Martin returns

Mary Martin is back on stage for the first time since being seriously injured in a car wreck in 1982 and son Larry Haggan is partly responsible. Martin opens in Dallas next month in "Legends!" with longtime friend Carol Channing. "The payoff was Larry said, 'I really think it's funny. I think it's touching and I think it's time you got back to work. I think you've been off long enough.'"

Yoko Ono, wife of the late John Lennon, left a note (upper left) for hundreds of fans who stopped at the Central Park Memorial to him and pay homage on the fifth anniversary of the former Beatle's death Sunday. The note reads in part, "Thank You For Thinking of John..." Fans left the other items of flowers and notes and cards.

Awe-struck alien

In "Enemy Mine" Louis Gossett Jr. plays a creature from the planet Dracon, an especially challenging role because it required spending up to seven hours in makeup and having a baby. "This Dracon becomes a female and gives birth to young during the course of the picture," Gossett says. "I had to be careful not to go too far when the Dracon turns female."

Rambomania

The popularity and pro-American message of the Rambo movies prompted the opening of a Houston nightclub with the waitresses wear fatigues and a 50-caliber machine gun is part of the decor. "Bunkers made of 50-pound sandbags and camouflage netting are also part of the club, called Rambos, which promises 'explosive entertainment.'"

New math approach intrigues Manchester students

By Susan Vaughn Herald Reporter

The term "math anxiety" is rapidly becoming foreign to students in the Manchester public schools. As the result of a new curriculum in the fifth grade at some town elementary schools — teachers say they are finding that most students look forward to mathematics lessons.

Herald photos by Sheaw

Students' enthusiasm for the subject with the dull reputation was evident during a visit to a fifth-grade class at Buckley School last week. In the class, pupils enthusiastically waved their hands in response to questions and asked when they would get the chance to do an exercise they liked.

Clark, a former head of the math department at the private Penbrook School in West Hartford, is one of the few experts on the method, which is called Developmentally-Based Mathematics. She wrote one of the basic textbooks on the teaching approach and is often asked to do training sessions and demonstrations such as she often does at Buckley School last week.

Geah Shannon, at left above, and Nancy Knauff, both sixth-grade students at Buckley School, make patterns on "geo boards" during a recent math lesson. At right, their math teacher for the day, Claire Clark, holds up a board as she tells students to "think about the pattern you're going to make."

school system's consultant for the new approach to math that has been introduced over the past five years. She was doing demonstration teaching last week at Buckley. The program calls for innovation from students to replace traditional "textbook" instruction. Officials say it has been a success thus far.

COMPUTING MATH in the new manner rarely involves putting answers on paper, Clark said. Instead, lessons stress involvement and activity using three-dimensional objects, graphs and visual images.

Clark never asks for a "right answer." Instead, she asks for several answers and writes them all on the board. Then she lets the students figure out the rule that fits the problem.

Clark said Connecticut is a leader in the new approach. California and Texas are mandating that the new system be used in their schools, she said. Changes in the way math is taught in those states will force changes in standardized national tests, she said.

Clark encourages non-traditional approaches to problem-solving. In one lesson, while students were computing the size of a large rectangle filled with many small squares, Clark walked around the room asking, "I wonder how many people can find short-cuts for adding it up?"

The program has changed the order of the way some math skills are taught. Under the old curriculum, students were sometimes introduced to skills before they were ready, Gidez said.

Now, "Most kids love math," she said. "We've got to make kids thinkers."

Results have been seen already from the new approach, Clark said. She said the scores in Connecticut students on national skills tests have gone up in problem solving, even though the scores in computational skills have stayed about the same. Chesterton said that results from the new math curriculum may show up in the fourth-grade statewide Mastery Tests taken for the first time this fall.

Holiday spirit grows at area tree farms

By George Lovvo Herald Reporter

COVENTRY — Robert Viny worked 40 hours last week at Verplanck Farm in Coventry — and that was the easy part. On Saturday and Sunday, he labored from sunrise to sunset, cutting and tagging Christmas trees at his Hickory Ridge Tree Farm on South River Road. But Viny saw nothing to complain about.

HICKORY RIDGE, which has sold holiday trees since 1965, has more than 60,000 trees spread over 52 acres, though not all of them are ready to be cut this year. The trees are cut during the weekend and then leached against wooden railings for customers to examine. Prices range from $15 to $30, depending on the size and type of tree.

"We like it," said Rachel Stanley. "We always enjoy seeing people look happy as they walk around." Stanley said would-be customers, who have come from as far away as North Branford, Mass., have been calling daily asking for directions.

After Thanksgiving, the harvesting begins. Viny said about 10 people — including his wife, children, grandson and neighbors — help cut the trees and haul them with a tractor and cart to an area next to his home. There, they are tagged and put in rows for the customers.

After a tree is chosen at Hickory Ridge, it can be put through a baler, which pulls the tree unharmed through a funnel-like opening where string is wound around the branches.

There are several advantages of a baled tree, Viny said. "It's easier to get in the car, and into the house. But it's also easier to store and put up while it's bound."

Town effort on hiring isn't enough

A week ago today, Manchester General Manager Robert Weiss repeated previous claims that minority hiring in the police department is considered a top priority by the town administration.

Weiss wrote in a letter to the Manchester Intercultural Council that the process currently used to attract and evaluate police officers is "a valuable means of selecting qualified persons to provide Manchester citizens with the best possible service." In his letter, reprinted on this page, Weiss also assured the council that the town constantly reviews its hiring practices to ensure that they are fair.

Despite these assertions, the fact remains that Manchester's police force, which employs almost 60 regular patrol officers, does not include one black, Hispanic, Asian or Indian.

Indeed, in its entire work force of 448, the town employs only seven people who are members of racial minority groups. That translates to about 1 1/2 percent of the work force — less than half of the percentage of Manchester residents who are minority-group members.

Since the adoption of its advisory affirmative action plan almost 10 years ago, the town certainly has made an effort to attract minority candidates for jobs. But the plan called for the hiring of 25 minority workers by 1984, and the fact that Manchester has been less than one-third successful at achieving its goal by the end of 1985 must be taken to mean that the efforts have not been sufficient.

Clearly, the Intercultural Council and others who question the town's record are correct to call for a new evaluation of the process.

Such an evaluation should be undertaken immediately and openly. It should involve citizens, outside consultants, members of the Board of Directors, the Human Relations Commission and the town officials responsible for personnel matters. Its first task should be to closely scrutinize the methods of selecting those who are to become police officers.

Surely, such an analysis would bring changes.

As things stand, both the police department and the town as a whole suffer from a negative image in some quarters where racial matters are concerned.

Interviews conducted by the Manchester Herald in 1983 confirmed that the refusal to accept Community Development block grants from the federal government, repeated complaints of racism filed against police officers after searches and other incidents, and the 1980 bombing of a black family's house have made the town appear unfriendly to minority citizens. Neither the lack of a viable connection between these things nor the unfair taint the perception places upon most Manchester residents and police officers lessens its impact.

Critics may be wrong to say that the town has given only lip service to affirmative action. But the figures as they stand today do not support assertions by Weiss and other officials that Manchester has done all it can to rectify the effect of the long-term discrimination in employment that still haunts the United States as a whole.

Currently, the HRC is in the process of rewriting the 1976 affirmative action plan. But a new document alone will not be enough, because it will not have the power to force revisions in the police department or anywhere else.

If Manchester is to succeed in the future, where it has failed in the past, a more substantial commitment is needed.

A big push to increase voter registration

By Arnold Sawislak

WASHINGTON — If you read the comic strips, you will recall that most of them referred in some way to the problem of world hunger on Thanksgiving Day. Even strips that didn't interrupt their story lines inserted some sort of reference to the issue.

Critics might say that the Thanksgiving outpouring of hunger messages led by "Peanuts" creator Charles Schulz and "Doonesbury's" Garry Trudeau put food in no one's mouth. True, but it was an impressive demonstration of how, as with the Band Aid, Live Aid and Farm Aid fund-raising efforts earlier this year, specialized talent and high-powered promotion techniques can be put to the service of a good cause.

A few days before Thanksgiving, an unofficial group called the Commission on National Elections issued a report with recommendations for increasing voter turnout in the United States, which is among the lowest in the world. Among the proposals was one that called for establishment of a National Registration Day to be held four to six weeks before the 1988 presidential election.

THE COMMISSION SAID its investigations indicated that 85 percent to 90 percent of registered voters actually cast ballots on Election Day. Ergo, it concluded that the key to increasing voter turnout is increasing voter registration. Commission co-chairman Melvin Laird said it might be possible to add 15 percent to 20 percent to the 1984 voter turnout, which was a miserable 53 percent of the nation's voting age population.

Its recommendation that Congress and the president proclaim a special day to encourage voter registration was included in a set of proposals that urged states to use a number of other devices to make registration easier. But some of these, such as postcard or Election Day registration, are controversial and none of them are national in scope.

The National Registration Day idea appears to be a good one, but it will need more than the mere proclamation of the date to make it work. After all, Congress proclaims hundreds of special days, weeks and months every year to celebrate everything from patriotism to potatoes and most people remain blissfully unaware of their existence.

What National Registration Day will need is some super-promotion, such as a 24-hour television with one of those gigantic digital counters rolling up numbers or a national competition, perhaps a Registration Olympics, among cities or states for the most new registrations.

THE ADVERTISING COULD BE a project for the Advertising Council, the promotion job for the best and biggest in public relations. The newspapers, the broadcasters, the billboard industry, the direct mail people all could play a role in talking up National Registration Day. Professional sports and show business could encourage their superstars to speak out.

In addition, there could be a role in this for the rock 'n' roll community as there was in the African food crisis.

Young people, 18 to 25, are the lowest-voting age group, and if they can be reached with a positive registration message, perhaps through music videos or rock concerts to which a registration card is the price of admission, some real progress might be made toward creating the voting habit in a new generation of citizens.

If anyone thinks these suggestions trivialize a serious problem, let's hear some better ideas.

How officers are selected

Here is the text of the Dec. 2 letter from General Manager Robert B. Weiss to Joan O'Loughlin and Thomas L. Stringfellow, co-chairmen of the Manchester Intercultural Council:

A recent letter from the Intercultural Council raised significant questions regarding the Town of Manchester's selection process for police officers. The review of selection processes is an ongoing and important activity within the town. The process for police officers, in particular, has been revised several times in the past few years, and we anticipate that changes will continue to be made as we strive to develop the most effective and fairest process possible. As part of the ongoing efforts to improve the process, the town employed a consultant in 1984 to conduct a formal job analysis of the police officer position. This identified the range of tasks performed by police officers in Manchester, and detailed the knowledge, skills, and abilities which would be required at time of hire and those which could be attained through normal training. The various parts of the town's selection process are based on this job analysis, and are related to the types of knowledge, skill and ability identified as necessary for entry-level police officers. All candidates for police officer positions receive a packet of information describing the selection process, including the minimum requirements, physical requirements, and testing procedures. They receive a list of the activities in the agility test and are given time to prepare for it. The background investigation process is described, and candidates are invited to raise questions about the process or selection criteria.

The agility test consists of a series of events designed to determine if an applicant has the minimum strength and agility needed to perform the duties of a police officer. It is scored on a pass-fail basis. The written test used was developed by a national consulting firm and has been used and shown to be valid throughout the country. It measures basic reading comprehension and writing skills, which have been identified as fundamental skills needed for success in law enforcement training and effective job performance. In the oral examination, candidates are rated by a panel of police personnel from other communities on a standardized set of questions and activities that have been specifically related to entry-level police work. A consultant (not connected to police organizations) monitors the process.

During the background investigation, candidates' criminal records, driving records, work and educational records, military records, and other relevant information are checked. A polygraph may be used as part of this process. The medical examination is used to make sure that candidates meet vision and hearing requirements and are free of any disease or abnormality that would interfere with the performance of the duties of a police officer. At present, no psychological testing of candidates is done.

The police selection process is the result of continuing efforts. We believe that it is a valuable means of selecting qualified persons to provide Manchester citizens with the best possible police service. At the same time, we recognize that no process is perfect and we again are reviewing procedures. Minority hiring for the Police Department continues to be a high priority goal for the town.

Japanese mob sends men to expand in U.S.

WASHINGTON — Some unwelcome Japanese visitors are reportedly entering the United States, and they're not here to steal high-tech secrets. They are members of the Yakuza, the Japanese underworld gangs that have preyed on their own people for centuries and now aim to expand their operations to this country.

In a sharp warning to its field offices, the Immigration and Naturalization Service says Yakuza members are entering the United States "to invest, launder (money) and set up new operations." The Yakuza has plenty of money to invest and launder. Japanese police estimate the underworld organization's annual take at more than $5 billion, from prostitution, pornography and extortion.

Our associate Donald Goldberg has obtained a copy of the Immigration Service's "strategic assessment," which tells inspectors how to spot possible Yakuza members at ports of entry. Once identified, they can be put under surveillance — or sent packing if they lied about criminal records on their entry forms.

Here's what Immigration officials have been told to look for as a way to identify a possible member of the Japanese mob:

- Fingers: The Yakuza custom of cutting off a fingertip dates to the old warrior days when the sniplet was offered to the gang leader as apology for a failed assignment. The Immigration Service estimates that nearly half of all present-day Yakuza members "have severed portions of one or more fingers." It does add this cautionary note, however: "Normally, if an individual is missing a portion or complete middle finger, index finger or thumb, it is likely the result of an accident or surgical operation, and cannot be indicative that the individual is a Yakuza."
- Tattoos: Six or seven out of every 10 Yakuza gangsters are believed to have some sort of tattoo, ranging from a small mark under the eyebrow to designs covering the entire body. Tattoos are considered a sign of strength, because of the discomfort involved in the procedure.

"The typical Yakuza encountered entering the United States bears tattooing covering the entire torso from the waist area over the shoulders and extending down the front torso to the breastbone and midway down the upper arms," the immigration assessment states. "The configuration of the tattooing on the chest area allows the individual to wear open-neck shirts without exposing the tattooing."

- Hair style: The Yakuza traditionally affected either a shaved head or a short, flat-top "Parris Island" crewcut. "Recently, they have overwhelmingly adopted a hair style known in Japan as a 'punch perm,' which is a short, curly, Afro-style permanent," the report says. But it warns that many older Yakuza, and especially the higher-ups, have normal hair styles, making them hard to distinguish from businessmen or tourists.
- Dress: "Many of the upper-echelon Yakuza tend to display their affluence by wearing expensive jewelry and watches, often sporting two or three expensive rings, gold chains and pendants, and gold watches, which retail in Japan for in excess of $10,000."
- Behavior: "Yakuza often walk with authority or strut-swagger, in the same manner as a police officer, wrestler or other individual with a sense of physical prowess or self-assurance. Many Yakuza, occasionally even upper-echelon members, will display an attitude of arrogance or defiance."

Drugbusters' lament

The Coast Guard is bearing a heavy load of the South Florida war on drug traffickers, but officials in Miami are quietly complaining that the drug war leaves them no time or resources for the Coast Guard's other responsibilities. The result is that the Coast Guard has had to terminate these traditional functions, which include anti-pollution enforcement, merchant marine oversight and cruise-ship safety inspections.

Watch on the Pentagon

Will somebody please get the Air Force brass a library card? They've advertised for someone to research and write a book-length manuscript they've already picked the title for: "U.S. Army Air Forces and Intelligence in World War II." It will delve into the strategy, planning and operations of the service's intelligence form 1941 to 1945. It's not yet known how much the book will cost — or how it will differ from the dozens of books that have already been written on the subject.

Mini-editorial

Both the news media and public officials have been remiss in their response to the recent outrageous attacks on Arab-American discrimination groups. News stories of bombings and arson haven't received the prominent display they deserve, and public figures who normally voice their opinions on anything have remained strangely silent. It's a terrible way to handle a point proved, but Arab-Americans' claim of racial prejudice seems to have been confirmed. We're confident the FBI, at least, is taking these cowardly acts seriously, and will soon bring the skulking perpetrators to book.

Connecticut In Brief

Man charged with arson

SALISBURY — A Salisbury man was arrested Saturday and charged with starting an arson fire last summer that destroyed the picturesque community's historic Town Hall, state police said.

Roy Duntz, 35, was charged with first-degree arson and held in lieu of $100,000 bond pending an appearance Monday in Torrington Superior Court.

Salisbury residents had complained about lack of action in the case and were demanding an arrest be made.

The name of a possible suspect had been circulated around town after the Aug. 5 fire that leveled the 225-year-old Greek revival building.

Yale to announce new head

NEW HAVEN — Yale University will announce a successor Tuesday to A. Bartlett Giamatti, who is stepping down in July after eight years as president of the Ivy League school, the university said today.

The Yale Corporation search committee initially had about 430 potential candidates and whittled that number down to about 20 and by last week had reduced the number to a few finalists. Although Yale spokesman Walter D. Littell declined to comment on either the search or the successful candidates, the New Haven Register reported last week that biologist Marie F. Singer was among the finalists.

Singer, 54, had been a member of the search committee, but reportedly withdrew from the group when she became a finalist. She heads the biochemistry laboratory of the National Cancer Institute in Bethesda, Md., where she supervises a staff of about 100.

Others named in news reports to have been among the finalists were Hanna H. Gray, president of the University of Chicago; Vartan Gregorian, president of the New York Public Library; and Benno C. Schmidt Jr., dean of Columbia University Law School.

Gray served as Yale's acting president prior to Giamatti's appointment.

Lotto contest has no winner

NEWINGTON — State lottery officials said Saturday there was no winner in this week's Lotto contest, bringing next week's prize pool to approximately $4 million.

Lottery officials said there were 122 second-prize winners, each worth $1,300 and 5,619 third-prize winners, each worth $53. There were 83,340 fourth-prize winners each worth $3.

The winning Lotto number drawn Friday night was 16, 17, 18, 19, 33, 34.

Barge sinks into Sound

NEW LONDON — For the second time in two weeks, a barge has sunk to the bottom of the Long Island Sound, Coast Guard officials said.

Two men were rescued after abandoning the barge that sank Sunday afternoon. Coast Guard officials said, Petty Officer James Sutton of the Coast Guard said Milt Larson and Peter Powers were picked up by the crew of a tug boat that had been towing the barge. The tug was reported sinking at about 12:30 p.m. Sunday, Sutton said.

Both men were in the water for about 15 minutes without protection from the cold, Sutton said. The two were taken to the Lawrence & Memorial Hospitals in New London. Powers was treated and released and Larson was listed in satisfactory condition, according to a hospital spokesman.

Sutton said no reason for the sinking was known and that the water was calm when the barge sank. It was resting in water 45 feet deep and is not considered a hazard to the environment or any marine traffic in the area, Sutton said.

Weicker gives his final 'no' to party

LOWELL WEICKER happy in the Senate

GREENWICH (AP) — Saying a run for governor in 1986 would rob him of any time with his family and hamper his efforts on behalf of human, civil and constitutional rights, Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn., formally bowed out of the race in a letter to the party.

"Ten times in 23 years I've said yes to those who have urged me to run for public office, and on 10 elections days you my neighbors in Connecticut have said yes to those candidacies," Weicker said in a statement prepared for television and radio broadcast Sunday.

"This morning for a change, I'm saying no — no once and for all to the generous suggestions of those who want me to run for governor."

He also said he might not seek re-election to the Senate in 1988.

"The odds are that probably it will be my time to step down — that's a 50-50 shot," he said.

Weicker has consistently said he would support the party's gubernatorial nomination despite efforts by GOP State Chairman Thomas D'Amore to convince him otherwise.

Sunday, he assembled his wife Claudia, six of his seven sons, and a granddaughter "since they are much of the reason for my chat today," he said.

Aftermath in Derby

Victims named, but blast cause is elusive

By Lynn Monahan
The Associated Press

DERBY — Three days after an explosion that killed six and destroyed the popular River Restaurant, the victims have been identified, but experts continue to search for the cause of the blast.

A turn-of-the-century gas line located near a restaurant that exploded Friday checked out satisfactorily on Dec. 2, but would not hold pressure during tests on Sunday.

The explosion that killed six people Friday left some now we are backing it up, copying the pipe, using pressure testing with air to find the leak," said Jacqueline Harris, a spokeswoman.

The explosion that killed six people Friday left some now we are backing it up, copying the pipe, using pressure testing with air to find the leak," said Jacqueline Harris, a spokeswoman.

"We have discovered there was a leak in the pipe, now we are backing it up, copying the pipe, using pressure testing with air to find the leak," said Jacqueline Harris, a spokeswoman.

"Everybody's scared," said William Dinopoulos, manager of the Derby Pizza House across the street from where two large piles of rubble mark the remains of the River Restaurant. "We live in this area and maybe someday something happen to us."

ON SUNDAY NIGHT, medical examiners identified the dead in Thomas Nedavaska, 31, a restaurant cook from Shelton; Albert Paolozzi, 60, and Mabel Paolozzi, 58, a couple from Stratford; Bernice Shortell, 59, and Dorothy Shortell, 21, who are mother and daughter of Ansonia; and Connie Fogozelski, 57, sister of restaurant owner Alphonse Ippolito of Derby. Ippolito was discharged from Griffin Hospital in Derby on Sunday. He sustained scratches and bruises in the explosion.

Medical examiners used dental records to identify the bodies pulled from the rubble of the four-story building that collapsed from the explosion, officials said.

Avedon show to tour nation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A major exhibition of photographs by Richard Avedon of the American West opens a nationwide tour Dec. 7 at the Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C.

The exhibition of 120 portraits is a chronicle of the men and women of the West who performed the drudgery work usually overlooked by historians.

"I thought you would like to see Connecticut's official version of the Brady Bunch."

He said time with his family has been "severely abridged" during the 15 years he's served in the Senate, and "that goes with the turf and I accept it."

"What I cannot accept, however, would be no time at all with my family, which is exactly what would happen were I to be a sitting U.S. senator running a campaign for governor of Connecticut. I'm proud of my children, but they are not political props and I've already misused them too much."

Connecticut's senior U.S. senator said his second reason for not running relates to what he called "the prevailing rights climate in Washington."

"By rights, I'm referring to constitutional, civil and human rights. To paraphrase a movie, frankly, no one gives a damn. Well, I do."

"I fought some pretty lonely battles to make certain that no one gives the store away in terms of American conscience, integrity and opportunity," he said. "That is exactly what might happen were I to be a sitting U.S. senator running a campaign for governor of Connecticut."

Four others vying for the nomination are Deputy House Majority Leader Julie D. Belaga of Westport; and former state Sens. Richard C. Borzuto of Watertown, Gerald Labriola of Naugatuck and Romeo G. Petroni of Ridgefield.

Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill said Friday that Weicker's plans were "good news for all of us." He said Weicker was an effective voice for Connecticut in the Senate.

Jeff Kotkin, a utility spokesman, said "there is something in that (3-inch) line causing it to lose pressure, but we don't know where or how many breaks there are."

PHILIP ASHTON, senior vice president and general manager of Northeast Utilities gas group, said the utility investigated complaints twice Friday of gas smells in the area, but neither time could they detect gas. One of the complaints was made by a construction crew that disturbed an abandoned gas line that may have held a remnant of gas, Ashton said.

John Cwaneki, who lives about a block away from the River Restaurant, said everybody "feels funny" in their homes — "that something might happen to them."

"They're all talking," Cwaneki said. "There was this smell throughout this part of town for a week or so. Gas, you don't get over that in a day or two."

Said William Kozak, who heard the blast from his home in Shelton a mile away, "I think the way people are feeling (is) it shouldn't have happened."

"The restaurant owner Alphonse Ippolito) called and called and they said it was safe. So how, if you call the gas company and they tell you it's safe, how can you feel unsafe?"

But Deputy Fire Chief James Butler said that "everyone has told us there's no reason for concern. Our utilities around here are very safe."

Butler said people have more reason to be concerned about their own carelessness — the main cause of fires — than they do from a gas main leak.

Gas explosions are not common, he said.

"In 10 years that I've been here, this is only the second one with any fatalities," he said. The other, he was a few years ago in Hamden involving several deaths.

O'Neill, Republicans continue one-upmanship

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — This week, Gov. William A. O'Neill is expected to announce his plan to take over the operations of the Department of Motor Vehicles.

Both sides want to be in the best position politically for the 1986 elections, when both the governor's office and control of the legislature will be up for grabs.

O'Neill, never big on laying his cards on the table before he has to, has been unusually forthcoming in this year to let the public — the voters — know what he has in mind. Not only does he have to worry about the Republicans, he's also facing a challenge from former Congressman Toby Moffett for his own party's gubernatorial nomination next year.

REPUBLICANS ARE just as eager to keep their grip on both houses of the legislature. They have already proposed an overhaul of the DMV, long a target of criticism from a public tired of long lines and overworked and sometimes-rude state employees.

FOR EXAMPLE: Both sides are talking about significant increases in spending for education, particularly for higher teacher salaries.

O'Neill has outlined a $183 million housing program. The Republicans have proposed sweeping changes in state insurance laws, even raising the possibility that the insurance commissioner would have to approve future premium increases.

It's expected that Republicans will favor the idea of some modest modification of it.

State agencies say they'll need $333.2 million more in 1986-87 than they did this year just to continue offering the same level of services.

Wells Fargo trial may challenge law

HARTFORD (AP) — The continuing imprisonment of 10 alleged members of a clandestine Puerto Rican independence group has set the stage for what legal experts say may be the strongest challenge to the year-old federal Bail Reform Act.

The measure, approved as part of a Reagan administration anti-crime package in October 1984, allows federal judges to jail defendants without bond before trial if the suspects are deemed threats to the community or present high risks of fleeing jurisdiction.

But defense attorneys for nine of the defendants who have been held in jail are appealing to the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, arguing that the new law is unconstitutional and threatens to bring down the federal government.

"It is Draconian, the kind of thing I didn't believe was possible in this country," said Jon L. Schoenborn, one of the defense attorneys. "It only attests to the sorry state of civil liberties in this country."

Prosecutors say the new law is a necessary tool to safeguard society and ensure that defendants will stand trial.

"It is utilized, but not overutilized," James K. Knapp, a deputy assistant attorney general in the Justice Department's Criminal Division in Washington, D.C., told The Hartford Courant in an interview.

THE LOS MACHETEROS case in U.S. District Court in Hartford has focused attention on the Bail Reform Act because of the length of pre-trial imprisonment the defendants face.

They were arrested four months ago on racketeering charges. The defendants, accused of helping Wells Fargo security guard Victor M. Gerena rob the company's West Hartford terminal of $7 million in 1983, or of being accessories after the crime.

Authorities say the suspects are members of Los Macheteros, a terrorist group seeking independence for Puerto Rico, and that Gerena is a member now hiding in Cuba.

Oven death forces examination of law

By Arthur Frederick
United Press International

AUGUSTA, Maine — The case of a young girl burned to death in an electric oven has lawmakers scrambling to alter a law requiring judges and caseworkers to try to reunite children with their families.

State Sen. William Diamond said he knows of several cases in which children have been returned to their families only to be beaten or sexually assaulted.

Further, he said a state law passed in 1980 makes it virtually impossible to keep children away from their families, even though the potential for abuse exists.

Diamond said his committee on Judiciary and Corrections is looking at the law and may recommend changes to the Legislature when it convenes in January.

"The law says that, first and foremost, the state has to try to reunite, to get the child back with the parents," said Diamond, a Democrat from Windham. "A judge is often compelled to send the child back, even when that is not in the child's best interest."

Human Services Commissioner Michael Pettit cited one case in which a young child found her LSD along with his mother. He ate the tablets and suffered serious hallucinations for several days, but was ultimately reunited with his mother, even though she was a known drug abuser.

Another case involved a child who was burned to death in an oven last year, and Palmer's then-boyfriend, John Lane, was convicted of murder.

Palmer said she had focused attention on the case because of the length of time it took to get the child back with her parents. There is nothing more serious, Pettit said. "But we have problems with the existing law. It is too ironclad."

Administrators warned on budget hikes

By Alex Girelli
Herald Reporter

Manchester Budget Officer Robert Huestis has urged department heads to take a conservative approach to budgeting for the fiscal year that begins July 1.

Manchester Budget Officer Robert Huestis has urged department heads to take a conservative approach to budgeting for the fiscal year that begins July 1. In a message to department heads on budget preparations, Huestis said increases for contracts and materials should be kept to a maximum of 3 percent over this year's appropriation.

Department and division heads are expected to be fiscally conservative in their budget preparation processes to plan for a maintenance of current levels of service or activity, and to consider each proposed expenditure in terms of necessity to such a maintenance effort," Huestis wrote.

He advised department heads to follow that procedure "even if you must propose a reduction in the current level of service or activity."

NFL roundup

Two AFC divisions have logjams at top

By Joel Sherman
United Press International

Like the tiebreaker formula that sorts out playoff teams after the NFL regular season ends, the Raiders and Broncos have a penchant for needing more than the traditional time period to settle the contest.

For their third straight meeting, the Broncos and Raiders went to overtime. For the second time this season, the foot of Chris Bahr brought sudden death to Denver.

Bahr hit a 22-yard field goal with 10:09 left in sudden death Sunday to give the Raiders a 17-14 decision over the Broncos. Bahr connected on a 23-yard field goal to defeat Denver 31-28 in overtime.

Howie Long stripped Denver quarterback John Elway of the ball, and the Raiders' Greg Townsend recovered to set up Bahr's winning kick.

It was the fifth straight game between the two to be decided by three points or less.

The victory improved the likelihood the Raiders will not need a tiebreaker to decide their playoff fate. A Los Angeles triumph or Broncos loss would give the Raiders the AFC West title.

On Sunday, the Jets, Dolphins and Patriots all won to maintain their logjam tie atop the AFC East.

At Orchard Park, N.Y., Ken O'Brien threw three touchdown passes, including a team record 96-yarder to Wesley Walker, to ignite the Jets to a 27-7 victory over the Buffalo Bills.

Minutes after O'Brien fired a scoring pass to tight end Mickey Shuler, O'Brien found a streaking Walker at midfield. Walker then easily outraced his pursuers to break the Jets' record for longest pass play of 91 yards between Joe Namath and Rich Caster in 1973.

They were backed up just pretty tight. Jets coach Joe Walton said, "I thought it was the right time and the right situation to try for the long gain."

At Green Bay, Wis., Dan Marino passed for 345 yards and five touchdowns, two coming in the final minutes, to rally the Dolphins to stop the AFC East victory, a 24-24 decision over the Green Bay Packers.

They played us very hard," Marino said. "We had the big plays at the end of the game when we needed them."

At Foxboro, Mass., Tony Eason threw for one score and ran for another while Craig James rushed for 115 yards to spark New England past Detroit 23-6.

The Jets, Patriots and Dolphins are all 10-4. New England is at Miami next Monday night.

I'm glad they (Miami) won because I don't want to play any team next week that's second-best," James said. "It was tough to keep our minds off Miami."

The Central-leading Bengals and Browns are 7-7. In Seattle, Dave Krieg threw for 288 yards and four TDs to enable the Seahawks, 8-6, to keep an outside shot at the playoffs while dropping Cleveland from first place with a 23 triumph.

At Cincinnati, Boomer Eason fired three TD passes and James Booker scored on runs of 27 and 18 yards to ignite the Bengals to a 50-24 romp over the Cardinals.

At St. Louis, Stump Mitchell rushed for 158 yards and scored three times to enable the Cardinals to snap a four-game losing streak. Only 29,257 watched the Cardinals, 5-9, win for the second time in the last 10 weeks.

At Green Bay, Wis., Dan Marino passed for 345 yards and five touchdowns, two coming in the final minutes, to rally the Dolphins to stop the AFC East victory, a 24-24 decision over the Green Bay Packers.

New York's Joe Morris (20) heads for one of his two first-half touchdowns against Houston on Sunday. Morris scored three times and went over the 1,000-yard mark in Giants' 35-14 victory.

HOUSTON — Joe Morris has given the New York Giants two things they have lacked for many years: a 1,000-yard rusher, and a chance to win the NFC East Division championship.

Morris raised his season rushing total to 1,054 yards Sunday against the Houston Oilers, joining Tom Johnson in 1970 and 1972 as the only Giants running back to reach that plateau.

Morris also scored three touchdowns as the Giants powered past Houston, 35-14, to set up a battle against Dallas next Sunday for first place in the NFC East.

With the victory, its first over an AFC Central Division team this season, New York raised its record to 9-5 and moved into a first-place tie with Dallas, which lost to Cincinnati 16-6.

A New York victory over Dallas next week would assure the Giants their first division title since 1972.

The last time New York had a 1,000-yard rusher in a season was 1972, when Johnson finished with 1,182. Morris can break that standard with 129 yards in his final two games.

"We've seen a lot of 1,000-yard rushers come up against us, but it sure feels good to have one of our own," said Giants linebacker Lawrence Taylor.

Morris, who gained 129 yards and scored three times to give him a league-leading 17 for the season, gave only a brief statement after the game, acknowledging the milestone by thanking his coaches and offensive line.

Morris also drew praise from the Oilers as he raised his record to 9-5 and moved into a first-place tie with Dallas, which lost to Cincinnati 16-6.

James, Patriots dream on

By Frederick Waterman
United Press International

FOXBORO, Mass. — Craig James achieved the dream he never had and the New England Patriots defense got the redemption it sought while the Detroit Lions failed yet another road test.

James ran for 115 yards to surpass the 1,000-yard mark and the Patriots shut down the Lions' struggling offense to record a 23-6 triumph Sunday. The loss was Detroit's seventh straight away from home and further dimmed its playoff hopes.

"I never dreamed I would play in the NFL, never mind rush for 1,000 yards," said James, who had 23 carries in becoming the fourth Patriot runner to reach four figures.

"I had before the season I'd like to rush for 1,000 yards. I didn't mean it as a selfish or individual goal, but rather as a team thing. I knew that if I could run for 1,000 yards it would mean the team was doing well," he said.

The victory was New England's eighth in its first nine games and preserves its share of first place in the AFC East. It also makes next Monday's game in Miami the crucial one of the season.

"I'm glad they won because I don't want to play any team next week that's second-best," said a confident James after learning of Miami's victory over Green Bay.

Tony Eason ran 16 yards for one score Sunday and passed 6 yards to Derrick Ramsey for a second touchdown. Tony Franklin added field goals of 30, 50 and 25 yards for New England.

Detroit's offensive output consisted of Eddie Murray's field goals from 26 and 37 yards.

After coach Darrell Rogers watched his team fall to 7-7, he commented, "We didn't execute offensively well enough to be a good football team. And the Patriots defense had a good day. The pass routes were exceptional well."

After surrendering 31 points the previous week in Indianapolis, the Patriots defense had a point to prove, as safety Fred Marion.

"It was time for the defense to redeem itself. We said we wouldn't let them run much and we didn't," he explained. "We stopped their run and took away their game plan."

The Lions' offense came into the game ranked 28th and last in the NFL. Their status isn't likely to change after gaining only 102 yards running, 139 passing and not managing a touchdown.

"It was hard to find the lanes and it always seemed like there was someone on the receivers' back," said Lions quarterback Eric Hipple. "I didn't think we would have that much trouble, but they were tight on us."

Hipple was knocked out of the game in the fourth quarter due to a sprained left knee.

New England never trailed, taking a 7-0 lead on Eason's first-quarter run, an 18-0 advantage at the half.

Conn enjoys laughter in win over BU Terriers

By Len Auster

STORRS — It was headed toward an honest-to-goodness full-fledged blowout but turned out to be only a laughter as the University of Connecticut outgunned Boston University, 89-76, in an up-and-down, spectator's delight before a crowd of 3,916 at the Field House Saturday night.

"I think we played 28 to 29 very good basketball minutes," said Husky coach Don Perno, who experienced a few anxious moments. He saw his Huskies, 4-0 and off to their best start since 1981-82, come back before the game.

BU came back to make it a seven-point game.

The Huskies had a 56-31 lead with 17:24 to go before BU cut it to 81-74 with 2 1/2 minutes left. It free throws from Earl Kelley, Phil Gamble, who had a big defensive rebound, and Eddie Williams down the stretch allowed their head coach to breathe easier.

"BU didn't shoot well (28.0 percent) the first half so you know they're going to start to stick it," Perno viewed the Terriers' comeback in part. "(and) we kind of let them off the hook. They kind of came back and then losing it," he explained the little anxiety that crept through the crowd.

"No one plays the full 40 minutes game. And we've had a history of getting up and then losing it," he explained the little anxiety that crept through the crowd.

"I think toward the end we got a little tired," cited UConn small forward Eddie Williams, who pumped in a career-high 23 points. Williams' previous best was 20 against Syracuse in 1984. The 24-year-old Williams was 9-for-10 from the field, making him a sizzling 17-for-20 his last two outings. Williams had 11 of his total in the first seven-and-a-half minutes when UConn raced to a 17-7 lead. And he netted 5 more of his total at the outset of the second half. "Running back and forth for 40 minutes takes its toll," he continued.

Was he nervous when the Terriers, 3-1, cut the lead to seven? "No, because we just came from an intense game up at UMass. The nervousness is gone. Plus for Earl, Tim (Coles) and myself the previous season, Kelley, who was off in his shooting (4-for-14), nevertheless orchestrated the Husky attack with the ball evenly distributed.

The first half was some of UConn's best basketball of the young season. Kelley, who was off in his shooting (4-for-14), nevertheless orchestrated the Husky attack with the ball evenly distributed.

New lawsuits seek to block town mall

By John F. Kirch Herald Reporter

Three new lawsuits have been filed to block construction of the 750,000-square-foot Buckland Hills mall planned in northwestern Manchester. The Hartman Tobacco Co. and developers of the rival Winchester Mall filed one lawsuit against the Planning and Zoning Commission and the Buckland Hills developers Monday, charging that the PZC violated zoning regulations by approving final site plans for the mall without holding a public hearing.

Hartman filed a second lawsuit against the PZC charging that it granted the Buckland Hills developers a wetlands permit that would destroy, damage or pollute the wetlands, watercourses and environment in the area.

The third suit was brought by attorney Bruce Beck on behalf of the Manchester Environmental Coalition and charged that the PZC should have held a public hearing to consider the effect the wetlands permit would have on the area.

The first suit was filed by attorney Dominic J. Squatrito on behalf of Hartman and Bronson and Hutensky of Bloomfield, one of the Winchester developers. It lists as defendants the town, the PZC, Manchester 1-44 Associates, the Homart Development Co. of Chicago and Rapid American Corp. of New York. 1-44 Associates and Homart are partners in the development project. Rapid American owns the land between Buckland and Slater Streets on which the mall would be built.

"No, a public hearing is not required," Pellegrini said. He also said the access roads the developers plan to construct to the north and south of the mall would become public roadways and are not in violation of zoning regulations.

The PZC approved the final site plans for Buckland Hills Nov. 18. The plan allows the developers to build the mall on about 130 acres off Buckland Street in a Comprehensive Urban Development zone, which requires both commercial and residential development. The plans show 516 housing units to be built around the mall, including 54 single-family houses, 50 two-family housing units and 412 multi-family housing units.

The wetlands permit granted Nov. 18 allows the Buckland Hills developers to build an access road in the southwestern part of the site across a small wetlands area and to drain water into wetlands to the northeast.

The PZC predicted more arrests in wake of gambling raids

By George Lovins Herald Reporter

On Saturday afternoon, police in Farmington, Hartford and Hebron were waiting for their counterparts in Manchester to give the signal. Then, at 4:30, six officers swept down on two men who had come out of the Art Upholstering Co. on Forest Street, touching off simultaneous raids at an apartment on Birch St. and locations in the three other towns.

The effort resulted in the disruption of what police are calling one of the largest gambling operations in state history.

Police charged John "The Greek" Dadiskos, 53, who lives at 28 Spruce St., with 388 counts related to illegal gambling. They said Dadiskos, who had a record of gambling arrests, headed an operation that brought in at least $40 million a year.

Also arrested were Dadiskos's daughter, the owner of the upholstery company and a Hartford man whom police said ran a gambling operation for Dadiskos in Hartford. The investigation is continuing and more arrests are likely, according to Manchester police detective Russell Holyfield.

He also said "the trade relationship cannot move independently of progress in other elements of the bilateral relationship."

The policy, which in effect makes Moscow a second-rate trading partner, is a source of embarrassment for the Soviet Union and of controversy in Washington.

Earlier Monday, Giffen said the United States should give the Soviet Union MFN trading status and repeal the Jackson-Vanik amendment that links trade to emigration policies.

Giffen, however, expressed optimism for bilateral trade. "We are seeing a change in attitude in Congress. We have used the stick long enough; it is time for the carrot," he said.

"We hope to continue the momentum begun in Geneva, to start opening the whole trade mechanism again," he added.

It was hoped the three-day meeting - coming just three weeks after the Geneva summit - would help end a five-year slump in U.S.-Soviet trade.

New talks set for Thursday in Pratt & Whitney strike

By Kenneth R. Bozner United Press International

EAST HARTFORD - Pratt & Whitney and the union representing striking machinists will resume contract negotiations Thursday in hopes of ending a bitter walkout over job security, the company said today.

Pratt, the world's largest jet engine maker, and the International Association of Machinists agreed Monday night at the urging of Gov. William A. O'Neill to schedule new talks over the strike at three Connecticut plants.

Negotiations are set to begin at 8 a.m. Thursday at the Quality Inn in Vernon, a company spokesman said.

Union leaders began meeting early today to chart strategy for the new round of talks as more than 5,000 machinists entered the ninth day of their strike at Pratt plants in Southington, Middletown and North Haven.

Betty Webber, a union negotiator, said Monday night she received a letter from Pratt urging the two sides return to the table. Webber said she was optimistic the labor dispute could be settled and "the whole state of Connecticut can have a merry Christmas."

Pratt is among the largest employers in the state. Tom Bouchard, a vice president with Pratt's parent firm, United Technologies Corp., and the company's chief negotiator, sent the letter to Webber. Pratt's letter was in response to a formal request to open talks by the IAM.

Gorbachev, Baldrige to meet

MOSCOW (UPI) - Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev scheduled to meet today with Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige, who led a delegation of hundreds of U.S. executives to the Soviet Union for three days of trade talks.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said Gorbachev and Baldrige were to meet in the Kremlin in connection with the ninth U.S.-U.S.S.R. Trade and Economic Council meeting of more than 350 U.S. business leaders and 250 Soviet trade officials.

The spokesman said either Gorbachev or Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov would attend a Kremlin dinner for the conference participants and 50 invited guests.

Council President James Giffen said Monday the meetings were held in an atmosphere of optimism sparked by the Geneva summit.

"The Tass news agency said the two sides were discussing projects worth more than $1 billion but gave no further details of the negotiations.

Baldrige told the meeting Monday Washington supports expanded trade with the Soviet Union but that it would not extend most-favored-nation status or remove restraints on exporting strategic goods.

He also said "the trade relationship cannot move independently of progress in other elements of the bilateral relationship."

The policy, which in effect makes Moscow a second-rate trading partner, is a source of embarrassment for the Soviet Union and of controversy in Washington.

Earlier Monday, Giffen said the United States should give the Soviet Union MFN trading status and repeal the Jackson-Vanik amendment that links trade to emigration policies.

Giffen, however, expressed optimism for bilateral trade. "We are seeing a change in attitude in Congress. We have used the stick long enough; it is time for the carrot," he said.

"We hope to continue the momentum begun in Geneva, to start opening the whole trade mechanism again," he added.

It was hoped the three-day meeting - coming just three weeks after the Geneva summit - would help end a five-year slump in U.S.-Soviet trade.

Some of the items confiscated during a raid Saturday on two gambling operations in town sit in custody at police headquarters. The raid, which was the result of a two-year investigation, disrupted an operation police claim was one of the largest in state history.
