Snow, sleet and rain

Clouding up with snow and sleet beginning late this afternoon or evening. Highs in the mid 30s. Winds becoming northeast and increasing to 10 to 15 mph. Chance of precipitation 90 percent. Tonight, snow changing to sleet and rain during the evening, then tapering to showers before ending late at night. Lows near freezing. Winds northeast 10 to 20 mph, shifting to the west late at night. Chance of precipitation near 100 percent. Saturday, partly sunny and breezy. Highs in the mid 30s. Today's weather picture was drawn by Barry Lawlor, 10, of Seaman Circle, who attends Verplanck School.

National forecast

During early Saturday morning snow is forecast for parts of the extreme North Atlantic Coast States with rain along the coastal Regions. Showers and thunderstorms are forecast for the extreme South Atlantic Coast. Snow is possible in the Northern Intermountain Region, the Northern Plains, the Great Lakes and the Western parts of the North Atlantic Coast States. Scattered showers are possible from the Mid to South Atlantic Coast States. Elsewhere the weather will be fair.

Holmesian nose

Nicholas Rowe is unsure how he will be accepted by Arthur Conan Doyle fans in the lead role in "Young Sherlock Holmes." "People say I've got the right nose," he said in a New York Daily News interview, "but there are so many Holmes fans out there who I could disappoint intensely." Rowe, 18, won the role shortly after graduating from high school and has been working in a research office since finishing it. "My tasks are boring and mundane," he says of his current job. "I just needed something to keep myself occupied until the movie opened and my life changed." He expects the change in his life to be considerable. "I have to keep my private life private, you know, because once you mix it with acting, it's very harmful," he said. Rowe, apparently forgetting "Young Sherlock Holmes" is his first movie, also says he wants "to get out of this rut of playing English schoolboys."

Nelson is dominoed

Amarello Slim's gambling skills are matched only by his oratory powers and he used both in whipping Willie Nelson in an expensive domino match in Las Vegas. Preston took the best-of-nine match, 5-2, at the Golden Nugget casino to win a Jeep, but he and Nelson also had a side bet that reportedly exceeded $100,000. Slim, whose real name is Thomas Preston, kept up a constant chatter throughout the two-hour match. "If it wasn't for me, this game would be boring," Slim said. "Old women and babies play this game, you know." Asked why he didn't talk more during the match, Nelson said, "Slim's talking enough for both of us." Preston said the key to the victory was outwearing Nelson in the last three games. Nelson called Slim "a great player. I knew he'd be tough."

Through the keyhole

Gossip columnist might as well have their offices in the bathroom, says Diana McLellan, the syndicated "Ear" who wrote about the gossip side of Washington for 10 years. "I've had it with gossip," she said Wednesday at a "farewell to gossip" luncheon where she was toasted by 18 other columnists from national newspapers and magazines. "Gossiping was like flushing the john everyday. You write it, flush it down on paper and it's gone the next day." McLellan is now at The Washingtonian magazine and enjoys the pace of a monthly publication. "I'm beginning to find a new calm in my life," she said. "Before, I was writing like a bat out of hell. They say every gossip columnist goes nuts after five years." In addition to the magazine, she's also writing a novel about a Washington toilet flusher — a gossip columnist.

Vice hair

Not only does "Miami Vice" have the high ratings, it also has the best heads of hair. The 50,000 members of the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association chose Don Johnson and Phillip Michael Thomas for their list of top 10 male style makers. Also selected were James Brolin of "Hotel," Pierce Brosnan of "Remington Steele," Michael J. Fox of "Family Ties," Tony Danza of "Who's the Boss," Richard Gere, Sylvester Stallone and John Forsythe and John James from "Dynasty." "These gentlemen show the importance of using hair and clothing to create individual style," said Richard Swinney, president of the association. The top 10 female style makers will be announced later this month.

Hometown help

The cops from "Hill Street Blues" have joined Bruce Springsteen and Willie Nelson in a campaign to keep a 3M plant open in Springsteen's hometown of Freehold, N.J. Twelve members of the cast took out an ad in Variety urging that something be done to help the 350 workers who will lose their jobs if 3M closes the plant as planned. "As actors who spend a great deal of time portraying people who play a role in the web of social justice, we cannot stand by and watch real life pass these workers by," the ad said.

Not his fair share

One of France's most popular espionage and adventure novelists, Gerard de Villiers, has been convicted of "systematic, fraudulent avoidance of income tax" and sentenced to six months in prison.

Prosecution alleged that de Villiers defrauded the treasury of "tens of millions of francs" at least $1.3 million — during the past 18 years, but no precise amount was mentioned in Wednesday's judgment.

The titles of many of de Villiers' espionage and adventure novels feature the initials "SAS," an acronym in French for "His Serene Highness," an aristocratic security agent here. Another series of highly popular paperback books is named "Vice Squad." The court said the author was "totally allergic" to paying income taxes, and avoided them largely by creating fictitious publishing houses. De Villiers has 10 days to appeal his conviction.

Town woman fights discrimination against blind

By George Loyne Herald Reporter

Jacquelyn Billey of Lavton Road might seem to be the typical successful professional.

The mother of two daughters, she graduated from college, obtained her master's degree and now serves as president of a statewide organization.

What distinguishes Billey is that she has been legally blind since age 8 as the result of an eye disease.

"People have low expectations of blind people," said Billey, who has been president of the National Federation of the Blind of Connecticut for the past year. "There was a time when blind people were only piano tuners. Now, we're in all types of employment."

Although Billey is pleased that blind people today attend medical schools and hold positions as engineers and computer programmers, she said 70 percent of able-bodied blind people are unemployed. She is looking for a full-time job herself. "If this were true about non-blind people, it would be a national crisis," she said.

TO HELP COMBAT the stereotypes and discrimination faced by blind people, Billey's group adopted a number of resolutions in October attacking various state agencies that it said restrict opportunities for the blind. Among the targets of the group's criticism were the state Board of Education and Services for the Blind, the Connecticut Radio Information Service and the state

Human Rights Commission. The federation said the Board of Education and Services for the Blind promoted sheltered workshops in which blind employees are paid less than the minimum wage. Billey said such practices are legal under the 1993 federal minimum wage law, which exempted blind people.

A bill is pending before the U.S. House of Representatives to change this, Billey said, and federation members will travel to Washington, D.C., in February to lobby for its passage.

William Patton, a spokesman for the Board of Education and Services for the Blind, defended the sheltered workshops, saying that they are designed for blind people who, because of other handicaps, cannot work in a traditional work setting.

"They're for those who can't meet full production levels," Patton said. "We would like to pay everybody everything we could, but this is not economically possible."

Patton also said that at the workshops are paid on a per-item basis. "In many cases," he added, "workers are making the minimum wage and more."

BILLEY'S GROUP is also calling for oversight hearings of the Connecticut Human Rights Commission, which investigates complaints of discrimination. She charged that commission examiners "underestimate the capabilities of blind people."

"They don't understand," she said. "They have low expectations of blind people."

As a consequence, she said, complaints about discrimination against blind people are mishandled. Representatives of the Human Rights Commission could not be reached for comment Thursday.

The radio service has removed an ad from the air that the federation said contributed to stereotypes of blind people, according to Billey.

Billey, who has partial vision and uses a cane, said the National Federation for the Blind was founded "by the blind, for the blind" to act as a consumer advocate type of organization. Its motto is "the blind speaking for themselves." The group has 300 members in Connecticut and about 50,000 nationwide.

"We have a membership that works," she said. "It's fantastic. I have a grocery store nearby, and a bus stops every half hour."

"It depends where you live, but some parts are absolutely ideal," Billey said.

Manchester In Brief

Boy struck by truck

An 8-year-old Army Street boy suffered head injuries Thursday after he ran onto West Middle Turnpike and was struck by a pickup truck, police said this morning. Nelson Rouleau, 19 Army St., was treated for bruises at Manchester Memorial Hospital and released, a hospital spokeswoman said today. Police said Rouleau was attempting to cross West Middle Turnpike near Main Street when the incident occurred. Rouleau ran between several vehicles that were stopped at a red light in the eastbound lane, according to police, before he entered the westbound lane and was struck by a 1984 Mazda pickup. The driver of the pickup, Kevin S. Brown, 36, of Higganum, had no opportunity to stop or take evasive action, witnesses told police. Brown was not charged in the incident, police said.

State offers mortgages

Low- to moderate-income families will be able to apply for low-interest home mortgages starting Monday, the Connecticut Housing Finance Authority announced this week. Families of three with incomes less than $23,000 a year and families of four or more people with annual incomes less than $27,000 can apply to CHFA for a 9 1/2 percent home mortgage. Families must apply in person at banks that participate in the CHFA program.

Genesis move prompts protest

Town Zoning Enforcement Officer Thomas R. O'Marra said today he will investigate charges that an organization that helps chronically ill people moved into a Main Street building illegally. The charge was made by a resident in the neighborhood who questioned whether Genesis Center, a program of the Manchester Area Conference of Churches that helps mentally ill people re-enter the community, had the proper building permits to make renovations to the building at 75 Main St. Genesis moved into the building last month. The building, which is in a Residence C zone, is being used for offices and a social center for chronically ill people, said Elaine Stancilife, director of Genesis. O'Marra said that this is a legal use in a C zone, but said that Genesis would need a building permit to make any renovations. Stancilife said today that the building's landlord has made renovations, but not the organization.

Property audits boost town coffers

By Alex Grell Herald Reporter

Manchester has gained $110,000 in taxes in the current fiscal year as a result of audits of taxable personal property, according to a report from Assistant Town Manager Steven Werber. The audits, which began in 1981, are being conducted by certified public accountant Barbara Holstein under a $5,000-a-year contract with the town, Assessor J.

Richard Vincent said. About 40 accounts a year are audited, he said.

In his report, Werber said that audits of 37 accounts on the Grand List of October 1984 show a net gain of $2,166.85 in assessments. At the current 5.8 mill rate, the gain represents $110,000. Werber said the gain for this year alone amounts to 22 times the cost of the audit contract.

He said that each year about 60 or 70 accounts are randomly selected for auditing, and the number is narrowed down by picking different kinds of businesses.

Vincent said there are about 1,600 personal property tax accounts, mostly involving commercial furniture, fixtures and equipment, including computers and privately-owned telephone systems. Of the 27 accounts audited, eight went down, five were unchanged and 24 were increased.

He said that each year about 60 or 70 accounts are randomly selected for auditing, and the number is narrowed down by picking different kinds of businesses.

Vincent said. "We don't want to have all auto dealers in one year, for instance," Vincent said. When the accounts to be audited are picked, the businesses are notified and an appointment is made for the audit, Vincent said.

Group picks architect for IOH pool

A group called Instructors of the Handicapped was been working on plans for a special pool for 20 years. The organization, which comprises 45 teachers who teach swimming weekly to handicapped people at the Manchester High School pool, is in the last phase of a fund drive to raise money to build a pool. The special shallow-water ramped pool will be built adjacent to the high school pool.

Construction is slated to start in the late spring if all the funds are raised by February, according to David C. Moyer, chairman of the IOH board of directors. IOH has raised $192,000 toward the $275,000 estimated cost of the pool. The group needs another $41,500 to meet a challenge grant from the Hartford Foundation for Public Giving.

The pool will become the property of the town, since it will be part of a school building. The Building Committee will take over supervision of the construction of the pool, as required by building procedures for all school projects. Phillips said.

He said Lawrence Associates was chosen because it has already done preliminary plans for the pool dating back nine years and because of its experience building other handicapped facilities, such as the Regional Occupational Training Center in Manchester.

Data dampen April's rainy reputation

If you think showery April dumps more rain on Manchester than any other month, take a closer look at April's August. Midsummer downpours are slightly wetter in the aggregate than steady spring rains, according to a 40-year average compiled by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration at Bradley Field in Windsor Locks. The administration puts the average August rainfall at 3.81 inches for this area, edging out April by a hundredth of an inch.

year is far more dramatic. According to records kept by Thomas F. Ferlazo, environmental analyst for the town's water division, August brought 7.10 inches of rain, compared with only 1.55 inches in April. Only January was drier with 65 inches of rain.

The upshot of the year's rainfall through November is that all the town reservoirs are filled to capacity, holding almost 367 million gallons of water, Ferlazo reported. Up to Nov. 30, the rainfall measured in a gauge at the town's water treatment plant on Spring Street totaled 39.05 inches for the year, compared with the 40-year average of 39.34. The Northwest Company and the Hudson's Bay Company, two giants of the fur trade, merged in 1821 to become the Hudson's Bay Company.

Roof work causes flooding at Bolton school

By Susan Vaughn
Herald Reporter

BOLTON — Hundreds of gallons of water flooded four classrooms at Bolton Center School Thursday after contractors installing a new roof removed a tarp. School Superintendent Richard E. Packman told the Board of Education Thursday night.

The roofers from Premier Roofing Co. of New Haven had removed the old roof over the north wing of the school Wednesday and covered it with a tarp, Packman said.

Rain leaked through the tarp and caused extensive damage, but the major gush came Thursday morning when the roofers removed the tarp and "hundreds of gallons of water came cascading in," Packman said. The floors in four classrooms were covered with two to three inches of water, he said. One copy machine was drenched and floor tiles might have been damaged, Packman said. The school's custodial crew assessed the damage and will submit a list to the contractor for reimbursement, he said.

A Center School teacher also presented the board Thursday with a letter signed by nine staff members complaining of the disruption of school because of the $74,000 roofing project, which began in mid-November. And a parent told the board she was concerned for the safety of students while the project continued.

PACKMAN ALSO told the board at his monthly meeting that tar fell on a student Thursday, ruining a new ski jacket. The student was reimbursed from school activity funds, he said.

J. Frederick Audette, a teacher at Center School, told the board, "The frustration level of the faculty earlier this week was unbelievable." The teachers decided to send a letter to the Herald on Tuesday, Audette said, but then wrote some of it Wednesday after meeting with Packman.

Signed by eight teachers and a teacher's aide, the letter said, "Education is going on, but it is doubtful that every child is learning."

The letter listed five serious concerns, including the danger of men and materials over the students during school hours, the pounding of hammers and other equipment, flying sparks, and dust and fumes in the hallways, which have apparently caused some students and teachers to become ill.

"Both administration and teachers have tried valiantly to work around the intolerable situation," the letter said. "The teachers also said that doors had been blocked and that the playground was being used as a storage area for potentially lethal equipment, "making outside supervision a liability nightmare."

"THERE IS NO way anyone could possibly say that this construction is in the students' best educational interests," the letter concluded. "It has sacrificed valuable educational time."

After hearing Audette's comments and reading the letter, school board Chairman James Marshall apologized for the problem and said he would take full responsibility for allowing the work to go on while school was in session.

"I was naive. I didn't realize how disruptive this would be," Marshall said. "Our thought was to get the job done as quickly as possible because of the leaks and the question of safety then," he said.

referring to the old roof that was planned by leaks.

Marshall asked Audette to re-consider sending the letter to the Herald. Audette said later that he would probably send it anyway after he consulted one more teacher's signature.

Sally Lessard, a parent and substitute teacher, reiterated Audette's concerns and asked that the board not agree to such projects again during the school year.

THE SCHOOL BOARD approved the roof project early in the summer with the hope of getting the work completed before school started. The work did not begin until Nov. 18.

The board had sought a new roof for the past two years, but the Board of Selectmen rejected all bids submitted when the project was first put out to bid in the summer of 1984. The Board of Finance also cut the school board's $30,000 request for the roof from the town budget last spring, but the money was later reinstated.

Packman said the contractor Jim Thursday that the roof installation will require five more days of work. Two of those will involve tarring and graveling, he said.

Expressing concern about the safety of the project, school board member Barry Stearns urged the board to talk to the Public Building Commission about the problem. Packman said that PBC Chairman Michael Misasi has been apprised of the problems.

Packman also said that there are no exits blocked in the school, but one doorway was locked temporarily. He said the door was quickly reopened when staff became aware of it.

Governor offers plan to cut MVD delays

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

GOVERNOR O'NEILL spruce officess

HARTFORD — Connecticut lawmakers will vote at least three proposals for revamping the state Motor Vehicles Department during the 1986 session.

The latest is from Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill, who says his proposal will cut waiting time at the 18 branch offices in half.

The governor proposed, as had the agency itself, spending $237,000 to hire 26 more full-time and 26 more part-time workers to ease the flow of business.

He also called for a $90,000 upgrade of the department's telephone system to help people where they get to the branch office, and spending another $750,000 to modernize its microfilm equipment to make it easier for workers to get information.

Those proposals must be approved by the General Assembly, which convenes its 1986 session in February.

O'Neill also proposed overhauling some of the branch offices — some of which, he said, are "dungeon-like" — more training, including stress training, for employees and monthly public office hours by the commissioner and his deputy "to make sure that the public's needs are being well served."

In addition, O'Neill said he is considering buying or leasing new office space and expanding office hours.

The governor's proposals are the third set in recent weeks dealing with the Motor Vehicle Department.

The Republicans, who control the General Assembly, have appointed a committee to study the idea of turning the agency over to a private company, similar to the way the state's auto emissions testing program is run by Hamilton Standard.

On Wednesday, two Democrats in the General Assembly suggested their own ideas for improving the operations of MVD, long a target of public criticism chiefly because of long lines and unpleasant workers.

O'Neill, who's running for reelection next year and who faces an intraparty challenge for the gubernatorial nomination from Toby Moffett, said his reforms were not prompted by politics.

"This really, truly, is not a political matter," he told reporters. "It's a matter of trying to service the public of the state of Connecticut better."

He said his proposals would not have been as likely to succeed before because "the state was very pinched for dollars. We now find ourselves in a position where the economy is good, the state coffers are full and we can do some of these things."

He said he was ready to listen to everyone's ideas, but he made it clear that turning the agency over to private hands was not his first choice.

O'Neill's proposals were a result of a five-week study of the agency by his aide, Timothy F. Bannon, who visited each of the branch offices with MVD Commissioner Benjamin A. Muslo.

During a legislative hearing this fall, Muslo blamed many of his agency's problems on a lack of money.

Bannon's report states that the request for the 46 new workers was already included in the agency's budget request for next year.

His report to O'Neill called for the development of "stress-sensitivity training" for MVD employees who have "the difficult task of dealing pleasantly and helpfully with a public which does not want to be in a motor vehicles branch office in the first place."

Area Towns In Brief

Veteran teachers retire

BOLTON — The Board of Education Thursday night approved early retirement effective in June for two long-time teachers at Bolton High School — Irene Tabatsky and David Gibbons.

Tabatsky, a resident of Manchester, has been the home economics teacher at the high school for 19 years. She has also served as adviser for the school newspaper. She has organized international dinners for the faculty annually and provided refreshments for all school programs.

Principal Joseph V. Fleming said today.

Gibbons has taught English at the school for 15 years. He has also served as a class adviser and has co-directed school dramatic productions, Fleming said.

"They can't be replaced," Fleming said.

The two teachers are taking advantage of an early retirement incentive program the board has offered for the first time in five years.

Group meets on hurricane

COVENTRY — A meeting of the Contingency Emergency Planning Unit will be held tonight to discuss the town's response to Hurricane Gloria.

The group will also work on a strategy to deal with future emergencies.

One item to be discussed is the purchase of new generators to operate town facilities in the event of a power failure. Town Council member Richard Hines said the town will have to spend approximately $30,000 to repair generators lost during the Sept. 27 hurricane.

Hines is urging homeowners to number their mailboxes and houses to make them easier for town or emergency personnel to find.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. at the Town Office Building.

Board looks at closing rules

COVENTRY — The Board of Education plans to examine procedures for delaying or cancelling school when road conditions are poor in response to an accident involving a school bus last week on a snow-covered road.

No students were in the bus and no one was injured in the accident. However, board members said the matter warrants attention to help prevent future accidents and insure the safety of Coventry students.

Mail room worker faces theft charges

HARTFORD (AP) — A mail room worker was arraigned Wednesday on larceny and extortion charges after police say he stole checks from The Travelers Cos. and tried to get $50,000 from the company for the return of the checks.

Pedro Millan, 30, of Hartford was charged with attempted first-degree larceny by extortion and sixth-degree larceny. He was held on a $20,000 bond and is scheduled to appear in Superior Court in Hartford on Dec. 18.

LMC proposal receives mixed reviews

By Susan Vaughn
Herald Reporter

BOLTON — Board of Education members responded with mixed reviews Thursday night to an advisory group's recommendation that a 2,800-square-foot library and media center be added to the high school.

In its final report to the board, the Library Media Center Advisory Committee also recommended that existing space at the school be rearranged to allow for a computer lab and special education rooms.

School board member T. Dye Hooper challenged the committee's proposal to separate the computers from the library and media center, saying that the plan might cause the town to lose state funding that has already been appropriated for the project. The town would be eligible for 60 percent state funding for most of the project, he said.

Research done by the school board indicated that the computers accounted for the largest portion of the cost of the project outside of actual construction costs, Hooper said.

The state Department of Education has already allocated $45,971 to the town for a 7,000-square-foot library and media center that was proposed two years ago. Voters rejected the project in a referendum last November.

Advisory committee Chairman Raymond Ursin said funding might still be available and recommended that town officials continue to meet with state officials to investigate funding possibilities.

Hooper also said that the purpose of the new facility was to serve the entire community, which would mean arranging rooms so that residents would not have to walk through the school to use the library and media center.

The plan proposed by the citizens' advisory committee shows the media center addition attached to the south end of the school, with the computer lab in a former classroom next to it. Space now occupied by the library and other classrooms would be expanded or converted for other uses, according to the plans.

Committee member Joseph Lorenzi said that most libraries in other high schools the committee visited did not favor having computers inside the library because they would be disruptive.

He also said his committee did not see the need for the library to be open to the town.

"It would be a waste of money," he said.

Lorenzi said that the structure proposed by the committee "is the maximum we can support." He said that all but one committee member favored the 2,800-square-foot addition with the separate computer lab.

Ursin said the minimum size for a library and media center recommended by the state Department of Education is 2,000 square feet. Ursin said that the committee's proposal "is something the townspeople will support."

Ceremony, protest to mark sub launch

GROTON (AP) — The launching of the first submarine named after Louisville, Ky., will be marked with a ceremony by naval officials and a protest Saturday by anti-nuclear weapons activists.

The 300-foot-long Louisville will be launched at the Electric Boat shipyard, with Naval nuclear propulsion program director Adm. Kinnaird McKee delivering the principal address.

The admiral's wife, Betty Ann McKee, as the ship's sponsor will break the traditional bottle of champagne over the submarine's bow.

The nuclear-powered Louisville is classified as an attack submarine. The 6,300-ton vessel eventually will be armed with MK-48 anti-submarine and anti-air torpedoes. It also will be equipped with anti-surface ship cruise missiles and anti-submarine missiles.

Members of the Coalition to Stop Trident, an anti-nuclear weapons group that draws its name from the Trident submarines, will protest the launch.

Group spokeswoman Joanne Sheehan said Thursday the protest will be peaceful.

"As we approach the Christmas season we should consider what peace on earth really means," Sheehan said. She said the group would sing Christmas carols and pass out Christmas cards to those attending the ceremonies.

Electric Boat a subsidiary of General Dynamics Corp. Last week, the Defense Department announced bidding on four new attack submarines because of new federal indictments against General Dynamics officials.

Principal says misunderstanding sparked shooting spree

By John Gustavson
The Associated Press

PORTLAND — A teen-ager's fatal shooting spree at a junior high school was apparently sparked by his mistaken impression that he had been suspended for a minor disciplinary infraction, the school principal says.

The student came looking for Portland Junior High School Principal Don Rixon with a semiautomatic pistol Tuesday because "there was some confusion about whether he was under suspension or not," Rixon said Thursday.

"I think he was angry with me, obviously. As principal of the school, I assume responsibility for disciplining the students and there had been occasions in which it was necessary to discipline him," Rixon said in discussing details of the event publicly for the first time.

Before surrendering to police the student briefly took a younger student hostage and fired about a dozen shots, killing school maintenance man David Bengston, wounding secretary Lynne Hadad in the arm and shattering a window whose glass cut Rixon's face.

Police and court officials have not released the student's name because he is under 18. But school officials and students have identified the student as 13-year-old RYDON SAID he told the student on Friday he could not attend the final class of the day because the student wore a coat inside the building in violation of the dress code.

Rixon said the youth is a good student with a strong sense of fairness who "felt that if he deserved the punishment, he had no difficulty accepting it. (But) when he felt an injustice is when he would really get very angry."

Rixon said that around 10:30 a.m. Tuesday the boy came to him and "indicated he wanted me to call his sister because he wasn't feeling well."

Told he should report to the school nurse, he became "obviously somewhat upset and turned around and walked out of the building," Rixon said. The student returned later with the pistol owned by his father, according to police.

Assistant Principal Fred Shiffer said the boy returned at 12:30 p.m. and insisted on telephoning his sister. The student then insisted on interrupting a meeting between Rixon and a teacher, Shiffer said.

"The youngster came in my office and said, 'I want to see you,'" Rixon said. "He had a coat on ... and I asked him what he had underneath his coat. He moved his coat apart and showed me the gun."

FOR THE NEXT 15 minutes, Rixon and teacher James Stannard tried to convince them that "what he was thinking of doing was certainly not the right thing to do," Rixon said.

"He asked us to start walking so we walked," said Rixon. The principal then led Stannard and the student toward a fire door Rixon believed would afford protection if he and Stannard could get behind it.

Rixon said that another student was being held hostage when Bengston was shot, and that the other student probably witnessed the shooting.

The school intercom was used by the gun-toting teen-ager, and later his father to convince him to surrender while in a second-floor classroom full of "terrified" students, Shiffer said.

Rixon said he did not know how long it could take the school to recover from the event. About 20 local clergy, social workers and other human services professionals met Wednesday with students at the school, he said.

"There has to be some grieving going on, both for the loss of Dave Bengston and the student — and for us," Rixon said.

"That's what we were able to do," Rixon said. "When we went in, he fired a shot that went through the window."

Rixon said Bengston was among staff members informed about the crisis, and he went from room to room telling teachers to evacuate their students from the building.

"He walked around a corner and (the student) was there, and as I understood it Dave simply said, 'Look, I'm just walking by,' Rixon said. "He proceeded to walk by. I understood that he started running, and that the student then fired."

Rixon said that another student was being held hostage when Bengston was shot, and that the other student probably witnessed the shooting.

Other ways to improve state MVD

Although there's no question that the private sector generally operates more efficiently than government, a proposal under study by Republicans in the Legislature seeks to carry things too far. The idea is to have the state turn the Department of Motor Vehicles over to a private company rather than continue to operate it. As Gov. William O'Neill said Thursday, the better alternative is to improve the department's ability to serve the public while keeping it in state hands.

Few would argue that the MVD is run well today. In most offices, service is terrible, leaving motorists standing in seemingly endless lines to accomplish tasks that should take a few minutes at most. But giving the operation over to the private sector would be no guarantee of improvement. Indeed, the transfer would pose numerous risks that are best avoided if the public interest is to be protected. Those who say that putting the MVD in private hands would automatically make it more efficient are oversimplifying things a great deal.

Rather, the experiment would be likely to create another quasi-governmental bureaucracy, complete with its own rules of order. This would leave a highly sensitive service to be run by people far less accountable to the citizens of Connecticut than the current operators.

If the plan were pursued, there is a good chance that a driver with a problem would have even more trouble getting it resolved than at present — even after a transition period bound to be fraught with mistakes. And it pays to remember that an error at the MVD, which is intricately tied to the state's law-enforcement agencies and practices, can be a long-term nightmare.

For these reasons and others, the governor was right to offer a plan to improve service as an alternative to the Republican push for privatization. The proposal O'Neill offered Thursday to renovate MVD offices, modernize their communications systems and hire more than 40 new staff members is certainly more worthy of legislative consideration than the idea of giving the service away.

But at the same time, the MVD's dismal service record must be attributed partly to O'Neill's own failure to address the problems. As Republican House Speaker R.E. Van Norstrand said after the plan was announced Thursday, O'Neill has done little during his years in office to ease the MVD crunch, which regularly costs motorists lost work time and untold amounts of frustration. The lesson is twofold: While Republicans should keep in mind that some government services are too vital to be farmed out on a theoretical whim, the governor should act more often on his own initiative to serve the interests of his constituents.

Public service career held in low esteem

By Helen Thomas

WASHINGTON — Once upon a time a public service career was held in high esteem. But the past several presidents have showered disdain on the men and women who work for the federal government. John F. Kennedy spoke of the possibilities of public service being the "crown of a career." At the same time, he could be critical of bureaucrats. Few presidents in contemporary times have gotten well of government workers. The "bureaucrats" have come in for scathing denunciations, and the loss of morale in government office reflects the constant drumming away, making Uncle Sam's forces to feel unworthy.

In a recent speech at Fallston High School in Fallston, Md., President Reagan went so far as to say: "You know, people don't start wars, governments do." It was a telling remark for Reagan who thinks of government as some remote institution dedicated to thwarting individual liberty. For him, the idea of government by the people, for the people and of the people obviously does not ring true.

Racial prejudice generally learned

To the Editor:

The resurgence of racial prejudice occurred recently on Nov. 21 in the southwest neighborhood section of Philadelphia, Pa. An interracial couple, a black couple and their children were subjected to taunts from 300 angry white residents who chanted, "Beat it," etc.

It is sad to see that some non-white people still cannot live at the residence of their choice without fears of white hysteria. Such phrases as "the property value will go down" or "this neighborhood is for whites only" is wrong.

Philadelphia Mayor Wilson Goode promised round-the-clock police protection but unfortunately the black family has decided to move out before Christmas.

The intimidation worked for some whites but the interracial couple has vowed to stay. I commend them. They are human beings with a right to decent housing.

A statement from a pamphlet from Manchester Community College stresses that "discrimination discourages flexibility of standards and appreciation of differences. It not only penalizes those who are discriminated against, it adversely affects everyone."

Racial prejudice is generally learned from conscious or spontaneous actions from some parents, peers, literature, film, etc. Children observe the actions of others and act accordingly at times depending on the situation. Their thoughts may be reinforced via indoctrination of racial superiority beliefs, contempt, ignorance of certain facts, apathy, warfare, genocide and murder can happen throughout history.

The extreme concept of this behavior is racism which one ethnic group views its culture as superior to others. Two good examples were the Nazis and fascist armies of World War II. I am aware that racism affects all citizens of the world in the form of inequality, oppression, starvation, dictatorships, poor health care and limited income levels. Most of these problems

Dec. 7: Forgive but don't forget

To the Editor:

I was surprised and disappointed when on Saturday afternoon, Dec. 7, Brent Muburger, sports announcer for CBS, told me that the Army-Navy football classic was being brought to me in part by the Toyota Motor Co.

It was involved in one of these accidents at 7 a.m. Intersections were covered with ice. We weren't the 15 town trucks out sanding at 6:00 instead of beginning the sanding at 7:00?

I'll wager that over 90 percent of these accidents could have been prevented by the roads being sanded before early morning rush hour.

Beirut hostage died of torture in Iran hospital

WASHINGTON — William Buckley, one of the six American hostages kidnapped by Shiite Muslim extremists, is dead. The State Department's official position is that "we assume that he is alive and has been operating on that principle." But the CIA, for which Buckley worked, has highly sensitive intelligence information that leaves no doubt of Buckley's death.

From our intelligence sources, we have pieced together the gruesome details of Buckley's captivity and death, and can disclose the nation responsible: Iran. In fact, he died in a Tehran hospital from a heart attack brought on by months of torture.

The 57-year-old Buckley was officially listed as a political officer with the American Embassy in Beirut. Actually, he was the CIA station chief. A brave and effective intelligence professional who had served earlier in Vietnam, Buckley was painfully aware of the risks that were an inescapable part of his job. Friends say that "he never married — he didn't want to cause suffering to a wife and children in the event of his death."

IRONICALLY, BUCKLEY DEVOTED much of his time and energy to developing information that might prevent terrorist attacks on Americans in the Middle East. He did not hire local contract agents for missions of violence.

Buckley was kidnapped by Shiites on March 16, 1984, and taken initially to the eastern Bekaa Valley, a Syrian-controlled hotbed of Iranian terrorists and revolutionary guards. One source says the CIA believes it was the Syrians who disclosed Buckley's true identity to his captors, the Hezbollah ("Party of God").

There is no doubt that Buckley was brutally tortured over a long period. His appearance had changed shockingly in a videotape released by his captors last January.

Because anyone can be broken under severe enough torture, the CIA had to assume Buckley may have revealed some information eventually. Some undercover operations were changed or curtailed as a result.

Buckley was taken to the Iranian revolutionary guard (Pasdaran) headquarters at Baalbek, Lebanon, for repeated interrogations. Then, in early March 1985, the Hezbollah, apparently fearing the Syrians would turn Buckley loose, arranged to transport him secretly to Iran. He was disguised as an injured Pasdaran soldier and flown with several wounded revolutionary guards to Damascus in a Syrian army helicopter.

THE SAME DAY, Buckley and at least one authentic Iranian soldier were put aboard an Iran Air 727, which had just brought a high Iranian official to the Syrian capital, and were flown to Tehran. The American agent's first place of captivity was a house on Ferehsteh Street in a northern suburb of Tehran.

Buckley was interrogated — and tortured further — in the basement of the Iranian foreign ministry. He required frequent medical treatment, which included at least one stay in a Tehran hospital.

In late March, an Iraqi bomb landed in Ferehsteh Street, narrowly missing the house where Buckley was being held. He was hastily moved to a revolutionary guard camp (called Salehabad), near the Shiite holy city of Qom. It was there, probably between April 10 and 15, that Buckley suffered a heart attack induced by torture and captivity. He was taken to a hospital in Tehran and died soon after.

Even in death, Buckley's murderers tried to use him. The Islamic Jihad, a group closely linked to Hezbollah, announced last October that they had "executed" Buckley. They released a grisly Polaroid picture of him in a coffin, and tried to trade his body for 100 Palestinian prisoners held by Israel.

Propaganda's price The extent of the U.S. Information Agency's worldwide propaganda effort may surprise you. Here's just one indication: The air freight bill for the agency's regional service center in the Philippines is $250,000 a year. It's one of three such facilities. Described in a State Department inspection report as "an enormous printing and shipping operation which is located in a huge factory-type building on the embassy's sea-front compound," the Manila plant produces the color magazine Dialogue and the picture magazine Amerika for distribution in the Soviet Union.

Reader feedback Joe Brand of Stanton, Miss., took offense at our recent report on the National Rifle Association's political contributions. "The use campaign figures to insinuate that a congressman has been bought off is reprehensible. If you condemn the NRA for this practice, then you should do likewise to Handgun Control Inc.," he wrote. Fair enough: Handgun Control's political action committee donated $97,325 to congressional candidates in 1983-84; the National Rifle Association's Victory Fund gave candidates $700,324.

Connecticut In Brief

Hutton hearings conclude today

HARTFORD — Hearings on the possible suspension of E.F. Hutton's license to operate in Connecticut came to a close today, with Attorney General Joseph I. Lieberman expected to recommend sanctions.

After the investment firm pleaded guilty to 2,000 counts of mail and wire fraud in May, the Banking Department began hearings on Hutton's Connecticut license because some of the practices occurred in the state.

Two more witnesses were to be called in Hutton's defense at today's hearing, and then Lieberman and Hutton's attorney, Thomas F. Curran, were to make final arguments before acting Banking Commissioner Howard B. Brown.

Both sides will then have several weeks to send Brown final written arguments and then he will issue a ruling, which could be appealed in court by either side.

Housing investigation planned

HARTFORD — The co-chairmen of the General Assembly's Planning and Development Committee say they are planning a series of hearings to investigate alleged mismanagement in the Department of Housing.

Sen. John F. Connors, R-Bethany, and Rep. Alice V. Meyer, R-Easton, said Thursday they were responding to a series of citizen complaints.

In one case, they said, the department ignored complaints from residents of Bridgeport's Beardsley Terrace apartment complex that they were periodically without heat and hot water.

Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill said Housing Commissioner Joseph E. Canale had assured him the problems at Beardsley had been resolved. The governor also indicated he was satisfied with the way the department was operating in general.

Animal inhumanity is charged

NEWINGTON — The Connecticut Humane Society has obtained an arrest warrant charging a former employee with cruelly abusing abandoned cats, a spokesman said.

August R. Heiberg, executive director of the Humane Society, said a warrant was issued Thursday in New Britain Superior Court charging Patrick O'Donovan with cruelty to animals.

O'Donovan was fired Monday after he was accused of repeatedly swinging pillowcases containing two cats against a wall Dec. 3 at the organization's Newington headquarters, society officials said.

Fafnr and union resume talks

BERLIN — Talks between the Fafnr Bearing Division of Textron Inc. and a striking union resumed Thursday after federal and state mediators asked both sides to return to the bargaining table.

The talks resumed at the Hawthorne Inn in Berlin under the direction of federal mediator Lawrence A. Goeckler and state mediator Walter M. O'Connor before Fafnr Bearing and Local 133 of the United Auto Workers.

The union represents 1,150 workers who have been on strike since Sept. 28. O'Connor said no talks have been scheduled between Fafnr and another machinist union that represents about 90 skilled trades workers.

Few turnpike tokens redeemed

STAMFORD — Lines to redeem outdated Connecticut Turnpike tokens haven't been nearly as long as the rush-hour lines at the toll plazas before Gov. William A. O'Neill ordered them closed.

Only 2 million of the estimated 10 million tokens left in circulation had been turned in through Thursday, according to the state Department of Transportation, and the deadline for exchange is Saturday.

The tokens, which were half the cost of the 35-cent toll, were created as a convenience for regular Connecticut Turnpike travelers.

O'Neill withdraws judge nomination

Hutton hearings conclude today

HARTFORD (AP) — A Naugatuck probate judge is disputing a state police report that cleared him in an alleged rape but said he acknowledged having sexual relations with his accuser.

"I never had sex with Deborah Clisham," O'Neill withdrew his nomination of Probate Judge Robert Sluzdak to the Superior Court Thursday, one day after state police released its report on the alleged rape.

Sluzdak criticized the report Thursday, saying it was based on "innuendo, false assertions and unmitigated lies."

"I never had sex with Deborah Clisham," Sluzdak said. Deborah Clisham, 29, of Naugatuck told the Waterbury newspapers that she had brought the complaint.

Sluzdak said he told state police he had sex with Clisham only after being grilled by investigators for a full day last month. "I was not in my right mind," the 52-year-old Sluzdak said. He said state police also failed to follow up leads he gave them.

State police Sgt. Edward Dailey said his department stood by its report. O'Neill told reporters during a news conference that he had withdrawn the nomination.

"It appears to me there is no way at this time that nomination can go forward," O'Neill said. "Judge Sluzdak has claimed that he is innocent of all charges, however, under the particular situation as it exists, the name shall not go forward."

According to the report, Sluzdak passed a lie detector test when denying the rape charge, but refused to take a second polygraph test or answer questions about allegations that he used drugs and offered Clisham drugs during their sexual encounters.

Sluzdak said Thursday he refused to take the second test because state police were "on a fishing expedition" asking general questions about drugs.

Clisham initially told police that Sluzdak forced her to inhale some type of drug, the report said. But

Clisham initially told police that Sluzdak forced her to inhale some type of drug, the report said. But

State police ended their investigation and recommended no arrest because the charge lacked merit. A separate investigation into the possible drug use also was closed without a recommendation for an arrest.

Parts of the state police report on their investigation into Clisham's charges were released Wednesday in response to a formal request by The Waterbury Republican and The Waterbury American Police blotted out the complainant's name, but Clisham told the news-

"It is the examiner's opinion that a sexual act between (Clisham) and Sluzdak did occur, that a substance was given to her which she voluntarily inhaled, and that she did not want to engage in sexual activity but did so to avoid any annoyance or disturbance she felt Sluzdak might create," the report said.

Grand jury indicts 24 reputed mobsters

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — Seven reputed members of the Genovese organized crime family and 17 of their alleged associates have been indicted by a federal grand jury on charges including racketeering, illegal gambling and the collection of unlawful debts.

Among those indicted Thursday were John G. Ardito, 66, of Queens, N.Y., who has been identified in U.S. Senate documents as a captain in the Genovese family; Vincent J. Pollina, 68, of Derby the reputed head of Connecticut's Genovese arm; and another allegedly high-ranking family member, Salvador C. Basso, 70, of Stratford, according to U.S. Attorney Stanley A. Twardy Jr.

Eighteen of those named in the six-count indictment, including Basso, were arrested Nov. 25. The indictment charges Ardito, Pollina and Basso, as well as Louis Mastro, 58, of Bridgeport; Arthur Ventresca, 49, of Torrington; Vincent Esposito, 57, of Bridgeport; and Jay C. Myers, 58, of Carlsbad, Calif.; with violating the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act.

The charges against them include obstruction of justice, racketeering, interstate transportation of wagering paraphernalia and operating illegal gambling businesses.

In convicted, Basso faces a maximum of 35 years in prison and fines totaling $75,000. Pollina faces 35 years in prison and fines totaling $85,000; and Ardito, 25 years and $35,000 in fines. Mastro, Ventresca and Esposito face 30 years in prison and fines of between $55,000 and $65,000, Twardy said.

NU continues tests in Derby explosion

DERBY (UPI) — Northeast Utilities today plans to begin excavating another section of gas main adjacent to a restaurant that exploded in flames, killing six and injuring more than a dozen people.

NU spokesman Jeff Kotin said utility crews Thursday began testing the moisture and compaction of the soil around a break in a gas line at the request of a Bridgeport contractor that was doing sewer work within five feet of the break the day of the explosion.

The contractor, New England Railroad Construction Co., has refused comment on the explosion or the tests.

The break, which entirely circled the 3-inch gas main, was discovered Tuesday. The section of pipe has been removed and sent to Washington, D.C., for analysis by the National Transportation Safety Board.

Tom Blood, a spokesman for the state Department of Public Utility Control, which is also conducting a required investigation of the Friday blast, said a large rock has also been removed for analysis in federal laboratories.

The rock, "three or four football-sized," was found near the break in the gas line. "They are trying to determine whether it smashed into the pipe," Blood said.

The soil tests will determine whether the soil around the gas main was disturbed recently by construction in the area, Blood said.

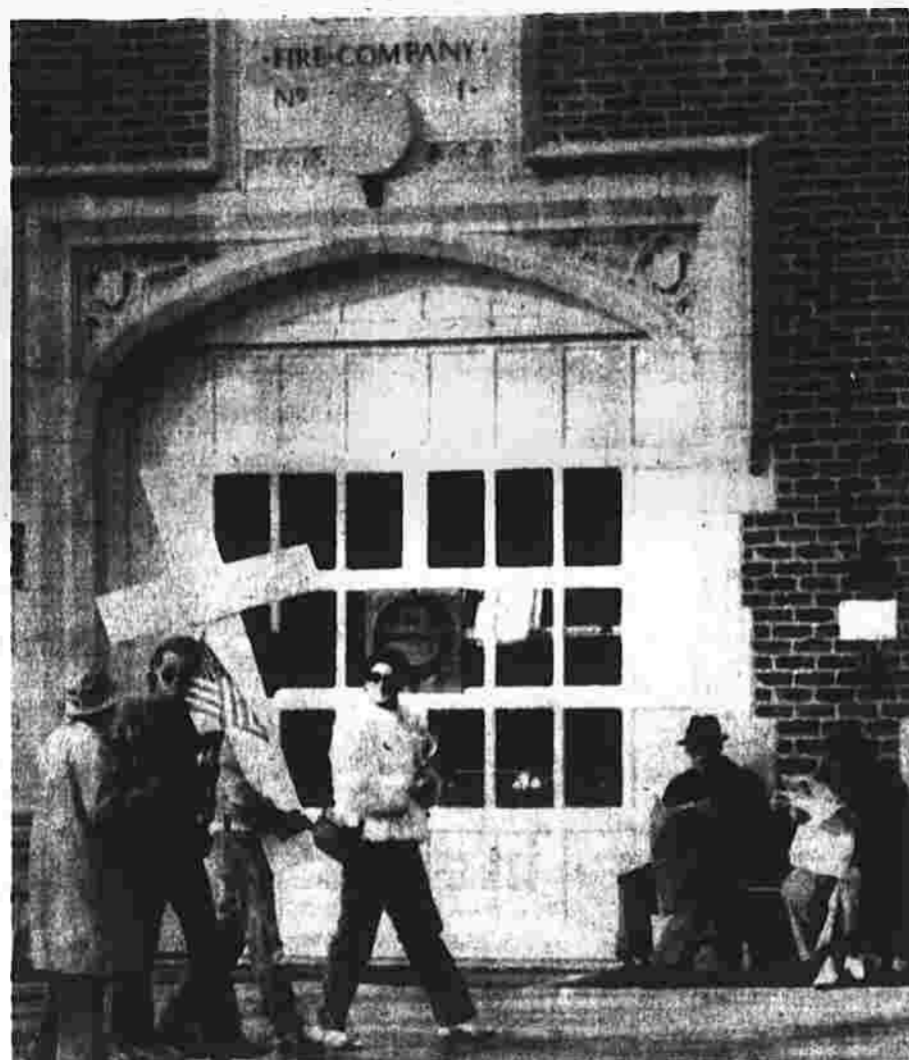

Phillip Sher, a DPUC engineer, said Wednesday that the exact cause of the explosion has not yet been determined.

"The state fire marshal's office is investigating other factors," Sher said. "If there are no other factors, this would have been the cause of it," Sher said of the break in the gas line.

Federal investigator James Becker said Wednesday that corrosion and discoloration around the break in the gas line indicates it was there before the explosion.

Federal officials said 13 people were injured in the explosion, including Michael Ippolito, 30, the son of the owner. Six charred bodies were dug from the wreckage during the night and the next day.

The force of the explosion has weakened other structures along Main Street.

Demonstrators protest a decision by U.S. District Court Judge Ellen Bree Burns, who granted an injunction banning the display of a cross at a Greenwich firehouse. The display is a 30-year tradition.

Unemployed painter protests cross ban

By Peter S. Howes
The Associated Press

GREENWICH — An unemployed painter is vowing to march outside a fire station carrying a plywood cross until Christmas to protest a federal judge's decision barring the fire company's annual Christmas display.

The decision by U.S. District Judge Ellen B. Burns on Tuesday at least temporarily ended a 30-year tradition in which the Cos Cob Volunteer Fire Co. had placed a lighted cross on the public building as part of its Christmas display.

In issuing a temporary injunction against erection of the cross, the judge said the display symbolized the town's endorsement of a religious belief, violating the constitutional separation of church and state.

The issue was brought to court by three Greenwich residents who sued to force the cross's removal. A trial is to be held sometime next year.

Cos Cob firemen have reluctantly accepted the judge's decision and declined offers to have the 5-foot-tall cross erected on private property nearby.

But it was too much for Felix Andreoni, 31, who grew up in Greenwich.

He and several supporters marched across the driveway of the firehouse starting at 9:45 a.m. Thursday and vowed to repeat the action each day from 10 a.m. to dark until Christmas Eve.

"I'm keeping the tradition alive," Andreoni said. "It's my cross. It's everybody's cross that was taken down. It's been here every year for 30 years and I'm going to make sure it stays."

The original cross now sits inside the station as firefighters abide by Burns' ruling. However, Andreoni fashioned his own, about 5 feet tall and 3 feet wide, and painted it white. He shifted it from shoulder to shoulder as he paced.

"Every year since I was about five years old I've seen the cross on the firehouse," he said. "People want it. It was a disgrace for these people to all of a sudden ruin it."

Police said Andreoni would not be arrested as long as he conducted his picketing in an orderly fashion. Andreoni said he did not want to be arrested.

"All I want is for people to see the cross," he said. "They talk about separation of church and state. Why don't they take 'In God We Trust' off of U.S. currency?"

Harold Kaufmann, one of the three people who sued the town of Greenwich over the cross, said Thursday that he had not seen Andreoni picketing at the firehouse.

"I have no doubt some people would want to do that," he said. "I have no objection. If a gentleman wants to carry a cross, more power to him."

Gunman sought in Enfield double-murder

ENFIELD (AP) — Authorities were seeking a gunman in his early 20s after an Enfield couple was found shot to death in the basement of their ranch-style home, police said.

Authorities identified the victims as James F. Bailey, 45, and his wife, Elizabeth A. Pacheco, 45. Investigators have ruled out a homicide-suicide. Hartford State's Attorney John M. Bailey said Thursday after the bodies were discovered.

Police said they issued an all-points bulletin throughout New England and along the East Coast for the couple's car, a gray, four-door 1977 Oldsmobile Delta 88, which is missing. The car's registration plate is 193 DUU.

"We believe the car is connected to the crime itself," Bailey said. "Anyone driving the car should be considered armed and extremely dangerous," police said.

Initial reports said the Pachecos both were shot in the head, but authorities later would not confirm how they died. The bodies, which police said were covered with blood, were not removed until late Thursday, after detectives from the state police major crime squad searched the house for clues.

"The cause of death will be determined by autopsies performed by the chief medical examiner's office," said Enfield Police Chief Walter J. Skower. Enfield police Detective Dario Russotto said that the bodies may have been in the house "for some time." Russotto said nothing in the house seemed to be disturbed, and that only the car appeared to be missing.

Neighbors reported nothing unusual around the house before the discovery of the bodies, Russotto said. Authorities declined to confirm a published report that the bodies were discovered by someone who stopped at the house to give one of both of the victims a ride to work.

Pacheco was a machinist who worked for his father-in-law.

State firm searched for illegal export

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Three businesses, including one in Connecticut, have been searched as part of an investigation into the possible illegal export to Israel of technology and equipment developed at the Watervliet Arsenal, officials said.

U.S. Customs Service agents Thursday searched NAPCO Co. Inc., Plymouth, Conn.; Abernathy Lead Construction Inc., Eddystone, Pa.; and G&B Packing Co. Inc., Bayonne, N.J., according to affidavits by U.S. Customs Service agents.

Between 1982 and 1985 the Watervliet Arsenal, run by the Department of the Army, developed an improved process and equipment for making 120mm cannon barrels, which are generally placed on tanks.

John Hatsopoulos, a senior vice president with NAPCO's parent company, Thermo Electron Corp., of Waltham, Mass., said the company "has not figured out what's going on."

"We are at a loss of what the problem is," he said during a telephone interview late Thursday night. "We do not know as of this moment what we've done wrong."

NAPCO obtained the plans for the process and equipment, contracted with Abernathy Lead Construction to make one example of the equipment, and retained G&B Packing to ship the equipment to Israel, the affidavits said.

Hatsopoulos said the company, located in a western Connecticut community of about 14,000 residents, makes electroplating equipment used on a variety of items including printed circuit boards and automobile bumpers.

"The customs people came in and wanted to look at our records and that's all I know," he said, adding the company's attorney's are not even sure what the violations are.

Under federal law, shipments to foreign countries of certain technology and equipment — including that used for the cannon barrels — requires a license from the Department of State and the Department of Commerce.

No such licenses were obtained for exporting technology and equipment developed at the arsenal, authorities said.

No referral on addition to cemetery

Commission member Joseph Tully said construction work would jeopardize improvements already made to the pond.

"THE POND HAS come a long way," he said. "The town has already spent a lot of money on it." Glaeser said his main concern is preserving a bank that runs along the side of the pond.

"If it were gone, I don't know what would happen to the pond," he said.

Glaeser said he has met with Town Manager Robert Weiss and Town Planner Mark Pellegrini about the possibility of the town buying the land along the water. Glaeser reported that Weiss' reaction to the proposal was "very sympathetic," and Pellegrini said he would explore the cost involved.

However, Pellegrini said this morning he is not preparing a cost estimate.

The commission also voted to ask for a change in town zoning regulations that would allow it input into any decisions involving open land owned by the town. The move came after members criticized the PZC for overlooking the commission when it considered the cemetery plans.

Under the town charter, the Conservation Commission is only an advisory body. However, Glaeser said there was an informal understanding between the two commissions that it would be allowed to have input into matters involving town land and waters.

GLAESER SAID that in a Sept. 24, 1984, letter sent to PZC Chairman Alfred Sieffert Sr. and Pellegrini, he specifically asked that the Conservation Commission be informed about any proposal concerning Union Pond and the land around it.

"I'm flabbergasted — absolutely flabbergasted that the Planning and Zoning Commission would take action without consulting the Conservation Commission," Glaeser said Thursday. "I'm just amazed."

Pellegrini said this morning that he was flabbergasted. The Commission was not consulted about the cemetery. "It was just an oversight on my part," he said. He said that he was content the meeting scheduled with the commission and the project's designer should help address the commission's concerns.

Sieffert could not be reached for comment. However, PZC member William Bayer said this morning the PZC usually informs the Conservation Commission about such matters. Bayer said he did not remember the circumstances surrounding the PZC's action on the cemetery plans.

Glaeser said his commission cannot take legal action against the PZC, but it can bring pressure on the agency.

Talks due on the way ZBA works

Pellegrini said new site plans with the 360 spaces are being made.

After receiving PZC approval, Weinberg went to the ZBA for the variance that would allow him to construct only 175 spaces. The ZBA approved a variance requiring 200 spaces.

The variance is for three years. After that, Weinberg must come back to the board to either extend the parking spaces.

Sieffert and Gates said this week they were upset because they were not told during a public hearing on the special exception that Weinberg would apply for a parking variance.

"It upsets me when they (the developers) know what the regulations are and what the approval said and then they go to the ZBA for a variance," Sieffert said.

But Pellegrini said this week that the planning staff and Norman Iako, who represented Economy Electric at the public hearing, had told the PZC that Economy Electric would seek a variance from the ZBA.

"I wasn't a presentation," Pellegrini said. "It was a statement."

"I don't recall the discussion," Sieffert said. "If I had heard it I would have said to Iako, 'I don't think you should do that.'"

Iako could not be reached for comment this morning.

"I don't think they're obligated to tell us," Bayer said. He said he did not think it was uncommon for developers to seek approval from a PZC and then go to the ZBA for a variance.

"I bet I can go into the records and find a dozen situations where we've approved a variance and they go get a variance from the ZBA," Bayer said.

Children make dreidel

David Falkenstein makes a dreidel with the help of Irene Milzoff, seated, and Ona Mastrorade in the Temple Beth Shalom Nursery School. The children are making dreidels to spin for the eight-day holiday of Hanukkah, which started Saturday night. The traditional tops have Hebrew letters on the four sides, standing for the phrase, "A great miracle happened there." This refers to the Maccabees' fight for religious freedom in ancient times.

Pratt talks continue; AFL-CIO lends help

VERNON (UPI) — The closed-door contract talks between Pratt & Whitney and the union for 5,300 striking machinists entered the second day today while a strike against the world's largest jet engine manufacturer entered its 12th day.

A news blackout has been imposed on the talks, and both sides refused comment. Negotiations on a new three-year contract broke down when members of the International Association of Machinists struck Pratt & Whitney plants in Middletown, Southington and North Haven Dec. 2.

The two sides agreed to return to the table earlier this week after Gov. William O'Neill called company and union officials and urged them to resume negotiations.

Another 5,000 union members have remained on the job at the company's largest facility, in East Hartford. But the National Labor Relations Board and a federal judge have ruled they are working without a contract.

State AFL-CIO President Betty Tiant said she hoped the new round of talks would produce a settlement.

"If (the news blackout) indicates they hope to make progress," she said.

The AFL-CIO has thrown its full support behind the machinists, who are demanding more job security. The IAM says subcontracting and technology have eliminated 8,000 jobs at Pratt & Whitney over the last five years.

"No strike has been more important to the state labor movement than the current strike between the union and Pratt & Whitney," said Frank Carrano, president of the Greater New Haven Central Labor Council.

Carrano has organized a "committee of 500" AFL-CIO officials and members who plan to help strikers picket the company's four plants. The committee also intends to distribute some 40,000 leaflets to union members across the state urging them to support the strikers with donations of food and money, he said.

"We're also prepared for a massive mobilization of our members for a rally or demonstration if and when the IAM should request it, based on the outcome of the current negotiations," Carrano said.

Carrano said the news blackout only affects the negotiators. "We're showing our solidarity with that union," he said.

Actress Anne Baxter dies

NEW YORK (UPI) — Academy Award-winning actress Anne Baxter, who was "purely and delightfully a professional" during a half-century career on Broadway and in Hollywood, died eight days after suffering a stroke at age 62.

Baxter died at 10:59 a.m. EST Thursday at Lenox Hill Hospital. She suffered a cerebral hemorrhage and collapsed on Madison Avenue Dec. 4 as she walked to her hairdresser.

Her three daughters were at her side when she died, her publicist said.

There will be no funeral for the actress, but memorial services in New York and Los Angeles are planned. No dates were immediately set.

Baxter was mourned by her colleagues as a "vibrant" woman who was in perfect health when she was stricken, starting in the ABC television series "Hotel" and writing a book.

"If Anne had lived to be 124, she couldn't have gotten it all done," said her grieving publicist and friend, Joyce Wagner. "I feel so bad that she's gone because there was so much that she had to do."

"She was purely and delightfully a professional," James Stewart recalled.

Baxter won an Oscar in 1944 for best supporting actress in the film adaptation of Somerset Maugham's novel, "The Razor's Edge," in which she played an unhappy American girl drowning her troubles with drink in Paris.

She was married to her husband, Ernest Borgat, in 1941. She was stricken, starting in the ABC television series "Hotel" and writing a book.

Kansas City balked at surrendering right-hander Mark Gubicza and outfielder Pat Sheridan for San Francisco's Chili Davis when the Giants wanted a third player, reliever Steve Farr.

Another rumor had Philadelphia shopping speedster Jeff Stone to Montreal, possibly for pitchers Dan Schatzeder and Gary Lucas.

The Red Sox and Orioles examined deals for Minnesota second baseman Tim Lincecum. Montreal's Andre Dawson and Bill Gullickson continued to draw interest.

Earlier this week, the Red Sox turned down a proposed trade that would have sent pitchers Jose Andujar, Ricky Horton, Jeff Labi and Kurt Kephire for left-hander Bruce Hurst. Instead, Andujar was dealt Tuesday to Oakland.

In addition to parting with Burns, the White Sox sent shortstop Mike Soper and outfielder Glen Braxton to the Yankees.

Soper, 24, a middle infielder, batted .296 with four homers and 49 RBI at Glen Falls of the Eastern League. Braxton, an 18-year-old outfielder, hit .255 with Saratoga of the Gulf Coast league in his first pro season.

Burns, 26, had his best year in 1985 when he posted an .18-18 record. He and Ron Guidry should give New York two formidable southpaws in the rotation.

"Left-handed pitching is important at Yankee Stadium," said New York manager Lou Piniella. "Soper has good stuff, a fastball, slider, and he's come up with a screwball. I'm happy to have him."

Burns spent parts of 1983 and '84 on the disabled list and has served in the White Sox' bullpen at times. Cowley, 6-foot-5 and 210 pounds, went 12-6 with a 3.85 ERA last season. He owns a 22-10 lifetime record in the big leagues.

Hassey, 32, hit .296 in his only season with the Yankees, with 13 home runs and 42 RBI. He hit two late-inning home runs in one game at Comiskey Park last year.

Here's what it might cost the Yankees to trade Andujar and one year left on his contract plus an option for 1987. He wants the option picked up, plus an additional payment up front. Overall, that means an extra million dollars.

Two separate sources have verified that amount. Kaptein declined comment on the exact figure but said talks with owners George Steinbrenner of New York and Jerry Reinsdorf of Chicago are continuing.

Yankees get Burns, Baylor on way out

By Mike Barnes
United Press International

SAN DIEGO — In the crazy world of modern-day baseball, the New York Yankees are doing Don Baylor a favor — and it could cost them $1 million for the pleasure.

Baylor, unhappy over a lack of playing time last season, asked the Yankees to trade him, and New York has tried to oblige.

On Thursday, the final scheduled day of the winter meetings, the Yankees swung a trade providing groundwork to make Baylor a slugger.

New York acquired left-hander Britt Burns and two minor leaguers from Chicago for catcher Ron Hassey and right-hander Joe Cowley.

Now they would like to send Baylor to Chicago for free agent Carlton Fisk. First, however, Baylor must waive a no-trade clause in his contract and the White Sox must sign Fisk.

Agent Jerry Kaptein represents both Fisk and Baylor, and enjoys the leverage to make both of them a lot of money.

Asked when the deal might occur, White Sox manager Tony LaRussa said, "I can't say. You'll have to ask Jerry Kaptein."

In other news, Pittsburgh named former manager Bill Virden as a hitting coach. Boston picked up outfielder and former Harvard star Mike Stenhouse from Minnesota for catcher Charlie Mitchell; and Detroit acquired third baseman Darnell Coles from Seattle for pitcher Richard Monteleone.

The three trades brought the total number of deals to 15 and players to 28. Last year in Houston, under pressure because the inter-league trading deadline coincided with the conclusion of the meetings, clubs moved 25 players in 10 deals.

Action could continue today, even with most of the teams having gone home. Boston was talking a deal to send shortstop Jackie Gutierrez to Baltimore for reliever Sammy Stewart. The Orioles sounded interested in converting Gutierrez into a third baseman.

Kansas City balked at surrendering right-hander Mark Gubicza and outfielder Pat Sheridan for San Francisco's Chili Davis when the Giants wanted a third player, reliever Steve Farr.

Another rumor had Philadelphia shopping speedster Jeff Stone to Montreal, possibly for pitchers Dan Schatzeder and Gary Lucas.

The clubs made little pretense of hiding the complicated nature of the deal. They talked for two months and one source told UPI, "They change names every five minutes."

Baylor collected 23 homers and 91 RBI while Fisk pounded 37 homers with 107 RBI.

Traded Andujar says he'll live in peace with AL umpires

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Fiery pitcher Joaquin Andujar, traded Tuesday from St. Louis to Oakland, said Thursday he was surprised by the deal and that will try to get along with American League umpires.

"I feel surprised," Andujar said. "Like I always said before, I wanted to die in St. Louis."

Asked if he thinks he was traded because of his nationally televised tantrum during the seventh game of the World Series, Andujar replied, "No, I don't think so. I'm hushy and can make a mistake. I was a little hard on the umpires."

Andujar made the comments in an interview with KMOX Radio in St. Louis from his home in the Dominican Republic.

The Cardinals acquired strong-throwing catcher Mike Heath and left-hander Tim Conroy for Oakland and hope for the best.

Andujar, who was thrown out of the final game of the World Series for arguing with the umpires, said he was frustrated at the time and now regrets his actions.

"A lot of little kids were watching the game," said Andujar.

Andujar said he would report to Oakland and hope for the best. "I wish I could go to St. Louis, but I'm a professional and I've got to take care of my family. You have to go where they send you. But I leave my heart in St. Louis."

Andujar will miss the first 10 games of next season while he sits out a suspension ordered by Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth.

Andujar, who during the series accused AL umpires of cheating him on strike calls, said he doesn't expect any problems pitching in the new league.

Celtics' Johnson injury not serious

BOSTON (UPI) — Boston Celtics guard Dennis Johnson suffered only hyperextension in his left wrist area and not a hairline fracture as feared, the NBA team announced Thursday.

He will miss Saturday night's game at Cleveland, the Celtics' next contest, "and it's going to be a day after that," a team spokesman said, expressing relief.

Following the Cleveland game, the Celtics host the Chicago Bulls Sunday night then play in Chicago on Tuesday night.

Johnson injured the area between his left wrist and thumb on a rebound play Wednesday night against the Sacramento Kings in the Boston Garden.

Hampton expects to see Jets again in Super Bowl

By Barry Wilner
The Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Dan Hampton not only is preparing to play the New York Jets this Saturday, he's expecting to see them in the Super Bowl.

Mike Ditka, who coaches the Chicago Bears for which Hampton is an All-Pro defensive lineman, also wouldn't mind if his team and the Jets meet in the National Football League championship contest.

First, though, the 19-1 Bears journey to Giants Stadium for a nationally televised game with the 14-4 Jets. Chicago already has clinched the home field advantage throughout the playoffs. The Jets could take a gigantic step toward qualifying for the postseason parade, as well as the AFC East crown, with a victory over the Bears.

"I'm convinced they are the finest team in the AFC East and that's a tough division," said Hampton. "I think these are the people we'll probably see in the Super Bowl."

Ditka, a protégé of Jets Coach Joe Walton who was a tight end at the University of Pittsburgh, admits he's sort of rooting for the Jets to prosper in the AFC.

"I hope it would be us against the Jets in the Super Bowl," said Ditka, whose team built a 12-0 record before losing to Miami, then edging Indianapolis last week. "I'd love to just get there. I sure wouldn't mind if Joe got there too."

Walton isn't even thinking about the playoffs or the Super Bowl just yet. The Jets almost certainly must win one of their last two games — they finish at home against Cleveland — to get into the playoffs, and they figure to need a pair of wins to capture the division crown.

Walton knows just how tough the Bears will be, even though Chicago has nothing to gain in Saturday's matchup, which will be aired on NBC at 12:30 p.m. EST.

"Remember, they are coming to New York and they want to impress all you guys," Walton said to a full house of reporters at a midweek news conference.

"We have to concentrate on Walter (Payton, who has rushed for at least 100 yards in nine consecutive games) and stop his running. But they have a great balance, they have guys who can get deep. McMahon is a good quarterback with scrambling ability."

"They're as good as anybody we play."

Also on Saturday, the Denver Broncos will try to keep their playoff hopes intact when they host the Kansas City Chiefs.

On Sunday, it's the New York Giants at Dallas; Seattle at the Los Angeles Raiders; Buffalo at Pittsburgh; Cincinnati at Washington; Green Bay at Detroit; Houston at Cleveland; Indianapolis at Tampa Bay; Minnesota at Atlanta; San Francisco at New Orleans; Philadelphia at San Diego, and St. Louis at the Los Angeles Rams.

On Monday night, New England is at Miami in a key AFC East contest.

The Broncos, 9-5 after a 17-14 overtime loss to the Raiders last week, must win their final two games to have a chance at the playoffs. Even doing that doesn't ensure a playoff berth.

Denver can win the AFC West title with two victories, coupled with a pair of losses by the 10-4 Raiders. Denver can also be a wild-card by winning twice and having the Jets, Dolphins or Patriots (all 10-4) lose twice.

If Dallas beats the Giants, it clinches the NFC East title. If the Giants win and the Redskins lose, then New York has the division flag.

Seattle must beat the Raiders to remain in contention for the playoffs, while the Raiders will win the AFC West with a victory over the Seahawks.

Cincinnati is tied with Cleveland atop the AFC Central and no wild card team will come from that division.

In the NFC West, the Rams will be champions with a win or a tie on Sunday. The Rams already have clinched a postseason berth as a wild card.

The winner of Monday night's game will take a giant step toward the AFC East crown. New England hasn't won in Miami in 17 years.

No referral on addition to cemetery

Commission member Joseph Tully said construction work would jeopardize improvements already made to the pond.

"THE POND has come a long way," he said. "The town has already spent a lot of money on it."

Glaser said his main concern is preserving a bank that runs along the side of the pond.

"If it were gone, I don't know what would happen to the trail and the aesthetics of the pond," he said.

Glaser said he has met with Town Manager Robert Weiss and Town Planner Mark Pellegrini about the possibility of the town buying the land along the water.

Glaser reported that Weiss's reaction to the proposal was "very sympathetic," and Pellegrini said he would explore the cost involved.

However, Pellegrini said this morning he is not preparing a cost estimate.

The commission also voted to ask for a change in town zoning regulations that would allow it to input into any decisions involving open land owned by the town.

The move came after members criticized the PZC for overlooking the commission when it considered the cemetery plans.

Under the town charter, the Conservation Commission is only an advisory body. However, Glaser said there was an informal understanding between the two commissions that it would be allowed to have input into matters involving town land and waters.

GLASER SAID that in a Sept. 24, 1984, letter sent to PZC Chairman Alfred Sieffert Sr. and Pellegrini, he specifically asked that the Conservation Commission be informed about any proposal concerning Union Pond and the land around it.

"I'm flabbergasted—absolutely flabbergasted—that the Planning and Zoning Commission would take action without consulting the Conservation Commission," Glaser said Thursday. "I'm just amazed."

Pellegrini said this morning that it was his fault the Conservation Commission was not notified about the cemetery. "It was just an oversight on my part," he said.

He said that he was an informal member of the meeting scheduled with the commission and the project's designer should help address the commission's concerns.

Sieffert could not be reached for comment. However, PZC member William Bayer said this morning the PZC usually informs the Conservation Commission about such matters. Bayer said he did not remember the circumstances surrounding the PZC's action on the cemetery plans.

Glaser said his commission cannot take legal action against the PZC, but it can bring pressure on the agency.

Talks due on the way ZBA works

Pellegrini said new site plans with the 300 spaces are being prepared.

After receiving PZC approval, Weinberg went to the ZBA for the variance that would allow him to construct only 175 spaces. The ZBA approved a variance requiring 200 spaces.

The variance is for three years. After that, Weinberg must come back to the board to either extend the variance or put in the additional parking spaces.

Sieffert and Gates said this week they were upset because they were not told during a public hearing on the special exception that Weinberg would apply for a parking variance.

"It upsets me when they (the developers) know what the regulations are and what the approval said and then they go to the ZBA for a variance," Sieffert said.

But Pellegrini said this week that the planning staff and Norman Isko, who represented Economy Electric at the public hearing, had told the PZC that Economy Electric would seek a variance from the ZBA.

"It wasn't a presentation," Pellegrini said. "It was a statement."

"I don't recall the discussion," Sieffert said. "If I had heard it I would have said (to Isko), 'I don't think you should do that.'"

Isko could not be reached for comment this morning.

"I don't think they're obligated to tell us," Bayer said. He said he did not think it was uncommon for developers to seek approval from the PZC and then go to the ZBA for a variance.

"I bet I can go into the records and find a dozen situations where we've approved something and they go get a variance from the ZBA," Bayer said.

David Falkenstein makes a dreidel with the help of Irene Milzoff, seated, and Ona Mastrorade in the Temple Beth Shalom Nursery School. The children are making dreidels to spin for the eight-day holiday of Hanukkah, which started Saturday night. The traditional toys have Hebrew letters on the four sides, standing for the phrase, "A great miracle happened there." This refers to the Maccabees' fight for religious freedom in ancient times.

Pratt talks continue; AFL-CIO lends help

VERNON (UPI) — The closed-door contract talks between Pratt & Whitney and the union for 5,300 striking machinists entered the second day today while a strike against the world's largest jet engine manufacturer entered its 12th day.

"No strike has been more important to the state labor movement than the current strike between the union and Pratt & Whitney," said Frank Carrano, president of the Greater New Haven Central Labor Council.

Carrano has organized a "committee of 500" AFL-CIO officials and members who plan to help strikers picket the company's four plants. The committee also intends to distribute some 40,000 leaflets to union members across the state urging them to support the strikers with donations of food and money, he said.

"We're also prepared for a massive mobilization of our members for a rally or demonstration if and when the IAM should request it, based on the outcome of the current negotiations," Carrano said.

Carrano said the news blackout only affects the negotiators. "We're showing our solidarity with that union," he said.

Actress Anne Baxter dies

NEW YORK (UPI) — Academy Award-winning actress Anne Baxter, who was "purely and delightfully a professional," during a half-century career on Broadway and in Hollywood, died eight days after suffering a stroke at age 62.

Baxter won an Oscar in 1946 for best supporting actress in the film adaptation of Somerset Maugham's novel, "The Razor's Edge," in which she played an unhappy American girl drowning her troubles with drink in Paris.

Baxter arrived on the East Coast Nov. 23 to spend Thanksgiving at her home in Easton, Conn. She had planned to return to Los Angeles last week to resume filming "Hotel," in which she played widow Victoria Cabot, the hotel owner.

"I adored her and I loved working with her. Her death is a great loss to me personally and a tremendous loss to the show," said "Hotel" co-star Connie Sellecca.

The granddaughter of architect Frank Lloyd Wright, Baxter was born May 7, 1923, in Michigan City, Ind., and raised as a socialite in New York City.

She made her debut on Broadway at the age of 13 in "Seen But Not Heard."

Baxter eventually won a long-term deal at 20th Century-Fox and made her first film, "Twenty Mile Team," in 1940.

In 1958 Baxter played the beautiful Queen Nefertiti opposite Charlton Heston as Moses and Yul Brynner as Rameses II in Cecil B. DeMille's spectacle, "The Ten Commandments."

"We have lost a remarkable actress and a significant star. Anne was a stimulating actress to work with and a fine woman as well. I will miss her," Heston said after learning of Baxter's death.

At her death, Baxter was under contract with the William Morrow publishing house to write a book on her film, trading her talents from her grandfather, Wagner said. It was half written.

"She will be terribly missed by me, as well as by many, many others," said actress Bette Davis who starred with Baxter in the classic film, "All About Eve."

Yankees get Burns, Baylor on way out

By Mike Barnes
United Press International

NEW YORK (UPI) — In the crazy world of modern-day baseball, the New York Yankees are doing Don Baylor a favor — and it could cost them $1 million for the pleasure.

Baylor, unhappy over a lack of playing time last season, asked the Yankees to trade him, and New York has tried to oblige.

On Thursday, the final scheduled day of the winter meetings, the Yankees swung a trade providing groundwork to make Baylor a Chicago White Sox.

New York acquired left-hander Britt Burns and two minor leaguers from Chicago for catcher Ron Hassey and right-hander Joe Cowley.

Now they would like to send Baylor to Chicago for free agent catcher Carlton Fisk. First, however, Baylor must waive a no-trade clause in his contract and the White Sox must sign Fisk.

Agent Jerry Kapstein represents both Fisk and Baylor, and enjoys the leverage to make both of them a lot of money.

Asked when the deal might occur, White Sox manager Tony La Russa said, "I can't say. You'll have to ask Jerry Kapstein."

In other news, Pittsburgh named former manager Bill Virdon as a hitting coach; Boston picked up outfielder and former Harvard star Mike Stenhouse from Minnesota; pitcher Charlie Mitchell; and Detroit acquired third baseman Darnell Coles from Seattle for pitcher Richard Monteleone.

The three trades brought the total number of deals to 13 and players to 28. Last year in Houston, under pressure because the inter-league trading deadline coincided with the conclusion of the meetings, clubs moved 25 players in 10 deals.

Action could continue today, even with most of the teams having gone home. Boston was talking a deal to send shortstop Jackie Gutierrez to Chicago for reliever Sammy Stewart. The Orioles sounded interested in converting Gutierrez into a third baseman.

Kansas City balked at surrendering right-hander Mark Gubicza and outfielder Pat Sheridan for San Francisco's Chili Davis when the Giants wanted a third player, reliever Steve Farr.

Another rumor had Philadelphia shopping speedster Jeff Stone to Montreal, possibly for pitchers Dan Schatzeder and Gary Lucas.

The Red Sox and Orioles examined deals for Minnesota second baseman Tim Lincecum. Montreal's Andre Dawson and Bill Gullickson continued to draw interest.

Earlier this week, the Red Sox turned down a proposed trade that would have netted pitchers Joaquin Andujar, Ricky Horton, Jeff Labi and Kurt Kephart for left-hander Bruce Hurst. Instead, Andujar was dealt Tuesday to Oakland.

In addition to parting with Burns, the White Sox sent shortstop Mike Soper and outfielder Glen Braxton to the Yankees.

Stoper, 20, a middle infielder, batted .296 with four homers and 49 RBI at Glen Falls of the Eastern League. Braxton, an 18-year-old outfielder, hit .255 with Saratoga of the Gulf Coast league in his first pro season.

Burns, 26, had his best year in 1985 when he posted an 18-11 record. He and Ron Guidry should give New York two formidable southpaws in the rotation.

"Left-handed pitching is important at Yankee Stadium," said New York manager Lou Piniella. "Burns has good stuff, a fastball, slider, and he's come up with a screwball. I'm happy to have him."

Burns spent parts of 1983 and '84 on the disabled list and has served in the White Sox' bullpen at times.

Cowley, 6-foot-5 and 210 pounds, went 12-6 with a 3.95 ERA last season. He owns a 22-10 lifetime record in the big leagues.

Hassey, 32, hit .286 in his only season with the Yankees, with 13 home runs and 42 RBI. He hit two tape-measure homers in one game at Comiskey Park last year.

Here's what it might cost the Yankees to trade Baylor and why:

He has one year left on his contract plus an option for 1987. He wants the option picked up, plus an additional $1 million up front. Overall, that means an extra million dollars.

Two separate sources have verified that amount. Kapstein declined comment on the exact figure but said talks with owners George Steinbrenner of New York and Jerry Reinsdorf of Chicago are continuing.

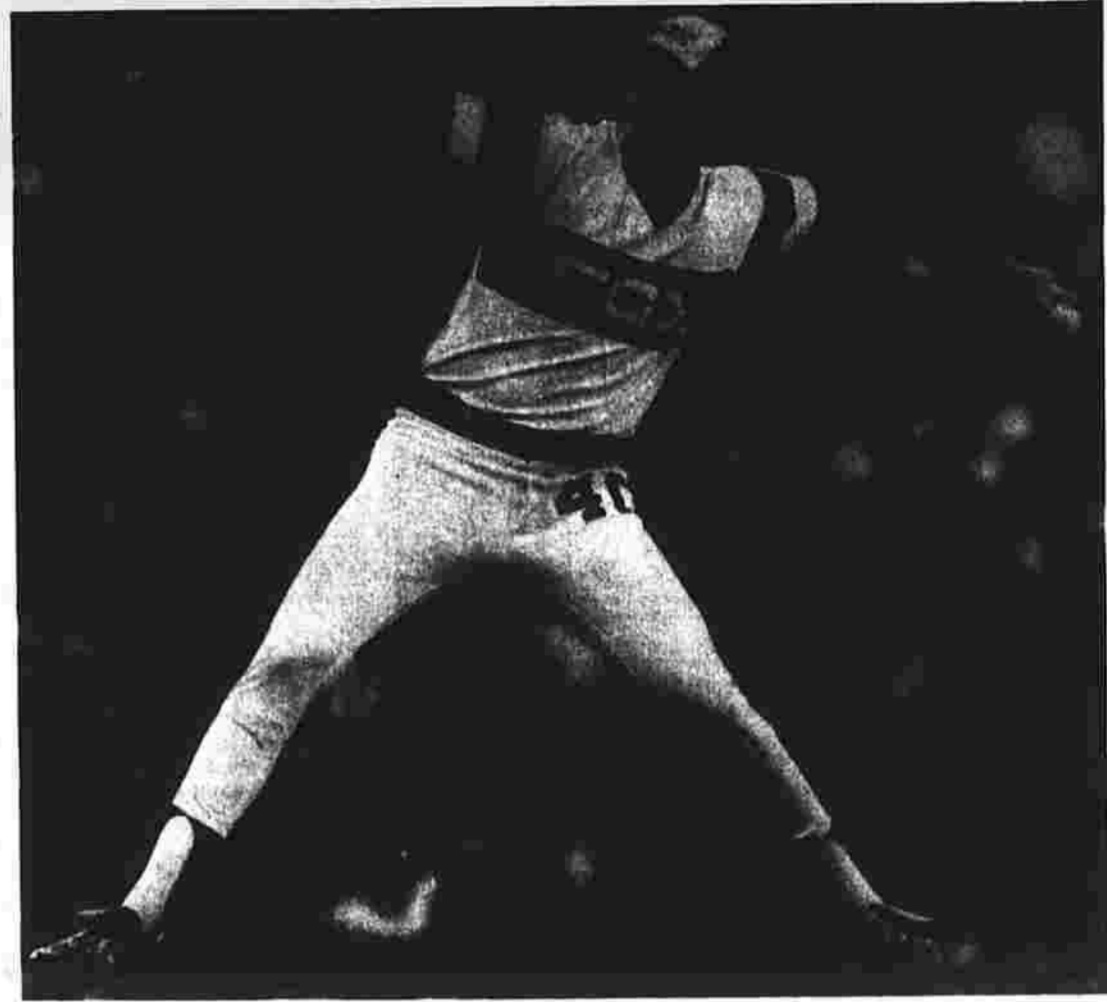

The clubs made little pretense of hiding the complicated nature of the deal. They talked for two months and one source told UPI, "They change names every five minutes."

Baylor collected 23 homers and 91 RBI while Fisk pounded 37 homers with 107 RBI.

Traded Andujar says he'll live in peace with AL umpires

By Mike Barnes
United Press International

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Flery pitcher Joaquin Andujar, traded Tuesday from St. Louis to Oakland, said Thursday he was surprised by the deal and that he will get along with American League umpires.

"I feel surprised," Andujar said. "Like I always said before, I wanted to die in St. Louis."

Asked if he thinks he was traded because of his nationally televised tantrum during the seventh game of the World Series, Andujar replied, "No, I don't think so. I'm human. Anybody can make a mistake. I was a little hard on the umpires."

Andujar made the comments in an interview with KMOX Radio in St. Louis from his home in the Dominican Republic.

Andujar, who was thrown out of the final game of the World Series for arguing with the umpires, said he was frustrated at the time and now regrets his actions. "A lot of little kids were watching the game," said Andujar.

Andujar said he would report to Oakland and hope for the best. "I think I could go to St. Louis, but I'm a professional and I've got to take care of my family. You have to go where they send you. But I leave my heart in St. Louis."

Andujar will miss the first 10 games of next season while he sits out a suspension ordered by Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth.

"I think it is too much," Andujar said of the suspension. "Three or four days — OK. But they want to make an example and they think of Joaquin."

"I agree I was a little hard on the umpire, but the commissioner, he was too hard on me."

Andujar, who during the series accused umpires of cheating, hit on strike calls, said he doesn't expect any problems pitching in the new league.

NBA roundup

Basketbol good for the Bullets

By Gerry Monigan
United Press International

Basketbol was very, very good to the Bullets.

Manute Bol received his first NBA start Thursday night and the 7-foot-6 rookie led Washington to its fourth straight victory, a 110-104 win over the Mavericks.

Bol blocked a team-record 12 shots and scored a season-high 18 points including 8 free throws in the final four minutes. Cliff Robinson's 17-foot baseline jump shot with one second left provided the winning points.

The Dinka tribesman from the Sudan had been used sparingly before last night, but was forced into extended action by the loss of center Jeff Ruland to a broken ankle suffered Wednesday night.

Bucks coach Don Nelson, never one to shy away from unorthodox strategy, elected to have Bol intentionally fouled numerous times down the stretch. Bol, 2-for-15 from the line entering the game, was unflappable, hitting 6-of-12 including 4 straight.

"That was the most dominating performance by one player I've seen this year," Nelson said. "We tried many things to stop him, and it's a tribute to him that we couldn't."

At New York, Buck Williams scored 20 points, and Darwin Cook added 12 to power the Nets to their ninth straight victory over the Knicks.

Bulls 106, 76ers 102
At Chicago, Sidney Green scored 22 points to lead the Bulls to their first victory over the 76ers in their last eight meetings. George Gervin added 19 points and Orlando Woolridge 17.

Rockets 123, Mavs 120
At Houston, Akeem Olatunji scored 27 points, 21 in the second half, and pulled down 18 rebounds to lead the Rockets to their third straight win over the Mavericks.

Lakers 127, Suns 102
At Inglewood, Magic Johnson tied his NBA season-high mark of 20 assists, and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar hit all 11 of his shots, helping the Lakers, 19-2, improve on their best start ever with a rout of the Suns. Phoenix played without guard Walter Davis, who left the club earlier in the year for undisclosed personal reasons.

Super Bowl.
Ditka, a protégé of Jets Coach Joe Walton when Ditka was a tight end at the University of Pittsburgh, admits he's sort of rooting for the Jets to prosper in the AFC.

"I hope it would be us against the Jets in the Super Bowl," Ditka said. "I'd love to just get there. I sure wouldn't mind if Joe got there too."

Ditka isn't even thinking about the playoffs or the Super Bowl just yet. The Jets almost certainly will win one of their last two games — they finish at home with Cleveland — to get into the playoffs, and they need to win one to need a pair of wins to capture the division crown.

Walton knows just how tough the Bears will be, even though Chicago has nothing to gain in Saturday's matchup, which will be aired on NBC at 12:30 p.m. EST.

"I'm convinced they are the finest team in the AFC East and that's a tough division," said Hampton. "I think these are the people we'll probably see in the

Celtics' Johnson injury not serious

By Mike Barnes
United Press International

BOSTON (UPI) — Boston Celtics guard Danny Ainge Thursday agreed to terms on a new multi-year contract, the team announced. No terms were disclosed.

Ainge, playing in his fifth professional season, became the Celtics starting guard when Gerald Henderson was traded to Seattle last season and produced his highest scoring output when he averaged 12.9 points per game last year.

The 6-foot-5 backcourt player was selected in the second round of the 1981 draft and signed with Boston after playing two seasons with the Toronto Blue Jays of the American League.

Henderson, a 6-foot junior guard, snapped a 51-51 tie with three straight long jump shots. Mitchell,

This children's fantasy pageant is based on the familiar poem by Clement C. Moore. The ballet is the creation of Priscilla Gibson, the artistic director of the company. With her former student Karen Moore, Gibson created imaginative choreography for the dancers from her school and guest artist Douglas Viasamp. Gibson also designed many of the colorful costumes. Many dancers' mothers made the lovely tunics, draped creations and character outfits that their sons and daughters wore.

Several pieces of recorded classical music by Tchaikovsky, Mozart and Handel were smoothly combined and usually appropriate to the dancing in various scenes. Generally choreography was suitable to the age of dancers. When an ensemble of 5-year-olds appeared, the dancers went through a series of cute poses and playful turns, relying on their smiles to win the audience over. With most ballet companies producing "The Nutcracker" for the holidays, Gibson's original and imaginative ballet is a notable exception to the rule. But the show is not without its rough spots. For six seasons Michael Parsons, the father of one of the ballerinas, has narrated succeeding stanzas of the poem between dance scenes. Saturday he sat on stage in a rocking chair, reciting without much animation to two

Claudette Colbert endures as a star

By Bob Thomas
The Associated Press
LOS ANGELES — Claudette Colbert strides offstage with co-star Rex Harrison, both seeming pleased that they have once more managed to breathe life into Frederick Lonsdale's antique comedy of manners, "Aren't We All?"
They are nearing the end of a run that has stretched from London to New York to San Francisco. Their next stop is Washington and there might be an Australian tour next year.
Miss Colbert is stunning in a couture gown, her small figure as trim as ever, the trademark bangs in place, the apple cheeks smooth as a girl's.
She goes directly to her smallish dressing room, changes into slacks, then receives post-performance visitors, including a surgeon colleague of her late husband, Dr. Joel Pressman, at UCLA Medical Center.
The visitors depart, and the actress settles down to vodka on the rocks and conversation about her career.
For 25 years she had been one of Hollywood's most dazzling stars, appearing in 53 films including "The Sign of the Cross," Cecil B. DeMille's "Cleopatra," "Imitation of Life," "Tovarich," "Boom Town," "So Proudly We Hail" and "The Fog and I."
The role that won her the 1934 Academy Award for best actress was the runaway heiress in "It Happened One Night."
Her studio days ended in 1955 with "Texas Lady," though there was a return in 1960 to do "Pariah" as fondly of her home in Barbados: "It's a divine place. The temperature never gets over 83 and never falls under 70. I love it there. I swim every day."
Then why would she leave to tour in a creaky, 60-year-old comedy? "I love to act," she confessed with a guilty giggle.
"I never thought I would still be acting at the age of 62. Never," she continued somewhat more seriously. "Jack (her husband) was all set to retire from UCLA in 1968, and we were going to spend our life together at Barbados, which we both loved."
"But while I was down there getting things ready, he had an operation here for cancer of the intestines. They removed all the cancer, but it had already spread to his liver. Within five months he was dead."
Since then she has devoted herself to the theater. She has had film offers but nothing good. "The only thing that could tempt me to come back is 'The Two Mrs. Grenvilles,' based on Dominick Dunne's book. I knew the woman he wrote about, and it would be fun to play her."

Celeb attends reception

Mickey Freeman, who gained international fame for his television role of Private Zimmerman for nine years in the Sgt. Bilko series, will appear at the reception in honor of Constance Ellis Kaplan of Manchester at 8 p.m. Saturday at the home of Joseph and Helen Kopman. For directions and more information, call Israel Bonds office, 236-4323.
Julius and Eleanor Karp are in charge of the event, which will also celebrate Israel's 37th year of independence. The tribute is under the auspices of the Manchester Committee for State of Israel Bonds. There will be no admission charge.
Freeman, who has won acclaim as a versatile comedian, dancer, singer and night club raconteur, also wrote scripts for the television series, "McHale's Navy" and commercials.

'Tobacco Road' of today may not match Caldwell's

By Karen Bennet The Associated Press

AUGUSTA, Ga. — If Jester Lester were to return to Tobacco Road, the only thing he'd recognize would be the skinny pine trees and red clay banks which line the highway.

Lester, a poor sharecropper, and his family — wife Ada, daughters Pearl and Ellie May and son Dude — are the bleak characters in Erskine Caldwell's "Tobacco Road," which painted a scathing picture of ignorant and amoral sharecroppers during the Depression.

The novel, set in east Georgia, shocked and embarrassed residents of the Augusta area when it was published 33 years ago.

Although there is a Tobacco Road in Richmond County, some Augusta residents insist that Caldwell wrote the novel based on his memories of Wrens in Jefferson County, a farming community southwest of Augusta, where Caldwell lived as a youth.

Others believe Caldwell was writing about farmers in Burke County, located on Richmond County's southeast border.

Italian team is frustrated in tracking pope's assassin

By Thomas Goltz United Press International

ANKARA, Turkey — The Italian prosecutor investigating links between Mehmet Ali Agca, the attempted assassin of Pope John Paul II, and the Turkish underworld is running into a problem.

"All our witnesses are liars," he says bluntly. Prosecutor Antonio Marini's energy remains unabated long past midnight when he returns to his apartment in Turkey for the third time this year.

"But we have to wade through the hours of lies and half lies in order to arrive at that moment when even the most dedicated liar reveals the truth," he said in an interview.

Marini is one of two Italian magistrates on an eight-man tribunal contemplating the fate of three Turks and two Bulgarians charged in Rome in the 1981 papal assassination attempt.

MARINI SPENDS most of every day inside the forbidding grey walls of Turkish prisons, doggedly asking prisoners about their links to Agca.

"It is frustrating, very frustrating," said Marini. "But with determination and patience, we have always been able to establish a link — even if tenuous — between Agca and his associates, despite the fact that nearly all those interviewed initially denied ever having anything to do with him."

One such incident, he said, was a long interview in Ankara's Mamak prison with Turkish underworld boss Mehmet Ugrulu, a mobster serving a life sentence. Ugrulu allegedly gave Agca a fake Indian passport during Agca's escape from Turkey in 1984.

Ugrulu initially denied knowing anything more about Agca than he said in a general underworld support system. "Metin" later turned out to be Agca, Marini said.

Marini "invited" Ugrulu to Rome to testify. Ugrulu suggested instead that Agca be returned to Turkey. "Bring him back to us and let us see how long it takes for him to change his tune," the mobster said.

IN A BRIEF respite from touring Turkish prisons, Marini and fellow magistrate Severino Santalupichi also called on a "special witness," Feridun Akkuzu. He manages a small Ankara workshop and outside prison allegedly received Akkuzu's help while the two were in Zurich prior to the assassination attempt in St. Peter Square.

Akkuzu, regarded as a key witness, initially admitted to having put up Agca after meeting him at Zurich's train station. Later he denied ever having met the man, claiming his remarks had been mistranslated.

Marini is reported to be trying to force Akkuzu to go to Rome to testify. He alleges that Akkuzu, like most of the other witnesses inside and outside prison, allegedly have had contact with Agca, were members of or had close links with the radical right-wing Turkish group known as The Gray Wolves.

The school's concert band will accompany him on "Cantica." All four will be soloists with songs of Dixie played by the Jazz Band. Band directors are Marilyn Lillibridge and Corine Zanetti. For more information, call 647-3574.

Whooping cough controversy

Parents distrust vaccine

By Govie Young United Press International

NEW YORK — Parents afraid whooping cough vaccine may have contributed to a recent rise in the incidence of the disease among children nationwide, according to an organization of pediatricians.

The American Academy of Pediatrics is urging all children be inoculated with five doses of the whooping cough vaccine, which a parent group charges results in brain damage and death to some of the infants who receive it.

But whooping cough, the common name of the respiratory disease pertussis, is also potentially fatal to babies and small children who cannot tolerate the fits of violent coughing brought on when the highly contagious bacteria infect and inflame the bronchial tubes.

According to the U.S. Centers For Disease Control in Atlanta, 2,689 reports of the disease have been filed so far this year, compared to 1,714 cases for the entire year of 1982, about the time the controversy over the pertussis vaccine came to light.

"These figures may be misleading," warned CDC public health advisor Dean Mason. "It is a significant increase but only a fraction of pertussis cases are reported. This may be an increase in reports, not of the disease."

But the pediatrician group points to a number of 1984 and 1985 whooping cough epidemics from Hawaii to Georgia and attributes them directly to negative reports on the pertussis vaccine, which is usually administered together with vaccines for diphtheria and tetanus.

"The chances of a child being endangered by pertussis are 10 times greater than that child being endangered by the vaccine," said Dr. Martin H. Smith, president of the pediatricians association. "There is no cure for pertussis."

CONTRIVERSY OVER the pertussis vaccine, first introduced in the 1930s, surfaced in 1982 when reports of children suffering convulsions, brain damage and even death became widespread.

Use of the pertussis vaccine had already declined in Europe to a low of 30 percent of all children in Great Britain and Sweden, health officials say. But in the United States, all states require a child to have several doses of the vaccine before being admitted to public or private schools.

"It is mandatory that children receive this vaccine, which leads to permanent hyperactivity, learning disabilities and to death in some children," says Barbara Loe Fisher, founder of Disabled Parents Together, a group whose abbreviation DPT matches that of the DPT (Diphtheria, Pertussis and Tetanus) vaccine.

Fisher's own son went into a convulsion hours after receiving his fourth dose of the vaccine at age 2 1/2 and now, at age 7, is in a learning disabled class near the family home in Vienna, Va.

She said she has received thousands of reports of pertussis vaccine reactions since she started the 15,000-member organization in 1982 and knows of several lawsuits over vaccine-related injuries.

A federal court jury in Lafayette, Indiana, is currently hearing a $5 million lawsuit against Parke-Davis Pharmaceutical Co. of New Jersey filed by a woman who claims a dose of pertussis vaccine caused retardation in her now 12-year-old son.

"It may be difficult for the pediatricians to admit the danger of DPT (vaccine) after years of supporting it," said Fisher. "But it really upsets me to hear they're back out there pushing this outdated, dangerous vaccine. "Many of those coming down with whooping cough have already been vaccinated," she said. "It's not even effective."

SMITH ESTIMATES the vaccine is over 85 percent effective. He said studies show one in 100,000 shots will result in encephalitis, or swelling of the brain. One in 9,500 unvaccinated children will suffer some damage after contacting the disease, he said.

Fisher disputed his figures, saying the one in 100,000 figure is based on a study in England where doses are lighter and children screened before receiving it. She said a study conducted by the University of California at Los Angeles in 1979 put the figure at one in every 875 American children. Smith still maintains the benefits of the pertussis vaccine outweigh the risks, as does Mason of the CDC.

Mason said a 1982 epidemic of whooping cough in England, where use of the vaccine has declined significantly over the last few years, illustrates the benefit-versus-risk issue.

"More children died of pertussis than did of the vaccine in its entire history," said Mason, who said an estimated 25 children died in the epidemic. He said an average of 10 children die of whooping cough every year in the United States.

Extra chance pays off

By James Jacoby Netherlands player Eddy Roozneck gained a non-vulnerable game in a match against Germany some months ago by following the time-honored principle of giving himself an extra chance for his contract. His German counterpart, also in three-no-trump, had won the spade king, overtaken the king of hearts with the ace and played queen of diamonds from dummy. When that lost to the king, the opponents cashed the remaining spades to beat the contract by a trick. Roozneck saw that he could give himself a little extra chance at the risk of only one more non-vulnerable doubled undertrick, so he took it. He won the spade king, but then, before crossing to dummy with the heart ace, he laid down the ace of clubs. When the king of clubs fell under the ace, there was no need to establish the diamond suit. He overtook the heart king and led the club 10 from dummy. When that won the trick, West showing out, he had 10 tricks. What would have happened if West had started with the K-4 of clubs and no king of diamonds, and had made the cute play of the club king? That's easy - you would now be reading about a great defensive play by West instead of a fine declarer's play by Roozneck.

Islamic Jihad says it caused Canada crash

GANDER, Newfoundland — Canadian investigators probing the crash of a military charter bringing 250 soldiers home for Christmas said today they would consider a claim that the plane was sabotaged by the Islamic Jihad organization.

They also said about half the bodies had been recovered by early today and that coroners were ready to begin autopsies in a makeshift mortuary set up in an airport hangar.

Islamic Jihad, whose claim appeared in Beirut newspapers today, was one of two Middle East terrorist groups that claimed to have planted a bomb aboard the plane before it left Egypt with members of the 101st Airborne Division serving with a Sinai peninsula peacekeeping force.

The airplane crashed in a deadly fireball Thursday shortly after taking off from Gander International Airport, where it had made a refueling stop. But officials said the plane did not explode until after it hit the ground and there was no evidence of sabotage.

Most speculation on the cause of the crash focused on the weather and a reported failure to have the plane deiced during the refueling stop in Gander, 900 miles northeast of Montreal.

It was the worst single charter plane crash in history and the worst such disaster involving U.S. military personnel.

BEIRUT NEWSPAPERS today reported a call late Thursday from an Arabic-speaking man claiming to represent Islamic Jihad who said the fundamentalist group had planted a bomb aboard the plane in cooperation with members of the "Arab Egypt Movement" — an exiled Egyptian group.

"We have proved to President

Reagan that we can carry out our threats," the caller said.

Islamic Jihad is believed to be holding at least four U.S. hostages and has claimed responsibility for many attacks against Americans in Lebanon — including the Oct. 23, 1983, bombing of a U.S. Marine barracks in Beirut that killed 241 Americans.

The second claim came in an anonymous telephone call to Italy's ANSA news agency by a person who said he represented "the Organization for the Liberation of Egypt."

"We claim responsibility for the explosion aboard the plane carrying American soldiers," the caller was quoted by ANSA. "We will continue our struggle against the American and Zionist occupation of Egypt until the total liberation of our people."

The organization for the Liberation of Egypt is not known to Italian police, who were investigating the phone call.

Christiane Beaulieu, a spokesman for the Canadian Aviation Safety Board, told a morning news conference in Gander investigators were taking the Islamic Jihad claim into account but would have no further comment until further analysis of the DC-8's flight data recorder and voice box.

THE TWO DEVICES, known as the plane's "black box," were recovered Thursday and sent to Canada's National Research Council in Ottawa for analysis, she said.

Thomas Hinton, director of the CASB, said today the voice and flight recorders were heavily damaged and would be able to provide only limited information.

Beaulieu said searchers left the crash site at midnight Thursday because they did not have enough light and were afraid of disturbing evidence. The U.S. Air Force flew in lights and other equipment overnight that should allow them to work through the night, she said.

About half the bodies of the 250 passengers and eight crew had been recovered by early today but light snow forecast for later in the day could slow the recovery effort. Pathologists will perform autopsies on some of the bodies in an airport hangar today, she said.

The Pentagon late Thursday began releasing the identities of the victims, after notification of next of kin, and dispatched military aircraft to pick up the remains, which were expected to be returned to Dover AFB after the completion of autopsies where necessary.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The following is the list of names of military personnel identified by the Pentagon Friday as killed in the crash of a charter jetliner at Gander Airport, Gander, Newfoundland.

The Arrow Air jet was carrying military personnel home from the Middle East for Christmas. All 250 soldiers and eight crew aboard died in the explosion Thursday. The list gives names, ranks, and hometowns of next of kin, who have been notified, the Pentagon said.

Friends and relatives cling to hope

By Martha W. Aldrich
The Associated Press

FORT CAMPBELL, Ky. — Friends and relatives, stunned by reports their loved ones were among 250 soldiers killed in a fiery airplane crash in Canada, "are holding on to a glimmer of hope" as they wait for officials to identify the victims.

A team of officers from the 101st Airborne Division resumed the somber task today of visiting next-of-kin who live on or near the U.S. Army base, said Maj. James Gleisberg, the division's public information officer.

"No one has been officially notified of a death," Gleisberg said Thursday. "But they have been notified that we believe their relatives were on the aircraft and possibly have been killed."

The formal notifications will not be made until authorities use medical records to identify the bodies — probably sometime next week — after the charred remains are transferred to Dover Air Force Base in Delaware, Gleisberg said.

The soldiers were returning from a peacekeeping mission in the Sinai Peninsula, where they helped operate checkpoints and make reconnaissance patrols in the Middle East.

A band and choir concert of Christmas music went on as scheduled Thursday night in tribute to the dead, but only about 100 people attended.

Col. Bernard F. Nass, Army chaplain, dedicated the concert "to the memory of our fallen comrades."

"The events of this day have certainly had an impact on our performance as well as on the audience. Life is always surrounded by the mist of death, but life goes on."

A homecoming celebration planned Thursday morning was shattered as families and friends mourned the crash that officials say caused more deaths in one day than the division had ever suffered in combat in World War II and Vietnam.

"We have suffered a tragic loss that will be everlasting, and our hearts go out to the families and loved ones of these brave soldiers who were on their way home from the peacekeeping mission in the Sinai," Maj. Gen.

Burton D. Patrick, the base commander, said at a news conference.

"They did a magnificent job. Their mission was flawless. For six months there, they kept the peace. Then by some quirk of fate, some plane falls from the sky and 250 soldiers are dead," Patrick said. "This is the deepest, most heartfelt tragedy of my time in the Army."

Gleisberg said some of the family members were in the gymnasium awaiting the homecoming celebration when they were told of the crash.

"The relatives are holding on to a glimmer of hope," he said.

Cindy Ivy said her husband, Cpl. Herbert Guy Ivy, called her Tuesday from Egypt to wish her a happy fourth wedding anniversary.

"Nothing has really been confirmed," she said, brushing away a tear.

The 21,000-soldier base, straddling the Tennessee-Kentucky border, awoke to the news Thursday that comrades were killed when a chartered DC-8 jet crashed after takeoff at Gander International Airport in Newfoundland.

Arrow Air says violations corrected

By Susan Postlewalte
United Press International

MIAMI — Officials of Arrow Air, whose DC-8 crashed in Newfoundland and killed 250 American soldiers, said the airline had corrected minor safety violations it was cited for in 1984, although the cases are still pending.

Jack Barker, a Federal Aviation Administration spokesman in Atlanta, said Arrow corrected the "five packages of violations" immediately, but the cases are still pending because Arrow hasn't yet paid a fine.

"They are largely paper violations, having to do with record-keeping," Barker said. "The alleged violations go back as far as 1983."

Barker said one violation, which has been resolved, involved security. Another involved failure to document maintenance.

"The work was done, but it wasn't documented," Barker said. The crash of the DC-8 at Gander, Newfoundland, was the first fatal
