Across the nation

Leftover winter weather pushed across the South in defiance of spring tides with a blast of cold air from Texas to the Carolinas that threatened to nip peach blossoms in the bud and harm other fruit and vegetable crops. Canadian winds pushed temperatures to single digits in the Northeast and funneled frosty air into the South on the second day of spring today. Frost and freeze warnings were posted from north Texas across the lower Mississippi and Tennessee valleys into Georgia and the Carolinas. Aggravating the threat to crops were brisk northerly winds gusting up to 20 mph that swept along the Gulf Coast. Gale warnings were issued from Texas to Florida, as well as on the coasts off the Carolinas and Washington state. Freezing temperatures today extended as far south as Birmingham, Ala., and Atlanta, and the mercury was expected to dip to 23 degrees in central Georgia, the state's major peach-growing section, said Stephen Myers, Georgia Extension Service horticulturist.

The blast of Canadian air sent temperatures plummeting to the single digits in the Northeast. A few snow showers lingered in the Great Lakes, where nearly 5 inches of snow heralded the start of spring Thursday in Chicago. Cold winds from the Plains blew into the eastern half of the country, pushing wind chills to between 15 below and 30 below in the Northeast. "Spring" asked Eric Pemme, 30, of the Buffalo suburb of Elma, where it was 13 degrees. "Here it springs from winter to summer, from summer to winter."

Today is Friday, March 21, the 80th day of 1986 with 285 to follow. The moon is moving toward its full phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn. The evening star is Venus. Those born on this date are under the sign of Aries. Farm Dangers
On National Agriculture Day we will probably hear a great deal about economic problems facing American farmers. But complex machinery also has made farming one of the nation's most dangerous jobs, according to the American Council of Life Insurance. In 1980, farmers suffered 2,000 deaths and 200,000 injuries on the job, mostly from equipment accidents. Grain dust explosions have also taken a toll. Since 1900, more than 550 people have died in these lethal explosions. DO YOU KNOW — What crop did former President Jimmy Carter raise on his Georgia farm? THURSDAY'S ANSWER — Mexico sends the largest share of illegal immigrants to the U.S. Knowledge Unlimited, Inc. 1986

NLRB backs UAW charges

Striking employees of the Pillowtex Corp. should have been reinstated to their jobs shortly after they made an unconditional offer to return to work in December, the National Labor Relations Board in Hartford ruled Monday. Acting on a complaint filed by the United Auto Workers Local 376, which represents the strikers, the labor board also found merit in charges that the company committed an unfair labor practice when it instituted a 25-cent hourly increase in the wage paid to maintenance and production employees who were hired to replace the strikers. Local 376 represents about 90 maintenance and production workers at the company's Regent Street plant. Sixty of them have been on strike since Aug. 26. Both charges, contained in a complaint issued by the NLRB, will be added to four other union complaints that were consolidated last month after the NLRB found they had merit. All the charges must now be heard by an NLRB administrative law judge in a proceeding set for next week. "This is just a further consolidation of a complaint outstanding," John Sauter, deputy officer in charge at the NLRB's subregional office in Hartford said this morning. The union had charged that Pillowtex, a Dallas-based pillow and comforter manufacturer, did not reinstate the strikers after they made an unconditional offer to return to work Dec. 3, instead, federal mediator at a number of negotiating sessions. The workers want better wages and benefits and contract language that protects their jobs. They also want a seniority system that protects older workers, while the company has said promotion and recall should be based more on skill. Company officials have confirmed this and added that strikers are being offered back their jobs when the jobs become available. The company has said that all strikers have been given a chance to return and all have refused. Union officials deny that all workers have been asked to return. The NLRB will open hearings Monday to hear testimony on the four complaints that were consolidated. Local 376 has charged Pillowtex with regressive bargaining — making proposals one day and withdrawing them the next — withholding information the union needs to make proposals at bargaining sessions, changing the company's paid vacation policy to discriminate against the strikers, and changing the company's insurance carrier without negotiating first with the union. Richard E. Kerner, vice president of personnel at Pillowtex, has denied the charges and has said the company's actions will be upheld at the hearing. Robert L. Madore, secretary-treasurer of Local 376, said today he doubted that the additional two charges will be heard at Monday's hearing. By law, Pillowtex has 10 days to respond to the labor board's complaint before it is heard by a judge, Madore said. He said it could only be heard if the company responds quickly. Kerner could not be reached for comment today. The strike has lasted over six months, despite the help of a

Activist to delay effort

An Eighth Utilities District activist says he will hold off on deciding whether to mount a petition drive seeking to force a new referendum on whether the town's Buckland firehouse should be sold until the Manchester Charter Revision Commission finishes its work. E. Steve Pearl of Hollister Street said he would solicit voter signatures for a new referendum after the state Elections Enforcement Commission concluded that a referendum held in November violated the spirit of state election laws by excluding district residents. Pearl had said he would try to force a new referendum on the matter in which district residents could participate. But on Wednesday, the district resident said he had been advised by his attorney to wait until the charter commission finishes considering whether to change provisions in the Town Charter that would allow residents to force consolidation of the town and the independent utilities district, which provides fire protection and sewer service to much of northern Manchester. The commission is scheduled to complete its final report in May. District voters were excluded from last November's referendum in which voters were asked whether the town should continue to operate the firehouse, which residents voted by a large margin to keep, is located in an area now served by district firefighters. A complaint filed by Pearl with the Elections Enforcement Commission was rejected in a February decision on the grounds that the agency did not have jurisdiction over the matter. However, the commission concluded that the town had no authority under state regulations to exclude district residents. In another matter, Pearl warned that the tax increase called for by Town Manager Robert Weiss to support his 1986 fiscal year budget might prompt the Eighth Utilities District to separate from the town and form its own municipality. "Unless these blatant acts come to a halt, we in North Manchester or the Eighth District can and may secede from Manchester and start our own town government," he said in a letter released Thursday. Fear is who is president of the Connecticut Taxpayers Association, did not say how many district residents he thought would support such a move. "While most of our citizens are struggling to make ends meet, it's obscene that Manchester's manager should ask for a tax increase of 8.6 percent," he said. "More taxes are not necessary — stop wasteful spending now."

Fairway sale likely

Kamins Department Store in Glastonbury plans to buy the Fairway Department Store on Main Street at the beginning of April, Kamins officials said this week. Manny Rosenthal, the owner of Kamins, and Steven Josephs, the store's manager, said they plan to purchase Fairway for an undisclosed amount from Joseph Filomeno, a West Hartford certified public accountant. The closing date is April 2, Josephs said. "It's a good location," Josephs said. "Manchester has a good client base." Filomeno said today that while the sale is not definite, he does not anticipate any problems. He said all of the store's employees were informed of the possible sale. "The store will keep its Fairway name initially, although it might be changed later, Josephs said. He said that all 12 people currently employed there will stay on if the deal goes through as scheduled and he takes over the store at 1 p.m. April 2. Kamins is the same type of store as Fairway, Josephs said. He said he will be adding services to Fairway that the store does not presently have but which have been successful at the Glastonbury store. The services include cutting keys, cutting and selling window shades, custom framing and various other things. "We are service oriented," Josephs said. Fairway will be closed for a few hours April 2, Josephs said. He said he will do an inventory check before opening the store. Filomeno has owned the 4,700-square-foot store for three years. Josephs owned a Kamins store in Marlborough for two years, but closed it about two weeks ago.

Diplomatic slap

The wife of Canadian Ambassador Allan E. Gottlieb slapped the face of an aide during an embassy dinner hosted by visiting Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, according to the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. Sandra Gottlieb, who writes humorous columns for the Washington Post on the city's diplomatic scene, made a scene when she hit social secretary Connie Connor hard enough to knock off an earring in front of a dozen reporters. Minutes later, Gottlieb and Connor appeared together smiling. An embassy statement described the whole thing as "an incident of a purely personal character." Connor is said to have attributed the slap to Gottlieb's agitation over the guest list for the glittering event.

Reagans speak

President Reagan admitted to Barbara Walters that he had such a crush on his first leading lady, Jane Travis, he coined a term for it — "leading-ladyitis." But the picture ended... he told Walters in an interview for her latest special to air on ABC March 24, 9-11 p.m. Eastern time. Walters asked President and Nancy Reagan what film made the greatest impression on them when they were growing up. Reagan named "Dracula" and "the man that's built by the doctor," while Mrs. Reagan recalled her crush on Bing Crosby. About his 34-year marriage, Reagan said, "Clark Gable had a line once that I thought was very eloquent. 'There's nothing more wonderful for a man than to approach his own doorstep knowing that someone on the other side of the door is listening for the sound of his footsteps. I've always had that feeling, in the 34 years, that someone is listening.'"

Weighty volume

Elizabeth Taylor, who's had her ups and downs in the diet department, plans to write a book on the subject. Taylor, 54, will give her views in a yet untitled book to be published by G.P. Putnam's Sons in 1987 and by Berkeley Books in 1988. The publishing company, which refused to say how much Taylor will gain from her literary effort, said Thursday the book will be about her view of women's attitudes toward weight gain and loss and the ways in which they affect women's image and self-esteem. "I'm thrilled and excited about this new endeavor," Taylor said. The actress has written two previous books — "Nobles and Me," written at age 13, and "Elizabeth Taylor," an informal memoir. Putnam's said a writer "morally acceptable" to Taylor and Putnam's will work with the actress.

The president waits

A department store sales manager in Macon, Ga., who believes "customer service is important," kept one unknown caller on hold for several minutes, then picked up the phone to hear the voice of President Reagan. "I was in shock. I couldn't believe it was his voice. Customer service is important, but I didn't mean to keep the president waiting," said Linda Schmitz, 34. "He said hello, told me my father had just left his office and asked how I was doing," said Schmitz, 28, whose father had hand delivered a note to the site she had written to Reagan. Schmitz, a Democrat, said Reagan spent part of his 20-minute conversation urging her to change her political affiliation. Schmitz's note thanked Reagan for his interest in the Sister Cities International program that operates in 752 cities around the world. "The thing we talked the most about and the most important thing was the importance of getting across to other people what this country is like," she said. Schmitz's father told Reagan she was proud of her father, Raymond, vice president of the Washington organization, even though he is a Republican.

Coventry inspector warns council about backlog

By Jacqueline Bennett
Herold Correspondent

COVENTRY — In an impassioned presentation of his proposed building budget of more than $100,000, Building Inspector John Willauer warned the Town Council Thursday that the quality of inspections was being compromised by staff shortages.

"We're not making good inspections, we're hurrying to a point that I know we're making mistakes and we're not able to do the work required by law," he said at a special meeting of the council.

Willauer said that in the past year, construction in town doubled, there were from 200 to 300 new residential sewer hookups planned and more than 200 sewer overflows that needed inspections. Building plans can't be found in his overcrowded and understaffed office, Willauer said.

He told the council that more than 1,700 new building lots have been approved and developments will soon when the Interstate 84 connector between East Hartford and Manchester is completed.

Willauer predicted construction could become a multi-million dollar industry in Coventry.

"You're neglecting it," he told the council. "I've lost sleep over some of this."

Willauer said he fears the town could be liable for bad inspections. He also charged that a lack of coordination between town offices was costing him time "undoing errors" and costing taxpayers money. He said coordinating building, septic and zoning information in one office would be more efficient.

Currently, Willauer said, costly building permits are sometimes issued by the zoning agent only to be overturned when they reach his office because of potential sewer problems.

He has requested better pay for essential employees, an additional construction inspector to do field inspections of building lots, and more employees to fill the vacant position of town engineer. He said $75,000 of the $100,000 permit fee for the fiscal year that begins July 1 would be paid by various permitted fees.

The council has been listening to budget requests from department heads all week.

Wednesday night, Police Chief Frank Trzaskos asked for three more officers, council Chairman Joan Lewis said. "The present situation is dangerous," she said. "Sometimes there is only one officer on duty."

Lewis said the town is also facing capital equipment costs of more than $100,000.

"The highway department has old trucks that must be replaced and the police department has asked for two new cruisers," she said. "I don't question any of the needs — it will be very difficult prioritizing."

Panel's vice chairman resigns to protest Galvin firing

By Judd Everthor
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — The vice chairman of the commission that ousted Chief Medical Examiner Catherine A. Galvin has resigned to express what he called "severe disagreement with the way the entire matter was handled."

Dr. Bernard Gondos, a pathology professor at the University of Connecticut, resigned from the Commission on Medical Investigation Thursday, the day after the commission voted to fire Galvin and replace her with her deputy, Dr. H. Wayne Carver II.

Also Thursday, nearly half the employees in the medical examiner's office said they supported the change.

Sixteen employees stood outside the medical examiner's office in Farmington as a spokesman read a brief statement expressing support for the commission and for Richard E. Carlin, an attorney who has made allegations against Galvin that led to her removal.

The group also pledged to cooperate with Carver, named to a six-month interim appointment while a search for a permanent replacement is conducted.

Gov. William A. O'Neill said Thursday he was satisfied with the firing of Galvin, who admitted allowing her dogs roam the autopsy room and who was said to be a poor administrator.

O'Neill said he would discuss the planned to question state Health Services Commissioner Douglas S. Lloyd soon about his handling of the case. Lloyd has said he heard last year that Galvin's dogs had been allowed to roam autopsy rooms.

"Anyone who's thinking at all, in my opinion, if you have any respect for the dead... the dogs did not belong in there. Period," O'Neill told reporters in his office.

O'Neill said: "As far as I'm concerned, it is done. The dogs should not have been in that operating room," O'Neill said. "I happen to be an animal lover and a dog lover. But there is respect for certain things, and certainly my love to respect for the dead."

O'Neill's office had been informed of the allegations Feb. 8. O'Neill asked Chief State's Attorney John J. Kelly to investigate. Kelly found no criminal violations and the inquiry into Galvin's conduct was turned over to the Commission on Medicolegal Investigations.

The morning after the allegations were aired on television, O'Neill called for Galvin's suspension during the commission's inquiry. She agreed to step aside, using accrued vacation time.

Sen. Richard B. Johnston, R-Wethersfield, said Falsoy checked into the center on Wednesday, the day after his confirmation hearing before Johnston's committee.

Johnston said he did not know if there would be any effect on Falsoy's confirmation for another five-year term, which is pending before the committee.

Committee vote kills used-car lemon law

HARTFORD (UPI) — A legislative committee has killed a proposed "lemon law" that would require auto dealers to provide warranties for certain used vehicles.

The General Law Committee, at its last meeting to act on the bills it will bring up in this year's legislative session, Thursday refused by a 13-8 vote to even take up the "used car lemon law."

agenda for the meeting. Unless the idea is offered as an amendment to another bill in the House or Senate, the issue is dead for the year.

In other legislative action Thursday, Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill asked the Republican chairmen of the Energy and Public Utilities Committee to at least take up three bills he has offered on nuclear power.

Baby's death linked to cult

FAIRFIELD — A New Jersey detective familiar with the occult is assisting an investigation into the slaying of a newborn baby which a Florida medical examiner says has "all the trappings" of the Afro-Caribbean Santeria cult.

From what I understand all the trappings were there," Dade County Deputy Medical Examiner Charles Wetli told United Press International Thursday. "It definitely sounds like the result of an Afro-Caribbean cult, most likely Santeria."

The day-old child was found a week ago today near a trash barrel at Molegrave Park in Fairfield. The full-term Caucasian boy had suffocated and then his face and head were brutally disfigured.

State hastens construction of prison facility

HARTFORD (AP) — The state Department of Administrative Services has approved the circumvention of standard state bidding procedure to hasten the construction of a sixth dormitory at the minimum-security prison in Enfield, officials say.

More than $1 million in construction work has been awarded without soliciting bids or taking cost estimates. Department officials said they were hurrying the project because overcrowding could cause a prison emergency.

The additional 100-bed dormitory at the unfinished prison is scheduled to be finished in mid-May, yet Deputy Correction Commissioner Leonard Barbieri said he does not expect prisoners to move into the dormitory until June.

Man beaten for unpaid loan

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — The friend of a Connecticut businessman says assailants beat him and pulled his teeth out when the businessman failed to repay the loan he attained for $100,000.

Julian Breton of Westfield testified Thursday he helped get Richard Belding, owner of the Perma Brite Corp., a $150,000 loan and was attacked outside his home in December when it was not repaid by the time the loan was due.

Oil price rise temporary

HARTFORD — The wholesale price of home-heating oil has increased by 10 percent in recent weeks, a state energy official said.

The increase, however, is expected to be temporary and does not necessarily mean higher retail prices, said Russell Kaplan, a planning analyst in the state's Office of Policy and Management.

Hispanic population grows

HARTFORD — Connecticut's Puerto Rican population now ranks seventh in the nation, with more than 80,000 people in the state of Puerto Rican descent, according to the Connecticut Census Data Center.

The center reported that in Hartford and Bridgeport rank seventh and eighth, respectively, among cities nationwide in the size their Puerto Rican populations. The two cities account for 53 percent of Connecticut's Puerto Rican population of 80,881.

Drug deal near school nets arrest

BRIDGEPORT (UPI) — Eight men and women face stiff penalties after federal indictments for dealing heroin and cocaine near a Norwalk elementary school, U.S. Attorney Stanley A. Twardy Jr. says.

The seven indictments unsealed Thursday charge seven Norwalk and South Norwalk residents and one Bridgeport man with distributing heroin and cocaine within 1,000 feet of the Columbus T.L.C. Magnet School, a public elementary school in Norwalk.

NEWINGTON — Republican Roger Eddy, using a combination of wry humor and traditional GOP philosophy, has formally launched his uphill fight to unseat Democratic Sen. Christopher Dodd.

Eddy officially announced his candidacy to challenge Dodd before a few dozen supporters Thursday afternoon at the Polish-American Club near the Newington farm where he lives.

Daniels jury back at work

NORWICH (UPI) — A Norwich Superior Court jury today enters its sixth day of deliberating whether Jerry Daniels will be first man sentenced to death in Connecticut since 1970.

Senate plan merits answer from president

The economic boom in recent months has buoyed investors' hopes and sent homeowners scurrying into banks to refinance their mortgages. The Producer Price Index last week had its best showing since the government began keeping such records, and the economy hasn't been so robust in decades.

But the hard part still remains, as do the hard facts. The federal deficit is a threat of monstrous proportions, and inaction could make the inevitable slowdown much worse than it is to be.

Political appeals notwithstanding, no amount of GNP growth can produce sufficient tax revenue to close the $12 billion deficit. And the nation should not have to rely on foreign investors to supply capital because the public sector competes with the private sector for funds.

Fortunately, the Senate Budget Committee has made an effort to grapple with this complex problem.

Following the bipartisan leadership of committee Chairman Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., and Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., the panel Thursday rejected the administration's unrealistic budget proposal for fiscal year 1987, offering in its place a document that would increase revenues, responsibly balance domestic and military spending and meet the intent of the Gramm-Rudman spending bill.

But White House officials from the president down remain adamantly opposed to any tax increases while supporting an 8.2 percent hike in defense spending. With the administration intent on balancing the budget by slashing social programs, it is a damaging stalemate in the offing unless a compromise is sought.

On Thursday, Domenici noted that the White House had been silent since the administration rejected the budget proposal earlier this month. "It appears to me that they almost acted as if they didn't care," he said.

The president must act soon to change that perception, and a reasonable response to the Budget Committee plan would be a good place to start.

Under the committee's proposal, some $295 billion would be allocated for the military — $25 billion less than Reagan wanted, but enough to keep the nation's defenses strong. Overall, the plan would reduce the current $182 billion deficit to $144 billion, as required by the Gramm-Rudman law.

In the area of taxes, the proposal adopts Reagan's recommendation to derive $6 billion in increased revenue from higher user fees for government services, stepped-up enforcement of Internal Revenue Service laws and a continuation of the 16-cent-a-pack cigarette tax. It calls for another $12.7 billion in unspecified revenues that Domenici said could come from almost anywhere — except an increase in individual tax rates.

Obviously, many tough decisions still lie ahead.

But the Budget Committee deserves praise for its understanding that the deficit can't be reduced by irresponsibly slashing domestic spending and stonewalling about tax increases. The entire Congress should make a similar commitment to resolving the issue with as little vote-grabbing and ideological nonsense as possible.

Despite the rhetorical appeal of the president's stand on the budget, sacrifices are coming. The key is that they must be crafted fairly.

The American people should recognize the fact that unpopular decisions have to be made and the economy's structural problems can't simply be wished away.

A bad case vs. a good bill

To the Editor:

I read with interest the editorial in the Herald on Wednesday March 12 entitled "A Good Case for a Bad Bill." I presume that the heading reflects the writer's honest opinion. He does not state why in his estimation it is a bad bill. He only calls the bill nonsense and bad, and lists the three faults that the Southern New England Telephone Company pointed out. I am sure the phone company is without bias. They only get paid for the calls. The first fault listed is that such legislation would be unenforceable. May I ask why? It seems to me that a violation would be very easy to prove. A tape of the call, or a witness who heard and saw the annoyance of the person who answered the phone, or who also heard on a second phone, could prove the violation easily enough.

Team played a good season

To the Editor:

In my long career as a teacher I have noted on many occasions that young people often show a great deal more maturity than their adult counterparts. The Manchester High School basketball team is a case in point.

After holding their own for three quarters against a Weaver High team that has been rated in the top ten all season long, a tired group of young men were overwhelmed by a swarm of fresh and eager Weaver reserves. The players knew they had given it their best shot and could hold their heads high. As a result, it was difficult to determine from the laughter and joking in the Manchester locker room that they had lost. It is my understanding that some Weaver players were brought in to splash water in the faces of the Manchester players. It was obvious he had prepared his team well. The only one angry at the outcome seems to be a sportswriter who may never have played anything more strenuous than tidily winds.

Students need school prayers

To the Editor:

American youth must be the best in the world, when one considers what it has suffered from various forces. The majority of young people attend to work, money, the laws and attend educational centers.

When the liberals had school prayers and Bible reading thrown out of the schools in 1962, the young people received more than a jolt. They were derailed from an American value system that found its basis on a 330-year old tradition of school prayers and Bible reading.

Giants' Taylor admits to 'chemical abuse' problem

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — All-Pro linebacker Lawrence Taylor, fresh from tackling his own problem, plans to become a spokesman in the fight against drugs.

The New York Giants player on Thursday admitted in a written statement that he has been undergoing treatment for "substance abuse."

"I do realize my responsibility to my family, my teammates, the NFL, and most importantly to the youth of America to portray the proper image," Taylor said in a statement released by the team. "I will make the most determined effort of my career to restore that image and to ensure everyone that I still retain those same original aspirations."

The disclosure by Taylor comes one month after reports that the 27-year-old five-time All-Pro had voluntarily entered a drug rehabilitation center. Neither Taylor, the Giants nor the National Football League commented on those reports.

Giants Coach Bill Parcells said Taylor would have his support, and he said he expects his troubled star to be a mid-May mite.

"We came here together," said Parcells, who joined the Giants as defensive coordinator coach in 1981, Taylor's rookie year. "We've had a good relationship."

Parcells admitted he has talked to Taylor by telephone "from time to time" since reports of his entering a treatment center, saying only that Taylor is "one of my players."

He said Taylor had asked him to have the Giants release the statement, but Parcells would say little else.

"It's his statement," he said. "I thought it was pretty conclusive."

Tom Power, a team spokesman, said the Giants would not have any other comment on what he called "a private matter."

Taylor did not indicate where or how long he has been undergoing treatment, saying only, "I have just completed the first phase in what I know will be a difficult and ongoing battle to overcome these problems."

Taylor joined the Giants in 1981 and made an immediate impact on the team and the NFL, with his outstanding play, a mix of great speed, quickness and outstanding strength.

Taylor began the statement by saying he had become the best linebacker in NFL history.

"Although I have seen, as my career progressed, that I possibly might be able to become the best," he said, "I also have seen my ability to inspire greatness in others when my efforts are channeled properly."

"In addition, I have come to understand the responsibility that goes along with being a public figure."

'International funds' masquerade as mutuals

Investors' Guide

William A. Doyle

QUESTION: Enclosed is a published list of five "top-ranking" international mutual funds showing returns of from 45.57 percent to 28.97 percent. I am not much of an investor and I have never heard of international funds. How can they pay such fantastically high interest?

ANSWER: They don't. The clipping you sent along lists mutual funds that invest only in foreign securities. Hence, the moniker "international funds." Mutual funds do not pay interest. They pay dividends. There is a difference. A mutual fund collects paid for those securities. The high numbers on that list aren't dividends and/or capital gains distributions. They are "total returns."

A mutual fund's total return is a measurement of the results of investing in the fund's shares over a period of time, assuming reinvestment of dividends and capital gains distributions.
We'll use the top performing fund in that list as an example. If you owned $1,000 worth of that fund's shares at the beginning of whatever period is used in the calculation and reinvested dividends and capital gains distributions to buy additional shares, you would have owned shares worth $1,458.70 at the end of the period.
The clipping doesn't show what period of time was involved. Most likely, it was for a recent 12-month span. The share values of most international mutual funds shot way up in 1985 and early this year. That was because the U.S. dollar fell in relationship to other currencies — making the values of foreign stocks and shares of mutual funds holding foreign stocks much higher in our dollars.

International mutual funds have been great investments during periods when the dollar declined against other currencies. But just the opposite has been true when the dollar advanced. There have been times when those international funds produced negative returns and investments in them lost value.
QUESTION: I have my individual retirement account in a family of mutual funds, which allows me to move my investment from one fund to another within the family by telephone. How often can I use this telephone switch method, without being penalized by the Internal Revenue Service?

ANSWER: As often as you like. While your IRA stays within the same mutual fund management group, that organization acts as trustee for your IRA. When you move your IRA investment around among funds in the same group, there's no change in trustee and absolutely no tax consequences.
If you make a change in IRA trustee, such as moving your IRA to a different fund group, a brokerage firm, bank, savings and loan association or insurance company, you might have IRS problems.
Even then, you can arrange a "trustee-to-trustee" transfer — in which you don't handle your IRA money — as frequently as you choose.

QUESTION: The headquarters of a mutual fund is in a city more than 1,000 miles from my home. What is the fastest way for me to sell my investment?

ANSWER: You cash in a mutual fund investment by redeeming your shares — turning them back to the fund. You receive the redemption price in effect at that time. That price might be higher or lower than the price you paid.
Redemption procedures can vary a bit from fund to fund and are spelled out in each fund's prospectus. If you've lost the prospectus, telephone the fund for instructions. The phone number is in the shareholder reports sent to you.

Raymark battle ends as slide goes on

By Peter S. Howes
The Associated Press

TRUMBULL — Raymark Corp. lost money for the fourth straight year but has solved two problems that have dogged the troubled maker of brake and clutch parts for cars, trucks and heavy machinery for nearly a year.
On Friday, the company reported its 1985 financial results, which show that its losses appear to be slowing. At the same time, it announced that it has agreed on a debt-restructuring program with lenders and settled a legal battle with its largest shareholder, Echlin Corp.
Raymark said it had a net loss of $18.2 million, or 66.35¢ per share, in 1985 on sales of $112.4 million. In 1984, the company lost $41.5 million on $129 million in sales. Only $3.4 million of that can be translated into continuing operations, however, as the company sold a substantial amount of assets, including its brake division, in 1985.
In the fourth quarter, the Trumbull-based company lost $3 million, or $1.85 per share, on $26.7 million in sales. The company compares with the company's loss from continuing operations of $5.2 million, or $1.83 per share, in the same period of 1984, when Raymark had higher revenues.

Raymark President Craig R. Smith attributed the improved performance to the "turnaround program" implemented after he succeeded in December as president in September. The program has included a 15 percent reduction in Raymark's white-collar workforce and substantial pay cuts for those who remained.
Meanwhile, Raymark said it had reached an agreement to end a dispute with Echlin that began in June 1985 when Echlin, the owner of a 26 percent stake in Raymark, tried to seat a challenge slate of directors at Raymark's meeting.
The meeting was recessed twice and still — only about three months before the 1986 meeting — hasn't been completed because of lawsuits filed by both parties. Raymark said the agreement, in which

Stock market keeps up current push
NEW YORK — The stock market edged upward today, extending the advance that has carried the Dow Jones industrial average past 1,800 for the first time ever.
The widely recognized average of 30 blue chips rose .48 to 1,804.72 in the first hour of trading.
Gainers took a 4-3 lead over losers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.
Gainers on the active list included Ford Motor, up 1/4 at $14; Merrill Lynch, up 1/4 at $42; and R.J. Reynolds Industries, up 1/4 at $44.
Smithkline Beckman dropped 1/4 to $8 1/4. The company warned against using some cold capsules and two of its other nonprescription capsule products after authorities found evidence of tampering with the capsules.

Dollar mostly lower in Europe
LONDON — The U.S. dollar opened slightly lower on most world money markets today. Gold rose.
In London the pound topped $1.50 for the second day, opening at $1.5010 compared with Thursday's close of $1.4880.
The U.S. currency opened at 2.2485 D-marks in Frankfurt, against 2.2499, and it traded at 1.8846 Swiss francs in Zurich, compared with 1.8852. Milan it slipped back to 1,529.625 lire compared with 1,531.25.
In Paris, the dollar opened at 6.9225 francs, compared with 6.9580.
But the dollar moved against the trend in Brussels, firming to 46.92 Belgian francs from 46.8750.
The exchange in Tokyo was closed for a national holiday.
The dollar fell to $1.9880 Canadian Thursday from $1.9904 Wednesday.

Some debt consequences aid economy

By John Cunniff
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — As debt goes, so goes the economy.
While it often seems impolitic to make that statement, and many economists avoid putting it that bluntly, a case can be made for the relationship between a vigorous demand for loans and a vigorous national product.
In other words, the deeper the debts the bigger the GNP.
It was no surprise to many economists, therefore, when the Federal Reserve Board reported that borrowing rose 19.2 percent in the fourth quarter of 1985, and that participation in the binge came from all categories of borrowers.
And no surprise either that simultaneously the economy seemed to regain some of its vigor after getting caught in an infection that brought it close to a no-growth performance in the late summer and early fall.

In spite of all the talk about cutting Uncle Sam's allowance, federal borrowing grew at 22.7 percent by $3.4 percent, non-financial businesses by 12.7 percent and households by 15.6 percent.
Combined, they brought the total debt outstanding as the year closed to $6.85 trillion, which is $314 billion more than the total of three months earlier, and $879 billion more than was on the books a year earlier.
None of this frightens economists terribly so long as there is income to go along with the debt, and no long as interest rates aren't rising to the skies and thus threatening borrowers with an impossible repayment situation.

It is like the consumer is close to his credit limit and preparing to cut back.
Corporate treasurers are seeking to extend the pay periods of their loans. And at the federal level, worried legislators are seeking to raise revenues and cut spending and borrowing. And, while home mortgage rates fall, lenders are cutting the amounts they will lend in relation to the borrower's income.
That is, signs are appearing that the debt level that has had a lot to do with the economy's strength may be approaching its peak. And that brings on an entirely different set of theoretical problems and questions.

Interest rates continue drop

The Associated Press

The stock market has maintained its record-setting momentum, with Wall Street's best-known indicator now at an unprecedented peak.
The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks jumped 16.29 on Thursday to 1,804.72, the first close ever above 1,800, topping the previous closing high of 1,792.74 reached last Friday.
Optimism about the outlook for corporate profits and the American economy has been sparked by declining interest rates and lower oil prices.
Meanwhile, a Commerce Department report Thursday shed

Oil chiefs open talks on slashing production

GENEVA (AP) — OPEC opened a new round of talks today with five independent oil-producing nations to negotiate production cuts that could help the cartel reverse its recent collapse of world oil prices.
The meeting, following five days of mostly fruitless deliberations, could prove a turning point in OPEC's desperate drive to unite behind a common strategy aimed at pushing up prices.
OPEC refused to say how much production the non-OPEC countries would be asked to cut, but sources on Thursday put the figure at about 500,000 barrels a day, or nearly 15 percent of their combined output.
A meeting, however, any of the five non-OPEC members — Mexico, Malaysia, Egypt, Oman and Angola — was ready to accept the OPEC proposal.
Kuwait and other key nations in the 13-member Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries have said they stand little chance of ending the price slide unless they win cooperation from outside their ranks.
Malaysian officials said they were not authorized by their government to make any formal deals at this meeting.

Keeping a date: As part of the reconstruction of the front wall of a warehouse on Apel Place in Manchester, Oscar Gibbs of Dunn Bros. Demolition Contractors of South Windsor removes the date block Friday afternoon. The work was initiated after a crack was found running through the front wall. The block was removed, but will be put back in place once the crack has been repaired.

Joint seen as cause of shuttle disaster

WASHINGTON - The external fuel tank has been cleared of blame in the Challenger disaster and the probe has narrowed to a faulty booster rocket joint, possibly opened by the stresses of strong high altitude winds, NASA engineers said Friday.

All focused on the joint between the lower two of the four segments that made up the shuttle's right hand solid-fueled booster.

"In the next week to 10 days we hope to get a significant amount of data relative to these prime scenarios," said Wayne Little, chief engineer at NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center, Huntsville, Ala.

During the hearing, NASA exerts ran a riveting movie for the commission showing in dramatic frames a few thousands of a second apart, the flame from a booster rocket leak triggering the explosion that cost seven lives.

"We've looked at the heating that would result from that type of flame coming out," Little said. "It would result from the 14.5-minute, computer-enhanced film showed flame from the booster shooting for about seven seconds toward the shuttle's external tank. That tank contains volatile liquid hydrogen and liquid oxygen fuel."

"There's more than sufficient heat during that time to burn a hole through the tank," he said. "You could burn a hole in that tank in a couple of seconds."

The films and still pictures shown the presidential commission, came from 14 cameras routinely trained at the shuttle from liftoff until it exits orbit. Little and other experts from Huntsville provided the commission a new, more detailed timeline of events from ignition to explosion, 9 miles high and 8 miles downrange from the launch pad.

"I think that's been real progress since the last session," said panel Chairman William Rogers at the conclusion of a five-hour public hearing at the State Department.

The commission's last public hearing was held two weeks ago at Cape Canaveral.

Among the possibilities still under consideration are cold weather effects on the O-rings, ice in the joint, damage to the seals during rocket assembly and defects in putty between the O-rings and the open interior of the rocket.

The commission, which is to report its findings to President Reagan by June 3, has asked NASA to complete its testing and report the results by April 18.

Little said extensive testing has ruled out the possibility that the 184-foot tank developed a leak before blastoff to set the stage for the rocket rupture.

The tank eventually did leak 64 seconds into the flight, but that was after the blowtorch-like jet from the booster rocket burned a hole in the tank, according to Dan Gregory, head of NASA's photo evaluation committee. The entire tank exploded 73 seconds after blastoff, destroying Challenger.

Harold Scofield, chief of control systems at Marshall, said the shuttle was buffeted by "a busy wind" as it climbed over the Atlantic, but he said the stresses were within the shuttle's design limits.

"If you had a weakened joint that sealed itself at liftoff, this could very well be the factor that opened that joint, is that right?" asked Air Force Maj. Gen. Donald Kutyna, a commission member.

"We're very much interested in that theory," Scofield replied. "We're working on it."

Little also said Marshall engineers were aware of problems with the O-rings before the Challenger accident since there was previous evidence of some O-ring damage during shuttle flights.

The circumstances of the shooting were not learned.

Witnesses said troops fired rifles and lobbed tear gas canisters at demonstrators in parts of the city, and public transportation was crippled by a strike by bus drivers protesting the shootings of five people this week.

"The armed forces has decided to reconstruct the national council of government, after the resignation of some of its members," Nampy told a news conference.

Nampy did not name those who resigned, but apparently he was referring to longtime Duvalier supporters.

Haitian reorganization spurs palace protests

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti (UPI) - President Henri Nampy Friday dissolved the six-man junta that has ruled Haiti since the overthrow of Jean-Claude Duvalier and formed a new ruling council amid a wave of anti-government protests.

About 5,000 people, some chanting "We don't want Nampy!" demonstrated outside the National Palace as Nampy announced the government shakeup. The change came six weeks after Duvalier fled the country his family ruled for 28 years and went to France.

Protests erupted in Port-au-Prince, the capital, and at least one person was shot and wounded in the city's center. The circumstances of the shootings were not learned.

Meal shows workers that health can be tasty

By Susan Vaughn Herald Reporter

Can a meal with no salt, fat or cholesterol and few calories be satisfying?

At least 40 town employees who ate a healthy lunch at Lincoln Center Friday seemed to answer in the affirmative.

"It was terrific," said Human Services Director Hanna Marcus.

"Everyone's going to have a very healthy glow after this," said Howard Deary, a secretary in the Public Works Department.

"The only problem is that I'm going to feel very guilty every time I eat, wondering if I'm eating the right things," said Linda Barabasy, a bookkeeper in the tax collector's office.
