Transfer agents seek iron-clad guarantees

QUESTION: I "bank" with a savings and loan association. I needed to have my signature on a stock certificate guaranteed. Much to my surprise, my S&L could not do this for me. I had to go to my stock broker. With almost everything else in the banking business being deregulated, why should this be?

ANSWER: Partly because of tradition; partly because transfer agents naturally want to be protected against fraud. Transfer agents, mostly big banks, cancel stock certificates presented for transfer and issue new certificates in the new owners' names.

As has been the case for many years, all transfer agents now accept signature guarantees from brokerage firms members of the New York Stock Exchange, commercial banks and trust companies. Those brokerages, banks and trust companies all have filed signature guarantee cards with transfer agents and also provide financial guarantees.

If some Light-Fingered Louie manages to get a signature guarantee on a stolen stock certificate from a brokerage, commercial bank or trust company and succeeds in getting ownership transferred, the transfer agent won't be stuck.

encompassing signature and financial guarantee arrangement between transfer agents and other depository institutions — S&Ls, savings banks and credit unions.

However, some transfer agents do accept signature guarantees from S&Ls, savings banks and CUs with which they have working relationships. That falls under the "know your client" rule. And some mutual funds which act as their own transfer agents take signature guarantees from notary publics.

Attempts are being made to bring uniformity to this mixed-up situation through a proposal called "Signature." If that program ever gets off the ground, S&Ls, savings banks and CUs will be able to participate and provide signature guarantees acceptable to all transfer agents.

The big bang-up with Signature was having obtained a blanket fidelity bond to insure all participants against loss.

QUESTION: Sadly, I did not heed your warning about not putting money in a bank or savings and loan association not covered by federal deposit insurance. I obtained a large certificate of deposit at Old Court S&L, Baltimore, for high interest. Because of Old Court's troubles, I can't withdraw my money. Interest was reduced to 5.5 percent last June and cut off in November. Do I have to pay income tax on interest credited to my CD, before the cutoff?

ANSWER: Probably not. The Internal Revenue Service has ruled that most depositors who have not been able to withdraw money from Old Court and other closed Maryland S&Ls will be able to defer income tax on 1985 interest credited to their accounts until the 1986 tax year — meaning that interest won't have to be reported until April 15, 1987.

The exceptions to this are people who made withdrawals from the slammed-shut S&Ls in 1985 and whose balances at year-end were less than those who withdrew. They are required to pay 1985 income tax on the difference.

By this time, you should have received a Form 1099 listing taxable interest — if any. Assuming you made no 1985 withdrawals, you have no 1985 tax liability on interest credited to your Old Court CD.

QUESTION: I have had an account at one of the closed Maryland S&Ls since 1984 and paid income tax on the 1984 interest. Since I still can't get any of my money, shouldn't I be able to report lost interest as a deduction on my 1985 income tax return?

ANSWER: Nope. Eventually, you will get your deposit and the interest that built up on it until the Nov. 8 cutoff. You can't take a tax deduction for "lost interest" since Nov. 8. This is similar to a bond defaulting on interest payments. You can't take a tax-loss there, either.

Top economist sees U.S. 'schizophrenia'

By Made Mix
United Press International

LUBBOCK, Texas — The nation's economy with its current low inflation rate would be in good shape, except for the oil price and farm crises, says Nobel prize-winning economist and former presidential adviser Paul Samuelson.

Samuelson, a professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, told a news conference at Texas Tech University Monday that the U.S. economy is "schizophrenic."

"If we could forget about the oil and farm crises, everything would be okay," said Samuelson, winner of the 1970 Nobel prize in economics and an adviser to Presidents John F. Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson.

"I think the best term for the economy is schizophrenic. The inflation outlook is good, but consumers have low savings rates and real earnings haven't been going forward," he said.

However, Samuelson said the nation's economy is experiencing slight growth which could continue for a long time.

"I think this can continue until the end of the century, and it doesn't have to be in a recession. It's the devil's recipe for a high-consuming, low-investing and slowly growing economy," he said.

But Samuelson predicted a federal tax increase will eventually be necessary to reduce the deficit.

"We are not going to get out of our fiscal crisis without a tax increase. We will have to give on the tax front, the military front and in a lot of welfare programs. It has to happen," he said.

On other topics, Samuelson advised homeowners to try to refinance mortgages now because he does not foresee interest rates dropping lower. On the other hand, he advised savings and loan institutions not to refinance too many loans at low rates.

Samuelson said that for farmers who bought land at top dollar on high interest loans, no amount of effort probably can save them from bankruptcy. He did say that the federal government has a responsibility to support the farm credit system and give price supports to the farm economy.

The stock market of today has many features of the market before the crash of 1929, but Samuelson said he does not foresee a crash.

"I'm pretty sure that if this bubble bursts, it won't cause a 19-year depression," he said.

Close look may change 'diamond' to a zirconia

By Ann Susman
The Associated Press

NORTH BILLERICA, Mass. — Diamonds still may be a girl's best friend, but many of the fine-cut stones adorning fingers, necklaces and ears these days are fakes.

Joseph Wenckus, president of Ceres Corp., says so and he should know. His company grows artificial diamond crystals known as cubic zirconia.

"We make the material as though it were fertilizer," said Wenckus, a chemical engineer whose 16-year-old company churns out synthetic stones at a rate of four tons a month. After cutting and cleaning, the production works out to 20 million carats of diamond look-alikes.

Although fake diamonds have existed for centuries, experts say cubic zirconia is the first substance to approximate a diamond's brilliance and other characteristics.

"Optically, it is most difficult to say 'Yes, it's a cubic zirconia, or 'Yes, it's a diamond,'" said Bruce Fischer, gemologist at Tilden-Thurber, a Providence, R.I.-based jeweler.

Unlike cut glass, sapphires, strontium titanate and other manmade materials which have enjoyed a brief heyday, cubic zirconia has gained worldwide acceptance among jewelers as the leading diamond imitator since its introduction 10 years ago.

It looks so much like the real thing that Wenckus' firm invented a "diamond probe" in 1979 to help experts tell them apart.

Stores ranging from novelty shops to major retailers sell the fakes as cheaply as 50 cents a carat. Some are made from inexpensive to fashionable.

"Everybody doesn't drive a Rolls Royce; a lot of people drive a Chevrolet. I would put CZ in the category of a Chevrolet," said Fischer, whose store started stocking the product several years ago.

Cubic zirconia was discovered as a natural mineral 50 years ago. In the early 1970s, Soviet scientists developed a high-tech technique called "skull-melting" to make large quantities of the synthetic material.

"How many women want a CZ engagement ring? Well," said Martin Rapoport, publisher of New York diamond industry newsletter. He commends it "if you want to have flash for the cash."

While cubic zirconia is popular in costume jewelry, it also offers a solution for those who are afraid to show off their real rocks.

"People who buy large jewelry pieces also make up copies of the pieces in CZ so they can wear the jewelry," Rapoport said.

Diamond industry experts say cubic zirconia is used mostly for earrings, pendants and other fashion accessories, not rings. And they see two distinct markets — one for fakes and one for the genuine stones.

Warnaco buyout on hold

By BRIDGEPORT — Warnaco Inc. says it has postponed for three weeks a special shareholders' meeting scheduled for March 21 at which shareholders were to vote on a proposed management buyout that would make the company private.

Warnaco said in a statement Monday that the meeting would be postponed until April 10 pending clearance of certain merger-related documents with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Under terms of the agreement, signed Dec. 19, Warnaco will merge with RLI Inc., a corporation formed specifically for the buyout. Each outstanding Warnaco share will be converted into the right to receive $27 in cash and $13 in debt securities. At Warnaco's valuation of the debt securities, the buyout is worth $404 million.

Based in Bridgeport, Warnaco makes a variety of men's and women's apparel and sportswear. It had 1985 earnings of $22.5 million on record revenues of $291.3 million.

He said that United Auto Workers Local 123 was told Friday that the company had decided to move the operations to Calhoun, Ga.

The other half of the small bearings unit will be incorporated into a new unit, to be called the Aircraft Control Division, said Wuerthner. It will be located in Newtonington.

The company employs about 2,000 workers in New Britain and Newtonington.

Dollar opens mixed

LONDON — The U.S. dollar opened mixed on major foreign exchanges today. Gold was also mixed.

The dollar started at 2.730 marks in Frankfurt, up from Monday's close of 2.710, and was 47.08 Belgian francs in Brussels, up from 46.90. It edged up to 1.544 lire in Milan against 1.543 and closed at 180.02 yen in Tokyo, up from 179.60.

But it was lower in Zurich, opening at 1.9205 Swiss francs against 1.9200.

In London it also started lower at $1.4665 to the pound against $1.4430.

Short-term rates down

WASHINGTON — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities fell sharply in Monday's auction, with the rate on six-month bills dropping to their lowest level in more than eight years.

The Treasury Department sold $6.8 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 6.55 percent, down from 6.92 percent last week. Another $6.8 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 6.54 percent, down from 6.87 percent last week.

The sharp plunge in rates followed action by the Federal Reserve Board last Friday to cut its discount rate from 7.5 percent to 7 percent, a move that had been expected to push short-term interest rates lower.

The rates were the lowest since three-month bills averaged 6.37 percent on June 16, 1980, and six-month bills sold for 6.42 percent on Dec. 30, 1977.

Market keeps up pace

NEW YORK — Potential oil-price stability and a continuing drop in interest rates fueled the biggest stock market gain in more than three years, pushing the Dow Jones industrial average to a record high.

The average of 30 industrials, one of the market's best known gauges, rose 43.10 to 1,748.50 on Tuesday, its second biggest one-day gain ever, coming on the New York Stock Exchange's fifth-busiest trading day in history. It was the biggest surge since the record daily gain of 43.41 points Nov. 3, 1982, and pushed the Dow above its previous high of 1,713.99 set Feb. 27.

Prices opened higher today in active trading to extend the record-breaking gains. The Dow Jones industrial average, which shot up 43.10 to 1,748.50 Tuesday, was up 2.27 to 1,748.52 shortly after the market opened.

One factor encouraging the market was oil prices, which edged higher in futures trading Tuesday as some analysts speculated that an sharp slump in oil may have run its course.

Analysts said the market also was boosted by the belief that long-term interest rates would decline further in the credit markets and that statistics scheduled for release later this week would show sluggish economic growth, which also tends to depress interest rates.

Interest rates kept falling Tuesday in the credit markets. Prices of long-term government bonds, which move in the opposite direction from interest rates, rose $5 to $10 for every $1,000 in face value.

Prices of short-term government securities also fell. The yield on three-month Treasury bills fell to 6.55 percent from 6.92 percent last week.

Reagan says Habib ready to meet with Ortega

Combined Wire Services

WASHINGTON — President Reagan said today his new Central American envoy, Philip Habib, will meet and negotiate with Nicaragua's Sandinista government if the opportunity arises.

At the same time he said called charges that he is not interested in a negotiated settlement in Nicaragua "ridiculous noise."

Reagan told reporters after meeting with Habib before his first trip as Central America trouble-shooter that this week's mission would be limited to friendly countries in the region and would not include a stop in Managua, because "you don't go where you're not invited."

Reagan also indicated that eventually he might compromise with congressional critics, some of whom are suggesting that the $100 million he is requesting for the Nicaraguan Contra rebels be put into escrow until another round of talks has a chance to succeed.

"We're continuing to talk about all possibilities like that," Reagan said.

Told that some critics claim he is not really interested in talks, despite the dispatch of Habib to the region, Reagan replied, "The critics have been making ridiculous noises for a long time, and that's one of the most ridiculous."

Reagan reiterated that the United States has tried nine times to negotiate with the Sandinistas and "nine times gotten nowhere."

But he said, "We're going to see some opening, some negotiations with the Sandinistas which, well, nine times now they have refused."

Reagan said of Habib, "If anything comes up that would show there might be some profit in doing that (visiting Nicaragua), I'm sure he would make the right decision."

The president also was meeting with about a half dozen members of Congress to persuade them to vote for his aid package. His method has been to raise the spectre of a communist base — "a second Cuba" — in Central America.

The three-week public relations campaign by Reagan and his aides culminates with a speech to the nation Sunday night.

Railroad idea wins cautious DOT support

By George Lovno
Herald Reporter

Although officials at the state Department of Transportation believe commuter rail service between Manchester and Hartford would be unprofitable, the agency's public transportation director says it backs the concept.

John J. Spaulding, who oversees the DOT's rail operations, said Tuesday the department "supports the intent" of a bill introduced in the Legislature at the request of Vermont attorney Walter Simmers which would give Simmers the authority to start a railroad.

The measure would permit service between the North End of Manchester and Hartford. Eventual plans call for service into Vernon and Willimantic.

Spaulding said the only objection the DOT has to the proposal is that extending service to Willimantic would "overlap" with a freight line that currently operates between Columbia and Willimantic. That service, run by the Providence and Worcester Railroad, involves less than one mile of track, Spaulding said.

He said before Simmers' railroad, which would be called the Rockville Railroad, could run to Willimantic, it would have to negotiate with the Providence and Worcester. Spaulding said the DOT would not want to be eliminated by the establishment of the Rockville Railroad.

A public hearing on the bill was held Monday by the Legislature's Transportation Committee. Rep. Donald Bates, an East Hartford Democrat and a committee member, said no testimony was heard on the proposal. The next step will be a vote on the bill, Bates said.

No date has been set for the vote, a spokesman for the committee said Tuesday.

Simmers, who attended the hearing, said the bill was introduced but not discussed.

Simmers has said he has encountered some resistance from the DOT to his proposal. He told the Herald in a January interview that he felt agency officials favor highways over railroads, and in particular the proposed Route 4 expressway that would serve the same area as the Rockville Railroad.

Simmers argued that new highways would increase the congestion in Hartford because there are a limited number of bridges to carry traffic into and out of the city, whereas the existing rail track into the city already has its own bridge over the Connecticut River.

Spaulding admitted that congestion would increase with a new highway. "That's one of the problems with high-occupancy vehicle lanes," he said.

West keeps close eye on Spanish vote

By Sarah Nicholson
United Press International

MADRID — Voting was reported heavy today in the referendum called by the government to decide if Spain is to remain in NATO or become the first country to pull out of the alliance.

The referendum is not legally binding but Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez said he would honor the outcome and pull out from the 16-nation North Atlantic Treaty Organization if he does not win the vote.

"The future of Spain now lies in the hands of the voters," Gonzalez said in a speech before a polling station.

Warm springlike weather in most of the country appeared to favor a high turnout by the 29 million registered voters, despite a boycott called for by some pro-NATO conservatives.

Expressing satisfaction at the turnout, Interior Minister Jose Barral said he would honor the vote of 67 to 78 percent of those eligible would vote, a rate similar to other elections in the past 10 years.

Officials reported no major incidents. Polls were to close at 8 p.m. (2 p.m. EST) and the first provisional results were to be issued an hour later.

SOME 120,000 POLICE and security forces were deployed outside voting stations as part of the government's effort to prevent disruption at the polls.

The Socialist government sought endorsement of membership in NATO but opinion polls pointed toward a rejection by the electorate, despite the government's offer to ban nuclear weapons and cut back on the 12,000 American troops in Spain.

In calling for a "no" ballot, the anti-NATO platform of Communist and leftist groups were pressing for withdrawal from the alliance and the dismantling of the four U.S. bases on Spanish soil allowed by a 1953 mutual security treaty.

Gonzalez urged voters to shed the isolationism that has kept Spain outside the mainstream of Europe for centuries, arguing that modernization is tied to belonging to both the European Community, which it joined Jan. 1, and to NATO.

"Let us choose once and for all in our history either to be with Europe or turn our back on it," he told a rally.

But the prime minister also faced the prospect of seeing valuable votes in favor of the alliance being siphoned off through a referendum boycott called by his pro-NATO conservative opponents.

The rightist Popular Alliance, led by Manuel Fraga, advised voters to abstain because defense policy should not be determined at the polls. The Popular Alliance called a defeat would embarrass the Gonzalez administration into calling early elections.

NATO officials have privately expressed consternation at the Socialist decision to hold the referendum.

The 1983 treaty guarantees the defense of NATO's southern flank," a senior alliance official in Madrid said. "It is not so much the possibility of withdrawal that bothers us as much as the precedent the referendum sets for other NATO countries."

Water and sewer rates to hold until 1988, officials say

By Alex Girelli Associate Editor

Town officials reaffirmed Tuesday that there will be no increase in water and sewer rates for Manchester residents until at least June 30, 1988, and that the rates may hold for a year after that.

Robert Huetis, town budget analyst, said that even if the town starts construction of its sewage treatment plant, as ordered by federal and state governments, the first costs for temporary borrowing would not cause a rise in the sewer rates until the 1987-89 fiscal year.

Weiss had announced earlier that there would be no increase in rates. When the rates were last increased, it was expected that they would hold only through June 30, 1987. The officials said Tuesday that increased sale of water, a high percentage of collection, savings in interest payments through use of short-term loans, and operational savings make it possible to continue the current rates.

Town Manager Robert Weiss, Huetis, and Robert Young, superintendent of the Water and Sewer Division, released Weiss's budget recommendation for water and sewer operations at a news conference Tuesday afternoon.

The Board of Directors will consider the budget at a workshop set for 6:30 p.m. Wednesday at the town's Globe Hollow water treatment plant on Spring Street.

That garage was to have been part of the plant, but it was eliminated to reduce the cost of the plant, built for about $6 million.

Nursing home union sets proposals, lodges new charge against owners

By John F. Kirch Herald Reporter

The owners of the Crestfield-Fenwood nursing home will meet with representatives of the New England Health Care Employees Union, District 1199, which represents workers there, to begin contract negotiations the week of March 27, union officials said Monday.

Members of the union's negotiating team said they will hold a union meeting Thursday to discuss contract proposals they will offer at the bargaining table.

Those proposals include better wages and benefits, comprehensive family health insurance, a higher uniform allowance, and the formation of a labor-management committee to discuss the daily operation of the 155-bed facility.

Union officials have said that nurse's aides at the Meadows Convalescent Center on Bidwell Street, where about 250 employees are represented by District 1199, make $2 more an hour than those at Crestfield-Fenwood. Union officials have also said that nurse's aides at Meadows receive an annual uniform allowance of $60, while at Crestfield-Fenwood the amount is $25.

The owners had said that District 1199's parent union had illegally severed its ties with another union, thus leaving workers confused as to who they were voting for.

But a separate U.S. Supreme Court decision handed down last week nullified the owners' argument. The owners then contacted the union to begin negotiations, about two weeks before the Second Circuit Court of Appeals was to hear the Crestfield-Fenwood case.

Meanwhile, in Hartford Monday, District 1199 filed charges with the National Labor Relations Board in connection with the firing of Carol Chesky, a nurse's aide who was a union supporter during a bitter strike that started Oct. 21 and ended Feb. 5.

ALSO IN THAT CHARGE, District 1199 said that the owners had "discriminated against Susan Staring by disciplining her for engaging in union activities."

Staring is a nurse's aide at Crestfield-Fenwood.

Chesky said she was fired March 6 by Alice Plant, director of nursing, and was told it was because of her union talk.

The home's management has prohibited employees from talking about the union while at work, Chesky said.

"I didn't expect to get fired," Chesky said. "It's like you don't have your freedom of speech."

John Sauter, the NLRB's deputy officer in charge in Hartford, said Monday that the case was under investigation. Although he did not see District 1199's charges, Sauter said workers are "entitled to engage in union activities."

He said that discrimination against employees who support a union is a violation of labor law. He did not, however, comment directly on the Crestfield-Fenwood case.

BUT UNION OFFICIALS were quick to charge the owners with breaking the law.

"This means the owners have not agreed to comply with labor law," said Kevin Doyle, vice president of District 1199. Instead, they are changing their legal tactics.

Nursing home officials could not be reached for comment.

Other employees who attended a news conference at the NLRB regional office in Hartford Monday said there has been tension between management and workers returning from the picket line since the strike ended last month. But they added they did not expect anyone to be fired.

"I think everyone knows that this is basically a scare tactic," said Tracy Wilcox, a nurse's aide who will sit on the union's negotiating table. Doyle, however, expressed concern over the owners' intentions.

"We have no indication that its there intent to bargain in good faith," he said.

Besides the garage, the following major capital improvements are recommended for the water operation:

• $65,300 to clean and cement-line water mains on Adelaide and Waranoke roads where a closed loop causes water to back up and because the flow reverses in the line according to variations in water use.

• $45,000 to continue the program of eliminating dead ends in water lines.

• $12,000 to move a generator from the old Cooper Hill water plant to the Highland Street pump station. That station lost power during Hurricane Gloria.

• $31,000 to buy a mower designed to permit safe mowing of the steep slopes.

• $40,000 to buy meters for outdoor registers.

• $35,000 for oversized pipe, used when the town requires a developer to use larger lines than the development alone would require.

• And $69,500 for five vehicles.

Major capital improvements in the sewer operation, besides the sewers on Linden and Church streets include:

• $26,500 for part of the cost new water meters.

• $24,500 for a gas burner to burn waste gas produced by the sewage treatment process.

• $18,000 for a sewer rodder to clean sewer lines.

• And $22,000 for a dump truck.

Garman to receive 'M' award in 1986

Joseph Garman, owner of J. Garman Clothier on Main Street, will receive the 1986 "M" award.

The award is presented by the Manchester Chamber of Commerce during its annual banquet next month. The chamber has announced.

The award is given each year to an active member of the community.

"This is a very prestigious award, that's why I was so flattered," said Garman, who is the 20th recipient of the award.

Garman, a native of Brooklyn and a World War II Army Veteran, opened his retail business in Manchester in 1954. He has been involved in the chamber of commerce for over 30 years, including several years as a member of its board of directors.

Garman served twice as chairman of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce. He was also active in the effort to reconstruct downtown Manchester.

Garman, an avid fisherman and hunter, writes an outdoor column, "Joe's World," for the Manchester Herald.

The chamber's annual banquet will be held April 16 at Pano's Restaurant in Bolton.

DOT says it backs rail service

Simmers argued that new highway would increase the congestion in Hartford because there are a limited number of bridges to carry traffic into and out of the city, whereas the existing rail track into the city already has its own bridge over the Connecticut River.

Spaulding admitted that congestion would increase with a new highway. However, he said it is unlikely the Rockville Railroad would be able to generate enough profit to remain in operation if it were started. Spaulding said, though, if Simmers could raise the backing, then "more power to him."

The state would be willing to provide technical assistance to the Rockville Railroad, but not a great amount of financial help, he said.

"We don't see anything that should be subsidized heavily by the state," he said.

Simmers has said he hopes to generate private and federal support for the railroad.

Spaulding said the DOT has always supported the resumption of rail service and has purchased the railroad rights of way between Manchester and Willimantic and elsewhere in the hopes they will be used in the future. The track between Manchester and Willimantic, which was last used in 1971, was torn up to be sold to the state for scrap metal. Spaulding said.

Spaulding said the DOT has been "primarily trying to maintain what we have," instead of encouraging new operations.

Vernon house fire kills one, hurts five

VERNON — A 7-year-old girl was killed and at least five other people were injured when an intense fire gutted the top floor of a three-story dwelling Tuesday night, police said.

The body of the badly burned victim, Carin Durrant, was found by Vernon firefighters who fought the three-alarm blaze in the Ward Street apartment house for more than one hour.

The fire was reported at 8:45 p.m. and a second alarm was sounded one minute later, when firefighters arrived to find the third floor fully engulfed in flames.

A Tolland County fire dispatcher said.

One firefighter was treated for smoke inhalation, and another was treated for bruises he received after being struck by debris, the spokesman said.

Engine companies from Bolton, Tolland and Ellington covered Vernon's fire stations during the fire.

The third floor of the building was gutted and there was extensive smoke and water damage to the first two floors.

A spokeswoman at Rockville Hospital said five residents of the destroyed building were treated and released for smoke inhalation.

Retiring principal says teaching was simpler years ago

By Susan Vaughn
Herald Reporter

Looking back on 35 years of teaching and administrative experience in the Manchester schools, William Freeman recalls that education seemed a lot simpler "in those days," even though he taught two grades at once at the tiny Buckland School and had 39 seventh-graders in the former Hollister Street (Bentley) School.

But Freeman, interviewed Tuesday at Robertson School, where he has been principal for 11 years, said he would do it all over again. On Monday night, the Board of Education approved Freeman's retirement at the end of this year.

"I've been threatening to retire, but I just never got around to it," Freeman said Tuesday.

WILLIAM FREEMAN ... would do it again

The pressures on teachers, students, and yes, even principals, are a lot bigger these days, Freeman said.

"The teachers are extremely busy and well prepared," he said. More and more is added to the curriculum all the time, he said.

"One curriculum area Freeman said he does support firmly is more family life education on the elementary school level—a topic that has provoked a lot of controversy among parents and educators in the past two years in Manchester.

"We should do more," Freeman said. "Kids are maturing tremendously and they are faced with a lot more problems and pressure today."

Freeman went from being a teacher at Buckland to teaching principal at the old Robertson School and Nathan Hale School, to supervising principal at Verplanck. He then ended up back at Robertson.

"You were a teaching principal if you had fewer than 10 teachers, then you became a supervising principal," Freeman explained.

Freeman said he was president of the Manchester Education Association at one point. When asked what issues the association was involved in at that time, Freeman quipped dryly, "We were salary-oriented."

As far as his plans for the future, Freeman said he and his wife will probably continue to live in Avery, N.H. He has no other plans.

Other than improve his golf score, he said he has no definite plans for his retirement.

Freeman's parting remarks on education: "They try to make this business too complicated. The relationship between the teacher and the child—that's the real nuts and bolts of it."

U.S./World In Brief

Kentucky has flood watch

Tornadoes and winds that toppled a 40-car freight train swept across the southern Plains today, while work crews cleared debris strewn by Ohio Valley twisters that left six dead and caused tens of millions of dollars in damage.

Officials Tuesday night said at least 15,000 people in Kentucky remained without power because of tornadoes and high winds that lashed Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky on Monday. States of emergency remained in effect today in the hard-hit towns of Covington, Ky., and Ripley, Ohio. Flood watches were issued for the eastern third of Iowa and the western half of Kentucky.

In Arkansas Tuesday night, a tornado derailed a 40-car St. Louis-Southern freight train in Woodruff County. No serious injuries were reported, and all the cars were either empty or contained non-hazardous cargo, officials said.

The storm system was expected to dump up to 6 inches of snow on the central Plains today, and a separate storm system over Newfoundland blasted strong winds along the Maine and New Hampshire coasts, prompting gale warnings.

Northern Ireland aid OK'd

WASHINGTON — The House passed and sent to the Senate a bill that would contribute $250 million to a fund designed to provide economic help for Northern Ireland and bring an end to sectarian violence there.

The House approved the five-year plan by voice Tuesday without a recorded vote. Approval had been expected, particularly after the measure was strongly supported by Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., in a rare floor speech.

On Nov. 15 the Republic of Ireland and Great Britain approved a pact that for the first time gave Ireland a voice in governing the Northern Ireland province of Ulster, which has been torn by 17 years of fighting between its Protestant majority and Catholic minority.

The pact calls for creation of an international fund that would oversee development of the economically depressed province.

O'Neill called the Anglo-Irish pact "a historic commitment by two western democracies to promote an end to civil strife in a fair, just and creative way."

Pathologists identify MIAs

WASHINGTON — Army pathologists have identified five of seven soldiers who remain Americans listed as missing in action during the Vietnam War that Hanoi turned over to U.S. officials in December, the Pentagon announced Tuesday.

The remains, four of them Navy flyers, were repatriated Dec. 4 and were sent to the Army's Central Identification Laboratory in Hawaii. They will be flown from Hawaii to Travis Air Force Base, Calif., Thursday, the Pentagon said.

All five were listed as missing in action over North Vietnam between 1967 and 1972. Their identification reduced to 2,436 the number of Americans listed as unaccounted for during the war — 685 of them lost over North Vietnam.

Those identified were:

- Air Force Col. Robert W. Hagerman, Chicago, lost Nov. 8, 1967.
- Navy Capt. William D. McGrath, Colton, Calif., lost Nov. 17, 1967.
- Navy Cmdr. Barton S. Wade, Jasper, Ind., lost Dec. 21, 1972.
- Navy Lt. Cmdr. Robert S. Graustein, Freeburg, Maine, lost Dec. 21, 1972.
- Navy Lt. Cmdr. Richard W. Minnick Jr., Collegeville, Pa., lost Jan. 4, 1968.

Embassy seeks kidnappers

BEIRUT, Lebanon — French troubleshooter Dr. Raouf Raed went underground for Beirut's predominantly Shiite Muslim southern suburbs to meet a pro-Iranian group that kidnapped four Frenchmen and claimed to have killed one of them.

"According to information available to us, Dr. Raed will spend 48 hours in the area and does not want to be followed by reporters," one source who asked not to be identified said Tuesday.

His name was not what was known, if any. Raed, 43, had made in contacting the kidnappers. Raed cut short a visit to Syria after the Islamic Jihad, which kidnapped the four Frenchmen, produced Raed's name for what it said was the corpse of the socialist Michel Seurat.

Seurat's wife, Mary, said she believed the group's claim that her husband had been "executed" and blamed French Interior Minister Pierre Joxe for provoking her husband's death by expelling two Iraqi dissidents to Baghdad.

Texas executes Bass

HUNTSVILLE, Texas — Convicted killer Charles Bass, strapped to a gurney awaiting death from a poison injection, told his mother not to grieve over his execution today because he deserved to die.

Bass, 30, was executed at 1:21 a.m. EST for shooting to death Houston City Marshal Charles Henry Baker in 1979. Bass was the 11th inmate in Texas and 52nd in the nation to be executed since the Supreme Court lifted it from its capital punishment in 1976.

"Don't feel bad, Momma," Bass said from his deathbed. "I deserve this."

The Supreme Court Tuesday refused, 7-2, to halt Bass' execution. Earlier in the day, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals also rejected his appeal.

'Stalker' survivor testifies

LOS ANGELES — A survivor of an attack by the "Night Stalker" testified today that he shot a pistol in her face and fired from point-blank range and later killed her roommate, then identified suspect Richard Ramirez as the attacker.

Maria Hernandez, 21, was the first "Stalker" survivor to testify against Ramirez, 26, a drifter and reputed devil worshiper from El Paso, Texas. The testimony came Tuesday at the preliminary hearing to determine if there is enough evidence to try Ramirez on 14 counts of murder and 15 other felony charges, including attempted murder, rape, assault and robbery.

Ramirez is also charged with a 19th murder in San Francisco and a non-fatal attack in Orange County, all parts of the case of "Night Stalker" assaults that kept California on edge for several months last year.

Hernandez was shot March 17, 1985, at her condominium in suburban Rosemead. Her roommate, Dayle Okasaki, was killed.

Key panel may ask tax hike

Senate budget writers face White House opposition

By Elaine S. Povich
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Republicans and Democrats on the Senate Budget Committee appear ready to agree that this year's budget must include $15 billion to $20 billion in unspecified taxes, but the administration is still opposed.

The pressure to reach agreement on raising new taxes or hiking existing levies is growing, with committee Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., hoping to complete work on the budget by the end of the week.

The committee is attempting to write a budget that meets the Gramm-Rudman deficit target of $144 billion for fiscal 1987, down from the current prediction of more than $180 billion.

Following a private session with GOP members, administration budget director James Miller said President Reagan still remains opposed to tax increases, though not to "revenue raising devices such as asset sales and user fees."

There have been discussions around the Finance Committee, which has responsibility for taxes in the Senate, about including a special section in its tax reform bill specifically devoted to raising revenues to fight the deficit.

Democrats were cautious about being perceived as leading the drive for higher taxes.

Sen. Jim Sasser, D-Tenn., told reporters budget committee Democrats "would be more likely to come along (on tax increases) if Republicans were to belly up to that buzz saw."

Late Tuesday, it appeared a majority of Republicans on the committee were willing to vote for some kind of revenue component in the budget, though none would be specific.

Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, an opponent of taxes, conceded: "We'll all have to give a little bit, but I'm in favor of Reagan's requested 8.2 percent hike."

Chiles said he didn't think the panel could deal with even a 3 percent real hike for the Pentagon, but he also said that freeing the military budget, without accounting for inflation, seemed remote.

Some Democrats indicated they wanted to hold military spending increases next year at the inflation level only. They also told Chiles there was support for $15 billion to $20 billion in revenues to help cut the deficit.

"There will have to be some revenues in the mix," said Chiles of Florida.

Domenici said, "There is a consensus supporting revenues," but would not be specific about what existing taxes should be raised or what new levies imposed. Several ideas include a minimum tax on wealthy individuals and corporations, a tax amnesty program for cheaters on additional new taxes on energy consumption.

Young suggested that the planned flight rate of 18 a year might jeopardize additional shuttles and crews.

As a result of Challenger's loss, Graham said there is little chance NASA would be able to carry out two interplanetary missions now tentatively set for flight later in June 1987 even if shuttles are flying by that time.

He said either the Galileo Jupiter explorer or the European Ulysses study spacecraft would probably have to wait for another launch opportunity 13 months later. Both were to have been launched in May.

In the interim, Challenger's loss has prompted Graham to review NASA's preference for shuttles over unmanned rockets for satellite launches.

In a memorandum last Friday to Richard Truly, NASA's new director of Social Democratic minority government.

The Social Democrats have 159 members in the 349-seat legislature, but were supported by the 19 centrist members for the simple majority needed to form a government under Carlsson.

The deputies of the three non-socialist parties abstained from the vote.

Carlsson becomes Sweden's sixth Social Democratic prime minister. The party has ruled the Scandinavian nation since 1932 except for a non-socialist interval in 1976-82.

Following the dispassionate vote, the parliament, known as the Riksdag, went on to debate the national budget.

Police, meanwhile, said the hunt for Palme's killer was going "very well" but refused to reveal any details.

Carlsson, a close associate of Palme for several years, took over as head of a caretaker Cabinet immediately after Palme was assassinated Feb. 28.

Under Sweden's constitution, loss of the prime minister automatically gives the government caretaker status.

Carlsson was swiftly made head of the Social Democratic Party and Monday was elected government parliamentary leader — a condition for becoming prime minister.

He said his government would continue Palme's policies of defending the welfare state, protecting the environment and overcoming Sweden's economic problems.

Carlsson was expected to announce his new government Thursday but officials said he would be little different from the Cabinet inherited from Palme.

"If any changes are made, they will be very small," a party official said.

Although Stockholm's police chief Hans Holmstrom said developments "were proceeding very well," he would not give any details of the work carried out by the 300 Stockholm policemen looking for the assassin.

"There is much we cannot tell," Holmer said.

NASA prepares to use unmanned rockets

Landing crash called likely if Cape Canaveral is used

By Al Roslifer Jr.
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The seals in booster rocket joints should be improved before the next shuttle flies even if they are not found responsible for the Challenger explosion, the head of the space agency says.

Acting NASA administrator William Graham also said the 25th shuttle disaster cost the nation $3.2 billion in national assets. He said a replacement shuttle could be built for $2.4 billion and be ready to fly in 3 1/2 years.

Meanwhile, in a major revision of its space operations, NASA has decided to launch the shuttle Columbia in January and manned shuttles to meet increasing foreign competition in launching earth satellites.

The New York Times reported today.

Graham said Tuesday that the shuttle disaster "appears to be related to the solid rocket boosters and we are already in the preliminary design process to see what changes might be made to that."

The presidential commission investigating the Challenger accident is focusing on the O-ring seals of the shuttle's right booster as the source of the fiery jet that ignited the last Jan. 11 after seven delays, was scheduled to land at Kennedy, but was waived off to Edwards because of poor weather.

"Our present experience is telling the O-ring seal could be redesigned to be a fail-safe backup under certain conditions," NASA calls this a "criticality 1" condition and its existence prompted chief astronaut John Young last week to write a scathing internal NASA memo.

"There is only one driving reason for such a potentially dangerous system would ever be allowed to fly — launch schedule pressure," Young said.

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — A space shuttle accident on landing at Cape Canaveral is a certainty because the site is dangerous, says chief astronaut John Young in a memo written before the Challenger explosion.

Young, who argues that all future shuttle landings should be at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., says in his memo that the weather, runway surface and water surrounding the Kennedy Space Center all make the Florida site dangerous.

The astronaut, who has flown more shuttle missions than anyone, wrote the memo Jan. 6, six days before a possible emergency landing in Spain and "serious safety-of-flight consequences."

An incident, which was reported at the time, engineers found after the flight's second delay that a valve leading to the main engine, that problem could have caused the engine to shut off eight minutes after launch, the memo said.

According to ABC, the memo said that if the shuttle had been launched, the engines could have quit before the craft entered orbit, leading to a possible emergency landing in Spain and "serious safety-of-flight consequences."

An incident, which was reported at the time, engineers found after the flight's second delay that a valve leading to the main engine, that problem could have caused the engine to shut off eight minutes after launch, the memo said.

Manila considers changes

'Revolutionary' decree would lift Marcos rules

By The Associated Press

Philippines President Corason Aquino, in her first Cabinet meeting, today appointed a commission to look back into a work on whether to declare a revolutionary government with sweeping power to reorganize Ferdinand E. Marcos' autocratic system.

Other Cabinet groups were assigned to tackle reorganization of local government and to chart new directions for the moribund economy, which faces a budget shortfall of $50 million for the first quarter of 1988, said government spokesman Rene Saguisag.

The shortfall was attributed in part to heavy election spending by the party of Marcos, the ousted president. Saguisag told reporters after the nearly two-hour meeting.

Aquino was meeting today with U.S. Ambassador Stephen Bosworth, Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and armed forces chief of staff Gen. Fidel V. Ramos to discuss the country's communist insurgency.

She opened Tuesday's Cabinet session by stating the center of a long table flanked by Vice President and Prime Minister Salvador Laurel and her executive secretary Jokez Arroyo. Reporters and photographers were allowed briefly into the room before the doors were closed.

Among the Cabinet officials joining Aquino in the conference room of the Malacanang presidential palace was former Sen. Jovito Salonga, who is scheduled to visit the United States later today.

SALONGA HEADS a special commission to ferret out the immense wealth allegedly funneled out of the Philippines by Marcos and will spend two weeks in New York and Washington, a condition and its existence prompted chief astronaut John Young last week to write a scathing internal NASA memo.

"There is only one driving reason for such a potentially dangerous system would ever be allowed to fly — launch schedule pressure," Young said.

The new government hopes it will be able to shore up its treasury and pare a $25 billion foreign debt by raising some of the $5 billion to $10 billion Solong estimates Marcos and his associates plundered during Marcos' 20 years in office.

Meanwhile, in Hawaii, Marcos is trying to find new quarters. But as long as he remains on the military base where he is staying, he will not have limits placed on his personal telephone calls, a State Department spokesman says.

The Washington Post has reported that Marcos, staying at Hickam Air Force Base in Honolulu, is trying to influence Philippine politics by holding lengthy telephone conversations with former associates who oppose the Aquino government. The report, in Tuesday's Post, cited unnamed

Two firms offer to buy Union Pond land

Two Manchester-based companies have made offers to buy about 11 acres of town-owned land in the Union Pond Industrial Park, Town Manager Robert E. Weiss said today.

The offers were made Monday by Pressure Blast Manufacturing Co. Inc., a manufacturer of blast equipment, and abrasives, and developer Ernest J. Reed. Bidding on the land is closed, Weiss said.

Pressure Blast offered about $192,500 for the site, or $17,500 per acre. The company, which is located in a 25,000-square-foot building on Chapel Street, wants to relocate to the industrial park because of its anticipated expansion.

"We anticipate the need to modernize and substantially increase our manufacturing space within the next two to three years," the company's owner, Helen L. McMullen, said in her proposal. She said Pressure Blast "must acquire a site for its intended expansion ... or it will be required to relocate outside of the town of Manchester."

Pressure Blast wants to build a 50,000-square-foot manufacturing facility with 76 parking spaces, two loading docks and outdoor recreation space. McMullen said in her proposal that the company plans to increase its work force from 35 to 66. She said the proposed building could later be expanded to 85,000 square feet.

Under the terms of her offer, the town would be required to fill and grade the site and agree to complete the construction of a proposed access road from Tolland Turnpike to the site. Under that proposal, Reed said, he would build a "large building" or "several buildings."

Reed could not be reached for comment on who would occupy the buildings.

The Board of Directors must approve the sale of the land.

Gerber Scientific Products Inc. of South Windsor had planned to build a manufacturing plant at the site, but withdrew its offer to buy the land last September because it said it needed a bigger site.

Wood permits ready

Permit applications will be available beginning Monday for people who want to remove firewood from a parcel of town-owned wooded land on Finley Street.

The applications will be at the General Services office in the basement of the Municipal Building.

The fee for a permit is $20.

The Manchester Board of Directors voted March 4 to permit public removal of the wood left after a contractor took the trees down last summer.

Normally the town would contract with a commercial firm for the cordwood removal, but such contracts have become less attractive recently because of high costs of liability insurance and lower retail prices for firewood.

Under the terms of the permits to be issued by the town, the permittee must agree to indemnify the town from any liability.

All persons who will assist the permittee in the removal of the wood are also required to sign the permit for their liability.

The operation will be overseen by George Murphy, the town's forester.

Police charge Vernon man following crash

A Vernon man and his 17-month-old son were injured in an accident Wednesday afternoon at the intersection of Tolland Turnpike and Oakland Street, police said.

Police said Tommie J. St. John, 31, of the Rockville section of Vernon, was charged with not providing child restraint for his son, Charles. Failure to wear a seat belt, and driving while under the influence of alcohol, Police said he admitted to having consumed a six-pack of beer and a pint of liquor before the accident.

St. John was driving east on Tolland Turnpike at 3:19 p.m. when he attempted to make a left-hand turn onto Oakland Street and struck the front of a truck traveling west on Tolland Turnpike, police said. The fronts of both vehicles sustained damage, police said.

St. John and his son were bleeding from head wounds caused by the accident, police said. They were treated at Rockville General Hospital and released, a hospital spokeswoman said this morning.

Charles St. John was taken to the hospital by Manchester paramedics, police said.

A good case for a bad bill

Sen. Carl Zinsser of Manchester makes a good case for his bill that would restrict business solicitation by telephone, but the proposed legislation is typical of the nonsense which becomes common in an election year.

The bill raised by Zinsser's Energy and Public Utilities Committee would limit telephone solicitations to the hours between 9 a.m. and 9 p.m. It also would require immediate identification by the caller, and it would prohibit solicitors from calling numbers of people who have requested they not be called.

Zinsser's arguments: People shouldn't be disturbed by solicitors before 9 a.m. or after 9 p.m.; they should know immediately who such calls are coming from; they should be able to choose not to receive solicitation calls.

Automatic dialing systems, in particular, represent an unjust imposition on the people who are subjected to machine-generated sales messages. Zinsser says. Anyone who has been called by a computer with a prerecorded marketing spiel probably would agree: thus the likelihood of popular consumer support for the legislation that would restrict those calls.

But there are major problems with Zinsser's bill.

Southern New England Telephone points out three faults: The legislation would be unenforceable; it would cost the telephone company millions to provide lists of people who didn't want calls; and it raises questions about constitutional free speech.

Does the Legislature need any better reasons to kill the legislation?

The 'payback' on school work

Manchester would receive a "positive payback" on much more than energy costs if the town were to proceed with a plan to renovate and improve five public schools.

The energy-saving features of the plan, as well as the provisions to "increase the safety and health of our children," are being touted by officials who hope to bring the multi-million-dollar project before the voters this November.

The benefits of the proposed improvements are clear, and they provide enough reason to undertake the project.

But there's another reason to proceed quickly: Manchester has not done enough to keep its school facilities up to date, and capital-improvement requests are routinely eliminated from the budget each year when costs must be brought under control.

There would be a much greater "positive payback" if Manchester were to bring its schools into compliance with building codes, and provide enough funding in annual budgets to maintain them properly.

Waterbury's Mosley wants ticket spot

The only opening on the Democratic slate if Gov. Bill O'Neill is renominated this year is for state treasurer, and a Waterbury attorney is gunning for it as though the convention were tomorrow.

All other places on an O'Neill ticket would be taken by incumbents: Lt. Gov. Joe Fusillo of Hartford, Secretary of the State Julia Tashjian of Windsor, Comptroller Ed Caldwell of Bridgeport and Attorney General Joe Lieberman of New Haven.

The early-bird candidate for treasurer is Maurice Mosley, an O'Neill backer and five-term state representative from a city that is always looking for more recognition from Hartford.

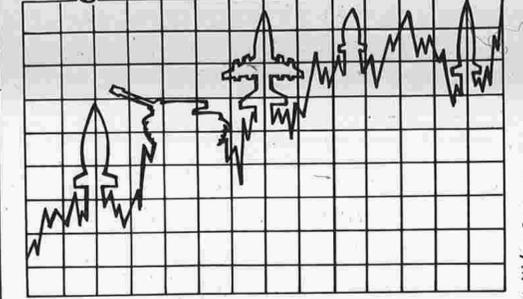

Mosley's support of O'Neill could hurt him if former U.S. Rep. Toby Moffett of Branford succeeds, as he is sure he will, in taking the gubernatorial nomination from O'Neill. But if Moffett pulls it off, he would do well to consider Mosley, whose support in Waterbury includes people from Moffett and O'Neill camps.

MOSLEY ISN'T ALONE in wanting to run for treasurer. Former Hartford Deputy Mayor Francisco Borges is also in the hunt, and he has strong support as a "favorite son" from Town Chairman Jim Crowley and other leaders in the capital city.

The Waterbury man has a big head start, though, and as he disclosed last week, at least a toehold on Borges' turf. State Sen. Bill DiBella as well as State Reps. Carrie Saxon Perry and Tony Palermo, a University of Connecticut Law School classmate.

Realistically, Borges' problem is that Hartford already has Fusillo on an O'Neill slate.

Budget a danger to U.S. students

Assuming that the present enrollment levels are maintained, Manchester Community College will serve some 35,000 students in the next five years (1986-1991). It is possible, but not likely, that enrollments will decline significantly over this period. It is not possible, on the other hand, for the college to accommodate a significant increase in high-demand areas such as business courses, as we already operate at near capacity at prime times and in much of the curriculum.

The question, therefore, is not how many but who will be served if federal student aid awards are cut or eliminated in the several years ahead. President Reagan's 1987 budget nationally would eliminate two million student aid awards and substantially reduce another million.

Threatened with either elimination or sharp cuts are the Guaranteed Student Loan program, Pell grants, work-study and supplemental grants programs, matching State Student Incentive Grants, and special remedial programs for disadvantaged students. The implications of the president's budget should be of concern to all who support the community college as the people's college, where those with the most urgent needs can gain entry into higher education.

But these are the very students who are most likely to be displaced or other students, not able to attend more expensive institutions, seek admission to community colleges. Entering students may attend schools like Manchester Community College in growing numbers in order to accumulate sufficient savings to make up the difference in lost financial aid opportunity. While this would keep community college enrollments up, it would not be a welcome eventuality. We need a balanced system that every qualified student has access to the college or university that best meets her or his needs. Neither Yale nor MCC can be all things to all people!

The Reagan administration takes the position that the proposed cuts will require the middle class to tighten its belts and would not affect lower income groups. Virtually the entire academic community disputes this, maintaining instead that these cuts would preclude most poor people from attending the college of their choice. Presently half the students receiving aid nationally are from families earning less than $15,000 per year. Nevertheless, these students and their families already pay an average of $5,700 per year, an increase of 72% in their share of costs since 1973.

This year at MCC our "typical" student is 23 years old, female, often a single parent, and not supported at home by parents. Fewer than one-third of our students enter directly after graduating from high school. Most carry the burden of costs associated with their education and require no financial aid. Those who do require it would be unable to attend any college without it. During 1984-85, 241 students at MCC (about 5% of our total enrollment) received Pell grants totaling $237,386, or $734 per recipient. In all other financial aid categories, 247 students received a total of $99,382, or $402 per recipient.

At MCC we are not involved with a wholesale distribution of public funds to support students. Rather, we are administering a very modest commitment to assist those having a most compelling need. I would add that these students generally transfer to four-year institutions with continued success. Unfortunately, they will be hardest hit by the President's budget which, for them, will open a gaping hole in the social safety net. Other students less than well-probably fill their seats, but they and society will have lost a great deal in the process.

At this point I am hopeful that Congress will not go along with proposals to make deep cuts in federal support of education. If I am wrong, it will be interesting to observe the public's response should the worst projections come true and growing numbers of students be unable to gain admission to their local community college because there is no room for them and costs prevent their going elsewhere.

Reluctant recruits

The Persian Gulf war, now well into its sixth year, continues to be a bloody stalemate with appalling casualties: more than a quarter-million Iraqis, perhaps 100,000 Iraqis. Under the frenetic religious fervor of the Ayatollah Khomeini, the Iranian war machine has had little trouble getting volunteer cannon fodder. But the secular Baathist regime of Iraqi dictator Saddam Hussein has no such recruiting tool, and Iraqi young men have shown a healthy distaste for the glory of war. As a result, Hussein has sent out "press gangs" to sweep eligible males off the streets and into uniform.

Under the dome

The administration's foreign-policy salesmen, urgently scouring Capitol Hill for supporters of their $100 million aid plan for the Nicaraguan Contras, ran into an unexpectedly vehement response from Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., whose sometimes conservative views had given them hope. Zorinsky listened politely to the White House pitch, then said: "Gentlemen, you cannot rent an army. You can buy loyalty. You cannot purchase friends." End of sales talk.

He'll love it

Senate Majority Leader Reggie Smith of New Hartford doesn't mind being asked why he is walking around the Capitol with a figure "F" in his lapel. The question is supposed to be whether the GOP leader has joined the staff of a New Haven television station. Smith will say why no, that's the number of his Senate district. He says it's a great re-election campaign gimmick.

State Rep. Bill Cibes of New London was congratulated by the House on being elevated to a full professorship at Connecticut College there. His field? What else — government.

New Haven's Democratic big name, Arthur T. Barberi, paraded his maroon town car next to O'Neill's open last week, then called on the governor to ask consideration of a friend for a job.

De la Madrid pays heed to Reagan words

WASHINGTON — In a desperate attempt to save his country from economic collapse, Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid appears to be following some advice President Reagan gave him in a private meeting early this year: Give private enterprise a chance to pay Mexico back from the brink of disaster.

The one-on-one meeting between the two heads of state took place Jan. 3 in Mexicali, Mexico, just across the California border. The 75-minute discussion dealt with Mexico's crushing $77 billion foreign debt — and the need for U.S. help just to pay the annual interest of nearly $10 billion.

"Mexico is the world's fourth largest oil producer, and oil accounts for 70 percent of its export earnings. As the price of oil continues to plummet, de la Madrid's initial austerity measures are pathetically inadequate.

IN A RECENT INTERVIEW, Reagan gave us his account of what he told the Mexican president, starting with Reagan's assurance that "they are a neighbor and we have too much in common for us not to be concerned about their situation." The president continued: "I was talking to him about how the secret of success or greatness in any country has literally been based on their willingness to import money and people. And it's the secret of the United States — the people who have come to us, but also the investment from abroad when we were a pioneer nation with nothing but raw resources to go on."

Reagan, who has been selling private enterprise successfully since his days with General Electric, appeared to have struck out with de la Madrid — at first. The Mexican president, Reagan said, "clined to me the fact that so much of their structure is based on ancient Spanish laws."

This may be questionable history: Since at least 1910, Mexico, wary of exploitation and foreign domination, has had strict rules prohibiting foreigners from majority ownership of Mexican companies. That has had an understandable discouraging effect on would-be foreign investors. In addition, the Mexican government has expropriated many industries over the years, and in 1982 nationalized a large part of what private enterprise was left.

BUT REAGAN was not put off. He told de la Madrid "about places where investors could be assured that they could own property, that they could control it as they could in this country," they would be eager to invest. The president told us he mentioned "places like Baja — what a great resort that could be."

De la Madrid again demurred, said Reagan, citing "the tradition of these ancient laws that made it difficult for government to give this freedom of private ownership and all."

"Well," Reagan told us, "until they're ready to challenge these laws, I think they're going to have problems in today's world of readjusting and, because officials failed to bring his killers to justice, chairman Wayne Snow said."

Our sources predict that this announcement portends far-reaching "structural changes" that will include majority ownership of corporations by selected foreign companies.

The Georgia board of pardons and paroles Tuesday granted a posthumous pardon to Leo Frank, who was snatched from prison and lynched nearly 71 years ago in one of the nation's most notorious murder cases. The decision followed a long campaign by a Tennessee newspaper to prove that Frank was innocent of the murder of a 13-year-old girl. This photo from the Georgia Department of Archives and History shows the lynching on Aug. 17, 1915.

Georgia grants pardon to man lynched in 1915

ATLANTA (UPI) — A Jewish factory superintendent whose murder conviction and lynching 71 years ago helped ignite a revival of the Ku Klux Klan has been posthumously pardoned in a decision that withholds judgment on his guilt.

The Georgia Board of Pardons and Paroles voted unanimously Tuesday to pardon Leo Frank for the beating and strangling death of 13-year-old Mary Phagan, an revering 1983 decision in an effort "to try to heal old wounds."

Jewish groups had sought to have the board grant the pardon by arguing that they only needed to prove Frank was denied justice, not that he necessarily was innocent.

"A chapter of history is closing," said Gerald Cohen, president of the Atlanta Jewish Federation. "We are confident that at long last these wounds of doubt and mistrust will now be healed."

The board granted the pardon because the state failed to protect Frank and "preserve his opportunity for continued legal appeal," and because officials failed to bring his killers to justice, chairman Wayne Snow said.

Our sources predict that this announcement portends far-reaching "structural changes" that will include majority ownership of corporations by selected foreign companies.

Kirkpatrick lobbies for aid to Contras

SOUTHINGTON (UPI) — Former U.N. Ambassador Jeanne J. Kirkpatrick, calling U.S. assistance to the Nicaraguans rebels a matter of survival for both countries, is urging congressional support for President Reagan's $100 aid proposal.

"We used to think that we were not only stronger than anybody, but stronger than everybody. That time has passed," Kirkpatrick told about 800 people attending a state Republican Party fundraiser Tuesday night.

"We are vulnerable in a way we have never been vulnerable before," she said, adding that Kirkpatrick, who left the United Nations last April to return to a teaching job at Georgetown University, said the aid package is an obligation the United States has both to the Contras rebels fighting Nicaragua's Sandinista government and to itself.

"It is profoundly in our own national interest to do so," she said.

Reagan is seeking congressional approval for $100 million in aid to the Contra rebels over an 18-month period, $70 million of which would be for military aid.

In 1984, Congress cut off military aid to the Contras but last year approved $27 million in humanitarian aid, which expires at the end of this month.

Kirkpatrick said Nicaragua has the largest landing strip in Central America and is capable of landing sophisticated Soviet aircraft. She also said Nicaragua is preparing harbors that would be capable of servicing Soviet submarines.

Better late than never, Lotto victor steps forth

NEWINGTON (UPI) — After keeping his Lotto ticket in a safe-deposit box for more than two months, a New Haven man has finally stepped forward and claimed his $4.4 million grand prize.

Dimitrios Glarias, 25, a cook at the Court Restaurant in New Haven, told lottery officials Tuesday he knew about the Nov. 20, 1985, lottery drawing that he was a winner, but delayed cashing in the ticket while "tending to personal business."

Glarias said he claimed the prize Tuesday because, "I finished up all my business. I said, 'Nice day to claim some money.'"

Glarias arrived at lottery headquarters with his girlfriend, Elizabeth, and a waitress at the Court Restaurant. The restaurant is owned by Glarias' brother, he said.

Glarias said he has continued working at the restaurant since winning the lottery, but admitted "the money will make life quite easier."

He said he plans to buy a home, travel, and "see and do things I couldn't do before."

SIKORSKY HELICOPTER LIFTS SILO ride ends at the Shelburne, Vt., museum

Historic silo goes by air to museum

PASSUMPSIC, Vt. (UPI) — An airborne silo made a 90-mile trip across the Green Mountain State Tuesday, as a Sikorsky helicopter lifted the 7 1/2-ton structure over Vermont to a museum outside Burlington.

The 90-minute flight was the only way the Shelburne Museum could get the historical structure intact from the northeastern part of the state. The museum will use the silo to complete its collection of historic buildings.

"It's a once-in-a-lifetime chance to see something like this," said Mary Richardson, a teacher at the local school who brought her second-grade class to watch the silo takeoff. "We heard this is the largest helicopter in the world."

The 20-by-30-foot silo was carried by a "sky crane" helicopter capable of lifting 10 tons. The helicopter had just returned from moving an air conditioner off the top of a Boston building when it journeyed up to the northern Vermont-New Hampshire border for the move.

If the museum has been forced to disassemble and truck the silo, the historical value of the structure might have been harmed. Also, the barn reconstruction project at the museum would have been delayed, said museum director Ben Mason.

"We found a helicopter at the 11th hour," Mason said. The museum was to begin preparation the next day to move the silo by truck when the opportunity to rent the massive helicopter materialized.

Bad weather threatened to call off the trip. The move was originally scheduled for Monday, but a Vermont snowstorm pushed the flight back a day.

As rain pushed back the launch time back two hours to 11:30 a.m., many of the 100 spectators began grumbling about the delay.

"It took us this long to wait, so we might as well wait a little longer," said one spectator as the helicopter blades began turning.

The silo landed on the Shelburne Museum grounds 50 minutes later, completing the move that cost the museum $25,000.

"Avoid it!" is the message on the mural being the Bennett Junior High School students who made it, Jim Grotter and David Pratt, center. With the students are Principal Walter Roth of Verplanck School, where the mural was hung this week, and Elizabeth Petersen, clinical director of Crossroads, the drug prevention center in Manchester.

Pupils paint strong message on drugs

The bright red, yellow, orange and blue mural at one end of the Verplanck School cafeteria catches visitors' eyes the moment they walk in the door. In the middle of all the color are the words "avoid it!" in wavy, graphic letters. Although some students at the elementary school interpreted the message as one pertaining to fire prevention or abduction, most took the mural for what it was intended, a strong message to avoid drugs and alcohol, said David Pratt, its creator. Pratt and Jim Grotter, both eighth-grade students at Bennett Junior High School, had the idea for the mural last fall as part of a project for Crossroads, the town's counseling and education center for the prevention of drug abuse among adolescents. Pratt, who said Tuesday that he had previously only drawn small sketches, was obviously pleased to see the bold result of several weeks of effort hanging in a prominent place. He did the initial design for

Town may get some rev-share funds

By Alex Girelli

Manchester may get about 80 percent of the federal revenue sharing funds it was scheduled to receive in July and about 66 percent of the amount it was scheduled to get in October, town Director Stephen Casano said today on his return from a four-day conference of the National League of Cities in Washington, D.C. But Casano, one of three town directors who attended the conference, said his figures are based on the best scenario that the conferees could get from their talks with legislators on the status of federal revenue sharing. The town has been receiving about $900,000 a year in revenue sharing in recent years. With Casano at the conference was Deputy Mayor Peter DiRosa and Democratic Majority leader town journalists Tuesday, defended the aid package for the Contras — $70 million in secret military aid and $30 million in humanitarian assistance — as the only way to force the Marxist-Leninist Sandinista government to the bargaining table. Reagan said the United States could be forced to surrender Central America to the Soviet sphere. The Sandinistas will come to the negotiating table only when they see the carrot of peaceful settlement backed up by the stick of armed opposition. Despite the intense presidential lobbying, including individual meetings with members of Congress Tuesday and today, the outlook for passage is bleak, especially since Reagan reiterated his "no-compromise" stance. Senate Intelligence Committee Chairman David Durenberger, R-Minn., said the fight for the Contra aid will be difficult because the president has not been right on Nicaragua and "the chances he is right this time are 50-50." Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, called on Reagan to spend the $100 million on social programs.

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass., said the aid request "is no provision of assistance to the House but acknowledged the outlook could change. "The power of the president is absolutely awesome when he goes head to head," O'Neill said. Asked about a compromise, particularly one in which the money would be held in escrow until the Sandinistas were given a chance to negotiate, Reagan said, "I'll listen to any proposal that anyone wants to make that is tied to the idea of letting us come to the aid of these Contras." But he said suspending the actual flow of money and arms would be "counterproductive. I think it would destroy the morale of the Contras and... I don't think that would be a compromise that I could listen to at all."

Peters backing judges who question survey

HARTFORD (UPI) — Judges are right to question a poll that rates their qualifications, Chief Justice Ellen Peters says in a letter sent to the state's Superior Court judges. She wrote on March 10 that the confirmation hearings set for several judges had created "a difficult time for all those whose appointments must be confirmed or reconfirmed and for all of us who are their colleagues."

House Speaker R.E. Van Norstrand polled 1,500 attorneys who rated Superior Court judges. The General Assembly is reviewing the qualifications of 78 interim appointees and referees who are up for eight-year appointments. On Monday, the Judiciary Committee voted 15-11 to oust Superior Court Judge George D. Brodigan. The Senate was to vote on the matter today. Brodigan was one of five judges to receive a poor rating in the poll. Peters said the poll has led to the "politicization" of the judge selection process, posing "the single greatest threat to the integrity and independence of the Judicial Department."

More than 8,000 attorneys were asked to participate in the poll, and 1,500 submitted responses. Van Norstrand had defended the poll as being accurate. The questions used in the poll were fair, G. Donat Ferree Jr., associate director of the Institute for Social Inquiry at the University of Connecticut, said Tuesday. "I do not see anything particularly that is bad and will give an unfair rating of a particular judge," Ferree said after being read the poll's questions. Ferree said, however, a weakness of the poll was that it solicited input from only one group, while the public was ignored. "I think that public opinion research of all types can be a tremendously useful tool in making public choices. But I don't think they're a substitute for public

Manchester's Mike Generis follows through after scoring his first of three goals in the first period of Tuesday night's Division II semifinal against Wethersfield High at the Wesleyan Rink in Middletown. The puck, behind sprawled goalie Doug Partridge, bounces back out as referee Gerry Toner signals the goal. Eagles Kevin Piscottano (3) and John Cloutier (16) are too late to help. Wethersfield won, 6-5.

Goal in final 1:17 lifts Wethersfield MHS hockey year ends

MIDDLETOWN — The best game of the year ended in the worst way for the underdogs. Manchester High's hockey season was dashed at the finish of Tuesday night's Division II semifinal, as hysterical Wethersfield High cartwheelied over the Wesleyan Rink ice with a blood-pumping, mood-dumping 6-5 win. Blame it on units of measurement. The seventh-ranked Indians missed a trip to Saturday's championship game at the Hartford Civic Center by exactly one minute, 17 seconds. It seemed more like 110 feet. John Cloutier's doorstep stuffer with 1:17 left was the game-winner for the third-ranked Eagles, but it was a guided missile from down around Wethersfield Cove at the start of the third period that proved a decisive difference in this action-packed, nerve-racker. Manchester, which winds up 12-9-1, entered the third period with a 5-4 lead. Just 1:28 later, Eagles' defenseman Kevin Piscottano nabbed a loose puck at the fringe of his own blue line and cleared the puck out the neutral zone. His on-ice snapper just happened to travel on goal — some 110 feet away — and it just happened to go in. Indians' freshman goaltender Rod Cantrell, who played his best game of the post-season, met the incoming disc as it passed into the crease — and watched with horrifying realization as it tipped off his stick and nicked into the net. "A goal that magnitude always hurts," said Manchester coach Eric Farno, who did himself proud in his maiden year at the helm. "We've done a couple of those (long-range goals) and it really lifts us."

Wethersfield coach Roger Thomas verified the value of the Luke. "They were a bit down after that," said Thomas. "I had told our guys to shoot from anywhere." The Eagles held an offensive advantage from then on, and the full house — except those fans who were no signs of fatigue when he burned two defenders and wristed a shot off the right post. Cloutier, who earlier had a short-handed breakout bid snagged in breathtaking manner by Cantrell, possessed on the rebound in the crease and stuck it home. "When it comes down to the wire, you've got to go with your best," replied Farno. "They scored all five goals and gave us the spark."

Manchester, which eliminated Masuk High 10-2, and second-ranked Shepaug Valley 5-0, in the first two rounds, pulled off a minor miracle by qualifying for the tournament in the first place. The Indians opened the season by losing their first four and then were 3-6 after dropping a 6-3 decision to Wethersfield on Feb. 8. Manchester then went 7-2-1 the rest of the year to make it to the post-season. "We showed character," concluded Farno. "Maybe just the pump machine went dry and we needed more oil or gas."

What the 1985-86 Indians don't need is to search themselves for consolation. The self-worth is right there under their belt. In the first two periods, Wethersfield had a 2-0 lead. Healy and Eagles' captain Dennis DeLoe were top playmakers for the victors, collecting a goal and three assists apiece. MHS super-center Blake didn't score a goal in the final game of his illustrious scholastic career. All he did was notch four assists. "Bobby was trying to be a little unselfish, and maybe he passed one too many times," said Farno. Generis had the hat trick, while Gullio contributed a pair of goals. The GBG trio (Generis, Blake and Gullio) evolved from a power-play unit to the first and only line for Manchester, accounting for every Indian point. Blake, who slipped in nine goals in the first two knotty games, finished with scoring numbers of 46-47-83. Generis, who added two assists for a five-point night, ended up at 33-22-55, while Gullio's two tallies and two helpers gave him totals of 22-27-59. "Manchester has an outstanding team but that first line plays 90 percent of the time," noted Thomas. "Our depth is what won the game."

Weaver kicks felled Indians

HARTFORD — For one quarter, 14th-ranked Manchester High was very competitive with third-ranked Weaver High in Connecticut Interscholastic Athletic Conference boys' basketball. In the first quarter, the Indians, the underdogs to the Central Connecticut Conference West Division champs, were down by six points, 16-10, and were hanging tough. But the host Beavers, who were upside play from the 6-8 Arnold, tried to keep pace in the third quarter. The Indians were in contention at 52-45 with half the period to go. But back-to-back slam dunks by David Gains and James, each on fine assists from Ruben Fuentes, seemed to excite the Beavers. Even a dunk from Arnold couldn't stem the flow in Weaver's direction with the Beavers owning a 71-47 lead after three periods. "For three quarters I thought we did a good job," Kinel said. "It was not as good as the first quarter shows. Weaver is more talented than East Hartford," said the first-year Indian coach, referring to the CCC East champs. "They shot very well and ran very well. It was shortening in the fourth period for Weaver. Walter 'Doc' Hurley, for whom the Weaver Field House is named, made a couple of announcements before the game. One was that Weaver wanted to be a good host. Tolliver apparently wasn't listening. Tolliver, and his team, spurred on by a partisan crowd that wanted 100 points, tossed basketball etiquette into the wastepaper basket. Tolliver did not call off his team's full-court press until the final horn. Tolliver felt the full brunt of the Beaver onslaught. "I had my reserves in and I'm not going to ask them to play passively."

"We have some feelings too. We came from being a poor team to a pretty good team to being embarrassed. The guys at the end felt embarrassed and it's not right." Kinel was not thrilled by his team being used as a sacrificial lamb. "I was annoyed," he said. "We have some feelings too. We came from being a poor team to a pretty good team to being embarrassed. # NFL agrees to the usage of instant replays

By Dave Goldberg
The Associated Press

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. — The NFL has finally found a way to give its officials the same view of a controversial play that a fan gets on his television set.

In a move the league had resisted for more than a decade, NFL owners voted Tuesday to use instant replays for the 1986 season to oversee its officials and override them if necessary.

The change applies for the most part to less controversial plays — pass receptions, fumbles and out-of-bounds calls. It does not apply to most penalties, including calls on pass interference that have caused some of the most memorable officiating flaps.

Nonetheless, the move was a revolutionary one for a league that has always moved cautiously. It was made primarily because NFL rulemakers became aware that improved video technology was allowing viewers at home to get a better view of some calls than the officials on the field.

"We felt instant replay had become such a fixture that we should give the officials a chance to see what the public was seeing," said Tex Schramm, president of the Dallas Cowboys and chairman of the rules-making Competition Committee.

Only four teams — the New York Giants, Denver Broncos, Kansas City Chiefs and St. Louis Cardinals — voted against the instant replay rule and the Pittsburgh Steelers abstained during what Schramm described as "probably the best discussion we've had in a league meeting for years."

Eight other changes were also approved, the most noteworthy of which was aimed directly at Jim McMahon, the flamboyant, iconoclastic quarterback of the Super Bowl champion Chicago Bears.

That change strengthens the sanction against players who wear logos-bearing headbands or other equipment, allowing ejection from a game or suspension for a game for violation. It applies to all unsanctioned writing, from the "adidas" and "Rozelle" headbands McMahon wore during the playoffs to the different bands he wore in the Super Bowl backing various charitable causes.

The instant replay rule was tried in preseason games last year. In that experiment, 23 plays were questioned, but just one was overruled.

Also at Tuesday's session, St. Louis Cardinals owner William V. Bidwill provided an instant replay for violation. It applies to all unsanctioned writing, from the Cardinals might play the 1986 season in a city other than St. Louis. But Bidwill, whose team plays in the NFL's second smallest stadium, said he had negotiated with no other city and would not specify which, if any, he would prefer. He did say he had spoken with officials from the cities with hospitality suites here to lure NFL franchises — Sacramento, Calif., Phoenix and Jacksonville, Fla.

"We listen to what people have to say but that's not making a deal," he said.

TCU wins NIT opener

By The Associated Press

MISSOULA, Mont. — Texas Christian guard Carl Lott was expected to give the University of Montana problems in the opening round of the 49th annual National Invitation Tournament.

But it was the way the slick 6-foot-4 junior got the job done in a 76-49 TCU victory Tuesday night that befuddled the Grizzlies, and even surprised Lott himself.

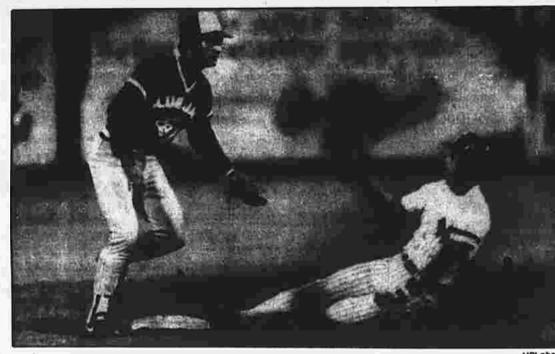

Lott, a sturdy 205-pounder who says he prefers to push the ball inside, became "Mr. Outside" against the Big Sky Conference regular-season co-champions by nailing 12 of 14 shots, most of them mid-to-long-range jump shots.

The result was that the Horned Frogs, who tied for the Southwest Conference regular season title, led from start-to-finish as the NIT opened play at regional sites. The TCU-Montana game opened NIT action, with first-round games continuing tonight.

"They (Montana) played a real tight zone, so I just had to take the shots they gave me," said Lott, who had a career-high 27 points. The Horned Frogs are now 22-8. Larry Kryskowiak paced Montana with 25 points and 10 rebounds. He brought the Grizzlies within four with the first basket of the second half, but that's as close as they came. TCU scored nine of the next 11 points.

Three NIT games are on tap tonight, including one in which Providence, coached by Rick Pitino, entertains Boston University, which used to be coached by Pitino. Three players he recruited — center Tom Ivey, forward Paul Hendricks, guard Dwayne Vinson — still play key roles for BU.

The last time Boston University, 21-1, played in a postseason tournament was 1983. Pitino's last year as coach.

New York's Bobby Meacham slides into second base but is tagged out by Toronto's Damaso Garcia Tuesday night during exhibition play at Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. The Yankees won, 4-0.

Spring training roundup Perez, Sutter on way back

By The Associated Press

The comeback trail is beginning to look like a primrose path for Pascual Perez and Bruce Sutter.

Perez (1-13, 6.4 earned run average) and Sutter (7-7, 4.48) contributed mightily to the Atlanta Braves' fifth-place finish in the National League West, a division 20 games behind the disappointing Los Angeles Dodgers.

On Tuesday, they showed signs that their problems, physical and otherwise, may be a thing of the past.

Perez pitched two scoreless innings, striking out four, and Sutter, heralded as the team's bullpen savior, hurled one perfect inning as the Braves won a 4-1 exhibition victory over the world champion Kansas City Royals.

In three spring appearances, including an intrasquad game, Perez has allowed one hit and struck out five in seven innings.

"Every time I pitch last year I think, 'I'm going to lose again,'" he said. "Everything bothered me. Now, I think, 'I'm the best. I'm going to win again. I feel like I want to be a pitcher again.'"

Sutter said he "felt good" after his spring debut. "It's a relief to get this first one behind me. The only way to find out is to go out there. It was good to get back out there and pitch to a hitter and find out how I feel. I didn't feel any pain, and that's good. I think my arm will be all right. With the way I've been throwing, I feel I'll be ready."

San Francisco's two-run homer off Danny Jackson gave Atlanta a 2-1 lead in the fourth inning.

Mets 5, Phillies 1
Len Dykstra and Tim Lincecum hit

RBI singles in the eighth inning and Ron Darling pitched three scoreless innings for New York. Von Hayes had a bases-loaded triple for the Philadelphia.

Cardinals 9, Astros 1
Jim Morris drove in four runs with a double and a homer and Terry Pendleton added a two-run homer for St. Louis. The Cards battered Mike Scott for six runs and five hits in the first two innings.

Dodgers 8, Reds 2
Terry Whitfield's pinch-hit grand slam homer in the 10th inning powered the Dodgers. Los Angeles, held to one hit over the first eight innings, tied the score 2-2 in the ninth on Enos Cabell's pinch RBI double off John Franco, then erupted for six runs in the 10th off minor leaguer Jeff Montgomery and minor leaguer Hugh Kemp.

American League Yankees 4, Blue Jays 0
Phil Niekro, who will turn 47 on April 1, allowed one hit in three innings for New York. Marty Bystrom and Dennis Rasmussen, also trying to secure spots in the starting rotation, worked two innings apiece.

Red Sox 5, Orioles 1
Jeff Sellers, Mark Brown, Wes Gardner and Steve Crawford held Baltimore to three hits and Glenn Hoffman homered, tripled and doubled for Boston.

Giants 8, Athletics 5
San Francisco may have come up with another slugger named Clark to replace Jack, who was traded to St. Louis last year. Will Clark, who was playing for Missisissippi State University last spring, hit his second home run of the exhibition season, a two-run shot, and doubled as the undefeated Giants won their fifth victory in a row.

Spring News:
In medical news, Pittsburgh catcher Tony Pena will be out of action for more than a week because of a rib injury. Pena strained a muscle in his right rib cage and suffered possible cartilage damage Monday while swinging a bat in an exhibition game.

FISHING FOR NEW IDEAS?

Eating light and sensibly isn't a greater emphasis being placed on a well-balanced diet of sunshining foods that are lighter in calories. The trick is to make "light" foods taste great so that eating sensibly becomes a habit for life.

Some ways to make "light" taste good lie in the foods you choose — like seafood, vegetables and fruits such as citrus. Others include the ways you cook. Today's popular techniques of preparing foods such as steaming over water, grilling or broiling, microwaving and stir-frying intensify the flavors of light foods and seasonings, giving them added vibrancy and impact.

Presented here are a selection of food ideas featuring ideal partners for light yet highly enjoyable good eating — Alaska seafood and fresh California-Arizona citrus. The bright flavor of citrus highlights the mild flavors of fish and shellfish, reducing the need for rich sauces and accents.

Steaming, an excellent way to keep calories down and flavor up, is used in Steamed Whitefish with Vegetables 'n' Lemon. Zesty fresh lemon provides refreshing flavor with few calories and little sodium added to the delectable "meat in one entree."

Salmon Steaks with Herbed Lemon Butter features this succulent fish from the icy water of Alaska topped with flavorful lemon herbed butter. The salmon may be barbecued, grilled or broiled and any leftover lemon butter can be refrigerated or frozen to use later on another butter.

Choice Alaska halibut, baked in foil with fresh green orange peel, is presented with a colorful orange sauce that complements this delicately flavored seafood.

For Northwest Salmon Burritos, convenient canned salmon teams up with fresh lemons, cheese, spicy seasonings and tortillas. Microwaving is the cooking method, a lighter approach for preparing Mexican entrees.

Requiring a minimum of cooking time, Snow Crab Stir-Fry is a blend of Alaska Snow crab, fresh vegetables and lemon. Available year-round, Alaska Snow crab is fully cooked, cleaned, low in fat and calorie and easy to enjoy.

What better way to go "light" in a delicious way than with Alaska seafood and fresh western citrus!

OVEN BAKED HALIBUT A LA ORANGE

- 2 oranges, peeled, cut in half-carwheel slices and well-drained

Line a 12x8x2-inch shallow baking dish with foil. Lightly brush both sides of halibut steaks with oil; arrange in dish. Sprinkle with orange peel and dill. Cover dish with foil and bake at 450° F. allowing 10 to 12 minutes cooking time per inch of thickness measured at its thickest part, or until halibut flakes when tested with a fork. Meanwhile top sauce, in saucepan, saute green onions in butter. Gradually blend orange and apple juice into cornstarch and chicken bouillon. Add to butter mixture. Cook over medium heat, stirring until thickened. Add orange half-carwheel slices; heat. To serve, spoon sauce over halibut steaks. Makes 4 servings.

About Town

Turin Shroud talk is tonight

The Shroud of Turin, a burial cloth of a man crucified at the time of Christ, will be the subject of the talk by biblical archeologist Paul Bromley tonight at 7:30 p.m. at Assumption Parish Hall. The hall is attached to the Church of the Assumption at 29 S. Adams Street.

Bromley is one of six members of an international scientific team allowed to study the shroud for a very limited time. The shroud, the subject of religious art since the 18th century, is believed by some to be the burial cloth of Christ. Recent scientific studies do not solve all of the mysteries of the cloth which was kept under lock and key for centuries until the six scientists were allowed to make extensive tests on it.

Manchester Custom Ranch

Naylor and Marvin Duncan, senior deputy governor of the FCA, will be nominated to a new three-member board. Reagan announced Tuesday. The third member to be appointed by the president will be a Democrat, as required by law.

Company withdraws drug

WASHINGTON — Burroughs Wellcome Co. is withdrawing an antidepressant drug, which has been on the market only three months, because of reports of seizures among patients during clinical experiments.

Keogh plans lessen income tax bite

QUESTION: I'm retired, but I do part-time consulting work out of my home. For 1985, my gross income was $10,000. My net income, after expenses, was $6,000. How large a contribution can I make to my "money purchase" Keogh plan for 1985? My bank says 25 percent of gross income — $2,500. One broker says 20 percent of gross income — $2,000. Another broker says 25 percent of net income — $1,500. In your column and elsewhere I read 20 percent of net income — $1,200. Which is it?

ANSWER: It's $1,200. Your money purchase plan is one of three types of "defined contribution" Keogh retirement plans available to self-employed people. Since 1984, you have been allowed to put 20 percent of your net self-employed income — but no more than $80,000 — into that particular type of plan each year. You don't pay income tax on your annual Keogh contributions. That money, as well as the interest and/or dividends it earns remains tax deferred until you withdraw it.

The rules say you can put 25 percent of your "earned income" into your Keogh. However, for this calculation, earned income is defined as your net income, minus your Keogh contributions. Effectively, that makes your maximum Keogh contribution 20 percent of your net income.

Deindustrial United States an illusion?

NEW YORK — Among today's most readily accepted economic assertions is that Americans are becoming producers of services — as in medical and security services — rather than tangible goods, such as steel beams and TV sets.

Down the barrel

William Searight of Cadillac Plastic and Chemical in Linden, N.J., prepares a roll of thin Mylar clear plastic for cutting into flat sheets. The specialty film is used in such products as automobile dash-board panels, appliance ID plates and decorative replacement products for wood, metal and glass.

Corporate investments rise

Fidelity spokesmen said. The tax advantage stems from a provision in federal laws allowing corporations that buy stock in other corporations to exclude from taxes 85 percent of the income they make on dividends, or periodic payments made to holders of certain stocks.

Gas retailers rap oil firms

HARTFORD (AP) — The Connecticut Gasoline Retailers Association said today that major oil companies violate antitrust laws by forcing franchise dealers to buy gasoline from one source at artificially high prices.

Business author says service number one

By Frank Kelly United Press International
DALLAS — Entrepreneur Jim Cook sees opportunity in shoddy service, discourteous office help, indifferent management and lackadaisical sales people.

These observations gleaned from other people's businesses go into a notebook, adding to Cook's list of pitfalls that undermine the success of many companies while providing opportunity for competitors.

"The great companies always see themselves also as a great service company," said Cook, founder of investment firm Rarities Inc. of Minneapolis. Minn., a direct-marketing investment firm.

"Customer service" is the key ingredient to successful entrepreneurship, said Cook, who struck out on his own in 1970 to turn profits in a series of small businesses, culminating in 1971 generating annual revenues of about $250 million by specializing in precious metals, goldfishes and equities.

Investors' Guide

With a "paired" plan, combining money purchase and profit-sharing plans, the maximum is 25 percent, again reduced by the contribution — making it 20 percent. Then, 8 percent goes into the money purchase plan and 12 percent into the profit-sharing plan.

QUESTION: I am 75, self-employed and have a Keogh plan. I plan to retire at the end of this year. Will I have to dissolve the Keogh plan immediately after retirement, or may I leave it in force without further contributions?

ANSWER: You can leave your Keogh plan in force. You won't be able to make any contributions to it after you no longer are self-employed. You will, of course, have to keep taking money out of your Keogh plan. You were required to start making those withdrawals ANSWER: There's no such limit. You can keep putting money into your Keogh plan as long as you are self-employed — regardless of your age.

QUESTION: What is the consequence for someone who does not make the required withdrawals from an IRA or Keogh plan?

ANSWER: If you don't make the required withdrawals from an IRA and/or Keogh plan, the Internal Revenue Service hits you with a penalty tax equal to 50 percent of the money you were required to take out.

That severe consequence — equal to the maximum federal income tax — makes it sensible to take the required withdrawals.

Deindustrial United States an illusion?

NEW YORK — Among today's most readily accepted economic assertions is that Americans are becoming producers of services — as in medical and security services — rather than tangible goods, such as steel beams and TV sets.

And, like so many economic theories, this one might have a hole in it. A hole so large, in fact, that it could make waste of hundreds of scholarly articles and TV sets.

Conceivably, the shift from tangible manufactured goods is not occurring at anywhere near the pace talked about, even if it is studied, debated and worried about by scholars, government officials, business people and economists.

Something is occurring, to be sure, but like so many economic theories, deindustrialization might be an illusion — and strangely, it might even result from strength rather than weakness in the manufacturing sector.

According to professors Richard McKenzie and Stephen Smith, the illusion is created in part by the arbitrary classifying of workers into two amorphous employment categories of service and manufacturing.

It really cannot be done that easily, they say in a report for the Center for the Study of American Business, founded at Washington University in St. Louis by former White House economist Murray Weidenbaum and others.

There are, they say, many service workers in manufacturing and many manufacturing workers in the service sector.

What essential difference is there, they ask, between timekeepers, computer programmers and company nurses in the manufacturing sector, and bookkeepers, computer programmers and clinical nurses in the service sector?

Hardly any, they point out.

Yet members in one group are arbitrarily said to be manufacturing while the other group is called service. It works the other way too: There are many production workers in the service sector.

McKenzie and Smith suggest that economic noncertainty might not be keeping pace with economic change, and that mislabeling might be causing some of the confusion rising from the mental tendency to fit ideas into neat compartments.

This notion becomes especially clear, they suggest, when you recognize that some of the growth in the service sector is occurring "at the initiative of the manufacturing sector."

Simply stated, manufacturers today are pressured to produce efficiently. Very often they can obtain materials, parts and services by inviting bids from outside firms rather than from their own internal departments.

'Contrarians' doubt popular thinking

These speculators realize cyclical nature of economy

By John Cunniff
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — These are times that wind the minds of contrarians as light as springs, leaving them no time to relax from contemplating the endless financial and economic possibilities.

The stress on them comes from a consensus economic forecast of continued economic strength, accompanied by low inflation, declining interest rates and a stock market that seems to have had a vision of heaven.

Can it continue, they ask? No way, they reply.

While their answers are similar, contrarians are not necessarily all alike. There are types, such as the do-nothing worrier who fears prosperity is simply a prelude to ruin. And the speculator, who wonders how he can profit from it.

Historic truth supports the first contention: Economies are cyclical, and in that sense good times invite bad times, which are followed by higher levels of prosperity that generate unrealistic hopes that, come crashing down, are not inherently bad for the contrarian speculator. Rather than sit and be hit, he acts against the strike. He is, as financier Bernard Baruch once

Historic truth supports the first contention: Economies are cyclical, and in that sense good times invite bad times, which are followed by higher levels of prosperity that generate unrealistic hopes that come crashing down.

THE SPECULATOR contrarian looks at all the office buildings and hotels being built and sees not a boom but a lot of empty rooms, and begins arranging financing to buy some of them from harassed owners a couple of years hence.

While he isn't buying real estate, the contrarian speculator is putting money into gold and silver because, he says, eventually they have to move higher than current prices, which are only a fraction of where they've been.

Besides, he says, it is wise to protect yourself against declining values in paper money. And if you call him a worry wart he will produce a computer printout that shows paper money has declined in value since man invented it.

He is locking in "low" interest rates because he feels that with all the debt around — personal, corporate and government — money will be more costly in the future. He may be wrong, he agrees, but he sees more reward than risk.

He isn't impressed by appearances. He looks at the stock market and he wonders: Where are the earnings to support the price?

He views a sea of people in department stores, but then he looks at the ordinary sales and earnings reports and he wonders why.

He waits in a long line to check in at the airport, but after getting aboard he thinks about all the airlines that aren't making money in spite of all the traffic.

And in stocks, some of the best known advisers — Joseph Granville and J. Holt, to name two — have cost customers dearly by telling them stock was overvalued because of a debacle to come.

It might come. When?

Spanish voters rebuff Communists

MADRID, Spain (UPI) - Spaniards voted overwhelmingly to remain in NATO, dealing a stinging defeat to the Communists and leaving the Socialist government of Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez triumphant.

"It is the victory of a peace and security policy that lifts Spain out of its isolation," Gonzalez said today.

Opinion polls had indicated voters would choose to break from the Western defense alliance. But, instead, they sided with the Socialist government.

Official returns today from the referendum showed 52.54 percent of the voters approved of continued NATO membership. Fewer than 40 percent of the voters went along with the anti-NATO coalition led by the Communist Party.

Gonzalez, who opinion polls forecast would lose the referendum by 12 percent, said NATO membership gave Spain "the role appropriate to our place in the world."

Spain, which did not participate in World War I or World War II, joined NATO in 1982 to become the 16th member of an alliance born in 1949 to form a single defense system for North American and European nations.

Although not a NATO member until 1982, Spain has hosted four American military bases since 1953 under a treaty with the United States.

Soviets extend moratorium on nuke tests

The Soviet Union will continue its unilateral moratorium on nuclear testing until the United States conducts a test of its own, Kremlin leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev said in a statement released today.

The moratorium, imposed in August, was due to expire March 31.

In a message to the leaders of six nations, Gorbachev repeated his willingness to allow on-site inspections by U.S. observers if Washington suspects the Soviets have violated their promise not to conduct nuclear tests.

The official Soviet news agency Tass said the test ban extension was announced in a letter to the United States.

The announcement came as President Reagan rebuffed demands from Congress and a panel of international leaders to seek a comprehensive nuclear test ban with the Soviets, testing is essential for the nation's security, administration arms control analysts say.

Reagan on Wednesday denounced a House-passed resolution calling on him to negotiate a total ban on nuclear tests, saying it does not "serve the interests of the United States, our allies and our friends" and would undercut his efforts to make progress on the issue.

Tass previously reported that Gorbachev's reply was given Wednesday to Argentine Ambassador Federico Saturnino Bravo. The full text of the reply was not made public until today.

Gorbachev announced the Soviet test moratorium Aug. 6, 1985, to continue through December. On Jan. 15, he extended the moratorium to March 31, and again urged Washington to join it.

The Tass text of Gorbachev's reply quoted the Soviet leader as saying, "The Soviet Union shall not
