Authorities were notified by a hotel security guard.

Police said Fox identified himself as being in marketing at Iroquois Brands. A company official said Fox is chairman and chief executive officer, but would not comment further.

Neither Fox nor Brian Dobson, the company's vice president for corporate communications, returned numerous telephone calls to their offices Friday afternoon.

More phone credit abuse found

HARTFORD — The state auditors said Friday that their investigators had found a series of apparent abuses of a state-issued telephone credit card held by William McDonald, director of public safety at Central Connecticut State University in New Britain.

In a letter to the governor, Auditors Leo V. Donohue and Henry J. Becker Jr. said some of the calls charged to the card were made from a pay phone in Washington, Conn. McDonald's hometown, to the state's off-track betting race-results number.

At least 155 calls were placed to McDonald's home, to his relatives "and to other apparent non-business numbers," Becker and Donohue said.

Other calls were charged to the card when McDonald was on vacation and still others were made from New York and New Jersey to his Washington home when, according to his attendance record, he was on sick leave, the auditors said.

Minister jailed on morals charges
NEW HAVEN — A minister and former social leader was sentenced Friday to four years in prison for morals charges involving young boys.

The Rev. D. Dirk Davenport, a Madison minister and former Little League umpire, pleaded guilty in October to two separate acts of sexual abuse charges.

Superior Court Judge Frank J. Kinney Jr. sentenced Davenport to 10 years in prison, suspended after four years and five years probation on each of two counts of risk of injury to a minor.

He was also sentenced to one year in prison for a charge fourth-degree sexual assault.

All the sentences were to run concurrently, with total sentence on all counts 10 years suspended after four years plus five years' probation.

Judge orders benefits reinstated
NEW HAVEN — A federal judge has ordered the former owners of Century Brass Inc. of Waterbury to provide medical and insurance benefits which the company cut off to retirees last summer.

U.S. District Court Judge Jose A. Cabranes said his ruling Thursday was necessary "to keep them from suffering irreparable harm."

While a crowd of more than 40 retired employees of Scovill Inc. looked on, Cabranes upheld the claims of union attorneys that Scovill had promised its retirees the insurance coverage as a lifetime benefit.

The order will restore benefits to employees who retired before Century bought the brass mills from Scovill in 1976 and assumed responsibility for the benefits.

Lieberman eyes hospital merger
HARTFORD — The state attorney general's office Friday raised legal questions about the planned merger of two hospitals in northwestern Connecticut.

Attorney General Joseph I. Lieberman said he wants to know if the plan by Charlotte Hungerford Hospital and Winsted Memorial Hospital meets legal requirements concerning the application of assets held for charitable purposes.

Lieberman sent hand-delivered letters to the two hospitals asking them to delay "any further measures to implement the planned formation of a holding company" for the health-care facilities.

"I hope you agree with me about the need to thoroughly evaluate whether the terms of the proposed plan are consistent with the conditions under which (each of the hospitals) holds its assets," he said in the letters.

Turnpike traffic surprises Burns
HARTFORD — State Transportation Commissioner J. William Burns says there's been a dramatic increase in traffic on the Connecticut Turnpike in the month since the tolls were closed.

"The trucks, of course, are much more visible and when they do get into accidents, they're much more dramatic and they do cause severe injuries and longer and more extensive traffic tie-ups," he said.

"We expected some increase over a period of time — a 10 percent to 15 percent increase," Burns said. "But in fact, almost immediately, we've had increases in traffic at various points from 10 percent to over 20 percent."

In an interview with the Connecticut Radio Network to be broadcast this weekend, Burns said he attributed most of the increase to people who had previously avoided the turnpike because of the 25-cent tolls.

Escapee gets seven more years
VERNON — A man who escaped from Somers Correctional Institution in June and was captured several weeks later was sentenced in Vernon Superior Court to seven more years in prison.

James Latham was being held in Somers on bonds of more than $75,000 on charges that included kidnapping, robbery, burglary and larceny.

Officials said they believe Latham escaped from Somers by sawing off the bars of his cell. He was charged with first-degree escape and sentenced Wednesday.

Latham was captured July 1 in Stonington. Police found about $100,000 worth of silverware and jewelry in that area that they believe Latham stole while he was a fugitive.

Last year, Latham escaped from the state prison in Bridgeport. He was captured and sent to Somers because that prison had better security.

Guru released on bail after plea

PORTLAND, Ore. — Indian guru Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh pleaded innocent Friday to immigration-fraud charges and was released on $500,000 bail after 12 days and a cross-country trip in federal custody.

Rajneesh smiled and waved to disciples shouting "Bhagwan!" as he stepped into a Rolls-Royce limousine owned by his sect and headed for the Hotel Rajneesh in downtown Portland.

Rajneesh's spokeswoman Ma Dhyon Rosalie said the guru would travel to the sect's central Oregon commune-city, Rajneeshpuram.

His release was delayed by about an hour because of a bomb threat telephone to the Multnomah County Justice Center just after a judge set bail for Rajneesh, authorities said.

Rajneesh and seven disciples are accused of covering up sham marriages between some American followers and foreigners who came with the guru to the United States. He also is charged with lying to immigration officials to conceal his intent to remain permanently in the United States after he arrived in this country in 1981.

Alabama inmates take hostages

HIGHLAND LAKE, Ala. — Two inmates broke away from an unsupervised work crew Friday and took a former mayor and a city clerk hostage at knifepoint, fleeing a two-county manhunt in the clerk's car.

State troopers and sheriff's deputies from Blount and St. Clair counties swept a wide area about 35 miles northeast of Birmingham at dusk after the prisoners escaped about 3:30 p.m.

"As I understand it, they've got a helicopter out there and numerous cars," Blount County Chief Deputy Larry Staton said. "We don't have a direction. The immediate area we are searching right now."

Corrections department spokeswoman Debbie Herbert identified the inmates as Timothy Mark Townsend, 25, and Newburn Ray Wilson, 37. She said both men were serving burglary sentences at the St. Clair Correctional Facility.

Businessman details mob offer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — San Diego businessman Allen Glick testified Friday that reputed mobsters offered to let him buy out their "partnership" in Argent Corp. casinos purchased with loans from a Teamsters union pension fund.

Glick, a key government witness, testified for a third day in the trial of eight reputed organized crime figures accused of skimming more than $2 million from Las Vegas casinos in the early and mid-1970s.

On trial are Frank Ballistreri, 67, and his sons, John, 37, and Joseph P., 45, all of Milwaukee; John Aluppa, 77, John Cerone, 71, Joseph Lombardo, 66, and Angelo LaPietra, 60, all of Chicago; and Milton Rockman, 73, of Cleveland.

Prosecutors claim the defendants used their influence in the Teamsters union to get a $62.75 million loan approved by the union's Central States Pension Fund for Glick, who with the money bought casinos under the Argent Corp., which he formed in April 1974.

Judge frees 'Hurricane' Carter

NEWARK, N.J. — Rubin "Hurricane" Carter was released from prison Friday by a federal judge who rejected prosecutors' claims that the former middleweight boxing contender remains a "violent, dangerous man" after nearly 20 years behind bars for a 1968 triple murder.

The 46-year-old Carter became a free man shortly after 3 p.m., when U.S. District Judge H. Lee Sarokin granted a writ of habeas corpus, based on his ruling the day before that Carter's 1977 conviction was based on racism and concealed evidence.

Carter was brought to the federal courthouse in custody a day after Sarokin issued a surprising 70-page opinion that in effect overturned the ex-boxer's conviction for the 1966 murder of a Paterson bartender and two tavern customers.

S. Africa arrests defiant editor

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — A white newspaper editor who defied government press restrictions by printing an interview with black leader Oliver Tambo was arrested Friday and charged with violating South Africa's security laws.

Two security policemen arrested Cape Times editor Tony Heard at the newspaper offices in Cape Town and took him to the city courthouse, where he was charged under the Internal Security Act with quoting a banned person.

Heard, who could be sentenced to up to three years in prison if convicted, was freed on his own recognizance and ordered to appear for a hearing on Dec. 9.

Magistrate Johan Tolken told Heard he was charged for publishing an interview with black nationalist leader Tambo in the Cape Times last Monday and said additional charges could be filed against him.

Marcos calls an early election

MANILA, Philippines — President Ferdinand E. Marcos announced Friday he will resign, but his resignation will not take effect until after a Jan. 17 presidential election that Marcos indicated he expects to win.

His governing party agreed to hold the election in an attempt to blunt American and local criticism of his 20-year rule.

The decision to hold an early election followed visits by U.S. officials, including Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., a personal emissary of President Reagan, who expressed concern over growth of a communist insurgency.

Marcos announced he will submit his resignation Monday to the National Assembly, but it will not take effect until after the inauguration of the winner of the early election.

Comet brighter than expected

PASADENA, Calif. — Halley's comet, visible through telescopes since 1982 on its return orbit toward the sun, can now be seen with binoculars and is brighter than expected, say astronomers who liken it to a "gray cottonball in the sky."

Untrained observers will find it easiest to find the comet late next week by looking near a group of faint stars named the Pleiades, about 45 degrees above the eastern horizon.

Dozens of binocular observations have been reported worldwide since mid-October, when Halley's "appeared to undergo a sudden brightening," said John Borille, a Scarborough, N.Y., firefighter and Sky & Telescope magazine's comet columnist.

"There's so far no explanation for why the sudden brightening occurred," he said, "and now it is three times brighter than predicted." But Halley's comet is quite famous for its erratic brightness changes.

Iran claims attacks on Iraq

Iran said Friday its warplanes bombed a steel plant and military installations inside Iraq and suspected Iranian gunboats forced a crippled supertanker to an Iranian island in the Persian Gulf.

An Iraqi military spokesman denied the Iranian claims, saying four Iranian planes tried to "penetrate Iraqi airspace in the northern and southern sectors" of the war zone, "but were chased away by our ground defenses."

Neither version could be independently confirmed. Both Iran and Iraq have in the past exaggerated their claims since the war broke out in 1980 over longstanding territorial disputes.

Tehran radio said Iranian warplanes bombed an Iraqi steel plant south of the Iraqi border town of Amara and military installations east of Erbil.

Drug dealers linked to rebels

By Patricia Walsh
United Press International

BOGOTA, Colombia — Drug dealers angered by an extradition treaty with the United States may have bankrolled leftist rebels who seized the Supreme Court in a siege that left at least 70 people dead, officials said Friday.

As speculation mounted about links between the M-19 guerrillas and narcotics traffickers, about 30,000 Colombian court workers began an indefinite strike and threatened a mass resignation to protest the government's decision to mount an assault on the court building Thursday to end the 27-hour standoff.

Supreme Court President Alfonso Reyes, who had pleaded with authorities to negotiate with the rebels, and eight other justices were killed in the siege, officials said at least 70 people died, and news reports said the death toll could reach 100.

Radio Caracol, citing police officials, said 87 bodies had been recovered, but National Police commander Victor Delgado said no official count had been determined.

In a radio interview, Justice Minister Enrique Parejo said the takeover "was a patent sign of an alliance" between rebels and drug traffickers who were seeking the voiding of an extradition treaty between Colombia and the United States.

The Supreme Court was reviewing the constitutionality of the treaty, under which Colombia has extradited six suspected drug dealers to the United States and the United States has extradited two U.S. citizens to Colombia this year.

The Supreme Court judges had been threatened by drug traffickers regarding the extradition treaty, Parejo said. "It could be a coincidence, but I don't think so. I think it's possible drug traffickers financed the guerrillas."

About 30 rebels shot their way into the court building Wednesday afternoon and held dozens of people hostage while they clashed with security forces in fierce gun battles. Troops recaptured the four-story building Thursday afternoon in an assault that left all the rebels dead, including their leader, Andres Balmora.

The striking court workers demanded an explanation of President Belsario Betancur's decision to order the assault instead of negotiating with the guerrillas. In telephone interviews during the siege, Reyes had pleaded for a cease-fire.

"Please tell them (the authorities) to stop firing," Reyes said. "They say they will kill all of us if there is no cease-fire to allow a dialogue."

Floodwaters recede in Mid-Atlantic

By United Press International

Residents in four Mid-Atlantic states and the nation's capital Friday cleaned up the wreckage from raging floods that killed 41 people, left thousands homeless and cut water supplies.

The Northwest and northern Plains braced for a frigid mass of Canadian air expected to send temperatures plummeting 20 to 30 degrees below normal and dump up to 4 inches of snow in some areas, the National Weather Service said.

Floodwaters from rain-swollen Appalachian rivers this week killed 41 people — 20 in West Virginia, 17 in Virginia, three in Pennsylvania and one in Maryland.

In West Virginia 39 people were still missing four days after floods surged through 33 of the state's 55 counties, officials said.

"We have hope that they are somewhere else and that we just haven't found them," state police Capt. D.C. Goldizen said.

President Reagan declared eight West Virginia counties a disaster area because of flooding. A boil water order remained in effect for more than 82,000 people in Allegheny and Washington counties. Company officials said they hoped to have the order, which includes Pittsburgh, lifted by Sunday.

"Initial reports indicated damage to 13 water treatment facilities, nine sewage treatment plants, 23 roads and several bridges as well as many commercial and industrial sites," Thornburgh said in a letter to Reagan.

More than 1,200 people have been treated for injuries and thousands sheltered in the flooded areas. At least 144 homes have been damaged or are uninhabitable, he said.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers said 17 runaway barges were stacked up against Maxwell lock and dam in Fayette County and had blocked the lock gates open, causing water levels to fall.

Water receded rapidly in the fashionable Georgetown district where merchants in pooh shops along the shoreline stacked sandbags to ward off the murky water.

"Only East Potomac Park where the Jefferson Memorial is located, will remain closed until some of the water drains," Fugh said.

CIA says ex-defector high in KGB

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The CIA, in its first statement on Soviet defector Vitaly Yurchenko, said Friday he was deputy chief of a KGB department responsible for spying on the United States and Canada, and his duties included mobilizing Soviet agents "after the beginning of war."

The CIA, criticized in Congress and elsewhere for allegedly bungling the Yurchenko defection, released a three-page detailed biography of the 49-year-old intelligence official, indicating he had been a prime catch despite his decision to return to the Soviet Union.

The statement offered no explanation of how he got away.

Yurchenko, in a dramatic televised news conference from the Soviet embassy compound Monday, claimed he had not defected but had been kidnapped by CIA agents in Rome, drugged, brought to the United States against his wishes and brutally treated until he "escaped" to the Soviet Embassy in Washington. He returned to Moscow Wednesday aboard a special Soviet airliner.

The State Department denied Yurchenko's charges as "completely false and without any foundation." But a Senate Intelligence Committee spokesman said Friday the administration plans a thorough internal review of the case, including a check on what knowledge of CIA methods and interest areas Yurchenko may have taken back to Moscow, which have taken reports that Yurchenko was a Moscow-manipulated "set up" defector to embarrass the United States on the eve of the U.S.-Soviet summit meeting between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, the CIA for the first time went into detail publicly to describe his background, presumably obtained from his interrogations.

The biography noted that Yurchenko had "seriously strained" relations with his wife, an engineer in Moscow. The CIA is reported to have allowed the Russian to travel to Canada for an abortive meeting with the wife of another Soviet diplomat with whom he is said to have been in love.

The CIA until now has never acknowledged holding Yurchenko. His defection Aug. 1 in Rome was announced by the State Department Oct. 11.

The profile released by the CIA late Friday portrayed Yurchenko as a highly trained agent, promoted from submarine service in the Red Navy to 16 years of KGB service, culminating with his promotion in April of this year to deputy chief of the First Department "for work against the United States and Canada."

No change in recount

Kocsis remains the victor

Louis Kocsis remained the victor over John Tucci for a post as Manchester constable after a Friday canvass of the vote which showed no change in their vote tallies. Both are Republicans.

The recount showed Kocsis with 5,006 votes to Tucci's 4,993. Election officials spent about four and half hours Friday afternoon opening the voting machines from the town's 12 polling places and rechecking the figures. The absentee ballots were also checked and the tallies corresponded to the original count of 134 for Kocsis and 142 for Tucci.

chief moderator, made a final verification of the addition and signed the certificate of canvass. The check of the machines began at 1 p.m. and took the whole afternoon, partly because in some polling places the sealed machines had been put in locked closets and election officials had to locate janitors with the keys.

After the recount, Town Clerk Edward Tomkiel, who has been in office for about 30 years, said no recount in Manchester has ever reversed the result of an election and he also said there is seldom an error in the vote totals read from machines. Normally, he said, the problem comes in the absentee ballot count.

election last year, a calculation error of 10 absentee ballot votes was found in the race between Republican Elsie Swenson and Democrat John Thompson for representative from the 12th Assembly District. He said the error was actually found before a recount was made. The recount showed no error in tallies taken from the machines. Swenson won by five votes, the recount showed.

In 1981 David Dampier, a Republican, defeated Barbara Higley, also a Republican, by two votes, according to the original tally. In a recount, Higley gained one vote, leaving Dampier a winner by a single vote. Dampier lost his bid for re-election this year.

Vincent Diana, left, of the Manchester Scholarship Foundation, accepts a donation of $10,000 to set up a scholarship in memory of Dominic Squatrito, an outstanding Manchester High School athlete of the class of 1932. The presentation was made by Squatrito's sister, Mrs. John Lloyd, center, and her husband, who was a classmate of Squatrito.

Gift starts scholarship in memory of Squatrito

A $10,000 donation has been made to establish a scholarship in memory of the late Dominic Squatrito, an outstanding athlete of the Manchester High School class of 1932 who was killed in an auto accident during his senior year.

The donation was presented to the Manchester Scholarship Foundation by Mr. and Mrs. John Lloyd at the recent 53rd reunion of the class.

The benefactors are Rose Marie Squatrito and Mrs. Lloyd, sisters of the late Dominic Squatrito, and John Lloyd, a member of the 1932 high school class. Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd came to Manchester from Miami, Fla., to attend the reunion and make the presentation. It was accepted for the scholarship in honor of attorney Vincent Diana.

Squatrito, whose name is enshrined in the Manchester Sports Hall of Fame, was an outstanding football and track star. He was regarded as Manchester's greatest athlete at the time. He was known to win as many as four events in a track meet. He also played first base on the high school baseball team. At the time of his death, he had been accepted to Fordham University.

While she lived in Manchester, Mrs. Lloyd, because of professional and civic achievements in Miami, Fla., has been listed in "Who's Who in American Women," "The Royal Blue Book" and with her husband in the "The Social Register."

Lloyd is a former assistant attorney general and assistant state attorney of Florida. Before his retirement, he was the city attorney and director of the Law Department of the city of Miami. Lloyd is listed in "Who's Who in American Lawyers" and "Who's Who in the World."

ordered on duty, along with firefighters. Nevertheless, more than 2,000 stores were looted with losses estimated near $1 billion. "It was nothing remotely resembling the 1965 blackout," Richardson said. "The later one originated in our system and stayed within the system."

"The '65 blackout originated in Canada and cascaded down the east coast."

Television still snubs the ladies

By Vernon Scott, United Press International

HOLLYWOOD — "Cagney & Lacey," "Kate & Allie" and "The Golden Girls" will be joined in prime-time TV by "All Is Forgiven" — making a grand total of only four women-dominated weekly series on the tube.

NBC's mid-season replacement "All Is Forgiven" stars Bess Armstrong, the fetching blonde who co-starred with Tom Selleck in "High Road To China." She plays the producer of a TV soap opera who deals mostly with five other women.

It is perhaps significant that only "Cagney & Lacey" is an hour-long drama. The others are sitcoms, but often with serious underlying themes. Does this year's Emmy triumph of "Cagney & Lacey" portend more female series?

Armstrong isn't sure, but she believes her show is a step in the right direction. She says "All Is Forgiven" deals realistically with six female characters, avoiding cliché relationships and individual stereotypes common in most sitcoms.

"Each woman is different from the other," she said during a rehearsal break at Paramount Studios. "I play Paula who is recently married and with a teenage stepdaughter she doesn't like. She is a career woman who doesn't have a handle on everything on the job or at home, but she's coping."

"There are a lot of women like Paula out there. She's the sort who will take a drink straight from the decenter. She also smokes. She's far from perfect. She's not a black-and-white character. She doesn't get through the day unscathed."

"We are making a series for adults that depicts women in a mature way through comedy. I think it helps that two of our writer-producers are women. They keep things in balance from a female perspective."

Armstrong enjoys both "Cagney & Lacey" and "Kate & Allie" and hopes the addition of "All Is Forgiven" is a harbinger of greater opportunities for women-oriented series in the face of proliferating macho shows such as "Miami Vice," "The A-Team" and male-dominated sitcoms.

"Tina Daly, a three-time Emmy winner for her role as Mary Beth Lacey in 'Cagney & Lacey,' welcomes the prospect of another female-oriented series but she isn't certain there is a trend toward female impact series."

"I'd like to think that's happening," she said, "but I'm not sure it really is. Women are fair game on TV. It's called the victimization of women. Four out of five opening shows this season were about teen prostitutes and most of them were murdered. There's a resurgence of the Mike Hammer, C-cup syndrome."

"I would like to believe progress is being made. But I feel Sharon (co-star Sharon Gless) and I are holding up the standard pretty much by ourselves. "Kate and Allie" is a sitcom. The networks won't hand over that very expensive hour in TV for women to carry. It's too much of a gamble for them."

"I'm delighted Bess will take on the responsibility of a regular show, which has more impact and influence than the TV movie or special which comes and goes quickly."

Daly doesn't see the number of woman-oriented drama series increasing until there are more women writers, directors and producers.

"There is great potential for the women's point of view throughout the structure of society," she said, "but it hasn't been realized on TV. Possibilities open and hopeful things happen and then disappear again."

"We haven't come a long way. We have to be diligent and watchful. We've all studied male bonding and the many variations on that theme for a long time."

"Those relationships are of interest to both sexes. I hope what we do on 'Cagney and Lacey' is interesting to men. There are categories of female partnerships to explore other than two women who work together and who aren't really best friends. Their friendship is secondary to their working partnership."

"We haven't talked about sisterhood, mothers-in-law, stepdaughters, mothers in general. Female bonding should be examined in fields other than the work place."

"Women take the most unglamorous jobs. It was hard to get us on TV at all. In the guise of being a cop show we've talked about who and what these two women are. Cops and robbers can be fun, but not as a steady diet."

Patrick Welch, 30, holds his year-and-a-half old daughter, Emma, as they bid goodbye to Welch's wife, Ellen Pope, on her way to work with a statewide environmental group in Concord, N.H.

Mr. Moms get high marks

Study shows men who stay home raise kids by instinct

By Ken Frackling, United Press International

CONCORD, N.H. — Patrick Welch was busy paying the bills one day when his toddler daughter, Emma, began coughing as she played at his feet.

The 39-year-old former woodsman saw she was turning red and having trouble breathing. He picked up Emma and patted her on the back a few times. It didn't help.

"So I picked her up by the ankles, hit her a few times on the back, and out came a penny. It could have been disastrous, but I didn't panic," Welch said. "I sensed what to do."

Welch is one of the growing breed of fathers — single or married — who are staying home to raise their children, either by choice or economic necessity. As the number of Mr. Moms grows, experts are finding that nurturing, traditionally a maternal role, is not a female prerogative.

FOR THE PAST five years, Dr. Kyle Pruett, associate clinical professor of psychiatry at the Yale Child Study Center in New Haven has studied 20 families in which the father was the primary care-giver.

He found that, when compared to standardized tests on problem solving and social skills, the children performed above the norm. Moreover, the fathers, within a matter of days or weeks, relied on their own intuition to look after their infants, rather than second-guessing. "What would my wife do now?"

The families in the New Haven study ranged from welfare recipients to professionals. In one-third of the families, the father did not have much of a choice. He lost his job and his wife didn't.

Pruett said, "There was no difference in performance by the kids of fathers who decided two years before conception that they were going to do it."

Welch and his wife, Ellen Pope, made their decision prior to Emma's birth on Jan. 30, 1984.

WELCH, a former heavy equipment operator for Great Northern Paper Co. in Millinocket, Maine, stayed home to take care of Emma, do the laundry, the cooking, the cleaning and the grocery shopping when Pope returned to her job with a statewide environmental group, the Society for the Protection of New Hampshire Forests.

In part, Welch figured the role reversal would give him more time to do creative things like read and play the piano.

"I certainly anticipated having more free time. I thought I'd handled the jobs better than I have, but in fact, it has been somewhat tedious, monotonous. I've found myself struggling with depression — not real bad depression, but I didn't think I would have as much trouble."

"It was sobering to find I didn't have as much appreciation for what housewives go through. Trying to be creative with food is more than a challenge. It is hard to be putting interesting stuff on the table night after night and not get into a real rut. I have a real respect for women," Welch said.

"THERE'S a network of women who get together, and there is no such network for househusbands. It can get kind of lonely." David Tankoski of New Haven, Conn., found just the opposite in his 16-month stint of caring for daughter Katie. Tankoski took on the Mr. Mom role when his wife, Liz, went back to work in June 1983, two months after their child was born.

Tankoski had burned out of his 18-year job at a residential treatment center for emotionally disturbed adolescents and wanted a breather.

"Before we had the child, I swore I'd never change a diaper in my life. But some things become second nature. Once I got used to the routine, it was easy," Tankoski said.

"Sometimes you play it by ear. One other woman brought me under her wing at Katie's swimming classes. We had lunch regularly with three other women. I was a father in a 'mother's group.'"

The fact that they took me in was interesting. That helped deal with the day-to-day frustrations and anxieties. Katie was never sick, rarely even had colds. With Liz's support and the support of friends, it worked out well," he said.

Now, Tankoski is back at work, this time as a sales consultant for a publishing house. His wife is home, taking care of Katie full-time, on a leave of absence from her job.

"We have a good relationship. Katie has had no bias. We are much closer than many fathers are close to their daughters. It's been very beautiful," Tankoski said. "When she gets older, I

News for Senior Citizens

Holiday fair topic of interest

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Senior Citizens' Center.

By Joe Diminico Program Director

This year the annual arts and crafts fair will prove to be more exciting than ever offering a wide selection of items to choose from. Christmas items, handicrafts, woodworking projects, clocks, dried flower arrangements, ceramics, books and baked goods are all items that will be on sale. Lunch will also be sold, with refreshments being available throughout the day. Raffles will also be held. The fair will be held from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The Visiting Nurses Association would like to remind the public of the educational meeting on Alzheimer's disease. Nov. 13 at 7 p.m. at Manchester Memorial Hospital in the mental health area. Nancy Gustafson, Alzheimer's program coordinator for the Hartford Visiting Nurses Association, will discuss management concerns and issues of the demented patient at home.

The arthritis support group will meet Friday at 12:30. The topic of discussion will be coping with arthritis, with Carol Pfeiffer, PhD.

We have had many requests to reorganize the women's support group since it was so successful last spring. The group will have its first meeting on Nov. 18 at 12:30. If interested, please leave your name and phone number in the office. Some of the topics to be discussed will include self image, perceptions, relationships, learning, etc. Your comments and suggestions are welcome.

At present we are out of energy kits and anticipate receiving more next week.

Seats are still available for the Christmas party at Chez Joseph on Dec. 13. The cost is $26. If interested, call Creative Tours at 243-2289.

Seniors will once again travel to the New Haven Coliseum to see Her Majesty's Royal Marines, the Army and the Sutherland Islanders. These royal regiments will present a spectacle of trumpeters, drums, pipes and drums and dancers. This trip will leave the center at 6 p.m. for a 7:30 p.m. performance on Dec. 5. The cost is $13. Registration will be held on Nov. 12 at 9:30 a.m.

Other activities are as follows: Nov. 11 - Closed for Veterans Day

Nov. 13-15 - Stevensville Country Club. Drivers are reminded to park at the far end of the parking lot.

Nov. 14 - Program on Medicare

Nov. 18 - Women's support group

Nov. 21 - Thanksgiving program featuring "The Guys and Dolls"

Nov. 25 and 26 - Driver's Education Class

Nov. 28 and 29 - Closed for Thanksgiving Holiday

On Thursday, Nov. 21, we will celebrate the 99th birthday of Peter Peppertis. Seniors are asked to bring birthday cards to present to him at the end of the program.

Menu for week: Monday: Holiday Tuesday: Macaroni and sauce, garlic bread, vegetable, beverage, dessert.

Wednesday: Beef stew, roll and butter, beverage, dessert. Thursday: Juice, meatloaf, mashed potatoes, gravy, green beans, beverage, dessert.

Advice

Sister's holiday letters use news that isn't fit to print

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have a problem with his sister that requires your immediate attention. For years now, "Sis" has been sending me Christmas letters to friends, relatives, old schoolmates, and people we rarely see and hardly know. It wouldn't be so bad if she would just write about her own husband and children, but she writes about the whole gang of us, including her in-laws, trips, what they've bought, where they plan to go, which boils down to bragging at its worst!

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

She tells what is going on with all the members of the entire family, which includes us. My husband (her brother) has been in and out of court for several years with business problems and lawsuits, and she tells about our "never-ending problems in court" in every newsletter. Nothing, including gossip and rumors, goes unmentioned. This includes separations, divorces, jilted lovers, you name it.

To make matters worse, her husband has bought her a word processor for Christmas, so her Christmas letters can be longer now! How can we stop her? Several other family members feel the same way, but are as helpless as we are.

Please get this in your column as soon as possible about my husband doing this family an enormous favor.

NERVOUS IN DELAWARE

Transplants end cataracts

DEAR DR. GOTT: There are excessive cataracts in both my eyes. A specialist has scraped the right cornea on three occasions in the past two years. What would cure or control this condition? I have been a diabetic for 31 years.

Dr. Gott

Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR READER: If scraping of the calcium hasn't helped, maybe corneal transplants would. Ask your ophthalmologist.

Calcium deposits in the lenses of the eyes (cataracts) are common in diabetics. If your eye doctor cannot help you, I am sure he or she will refer you to a medical center where eye specialists are performing remarkable operations to preserve and restore sight.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My son, 20, has had heavy nosebleeds with clots for five years. They have gotten worse and become more frequent, they occur almost every day now. The nose-and-throat specialist advised him to have a vein tied off. I am worried about him having this done, since they don't know the cause of the nosebleeds. At times he gets blackouts where everything turns black for a few minutes. He has asthma and was taking Marx for years. Now he only uses a Prevental inhaler.

DEAR READER: If your son has such severe nosebleeds and the doctor has agreed to operate on the bleeding artery, I think you should go ahead with the surgery. People will often develop bleeding areas in the nose - sort of like bleeding hemorrhoids - and surgery can be safe and curative. I believe that finding the cause is much less important in this instance than taking care of the problem.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Would you please tell me if I risk getting cancer? I have met a very nice man who has been married twice. Both wives have died of cancer, one with lung cancer. They were both heavy smokers. Could it be that this man carries a cancer germ that could be transmitted to a wife? We are both of middle-aged parents and neither smoke or drink.

DEAR READER: I am glad to be able to reassure you that your new friend is not hazardous to your health. Some forms of cancer are thought to be caused by viruses, but there is no evidence that malignancy can be transmitted from one healthy adult to another. I am sure that your gentleman's first two wives contributed to the development of their own illnesses by smoking cigarettes; apparently you don't fit that pattern. I hope you enjoy a long and happy life together.

They were both heavy smokers. Could it be that this man carries a cancer germ that could be transmitted to a wife? We are both of middle-aged parents and neither smoke or drink.

DEAR READER: I am glad to be able to reassure you that your new friend is not hazardous to your health. Some forms of cancer are thought to be caused by viruses, but there is no evidence that malignancy can be transmitted from one healthy adult to another. I am sure that your gentleman's first two wives contributed to the development of their own illnesses by smoking cigarettes; apparently you don't fit that pattern. I hope you enjoy a long and happy life together.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am sure he or she will refer you to a medical center where eye specialists are performing remarkable operations to preserve and restore sight.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My son, 20, has had heavy nosebleeds with clots for five years. They have gotten worse and become more frequent, they occur almost every day now. The nose-and-throat specialist advised him to have a vein tied off. I am worried about him having this done, since they don't know the cause of the nosebleeds. At times he gets blackouts where everything turns black for a few minutes. He has asthma and was taking Marx for years. Now he only uses a Prevental inhaler.

DEAR READER: If your son has such severe nosebleeds and the doctor has agreed to operate on the bleeding artery, I think you should go ahead with the surgery. People will often develop bleeding areas in the nose - sort of like bleeding hemorrhoids - and surgery can be safe and curative. I believe that finding the cause is much less important in this instance than taking care of the problem.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Would you please tell me if I risk getting cancer? I have met a very nice man who has been married twice. Both wives have died of cancer, one with lung cancer. They were both heavy smokers. Could it be that this man carries a cancer germ that could be transmitted to a wife? We are both of middle-aged parents and neither smoke or drink.

DEAR WONDERING: Knowing nothing about the circumstances, it's impossible for me to make a judgement. Encourage this wonderful man to tell you more about his reasons for distancing himself from his daughter. He may be justified, but if you plan to marry him, you should know the whole story.

DEAR ABBY: Every day I use public transportation to reach my place of employment. During these two-hour stretches, I read, relax and often daydream.

Recently my privacy was rudely interrupted by an annoying clicking before she starts a nuclear war. I was astonished to see a fellow commuter clipping his fingernails! (I decided to move rather than risk the sight of toenail trimming!) Once aboard the next car, I noticed a sickening sweet smell - nail polish!

Abby, what is going on? Have we moved our hygiene and grooming department into the rapid transit system?

Please print this. I can understand using one's commuting time productively, but let's draw the line at grooming, please!

C. A. R. G. COMMUTER AGAINST RAPID GROOMING, ONBOARD

DEAR CARGO: Nail clipping and polishing is mild compared with other reports I've had. Shaving with a battery operated shaver is common, and putting on full makeup is routine. One commuter in the woman quietly change her pantyhose without leaving her seat!

DEAR DR. GOTT: There are excessive cataracts in both my eyes. A specialist has scraped the right cornea on three occasions in the past two years. What would cure or control this condition? I have been a diabetic for 31 years.

DEAR READER: If scraping of the calcium hasn't helped, maybe corneal transplants would. Ask your ophthalmologist.

Calcium deposits in the lenses of the eyes (cataracts) are common in diabetics. If your eye doctor cannot help you, I am sure he or she will refer you to a medical center where eye specialists are performing remarkable operations to preserve and restore sight.

But lightning-bolt winger Eileen Felix, the biggest offensive threat in the equizer with just 38 seconds left before intermission. "That really hurt us," sighed Erardi.

It sure felt good for winning coach Jim Sweeney. "After we scored our first," he related, "Now it's a new ballgame."

The victors held a lopsided 20-6 shot advantage overall and had Manchester on the mesh for the entire second half. The end came at 14:16, when the uninhibited Kelley, boxers drooping below her uniform shorts, banded in her first of a pair of untouchable tallies.

All-American teammate Abbie Wallner cranked a pass from midfield that just cleared a group of bodies at the top of the penalty area. Kelley busted through the pack and ramrodded a 20-yard blast just under the crossbar.

"You could see why she was an All-American," said Erardi, who remains proud of his Indians. "They had a little more depth, and it seems like it was a blowout, but I feel better than that."

Kelley and Felix added insurance markers in the final six minutes to wrap it up. "When you're down, 2-1, with minutes to go, it doesn't make a difference how many times more they score," added Erardi.

Guilford's girls, brandishing streaks of green spray-painted in their hair, were anything but green in their own zone. Fullbacks Kathleen Deraney and Karen McGuire were most responsible for limiting Manchester to just two shots in the final 40 minutes. To make things even more discouraging, Wallner moved from midfielder to sweeper for the duration, after setting up the tie-breaker.

"We played each other the best of the game," said Erardi. "But we did have some nice chances in the first half."

Bruins' Butch Goring — was born to coach

By Lisa Harris
United Press International

When Butch Goring relived as a Boston player and accepted the Bruins' head coaching position in a simultaneous move last spring, he went from an old man to a neophyte.

Now, Goring's premier goal and teammate of last season, 31-year-old Charlie Simmer, sounds like a proud father.

"He's very poised for a 1-month-old coach," Simmer said of Goring after a recent victory for the Bruins, 9-1. "Butch is a tremendous coach who has us playing Bruins forechecking hockey and is making winners of us."

As short as his tenure's been, it is evident Goring was born to coach. That had long been credited by the New York Islanders, who in 1980 credited his acquisition from Los Angeles as the missing piece in forming a Stanley Cup contender. The Islanders went 8-0-4 after Goring arrived for the final 12 games of the 1980 season and went on to become a dynasty with Goring playing on all four Cup championship teams.

Goring was a player-assistant coach with the Islanders when they released him and Boston picked him up last Jan. 8. He took over the Bruins from Harry Sinden, who was filling in after the firing of Gerry Cheevers.

Even at this early stage, the Bruins, tied with Quebec for the Adams Division lead, are worthy of attention.

The Bruins were hit by injuries last year. Included in the 324 man-games lost were all but 22 games of Barry Pederson a season because of a malignant arm tumor, causing the Bruins to pick up Goring, defenseman Gord Kluzak, the No. 1 overall 1982 draft pick, was lost for the season because of knee surgery.

"They've been very important," Goring says of the return. "Barry's prowess was proven, but Gordie's been playing extremely well since coming back. He's really made us an offensive threat on the ice."

The Bruins already had that in All-Star Ray Bourque. But as a defenseman Bourque carried too much of the scoring burden last year, leading the team with 86 points, only 20 of which were goals.

Simmer, who missed 21 games, scored 34 goals last year, including one in his first five games with Los Angeles before being traded to Boston. An left wing on the Kings' vaunted Triple Crown team, Simmer twice scored 50 goals and had 44 in his last full season as a King.

"I am more comfortable with (Ken) Linseman and (Keith) Crowder than even with Dionne and Taylor out in Los Angeles," said Simmer. "They are both great players but I really think Marcel was too fast for me."

We're working hard together, playing very well as a unit," said Simmer. "The line's playing well, and the team's playing well and everything's going our way. Butch's brought a lot of organization, lot of harmony and a lot of unity. With Boston Bruins tradition and style of hockey, it's fit in well with his style and everybody enjoys playing for him."

Goring thinks his major impact has been on the team's conditioning.

"My contention after joining the Bruins was I thought the team wasn't in very good shape," he said. "I thought I automatically could improve the team if they were off-ice training. We implemented very rigorous training with ice riding, aerobic dancing, the Heiden board (to emulate skating motion) and weight lifting."

"I got all that for the Islanders. No one ever asked me to do anything of the ice when I was in L.A., so why would I do it? That was an Islanders influence and I agreed with it."

"It's not revolutionary any more, but the Boston Bruins were not even in a revolutionary trend. I guess they never had off-ice training, maybe because they were winning, and more power to them because they were winning without being in very good shape. They weren't winning Stanley Cups any more, but to a certain extent, they were very successful."

"But who's to say what they could have done all those years? I don't know, that's all hindsight. But their year last year was their year in a long, long time."

Big East big on television

NEW YORK — The Big East Basketball Conference will continue to be the nation's most televised basketball conference in 1985-86, according to Commissioner Dave Gavitt.

The conference will televise 69 of 72 regular season games. In addition, all seven games at the Big East post-season tournament will be televised live from Madison Square Garden on ESPN.

Huskies host Big East tourney

STORRS — The Big East Soccer Tournament will be held this weekend at the Connecticut Soccer Stadium in Storrs. The first round matchups have 11-2 Pittsburgh against 10-4 Syracuse at 10 a.m. and the host 16-2 Huskies versus 11-4 St. John's at 1 p.m. Saturday.

The championship game will be Sunday at 1 p.m. Connecticut is defending two-time Big East titlist.

Patriots' Nelson on Sunday

FOXBORO, Mass. — New England Patriots starting inside linebacker Steve Nelson injured his eye in practice Friday and will not play against the Indianapolis Colts at Sullivan Stadium Sunday, officials said Friday.

Nelson, an All-Pro who in his 12th year with the team, was hit in the right eye with a football just before practice drills started. He was not wearing a helmet.

The trauma caused bleeding on the front of his eye. Dr. Bradford Shingleton said Nelson's prognosis for a complete recovery is excellent.

Nelson will spend five days at Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary for observation and medication, Lofthus said.

East rips through South; gets shot at HCC title

HARTFORD — East Catholic controls its own destiny in the search for the HCC title. The Eagles, with word that front-running St. Bernard had lost earlier in the evening, chewed up arch-rival South Catholic, 39-6, Friday night at Hartford's Dillon Stadium to move into position to make a run at its fourth Hartford County Conference (football) championship in a row.

East was co-champs in 1982 with Xavier and St. Charles in '84. The Eagles can do it again, courtesy of St. Bernard's 7-0 upset loss to Fairfield Prep Friday night. The loss leaves the Saints 5-1 in HCC action against 4-2 for both East and Prep.

East hosts the Saints next Friday night at Dillon Stadium at 7:30 p.m. with the HCC championship on the line. "It means if we win we get a share of the HCC title," Eagle coach Judy Kelly simply put it.

Matters didn't start off well against the arch-rival Rebels, who've been competitive but winless in conference play. The loss drops them to 0-5 in the HCC. 4-5 overall. A 12-yard pass from Mark Pericelli to Steve Quinn put South in front after one period.

East, however, was just getting warmed up. Bill Barry ripped off a 60-yard TD run in the second stanza and with Mario DiLoreto's conversion botched, East went ahead to stay at 7-6. A lateral from quarterback Scott Vibberts to split end DiLoreto was turned into a 33-yard TD strike from DiLoreto to Jon Beyer. "That's a Coach (Bob) Tigno play," Kelly credited. "It fits into what we have for plays."

With DiLoreto's second PAT, East's lead was 14-6 at the half.

"It was close at the half but we felt we could move the ball," Kelly said, understating what was to come. East, in all, rashed 49 times for 367 yards. The Eagles added 85 yards in the air lanes for 449 yards in total offense. Vibberts was 3-for-3 for 48 yards and DiLoreto successful on that one attempt to Beyer.

Kevin Ricciardi scored twice in the third quarter on runs of 6 and 1 yard. He added a third TD in the fourth stanza on a 35-yard jaunt. The junior varsity then took over and Aaron Albrico completed a 74-yard march with a 6-yard burst on the game's final play.

Barry was East's leading ground gainer with 106 yards on only 9 carries. Ricciardi had 102 yards on 12 carries while Vibberts carried the pigskin 9 times for 55 yards.

The offensive line of center Mike Sweeney, guards Rob Kwasnicki and Mike Mangialico, and tackles J.B. Kady and Josh Scolora punched huge gaps in the Rebel defensive line. "I thought they blocked well consistently and Barry and Ricciardi ran the hardest they've run all year," Kelly said.

Kelly said his team was up for this game, coming on the heels of the 16-0 loss last Saturday to St. Joseph's. "You could tell before the game the kids came to play. After last week, the kids wanted to do a good job. I always feel you should learn from a losing experience."

East learned its lesson well.

The win over the arch-rival Rebels was the first by East since '82 in the hard-fought series. East is now 6-3 for the season and assured of a school-record fourth consecutive winning campaign under Kelly, whose career record now stands at 39-31-1.

South was held to 153 yards in total offense by the Eagle defense.

BOSTON — Larry Bird scored 20 first-half points, including nine during a 28-5 first-quarter run, to lead the Boston Celtics to their fifth straight victory, a 125-101 decision Friday night over the winless Phoenix Suns.

The victory improved Boston's record to 5-1 and dropped the Suns to 0-6.

Robert Parish finished with three steals in the last 1:20 of the first half to knot the contest at 54-54.

The score was tied at 33 after the first quarter, but San Antonio behind 13 second-quarter points by Johnson, moved in front by seven points before Philadelphia when Philadelphia came back to tie the lead for good.

After each team scored a basket, Boston executed a 9-0 spurt with McHale accounting for four points.

Larry Nance scored four points as the Suns rallied to draw within 43-37 early in the second quarter. Boston retaliated with an 8-0 run that broke the game open, McHale accounting for five points as Philadelphia's lead was cut to 43-37.

Parish scored 12 points as Boston outscored Phoenix 31-19 during the third quarter to open a 94-70 lead. Boston retained with an 8-0 run at 119-92 with 2:17 remaining.

McHale added 14 and Jerry Sichting 11 for the Celtics while Walter Davis scored 14 and Robert Sanders contributed 13 for Phoenix.

Spurs 107, Sixers 95

At Philadelphia, Mike Mitchell and Steve Johnson scored 24 points each Friday night to lead the San Antonio Spurs to a 107-95 victory over the Philadelphia 76ers.

Mitchell had 12 points in the third quarter and Johnson five as the Spurs took an 87-78 lead following a 54-54 halftime tie.

The Spurs extended their lead to 95-80 early in the fourth quarter, and Philadelphia could get no closer than six points to the rest of the way.

Charles Barkley had 25 points to lead the 76ers. Sedale Threatt added 18.

Patriots after share of first

By Ion Love
United Press International

While the New York Jets and Miami Dolphins battle Sunday in a meeting of AFC East Division heavyweights, the New England Patriots will be fighting in Foxboro for their own share of first place.

At 6-3, the Patriots are alone in second place in the AFC East, one game behind the Jets, whom they beat 20-13 three weeks ago. New York is 7-2 and the Dolphins are in third place at 5-4. A New York loss at the Orange Bowl and a New England victory at home against the Indianapolis Colts would leave the Jets and Patriots both with 7-3 records.

New England, which has only made the playoffs three times since 1964, is looking for its fifth straight victory. And as the Patriots have built their winning streak, they've increased their confidence.

"We're legitimate. We have the feeling we can beat any team any Sunday if we play our game," said New England linebacker Steve Nelson after the Patriots rallied to defeat the Dolphins 17-13 last week. But Coach Raymond Berry, who is 8-4 against AFC East teams, is more cautious.

"We haven't gone anywhere yet," he said. "There's a fine margin between winning and losing. And you better be getting better every week."

Quarterback Steve Grogan, an 11-year veteran of the NFL, calls his own plays and provides a good mixture of running and passing for the Patriots. He is only 54-61-103 for 670 yards in the four games he has played, but in the fourth quarter Grogan is 17-of-21 for 346 yards.

The Colts, while playing in Baltimore and Indianapolis, have a combined 15-14 record against New England, which won both of last year's games. The Patriots have built their winning streak, they've increased their confidence.

"We're legitimate. We have the feeling we can beat any team any Sunday if we play our game," said New England linebacker Steve

Miami in do-or-die situation

By Bob Keim

MIAMI — Miami defensive coordinator Chuck Studley is planning a luck reception for New York running back Freeman McNeil when the Dolphins play the Jets Sunday in the sold-out Orange Bowl.

Whenever McNeil, who gained 173 yards rushing against the Dolphins last month in the Meadowlands, touches the ball, Studley is hoping his defense will warm like the Killer Bs of old to surround the NFL's leading runner. If the Dolphins don't crowd McNeil, he will be a long afternoon for Miami.

Giants are leery of Brock-less Rams

By Dave Ruffo
United Press International

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The Los Angeles Rams went 2-0 without Eric Dickerson at the start of the season, so the New York Giants believe they'll be just as effective without quarterback Dieter Brock.

Especially since Jeff Kemp, who was 8-4 as a starter last year, will replace Brock.

"This guy's played for them before," he got them in the playoffs," Giants Coach Bill Parcells said of Kemp. "It doesn't make a difference. I think they've proved they can win and have a good supporting cast. Their receivers are strong and their passing game is better this year."

Brock, in his first NFL season after 11 years in the CFL, had surgery for a kidney stone Monday. Brock has steadily improved this season, and has provided some big plays for the Rams, who are 8-1 and lead the NFC West.

"We would like to continue what we're doing offensively but it doesn't help when you lose your quarterback," Rams Coach John Robinson said. "But it helps even less when you don't continue to do what you've been building on."

Kemp has not thrown a pass this together, his 132 yards in last week's 22-20 victory over Tampa Bay are a career high and his 573 yards for the season are 30 more than Dickerson's total.

The Giants hope the 5-foot-7 Morris, a four-year veteran from Syracuse, is finally coming into his own.

Neither the Rams nor Giants have made many costly mistakes lately, as both coaches are quick to point out about their opponent.

"I don't think they're super fancy on either side of the ball," Parcells said of the Rams. "They just play good solid football. Their special teams have been good and

Penn State recalls Cincinnati clearly

By Ion Love
United Press International

Unfortunately for the Cincinnati Bearcats, they have left an indelible impression on Penn State Coach Joe Paterno. The memories are likely to haunt them Saturday when they host the No. 1 rated Nittany Lions.

Two years ago, Cincinnati shocked the then defending champion, Penn State, 14-3. The Bearcats took advantage of two turnovers to mount short scoring drives and held Penn State to 245 yards in total offense.

"I remember the game very vividly," Paterno said. "I had a lot of regrets afterward. I had to do a very good job for the squad. To be very frank, I underrated Cincinnati and paid a terrible price for having done it. Hopefully, that was the last time I'll ever underestimate somebody."

Cincinnati quarterback Nick Franks is thinking about the past, he is looking ahead.

"We have nothing to lose," Franks said. "We just want to go and play a good, sound, fundamental football game and prove to people that Cincinnati in the future is to be contended with."

UMass defensive standout

Vito Perrone, an All-State selection at linebacker while at East Catholic High, has continued his expertise at the position for the University of Massachusetts Minutemen.

The 6-4, 230-pound inside linebacker has 49 primary tackles, 29 assists with one fumble caused and two fumble recoveries for the Bay Staters, who are 6-3 after nine games. Perrone was in on 14 tackles in UMass' 21-7 win over UConn last Saturday in Storrs. Perrone, a sophomore eligibility-wise, and UMass host Delaware today in Amherst.

Cities in there pitching for major league clubs

By Bruce Lowitt
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Phoenix threw heat and Buffalo pitched the lack of cold at baseball Friday as they and other areas are making their case for major-league expansion franchises.

New Orleans, New Jersey, Tampa-St. Petersburg, Fla., and Nashville also addressed Commissioner Peter Ueberroth and the long Range Planning Committee just at Columbus, Ohio, Denver, the Miami, Fla., area; Washington, D.C., Indianapolis, and Vancouver, British Columbia, did Thursday.

"One floor upstairs are baseball people making baseball decisions for the future of their sport," Bob Rich Jr., president of the minor-league Buffalo Bisons, said in a room on the 48th floor of a skyscraper housing the offices of Willie, Farr & Gallagher, a law firm which includes former Commissioner Bowie Kuhn as a member.

"The Buffalo jokes notwithstanding," Rich said, "sure we

Mutual fund shares redeemable

QUESTION: We own 4,000 shares of a growth mutual fund, the result of an investment made 17 years ago. My husband is 65. We would like to sell our shares and buy a home in an adult community. We wrote to the mutual fund two weeks ago and asked how we can sell. We haven't received any reply. Can you tell us how to sell our shares, without going through a broker and paying a fee?

ANSWER: Technically, you don't "sell" your mutual fund shares. You "redeem" them by turning them back to the fund. The fund then redeems them for you. If you have certificates for your shares, you must sign the assignment form on the back and have your signatures guaranteed by a commercial bank, trust company or broker's firm. Then, send the certificates to the fund's transfer agent, along with a request that they be redeemed. For safety sake, do it by registered mail, return receipt requested.

Investors' Guide

William A. Doyle

You have encountered evidently results from the fact that the letter you wrote to the fund was not an actual redemption request. Just the same, somebody at that fund goofed by not getting back to you and explaining things.

QUESTION: Exactly what price will we get, when we redeem our mutual fund shares?

ANSWER: For most mutual funds, the redemption price is the net asset value per share — the actual dollar and cents value behind each share. That price can move up or down from day to day, in line with the market values of the securities the fund holds as investments.

The exceptions to this general rule are mutual funds with redemption fees. Those funds deduct redemption fees from the fund's net asset values and redeeming shareholders receive less.

Fortunately for you, the mutual fund you named in your letter does not levy a redemption fee. You'll collect the full net asset value of your shares when you redeem. However, other readers are cautioned to check and find out if a mutual fund has a redemption fee — before investing. The standard advice from this corner is to steer clear of funds with redemption fees.

QUESTION: My husband and I will have a profit of approximately $200,000 when we redeem our mutual fund shares. We know we will have to pay tax on that. I have gambling casino stock, now worth $5,000 less than I paid for it. Should I sell the casino stock, in order to reduce our income tax bill?

ANSWER: That would be a wise move for tax purposes. If you sell that casino stock at a $5,000 loss in the same year in which you redeem the mutual fund shares at a $200,000 profit, your net capital gains for the year will be reduced to $195,000. Assuming you held the mutual fund shares for more than six months, so that your profit there was a long-term capital gain, only 40 percent of that net capital gain will be subject to income tax. You'll pay tax on $12,800. That's a better result than paying tax on $14,800 — 40 percent of the $37,000 long-term capital gain you would have by not establishing the $5,000 loss on the casino stock.

First, of course, determine in your own mind that you no longer want to own that casino stock. If you're convinced it's a clunker, unload. But, if you believe its price will rise in the future hold on. Investment decisions made only for tax reasons sometimes can backfire.

Doyle welcomes written questions, but he can provide answers only through the column.

Doubled bills for Seabrook appear likely

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) — New Hampshire electric customers could see their bills more than double in five years after the Seabrook nuclear plant is generating power, utility regulators predicted Friday.

The probable rate projections are contained within three rate scenarios devised by the Public Utilities Commission. None of the projections figure inflation into the rates.

All three scenarios predict a tripling of rates within 20 years after Seabrook's completion date at a cost of $4.6 billion.

All of the projections are based on the cost and completion estimates by Seabrook's New England utility owners. They project an October 1986 completion date at a cost of $4.6 billion.

Both estimates are disputed by Seabrook opponents, who contend the reactor will go on line later and at a higher cost.

The scenarios include lump increases and phase-in hikes in electric rates that the Public Service Co. of New Hampshire might be allowed to charge customers once Seabrook is on line. The utility is Seabrook's lead owner with a 35.4 percent interest.

The projections represent the "upper limit of the reasonably probable range" of electric rates, the commission wrote. Commissioners compiled the probable rate projections on orders from the state Supreme Court. Justices asked for the rates in connection with their consideration of an appeal of a key financing to help Public Service Co. complete its share of Seabrook's first reactor.

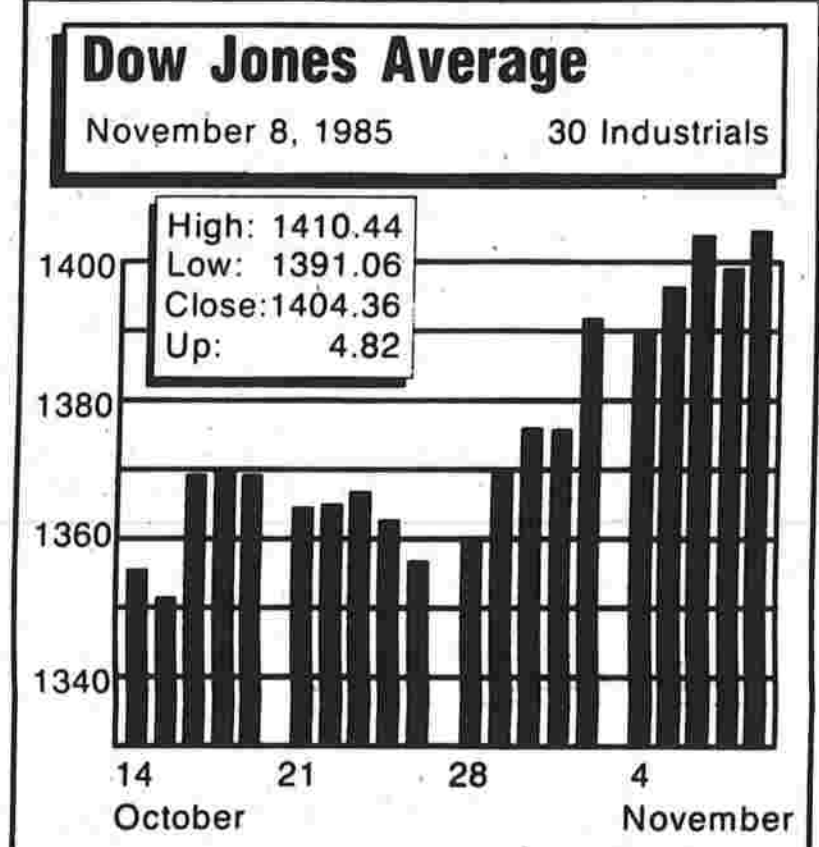

The court also asked the commission to reconsider its April approval of the $225 million financing, including the probable rates at which the commission reformed their earlier support of completing the reactor, which is rated 93 percent complete.

"Based on the record in this case, we find that such rates are reasonable in order to assure the company a lawful return on its investment and that the public good is served by granting the authorized financing and completing Seabrook," the majority wrote.

Commissioner Leo Aeschliman, who dissented, said the commission should adopt "some standard of comparison" to determine whether the rates are reasonable.

Following are probable rates envisioned by the majority:

- A seven-year phase in of rates at 15 percent each year would see the 1985 electric rate of 8.49 cents per kilowatt hour increase by 107 percent by 1991 to 17.65 cents a kilowatt hour, to 22.97 cents a kilowatt hour in 1991, up 170 percent; and to 23.86 cents a kilowatt hour in 2000, a 181 percent increase.
- The second projection does not phase in rates and predicts a 70 percent increase in electric rates one year after Seabrook is generating power, with more gradual rate increases. Rates in 1995 would have increased by 106 over 1985 rates.

The Dow Jones Average of 30 industrials closed Friday at 1404.36, up 4.82.

Dow at record high as market advances

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market staged a broad advance Friday, pushing the Dow Jones industrial average to a record closing high for the fifth time in the past eight sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down more than 4 points the day before, finished with a 4.82 gain at 1,404.36. That topped the previous high of 1,403.44 set Wednesday.

For the week, the average was up 14.11 points. Friday's volume on the New York Stock Exchange came to 114.96 million shares, against 118.95 million Thursday.

Analysts said the market paused Thursday and early Friday to absorb selling by traders eager to cash in profits from the market's recent advance.

But they said there appeared to be nothing in the economic news to disturb hopes for lower interest rates and a pickup in economic growth in 1986.

Chairman Paul Volcker of the Federal Reserve has lately asserted that the Fed is not especially worried about any immediate revival of inflation, and is pursuing a relatively stimulative monetary policy.

His comments have prompted talk that the Fed might soon lower its discount rate, which now stands at 7 1/2 percent.

Station sales will cut debt for Chevron

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Chevron U.S.A. Inc. plans to sell its service stations in 11 northeastern states in a series of deals expected to generate $500 million to help reduce the huge debt resulting from the merger of Chevron Corp. with Gulf Corp., Chevron officials announced Friday.

The transactions, which company spokesmen said would streamline Chevron operations, would also result in the sale of most distribution terminals in New York, Connecticut, Delaware, Maine, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, New Hampshire and Vermont.

The 1,200 stations currently owned and operated by Chevron stores and sells gasoline at half of them, will purchase the marketing assets in 10 states for a total of $500 million, said Chevron spokesman Mike Marcy.

Cumberland Farms, founded in 1938, has 1,500 stations in sales in 1984, according to Marcy, who said the Chevron assets being sold total about 150,000 barrels of petroleum products per day.

The other sales announced Friday, all pending final contract negotiations and regulatory review, include:

- The following heating oil companies, Hoffman of Bridgeport, Conn., Lewis of Port Washington, N.Y., Hoffberger of Baltimore and Skelton of Bryn Mawr, Pa., to Champion Oil Co. of Greenwich, Conn.
- The Bulk Petroleum Co. of Chicago to R.J. Evans of Chicago.
- Chevron's share of the Philadelphia-Cleveland Laurel Pipe Line to Penn Central Energy Group of New York.

Marcy said the sales are expected to be completed in about six months, and that the sales are expected to result in no interruption of product supply during that time.

Chevron will retain some of its holdings in the Northeast, including its asphalt manufacturing and marketing business, its Bayway, N.J., lubricants plant and the former Gulf refinery at Philadelphia.

"We believe that the steps we're taking today will contribute to the establishment of a stronger, more competitive company in an increasingly difficult marketplace," said Chevron U.S.A. President James R. Sylie.

He said 111 domestic refineries were closed since 1981 and that energy conservation in the United States has resulted in a 20 percent drop in demand for oil. Chevron economists predict less than 1 percent annual growth in domestic oil demand through 2000, he said.

"When we purchased Gulf, we took on a tremendous debt," said Marcy, who described the sales announced Friday as "part of a strategic plan to reduce debt."

Marcy estimated Chevron's debt at $15.5 billion as of Jan. 1, 1985, which has since been reduced to $10.9 billion through the sales of properties in Utah and Canada.

Business In Brief

Copper prices up sharply

Copper prices rallied sharply Friday on the Commodity Exchange in New York, settling 1.15 cents to 1.20 cents higher with the contract for delivery in November at 61.20 cents a pound. Precious metals prices also were higher. Gold settled $2.50 to $2.80 higher with the contract for delivery in November at $324.20 a Troy ounce; silver settled 7.4 cents to 7.5 cents higher with November at $102 a Troy ounce.

Reagan lauds veterans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan urged the nation today to remain militarily strong in memory of the American war dead but also said "peace is imperiled when we forget that we have agreements and settlements and treaties."

Reagan made the remarks in a Veterans Day ceremony in the Amphitheater at Arlington Cemetery in Virginia after he placed a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

The president appeared to have in mind his forthcoming trip to Geneva, Switzerland, where he will meet with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, Nov. 19-20.

"Peace is imperiled when we forget that we have agreements and settlements and treaties," Reagan said. "Each new day carries within it the potential for breakthroughs, for progress, for the ends he desires," said Reagan.

"Peace falls when we forget that we have agreements and settlements and treaties," Reagan said. "Each new day carries within it the potential for breakthroughs, for progress, for the ends he desires," said Reagan.

The president reaffirmed his strong belief that military strength is necessary to preserve the peace. Reagan said that all those "who died for us and our country were, in one way or another, victims of a peace process that failed."

"Victims of a decision to forget certain things — to forget, for instance, that the surest way to keep a peace going is to stay strong," he said.

"Weakness, after all, is a temptation; it tempts the pugnacious to assert themselves," the president said. "But strength is a declaration of intent that we will not be intimidated by the actions of those who are weaker than we are."

Reagan said that the war dead "gave up everything for our country, for us. And all we can do is remember."

Town marks Veterans Day

By Alex Girelli
Herald Reporter

"Patriotism more than waving a flag" — page 3

Sheltered from the rain by the canopy at the new entrance to Manchester Memorial Hospital, a small group this morning witnessed brief ceremonies marking Veterans Day.

Participants in the event — most of them representatives of veterans' organizations — had to brave the rainfall to raise the flag and then lower it to half-staff. Representatives of the auxiliaries of the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Disabled American Veterans placed wreaths at a monument to World War I veterans. The monument was moved slightly during the latest hospital renovation, but the placing of wreaths is a tradition that goes back many years.

"The people of Manchester are particularly pleased to have recently dedicated a public memorial to the service they have returned home to render further community service."

Warren Prelesnik, executive director of the hospital, welcomed the guests and thanked the community. "For letting us share so much of our history with you," the hospital was built as a memorial to veterans of World War I. Observance of Armistice Day and its successor, Veterans Day, has been held at the hospital since its construction.

During the ceremony, Fred Thrall, a World War I veteran, read "In Flanders Fields," a memorial poem associated with World War I, while his wife, Elizabeth, placed a wreath at the monument.

The Bennet Junior High School participated in the ceremony, and a growing tendency of national holidays and raindrops dotting their musical scores.

Italy issues warrant for Abul Abbas

GENOVA, Italy (UPI) — Prosecutors today issued new warrants for the arrest of Palestinian Liberation Front leader Mohammed Abul Abbas and eight other suspects in the Achille Lauro hijacking, a state attorney indicated.

The warrants brought to 16 the number of suspects wanted in connection with the hijacking Oct. 7 of the Italian luxury liner and the murder of Leon Klinghoffer, an elderly American Jew.

Prosecutor Luigi Carli refused to release the names of the new suspects but indicated Abbas, the alleged mastermind of the hijacking, was among those sought. He said all nine were accused of hijacking, kidnapping, murder and various arms and explosives violations.

"There are no minor accomplices," Carli told reporters. "They are all persons involved in the first person either in planning or carrying out a terrorist plot."

Warrants for the arrest of Abbas and his bodyguard were issued earlier in Sicily, where four hijackers of the cruise ship were arrested after their Egyptian airliner was forced down by U.S. jets. Prosecutors in Genoa, where the hijackers boarded the ship, later were given jurisdiction in the case.

Carli refused to name any of the suspects, citing judicial secrecy restraints. But when asked if the latest warrants confirmed those issued earlier in Sicily, he said, "We have issued new ones and we have integrated others."

The warrants for Abbas and his bodyguard were the only ones issued in Sicily.

Carli also confirmed all the suspects were members of the Palestinian Liberation Front, which Abbas heads.

Abbas was accompanying the hijackers to Tunisia, ostensibly for trial by the Palestine Liberation Organization, when their flight was intercepted Oct. 10 and forced to land at the Sigonella NATO base near Catania, Sicily.

Italian Prime Minister Bettino Craxi ignored a U.S. warrant for Abbas's arrest. Then, saying Washington had failed to provide any evidence that Abbas masterminded the hijacking.

Comet comes calling

NEW YORK (UPI) — Armchair astronomers with binoculars, patience and a clear night sky have an excellent opportunity this week to catch a glimpse of Halley's comet as it barrels toward the heart of the solar system.

To find the Pleiades, face the eastern horizon a few hours after sunset and look about halfway between the horizon and straight overhead. Scan the area for a tightly packed cluster of stars that resembles a tiny dipper — the Pleiades.

Carefully study the area around the cluster with binoculars, looking for a patch of fuzzy, diffuse light that does not form the pinpoint image of a star. That is Halley's comet.

But despite all the hype surrounding Halley's reappearance after 76 years, observers should not expect to see a brilliant display. Patience and above all a clear night sky will be required to track it down.
