Mid-November car sales dip
 DETROIT (UPI) — Incentive programs on selected models did little to resuscitate interest in U.S. automakers reported a 7.2 percent drop in car sales for mid-November, the fifth consecutive 10-day period decline.

The seven companies — General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co., Chrysler Corp., Honda Motor Corp., American Motors Corp., Volkswagen of America and Nissan Motor Manufacturing U.S.A. — Monday reported combined sales of 184,377 cars in the United States during the latest period, compared with 195,196 units sold in the year-ago period.

There were nine selling days in this year's period, compared with eight in 1984.

The daily selling rate of 20,481 cars compared with 22,150 a year ago.

Women innocent of charges
 BANGOR, Maine — A woman who allegedly stood by in a trance while her live-in boyfriend burned her 4-year-old daughter to death in an electric oven during an exorcism-like ritual has been found innocent of manslaughter.

Superior Court Judge Bruce Dodds, ruling in the non-jury trial, declared Monday that Cynthia Palmer, 30, was not mentally responsible for her actions the day her daughter Angela was shoved into the oven in an Auburn apartment last year.

Palmer's boyfriend, John Lane, 35, who was convicted of murder last week and sentenced to life in prison, claimed he killed the child because he thought she was possessed by the devil.

Lady Liberty gets new torch
 NEW YORK — Lady Liberty, still enshrouded in scaffolding, stood patiently in New York Harbor as workers spent the cold afternoon installing a new torch in her outstretched hand.

An early birthday present, the gold-gilded torch mounted Monday is part of a $260 million restoration project and is scheduled to be lit at ceremonies marking the Statue of Liberty's centennial on July 4, 1986.

The 4,800-pound solid copper torch, which took a year to complete, was made according to the original design of French sculptor Frederic Auguste Bartholdi and will be lit from the outside as Bartholdi intended, officials said.

The old torch, part of the statue erected in 1886, was lit from within. Severely corroded after lighting the national monument for nearly 100 years, it will remain on Liberty Island in a new museum at the base of the statue.

Smith ordered to stand trial
 LOS ANGELES — Cathy Evelyn Smith was ordered to stand trial for second-degree murder in the drug overdose death of John Belushi, even though the judge said, the comic "issued the invitation to this dance."

Municipal Court Judge James Nelson bound Smith over for trial Monday, but allowed the former rock backup singer to remain free on bail pending a Superior Court arraignment Dec. 10 on the murder charge and 13 counts of administering drugs.

"Surely John Belushi issued the invitation to this dance," Nelson said of the comedian's last days of carousing and drug-taking with Smith. "But it was an inherently dangerous dance, and the Legislature has provided that the price for the piper in these instances is high."

Prosecutors argued Smith, 38, should be tried for murder because she supplied Belushi with the combination of cocaine and heroin that killed the former "Saturday Night Live" star in his $200-a-day bungalow at the Chateau Marmont Hotel on the Sunset Strip in March 1982.

Envoy 'hopeful' of progress
 NEW YORK — Anglican church envoy Terry Wate said he is optimistic about his negotiations with the "coldly rational" kidnapers of four Americans in Beirut because the captors seem to want a resolution to the standoff.

Wate arrived Monday from Athens, Greece, to meet with U.S. and church officials. He said he met with the Moslem kidnapers at least three times while in Lebanon.

"I think they would like a resolution to this problem, and I regard it as a hopeful sign they will talk to me," he said. "It's rather a hopeful stage at the moment. Hopeful, but by no means there."

Wate described the group holding four American hostages in Lebanon as "coldly rational" but said he is optimistic about the fate of the captives.

Case stays in lower court
 SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — Lawyers representing R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. in a lawsuit that claims the company is responsible for the death of a smoker have opted not to move the case to federal court, a company spokeswoman said.

Spokeswoman Laura Armstrong said Reynolds attorneys chose Monday to stay in Superior Court "because of the time and expense that has already been invested."

Earlier in the day, attorneys for both parties met with Superior Court Judge Bruce Dodds, but Thomas Workman, representing the tobacco company, said he needed additional time to confer with the company's Winston-Salem, N.C., headquarters on whether to transfer the trial to federal court.

The suit was brought by John Galbraith's widow against two Santa Barbara supermarkets that sold him the cigarettes — the reason the suit was filed in the coastal city — but the claims were dismissed 15 minutes before opening statements Nov. 21.

Uninspected bags at issue
 NEW DELHI, India — A Canadian police officer told an inquest into the Air India crash that three passengers booked on the flight did not board in Toronto, but their uninspected bags may have been loaded onto the plane.

Michael Atkinson Monday told the government-ordered inquest into the June 23 disaster off the Irish coast that no inspections were done on passengers' luggage before the baggage was stowed on the Boeing 747 at Toronto airport.

The New Delhi High Court hearings Monday focused on the three missing passengers and their bags. Prior reports suggested a bomb explosion caused the crash that killed all 329 people aboard, making it the fourth worst disaster in aviation history.

Some experts believe the plane was blown out of the sky by a bomb in the front cargo hold and suggest that Sikh extremists — fighting for independence in the northern Indian state of Punjab — were responsible.

Committee backs debate for every election

By Donald M. Rothberg
 The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A commission that spent the last nine months studying the presidential election process recommended today that campaign debates become a regular part of the contest and that the Republican and Democratic parties take over their sponsorship.

"The American people have come to expect joint appearances by the major party nominees for the presidency," the Commission on National Elections said in its report. "These joint appearances should be made a permanent part of the electoral process."

Dissenting from the recommendation was the fact that the parties assume sponsorship of the debates was Dorothy Ridings, chairwoman of the League of Women Voters, which has sponsored the debates in previous elections.

"Because political parties are by definition partisan, they are hardly suitable sponsors of nonpartisan presidential forums," said Mrs. Ridings.

She added that party-sponsored debates "would probably never take place... The forums could be canceled at a moment's notice each time one candidate's demands were not met."

The commission, headed by former Republican congressman Melvin Laird and former Democratic Party Chairman Robert Strauss, said party sponsorship "would inhibit the ability of lesser-known candidates to compete."

However, the commission urged the national parties to discourage early straw ballots it said "distort and damage the political process."

Another recommendation was to encourage a larger number of states offering greater geographic and demographic representation to join Iowa and New Hampshire in holding the first delegate selection contests.

Among its other recommendations, the commission urged that Election Day 1988 be made a national holiday as a one-time experiment to test whether such a step would increase voter turnout.

U.S. bishop defends role of colleagues

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — The leader of U.S. Roman Catholic bishops today emphasized the vital role of the bishops, arguing that when acting in concert with the pope they represent the ultimate power in the church.

Bishop James Malone of Youngstown, Ohio, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, made the remarks at the worldwide bishops' synod called to review the liberalizing reforms of the Second Vatican Council, which propelled Roman Catholicism into the 20th century.

"The teaching of the Second Vatican Council on collegiality (power sharing between the pontiff and his bishops) and the impetus which this teaching gave to episcopal (bishops') conferences should be reinforced," Malone said.

"Together with its head, the Roman pontiff, and never without this head, the episcopal order is the subject of full and supreme power in the church," he said.

The National Conference of Catholic Bishops represents about 200 U.S. bishops and meets twice a year. It is the church's highest decision-making body in the United States.

It has caused some consternation within the Vatican and elsewhere for its stands on a variety of issues, including pastoral letters condemning nuclear war and urging major changes in the U.S. economy to help the poor.

During the synod's opening sessions Monday, speaker after speaker registered strong support for the synod, called by Pope John Paul II to mark the 20th anniversary of Vatican II. Many offered a shopping list of new proposals for the pope to consider.

The Metropolitan Archbishop of Winnipeg, Maxim Hermanik, urged him to give synods legislative power instead of just the advisory authority they now have. He also suggested that decisions now taken by the pope and his Vatican aides should be made instead by the pontiff and members of a proposed permanent synod to be elected every three years.

African Cardinal Bernardin Gantin launched a special appeal for spreading Catholic faith to the millions of refugees and migrant workers around the world.

Cardinal Hyacinthe Thiandoum of Dakar, Senegal, urged the Vatican to prepare a doctrinal handbook to explain basic church teaching in light of Vatican II.

Most of the speakers emphasized their full support for the council and blamed problems that arose in the 20 turbulent years since it ended on failures to implement it correctly, Martin said.

Poll: U.S. laity at odds with teachings

NEW YORK (UPI) — Most American Catholics differ sharply from teachings of the Roman Catholic church on such issues as divorce, birth control, marriage for priests and women's ordination, a poll showed Monday.

But on the issue of abortion, the views of Catholics followed more closely the teachings of their church, with 63 percent of the church's position that abortion was murder, the New York Times-CBS poll showed.

Only 36 percent of those Catholics questioned supported the current legal status of abortion, although 55 percent said they would allow abortion in cases of rape and incest or to save a woman's life.

The church opposes abortion in all cases, but the poll said only 15 percent of the Catholics sampled agreed with that position.

The survey, conducted to test attitudes in the United States as the Synod of Bishops opened in Rome, also showed that four of five Catholics said they felt they could disagree with Pope John Paul II on such issues as birth control, abortion and divorce and still be a good Catholic.

The poll said that 68 percent of American Catholics favor the use of artificial means of contraception, 52 percent favor the ordination of women as priests, 63 percent favor marriage for priests and 73 percent favor remarriage for divorced people — all attitudes contradicting church doctrine.

The views expressed by those Catholics questioned corresponded more with the beliefs of non-Catholic Americans than with the teachings of the Roman Catholic church, the poll showed.

The poll of 927 Americans, 280 of them Catholics, was taken Nov. 28 and 19, the Times reported. For Catholics, the margin of sampling error was plus or minus six percentage points; for the public as a whole, it was plus or minus three points.

Younger Catholics are more out-of-step with the teachings of their church than older Catholics, the poll said, indicating the American Catholic breach with Rome on these issues is likely to deepen.

Tax bill comes later Reagans thinking only of rest

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, smiling with the farm bill passed by the Senate over the weekend, legislation that bears a more costly price tag than Reagan wanted.

The president made only one public appearance Monday, to accept a 40-pound white turkey donated each year by the National Turkey Federation.

Reagan refused to discuss any of the substantive issues dominating the headlines, including the hijacking and rescue of the Egyptian airliner on Malta in which at least 60 people died.

He also declined to take questions on the tax bill and farm legislation.

Instead, he urged reporters and cameramen to focus on the turkey, grown at the farm of John Holden, of Northfield, Minn. The bird, named "Wilfred," gobbled at appropriate times as Reagan fended off media questions.

"The only questions I will take today are about the turkey," he said during the annual White House ceremony in the Rose Garden.

"Ask me about the turkey," Reagan invited when reporters pressed him, he said. "The turkey's name is Wilfred and that is a German name meaning Resolute for Peace."

He said he thought the name was "very appropriate not only for now but for what we've just been through," referring to his summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev last week.

Although reporters tried to question Reagan about the assault on the hijacked airliner, he said he wanted to keep the attention on "what's going on here."

Then Wilfred started gobbling loudly, evoking laughter.

"I agree with everything you've said," Reagan said, patting the bird.

Wilfred is expected to live a longer life than the millions of other turkeys destined to become a holiday dinner. His new home will be on the grounds of Evans Farm in Vienna, Va., where he will join other animals subjected to the affection and inquisitiveness of visiting children.

Reagan will host the family's Thanksgiving dinner at his ranch on Thursday with his children and grandchildren.

Reagan will remain at the ranch until Sunday, when he will be honored by the Variety Clubs at a fundraiser in Los Angeles.

Study: juvenile offenders go unpunished

By Jane Seagrove
 The Associated Press

BOSTON — Half the chronic offenders in a massive study on juvenile crime were never even placed on probation, let alone jailed, say researchers who conclude "we ought to start getting tough with delinquents early."

The University of Pennsylvania researchers tracked the criminal history of everyone born in 1958 who lived in Philadelphia from age 10 until adulthood.

While only 7 percent of the 27,100 followed were chronically delinquent, that minority committed 75 percent of all serious crimes by the group, the study found. About a third had at least one encounter with police.

"Although it had long been suspected that a small group of habitual, serious offenders had skewed rates of offending, it was not known exactly how small this group actually was or how great a share of offending could be attributed to it," said Paul E. Tracy, one of the researchers.

The study found that nearly half the youths who committed four serious offenses were never placed on probation, let alone locked up, said Tracy, now assistant professor of criminal justice at Northeastern University.

"The point is, if you let a kid do what he does with impunity, then he's going to continue to do it," said Tracy. "So my argument is that we ought to start getting tough with delinquents early."

While the study did not specifically address the question, Tracy said his report concludes that "more severe punishment could deter juveniles from committing more crime."

Previous studies have shown that 80 percent of chronic juvenile offenders become chronic adult offenders, he said. "We know who he is by the time he is 13 or 14. My idea is, let's do something about him early and not wait until he's an adult."

The study, the largest attempted in tough with delinquents early.

Tracy, Marvin E. Wolfgang and Robert M. Figlio and financed by a $1.5 million grant from the National Institute for Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention. Its results are scheduled for publication this winter by Yale University Press.

Philadelphia was chosen for the study because of a similar but smaller study conducted there earlier that had traced the criminal history of 8,265 males born in 1945. The recent study included both males and females.

"The delinquency years for that age group, 1955 to 1962, was a very pleasant time," Tracy said. "What we wanted was a more contemporary society with more influences. The Vietnam War was escalating. Kent State was about to happen. Drugs had become routine in American culture. There was very, very rampant economic growth."

He said Philadelphia also was chosen for the second study because its laws and police department policies had not changed since the first study.

The results probably reflect what is happening in most urban areas because Philadelphia's population mix, crime rate and criminal justice system are similar to those of other large cities, Tracy said.

"It's a very good pulse of what the whole country is doing," he said.

Witnesses recount the terror of the raid

By Jennifer Parmelee
 The Associated Press

VALLETTA, Malta — The co-pilot of Egyptian flight M864 remembered hearing muffled pleas for mercy, gunshots, bodies tossed onto the tarmac and the hijackers whistling cheerfully after a murder.

Other victims remembered how the gunman led five passengers one by one to a door, pointed guns at their heads and fired.

But for a young Egyptian, one of 11 women freed early Sunday, the most terrifying moment was the Egyptian raid that officials said left 59 people dead. The man she had married two weeks ago was still aboard, and his fate was not known.

Maha Ismail, 28, was returning home to Cairo with her husband, Mahmoud el-Shami, when the Boeing 737 left Athens airport at 9:05 p.m. Athens time. Twenty-two minutes later a man stood up in the front of the plane, removed a gun and a hand grenade from a plastic bag and donned a ski mask.

The man in front stood up and another one in the rear drew a gun and shouted, "Don't move!" A third entered the cockpit with a pistol and a hand grenade and told Capt. Hani Galal and co-pilot Emad Bahy to fly to the Mediterranean island of Malta.

Revolutionaries."

Bahy said he and Galal tried talking to the gunman in the cockpit, the apparent gang leader, but he "didn't want to say anything about his nationality or purpose."

The hijackers occasionally fired into the air to enforce their orders for silence, and after one burst of gunfire Galal noted the aircraft was losing cabin pressure, apparently from a bullet puncture.

"When you're flying at 35,000 feet, that's dangerous," Bahy said. "We radioed the Malta control tower to say we were executing an emergency descent."

When the jet landed at Luqa airport after a two-hour, 11-minute flight (10:16 p.m. Maltese time) it taxied to an isolated site.

About 10 minutes later a doctor was allowed in to see the two stewardesses, who had suffered unspecified injuries, and Galal carried them to a waiting ambulance.

DURING THE FIRST HOUR after landing the hijackers sorted out the passports of seven Filipino women and four Egyptian women and read out their names.

"They gestured to us and told us to get off the plane," said Egyptian Elham Diraz, 29.

Then the bloodshed began.

The hijackers read the name of one of the two Israeli women on board. Other passengers said she appeared to believe she was following the others to freedom and went willingly to a front door with her hands tied.

As she was going down the stairs, the leader of the hijackers shot her in the back of the head.

"I heard a soft 'Help' and then a shot," said 28-year-old Patrick Scott Baker of White Salmon, Wash., as he sat in his room at St. Luke's Hospital.

"When they asked for the second Israeli girl, she was very reluctant to go," Baker added. She was shot by the same hijacker, who then ordered stewards to throw her body over the side of the stairs.

"After the shooting of the Israelis, I pretty much knew they would start on the Americans next," said Baker. "I was pretty calm. I thought, 'I'm going to die.'"

Baker was the first of the three Americans whose name was called out.

When he was shot, the bullet grazed the back of his head, and sent him tumbling down four stairs. At that point, he said he played dead and allowed his limp body to be dumped like the others over the side.

U.S. was ready to aid Egypt

By Henry Gottlieb
 The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Navy jets stood ready to protect a plane loaded with Egyptian commandos who were being flown to Malta to try to rescue the passengers of a hijacked Egyptian Boeing 737, U.S. sources say.

Fighters from the U.S. aircraft carrier Coral Sea were ordered to the Sigonella Air Base on Sicily, where they were prepared to intervene if any attempt was made by Libya or any other Middle East country to prevent the Egyptian forces from reaching Malta, the sources said Monday.

No effort was made to interfere with the commandos' flight Sunday, and the U.S. planes played no role in the affair.

BOTH ABC News and CBS News on Monday night reported the movement of American planes. A Pentagon official who demanded anonymity confirmed the move, saying it had been part of an effort by the United States to ensure that no one would interfere with Egypt's efforts to resolve the crisis.

According to another source who also spoke only on condition of anonymity, the carrier dispatched several F-4 fighters and E-3 Hawkeye radar planes westward to Sicily, which is south of Italy and just north of Malta.

The hijacking of the Athens-Cairo flight with 88 people aboard began Saturday and ended Sunday night when the Egyptian commandos stormed the aircraft on Malta, where the hijackers had forced the plane down for refueling.

The incident, which follows the hijacking of a TWA flight with mostly Americans aboard from Athens airport last June, called into question again the effectiveness of the Greek airport's security.

American officials will reinspect the airport to see if the Egyptian hijackers circumvented security systems that were rated satisfactory by Federal Aviation Administration experts just 10 days before the hijacking.

The Greek government suggests the hijackers' weapons were put on the flight at an earlier stop in Cairo, Greece claims passengers who boarded the aircraft went through five inspections.

CHARLES E. Redman, a State Department spokesman, said Monday, "We don't know how or when the weapons were placed aboard the Egyptian flight."

Following last summer's TWA hijacking, the State Department warned Americans to avoid the airport. But the advisory was lifted after improvements were made, and Redman said periodic inspections indicated security was satisfactory at the airport. The last visit by FAA experts was Nov. 13.

Asked about reports the hijacking was supported by Libya, Redman said, "We can't confirm the affiliation or the exact identification of the hijackers. I can only state that Libya has been implicated in terrorist incidents against Egypt which have been reported in the press."

The Reagan administration, though it lamented the death toll, endorsed the decision by Malta and Egypt to storm the hijackers.

Private experts on terrorism called it a no-win situation.

"To retrospect it's all very easy to say. Oh, my God, three-quarters of the people lost their lives," said Christine Helms, a Brookings Institution specialist on the Middle East and terrorism.

"But in reality, it isn't clear-cut for people who were on the scene. What was unique about the situation on Malta was simply the action of the hijackers was much more threatening and lethal than in other recent hijackings."

Manager at Bennet submits low bid for new contract

By Alan Girelli
Herald Reporter

The Greater Hartford Realty Corp., which manages the Bennet Apartments, has submitted the least expensive proposal for a new management contract, according to a source close to the situation. The source, who asked not to be named, said that Community Development Corp., a partner with the town in the operation of the apartments for elderly and handicapped people, will recommend at a meeting tonight that Greater Hartford be awarded the contract. Steven Erie, managing director of CDC, declined to comment on the matter. The Board of Directors of the Bennet Housing Corp. are scheduled to meet tonight at 7:30 in the community room at the Bennet Apartments to consider the management contract and other matters. The BHC is a partner in the operation of the apartments, which are located in a former school building on Main Street still owned by the town. John R. FitzGerald, president of the BHC, could not be contacted this morning for comment. When complaints of Bennet tenants became the subject of newspaper stories in August, much of the criticism was directed at Greater Hartford, the management firm. Among the problems reported at the complex were leaky apartments and doors and fixtures that were not accessible to some handicapped people. Three proposals have been submitted for management of the apartments, and the one from Greater Hartford is considerably less expensive than the other two, the source said. James Finnegan, one of the corporation's directors, said it appears that Greater Hartford has submitted the most favorable proposal financially. Finnegan said he would have to study the proposals more thoroughly before making a decision. Town Director James Fogarty, the liaison between the town Board of Directors and the BHC, said this morning he has no objection to Greater Hartford as a manager as long as the situation at Bennet is in order. Fogarty favored having the apartments managed by the Manchester Housing Authority, but the authority declined to submit a proposal to CDC. The appointment of Fogarty as a liaison and the appointment of a Bennet tenant as a member of the BHC board of directors resulted from public attention focused on the Bennet Apartments as the result of the newspaper stories about tenant complaints. The tenant director, Kenneth Garry, is expected to attend his first meeting of the board tonight. Eileen Stern, who also attended her first meeting tonight.

Critics wait to see revised town plan

By John F. Kirch
Herald Reporter

Members of a property owners' association that has been critical of the town's proposed new Comprehensive Plan of Development say they will watch carefully as officials revise the plan before a third public hearing is held about it. Planning Director Mark Pellegrini and members of the Planning and Zoning Commission said last week they would revise the proposed plan after nearly 600 people showed up at two public hearings, mostly to protest the high-density housing proposals made for certain areas of town. "It sounds positive," Gene Sierakowski, a member of the Southwest Manchester Property Owners' Association, said Monday. "But the final judgment has to rest on what the revisions are." The association opposes the high- and medium-density housing proposals the plan has made for the southwest part of town, where land is currently zoned for low-density residential development. "They've had opposition for input, yes," Sierakowski said of public reaction to the plan at public hearings in September and October. "The question is the planning department going to respond to what was said?"

THEUNIS WERKHOVEN, chairman of the property owners' association, said this morning that he could not speculate on what revisions the PZC will make. But he said revisions are a good first step. "I think it's a reasonable approach," Werkhoven said. Both Werkhoven and Sierakowski said they want a plan that conforms to existing zoning patterns. Land south of Interstate 384 and west of Keeney Street is mostly zoned for between one and three housing units per acre. The plan, which would be used as a policy guide by the PZC for at least the next 10 years, proposes allowing anywhere from six to 20 units per acre in the area. "People were satisfied with the way things always were," Sierakowski said. He said residents have always fought zoning battles against developers who have proposed higher density housing. "This (the plan) is for the town of Manchester, not for the developer," Werkhoven said. "There's no reason to have high-density housing." PZC members have said the plan would only guide its land-use decisions and would not represent concrete regulations. Several PZC members interviewed Monday said they would look at each application for development individually and would not approve high-density housing simply because the plan proposes it for a certain area. PZC member Thomas Ryan said Monday that the public is misinformed about the plan and its intent.

"IT'S NOT GOING to be, we approve the plan Monday and Tuesday, all the zones change," Ryan said. "It's like a blueprint. And a blueprint can be changed." "It's a guide, but it also says what goes where," Sierakowski said. "Once those guidelines are set they'll probably follow those guidelines," Werkhoven said of the PZC. "It's a guide, but it also says what goes where," Sierakowski said. Planning Director Mark Pellegrini is compiling a list of public complaints about the plan for the PZC. The list will be used by the PZC to revise the plan during workshops in the next few months, he said. A third public hearing on the plan will be held early next year after the revisions are finished, Pellegrini has said.

Big Band fund-raising on hold pending audit

The Connecticut Big Band Society will not be able to conduct any fund-raising activities until the state attorney general's office determines that its books are in order. David Ormstedt, head of the public charities unit, said today. The office tried to conduct an audit of the books at CBBS Monday, but Ormstedt said they were in such bad shape that a full audit could not be done to determine if the organization's charitable activities are legitimate. CBBS was given a week to put its books in order, he said. Meanwhile, the secretary of CBBS said Monday afternoon that she did not anticipate any problems as the result of the audit. Secretary Mary Richard confirmed that representatives from the public charities unit of the attorney general's office visited the Wallingford office of CBBS

Economy parking plan is approved by ZBA

The Planning and Zoning Commission last month approved construction of the Tolland Turnpike building, which is to be used by Economy Electric as a warehouse, showroom and office building. The ZBA also granted a variance to permit Dennis and Sharon Platt of Vernon to operate a flower shop in a residential building at 131-133 E. Center St. The ZBA also granted a variance for a variance that only 175 spaces should be required because any additional spaces would "almost double" construction costs.

Zone change requested

A developer who plans to convert the former Gammons-Hoagland building on Main Street into apartments has asked the Planning and Zoning Commission for a zone change that would allow an additional six-unit apartment building at the rear of the property. Vision Unlimited of Tolland is seeking a zone change from Residence B to Planned Residence Development and a flood plain zone for a 140-by-80-foot lot facing Summit Street. The developer indicated on the zone-change application that it plans to purchase the property on Arthur Guinness, guest of honor at MCC's first roast, honks the horn for a particularly far-fetched pun by the roastmaster, John Crowley, a fellow professor at MCC. The illustrations above and below right are by Kathy Dumas. They appeared on placemats at the roast.

Stout-hearted Guinness savors MCC roast

Wally Simon said that Professor Guinness had encouraged him to start his own business. "When I was employed, I could look forward to retirement at 65. Now my projected retirement age is 143," Leslie Ann Dubaldo who performed the start of a strip-tease, saying, "You always told us that

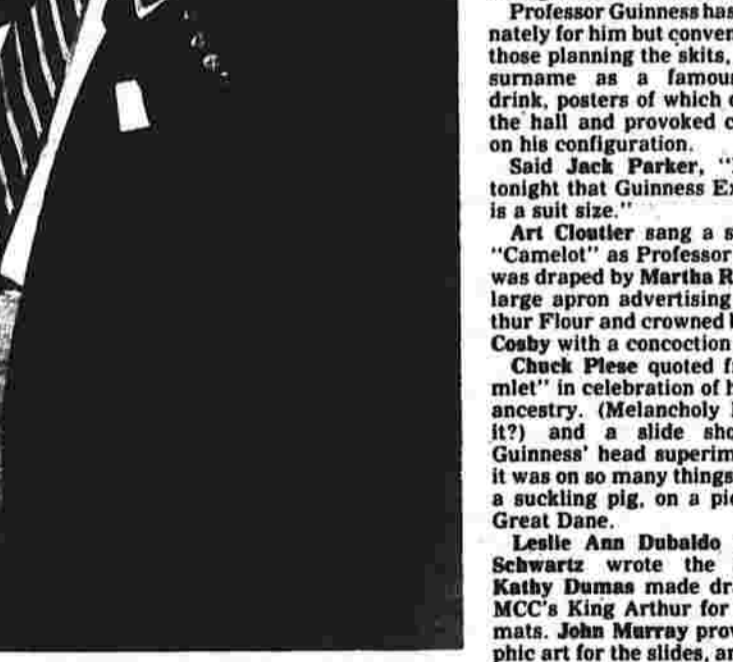

Just so I could have more than one wife.") So he sent a cassette with his remarks, and also some slides from MCC faculty parties. Chuck Regan pretended to have counseled Professor Guinness long ago when MCC had counseling offices in the high school. Dick Vizard gave a parody of an evaluation report. "He is aware of his students' development. The best-developed girl students sit in the front row."

That philosophy has spawned a form of public event peculiar to our times, the roast. People gather in honor of someone whom they truly admire, but the mood is satiric and mocking. One of these roasts, planned to be the first in an annual series, took place Friday evening at the Army and Navy Club when faculty, students and alumni of Manchester Community College showed great inventiveness and wit in roasting the man who has been assistant professor of marketing since 1969, Arthur Guinness. Professor Guinness has, unfortunately for him but conveniently for those planning the sizzle, the same surname as a famous British drink, posters of which decorated the hall and provoked comments on his configuration. Said Jack Parker, "I learned tonight that Guinness Extra Stout is a 'suit case'."

Art Cloutier sang a song from "Camelot" as Professor Guinness was draped by Martha Rainey in a large apron advertising King Arthur Flour and crowned by Joanne Cosby with a concoction of bread, Check Please quoted from "Hamlet" in celebration of his Danish ancestry. (Melancholy Dane, get it?) and a slide showed Art Guinness' head superimposed, as it was on so many things including a sucking pig, on a picture of a Great Dane. Leslie Ann Dubaldo and Judy Schwartz wrote the program. Kathy Dumas made drawings of Guinness' head superimposed, as it was on so many things including a sucking pig, on a picture of a Great Dane.

GUINNESS

'I was excited to get it' New Yorker stars in 'Santa Claus: the Movie'

NEW YORK — There is one part above all others in every great actor's lifetime. For Sean Connery, it was James Bond. For Charlton Heston, it was Moses. And for David Huddleston, it's Santa Claus. "David Huddleston? His feelings won't be hurt if you don't recognize the name. Most people don't. Huddleston, 55, is one of those perennial character actors whose voice and face are familiar, even if the name isn't. He's been in dozens of movies, television shows and commercials, a recent example being the recurring role of Grandpa Luke in an orange juice commercial.

"I'm one of those faces that everybody sees on the street and they can't put a name to it." Huddleston said. "Now I want to see how many other people get excited about it." Although he makes no secret of his glee in finally snaring a leading role in a $80 million motion picture, Huddleston said playing the role of his favorite father figure was tough work. "It was formidable," he said. "Especially the scenes where we shot in the snow. In the first part of the picture. We shot them in August on a soundstage. It was really hot and our costumes were all fur and leather."

Huddleston said he felt more than a touch of responsibility in bringing to life a figure that looms so large in so many children's lives. "Every kid has an idea of what Santa Claus is, and they're all different," he said. "Now this time, they're going to have a chance, maybe for the first time, to have an image of Santa Claus that will last them the rest of their life."

IN DEVELOPING his character, Huddleston said he avoided making St. Nick "plastic or a cartoon character," and tried to portray him as "a nice, warm human being."

The screenplay, by David Newman, depicts Santa and his wife as a childless couple who for years make toys and deliver them to children in the snowbound neighborhood where they live. One year, after a climactic event, Mr. and Mrs. Claus are given the gift of eternal life so that they can continue to spread joy to the children of the world forever.

Just getting cast in the role already has changed his career. Huddleston said until "Santa Claus" he had been one of those actors whose agents have to seek work, instead of handle offers.

Showrooms offer great way to save

Sylvia Porter

It was back in the 1950s that no-frills, self-service shopping exploded in retail showrooms — thereby offering us a way of buying at wholesale prices brand-name merchandise previously available only at marked-up retail prices and saving significant totals.

Products, headquartered in Richmond, Va. Best has annual sales of more than $2 billion, operates more than 213 showrooms throughout the United States and is one of the two largest publicly held catalog showroom retailers in the country.

Ask to be put on the mailing list. 6) At the showrooms, look for items not in the catalog. procedures. But before looking for an employee to ask a question, read the tags attached to the merchandise with care. LOW PRICES ARE possible only when labor costs are low as well. It would be foolish to expect a lot of personalized service outside of the jewelry department. Assuming you're dealing with an honest, reputable catalog showroom you can expect full value on a wide range of brand-name merchandise. You can expect prices low enough to beat what you find in regular retail outlets.

Job outlook reviewed for upcoming year

If one of your goals is a good job after college, you should be aware of job market trends for the 1990s. Health care administrators, physical therapists, electrical engineers, computer technicians, and communications experts are among the jobs for which you and your fellow college graduates will be competing in the coming decade.

Nearly 21 million college graduates will enter the job market by 1985 at the staggering rate of 1.8 million a year.

Despite a dip in college enrollments, you'll still find a crowded job market. So, having an advanced degree or a special skill could be your key to a better job.

A double major — combining two disciplines — is also solid preparation for the future.

Employment of college graduates skyrocketed 10.6 percent between 1970 and 1980 and is likely to continue through the mid-1990s. You, as a new graduate, may eventually work in a field totally unrelated to your college major.

Not all occupations will be crowded during the next decade. With a two- or four-year degree, you should be able to find employment in engineering, computers, health care, nursing, teaching, law, accounting, banking, or finance.

Health careers will increase as the population ages, but if medical school is in your future, be ready to compete for choice jobs.

Teaching jobs are also beginning to open up, thanks to the national baby boom now under way.

Competition will continue in the arts for writers, artists, and entertainers. Future writers, however, should consider related fields such as technical writing.

In-school suspension is a trend that is important for you to remember not to back down from pursuing the career you really want. Just be aware of job market trends and have your options ready.

Jeff Luce contemplates his recent encounter with the in-school suspension system. Most participants emerged sadder but wiser.

Student addresses need for Hackey-Sack team

Hey, what do you say about making Hackey-Sack an official MHS sport? I've been thinking long and hard about this and hopefully you will too.

Do you realize what kind of skill it takes to play the game of Hackey-Sack? Let me tell you, it requires a special breed of person. You must be able to kick a little bag around with your feet while lighting a cigarette and humming to some classic rock & roll tune by Ratt. Not everyone can do this, and I'm certainly quite awestruck by these patio heroes.

Hackey-Sackers are very proud of their achievements but they refuse to rest on their laurels. Those who can have read the "Hackey-Sack Handbook" to try to improve their footwork. This shows their tremendous dedication to the sport, which is increasingly becoming more of an art form every day. I also see this dedication evidenced in their fine work habits. These kids are out there every day practicing.

I also maintain that Hackey-Sackers are some of the best behaved students at the high school. None of them would ever risk punishment in the form of detentions or in-school suspension. Do so would take away from their playing and their fun.

As I asked before, how would you feel about an official Hackey-Sack team? These guys have the necessary credentials. Some already have private coaches and one enterprising lad has even started his own clinic. Hackey-Sack would probably blossom into one of the most competitive sports at the high school. It would be tough at first for the fledgling squad as they

Student exposes evil of in-school suspension

7:00 A.M. — I put away my bowl of Kellogg's cornflakes. This was the day I went to school. In-school suspension! I had always thought that a condemned man's last meal should be a big feast but instead it was nothing but a bowl of cornflakes and a mushy one at that! I folded up the day's Hartford Courant after a brief chuckle over the latest edition of The Far Side, but the laugh did not come easy for this was the day I went to in-school. I made my own lunch for the first time this year because I couldn't go out to eat and wanted to avoid whatever they were passing out for food in the cafeteria. I spent my last remaining minutes trying to psyche myself up for the day of mind-boggling boredom that lay ahead. I failed.

7:30 A.M. — I walked to my locker and gathered my books so I would be ready for my first day. I needed to do the assignments I'd received the day before. "This wasn't so bad," I thought, "I'd do my homework and by the time I'm done it'll almost be time to go." Looking back, I later realized that it was stupid thought.

I opened the door to the room that was going to be my own private hell for a day. As I stepped into the room I was overwhelmed with such intense heat that I thought that some kindly student had set fire to the room or that it was some device torture thought up by the warped minds of the administration to bolt my brain. I opened the door to the hallway and wedged it so that it wouldn't close and then opened the door to the outside world. The reason behind having a door instead of a window is beyond me. I thought that if there happened to be a lot of students in-school and they decided to have a riot to pass away some of the time, I would be able to see through the window. "Would one of the so-called monitors take out a fully automatic firearm and threaten to blow them all away?"

They brought in another student. They had been there for a make-up test. I could see through the window. I thought that they were fooling? He was actually an informant sent there to see if we were planning to make a break for it. They thought that they could fool me so easily! Hah! Little did they know that I could see through the window. I was beginning to feel a little better. My companion gave up and decided to go to sleep. I wouldn't allow myself the luxury of sleep. I thought that the madman in the office would dream up next!

I thought I was beginning to crack under the strain of it all.

10:15 A.M. — My companion

The Connecticut Industrial Arts Association, comprised of industrial arts teachers from schools throughout the State of Connecticut, held its fall conference at Manchester High School on October 24th. The welding program initiated three years ago as part of the high school renovation, provides students training and development of skills on equipment similar to that used in industry.

Math team is plagued by many misconceptions

Recent developments have prompted me to again talk to you about the Math Team. I assumed that the Math Team was comprised of most of the schools in our area. The league is divided into three divisions, the Euler, the Euclid and the Einstein. Each division has roughly ten teams. We compete against the rest of the teams in our division.

The meet is arranged in the following manner. Each team has an "A" team and a "B" team. The meet consists of five rounds. Each round is devoted to a certain topic. On the A team each person must compete in three rounds and on the B team in two. A round consists of three questions, one uncalculated and two multiple choice. The third question must be answered in a ten minute time period. There is also a sixth round in which the five A team members must work together to solve five problems.

There are six meets a year. At the end of the year each team with the most points is the Division Champion. Of course there is also the possibility of qualifying for the State Championship, a one-time event to determine the state champions. After the state championships you can go on to the New England Math League (NEML) Championships. There are also other parts of Math Team, such as the Atlantic Regional Math League (ARML) in which the best students from each league in the Atlantic Region get together to compete as individual leagues.

This is the basic outline for Math Team. Just in case you're wondering, our rivals this year are Hall, Concord, South Windsor and Avon. Now you know who to tell us to beat. After our first two meets we were eliminated from the top and within striking distance. We are determined to have success this year. If you get a chance later on in the year, I'll inform you of our progress and may talk to you about the infamous "Math Team Songs."

Old style wins for Niners

By William D. Murray
United Press International

SAN FRANCISCO — They used to talk about San Francisco 49ers coach Bill Walsh's offense as the trend for professional football in the 1980s.

The defending Super Bowl champion 49ers, who have fallen on hard times this year, Monday night reverted to the style of football played before computers and situational substitutions.

The 49ers used a tough, hard-nosed defense to throttle the Seattle Seahawks and come away with a much-needed 19-6 triumph.

The victory kept San Francisco within striking distance of the Western Division-leading Los Angeles Rams. After this week's action, the Rams are 9-3 and San Francisco is two games back at 7-4.

The triumph, coupled with losses by Detroit and Philadelphia Sunday, also put the 49ers in the driver's seat for the last NFC wild card berth.

Seattle, meanwhile, has fallen two games off pace in the AFC West and at 4-4 is likely out of post-season contention.

The 49er defense held Seattle to just 2-of-18 third down conversions. The Seahawks had entered the game as the NFL's leader in that statistic. San Francisco also forced five sacks and two interceptions in holding Seattle to just 75 yards rushing and 177 yards passing.

"The way our defense played tonight gave us hope that we can make it at it (the playoffs)," Walsh said. "They were superb."

Defensive tackle Gary Johnson, who teamed with Jeff Sover on one of the 49er sacks, said San Francisco's five-man line made the difference.

"Our five-man line was just too much for them to handle," he said. "We frustrated (Seahawks quarterback Dave) Krieg all night."

A discouraged Seattle coach Chuck Knox agreed. "It was a great game," he said. "We just couldn't get anything going offensively," he said. "We just couldn't make the plays we were trying to make."

Wide receiver Steve Largent, who caught 4 passes for 91 yards, said the loss was a crushing blow to the Seahawks.

"This is one of the most frustrating games I've ever played in," he said. "We had so much to gain with a win and we still played poorly. Dave (Krieg) didn't play well, but neither did the other 10 guys on offense."

The 49ers defensive effort helped offset six miscues by San Francisco's offense and special teams.

Quarterback Joe Montana, who had not thrown an interception in his last 17 attempts, threw two in the first quarter. He tossed another in the second quarter. Punt return specialist Dana McLemore muffed a punt that gave to Seattle on the San Francisco 29.

Max Runger had a punt blocked that was recovered Seattle's Sam Merriman for a touchdown in the fourth quarter. Ray Wersching connected on a 32-yard field goal.

In the second half, Montana fired a pass to a leaping Clark in the end zone for a 22-yard touchdown to make it 19-0. The reception was Clark's 60th of his career and set a club record.

San Francisco went up 12-0 at the helm when Ray Wersching connected on a 32-yard field goal.

In the second half, Montana fired a pass to a leaping Clark in the end zone for a 22-yard touchdown to make it 19-0. The reception was Clark's 60th of his career and set a club record.

"Terry Taylor really covered me well on the play," Clark said. "But the ball was thrown perfectly. I just went up and once it hit my gloves, I knew I would catch it."

Seattle was able to close to within 19-6 late in the game on Merriman's touchdown, but the 49ers defense stiffened and shut the Seahawks down the rest of the way.

UConn hosts Yale in season opener

STORRS (UPI) — The University of Connecticut basketball team, led by senior guard Earl Kelley, opens its 27-game season tonight, hosting cross-state rival Yale.

UConn coach Tom Perno, who starts his ninth season at the helm, will be counting on experienced seniors Kelley, forward-center Tim Coles and forward Eddie Williams to improve last season's 13-15 record. They were 6-10 in Big East action.

Kelley collected 27 points and had 11 assists in a tune-up, 92-83 win over the Puerto Rican national team Saturday night at the Storrs Field House.

Coles contributed 17 points and Williams had 14 points in a contest that saw rookie starter Phil Gamble score 12 points.

The standout performance by the 6-foot-4 guard from Washington may lead Perno to start him in tonight's opener.

"If Gamble is the starting lineup, he'll be the first freshman to draw an opening game starting assignment since Karl Hobbs in the 1980-81 season."

Yale opened its season Saturday night with a 75-70 win over Western 97-71 at New Haven.

Yale Coach Tom Brennan's starting squad includes four sophomores and 10 juniors. Chris Dudley, who led the Bulldogs with 18 points.

Kelley has been UConn's leading scorer each of the last three seasons and enters his final season as the 12th highest scorer in UConn history with 1,181 points.

His playing time may be cut short this season because of a campus incident last spring that led to his arrest on an assault charge.

Kelley faces a disciplinary hearing yet to be scheduled by the university over the incident and faces suspension or expulsion.

Last week a federal appeals court rejected Kelley's efforts to block the hearing and the school said one would be started in the near future.

Guillen AML rookie of the year

CHICAGO (AP) — Ozzie Guillen, the exuberant rookie who cost the Chicago White Sox a Cy Young award but paid unexpected hitting and fielding dividends, is the American League Rookie of the Year.

"It can only happen to you one time in baseball," Guillen (pronounced GEE-JEN) said Monday after learning of the outcome of voting by the Baseball Writers' Association of America. "It is the greatest thing to happen to me in a long time."

"I'm excited and I'm happy that I was able to help the White Sox and do enough to be voted this award," the 21-year-old shortstop said in a telephone interview from his native Venezuela.

Guillen committed just 12 errors in 150 games last season, the fewest of any regular American League shortstop, while hitting .273.

He came to the White Sox Dec. 10 in a seven-player deal that sent right-handed pitcher LaMarr Hoyt, the 1983 Cy Young award winner, to San Diego along with two minor leaguers to Guillen, pitcher Tim Lollar, infielder Luis Salazar and a minor league pitcher.

Guillen received a possible 21 first-place votes — allotted two apiece among BBWAA members in each of the 14 American League cities — for 101 total points. Todd Higuera, a left-handed pitcher from the Milwaukee Brewers, was second with nine first-place votes and 67 points.

Higuera had a 15-8 record and 3.90 ERA for the Brewers, allowing 116 runs in 212 innings while striking out 127 and walking 63.

Third in the balloting was another Brewer, infielder Earnest Riles, who got 29 points, followed by outfielder Oddie McDownell, Texas, 25; pitcher Stu Cliburn, California, 16; pitcher Brian Fisher, New York; pitcher Tom Henke, Toronto, 5; and catcher Mark Salas, Minnesota, 2.

McDownell, Cliburn and Henke got the other first-place votes. A

Chicago's slick-fielding shortstop Ozzie Guillen, obtained in an offseason trade with San Diego, was named Monday the American League Rookie of the Year.

Grogan out six weeks with a fractured fibula

FOXBORO, Mass. (UPI) — New England Patriots quarterback Steve Grogan will be sidelined for at least the next six weeks after doctors discovered Monday he suffered a fractured tibia in addition to a badly sprained left knee against the New York Jets.

Grogan went down when he was rolled into by defensive end Ben Rudolph late in the first quarter of Sunday's 16-13 overtime loss to Jets at the Meadowlands. Tony Eason, who had won and then lost the starting job to Grogan, came out to finish the game.

"He's had torn medial collateral ligaments in the left knee," said Patriots spokesman Jim Greenidge. "It's a prior injury and he's had prior surgery on that knee."

Team physician Bert Zarins discovered the fractured tibia Monday evening during an examination at Massachusetts General Hospital. Special X-rays taken during the exam were to be viewed Tuesday to determine whether the fracture will require surgery.

"Right now, Dr. Zarins said he'll be out six weeks and possibly longer either way, surgery or no surgery," Greenidge said.

Grogan led the Patriots to six straight victories after replacing Tony Eason early in the season when Eason suffered a separated shoulder.

"He's had an outstanding year," Greenidge said of the 32-year-old quarterback, now in his 11th season with the Patriots.

Grogan was not the only Patriots casualty during Sunday's clash with the Jets.

All-Pro right guard John Hannah ruptured a tendon in his right shoulder, but continued to play. Hannah's 50-50 play in Indianapolis (Sunday), Greenidge said.

"He's a tough guy and he's suffered sprained medial ligaments in his right knee. He will miss the game with the Colts and is uncertain when the Patriots return home Dec. 8 to face the Detroit Lions."

McEnroe, reporter involved in scuffle

MELBOURNE, Australia (UPI) — John McEnroe pushed a reporter over a chair and spat at a photographer Tuesday when they asked the tennis star if he planned to marry his actress-girlfriend Tatum O'Neal.

The Sun newspaper said McEnroe grabbed Melbourne Herald reporter Geoff Eason's "around the throat and threw him over a sofa in the lobby" of the downtown hotel where he is staying.

"I got the same question all around the world," McEnroe yelled as he pushed the reporter over the chair, the Sun said. McEnroe ten spat at News Limited photographer Mike Potter, who spat back at him.

At a 45-minute, wide-ranging news conference following the incident, McEnroe explained the pushing of the reporter.

"The guy came to start something," McEnroe said. "I moved him to one side, and then suddenly I am supposed to have assaulted him and he's physically beat me."

McEnroe, the world's No. 2 ranked tennis player, said he is married to O'Neal, but denied she was pregnant.

"At the moment nothing has been decided," McEnroe said. "At some point we are going to get married, but I honestly don't know when that is."

The 25-year-old New Yorker spoke as torrential rains hit the Kooyong courts, forcing postponement of the first two matches at the $1.5 million Australian Open.

McEnroe, who arrived in Melbourne on Monday with O'Neal, expressed his frustrations about being hounded by reporters.

"I really wish I could say I was harassed one more time. I would walk away from tennis. But I can't," McEnroe said. "I love playing tennis and these are things I have to deal with."

O'Neal, 31, said she can handle all this better than me. But people always want to start something. "The incident at the hotel was a prime example," McEnroe said. "I'm here to play tennis. But people don't give you a chance."

Road Race veterans exhibit durability, excellence

Durability and excellence are two adjectives that can well be applied to Amby Burfoot, Ray Crothers, Charlie Dugan, Charles Dyson, Johnny Kelley and Charlie Robbins when one traces their accomplishments in the Manchester Road Race.

The 48th edition will be offered Thanksgiving morning starting at 10 on the lower end of Main Street.

This contest comprises the real veterans in number of appearances in the holiday run as well as qualifiers on the prize list, which is reserved for the first 25 finishers. Each has won the race at least once and the group has been awarded 85 prizes for being in the top 25 since 1945.

All six are expected to be among the more than 5,400 men, women and children who will answer the start's gun.

THE TALL, BEARDED BURFOOT — now a 29-year-old East Coast editor for Runner's World — is the all-time individual winner here, with a record nine victories under his good-luck painter's cap. He has compiled the most imposing record of any runner in the history of the race, with 17 straight for a second time. Only in 1968 due to illness was he unable to start.

Dyson, 51, a product of Gilbert High in Winsted, will be lining up for his 34th Manchester race, the 17th straight for a second time. Only in 1968 due to illness was he unable to start.

Eighteen times Dyson has come from center to receive his award, matching Burfoot's record on the top 25 rung.

Dyson smelled the fruits of victory once. Back in 1956, during his senior year at the University of Connecticut, Dyson was involved in the closest finish in history, just nipping Alan Shafer of Hamilton College by one second.

One of the founders of the Hartford Track Club, Dugan was 22nd in his first Silk City run in 1951 as a schoolboy entry. Twenty years later, in 1971, he came in 23rd — the last time he was in the select circle. Six times he was among the top 10.

DUGAN WILL BE SHOOTING to match Burfoot's consecutive years in the top 25 this season. Starting with his first year in 1968 while representing Hartford Public High, Dugan has reeled off 17 straight prize-winning efforts, including a victory in 1980 which snatched the Irish Connection's first prize, 1965 thru 1968, with one year out (1951) while interning in Cleveland.

Twice Robbins was victorious, putting together back-to-back wins in the first two years after the race was revived in 1945 following an absence of 11 years. Robbins' last trip to the victory table among the first 25 finishers was in 1958, when he placed 11th.

Outside of Dugan and Burfoot, the other four veterans are now eligible and shooting for age category awards.

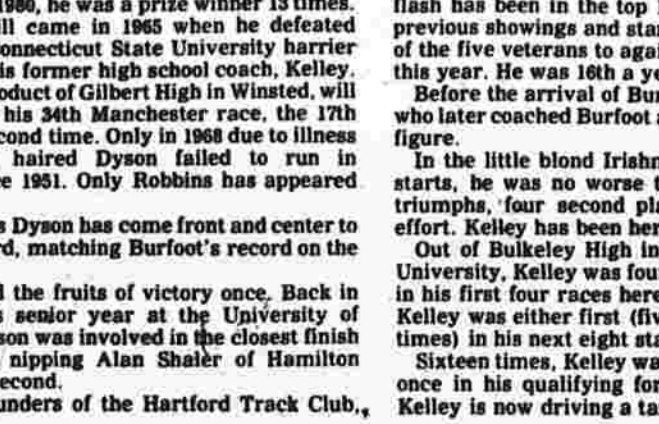

Kelley, Dyson, Crothers and Robbins have already won prizes in this age group for constants 40-49, 50-59 and 60 and over.

ROBBINS HOLDS THE BEST MARK for the 60-and-over crowd with a 28:30 clocking recorded in 1982. It's interesting to note that three years ago his finishing time was just 2 minutes and 20 seconds slower than his initial victory. This year will be his 40th.

These six veterans, despite the passing of time, still remain very much in the Road Race picture and have contributed much to make it the success that it is today.

Can Patriots win without star like the Jets did?

By Joel Sherman
United Press International

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The New York Jets showed they can win a big game without star running back Freeman McNeil. The New England Patriots must prove the same thing now that quarterback Steve Grogan is sidelined for the rest of the season.

McNeil, the AFC's second-leading rusher, was limited to 8 yards on five carries Sunday. But the Jets overcame his absence to move into first place in the AFC East with a 16-10 overtime victory against the Patriots.

Grogan, whose return ignited the Patriots to six straight victories, was hurt for the rest of the season late in the first quarter with a severely sprained left knee. Defensive end Bud Dupont rolled him on a running play.

Grogan will be sidelined for at least the next six weeks after doctors discovered Monday he suffered a fractured tibia in addition to the badly sprained left knee.

"He has torn medial collateral ligaments in the left knee," said Patriots spokesman Jim Greenidge. "It's a prior injury and he's had prior surgery on that knee."

Team physician Bert Zarina discovered the fractured tibia Monday evening during an examination at Massachusetts General Hospital. Special X-rays taken during the exam were to be viewed Tuesday to determine whether the fracture will require surgery.

"Right now, Dr. Zarina said he'll be out six weeks and possibly longer either way, surgery or no surgery," Greenidge said.

Without McNeil, the Jets are not the same team. In games that the fifth-year pro has missed totally, New York is 8-9, including 4-1 in the last three games when he has become the focus of the offense. The Patriots beat the Jets 20-13 on Oct. 20 when McNeil was sidelined with a cracked rib.

"Freeman is a key, but we have a lot of offensive talent," said Kurt Linn, whose 46-yard punt return positioned Pat Leahy's winning 22-yard field goal with 4:56 left in sudden death.

On Monday, Coach Joe Walton said McNeil is questionable for Thursday's Thanksgiving game against Detroit. He said McNeil would not practice and a decision on his status would be made just before the game.

Without McNeil, the Jets would again fall on backup running back Johnny Hector and quarterback Ken O'Brien.

Hector churned for 97 yards on 23 carries against the Patriots while O'Brien enjoyed his third straight best 300-yard passing game. He completed 20-of-33 passes for 311 yards and an 88-yard touchdown strike to Wesley Walker.

Tony Eason of the Patriots suddenly has an extra burden. Eason, who won the starting job from Grogan last season only to lose it this year, now finds himself in the middle of a playoff run.

"When Grogan went down it hit me hard," Patriots defensive back Raymond Clayborn said. "He brought us back with six wins. It will be hard to overcome."

Last season, Eason completed better than 48 percent of his passes for 20 touchdowns and only eight interceptions. But he played poorly in getting New England off to a 3-3 start this year. He was injured by a shoulder while the Patriots were trailing the Bills in the sixth week. Grogan came on to lead a comeback victory and New England did not lose again until Sunday.

The Patriots are 8-4, tied with Miami for second place in the AFC East and one game behind the Jets. New York, 8-5, has the best record in the conference and is off to its best start since 1968, the season it won the Super Bowl.

"This team had to win a game like this," Jets center Joe Fields said. "I don't think one guy on this team thought we would lose when they came back. It was just a matter of who would be the big play."
