Experts dispute Rogers

By Michael J. Sniffen
The Associated Press

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. — Four Marshall Spaceflight Center rocket experts, returning fire from a presidential commission probing the Challenger disaster, today disputed the panel's conclusion that NASA's decision-making process was "clearly flawed" in the hours before the Jan. 28 launch.

"No, I think the launch decision process is sound. I think the launch decision process in this case was sound," said Lawrence Mulloy, the space agency executive in charge of the booster rocket program.

After three days of public hearings, commission chairman William Rogers on Thursday bluntly rebuked officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration for giving the go-ahead for the Challenger liftoff when engineers had expressed deep concerns about the unusually cold pre-launch weather.

Two contractors — Morton Thiokol — maker of the booster rockets, and Rockwell International, maker of the spaceplane itself — had expressed reservations. The Morton Thiokol reservations were made to Mulloy and other Marshall center officials, but when company managers reversed their recommendation and gave their go-ahead, the Marshall officials decided it was unnecessary to pass word of the opposition to top launch managers.

NASA's procedures were "clearly flawed," Rogers said. Addressing top NASA officials, including the Marshall rocket program managers, Rogers said: "You eliminate the element of good judgment and common sense," and added that at some point the process allowed individuals "to vote maybe" when you "should require people to take stands and you should have a record on it."

But Mulloy rejected Rogers' complaints. "What he is describing should be done was exactly what was done. A stand was taken; a rationale for flight was developed. And it was not a 'maybe'; it was a documented 'go,'" he said.

Fourth-grader David Morgan happily lands at the bottom of a slide on the Waddell School playground Thursday during noontime recess. The recess is provided at all the town's public elementary schools, but the schools are having difficulty in getting enough supervisors to meet their needs.

Playground woes hit schools

By Susan Vaughn
Herald Reporter

Finding adults who want to spend two hours a day on the playground with lively kids has become a problem for the town's public elementary schools.

The Manchester school system hires three or four aides for each school to supervise the school cafeterias and lunchtime recess, but finding and keeping people to fill the positions has become increasingly difficult for a variety of reasons. Some schools have been short of aides for several weeks at a time this year, principals said this week.

Bowers School on Princeton Street, for instance, has been without one of its four regular aides since Feb. 10, forcing the school to fill in with substitutes on a day-to-day basis. Sometimes the substitute is Principal Anthony Spino.

Spino said Bowers has lost three aides this year to jobs with better pay or more convenient hours.

"There is not anything inherently awful about the job. Most people say they enjoy it," he said. But because the jobs "for such a short amount of time smack in the middle of the day," Spino said, it is difficult to attract people.

Grand List in Manchester up 3.8 percent

By George Lavno
Herald Reporter

Manchester's 1985 Grand List figures show a 3.8 percent increase over the 1984 assessment of taxable property. Town Manager Robert Weiss said this morning.

The full report, including the actual value of taxable property is scheduled to be released this afternoon by Town Assessor J. Richard Vincent.

Weiss said he expected an increase of around 4 percent when he predicted a 5-mill tax increase for the fiscal year that begins July 1. Those figures were based on the budget requests from town departments.

The increase this year is less than the 1984 Grand List increase of 4.6 percent.

The Grand List is the value of Manchester's taxable property compiled through October 1985. The totals are figured by adding the value of new homes, buildings and automobiles to the existing property evaluations.

The 1985 Grand List will be used to set taxes for fiscal 1987 when the Board of Directors adopts a budget in May.

The list was supposed to have been finished by Jan. 31, but delays caused Manchester and other towns in the area to ask the state for a one-month extension. The reasons for the extension included the state Motor Vehicle Department's delay in sending the town its list of registered motor vehicles, incorrect supplemental tax bills for motor vehicles, staff retirements and work on the re-evaluation of property that will be used for the 1987 Grand List.

The figures scheduled for release today are not final. The Board of Tax Review can change assessment rates on appeals from property owners. However, the changes are usually minor.

The 1984 Grand List totaled $687,116,307, which was a 4.6 percent increase over 1983 figures. The biggest increase in the 1984 totals occurred in motor-vehicle assessments, which rose 16.7 percent over 1983 figures.

The other elements of the Grand List are personal property and real property. In 1984, the second largest increase was in personal property assessments, which climbed 8.3 percent over the previous year. The value of real property rose 2.4 percent over 1983.

The increase in tax revenue expected to be indicated by the 1985 Grand List will be looked to as a way of funding budget increases called for by town department heads. That total budget, if approved, would mean an 11.9 percent spending increase over this fiscal year.

Weiss has said Manchester's tax rate would climb 5 mills over the current 44.48-mill level if the budget requests were approved and the town received the level of aid proposed by Gov. William O'Neill in his state budget request. Republican and Democratic members of the Board of Directors have said they expect a significant tax hike for town residents.

Democratic Majority Leader Stephen Penny predicted in January that the 1986-1987 tax increase would probably be the largest in 10 years, and Republican Director Donna Mercier agreed.

Both said they did not expect much opposition to an increase because a large part of it would be due to Board of Education budget increases, in particular higher teachers' salaries. The proposed education budget for next fiscal year calls for a 12.1 percent hike, which would mean a 4-mill rise in taxes.

State stats show health

HARTFORD (UPI) — The amount of taxable property in Connecticut increased 9.3 percent in 1984, representing another sign of continued economic health in the state, a non-profit research organization reports.

The "grand list" of all taxable property in Connecticut shows a total of $69.9 billion in 1984, compared to $63.9 billion in 1983, said Donald W. Goodrich, vice president of the Connecticut Public Expenditure Council.

The increase was made up of a 10.4 percent jump in the value of business properties in the state and a 7.7 percent hike in the value of residential properties, Goodrich said Thursday.

"I would say it shows healthy growth" for the state, said Goodrich, whose annual study is funded by Connecticut businesses for use by the companies and by the state and local governments.

Reopening of Nike rifle range would cost users plenty

By Alex Girelli
Associate Editor

If the town is going to reopen the rifle range at the former Nike Site, there will have to be a significant increase in fees charged for its use because of the high cost of renovation, Town Manager Robert

Weiss said this morning. Weiss made the observation just before a scheduled meeting with Recreation Director Scott Sprague to discuss the range problem. The town announced Thursday that it has closed the range because Building Inspector Russell Davidson had found serious problems with the electrical wiring. Davidson said today that there are exposed wires leading to fans and lights and exposed junction boxes.

Administration officials will determine how much it will cost to bring the range up to modern standards and report to the town Board of Directors. Weiss said. The directors will have to decide whether to make the necessary repairs or close the range permanently.

Weiss said the task will be complicated by the fact that there seems to be no single place to find safety standards for rifle ranges.

He said the town will check with the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration, with fire rating bureaus and with the National Rifle Association.

And Weiss suggested that if the town continues to operate the range, it might be necessary to contract with an outside firm to clean it regularly because lead residue from bullets may pose a potential hazard.

Sprague said today he has received phone calls from individual users of the range and from representatives of clubs that use it.

Panel wants Pentagon run more like business

By Tim Ahern
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan today accepted the report of a commission he appointed last year to recommend Pentagon management reform, and promised to "act promptly and firmly" to put its proposals into place.

"I will implement the recommendations in here as quickly as I can, even if they run counter to the wishes of the entrenched bureaucracy," Reagan told the commission chairman, David Packard, as he accepted the report.

Packard, former deputy defense secretary, said Thursday the commission wants the Defense Department, the nation's largest agency, to be changed so it is run "the way any business is run" and doesn't waste money.

The president told Packard, "I will act promptly and firmly on this."

Reagan named the commission last June. Its proposals are aimed at ending what Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger calls "horror stories" about high prices for spare parts and allegations of fraud and waste among defense contractors.

Packard said the goal of the ## Debate in Granite State may kick off campaign

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) — Although New Hampshire's first-in-the-nation presidential primary is two years away, discussions already are under way about the first debate.

A debate between prospective candidates Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., and Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., is being planned for early April.

"I think we're going to pull it off," state Democratic Chairman George Bruno said Thursday. "Gephardt wants to do it. It's just a question if Kemp will do it."

Both Kemp and Gephardt have been frequent visitors to New Hampshire, although neither has officially declared his candidacy.

"I think he (Gephardt) has thrown his hat in," Bruno said. "A congressman from St. Louis doesn't make three trips to New Hampshire two years before the primary just to check out the snow."

Across the nation

Sections of the Midwest, Northeast, South and Plains had snow today while dense fog prompted travelers' warnings in California and thunderstorms damped sections of Florida.
Snow extended across the lower Great Lakes into northern Pennsylvania and was scattered across the southern Appalachians into eastern sections of Kentucky and Tennessee.
Snow also was scattered from eastern South Dakota into northeast Nebraska and across southeastern Iowa across Missouri.
Travelers' advisories for dense fog were posted for the San Joaquin and Sacramento valleys of California, but skies were generally partly cloudy across the remainder of the western third of the nation.
Today's forecast called for snow showers scattered across the upper Ohio Valley and northern New England with rain and thunderstorms across much of Florida.
Highs will be in the 20s to 30s across much of the Northeast quarter of the nation; 30s to 60s near the Gulf of Mexico Coast and across much of the Western half of the nation; 60s to 70s across Florida; and 70s to 80s across much of the Southwest and desert Southwest.
Temperatures around the nation at 2 a.m. EST ranged from 8 degrees below zero at Hibbing, Mont., to 72 at Yuma, Ariz.

National forecast

During early Saturday, snow is forecast for parts of the Upper Great Lakes region. Elsewhere the weather will be fair.

Heat gets to Roth

Rock singer David Lee Roth has sued CBS for $25 million in Los Angeles, claiming the entertainment company failed to honor a contract by not producing a film he starred in.
In the suit filed Thursday, Roth contended that CBS Productions agreed to finance and produce the film, "Crazy From the Heat," with a summer release date tied to an album and concert tour.
But after the agreement was reached, CBS dismantled its movie production division, apparently as part of cutbacks following the expensive battle to fend off a takeover attempt by Cable News Network magnate Ted Turner, attorney C. Stephen Howard contended.
Jack Purcell, vice president and West Coast counsel for CBS, said he would not comment on the lawsuit.

Jazz has New twist

Jazz greats such as Dizzy Gillespie, Sy Oliver and Woody Shaw will be going to school — as teachers in the New School for Social Research's jazz curriculum in jazz school, the school in New York City says.
"For a long time, I had hoped to develop a program like this in New York — the music and jazz capital of the world — which we could build around a faculty of the greatest jazz artists who live and work here," university spokesman David C. Levy said Thursday.
Other musicians who have agreed to take part include Chico Hamilton, Milt Hinton, Major Holley, Thad Jones, Toots Thielmans and Grady Tate, the school said.

Flirting at 86

Bandleader Xavier Cugat is 86 and suffering from lung congestion but that doesn't stop him from making a play for the nurses in his Barcelona hospital room. Cugat was taken to the Quiron Clinic's intensive care unit from his suite at the Ritz Hotel Wednesday night. "His condition was critical last night but he bounced back today," a hospital spokesman said. "This morning he was joking with the doctors and winking at the nurses." Cugat, known for his rumbas and marriage to singer Charo, is in serious condition and will stay in the intensive care unit until Saturday. This trip to the hospital is his fourth since December 1982 for severe heart and lung problems.

Muslim aid

Yusuf Islam, better known as folksinger Cat Stevens during the 1970s, is heading up Muslim Aid — the Muslim version of Band Aid — to help the famine-stricken and needy refugees in Muslim nations. But don't expect any all-star concerts or record albums. Yusuf Islam, who gave up his music career when he became a Muslim, says his organization has absolutely no plans to follow the Band Aid lead when it comes to raising money. "It is a cruel and unnecessary way to raise charity while millions of people are dying," he was quoted as saying by IRNA, the official Iranian news service. Muslim Aid's first priority is helping famine victims in the Sudan and then will turn to Afghan refugees, Yusuf Islam said at a London news conference.

Royal swimwear

Princess Stephanie of Monaco says she went into the swimwear design business out of necessity — she couldn't find a swimsuit she liked in the stores. The 21-year-old princess was in Atlanta to preview her new line Wednesday night. Two models — not Stephanie — showed off the suits, which are very brief. "We tried to make the suits as sexy as possible but never vulgar," she said. Stephanie arrived late in Atlanta because she missed her first flight from Paris when a car she was riding in caught fire. She wasn't injured.

Gift to Texas

James A. Michener is pledging $1 million to the University of Texas for a program for aspiring writers. Michener, 79, is still recovering from open-heart surgery in an Austin hospital but his wife, Mari, attended the news conference where the gift was announced. A special limited edition of Michener's "Texas" will be officially released Sunday, the day Texas marks its 150th anniversary of independence from Mexico. The UT Press will publish 10,000 copies of the illustrated, two-volume set which will sell for $125 and also will put out 400 limited copies that will be hand-bound in buffalo hide and linen.

The turkey's return

Before this Thanksgiving, young wild turkeys may once again be running and foraging through the woods around Pilgrimage Plantation near Boston, where the elusive game birds kept the pilgrims from starving three and a half centuries ago.
State game officials released 13 wild turkeys on Monday at a secret spot in southeastern Massachusetts. With assistance from nine males — or toms — released earlier, they are expected to produce dozens of little gobblers in the coming months.

Joe Ranson watches over children on the Waddell School playground during noon recess Thursday. Ranson, who has been a playground aide for seven years, said he really enjoys the part-time job. All the public elementary schools have aides for the playgrounds during lunchtime, but they have been having a more difficult time attracting and keeping aides this school year.

School aides prove difficult to find

The aides are currently paid $3.75 an hour, but the Board of Education has proposed a raise to $4.75 next year. Spino and other principals said that could help attract, or at least keep, aides.
Washington School Principal Ray Gardner, who was principal at Bowers for many years, said that getting aides has never before been as difficult as it has become this year. Although Washington currently has enough playground aides, it was "quite a problem from October through January," Gardner said Wednesday.
"This kind of job suffers when there is good employment," he said, noting that part-time job opportunities are plentiful. Changing family circumstances also contribute to the problem of getting aides.
Not having steady aides makes it hard for the school to enforce rules consistently, Gardner said. Having the same person regularly also is easier for the children, he said.
In addition to possibly attracting more aides, Gardner said, he proposed increase in pay should be good for the morale of those who serve.
Repeated requests to parents to fill the positions at Washington were what finally paid off, Gardner said.
It has also helped to allow two aides to alternate the days they work, he said. The principals allow mothers to bring their younger children with them, but Gardner said that is hard on the children.
At Verplanck School, Principal Walter Roth said, "It has been kind of a desperate winter," but splitting the shifts for the aides has worked out well. Manchester Community College students have worked out their class schedules so that they can be on-site at Verplanck, Roth said.
Verplanck also has a senior citizen aide, but the other schools have not had much response to ads placed at the Senior Citizens' Center.
One school was able to combine a part-time classroom aide position with a nighttime aide position, said Assistant School Superintendent Wilson E. Deakin.
The proposed $10,000 increase in the nighttime aide allotment has a "pretty high priority" in the 1986-87 proposed school budget, Deakin said.
All the principals questioned said they need more substitute aides.

Former resident wins Alabama title

A former Manchester resident has been crowned Miss Alabama and will compete in the Miss USA Pageant May 29 in Miami.
Heather W. Howard, who lived in Manchester from 1966 to 1980 and now resides in Huntsville, Ala., was crowned Miss Alabama Saturday at the Sheraton Inn in Huntsville. It is the second title Howard has won since competing in her first pageant in 1983. She competed against 35 women in the latest contest.
"We're excited for her, we've known how hard she worked for us," said Howard's father, Robert E. Howard, a personnel supervisor of USBI Booster Production Co., an Alabama company.
The title allows Howard, 20, to represent Alabama when she competes with contestants from 49 other states in the Miss USA Pageant. The winner of that contest, one of the world's largest, will receive about $25,000, furs and other prizes.
"It's a big dollars," Robert Howard said. "I expect she'll do the best she can. We know we have a winner here. Whether or not she wins is up to chance, but we know she can."
"I guess I've gotten over the shock part," Heather Howard said from her home in Alabama Thursday night. "I'm a little excited and a little nervous about being on national television."
Howard said she is trying to build her stamina for the 23 days she will be in Miami during the competition. She started an exercise class today to get in shape.
"I'm gearing myself for the competition," she said. "Mentally you have to gear yourself to go against girls who want this more than anything else."
Howard said she has her daughter's biggest gift is her public speaking ability. That has helped her in the pageants she has entered. She won two of them, including the Miss Alabama contest, and placed higher than fourth in the other two, Howard said.
To allow Heather to compete in the Miss Alabama contest, the Howards spent about $1,500, her father said. The money went for clothes, shoes and other accessories. The competition in Miami will cost even more.
"That cost money, more than I've got," Robert Howard said. Heather won the Miss Alabama American Coed pageant, a teenage pageant, in July 1983. She was 17 at the time and it was her first pageant.
When in Manchester, Howard attended Martin Elementary School and Bessie-Junior High School. She was 13 when she moved with her father and mother, Carole, to Huntsville.
Howard is currently a sophomore at Birmingham Southern College in Alabama, majoring in public relations.

District 1199 says Crestfield owners' suit is 'ridiculous'

Officials of the New England Health Care Employees Union, District 1199, which represents about 60 employees of the Crestfield-Fenwick nursing home who ended a bitter 14-week strike Jan. 28, called a lawsuit filed against them by the home's owners "ridiculous" and a "waste of time."
"We just brought it to the attention of our attorney," District 1199 spokesman Bill Meyerson said Thursday. "He'll do the minimal required to deal with this nonsense."
The owners of the Vernon Street nursing home filed the suit this week seeking $15,000 in damages as a result of the strike, which began Oct. 21 after management refused to negotiate a contract with District 1199 despite a federal order to do so. The union and owners agreed to end the strike last month when a federal court decided to expedite a case involving District 1199's recognition.
The suit, filed in Rockville Superior Court, charges that District 1199 damaged the owners' reputations during the strike by referring to them as "lawbreakers" in conversation with reporters and state officials.
"The said statements were and are false," the lawsuit reads, "and were known by defendants to be false when they made them." The home's owners — Rolland Castleman and Josiah Lessner, both Manchester attorneys, and Howard Dickstein, a Vernon social worker — said the union's charges were made "with actual malice and with a willful intent to injure (the owners) in their business and professional reputations."
"We felt it was our responsibility to let the public know they were spending tax dollars while this unnecessary strike was going on," he said.
The National Labor Relations Board in Washington, D.C., certified District 1199 as the legal bargaining agent for aides and other service employees at the nursing home Oct. 1. The owners refused to negotiate with the union because, they said, it did not represent an "uncoerced majority" of the service employees at Crestfield-Fenwick.
The question of union recognition will be taken up by the Second Circuit Court of Appeals in New York March 13.

Police chase ends in crash, arrests

Four people were injured Thursday night in a two-car accident at the corner of Tolland Turnpike and Buckland Street that was caused when one of the cars crashed into the other after being chased by police, police said this morning.
Police said the car being chased was later said by its two occupants to have been stolen in East Hartford. A Manchester man who was the passenger was discovered by police to have escaped from a Brooklyn, Conn., jail, police said.
Police said Eric Holcomb, 17, of 69 Main St., who was serving a one-year jail sentence for burglary, was turned over to state authorities this morning. Police said he ran away from the crash scene, but was apprehended at a Tolland Turnpike supermarket.
Holcomb escaped from the Brooklyn Jail Feb. 11 while on outside recreation, a prison spokesman said this morning. He is expected to be returned today after being presented in court on escape charges, the spokesman said.
Holcomb told Manchester police that he and John Bagley, 20, of East Hartford stole a 1964 Oldsmobile four-door sedan from a driveway, police said. Bagley and Holcomb did not know whose car it was, and police said there have been no reports of a stolen car.
Police said the car, driven by Bagley, was observed traveling from East Hartford with its rear license plate dangling. Police said the officer followed the car to run a check on it, but the vehicle sped up in order to elude police.
The officer followed the car on Center Street and Broad Street, but lost it at the intersection of Broad and Tabular streets at a time when police said the car was traveling at about 80 miles per hour. Police said the vehicle was later seen traveling north on Adams Street when it sped up again and struck the passenger side of another car at the intersection of Tolland Turnpike and Buckland Street at about 10:30 p.m.
Police said the other vehicle was driven by Jesse Barber, 30, of East Windsor. Ethel Barber, 48, also of East Windsor was a passenger, police said. Their 1982 Chevrolet Impala station wagon suffered heavy damage on the left side, police said.
Both were treated and at Manchester Memorial Hospital for bruises and lacerations and were released, a spokeswoman said this morning. Bagley and Holcomb were also treated at the hospital for bruises and released, she said. Bagley was charged with failure to obey a control signal, evading responsibility, misuse of registered plates, engaging police in pursuit, reckless driving and operating while his license was suspended, police said. He was being held on $1,000 bond and is scheduled to appear in Manchester Superior Court on March 10.

Surplus should go toward human services, Swensson says

Rep. Elsie "Biz" Swensson, R-Manchester, said Thursday that more than half of the state's Republican representatives will support using much of the state's anticipated $100 million surplus to support human services programs.
Speaking at the monthly meeting of the Manchester Community Services Council, Swensson indicated support for proposed legislation that would affect day-care centers and for several bills that would increase grants to elderly people on state assistance.
Swensson was the only one of five state legislators invited to the council's meeting who showed up to talk about bills on human services that are being considered in the Legislature.
In answer to a question by council member Archibald Stuart on the outlook for day-care centers, Swensson said that the Legislature's Insurance Committee, of which she is a member, is working on a bill to cap on insurance for towns and businesses that have difficulty getting liability insurance. She said she thought that day-care centers would be included.
Council Chairman Philip Susag said the increased cost of insurance might be a major deterrent to the expansion of day care. Another council member said that "We do need day care and we need competent ones," state Rep. Elsie Swensson said, indicating her support for legislation that would help day-care centers get insurance.
The problems obtaining insurance may force small day-care centers to go underground.
"We do need day care and we need competent ones," Swensson said, indicating her support for legislation that would help day-care centers get insurance.
Swensson said she supports a bill approved by the Insurance Committee that would provide an extra $500 for home health care to elderly people on Medicare who are discharged from the hospital early. Medicare will not cover the services of a registered nurse.
Swensson for her opinion of Gov. William O'Neill's $7.7 million "Healthy Start" proposal, which would provide improved health care for pregnant women and their babies. The bill is now being considered by the Appropriations Committee.
Swensson said she was not familiar enough with the bill to predict how it would fare. She is no longer a member of the Legislature's Human Services Committee.
Kraatz indicated after the meeting that he and other public health officials are pushing for the bill. Swensson urged council members to contact their legislators directly to indicate their concerns on legislation.

Rogers raps NASA decision-making

By Al Rossiter Jr.
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The shuttle commission, completing one aspect of its investigation into the Challenger disaster, concluded NASA's launch clearance process was marred by misunderstanding and communications breakdowns.

"The process as it worked in this case was clearly flawed," said William Rogers, chairman of the presidential panel given four months to determine what went wrong.

The one-time attorney general and secretary of state under two presidents said recommendations to delay the fateful launch of Challenger Jan. 28 because of unusually cold weather either were not forwarded to top project officials or were misunderstood.

The 13-member commission Thursday completed three days of hearing testimony from nearly two dozen officials from NASA, Rockwell International, maker of the Challenger, and Morton Thiokol Inc., builder of the ship's booster rockets.

Although the cause of the fatal sequence of events remains unresolved, a growing body of evidence is pointing to possible failure of two synthetic rubber O-rings to seal a joint between two rocket segments on the right-hand booster.

William Rogers, chairman of the presidential commission investigating the shuttle Challenger disaster, looks at a NASA document during Thursday's public hearing in Washington.

A SERIES OF sharp color pictures given to the commission Thursday showed better than ever a dark puff of smoke coming from the side of the booster immediately after ignition, and a NASA engineer said the smoke appeared to come from the seam.

That would support one theory that the two O-ring seals between the lower rocket joint failed at the instant the rocket ignited, releasing the smoke. Then, the theory goes, one of the damaged seals finally seated and held for 58 seconds.

It was the 58-second point in the flight that tracking pictures revealed 5,900-degree gases spewing from the side of the booster. Challenger's external fuel tank exploded 15 seconds later, destroying the shuttle and killing its crew of seven.

Rogers said further public hearings have yet to be scheduled, but will not be held before next Thursday. Staff director Alton Keel said the commission will split Rockwell International officials were concerned about ice from launch pad equipment damaging Challenger at liftoff, something that apparently did not occur. Morton Thiokol engineers feared cold weather might harden the crucial rocket seals.

JESSE MOORE, who then headed the shuttle program, testified Thursday that no one had told him at the time of Thiokol's reluctance to launch in the cold weather. He said he thought Rockwell was just expressing a concern.

"The thought did not cross my mind that Rockwell was saying no-go," he said.

Richard Smith, director of the Kennedy Space Center, said he too did not realize Rockwell felt a flight was unsafe. "They did not nonconcur," he said.

"That illustrates one of the things that obviously has to be corrected," Rogers said. "There are a lot of maybes. A lot of people have been voting maybe. It would seem to me the decision-making process would require people to take stands and you should have a record of it."

"The Rockwell people clearly think they indicated concern to the point that they did not recommend launch. And apparently that was the first time they had done it. So they, I think, believed they were saying, 'we do not recommend launch.'"

"You on the other hand are saying we thought it was OK to launch. It seems to me if you're going to have a decision-making process with key people involved it ought to be clear where they stand. Otherwise there is a lot of second guessing."

Ariane rocket boosts Europe's pride

PARIS — Officials of Europe's Ariane rocket program may expand the project to handle eight additional satellite launches through 1988, serving customers whose projects were delayed by the shuttle Challenger disaster.

Ariane officials said at a news conference Thursday that if contracts are received to launch eight more satellites, Ariane could generate an extra $300 million in business.

The officials insisted the Ariane program — a disposable, unmanned competitor to the American shuttle — was not trying to take advantage of the Jan. 29 Challenger explosion that killed seven crew members.

made up of 36 European manufacturers that manages and finances Ariane production, marketing and launch operations.

"We know that a number of customers are being affected by the delays in the shuttle program," said Arianespace President Frederic d'Allest. "A number of companies and organizations trying to protect the safety of their projects are questioning us."

Various international firms, some of them American, have lamented Arianespace. Bigot said. He declined to identify them.

Ariane rockets are launched from the French National Center for Space Studies at Kourou, French Guiana, on the northeastern coast of South America. Thirteen of 16 launches of the rockets since 1979 have been successful.

placed into orbit a $250 million French observation satellite and a $20 million Swedish satellite. The next launch is scheduled March 12.

Bigot said the European space program has committed itself this year to as many satellite launches as it can handle — seven more, carrying 12 satellites.

But he said the program can be expanded in 1987 and 1988 to carry eight more satellites. In addition to the 15 Arianespace already plans to launch, the current cost is about $20 million to $25 million.

With the new system, customers can pay the launch cost plus 11 percent of that figure. If the launch fails, the insurance company will let the customer use the 11 percent toward a new launch.

many as three satellites.

He said the latest in a series of Ariane launchers, Ariane 4, can be equipped with extra boosters that will allow it to send a heavier payload into space.

The officials also announced formation of a separate insurance company to help reduce the cost of insuring a satellite against failure.

The current cost is about $20 million to $25 million. With the new system, customers can pay the launch cost plus 11 percent of that figure. If the launch fails, the insurance company will let the customer use the 11 percent toward a new launch.

Aquino orders release of prisoners

By David Briscoe
The Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines — President Corason Aquino today ordered the Philippine military to release all of deposed ruler Ferdinand E. Marcos' political prisoners, including suspected members of a communist insurgency.

Presidential spokesman Rene Saguisag announced Aquino's new directive at a news conference a day after her government slowly began releasing some of the more than 500 political prisoners officials say are still in military detention.

When asked whether the order included Jose Maria Sison, suspected leader of the Philippine Communist Party, which had been outlawed under Marcos, as well as other people suspected of being insurgents, Saguisag replied, "without any exception."

The presidential spokesman, a human rights lawyer who is a member of the committee studying the release of prisoners, had acknowledged Thursday that there was "very strong resistance" to the release of certain people.

That was widely interpreted as meaning that senior officials in the Philippine military were adamant that at least some prisoners suspected of taking part in the New People's Army communist insurgency should not be freed.

But today, Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile said, "We are bound by the order of the president. If the issues that order, we will carry it out."

Of 39 prisoners initially slated to have been released Thursday, only 16 had actually been freed by this afternoon, bringing criticism from human rights groups and an association of relatives of political prisoners.

But former Sen. Raul Manglapus said that despite his gratitude for the U.S. role in ending Marcos' 20-year reign and bringing Corason Aquino to power, he found it "lamentable that it took such a long time for them to do it."

Later, Aquino and Manglapus hugged as he visited her at her headquarters. Manglapus handed her a box of yellow chrysanthemums, and Aquino said, "I'm so glad to welcome you back."

Aquino's government, now 33 days old, continued to free political prisoners by this morning, including 10 in Manila and three in both Iloilo and Davao.

The government, which ordered 39 prisoners set free on Thursday, said hundreds would probably be released by next week. Officials say the process has been slowed by medical clearances, and because releases must be approved by several people in different locations.

Officials have said more than 500 people were being detained on politically related charges when Marcos fled the country.

Scores of people greeted Manglapus as he landed at Manila International Airport. The former president of the U.S.-based Movement for Free Philippines left his Asian island nation the day before Marcos decreed martial law in 1972 and had led anti-Marcos forces in the United States. Marcos had accused Manglapus, a former foreign secretary and constitutional law professor, of subversion and of allegedly giving long-distance support to terrorists.

"It was the people of the Philippines, people power, that pushed the dictatorship to the brink," said Manglapus, referring to the anti-Marcos military and civilian rebellion. "But it was the final Reagan touch that pushed him over."

Reagan, who originally said both Marcos' and Aquino's supporters might have cheated in the fraud-marred Feb. 7 election, later blamed the irregularities on pro-Marcos forces.

On Monday, the White House grew weary of Marcos' reluctance to relinquish power, saying it would be "futile" to try to retain power by violence.

The next day, Marcos took the oath for a new six-year term. However, he fled hours later to Clark Air Base, then flew with an entourage of family members and associates to Guam and on to the United States, calling Marcos an "old friend and ally."

But he said the Nicaraguan case, with the opposition stifled and the media systematically censored, is "far, far worse."

Shultz recalled that Marcos rejected advice from his generals during his last days in power to order loyalist troops to fire on hundreds of thousands of Aquino supporters that surrounded rebel military leaders.

"He wouldn't do it, although many urged him to," Shultz said. "Does anyone have any doubt what the order would be from the people running Nicaragua?"

Secretary of State George Shultz testifies Thursday before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, urging military support for the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

Secretary makes new plea for aid

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration is using a new weapon to persuade a skeptical Congress to go along with giving military aid to Nicaraguan rebels: its foreign policy victory in the Philippines.

"We stood for democracy in the Philippines; we have to stand for democracy in Nicaragua and throughout Central America and in our own hemisphere," President Reagan told bipartisan lawmakers Thursday at a White House lobbying session for his $100 million aid package.

Secretary of State George Shultz later used the same argument during an emotional congressional hearing where he turned up the rhetoric against the leftist Nicaraguan regime and angrily pounded the witness table when he detected a "flip comment" from a Republican senator.

Shultz told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that Nicaragua is "a cancer right here on our land mass and it's trying to spread itself through various means."

Shultz compared the Nicaraguan situation with the Philippines crisis before Marcos was ousted and replaced by Corason Aquino. But he said the Nicaraguan case, with the opposition stifled and the media systematically censored, is "far, far worse."

Shultz recalled that Marcos rejected advice from his generals during his last days in power to order loyalist troops to fire on hundreds of thousands of Aquino supporters that surrounded rebel military leaders.

Committee members from both parties were skeptical about Reagan's request Tuesday for $100 million in aid for the Contra rebels — $70 million for military aid and $30 million in other assistance — to be spread over 18 months.

Last year, Congress approved $27 million in humanitarian assistance for the Contras, an allotment that ends March 31. Committee Democrats said that program has been a failure and urged Shultz to give the Contadora negotiations for a regional peace settlement a chance.

Shultz said there were no plans to send U.S. troops to Nicaragua. But Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the panel, said withholding support for the Contra rebels "could well lead to a situation in which direct U.S. involvement is even more probable than under the course proposed by the administration."

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., told Shultz the Contadora nations — Panama, Colombia, Mexico and Panama — should take the lead and the United States should "stay in the background."

"We should negotiate and we have been trying to negotiate," Shultz insisted.

But he accused Nicaragua of supporting subversion of governments throughout the hemisphere and showed the senators one of several color-coded charts he had brought along to illustrate his arguments.

An exchange over one of the charts ignited the usually placid Cabinet official. The chart purported to show the increase in the Contra forces from zero in 1979 to more than 15,000 in 1985.

Sen. Dan Evans, R-Wash., remarked that if the Contras grew any quicker, they would soon outnumber the Nicaraguan army.

At that point, Shultz's anger flared. "Are you serious about that?" he demanded of Evans. "Is that a flip comment? It's not a flip subject. Really."

"It's a very serious subject," Shultz said.

Haste won't aid democracy in Philippines

"Don't expect miracles," a State Department official warned just after the policy adopted in Washington for the Philippines this week in one of the century's more peaceful rebellions.

But as usual, members of Congress weren't listening.

While some were content to halt the turn of events that saw Marcos pushed out in favor of Corason Aquino and wait for subsequent developments, others were quick to call for an unconditional increase in U.S. aid, an increase conditioned on an agreement to retain Clark Air Force Base and the Subic Bay Naval Base, or just about any other type of American intervention in Philippine affairs.

Three days after Marcos' departure, there is no doubt that U.S. citizens should regard the way he was removed with satisfaction. For a change, the Reagan administration acquitted itself admirably in a foreign policy quagmire, using its influence to aid in a democratic triumph of major proportions.

But the power shift and all the warm words by no means indicate that the problems faced by the Philippines can be resolved overnight. And no amount of U.S. aid, advice or coercion will change that. Some of the many political leaders seem quick to forget.

Immediately after Aquino took control, Democratic Rep. Stephen Solarz, speaking for one political faction and citing "a vital interest in the success of democracy," called for an increase in U.S. support for Manila. Republican Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, speaking for another, said that any aid request would have to be considered "in the context of what we hear from them on the bases."

Neither, apparently, was willing to await what should be the real guide to the policy adopted in Washington: the steps taken by President Aquino, Vice President Salvador Laurel and their government. Whatever these may be, they will be dictated by concerns somewhat different than those that predominate at the White House and on Capitol Hill.

The Aquino administration faces a host of domestic problems that have been around since well before Marcos came to power. While his two decades of heavy-handed and corrupt rule certainly made things worse in many ways, the Philippines has long been home to rampant poverty and the numerous other problems common to former colonies in Asia.

It currently faces an unemployment rate of around 50 percent, a foreign debt of $25 billion, and a communist insurgency that has shown an ability to capitalize on domestic problems. And until recent days, U.S. policy makers did little save to prop Marcos up and periodically ensure that our two largest bases abroad could continue operating.

Our course now must be far more measured. If Aquino and her colleagues are to succeed, they must be assisted by a progressive policy on the part of the U.S. one that cannot be hastily framed or have two military bases as its sole concern. It is almost certain that whatever happens, the numerous ties that bind the U.S. and the Philippines will continue in force. That should especially apply to the obligation this country has to promote democracy in its former possession.

Given what has happened thus far, it is clear that both the Dole and Solarz factions have spoken prematurely. The only sensible path for the United States to do is abide by its current commitments, help wherever possible and wait for the reforms that must come if the Philippines is to begin climbing out of the rut left by the Marcos era.

Then, and only then, can this country work out a plan to further what began as a despot's charade and ended as a victory for freedom.

Austria breaks laws by selling arms to Iran

WASHINGTON — The largest industrial concern in Austria, the state-owned Voest-Alpine conglomerate, is under investigation by its government for engaging in improper transactions that may include illegal arms sales to Iran.

An Austrian official told us there have been "heavy political discussions" in the last year about the operations of Voest-Alpine and its subsidiaries. These discussions evolved into an investigation of whether the companies were "engaged in deals which they were not supposed to do," he said, including possible illegal arms transactions.

The Voest-Alpine group hasn't made a profit since 1978, sustaining heavy losses by its steel-making operation and poor oil investments. Austrian citizens have lost millions as the government poured money into Voest-Alpine.

In fact, sources said, it was this very situation that may have led company officials to enter into secret negotiations with Iran. By the treaty that ended Allied occupation after World War II, Austria is officially and permanently neutral; the sale of arms to a nation at war is a violation of Austrian law.

OVER THE PAST YEAR, the Austrian government has become concerned at the sizable quantities of Austrian-made weapons that have been showing up on the Iranian side of the stalemate Persian Gulf war. The amount seized to be more than would normally reach the Iranians through the black market or unscrupulous arms dealers.

Our intelligence sources, including some inside Iran itself, say that a partial explanation for the appearance of Austrian-made arms is the theater of war in back-door deals made with Austrian firms, including the Voest-Alpine group.

In fact, we have a copy of a five-page, "memorandum of understanding" between Voest-Alpine and the Islamic Republic of Iran, signed Feb. 14, 1985. The contract, which ends today, was a barter deal: Iran was obligated to provide $1 billion worth of crude oil in exchange for certain manufactured goods and raw materials.

An annex to the contract lists the goods only generally: $550 million worth of "Various Equipment and Materials," $150 million worth of "Various Products Including Spare Parts" and $100 million in "Pharmaceuticals."

But included in the "Various Equipment" category, according to information coming from Iran, were military items, among them some 155mm howitzers made by Noricum, a Voest-Alpine company.

THE IRANIAN NEGOTIATORS were four military officials whose last names are Azizi, Rizai, Zadeh and Tabibi. They instructed their agents to inspect the military items before they left Austria to make sure they were satisfactory.

Our sources say the final hitch in the billion-dollar deal was over the commission. "There was a fight over the percentage of the commission on these weapons," said a source close to the negotiations. The price of the arms had been jacked up as much as 35 percent to allow for payment of the commissions, the source explained, adding: "There were arguments over this."

Once the commission was agreed on, the transaction was sealed. Since the Austrians could not legally ship arms to combatant Iran, our sources said, the "end-user" certificates, indicating the weapons' ultimate destination, were presumably written to show a different country than Iran. It is known that the weapons were to be shipped by way of neighboring Yugoslavia.

AS AN EDITOR and critic, Warren helped shape the literary aesthetic of this century. In 1939, he was one of the contributors to "I'll Take My Stand," the first manifesto of the Southern Agrarian writers, so known partly because of their concern about the industrialization of the South. They included poets Allen Tate and John Crowe Ransom.

A Rhodes scholar, Warren taught at various universities for almost 40 years, including Yale from 1959 until 1972.

Since 1953, he has lived with his wife, writer Eleanor Clark, in a series of converted barns in the Connecticut countryside.

Protest continues. Two Smith College students among those occupying the school's administration building discuss investments the college has in companies that do business with South Africa. About 600 foreigners, including as many as 130 Americans, were evacuated from the Holiday Pyramids, Holiday Sphinx and Jolie Ville hotels.

Heavy guard for Demjanjuk

By Ohad H. Gozoni United Press International
CAIRO, Egypt — President Hosni Mubarak today fired the Cabinet minister responsible for the thousands of policemen who went on a rampage this week, leaving 36 people dead, hundreds injured and millions of dollars in damage.

Mubarak dismissed Interior Minister Ahmed Husby and replaced him with Police Maj. Gen. Zaki Badr, who also serves as governor of Assiut, a city south of Cairo. The president met both men separately and then swore in Badr.

The violence broke out among the policemen in the Central Security Forces who guard embassies, museums and other public buildings. They have complained they are overworked and underpaid, often receiving no more than $10 a month.

The Interior Ministry has jurisdiction over the conscripted, 300,000-strong Central Security Forces. Authorities said more than 2,000 policemen and hundreds of civilians were arrested during the uprising, which began Tuesday night and raged into Wednesday in the worst domestic crisis since the assassination of Anwar Sadat in 1981. Troops using tanks and helicopter gunships were called out and a curfew was imposed Cairo to quell the violence.

In the rampage, three luxury hotels on the avenue leading to the Pyramids — two of them worth $250 million — and several night clubs were burned down. About 600 foreigners, including as many as 130 Americans, were evacuated from the Holiday Pyramids, Holiday Sphinx and Jolie Ville hotels.

Demjanjuk arrived wearing a brown suit and glasses and was immediately rearrested by Israeli officials who said that anything he said could be used against him in court.

Prison officials prepared an isolated cell to be monitored around-the-clock by closed-circuit television cameras. A prison doctor was expected to give Demjanjuk an immediate medical examination after his arrival.

He is the first accused Nazi war criminal to be brought to Israel since Adolf Eichmann, who was kidnapped by Israeli agents in Argentina in 1960, was tried on war crime charges and hanged two years later.

Demjanjuk, a Ukrainian-born former auto worker who had lived for years in Cleveland, Ohio, is accused of sending about 900,000 Jews to their death in the Treblinka death camp in Nazi-occupied Poland during World War II.

Death camp survivors say Demjanjuk was called "Ivan the Terrible," a notorious prison guard who tortured inmates before herding them into the camp gas chambers.

Demjanjuk, whose final appeal against extradition was rejected last week by the U.S. Supreme Court, maintains he is the victim of mistaken identity. He says he was born in Poland and fought the Germans in World War II and was framed as a death camp guard by the KGB, the Soviet intelligence agency.

If found guilty, Demjanjuk faces execution. Justice Ministry spokesman Yitzhak Feinberg, however, said it could take months before the trial opens in Jerusalem.

Warren took the post in 1944 and 1945 and said he enjoyed the scholarly life. Warren told The New York Times that he's happy to have been chosen, but he would never have agreed to serve as Poet Laureate if it had come on the death of someone's kitten.

WARREN SAID he has written only one poem commemorating a national event. It hardly fit the mold of ceremonial verse. "The Day After Tomorrow" is about the dropping of the atomic bomb on Hiroshima and was written for a special edition of his friend John Hersey's book "Hiroshima." The poem includes lines like "The optimistic irrelevance of six packs," a reference to some of the things found in the plane that carried the bomb to Japan.

Warren has published 10 novels, the last in 1977. He said he has given up the form because writing a novel was too much like business.

Or, as he said in 1981 after winning a MacArthur Foundation Grant, "Writing a novel is like going to the office. . . . Writing poetry is largely a matter of wasting time."

Warren published a new collection of poetry last year. Since then, he says he has only written a few poems and is happy with none of them. He says he always goes through a kind of dry spell after finishing a book.

It always happens after a book of poems — it's always a case of imitating yourself. And that's fatal," he said.

Asked when he'll publish his next book of poetry, Warren said "That's God's will, not mine."

Warren's one-year tenure as Poet Laureate begins Oct. 1. It may be extended one year. He will receive a stipend of $5,000 from the proceeds of a private endowment originally created to establish the Consultant in Poetry position. His principal duty will be to deliver a lecture and a public reading during the year.

U.S./World In Brief

Eastern reaches agreement

MIAMI — Eastern Airlines and its flight attendants reached a three-year tentative agreement today that the union said would avert a midnight strike and should keep creditors from declaring the airline in default.

"It's the best possible agreement given the absolute insanity of the last year and especially the last two weeks," Robert Callahan, president of the local Transport Workers Union, said in announcing the settlement after an all-night negotiating session.

"I think we came out with a contract that's fair to employees and to everybody," Eastern President Joe Leonard said, adding that some laid-off flight attendants would likely be recalled this spring. "We've been hanging on by the skin of our teeth."

Leonard said the agreement calls for 20 percent wage cuts and an increase in work hours, which will replace similar wage cuts and work increases the company temporarily instituted last month.

Haiti presses extradition

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — The new government in Haiti will try to extradite deposed President-for-Life Jean-Claude Duvalier, who is in temporary exile in France, Justice Minister Gerard Gourgue said Thursday.

Haiti's ruling council also will seek the return of Col. Albert Pierre, Duvalier's police chief, from Brazil, which granted him political asylum earlier this week.

Gourgue made the announcements on national television after a news conference during which the council president, Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy, said other Duvalier aides accused of crimes "are or will be brought to justice."

After months of violent demonstrations, Duvalier fled with his family to France aboard an American military plane on Feb. 7. The French government said it would allow him to remain there temporarily until he found another country that would take him in.

So far, no other country has been willing to do so, but Duvalier has asked France for permanent asylum.

Brazil orders banks closed

BRASILIA, Brazil — President Jose Sarney prepared to announce a series of economic reforms today designed to slash the nation's 400 billion dollar foreign debt. The government declared a banking holiday and ordered banks closed.

Sarney was to brief leading politicians on the economic measures before announcing the plan at a national Cabinet meeting that was to be televised live at 9:30 a.m., spokesman Fernando Cesar Mesquita said.

Unofficial sources said the changes could include creation of a new monetary unit called the "cruzado" — each worth 1,000 of the current inflation-ravaged cruzeiros — and a ban on automatic wage hikes linked to the consumer price index.

But Finance Minister Dilson Funaro said a massive devaluation of the cruzeiro would be part of the economic package. "No way," he said, dismissing the idea.

Inflation currently is zooming upward at an annual rate of 400 percent. Wages, mortgage payments and other financial transactions have been indexed to inflation since 1964. The typical worker now gets an inflation-adjusted pay raise twice a year.

FBI: Smith wasn't probed

WASHINGTON — The FBI denies investigating Samantha Smith, the Maine schoolgirl who became a peace ambassador, but is keeping secret 11 pages of material containing her name because other people are involved.

"Smith was not the target of an FBI investigation," the FBI said in a statement. "She served her country well, is admired and sorely missed."

San Francisco television station KRON-TV had requested under the Freedom of Information Act an 11-page report the FBI had about Samantha, but the FBI refused to release the documents, claiming they were classified for "national defense or foreign policy" reasons.

An FBI spokesman said the file was withheld from KRON because it contained information on other people, organizations or events.

She died last August in a plane crash after returning to Maine from filming a segment of a television series in England.

WASHINGTON — The Senate entered "the modern age" by voting to televise its proceedings on a trial basis, despite opposition from traditionalists who argued the eye of the camera would detract from the nature of the historic chamber.

Under a package resolution supported by the leadership of both parties and approved, 67-21, Thursday night, closed-circuit TV coverage of the Senate will begin May 1 and go live June 1.

Senators are to vote again Aug. 5 on whether to make television coverage permanent. The package also provides for radio coverage of the chamber.

The House has permitted television coverage of its proceedings since 1979.

Television proceedings will provide virtual gavel-to-gavel coverage except during quorum calls. It also stipulates that the cameras be trained on senators and presiding officers when they are speaking and can scan the chamber, which often is nearly empty, only during roll call votes.

Town fortunate to have 911

To the Editor:
I want to take this opportunity to thank all the people from the 911 emergency number who responded to our call on Feb. 4 at 5:45 a.m. They were at our home within a matter of minutes. All the men that came to our aid were so courteous and efficient. They not only showed great concern for the patient but also for the family. I would like to let the people of Manchester know how very fortunate we are to have a 911 number to call. Let all of us remember this.

LTM critic had wrong premise

To the Editor:
When I read the critique of the Little Theatre of Manchester production of "Da" by Hugh Leonard, I couldn't help feeling ashamed of the type of journalism portrayed by Robert T. Donnelly.

Granted, LTM's performances are not "Broadway" but LTM being a volunteer organization whose actors hold full-time jobs. But the theater, in its 25th year of community service, doesn't deserve this type of demeaning criticism from a man who evidently based his critique from the wrong premise to start with: "Charlie's search for his father's love and understanding."

I mean, "come on," it's apparent that Donnelly dealt his blows by using names straight from the playbill order, and then phrased his sentences as to give us the illusion that he knew the actors personally. He didn't even stay for the second act, which climaxes by intertwining the characters cleverly built up in Act I.

If this man Donnelly can't see deeper into his town's supportive arts groups, and if he can't see past his obvious "frustrated vision of the 'Broadway critic,'" then let him go to that place he dreams of.

Responding views will be welcome.

Trust cringes at development

To the Editor:
The Manchester Land Conservancy Trust is nearing its 15th anniversary. During that time, approximately 20 acres of open land has come under the trust's protection, by direct gifts from several donors. This year, so far, the trust has not received any land gifts.

The trust's main purpose is to preserve any donated properties in their natural state, for passive recreation by Manchester citizens.

A sideline, to keep the trust's needs on everyone's minds for consideration, is the annual program schedule. On Friday, March 14, the outstanding naturalist-photographer, Tom Sterling, will present his 1985 film, "An Alaskan Autumn."

In fact, we have a copy of a five-page, "memorandum of understanding" between Voest-Alpine and the Islamic Republic of Iran, signed Feb. 14, 1985. The contract, which ends today, was a barter deal: Iran was obligated to provide $1 billion worth of crude oil in exchange for certain manufactured goods and raw materials.

An annex to the contract lists the goods only generally: $550 million worth of "Various Equipment and Materials," $150 million worth of "Various Products Including Spare Parts" and $100 million in "Pharmaceuticals."

But included in the "Various Equipment" category, according to information coming from Iran, were military items, among them some 155mm howitzers made by Noricum, a Voest-Alpine company.

THE IRANIAN NEGOTIATORS were four military officials whose last names are Azizi, Rizai, Zadeh and Tabibi. They instructed their agents to inspect the military items before they left Austria to make sure they were satisfactory.

Our sources say the final hitch in the billion-dollar deal was over the commission. "There was a fight over the percentage of the commission on these weapons," said a source close to the negotiations. The price of the arms had been jacked up as much as 35 percent to allow for payment of the commissions, the source explained, adding: "There were arguments over this."

Once the commission was agreed on, the transaction was sealed. Since the Austrians could not legally ship arms to combatant Iran, our sources said, the "end-user" certificates, indicating the weapons' ultimate destination, were presumably written to show a different country than Iran. It is known that the weapons were to be shipped by way of neighboring Yugoslavia.

AS AN EDITOR and critic, Warren helped shape the literary aesthetic of this century. In 1939, he was one of the contributors to "I'll Take My Stand," the first manifesto of the Southern Agrarian writers, so known partly because of their concern about the industrialization of the South. They included poets Allen Tate and John Crowe Ransom.

A Rhodes scholar, Warren taught at various universities for almost 40 years, including Yale from 1959 until 1972.

Since 1953, he has lived with his wife, writer Eleanor Clark, in a series of converted barns in the Connecticut countryside.

Warren took the post in 1944 and 1945 and said he enjoyed the scholarly life. Warren told The New York Times that he's happy to have been chosen, but he would never have agreed to serve as Poet Laureate if it had come on the death of someone's kitten.

WARREN SAID he has written only one poem commemorating a national event. It hardly fit the mold of ceremonial verse. "The Day After Tomorrow" is about the dropping of the atomic bomb on Hiroshima and was written for a special edition of his friend John Hersey's book "Hiroshima." The poem includes lines like "The optimistic irrelevance of six packs," a reference to some of the things found in the plane that carried the bomb to Japan.

Warren has published 10 novels, the last in 1977. He said he has given up the form because writing a novel was too much like business.

Or, as he said in 1981 after winning a MacArthur Foundation Grant, "Writing a novel is like going to the office. . . . Writing poetry is largely a matter of wasting time."

Warren published a new collection of poetry last year. Since then, he says he has only written a few poems and is happy with none of them. He says he always goes through a kind of dry spell after finishing a book.

It always happens after a book of poems — it's always a case of imitating yourself. And that's fatal," he said.

Asked when he'll publish his next book of poetry, Warren said "That's God's will, not mine."

Warren's one-year tenure as Poet Laureate begins Oct. 1. It may be extended one year. He will receive a stipend of $5,000 from the proceeds of a private endowment originally created to establish the Consultant in Poetry position. His principal duty will be to deliver a lecture and a public reading during the year.

College athletics bring learning down

Nicholas Von Hoffman

Jan Kemp was in the English department, but she's already history. A few days ago a jury in a federal court in Atlanta awarded the former remedial English instructor at the University of Georgia $2.5 million because she had been fired after complaining that athletes at the school were exempted from meeting even the lowest academic standards.

Immediately after the trial Kemp was the recipient of a few puffs of favorable publicity, but people like her are three-day heroes. In a society where fine-looking, square-jawed, empty-headed idiots are paid a million dollars a year to do parlor tricks with a ball, Jan Kemp cannot be a truly popular figure.

Kemp got into trouble in 1981 because she protested when nine football players were allowed to transfer out of the remedial studies program where she taught, although they had repeatedly failed to complete this modest course of studies. One thing led to another and Kemp was eventually given the gate because, among other things, she had failed to do enough research and was disruptive.

THE RESEARCH CHARGE seems like a calculated affront to the woman, a way of digging at her. What possible reason could there be to impose a research and publishing requirement on someone trying to teach a roomful of subretinous oafs to read See Spot Run?

As to the disruptive charge, Kemp said, "I was disruptive. I thought it was high time for disruption, with all the corruption going on in the developmental-studies program."

Not disruptive enough by half. Not when Mr. Vincent J. Dooley, the football coach at this

Standing-room-only bus spurs dispute with DOT

By George Loyno
Herald Reporter

COVENTRY — A Coventry Town Council member has organized a campaign seeking the addition of a commuter bus to the route that serves Andover, Bolton, and Coventry, even though the state Department of Transportation opposes the plan.

Council member Patrick Flaherty Thursday placed fliers on the windshields of cars parked in commuter lots in Bolton, Andover, Columbia and Windham calling for customers to ask the DOT for another bus. Flaherty said about 10 people are regularly forced to stand in the aisle of the bus during the commute.

"It's an unsafe situation, particularly with construction going on,"

he said. "The chances of a sudden stop would increase."

Flaherty said the bus is not equipped with straps for standing riders to grab onto. If the bus had to quickly stop or slow down, a commuter could be thrown through the front windshield, he said.

Flaherty, who travels on the bus daily, said he knows of no rider who has been injured. But he said other passengers have also complained about having to stand during the commute.

Officials of the company that operates the commuter bus line, Arrow Line Inc. of Hartford, said Thursday they agree with Flaherty's complaints. Traffic Manager Roland Droeyn said the company asked the DOT two weeks ago to allow an additional bus on the morning run. The company, which supplies the buses but is subsidized by the state, now runs three morning buses on the route at various times.

"We DON'T LIKE to carry any more than we can either," Droeyn said. Arrow's buses hold 40 seated and 10 standing passengers, but Droeyn said having standing riders is a risk for the company.

Droeyn said he expects the DOT to approve the request for another bus.

However, John J. Spaulding, the director of operations for the DOT's Bureau of Public Transportation, said the department has no plans to approve a fourth morning bus for the route, although there are four afternoon buses. A DOT study has shown there is not a consistent number of passengers who have to stand in the morning to warrant another vehicle, he said. Spaulding said as many as 10 people stand on some mornings, but on other days all commuters have been able to find seats. He said if there were consistently between 15 and 18 standing passengers, another bus would be added.

"We're looking for a stability of overloads," he said. "We're not looking for excuses not to do it, you just can't run (another) bus at one-quarter full."

Spaulding said he is not surprised that Arrow would support the additional bus because the company is guaranteed the cost of its operation by the DOT. Spaulding said it costs the state $100 for every morning and afternoon run. In order for it to break even, 53 people would have to buy daily commuter passes from the DOT at $1.90, he said.

The DOT is monitoring the bus runs to see if the number of passengers increases. Spaulding said he disputed Flaherty's claim that standing in the bus is unsafe.

When asked if a standing passenger could be injured if the bus stopped suddenly, Spaulding said, "Not really." He said most commuter buses do not travel faster than 45 miles per hour.

Flaherty said there is a demand for an additional bus anyhow.

"It's so inflexible, they (the DOT) can't increase the bus route when there is the demand there,"

Hearing will concern state education issues

Manchester's state legislators will conduct a public hearing Tuesday night on proposed raises in teachers' salaries and other educational issues currently being considered by the Legislature.

The hearing will be at 7 p.m. in the Keene School cafeteria on Keene Street.

State Sen. Carl A. Zinsner, R-Manchester, who called for the hearing, will be joined by state Reps. Elsie Swenson, R-Manchester, Peter Fuscara, R-Marlborough, James McCavagh, D-Manchester, and Donald Bates, D-East Hartford.

Huntsville experts dispute panel head

Mulley's superior, Marshall deputy director for science and engineering, George Hardy, said "there is an apparent difference in interpretation" between Marshall officials on the one hand and the commission and news media on the other hand with respect to Thiokol's initial recommendation that the shuttle not be launched in temperatures below 53 degrees Fahrenheit.

Hardy said that "if one wants to be highly technical" Thiokol recommended against the launch early on the evening of Jan. 27. But Hardy said it was unusual for Marshall and Thiokol engineers to be discussing a problem simultaneously with Marshall and Thiokol managers.

Hardy said that normally the government and contractor engineers discuss things with each other, then each group of engineers talks to its own management officials privately and finally the two managements speak with each other.

Because of the different procedure on Jan. 27 Hardy said he did not view Thiokol's initial position as a formal recommendation against launch.

Hardy demurred when asked about the commission's performance this far. "Some of you may be able to judge their fairness," he told reporters. "I may have something to say about that when they finish."

Jud Lovingood, another key Marshall official, said that while NASA has to consider "whether we need to make changes in deciding to launch, you've got to remember this is the same process that was used in 24 successful shuttle launches" and before that in the moon landing. Skylab and manned satellite programs.

Stanley R. Reitzart, head of Marshall's special projects office and Lovingood's superior, said, "I do not agree that the process we were a party to at Marshall was flawed. Should we have known more from Thiokol or should Thiokol have provided more information — that's another question."

Reitzart appeared to be referring to the fact that Marshall witnesses uniformly testified that the Packard commission's officials were not present at the launch even after the company's managers approved it.

Reitzart was one of the highest-ranking officials to learn of Thiokol's original objections and he decided not to relay word of those objections to the final launch decisionmakers after the company managers withdrew them.

Jury in airline case fails to reach verdict

BOSTON (UPI) — A mistrial was declared after a federal jury failed to reach a verdict to determine responsibility for an accident four years ago that sent a World Airways jet skidding into Boston Harbor, killing two people.

After deliberating eight days, the federal jury announced late Thursday night they could not reach a verdict to determine who was to blame for the 1982 accident at Logan International Airport.

According to reports from the jurors, eight of the nine had agreed on verdicts, but one juror declined to vote either way.

The DC-10 with 212 aboard was unable to stop in Jan. 23, 1982, while landing on an icy runway and slid into shallow water at the edge of Boston Harbor. The nose of the plane was sheared from the main passenger cabin and two men were killed.

World Airways sued the Massachusetts Port Authority, claiming airport officials were negligent in failing to inspect and close the runway prior to the accident. Runway 15R was the only one open at the time of the accident.

Panel wants Pentagon run more like business

As the Packard commission was finishing its work this week, the Senate Armed Services Committee was preparing the final version of its own Pentagon reform package.

The Senate panel is scheduled to vote next week on the plan and introduce it as legislation the following week.

The Senate proposal contains some provisions similar to the Packard commission's, although it would provide somewhat more authority to the Joint Chiefs.

President Reagan, in his nationally televised speech Wednesday night on the Pentagon budget, appealed to the public to support his request for an 11 percent hike during the next fiscal year in authorized defense spending.

Congress has been increasingly reluctant to go along with Reagan's plan to hike defense budgets in recent years, partly because of the "horror stories" about $400 hammers and $600 toilet seat covers.

Last year, Congress passed more than a dozen reforms designed to end the abuses.

SPORTS Explosion hurts nine at Brewers' complex

By United Press International

CHANDLER, Ariz. — A natural gas explosion blasted through the coaches' lockerroom at the Milwaukee Brewers' new training complex Thursday, injuring nine, including four seriously.

The four seriously injured — three Brewers coaches and a plumber — each suffered burns. "I consider myself very lucky," said Brewers manager George Bamberger, who was in an adjoining room at the time of the explosion. "We came out of this thing smelling like a rose because nobody got killed. We got real lucky."

Compadre Stadium, a $16.6 million structure built after the Brewers announced a move of their spring training base 50 miles to Chandler from Sun City, was undergoing the final stages of construction in preparation for next week's opening of the Cactus League schedule.

Chandler officials had scheduled an unveiling for 10 a.m. Thursday, but the explosion occurred an hour before.

Milwaukee general manager Harry Dalton and Bamberger were sitting in the manager's office at the time. Next door, several Brewers coaches were preparing for a team workout. Suddenly, they all were surrounded by flames as a pilot light came on, igniting the gas.

"It was the damndest thing I've ever seen in my life," Bamberger said.

Chandler authorities said late Thursday they believed the blast began in a space heater in the coaches' locker room. They added the source may not be officially determined until today.

The explosion sent coaches Tony Muser, Herm Starrette and Larry Haney, as well as plumber Jeff Sutton, 21, of Mesa, to the hospital with burns. Sutton and Muser were airlifted about 25 miles from the ballpark to Maricopa Medical Center in Phoenix.

Hospital officials said Muser suffered second- and third-degree burns over 50 percent of his body. He was listed in critical, but stable condition. Sutton suffered second- and third-degree burns over 10 percent of his body, and also may have suffered inhalation burns. Haney and Starrette were admitted to Chandler Community Hospital with first- and second-degree burns on their arms and hands and both were listed in stable condition. Sutton also was being monitored because of a history of heart problems.

The other five suffered a variety of injuries. Coach Andy Etchebarren had bandages covering both arms. Catcher Bill Schroeder was rushed to his chest. Bamberger and pitcher Bill Wegman came out virtually unscathed, although Dalton said he got "a new haircut" as a result.

Dalton filled the holes on his coaching staff, naming Duffy Dyer and Bob Humphreys, who had been on the coaching staff, to replace Dalton and Wegman. Dalton said his office "brought the ceiling down and bled my desk."

Minor damage was found in Bamberger's office and the trainer's room.

Cheney Tech's Tom Dowd (32) drives toward the basket and releases layup as Vinal Tech's Franklin James (35) is helpless to stop Dowd during their COC matchup Thursday night at the Beavers' gym. Dowd had 9 points as Cheney won, 52-51.

Brewers' coach Frank Howard wears a fireman's helmet for protection as he carries a bundle of towels out of the locker room after an explosion at the new Brewer training facility, Compadre Stadium, Thursday in Chandler, Ariz. Nine were injured, including Manager George Bamberger and members of his coaching staff.

I want baseball, now

I want baseball. I want it to be spring and sunny and tomorrow it's supposed to be in the 70s. I need to go outside in sweats and a windbreaker and sneakers and all. And buy a pack of baseball cards and tinkle my nostrils with that sticky sweet smell of cheap bubblegum.

Time to go down to the field and stretch out on the grass and god, it takes longer every year to get loose.

I'm going to jog a few laps around the park — and stay off the basepaths or you'll sink in to your ankles.

I want to have a catch, but not so far or you'll throw it out the first day. Stay close so we can talk ball.

Same old Red Sox. They're banking a lot on this new closer, Wes Gardner, and if he was that good would the Mets give him up?

I don't care how much they have to pay Boggs, they'd better keep him in Beantown. The best batter for average since Teddy Ballgame.

What about Carew? Check the stats.

Brett? Check the stats.

This glove is like cardboard. All I ask is one more year and I'll spring for a new one. I know I said that last year.

The Mets could dominate like the Bears did. Can you believe Ed Lynch makes more than Ron Darling?

All I want to do is put one over that fence, just once, and trot around the bases. It doesn't look as far this year.

I'll hit you some grounders if you hit me some flies.

It might look like I misjudged it, but I couldn't get any traction in this soap. I would've had in a game.

You bring your watch? Wait, don't tell me, judging by the sun, it's around 3 o'clock.

They're televising an exhibition game between the Twins and Pirates and we can still catch a couple of innings.

Stop at the packy and I'll pick up a six, and roll down your windows and feel that breeze.

When I get home, remind me to take the storm windows out and pull down the shades.

What time we going fishing tomorrow?

Cheney remains alive in bid for tournament

By Jim Tierney
Herald Correspondent

Cheney Tech's hopes of a state tournament bid remain alive after holding off a late rally to defeat Vinal Tech, 52-51, Thursday night in Charter Oak Conference action at the Beavers' gym.

The Beavers' record stands at 5-11 in the COC and 6-12 overall, which is already one win better than all of last season.

Cheney's task now is clear, yet hardly a simple one. The Beavers have two games left and must win both to qualify for the post-season playoffs with the minimum requirement of eight victories.

Although Cheney's final two games are against teams it has already lost to — tonight in Cromwell and Tuesday at home versus Rocky Hill — Coach Aaron Silvia is in a unique position for the initial time during his four-year coaching career at Cheney.

"We've never been in this situation since I've been here," Silvia said gladly. "Instead of the kids just playing to end the season, now they have something to play for."

After Tuesday's disastrous defeat in Coventry, things could only get better for the Beavers, particularly in the shooting department. Fortunately, the latter facet of their game improved upon its recent woes. Leading 16-14 following the first quarter, Cheney imposed a full-court press which yielded three consecutive Vinal turnovers. The Beavers led, 22-16, with 5:07 to go in the half.

"Our pressure helped us," Silvia said. "Usually we always get hurt by the opposition's pressure, but it finally worked to our advantage."

Dennis Foreman scored 12 points to lead the Beavers to a 33-86 halftime lead. Cheney also vindicated itself from its horrendous shooting against Coventry by hitting 16-of-31 during the first half.

Vinal's Franklin James, who pumped in a game-high 23 points, also tallied 12 points in the first 16 minutes.

"He was a one-man show out there," Silvia said. "We felt by stopping him we would then stop Vinal. He got his points but we hung on."

Vinal is now 4-12 in the conference and 4-14 overall.

Cheney gained its largest lead, 39-28, on a Tom Dowd steal and layup with 4:37 left in the third quarter. However, Vinal refused to quit and battled back. Trailing 42-34 after three periods, the Hawks scored the first two baskets of the final stanza to alic the lead to 42-38 with 6:38 left. But the Beavers stretched the advantage back to eight, 50-42, behind Rick Gonzalez's 6 fourth-quarter points.

Cheney's Troy Norman (22) releases layup as Vinal's Franklin James (35) gets set to take a swat at the shot Thursday night. Norman had 6 points in the Cheney victory.

Gonzalez finished with 14.

However, Cheney's poor foul shooting (4-for-16) allowed the visitors to come back. A Dowd free throw made it 53-48 with 26 seconds left. Vinal had a chance to pull within two, but Paul Stopkowski made only one of two from the charity stripe.

Cheney's Troy Norman was fouled and missed the front end of a one-and-one. But a Vinal bucket at the buzzer proved academic.

Cheney will have to bounce right back this evening at 7:30 in Cromwell, which is coming off a fine win over previously unbeaten Portland.

"This is good for us," Silvia said. "Our season will be important to us right to the end."

CHENEY TECH (23) — Troy Norman 22-4, Tom Dowd 11-9, Rick Gonzalez 7-24, Dennis Foreman 10-16, Willie Phillips 0-12, Bill Shea 0-12, Terrance Phillips 1-12, Tom Dowd 11-9, Willie Phillips 0-12, Chuck Tyler 1-3, Paul Stopkowski 2-10, Mike Cedric Young 10-12, Mike Stopkowski 2-14, Tobias 10-12-21.

Boggs won't forget ordeal

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (UPI) — His second arbitration battle behind him, baseball and a stricken ankle are the two main things on Wade Boggs' mind these days.

But the two-time and defending American League batting champion is not about to forget his recent ordeal at the arbitration table.

"It's very unpleasant," Boggs said Thursday after going through his first workout with the Boston Red Sox. "I've gone through it two years. You hear things you don't want to hear. That's one reason I tried to avoid it. I didn't want to hear those things."

According to Boggs, who lost his case and was awarded $1.35 million, the highest arbitration award ever (he was seeking $1.85 million) "the thing that bothered him the most about the club's presentation — made by Tel Smith — was its attack on his home run total."

Last year, Boggs hit 368 with 240 hits, but only eight of those hits were home runs.

"Probably that I don't contribute to the team is the one thing they said that bothered me the most," he said. "They came up with their own formula for the run production and that's what they used."

Sports In Brief

Manchester board wants umpires

The Manchester Chapter of Connecticut State Board of Approved Umpires is seeking persons interested in becoming umpires this spring.

Clinics for interested individuals will take place Monday and Wednesday at 7 p.m. at the Mahoney Rec Center. An exam will be given on Monday, March 10, at 7 p.m., also at the Mahoney Rec Center. Those who pass the exam will be able to work junior varsity games during the 1986 scholastic season.

For further information, contact Bill Dumas at 647-6059 days, or in the evening either Larry Anderson at 528-3205 or Mike Buttafuso at 645-2328.

Tallwood foursome places fourth

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — A foursome from Tallwood Country Club in Hebron took fourth place in the net competition of the Pebble Beach and Spyglass Hill courses.

PGA professional John Novobilski and amateurs Guy Neveu, Jim LaPlant and John Hanzas fired rounds of 61 and 64 at Pebble Beach and 63 at Spyglass.

In the professional championship, Novobilski's rounds of 76 and 74 at Spyglass during the week gave him a share of the lead, until a bogey-5 on the first playoff hole landed him in the runner-up spot. Jay Dolan, representing the Bay Hill Club, Orlando, Fla., was the pro winner.

Kenny Knox leads Honda Classic

CORAL SPRINGS, Fla. — Kenny Knox, a marginal member of the PGA Tour since 1981, produced the round of his life Thursday. Knox didn't bother to try to qualify for the $500,000 Honda Classic until this week. However, he got into the tournament by beating 136 other players Monday with a qualifying round of 67. On Thursday, he defied even the Pittsburgh odds.

Knox shot a 6-under-par 66 to take a two-shot lead over Chi Chi Rodriguez and Bill Glasser after the first round at the Tournament Players Club at Eagle Trace.

"I've been waiting for this tournament all year," said the 29-year-old Knox, witness on the PGA Tour. "If I don't have anything else like this the rest of my life, I had this one day."

Patty Sheehan shares LPGA edge

COSTA MESA, Calif. — The leader board indicated Patty Sheehan played a solid first round in the $330,000 United LPGA Invitational. Sheehan thought otherwise.

"I didn't really play all that pretty," Sheehan said Thursday after she, Cathy Morse and two non-winners on the LPGA Tour each shot 4-under-par 68s to share the first-round lead in the four-day event.

"Walking up to 15, I said to myself, 'What an easy day.' Then I looked at my card and I couldn't believe I hit only nine greens," Sheehan, who birdied two of her first five holes, birdied No. 11 and parred out.

Becker-Nystrom rivalry continues

LA QUINTA, Calif. — One of tennis' newest and fiercest rivalries renews today when Boris Becker of West Germany meets Joakim Nystrom of Sweden in the quarterfinals of the $405,000 Pilot Pen Tennis Classic.

En route to his stunning 1985 Wimbledon championship, Becker downed Nystrom in the third round, beating him 9-7 in the fifth set. Nystrom beat Becker in the fourth round of the U.S. Open, but Becker grabbed the edge in the series with a straight-set triumph in the semifinals of a tournament in Cincinnati.

"He has a big serve and volley game," said Becker, the second seed. "If he stays back, I have a good chance."

The other quarterfinal matches today will be top-seeded Mats Wilander of Sweden vs. No. 10 Thierry Tulasne of France; Yannick Noah of New York vs. two-time NCAA champion Michael Persson of Sweden and the University of Georgia; and Jimmy Connors vs. 1985 La Quinta finalist David Pate of Las Vegas, Nev.

Chris Evert Lloyd in quarterfinal

OAKLAND, Calif. — Chris Evert Lloyd continued week-long practice on her serve for an easy victory over Maureen "Peanut" Louie.

The triumph in the $150,000 Virginia Slims of California advanced Evert Lloyd to a quarterfinal match tonight against Wendy Turnbull.

Evert Lloyd, seeded second, routed Louie, a local favorite from San Francisco, 6-1, 6-0, Thursday night while No. 7 Turnbull ousted Annabel Croft earlier in the day, 6-4, 2-6, 6-1.

In other quarterfinals today, No. 1 Martina Navratilova will meet No. 2 Zina Garrison, No. 6 Helena Sukova will play Alycia Molton and Kathy Jordan will face Robin White.

Olson, Bubka in rubber match

NEW YORK — In Friday night's rubber match between Billy Olson and Serguei Bubka, both men will be "pulling out all stops" to secure the indoor pole vault record.

Olson and Bubka, who have combined to improve the indoor standard seven times in two months, will battle for the third and final time this season, at the USA Mobil Indoor Track and Field Championships. The standings show the pair with one victory each, but Bubka's triumph last Friday in Los Angeles produced the current world record of 19-feet-5 1/2.

Further punishment for Connors?

NEW YORK — Jimmy Connors has been served notice, through his agent, that an investigation is underway to determine if any further penalty will be assessed as a result of his behavior at the Lipton International last week.

Connors was fined $5,000 after he was defaulted from his semifinal match last Friday against Ivan Lendl. The maximum penalty that can be imposed upon him is a $20,000 fine and a suspension of 21 days to one year.

Ewing is sued for child support

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — Patrick Ewing, who will be paid about $35 million by the New York Knicks over the next 10 years, has been sued for child support.

Sharon Stanford of Billerica, Mass., filed the suit Wednesday in Middlesex Superior Court, seeking continuing support from the star basketball player for his 1-year-old son, Patrick Ewing, Jr.

"Patrick does not dispute that this is his son," said Stanford's attorney, Henry F. Owens Jr. "But we have not been able to work out anything that is near to being fair with either Patrick or his attorneys. We had no other choice but to go to court."

Sampson at home in the middle

By Joe Illuzzi
United Press International

Ralph Sampson, switched to his collegiate position of center, is dominating games as he did at the University of Virginia.

With 7-foot center Akeem Olatunju out with a strained knee ligament, Houston coach Bill Fitch has been forced to move Sampson, his 7-foot-4 power forward, in five games since Olatunju was hurt. Sampson has rediscovered his collegiate prowess.

The Rockets, including Thursday night's key intradivision 117-111 victory over Denver, are 3-2 since Sampson made the switch and he has averaged 27.4 points per game.

Spring training roundup

Hoyt checks out of Padres' camp

By Joe Illuzzi
United Press International

The day before Commissioner Peter Ueberroth was to pass judgment on the 23 players courted by the Pittsburgh Pirates, San Diego pitcher LaMarr Hoyt checked into a drug and alcohol rehabilitation clinic for evaluation.

Hoyt, the 1983 American League Cy Young award winner, reported to camp Sunday with the pitchers and catchers, and worked out until Wednesday. A Padres spokesman said Thursday he expected Hoyt to return upon the conclusion of spring training.

"We don't even have the facts yet," said Mike Swanson, assistant director of media relations, "The word possible is a key word. I want to say it's just a checkup. But I can't say. It's between him and the center and his agent. When we have information we can give out, we'll be more than happy to pass it along."

Swanson would not say where the center is or whether drugs or alcohol were the reason Hoyt checked into the clinic.

Hoyt, obtained from the White Sox in December 1984, was a bright spot for San Diego last season, compiling a 16-8 record with a 3.47 ERA. After a slow start, the 31-year-old right-hander was solid over the final four months of the season. His strong performance in June and July earned him the starting role in the All-Star Game, and he finished with a 10-4 record.

At Yuma, Ariz., San Diego first baseman Steve Garvey criticized Hoyt's strong performance. Dick Williams of waiting too long to step down so he could deliberately put the team at a disadvantage entering spring training. Steve Bono, the new manager, worked the team out for the first time.

At St. Petersburg, Fla., pitching continued to dominate the spring training camp of the New York Mets and no pitcher impressed manager Dave Johnson more than veteran Bruce Berenyi, who threw batting practice for about 15 minutes.

On a day when he was impressed with virtually every pitcher he saw, Johnson had to admit he was most pleased with Berenyi, who once more showed absolutely no effects of the shoulder surgery he underwent in September.

NFL players willing to agree to harsh penalties

By Will Dunham
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The union representing NFL players, while ardently opposing spot-check testing, said it is willing to accept harsher penalties against drug users, including automatic suspensions for third-time offenders.

"What the players are saying is that they are opposed to random testing, but are in favor of strong penalties," NFL Players Association executive director Gene Upshaw said Thursday. "I believe they would accept this plan. The players are of a mind to do something about this problem, but we will not accept random drug testing."

In a telephone interview from San Francisco, Upshaw said the union would back a drug program under which first-time drug offenders receive full or cut pay while rehabilitating and are given a chance to regain their roster spot.

A second-time offender would receive no pay during rehabilitation and a third-time offender would be suspended for a year.

"There are no easy answers to the drug question," said Mark Murphy, NFL's assistant to the executive director. "As a union, we want a drug-free league, but we also want to protect the rights of the players."

off a feed from Reid for an 85-83 Houston lead 22 seconds later. The Rockets led thereafter.

The victory increased Houston's lead in the Midwest Division to 2 1/2 games over the second-place Nuggets, who had a six-game winning streak halted.

Bullets 114, Warriors 102

At Landover, Md., Jeff Malone scored 33 points, including 10 of the Bullets' last 15, to lead Washington over Golden State. The Bullets used runs of 6-0 and 11-0 in the fourth quarter to pull away. Joe Barry Carroll scored 20 points for Golden State.

Jazz 109, Pacers 92

At Salt Lake City, Adrian Dan-

ley hit for 36 points to spark Utah to its fourth straight triumph. The Jazz evened their record at 36-30, Indiana, which fell to 20-39, has lost four of its last five games. Dantley scored 23 points in the first half to help the Jazz to a 61-47 lead.

Sonics 107, Blazers 94

At Seattle, Jack Sikma scored 6 of his 20 points in the closing minutes, and had 13 rebounds overall to help the SuperSonics snap a four-game losing streak and hand the Trail Blazers their 12th straight loss. Portland's Kiki Vandeweghe scored 21 points, but was blanked in the final quarter while covered by Danny Vranes.

A smiling Yogi Berra has a laugh as he chats with Astro vice president of baseball operations Fred Stanley at the Houston training camp in Kissimmee, Fla., on Thursday. Berra, 60, will stay in the dugout and will be Houston manager Hal Lanier's No. 2 man.

At Sarasota, Fla., Bobby Thigpen, an outfielder at Mississippi State, again stopped White Sox batters in training camp with overpowering pitches. He and Tony Menendez were the most impressive newcomers.

At Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Dave Dorn, a right-hander from the New York Yankees' camp for the second straight day. Jeff Klein, an aide to Winfield, said his client's absence was related to a project for the charitable Winfield Foundation.

Carlos Martinez, a 6-foot-6 Venezuelan shortstop, continued to be the early camp sensation. He hit two monster home runs in an afternoon workout.

At Miami, Eddie Murray was named the first official Baltimore Orioles captain. Murray last year turned down the post.

At Winter Haven, Fla., Boston Red Sox right-hander Mike Trujillo, who spent the 1985 season in the major leagues because of draft rules, signed a one-year contract.

In HER DEBUT video, Franklin looks and sounds very much like the same expressive song stylist who placed dozens of classic soul songs on the record charts in the 1960s.

Songs like "Think," "Chain of Fools" and "Respect" made her into one of the best-selling female artists in the history of recorded music.

Franklin sports a short punk haircut in the "Freeway of Love" video. "Interestingly enough, I got a lot of compliments for men and women on that particular hairstyle. When I first looked at it in the mirror, I went, 'Aaaaaaaah! I don't know if I want to go out with this!' But I kind of got used to it. The more I liked it and I played with it, and I made it 'me.'"

Making things uniquely her own is a habit that Aretha Franklin has made into a trademark, whether it is a song or a look.

In addition to the exciting sound of "Freeway of Love," Franklin's new album also contains the revolutionary and rocking duet "Sisters Are Doing It for Themselves." She says, "I think it rather reflects what is happening today with the ERA (Equal Rights Amendment) and the Women's Lib movement."

FOCUS/Weekend

'Lady Soul' still makes great music

By Mark Bezo
King Features Syndicate

A vintage pink Cadillac convertible zooms toward an entrance ramp of a Detroit freeway, and a sharply dressed woman in the passenger's seat winks slyly as the driver's foot is pressed down on the accelerator.

Hang onto your hats — Aretha Franklin has just pulled onto the fast lane of the music video era, and she exclaims in her latest No. 1 hit, "Freeway of Love," she is headed straight for "It's Better Than Ever Street!"

It's been over 10 years between "Freeway of Love" and her last Top 10 pop hit, and there is a whole generation of teen-agers who only know Franklin from the movie "The Blues Brothers" and the soundtrack of "The Big Chill!"

Suddenly, here she is, appearing on MTV driving Jay's Mansfield's pink Cadillac in "Freeway of Love" and singing "Sisters Are Doing It for Themselves" with Annie Lennox of Eurythmics. After 24 gold records and 14 Grammy awards, Franklin is back on the scene to show today's record buyers exactly why she was labeled a legend.

"Lady Soul" almost 20 years ago. While her new record album, "Who's Zoomin' Who?," has everyone talking about her astounding comeback, in reality she has never gone away. Franklin is back on the scene to show today's record buyers exactly why she was labeled a legend.

SHE DIVORCED actor Glenn Turman and moved out of Los Angeles to return to her hometown of Detroit three years ago. And, last summer following a long illness, her father, the Reverend C. L. Franklin, passed away.

"The main reason that I moved back was because of my dad's illness. It was a lot easier for me to just come back instead of trying to fly back every two weeks with my schedule, so it made it a lot easier on me," explains Franklin.

Seated on a sculptured sofa in the plush living room of her spacious house in Bloomfield Hills, Mich., she is busily contemplating her future with fresh eyes. Although she passed on the option of portraying gospel singer Mahalia Jackson on Broadway, she is toying with an offer to bring the life of blues legend Bessie Smith to the stage. There is also talk of a network television special and a video cassette package.

According to Franklin, "I think that videos are a very, very necessary promotional tool. I think that, as opposed to yesterday, now it's coming into the business will be seen, and in people's homes a lot quicker than they would have been if they had come in prior to video. I've seen some great ones, and I've seen some other videos that look like someone's bad dream."

Double dose of deadly chemicals comes to TV

NEW YORK — A double dose of deadly chemicals comes to network television this week in the form of a docudrama and a drama — "A Deadly Business" and "Acceptable Risks."

The first to air will be "Acceptable Risks," (ABC, Sunday, March 2, 9-11 p.m. EST), a film about an American community struck by a Bhopal-like toxic chemical leak that becomes a deadly environmental catastrophe. The second, "A Deadly Business," (CBS, Tuesday, March 4, 9-11 p.m. EST), is based on the true story of Harold Kaufman, an ex-convict turned FBI informer who exposed corruption and involvement in a lethal toxic waste.

"Acceptable Risks" has proved the more controversial of the two, at least at the censors' desk.

Persistence marks singer McDaniel

Hit record ended three decades of frustration

By Jim Lewis
United Press International

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The first time Mel McDaniel got up to perform in public was back on Halloween night in 1958 in a place called Okmaigee, Okla.

From that day forward he dreamed of making it in country music, and more specifically, scoring with a No. 1 record.

Mel made it back in 1985 with "Baby's Got Her Blue Jeans On."

In between, there was lots of discouragement, hard times and working at odd jobs, like pumping and working at a gas station.

But if McDaniel is anything, it's persistence.

"I saw Elvis on TV when I was 14 and wanted to be a part of that. I'm just thankful that I still have my family together after 28 years," said McDaniel.

"The opportunity is there if you are willing to work for it. I don't know whether it's ignorance that kept me going or what. I knew this was what I wanted to do. My family was willing to sit there and help me and support me."

"Yeah, I got real discouraged. That's why it's important to have people around you who believe in you. I don't think I could ever give it up."

plunk. I was trying to support my family so I couldn't devote everything to music.

McDaniel left Tulsa and went to Columbus, Ohio, where he found some work, and finally moved to Nashville but he didn't find work there — not immediately anyway.

He worked pumping gas in Nashville, but he had moved to a little. He was pumping airplane fuel.

"Those were frustrating days for the Oklahoma native with the boyish, mischievous grin. 'All I had was a bunch of warts.'"

"Things began to come together after his brother persuaded him to move to Alaska."

"My brother seemed to think I could get a job up there really."

But McDaniel wasn't really prepared to step out on stage with a polished act. He borrowed a book with a bunch of songs in it from a friend.

Love and Jealousy

James McCracken, an internationally renowned tenor from the Metropolitan Opera, sings the title role in this weekend's performance of Giuseppe Verdi's "Otello." In this famous tale of a jealous lover, Otello loves his wife Desdemona so violently that he eventually murders her. Performances will be at Bushnell Memorial Hall Saturday at 8:15 p.m., presented by the Connecticut Opera Company. Lynn Strow-Piccolo will star as Desdemona. Tickets range in price from $7 to $40, and are available by calling 246-8807.

Ludwig Mies van der Rohe

Exhibition marks centennial of architect

By Frederick M. Winslow
United Press International

NEW YORK — Steel-framed, glass-walled, flat-topped skyscrapers in major cities around the world proclaim Ludwig Mies van der Rohe as the most influential architect of the 20th century, but these often awkward and shoddy Miesian copies tend to eclipse the master's own elegant work.

Now, 100 years after Mies' birth, the Museum of Modern Art seeks to shed fresh light on the architectural genius of the man who has been blamed for the banality of modern architecture in its post World War II phase.

The exhibition should rescue Mies for all time from sharing the criticism heaped on the upended ice cube trays and mirrored shoeboxes that have been erected in his name from Manhattan to Mexico City and Hong Kong to Houston. That it has been mounted by MOMA is eminently appropriate.

It was MOMA that first brought Mies to the attention of Americans in an international exhibition of modern architecture in 1922 and catapulted him into an extraordinary period of activity with a retrospective show of his work in 1947. Mies gave his architectural archive to MOMA in 1968, a year before his death, and it is now a division of MOMA's department of Architecture and Design.

Arthur Drexler, head of the department and organizer of the show, has said, "With Mies, architecture leaves childhood behind." A tribute that shortchanges the Golden Age of Greece and the Renaissance, but he is accurate in stating "There is no country in the world in which architecture does not somehow bear Mies' mark."

All 450 of the drawings and photographs in the "Mies van der Rohe Centennial Exhibition," illustrating 92 buildings and projects, have been selected from the first time to view how the human brain matures.

MIES WAS BORN in Aachen, Germany, not far from the Dutch border, the son of a master mason. His family name, Mies, meant "wretched" so he glorified by adding his mother's maiden name plus the aristocratic Dutch "van der." He worked as a draftsman in Aachen architectural firms, with only claim to education in his chosen field.

After serving in the German

"With Mies, architecture leaves childhood behind. There is no country in the world in which architecture does not somehow bear Mies' mark."

MIES USED RICH materials, such as travertine and richly patterned marbles, ebony and rosewood, metals in silky finishes, raw silk, fine leather and vellum, all of which have become the common language of interior design for today's corporate offices, hotels, banks and luxury homes.

As a Renaissance man of design, he headed Germany's famous design center, the Bauhaus, from 1926 until he was forced to close in 1933 under pressure from the Nazi government.

Mies emigrated to the United States in 1938 to become the head of the architectural department at Chicago's Armour Institute of Technology and design its new campus. In Chicago, he caught the eye of real estate developer Henry Greenwald and his career as a designer of apartment towers and offices was cast.

In Chicago, he caught the eye of real estate developer Henry Greenwald and his career as a designer of apartment towers and offices was cast.

As admirable as these projects are, they lack the poetry that Mies achieved in his very last work, the New National Gallery of Berlin, completed in 1967. The strength of steel and the lightness of glass are combined here to create a clean, span pavilion space that is Olympian in its proportions and profound in its emotional impact.

This giant hall is not particularly practical for exhibits, which must be mounted on floating wall panels that intrude on the architectural space. But Mies overcame this shortcoming in his glorification of space and light by providing galleries beneath the hall with traditional exhibition facilities.

The Seagram Building in New York shows the style of Ludwig Mies van der Rohe, one of the most influential architects of the 20th century. The Museum of Modern Art, which first brought van der Rohe to the attention of Americans, has planned a centennial exhibition in his honor.

Imaging techniques map infant's brain

By Dethlo Ricks
United Press International

LOS ANGELES — The biochemical processes inside the brain of an infant now can be mapped with a medical imaging technique that has permitted scientists for the first time to view how the human brain matures.

Researchers at the University of California at Los Angeles, studying nine newborns who had suffered seizures and four older children with psychomotor disturbances, used positron emission tomography (PET) to trace how they metabolized certain chemicals in the brain.

"For the first time we can visualize maturational changes of the newborn brain. No tool before has been able to do that," explained Dr. Harry Chugani, an assistant professor of pediatrics and neurology.

PET technology involves introducing radioactive isotopes into the patient's body. A scanner sensitive to the material traces the substances and produces images on a screen that can be deciphered by the use of computers.

Chugani said because the isotopes are short-lived, they pose no danger to the children being studied.

The technique permits researchers to measure the biochemical processes of the brain by the energy it cells burn. The energy primarily is supplied by a combination of oxygen and the simple sugar, glucose.

The radiologists also emit energy particles that are incorporated into the molecules of oxygen and glucose allowing scientists to trace their passage and metabolism in the brain.

months old.

The PET scans, however, showed progressive changes in glucose utilization by various regions of the brain in the newborns, providing a clear picture of how each area of the brain matures.

Glucose metabolism, the study found, increased with age as sensory-motor activity developed.

Chugani said the study also usually appears around the age of 35, is characterized by involuntary jerky movements of the arms and legs.

The babies in the study were followed over a period of 14 months and all were ultimately found to have normal neurological development.

The older children, who in addition to psychomotor problems also suffered mental retardation and low IQ's, showed glucose utilization similar to that of the infants, Chugani said.

Results of the study indicate that glucose metabolism in retarded children strongly correlates with that of babies during a period when infants are exhibiting such behavior as grasping at about three

BUSINESS

Business In Brief

Stock market opens mixed
 NEW YORK — The stock market was mixed today, churning in heavy trading after Thursday's upsurge to record highs.
 The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up about 6 points in early trading, was down 2.32 at 1,711.47 by 10:30 a. m. on Wall Street. However, gainers outnumbered losers by more than 2 to 1 in the early rally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.
 The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .29 to 130.84. At the Amex, the market value index was up .11 at 255.90.

CNG declares dividend
 HARTFORD — The Board of Directors of Connecticut Natural Gas Corp. has declared a quarterly dividend of 65 cents a share on the common stock of the company payable March 28 to stockholders of record as of March 14.

Bank names Merriman VP
 HARTFORD — G. Macy Merriman of Avondor has been appointed an assistant vice president for commercial real estate lending at Financial Federal Savings Bank.

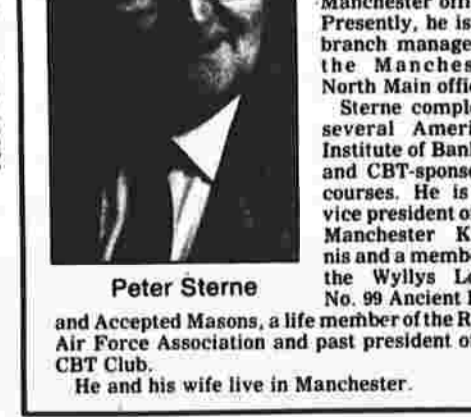

In his new position, Merriman will be responsible for the development of the bank's lending for tract development, residential, office and apartment construction. Financial Federal's commercial lending will initially focus on the central Connecticut area, including all of Hartford, Middlesex and Tolland counties.
 Merriman is a graduate of Hamilton College in Clinton, N.Y., and has served as a commercial loan officer at the Boston Five Mortgage Corp. in Glastonbury.

Tatro appointed dean
 James O. Tatro has been appointed dean of academic affairs at South Central Community College in New Haven.

Tatro has spent more than 25 years in secondary, higher and corporate education in Connecticut, including 15 years in the classroom. He comes to SCC from the Aetna Institute for Corporate Education in Hartford, where he held the post of consultant for the past four years. Previously, he served for 20 years at Manchester Community College in various teaching and administrative posts.
 "After 20 years at Manchester Community College, I find myself unable to relinquish my commitment to an egalitarian view of educational opportunity," Tatro said. "In higher education it is the community college which is compatible with that philosophy."
 Dean Tatro's appointment was announced by Andrew C. McKirdy, executive director of the Connecticut Regional Community College System.

CBT elects Sterne
 HARTFORD — Peter R. Sterne of the North Main Street office of The Connecticut Bank and Trust Co. has been elected vice president.

Sterne joined CBT in 1957 and has held various positions in the data processing, work analysis, credit, branch administration and Manchester offices. Sterne completed several American Institute of Banking and CBT-sponsored courses. He is the vice president of the Manchester Kiwanis and a member of the Wyllys Lodge No. 99 Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, a life member of the Royal Air Force Association and past president of the CBT Club.
 He and his wife live in Manchester.

How unit trusts pay dividends

Investors' Guide
 William A. Doyle

QUESTION: I have some money but am reluctant to pay high income tax on income from my investments. So, I invest in tax-free unit trusts. Last year, I invested a total of $100,000 in four such trusts and waited three to four months before receiving any dividend checks. After that, I started receiving a check a month from each trust. Why the delay in the first checks?

ANSWER: Because it takes a while for a newly established unit trust to gather enough income from which to make dividend payments.
 When a unit trust is set up, it purchases a portfolio of securities — municipal bonds, in the case of a tax-free trust. "Units" then are sold to investors. Think of the units as shares.
 Your trust collects interest from the bonds it holds and passes that money along as dividends to you and other unit holders. Because interest from municipal bonds is not subject to federal income tax, your dividends also are exempt from that tax.
 Right here, it has to be noted that municipal bond interest, as well as dividends from municipal bond unit trusts and municipal bond mutual funds, can result in Social Security recipients paying federal income tax on up to half of their SS benefits.
 A unit trust might hold 50 or more different municipal bonds, all of which pay interest semiannually, but different bonds pay interest in different months. So, a unit trust doesn't make its first dividend payment until it has collected enough interest to make a reasonable size payment to all unit holders.
 The interest payments keep coming in to the trust, the trust pays dividends on a regularly scheduled basis. Most unit trusts give their unit holders the choice of receiving dividends monthly, quarterly or semi-annually.

QUESTION: I invested $14,000 in a unit trust while living in a different state. I wrote to the broker there, asking for the year-end value of my investment, but I received no answer. When I ask local brokers, they immediately want me to sell and buy something else from them.
 Is there any way I can learn the year-end value? Also, suppose I want to check my investment's value at other times. How can I get that information?

ANSWER: You should have received a year-end statement from the trust, listing a great deal of information — including the value of your account. If you didn't get that statement, contact the trust.
 The information you seek is important to investors in states with intangible taxes and similar levies, based on the year-end values of their securities.

You can learn the day-to-day value of each unit of the trust by telephoning the unit trust's sponsor or trustee. The sponsor is the securities firm that established the trust. The trustee is the bank that has possession of the unit trust's securities. You'll find the phone numbers — most likely, "800" toll-free numbers — in the statements and/or reports sent to you regularly.
 After you phone and get the value of each unit, multiply that by the number of units you own. The result will be the current value of your investment.

QUESTION: I have owned 500 shares of a mutual fund for more than a year. I receive monthly dividend checks, but I have never received a statement or shareholder report from the fund. I asked the broker through whom I purchased these shares and he said it is not unusual for a mutual fund to send no statements or reports. Is that true?

ANSWER: No, indeed! The federal Investment Company Act of 1940 requires every mutual fund, unit investment trust and other registered investment company to send shareholder reports semiannually. Many do it quarterly.
 And, when you receive dividends, the investment company also sends a statement of your account. I suspect you have your mutual fund shares at a brokerage firm in "street name" — registered in the brokerage's name. In that case, the brokerage is supposed to forward the fund's shareholder reports to you and send account statements to you.

TWA to buy Ozark in bid to turn profit

By Rick Glodstone
 The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Trans World Airlines and Ozark Airlines, facing serious losses due to low-cost competitors, have announced that TWA will buy the smaller carrier for about $250 million cash as part of a strategy to become profitable.

Thursday's announcement marked the second major airline agreement in a week and heightened predictions that more carriers will merge for fear they will go out of business unless they adapt to deregulation.
 Financially troubled Eastern Airlines agreed Monday to be acquired by Texas Air Corp. for $600 million, which would make Texas Air the country's largest airline. Texas Air also operates low-cost Continental Airlines and New York Air.

"Texas Air-Eastern is telling you a story, and anybody who doesn't read it is a fool," TWA Chairman Carl C. Icahn told a news conference at TWA's New York offices, where he announced the Ozark agreement.
 Ozark President Edward J. Crane made the same announcement at the carrier's St. Louis headquarters, saying the takeover would provide shareholders a good return.
 Discussions of a possible TWA-Ozark merger have been held for more than a year but began in earnest about two weeks ago at TWA's suggestion. A definitive merger agreement under which Ozark would operate as a wholly owned subsidiary was expected to be reached today, Icahn said.

Low-cost airlines such as Southwest and People Express have hurt TWA and Ozark in the St. Louis market, where both have major operations. TWA expects to lose about $125 million in the first quarter of this year and Ozark expects to sustain unspecified losses, Icahn said.

TWA serves 23 foreign points and 63 domestic cities with a fleet of 165 planes. Ozark's fleet of 50 planes serves 66 domestic cities, most within 400 miles of St. Louis.
 The acquisition of Ozark will deliver much-needed facilities, smaller aircraft and presence in regional markets we simply could not gain quickly any other way," Icahn told reporters.

The deal provides for TWA to pay $19 cash for each of Ozark's approximately 13 million shares outstanding, which Icahn said amounts to nearly $250 million. He was not more specific.
 The deal also gives TWA an option to buy 2 million shares of Ozark at $17.50 a share, which is a clause to protect TWA's interests in case Ozark were to accept a higher bid from another airline, Icahn said.

He discounted suggestions that the government would raise antitrust objections to the merger, and said he would ask the Department of Transportation for expedited approval.
 "We don't think anybody's going to lose by this," he said. "Where you have two losers, now we'll have a profitable airline."

TWA stock rose $1.12 1/2 cents a share to $16 Thursday in composite New York Stock Exchange trading, while Ozark slipped 25 cents to $18 on the American Stock Exchange.
 TWA was the object of a bitter takeover fight last year between Texas Air President Frank Lorenzo and Icahn.

Industry analysts said the TWA-Ozark merger reflected the traumatic impact of Lorenzo's move on an industry wracked by fare wars, takeovers and money losers since deregulation began seven years ago. They predicted the speed of airline consolidation would intensify.
 "That Eastern-Texas Air network is going to put pressure on a lot of places," said Thomas Canning, who follows airlines for Standard & Poor's Corp., the New York-based financial reporting agency. "I guess TWA felt it had to make a move."

Trade deficit hits high

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. trade deficit swelled to a monthly record of $16.5 billion in January despite declining world oil prices, the Commerce Department said today.
 That's up 9.3 percent from the December merchandise trade deficit of $15.1 billion, a revision from the $17.4 billion reported earlier. January's deficit was $4.1 billion greater than the $12.4 billion average monthly deficit recorded last year.
 The January figures showed that the falling U.S. dollar has not yet had any practical impact on the trade balance.
 In theory, a weaker dollar makes U.S. goods less expensive and more competitive abroad while raising the price of imports.

Taxes a factor when selling business

By Changing Times
The Kiplinger Magazine

The best-laid plans for passing a business from one generation to the next can blow up in your face if you fail to take into account your invisible partner: Uncle Sam.

Owners of successful businesses are often clobbered by the harvest of all taxes—the federal estate tax—and its aftermaths, state death taxes. Consider someone who owns the majority interest in a family business and dies with a taxable estate of $10 million. The federal tax levy would be a staggering $4,985,000.

If you own a business and are caught unprepared, your family could be forced to give up control. Even if the heirs planned to sell out anyway, they could be forced to accept a fire-sale price for the business in the scramble to pay the estate tax.

Careful estate planning can hold down the tax bill and preserve some options for the next generation.

George Hagerty, an estate tax specialist with the New York office of Arthur Young, told Changing Times magazine the first step is to accept a realistic estimate of the value of the business and your estate. The IRS has stumped some families with a tax bill based on a value far higher than they dreamed the business was worth.

ONCE YOU KNOW how much you're worth, calculate the estate tax bill facing your heirs if you were to die today. Use the following 1986 tax rate schedule below to get a rough idea.

For a taxable estate of under $500,000—no tax; $500,000-750,000—$155,000 plus 37 percent of amount over $500,000; $750,000-1 million—$248,300 plus 39 percent of amount over $750,000; $1 million-1.25 million—$380,800 plus 41 percent of amount over $1 million; $1.25 million-1.5 million—$448,300 plus 43 percent of amount over $1.25 million; $1.5 million to $2 million—$555,800 plus 45 percent of amount over $2 million; $2 million to $3 million—$725,800 plus 47 percent of amount over $3 million; $3 million to $4 million—$945,800 plus 49 percent of amount over $4 million; $4 million to $5 million—$1,210,800 plus 51 percent of amount over $5 million; over $5 million—$1,520,800 plus 53 percent of amount over $5 million.

Persons who die this year get a tax credit of $155,000, enough to offset the tax on the first $500,000 of lifetime gifts and bequests. Starting in 1987 the credit will protect the first $600,000 of an estate.

Consider the liquidity of your assets and the ways you can pay that final tax bill. There are several alternatives, combinations of which are often used.

Take out life insurance in the amount of the potential estate tax bill.

Leave your interest in the business to your spouse, thus avoiding the estate tax altogether. However, there will be no similar protection for your spouse when it comes time to pass the business on to the next generation.

Give the business away during your lifetime to limit the size of your estate at death and thus the estate tax levy. The catch here is there's a federal gift tax, too, which uses the same rates as the estate tax. But you can give up to $10,000 each to any number of people each year without triggering the gift tax. The $10,000 exclusion doubles to $20,000 if your spouse joins in the gift.

Transferring ownership during life can make sense even if it means having to pay the gift tax because you are paying the tax in installments rather than all at once. Also, any appreciation in the value of the stock between the time you give it and your death wouldn't be taxed in your estate.

Sell the business to your heirs over time. This would get its value of your estate, although any profit from the sale would be subject to income tax.

The profit is taxed as a capital gain, with a top rate of 20 percent. Although that may appear attractive compared with the 55 percent estate tax rate, remember the income tax would be due for the year of the sale whereas the estate tax wouldn't be due until after your death.

THE 20 PERCENT — and the fact that you would forfeit all future earnings on that money — now could be more costly than 55 percent way down the road. Also, the top estate tax rate is scheduled to drop to 50 percent in 1988, and it's impossible to predict where Congress will take it after that time.

Yet selling part of your interest in the business to the next generation can be part of a successful estate plan. Such a sale often takes the form of a leveraged buyout, the owner might finance the deal, with the buyers using revenues from the business to pay off the debt over a number of years.

Marshall Bernadotte was proclaimed King Charles XIV of Sweden in 1818.
