Jobless rate down slightly after big gain

By Matt Yancey
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The nation's unemployment rate, on the heels of its largest monthly gain in nearly six years, slipped a notch to 7.2 percent last month as the economy created 227,000 jobs, the government reported today.

Joblessness dropped 0.1 percentage points from February's 7.3 percent as civilian employment rose to 168.8 million jobs in March, the Labor Department said.

The decline had been widely anticipated by economists, who had viewed the 0.6 percentage point jump in unemployment from January to February as an aberration due to unusually large layoffs in the oil and gas industry and to flooding in California.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics said a 170,000 job increase in agricultural employment from January to February was an aberration due to unusually large layoffs in the oil and gas industry and to flooding in California.

The government listed 8,419,000 people as officially unemployed last month, down 108,000 from February but still well ahead of the 7,831,000 in January.

Employment in the mining industry, which includes oil and gas workers, continued its dramatic drop, a result of falling petroleum prices. The department said 30,000 jobs were lost last month, cutting employment in the mining industry to 900,000, the lowest level since June 1978.

While the economy created 227,000 jobs last month, another 110,000 were accounted for by the increase in the civilian labor force of 119,000 to 117.2 million.

An alternative unemployment rate, incorporating the 1.7 million members of the Armed Services, stood at 7.1 percent, a 0.1 percentage point drop from February.

Services, trade, finance, insurance and real estate showed employment increases of 72,000, continuing a trend over the last 40 months. But 40,000 jobs were lost in durable goods manufacturing, bringing the loss all manufacturing jobs over the last year to 118,000.

"The only good-producing industry that had an increase in jobs over the last year was construction," said the report.

Commissioner of Labor Statistics, in testimony prepared for the Congressional Joint Economic Committee.

"Most economic signals in this industry continue to be positive, especially in residential construction, as the decline in mortgage interest rates has stimulated housing sales."

Construction employment, unadjusted, totaled 1.2 million in March, an increase of 19,500 for the month and 72,400 over March 1985. Overall, civilian employment stood at 168,788,000 last month, ahead of February's 168,561,000 but still below January's record 169,952,000.

Unemployment among whites for the month was 6.2 percent, less than half the 14.7 percent among blacks. For Hispanics, the March rate was 10.3 percent. Joblessness among all three groups fell from 6.4 percent, 14.8 percent and 12.3 percent, respectively.

Haydn visits MCC

Franz Joseph Haydn paid a visit to Manchester Community College Thursday night to celebrate the school's 25th anniversary. Haydn, who died in 1806, was one of the most influential composers of the 18th century. He is remembered for his symphonies, string quartets, and chamber music. The concert was held in the school's music hall and was attended by many students and faculty members.

Arab woman in Athens as plane landed

By James M. Dorsey
United Press International

ATHENS, Greece - An Arab woman suspected of planting a bomb aboard TWA flight 800 boarded a Beirut-bound flight at Athens airport less than two hours after the explosion ripped through the jetliner, police sources said.

Security forces in Italy, Greece, Egypt and Lebanon identified May Mansour as the suspect Thursday a day after a bomb ripped a gaping hole in the side of the TWA Boeing 727, en route to Athens from Rome. Four Americans died in the attack.

Greek police sources said Mansour had spent most of Wednesday in the transit lounge of Athens airport waiting for a Beirut-bound flight of Lebanon's national carrier, Middle East Airlines.

Mansour, described by Italian police as an Arab and explosives expert, arrived in Athens at 8:30 a.m. Wednesday from Cairo aboard the TWA jetliner on which she is accused of hiding explosives under seat 10F, the sources said.

The jetliner flew on to Rome and later took off again on a return flight to Athens and Cairo with 114 passengers aboard, most of them Americans who had started their flight in Rome.

O'Neill backers take all delegates

By Susan Vaughn
Herald Reporter

Gov. William O'Neill's supporters Thursday night elected a state entirely composed of their own delegates to represent Manchester at the Democratic state convention, causing angry backers of rival Toby Moffett to walk out of a party meeting in protest.

The Moffett supporters were furious about the ouster of four delegates they were promised following a poll of the Democratic Town Committee last month.

"They forced us to primary," town Moffett coordinator Robin Tracey said after she and 15 other supporters walked out of the packed town committee meeting in Lincoln Center. Earlier in the meeting, Tracey said she was "outraged" at all of this talk about fairness" by the O'Neill backers.

She claimed that supporters of the governor, including Democratic Town Chairman Theodore R. Cummings, had changed the committee's delegate rules in midstream.

The decision by the O'Neill contingent to push its slate through came after the town Moffett committee took out forms earlier this week to petition for a primary in an effort to win all 25 town delegates to the state convention.

The action left no question that there will be a May 20 primary between the Moffett and O'Neill slates in Manchester, Moffett backers said. They said it was unfair that their votes in the poll were not counted.

"I thought my vote counted. It always counted in the past," said Irene Fissette, a town committee member who was active in the party in the past and recently rejoined it.

During the meeting, the Moffett supporters tried several tactics to recall their delegates.

The first was a motion by Timothy Gaffney seeking another committee vote to reaffirm the earlier appointment. Gaffney said the first vote was technically invalid because of the dates specified for such a vote in the party's rules.

That motion triggered a long and heated discussion.

Downtown cafe to cater to athletes and fans

A sports bar is set to open next month in the Main Street space formerly occupied by Vitelli's restaurant, a partner in the Coach's Corner Cafe, tentatively scheduled to open its doors May 1, hopes to cater to fans of every sport.

"There's a lot of potential here," said Stephen McAdam, who will run the establishment along with Daniel Guasch, the owner of the building at Main and Pearl streets.

McAdam, a lifelong resident of Manchester, plans to add large television sets and eventually a satellite dish. Unlike Vitelli's, the cafe won't serve full-course meals. "It's more of a bar, with sandwiches, grinders, things like that," Richardson said.

Richardson is still waiting for the building to be approved for a liquor license, but considers the process "just a matter of formality."

Student film fights sexism in medicine

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Faded in several female medical students sit in class and pass around a picture of a nude male, much to the embarrassment of two men in the room. Suddenly, one woman decides to tack the centerfold on the blackboard.

"Hey, not bad," says the female professor when she comes in and sees the beefcake shot. "I think I'll take this home and make a slide for my next lecture."

She's out.

The skit is one of five in "Turning Around: Sexism in Medicine," a movie that shows sexism with a smile by depicting men in medical school as victims of chauvinism rather than women.

"Humor is the best way to reach people," said Dr. Maureen Longworth, who made the film when she was a medical student at the University of California-San Francisco.

"I think it's really ineffective to change anything as insidious as sexism by attacking people. By allowing people to laugh at themselves, it strikes home in a much more powerful way," she said.

Longworth, 35, is a second-year resident in family practice at San Francisco General Hospital.

Khadafy cries

Favorite book - "Uncle Tom's Cabin" by Harriet Beecher Stowe. Favorite music - "She must have her own mind. She should be a woman but feel herself a man's equal." Unlikely as it may seem, that's Moammar Khadafy talking about himself. A reporter from the West German magazine Bunte caught the Libyan leader in a reflective moment and even went so far as to ask if he slept nude. "In summer and winter I prefer light clothing which does not hinder sleep," the reporter said. Khadafy appeared embarrassed when I asked if he ever cried and answered, "It happens from time to time. But only when I am alone." Khadafy said he also writes short stories and poetry and emphasized that he did not like to have his picture taken. He then ended the interview by mounting an Arabian horse and suggesting he be photographed on it.

Pia to have a ball

Pia Zadora is about to become part-owner of the Portland Beavers baseball team even though she knows nothing about the game. "I want to get involved in baseball," Zadora said. "I plan to be at a few games this year." Zadora, whose singing career seems to be going over better than her acting, will buy 20 percent to 37.5 percent of the minor league team with her manager, Tino Barrie. "I love Tino and baseball is the love of his life," she said.

Tonight, chance of showers until midnight in most areas, then slow clearing across the north. Lows in the 30s. Saturday, mostly sunny north, morning clouds giving way to afternoon sunshine in the south. High in the lower 40s east coast, around 50 to 55 elsewhere.

Extended outlook

Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island: A chance of drizzle or showers Sunday and a chance of rain Monday. Fair weather Tuesday. High in the 50s and lows in the 40s.

Maine: Increasing clouds Sunday. Chance of rain south and chance of rain or snow north Monday and Tuesday. Lows in the 20s to lower 30s Sunday morning and in the 30s Monday and Tuesday mornings. High in the 40s to lower 50s Sunday and in the upper 30s to mid 40s Monday and Tuesday.

Massachusetts: Increasing clouds Sunday. Chance of rain south and chance of rain or snow north Monday and Tuesday. Lows in the 20s to lower 30s Sunday morning and in the 30s Monday and Tuesday mornings. High in the 40s to lower 50s Sunday and in the upper 30s to mid 40s Monday and Tuesday.

Vermont: Mostly cloudy today. A few showers south. High 50 to 55. Partly cloudy tonight and Saturday. Lows 25 to 35, high Saturday around 50.

Public works effort will leave town streets smoother

The level of several streets in Manchester will be lowered somewhat to leave improved drainage when they are resurfaced this year as part of an "ambitious" effort. Public Works Director George A. Kandra has reported to the Board of Directors that the existing surface will be cut down because the gutters are shallow and resurfacing the streets without first lowering the level would create drainage problems. Kandra said in a recent report to the board.

Complaint stirs confusion

The Manchester Ethics Commission Thursday night dismissed one of two conflict-of-interest complaints brought against a member of the town Charter Revision Commission, but delayed voting on the second. No vote was taken on the second complaint because members were confused as to which of two provisions in the Town Charter they should use in reaching a decision. Commission members said they will confer with the Board of Directors in the next two weeks to clear up the confusion. They plan to vote on the matter when they meet again April 17.

ADDRESSING ONE of the two matters brought up in his March 7 letter to the Ethics Commission, Mayor asked whether Irish's membership on the charter panel could be a conflict of interest because he "is a member of the political action committee called STEAL," STEAL, or "Stop Tampering with the Eighth's American Liberties," strongly opposes the effort by majority Democrats to force consolidation with the district, which provides fire protection and sewer service to most of northern Manchester and is often at odds with the town government. That was the complaint dropped Thursday. The second matter is the fact that the W.J. Irish

Commission options limited

The Manchester Ethics Commission's meeting Thursday night was its first in nearly two years, and members had to review the rules and regulations governing their activities. The commission is a seven-member advisory panel that is appointed by and reports directly to the Board of Directors. Three members are Republicans and one unaffiliated voter sits on the commission and meet only when a complaint is filed against a town official or town employee. When it meets, the commission has three options: It can dismiss a complaint, assign one of its members to investigate the matter

Water approaches anger receiver

The lawyer overseeing the estate that owns the L & M Water Co. in Manchester and the Elm Water Co. in Coventry is contacting area firms in an effort to sell the utilities, a development that has angered the court-appointed receiver who is operating the two systems. John Wittenzeller, who was chosen to run both systems in 1983, said Thursday the move puts a block in the path of his plans to purchase the companies. Wittenzeller, who owns the Aqua Pump Co. of Stafford, had hoped to buy the utilities after a dispute over back taxes owed by the estate of George Koppelman to the town of Coventry was settled last month. But Hartford attorney David Hadden, who was appointed by the West Hartford Probate Court in February 1985 to oversee the estate, said Wittenzeller can still purchase the companies. "I wouldn't call it a stumbling block," Hadden said. "I'm still very interested in doing business with him."

U.S./World In Brief

Waldheim invites file check

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, accused of war crimes during World War II, said today the allegations were false and invited the opening of sealed United Nations files on his past. "I have nothing to hide," Waldheim said in a broadcast interview on NBC's Today program. "I didn't even know of the existence of files about me in the United Nations. I didn't close them."

Waldheim, who is running for president of Austria, said from Linz, Austria, that "governments have the right to ask for the opening of those files."

Waldheim said he served in the German army during World War II but said accusations he was on the staff of a Nazi unit that massacred civilians were "defamation."

On March 25, the World Jewish Congress said Waldheim was a senior Nazi intelligence officer on the staff of a war criminal involved in interrogations and massacres of innocent civilians during World War II.

But days later a superior of Waldheim in the German army said Waldheim took no part in criminal activities while under his command late in World War II.

IRS head warns of crisis

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Internal Revenue Service may be avoiding the hassles its harried workers faced last year, Commissioner Roscoe Egger says, but could be heading for a financial crisis if Congress does not approve extra funds.

Egger told reporters Thursday the tax agency has worked the bugs out of its new computer system, but may be faced with a new "disaster" if it does not get $340 million to keep operating.

"There isn't any 'drop dead' day that I can come up with," Egger said. "But if we kept on spending at our current rate and did not get the $340 million, we would be out of business sometime in August."

If Congress does not appropriate the money to supplement the agency's budget, it would cause turmoil in the tax agency, which would be forced to furlough workers, cut back on operations and extend the time period for processing returns, he said.

To date, 53 million taxpayers have filed their returns, and the IRS has processed 40 million.

Reagan to meet with Dobrynin

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hoping to reverse the skid in U.S.-Soviet relations, President Reagan will try his hand at private diplomacy when he meets at the White House next week with former Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin.

The veteran envoy, promoted last month in a Kremlin shakeup to top Communist Party post, is returning here for farewell calls.

Dobrynin will be the first senior Soviet official to meet with Reagan since the "frostbite" summit meeting last November in Geneva with General Secretary Mikhail S. Gorbachev raised hopes for an improved superpower relationship.

In the more than four months since, however, negotiations to curb nuclear weapons ended last month in a Kremlin shakeup to top Communist Party post, is returning here for farewell calls.

Shuttle investigation winds down

By Michael J. Sniffen
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Having endorsed an appeal by astronauts for new safety watchdogs inside NASA, the presidential Challenger commission has much of the data it needs to wind down its public hearings.

"Much of the documentation and the reports from NASA are already in," a source close to the commission investigating the shuttle disaster said Thursday night.

Although the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's task forces have until April 18 to relay their information to the commission, one of the commission's four working groups already has 75 percent of its material and expects to report before this weekend, the source said.

The commission's charter from President Reagan calls for a final report by June 3, but panel members hope to send their report to the printer in mid-May.

"We all agree we want to start to wind the hearings down," said the source, who declined to be identified by name. "We've almost completed the subjects in which there is public interest."

Among the topics suggested by panelists for additional hearings, possibly the week after next, are: how NASA developed the booster rocket believed to have caused the Jan. 28 explosion; a report from independent experts on tests to pinpoint the cause; and possibly a look at the performance of contractors who prepare the space shuttle for flight.

At Thursday's hearing, the commission finally found some NASA employees — the nation's most experienced astronauts and two top managers — who agreed that shoddy internal communications lay behind the space agency's problems.

The presidential panelists had weathered weeks of quibbling from longtime NASA executives who disagreed with Chairman William P. Rogers' conclusion that NASA's decision-making was flawed.

But astronauts John Young, Robert Crippen, Henry Hartfield and Paul Weitz endorsed the panel's criticisms and its suggested remedy: an independent safety panel to oversee future flights and cut through layers of management.

The safety panel, suggested by Hartfield, was instantly endorsed by Rogers, who said, "All of us think there should be an independent safety panel of some kind."

One commissioner said an astro-naut should be on the safety panel. "The very biggest problem that must be solved before the space shuttle flies again is communications," said Young, the chief astronaut. "Unless we take very positive steps to open safety communications and to identify and fix, early on, safety problems, we're asking for another shuttle accident."

Arnold Aldrich, the shuttle program manager at the Johnson Space Center in Houston and a key official in deciding when to launch, said one communications breakdown figuring in the Challenger accident was that launch-eye concerns about the booster rocket's performance in cold weather were not passed to him.

Speakes made it clear possible suspects include Libyan leader Mouammar Khadafi.

Noting Khadafi's denial of any involvement, Speakes said, "In view of his past record, his denials by themselves mean nothing."

Questioned about the view attributed to a senior administration official that it was unlikely that Khadafi was the perpetrator, Speakes said, "We're not ruling anything out."

Speakes said Reagan, vacationing at his ranch, is being kept fully informed of developments in the investigation of the blast which killed four Americans.

Speakes said security and explosive experts from the Federal Aviation Administration and assisting authorities in Rome and Athens.

He said the FBI will help gather evidence that may be used in a criminal prosecution, adding that "any perpetrator of a terrorist act liable for prosecution under a variety of U.S. statutes which prohibit acts of violence against U.S. aircraft and passengers."

Speakes said the president and Mrs. Reagan expressed their condolences to members of the families of those killed and will be sending personal letters to them.

Asked if the attack would prompt travel advisories, Speakes said, "We do have travel advisories which alert Americans to countries in which an established pattern of violence or attacks against Americans is evident."

He sees a parallel between the U.S. civil rights movement and the anti-apartheid movement in that the level of protest increases with even partial victories.

U.S. offers help with bomb probe

By Leon Daniel

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — President Reagan, condemning the bombing of TWA Flight 840 as a "barbaric action of wanton international terrorism," has directed all appropriate government resources to assist in bringing to justice those responsible, a White House spokesman says.

Deputy Press Secretary Larry Speakes said in a news briefing Thursday the United States has not "ruled out any terrorist group, organization, movement or individual as a potential perpetrator."

Reagan "has directed that all agencies of the government join with the governments of Italy, Greece and Egypt to determine the facts in this incident," Speakes said.

Speakes made it clear possible suspects include Libyan leader Mouammar Khadafi.

Stratford family plans rites for victim of TWA bombing

By Peter S. Howes
The Associated Press

STRATFORD — A Stratford family is making funeral plans for 37-year-old Alberto Ospina, who the State Department says was one of four people killed in Wednesday's bomb explosion aboard a TWA jetliner over Greece.

Margoth Ospina received confirmation from the U.S. State Department Thursday that her husband died in the disaster. By Monday, the family began making funeral arrangements, but have not set a date.

Ospina was believed to have been sitting in a seat occupied earlier by an Arab terrorist whom law enforcement officials believe may have left the bomb.

Like the others, he was apparently sucked out of a hole blown in the fuselage of the Boeing 727.

The bodies of Ospina, who worked for nine years at Shelton-based Frigitorics of Connecticut, and three other Americans were found on the ground about 60 miles south of Athens.

American tourists, fearing terrorist attacks, are beginning to shun overseas travel in general and the Middle East in particular. Some are choosing trips to communist countries that are seldom targets of such attacks.

"I wouldn't go overseas — even if I could afford it," Neville Johnson of New York City said.

TWA PILOT RICHARD PETERSON "never had an experience like it"

At first, pilot didn't realize it was bomb

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Capt. Richard F. Petersen, the pilot who safely landed a TWA jetliner after a bomb blasted a hole in its fuselage and killed four passengers, said he "never had an experience like it in 30 years of flying."

Petersen told reporters he didn't at first realize a bomb had exploded Wednesday afternoon inside the Boeing 727 on a Rome-to-Athens flight.

"The whole cockpit filled with debris and flying objects, dirt and insulation material. I thought a window went out. I heard breaking glass," said the 54-year-old pilot from Sarasota, Fla.

He said the blast could have been devastating if the Boeing 727 had not already begun to descend from its cruising altitude of 29,000 feet.

"We were lucky. If the explosion had occurred at that altitude, the decompression could have blown everything apart," he said.

Petersen said he immediately brought the plane down to 11,000 feet and dropped the oxygen masks "to make it easier to breathe and calm people down."

Middleton declined to single out individual countries or airports.

Capt. Mike Clarke, chairman of the British Airline Pilots Association, said his group would consider a boycott of nations that either harbor terrorists or that are considered to have lax security.

He said, however, that before any boycott, there would have to be a "significant majority" vote in favor. Clarke emphasized that no ban would be declared if it was felt the success rate would be limited and prove to have a negative effect.

Bush starts 10-day trip to Mideast

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President George Bush was en route to Europe today on the first leg of a 10-day good-will mission to bolster U.S. credibility in the strategic Persian Gulf and Arabian Peninsula.

Amidst tight security prompted by the specter of terrorism, Bush and his wife, Barbara, flew to Rhein-Main, a NATO air base in West Germany for an overnight rest stop before embarking on a whirlwind tour of Saudi Arabia, Bahrain, Oman and North Yemen.

Air Force Two scheduled a refueling stop at Shannon, Ireland, before flying on to Rhein-Main, where Bush last year welcomed the American hostages from TWA Flight 840.

The vice president is on what administration officials characterized as a good-will mission — a diplomatic undertaking important not for its substantive outcome, but for its message to the world.

However, the trip is not without its sensitive points. "The net effect" of the price plunge on the American economy "will be positive."

Beyond that controversy, Bush found a more ominous element in his trip highlighted Wednesday by the bomb blast that killed four Americans aboard a TWA jetliner bound from Rome to Athens.

That apparent act of terrorism, following threats by Libyan leader Mouammar Khadafi after the military confrontation in the Gulf of Sidra, guaranteed security would be tighter than ever as Bush visited a region well acquainted with political violence.

One senior U.S. official told reporters to expect a "more obvious" presence by the central Service contingent assigned to Bush, as well as more open, provocative steps by the host countries.

Reputed mob leader jailed for 45 years

BOSTON (UPI) — Reputed mob boss Genaro J. Angulo, 67, has been sentenced to 45 years in prison and fined $120,000 for racketeering in a case described as the FBI's most significant crack-down on organized crime in New England.

Angulo, reputedly the No. 2 man in the New England mob and its boss in Boston, was convicted on federal racketeering charges with two of his brothers and an associate, who all received prison terms of 20 years or more Thursday.

A fourth Angulo brother, Michele, who was cleared of the racketeering charges, received a three-year sentence for gambling.

U.S. District Judge David S. Nelson handed down the sentences after calling the eight-month trial — the longest in state history — "the most serious case I have ever dealt with."

Nelson said he balanced pleas for leniency based on the defendants' age, health or lack of previous convictions against the "enormity of the crimes," said Anthony Cardinale, attorney for Genaro Angulo. "I am confident through appeal they will be vindicated."

The other defendants and their sentences are: Francesco Angulo, 65, of Boston, 25 years and a $60,000 fine; Donato Angulo, 62, of Medford, 20 years and a $40,000 fine; Samuel Granito, 78, of Revere, 20 years and a $55,000 fine; and Michele Angulo, 58, three years and a $5,000 fine.

Prosecutor Jeremiah O'Sullivan had requested stiffer penalties, but said he was satisfied with Nelson's rulings, saying the sentences "reflect the seriousness of the crimes."

Anti-apartheid demonstrators tumble to the ground as police move in to make arrests during a violent protest Thursday at the University of California at Berkeley. ## Apartheid is favorite target of renewed campus activism

By Christopher B. Doly
The Associated Press

BOSTON — After a decade of calm on the nation's college campuses, the coming of spring this year has brought a surge in student activism, with apartheid in South Africa a favorite target.

Activists say South Africa's system of racial segregation is a hot topic on campuses nationwide as the movement feeds on itself, protesters say victory is within reach and universities have direct ties to the controversy.

Also, said Harvard University student Damon Silvers, "Americans see an image of their darker self. They see in South Africa what bothers them about their own country. The issue of racism in a democracy is tremendously loaded for Americans."

In recent weeks, on campuses from Boston to Berkeley, students have marched, built mock shantytowns and taken other symbolic steps aimed at getting trustees to divest stocks in companies doing business in South Africa.

In the past week alone there was a takeover of the administration building at Wellesley College; an anti-apartheid hunger strike at Boston University, and a brawl at University of California-Berkeley between students and police.

A nationwide mobilization was scheduled for today, the 18th anniversary of the assassination of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.

Boston University political scientist Howard Zinn, who lived in the South and protested during the civil rights movement of the 1960s, said apartheid "seems a throw-back to the days of slavery."

He sees a parallel between the U.S. civil rights movement and the anti-apartheid movement in that the level of protest increases with even partial victories.

"I can tell you we are going to exert the maximum pressure we can to improve security," IFAPA official Terry Middleton said Thursday.

U.S. officials opened an investigation Thursday into the explosion that killed four Americans on a TWA jet en route from Rome to Athens Wednesday.

A pro-Libya Palestinian group has claimed responsibility for Wednesday's bombing.

The blast follows a recent wave of terrorist attacks on airlines and airports in the Mediterranean and Middle East.

Gunmen hijacked a TWA jet to Beirut last June after the plane, departed Athens, holding 31 American passengers hostage for 17 days and slaying a Navy diver.

An EgyptAir jetliner was hijacked in November after leaving Athens for Cairo and terrorists launched nearly simultaneous attacks on airports in Rome and Vienna in December.

Middleton said security will be the main item on the agenda of the federation's five-day meeting starting April 10 in London.

"There are a lot of proposals from many countries. They are aimed at strengthening our policies and strengthening and streamlining the action we will be able to take against airports we find to be delinquent in addressing security requirements," Middleton said.

The federation, which represents pilots from 60 nations, will hold its annual meeting in London next week.

Too much force will leave hatred

It was no surprise to hear Stephen T. Penny, who leads the majority Democrats on the Manchester Board of Directors, propose Tuesday night that the town renew its offer to fight fires in Buckland on a fee basis for the Eighth Utilities District. But it was somewhat disappointing since Penny's comments stand as just another display of useless posturing.

The contract proposal has been ignored before, and would be again if the town were to waste its time repeating it. What's too bad is that the Democratic majority can't come up with anything new to say, while the district itself is content to sit back and wall like an abused child facing one more trip to the woods.

As everyone is aware, Manchester is in the throes of yet another effort to force consolidation upon the district, a fiercely independent entity that has provided fire protection and sewer service to the northern part of town for almost a century. Thanks to the fact that officials on both sides of the matter are displaying the maturity level of counselors running a cold war at summer camp, it is certain that things will deteriorate further before they get any better.

Although there's little doubt that an eventual marriage of some sort between the town and district governments would benefit all of Manchester, the current effort is anything but constructive. The strategy being pursued by the majority will only make hard feelings harder and divide the populace to a greater extent than ever before.

When Penny said the town should once again offer to sell fire service to the district, his remarks carried a gloating air. They reflected his apparent satisfaction with the recent discovery that the district will have to pay about $100,000 more than anticipated if it goes ahead with plans to build a satellite fire station on Tolland Turnpike. Anyone who examines the firehouse controversy or others affecting town-district relations will discover that Penny by no means deserves all the blame for the way things are. There's plenty to go around, and the situation, as reflected in both fire and sewer matters, has achieved bothersome proportions. If the district builds its station, its volunteer firefighters will be a mere stone's throw away from the station housing the town fire department's Company 5. Both will end up under-utilized, and the god of stubbornness will be the sole victor.

As for sewer relations, they have finally gotten to the point at which they are hurting the average citizen. On the same night Penny offered his fire proposal, the Board of Directors heard a complaint from a future homeowner who will have to pay both governments for his sewer hookup.

The homeowner's dual bills stand with the prospect of the twin firehouses as symbols of the irresponsibility of the officials who have allowed things to get this far.

The town's decision to charge those who build homes in the district a hookup fee was made arbitrarily and without negotiations, a lack that will only hurt the ordinary citizen. The same can be said of the district's decision to build its new station. Unless something changes soon, the folly will go on and on.

If the commission now studying the Town Charter ends up favoring a change that would eliminate the district's power to stall consolidation, the Democrats may indeed discover that they have the clout to bring the curtain down on their longtime antagonist.

In doing so, they would end a government that often operates in a far from admirable fashion, circumventing the law while conducting end-runs around almost any administrative matter of substance. But they would also remove a laudable element from Manchester, leaving bitterness, and even hatred, in their wake.

The time has clearly arrived for elected officials in both the town and district governments to pause before proceeding with their plans and escalating their disputes any further. Only a negotiated settlement — one that offers incentives to both sides — will preserve the best elements of the district while ensuring that every Manchester resident is treated fairly.

White House plays the fool in Honduras

WASHINGTON — The United States is clearly not suited to the role of an imperial power along the lines of the Soviet Union or the old British Empire. When Moscow lays down the official line, there are no deviations from the satellite. U.S. state officials exercise their right to dissent as vociferously as if they were at a Democratic National Convention.

Last week's dust-up over the reported Nicaraguan invasion of Honduras was an embarrassing case in point. The initial reaction of Honduran leaders was that the invasion was mostly Reagan administration propaganda to win congressional support for the contra.

Only after President Reagan announced emergency aid to Honduras — a move that looked suspiciously like a $20 million inducement — did Honduran officials get their stories straight and agree with the White House version of events. Then they belied their newfound concern over Nicaraguan aggression by going off for their Easter vacation.

Open Forum

March 6, 1986, has to be the hallmark of honesty for the Eighth District of Manchester. On the day they made public what has been known by others for years — volunteer firefighting in the Eighth District is a farce, and self-aggrandizement of few is the main objective, whether public safety suffers or not.

It was reported from the public hearing of the Charter Revision Commission that "The volunteer firefighters in the Eighth District have voted to a man to dissolve their department if the district is consolidated with the rest of the town. District President Walter H. Joyner said."

For years they have professed the ethics of volunteer firefighters, a disgrace to the true volunteers of the country. As witnessed by the statement from their leader Mr. Joyner, their "volunteerism" is nothing but "PFOAM." Political Fears Of Adjoining Manchester. What they have said to the voters is: "Firefighting is only secondary in the Eighth District. Politics is first. If we don't like the way things are going politically we'll quit — to hell with your homes, to hell with your wives and to hell with your children."

It is taking actions that don't hurt the Sandinistas, but which hurt its allies a lot — for example, Honduras and Costa Rica. ## White House plays the fool in Honduras

WASHINGTON — The United States is clearly not suited to the role of an imperial power along the lines of the Soviet Union or the old British Empire. When Moscow lays down the official line, there are no deviations from the satellite. U.S. state officials exercise their right to dissent as vociferously as if they were at a Democratic National Convention.

Last week's dust-up over the reported Nicaraguan invasion of Honduras was an embarrassing case in point. The initial reaction of Honduran leaders was that the invasion was mostly Reagan administration propaganda to win congressional support for the contra.

Only after President Reagan announced emergency aid to Honduras — a move that looked suspiciously like a $20 million inducement — did Honduran officials get their stories straight and agree with the White House version of events. Then they belied their newfound concern over Nicaraguan aggression by going off for their Easter vacation.

Moffett falls short of delegates for primary bid

By Mark A. Dupuis
United Press International
HARTFORD — Democrat Toby Moffett today found himself short of the delegate votes needed to force Gov. William A. O'Neill into a statewide primary for the party's gubernatorial nomination.

Three days of Democratic town committee meetings and caucuses would to a close Thursday night with Moffett falling to get the 270 delegate vote needed to force a September primary with O'Neill.

O'Neill said he was also keeping to his earlier prediction that he would receive 90 percent of the delegate vote, but added he does consider the Democratic primary battle over.

A policeman provides cover for a woman caught on the street Thursday in the standoff with a gunman on Chicago's North Side. The gunman, behind on his rent, opened fire from his apartment, killing his landlord and a policeman who tried to help the dying man. The gunman then went to a building next door and took an elderly woman hostage.

Standoff continues in Chicago

CHICAGO (UPI) — A 300-pound gunman who killed his landlord and a policeman and then took an elderly woman hostage played a "waiting game" with police today, saying he would not consider surrendering until he watched the movie "Battle of the Bulge."

Police said John Pasch, 57, who was behind on his rent, opened fire from his apartment window Thursday, killing the landlord and a policeman who tried to help the dying man. Pasch then darted next door and took the woman hostage.

Officials pleaded with Pasch to surrender, but the gunman said he intended to watch the movie first. "He said he wants to see it (the film) and don't disturb him," Chicago Police Superintendent Fred Rice told reporters.

Police said it appeared Pasch had not injured his hostage, Jean Wiyatowski, 74. The woman's hair was tied unharmed out the front door of the building when Pasch invaded through the back.

"He hasn't hurt her at all. He's talking about self-destruction," said District Cmdr. Joseph DiLauro. "He said he won't harm this lady."

Moffett backers walk after O'Neill vote

heated discussion and eventually resulted in a show-of-hands vote that left O'Neill on top.

In what one town committee member called the liveliest meeting in his memory, Cummings and other committee members tried to get the Moffett backers to agree to release their four delegates in the event that Moffett forced a primary in Manchester, thus freeing up the slate for the O'Neill camp. Member Joseph Sweeney offered to adopt the full slate of O'Neill delegates with a provision that the Moffett people could have four delegates back if they didn't force a primary.

But the Moffett backers, led by Mayor Barbara Weinberg, were unwilling to let go of the four delegates and risk having none at the convention.

"I can't do that. I'm unwilling to do that," Weinberg told Cummings in response to his plea to release the delegates.

In response, Weinberg asked if it was fair of the O'Neill backers to take all of the delegates for their candidate "when that was not our intent."

"You can't disenfranchise 17 of your members even though you disagree with their stand," Weinberg told the group of more than 80 people in the hearing room.

Cummings continued to claim that if the Moffett backers did not agree to release the four delegates, it would result in three slates in the primary—a committee-endorsed slate, a Moffett slate and an O'Neill slate.

He and other town committee members said they wanted to avoid the three slates and instead have two clearly opposing slates—one for Moffett and the other for O'Neill.

The three-slate primary is unacceptable, said Bettye Kramer, chairwoman of District 11. "We would go with the 19-slate," she said, if the Moffett people would agree to withdraw their delegates.

Caps put Whale playoff hopes on hold

By United Press International

Victories by the Washington Capitals and Boston Bruins last night set up two showdowns: one to finish the regular season and one to open the playoffs.

The Bruins, 4-2 winners over the Toronto Maple Leafs, clinched an Adams Division playoff berth, and coupled with the Capitals' 4-2 victory over the Hartford Whalers, ensured a Boston-Montreal Canadiens' first-round confrontation.

The Capitals moved back into a tie for the Patrick Division lead with the Flyers, and will finish their regular season Sunday at Philadelphia.

"Wouldn't you want that at the beginning of the year — to go into the last game of the season with a chance to win the division?" Capitals coach Bryan Murray said.

The Bruins and Canadiens are deadlocked with 85 points in second place, each with two games remaining. Montreal maintains a slight edge for home ice advantage by virtue of more overall victories.

Hartford had been unbeaten in its previous eight games. The Whalers held a two-point lead over Buffalo in the race for the Adams Division's fourth and final playoff berth.

At Landover, Md., Lou Franceschetti of the Capitals is thriving on the thought of playing the hero in the playoffs.

Franceschetti's seventh goal of the season early in the third period broke a 2-2 deadlock Thursday night and led the Capitals to their victory.

"It's my time of the year," Franceschetti said. "The last couple of years I've lived on this stuff."

When asked if he called himself "Mr. April," Franceschetti responded: "I hope so, Mr. May," referring to the Stanley Cup Playoff #### finals scheduled next month.

His early third period goal, off a pass from Bob Carpenter, changed the momentum of the game. Hartford had shut down the Capitals in a scoreless second period, limiting them to four shots on goal, after each team had scored twice in the first period.

The victory enabled the Capitals, 56-22-6, to regain a share of the Patrick Division lead with the Philadelphia Flyers. The teams meet in the final game for both Sunday in Philadelphia, a game that will decide the division champion.

Hartford, 38-36-4, maintains a two-point lead over the Buffalo Sabres for the 30th and final playoff spot in the Adams Division.

The Whalers were unbeaten in eight straight games before coming to Washington.

"They didn't give us anything in the second period," Capitals coach Bryan Murray said. "I thought they played extremely well for the first time. I don't know why we got the early goal in the third period. Once we got the lead we were all over them."

Alan Haworth gave the Capitals a 1-0 lead at 5:02 of the first period on a pass from Craig Laughlin. But the Whalers' Kevin Dineen skated in from the right blue line and shot past Capitals' goalie Pete Pesters seconds later to knot the game at 1-1.

Dean Evason made the score 2-1 Hartford 1:35 later, and Haworth led Larry Murphy to set up his 21st goal of the year with 4:17 left in the period to tie the score.

"I think it was a tighter game than tonight than it was last week," said Hartford's Doug Jarvis of a 6-1 tie in Hartford.

Jordan says Bulls ducking the playoffs

By Joel Sherman United Press International

The Chicago Bulls, despite a victory, failed to appease Michael Jordan over his accusation that they are trying to avoid the playoffs.

Jordan scored 15 of Chicago's final 23 points Thursday night to help the Bulls pull out a 109-108 decision over the Indiana Pacers. However, Jordan did not play the final 31 seconds. Management has decreed he not play more than 14 minutes a half as he recovers from his broken foot.

So with 26 points in 28 minutes, the 6-foot-6 guard went to the bench where he was seated when John Paxson hit a 16-foot jumper with seven seconds left to give the Bulls a 109-108 lead.

"If I can play 28 minutes, I think I can play 30 seconds," Jordan said. "I was on a roll at that time. I didn't want to come out. I said, 'Come on (Coach) Stan (Albeke). Thirty seconds can't hurt.' But he had to stick to his guns."

On Wednesday, Jordan, angry over lack of playing time, said Bulls management was trying to stay out of the playoffs in order to win a lottery spot in the June draft. Jordan accused owner Jerry Reinsdorf and vice president of operations Jerry Krause of keeping him out of games so the Bulls could lose, miss the playoffs, and attain one of seven spots in the lottery for the top pick in the draft.

The victory Thursday moved the Bulls within 1 1/2 games of Cleveland and the Eastern Conference's final playoff berth.

"He (Jordan) doesn't have much choice," Albeke said of Jordan's playing time. "The rules are written. He understands them. He asked me to play, but had to abide by the rules."

Krause said of Jordan's charges: "My response is we are not trying to get into the lottery. We have done everything we can to get into the playoffs."

The Pacers moved closer to a lottery pick. They stayed 39 games behind Cleveland with five games left.

Eight of Jordan's points came in a stretch of 1:35 after the Pacers built their largest lead, 94-84, with 9:30 remaining. Jordan's outburst brought Chicago within 96-92.

The Bulls tied the Pacers 102-102 with 3:12 remaining on a Jordan basket. The Bulls then took their biggest lead, 106-102, on a basket by Gene Banks with 1:47 left.

Paxson then hit his winning shot. Elsewhere, Washington ripped

Bullets 120, Nets 108

At East Rutherford, N.J., Gus Williams scored 33 points and Cliff Robinson contributed 30 to help the Bullets move within a half-game of New Jersey for sixth place in the Eastern Conference. Both teams already have qualified for the playoffs, but a sixth-place finish would be favorable. Philadelphia, heavily hit by injuries, will likely be the first-round playoff opponent for the sixth-place team while the seventh-place club will probably face Milwaukee.

Mavs 115, Nuggets 114

At Dallas, a steal by Derek Harper initiated a 3-point play by Rolando Blackman with four seconds left that lifted the Mavericks within 1 1/2 games of second-place Denver in the Midwest Division.

Bucks 114, Cavaliers 93

At Milwaukee, Charles Davis scored 21 points and Alan Lister added 20 to put Milwaukee. Roy Hinson had 21 points for Cleveland.

Rockets 136, Spurs 110

At San Antonio, Texas, Akeem Olatunji scored 25 points, and Allen Leavell and Lewis Lloyd both hit for 20 to carry Houston. San Antonio suffered its 20th loss in the last 23 games.

Lakers 135, Kings 105

At Inglewood, Calif., Byron Scott led a balanced Lakers attack with 24 points to power Los Angeles. The victory was the 12th straight at home for Los Angeles.

NBA marks don't faze the Celtics

BOSTON (UPI) — As the Boston Celtics complete one of the finest regular seasons in NBA history, they are setting new records but couldn't care less.

With their 122-106 triumph Wednesday night over the Detroit Pistons, Boston set a new league single-season record with its 28th consecutive home victory.

"Who cares?" said Celtics coach K.C. Jones. "Twenty years from now, nobody will care about this record about this regular season record."

The Celtics host the New York Knicks tonight and with their 38th home victory can break the record for total home wins in a regular season, currently held by four teams.

The 1976-77 and 1978-80 Lakers and the 1977-78 and 1981-82 Philadelphia 76ers have all posted 37-4 marks since the NBA expanded to an 82-game regular season.

If the Celtics win their remaining three home games — they also play Chicago and New Jersey — they will set a new mark for highest home winning percentage, exceeding the .971 mark set by the 33-1 Rochester Royals in 1949-50.

Baseball fanatic was left with a scar in his heart

When he was a kid a couple years ago, the phrase "national pastime" was secretly amusing. To him, the game of baseball was no mere pastime. It was all the time.

If he wasn't playing, watching or listening to the game, he was talking, reading or dreaming. Before long, even the word "game" became a loose term — it was way more than just a game.

Baseball and him had a personal thing going. He got his education from baseball cards. Someone bought him his first pack in '69, when he was nine years old. Each card had the ballplayer's mug on one side and stats on the back. The fledgling fan was hooked.

1969 was the year of the pitcher, as Denny McLain and Bob Gibson were Cy Youngs and MVPs, and Mickey Lolich won three games to lift the Tigers over the Cardinals in a seven-game World Series.

When Jim Northrup belted a grand slam in the Fall Classic, the buff thought it was the greatest single sports feat imaginable.

He acquired virtually every card during the '68 and '69 seasons, spending dollars and hours on the collection. Back then, the local newspapers ran a separate story, complete, with buzzword, on each Major League game. There was no copout "roundup or "agate page." Those were the days.

Bob Papetti Herald Sports Writer

He'd study these sports sections and arrange the cards, team by team, and then by starting lineup, batter order and pitching staff.

In the sandlot pickup games, when every kid either Yax or Bobby Murcer, when was always Mike Andrews, just to be different.

A power hitting, mediocre-fielding second baseman for the Boston, Andrews later gained infamy as a member of the Oakland A's in the '73 World Series. After Andrews committed a pair of errors that led to a loss, controversial owner Charlie Finley tried to kick him out of the team.

Before he ever played his first Little League game, his father was calling him a walking baseball encyclopedia. He knew every player on every team, and did for years.

By the time he got to high school, people would regularly come to him to settle arguments on trivia or statistics. One of the highlights of his adolescence came when a skeptic challenged him to name the fifth-string outfielder for the 1974 San Diego Padres.

They called him Mr. Baseball after that, hardly an original moniker, but it felt pretty good. Especially the morning after Game Six of the '75 Series, when everyone wanted to share their excitement with the No. 1 Red Sox roster in school and he ate up the attention like a proud father.

In '76, four friends went in on season tickets for all Sunday games at Fenway. Included in the package was Opening Day, and they all skipped school and drove up to Boston on a raw, unseasonably cold April morning. Upon arrival, they discovered that the game was "chilled out," so they ate maniocotti at Gemelli's, the restaurant with the Red Sox hat awning over the door (smart man, that Gemelli), and went home.

They cut classes again the next day and went back and watched the game.

His love affair with baseball was permanently wounded in the autumn of 1978, in the pennant playoff game between the Red Sox and those despicable Yankees.

Bucky Dent's historical homer was the turning point in New York's 5-4 win, but one zealot's most bitter and emotional memories — to this day, in any sporting event — are from the fateful bottom of the ninth inning.

A frantic fanatic stood in front of the T.V. set, using a tennis racket for a bat and mimicking each Red Sox batter's stance. He concentrated with all his telepathic might, trying to send good vibes to Beantown, as if to will each hitter on base.

He and Rick Burleson worked the Goosie for a one-out walk. And then he and Jerry Remy smacked a line drive single to right. Erratic rightfielder Lou Piniella pulled his head up, but somehow managed to make a short-hop stop.

Had Piniella misplayed the ball, Burleson would have advanced to third and scored the tying run on Rice's fly out. Instead, the Roster died — along with the hopes of New England — on third base, as Goosage popped up Yax to end it.

Things were never the same for the baseball nut. They cut classes again the next day and went back and watched the game.

A lucky stab by Piniella had left a scar in his heart.

Women's soccer will replace field hockey at Bridgeport. The university also announced it is accepting applications for the position of head coach.

Soccer Camp accepting applicants

The Manchester Soccer Camp for boys and girls from 6 to 17 years old is accepting registration for the camp which will be held from July 7 to 11 and July 14 to 18 at Martin School.

The sessions will be held daily from 9 a.m. to 3:15 p.m.

The full-day program costs $95 a week. This includes instruction, supervision and a free camp T-shirt. A half-day program for children 6 to 8 years of age will cost $55 a week. Special discounts are available to families which send more than one child.

Registrations are due June 1.

Camp Director, Blaz Stimac, a former pro player of the Cleveland Force and Pennsylvania Stoners, is head coach at Hilling Junior High School. Among those who will assist him are Manchester High School boys and girls' coaches Bill McCarthy and Joe Kravitz, Rich Brands, former pro goalkeeper with the Cleveland Force and Pennsylvania Stoners, and Greg Denies, former head coach of Manchester Community College. For more information, call Sal Alturat at 6 p.m. at 646-3329.

LaPorte, Taylor boxing winners

NEW YORK — Juan LaPorte scored a unanimous 10-round decision over Vinnie Costello Thursday night in a super featherweight 10-round match.

A crowd of 2,285 at Madison Square Garden, saw LaPorte, 131 pounds of New York, improve his record to 25-6. He finished with a flurry in the 10th, pounding away at Costello's right eye, which he had cut above and below in the seventh round.

Costello, 111 of New Gardens, N.Y., absorbed his second defeat against 18 victories and a tie.

In preliminary fights, 1984 Olympic gold medalist Meldrick Taylor from Philadelphia scored a sixth-round technical knockout of Jose Rivera from Colombia, now operating out of Miami. Referee Joe Santarpia stopped the 10-round lightweight bout at 2:07 of the sixth.

Taylor, 136½, improved to 11-0 with seven KOs. Rivera, 136, fell to 10-2-2.

Top-seeded Lloyd an easy winner

MARCO ISLAND, Fla. — Top-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd, moving her shots around with expert flair, defeated Kathy Rinaldi, 6-1, 6-3, Thursday in the quarterfinals of the $150,000 Tournament of Champions.

No. 2 seed Claudia Kohde-Kilsch of West Germany advanced with a 6-3, 6-2 victory over Gabriela Sabatini.

The 31-year-old Evert Lloyd entertained the audience with an arsenal of shots against her 19-year-old foe. She kept Rinaldi on the run with a combination of ground strokes, drop shots at the net and lobs that set up her passing shots.

Penguins won't fight for switch

PITTSBURGH — The vice president of the Pittsburgh Penguins said the team has decided to give up its fight to switch from the NHL's Patrick to Norris Division.

Paul Marzha made the announcement Thursday after the results of an annual fan survey were disclosed.

Pittsburgh is in fifth place in the Patrick Division and if that holds, the Penguins would miss the playoffs for the fourth straight year. With the same number of points in the Norris, the Penguins would already have clinched a playoff berth.

"Our fans are saying basically that we're a Patrick Division team, and by the initial survey they're telling us they want us to remain in the Patrick," Marzha said. "And this is how we've always operated. What the fans tell us to do, we try to do."

Blatnick says cancer has returned

ALBANY, N.Y. — Jeff Blatnick, the 1984 Olympic gold medal winner in Greco-Roman wrestling, says he has cancer again and has been undergoing chemotherapy treatment.

Blatnick called a news conference for today to discuss his condition. However, in a television interview Thursday, Blatnick said he believed he could beat the disease again, "but there are no guarantees."

Pats' Hannah talking of retirement

FOXBORO, Mass. — New England Patriots All-Pro defensive guard John Hannah has reportedly told friends and teammates he is considering retiring after 13 seasons. The Boston Globe reported today.

Hannah, 34, recently underwent surgery to repair torn rotator cuffs in both his shoulders and reportedly told teammates and friends he had played his last game, the report said.

"John is really down right now because he is coming back slower than he thought after his surgery," the Globe reported one unidentified friend as saying.

Hannah could not be reached for comment.

Pernfors continues net success

ATLANTA (UPI) — Mikael Pernfors, suffering from a cold and an aching body, overcame his ailments Thursday to advance to the quarterfinals at the $279,000 WCT-Atlanta Championships.

Pernfors, who upset his top-seeded Swedish countryman Stefan Edberg in the first round, disposed of Andrei Chesnokov of the Soviet Union in a tightly contested baseline battle. He meets Brian Teacher today in the quarterfinals.

Pernfors, a two-time NCAA champion while playing for the University of Georgia, beat Chesnokov 7-5, 7-6 (7-4), in 1 hour and 38 minutes. The 23-year-old Swede said he was pleased with his play despite his attitude toward the match.

"I was in a bad mood coming on the court because I've got a cold and I'm sore," he said. "I had a couple of lapses where I lost my concentration, but I got it back. I made some loose errors, but I didn't do too badly."

Pernfors won the match on his third match point when Chesnokov volleyed his down-the-line passing shot into the net. The 29-year-old Russian had saved two match points with an overhead smash and when the umpire overruled a linesman and called Pernfors' forehand long.

Mikael Pernfors of Sweden follows through on backhand return during his match with Andrei Chesnokov Thursday night in WCT event in Atlanta. Pernfors won in straight sets, 7-5, 7-6.

Georgia athletes took useless courses

ATLANTA (UPI) — The University of Georgia athletic department placed students in remedial courses designed to maintain their eligibility rather than provide them a college education, according to a report released Thursday.

The report, critical of the school's remedial studies program which included many athletes, was conducted by University System auditors. They found the program was abused in several instances and many athletes automatically gained admittance "in clear violation" and "regardless of the results of the program."

University President Fred Davison, in a 157-page response accompanying the audit, said auditors failed to consider hundreds of students helped by the program and that many of the findings were incorrect.

Davison said auditors "focused upon real and alleged shortcomings" in the remedial studies department, but failed to consider the accomplishments of the program.

The admission, through athletic and administrative influence, of many academically deficient students was a clear violation of the application of admissions standards at the institution," said the report.

The report said a special laboratory established with a grant from the athletic department "was subsequently used as a route for an athlete to bypass the established academic standards of the approved developmental studies."

The audit has been the subject of controversy since a former professor won a $2.5 million lawsuit in February claiming that course work in the program were not given the tests.

NCAA swim championships highlighted by Biondi mark

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Matt Biondi added an American record in the 50-yard freestyle to his portfolio, yet hesitates to say he is better than great swimmers of the past.

"You look at the times and you can say I was faster than them, but you have to think about what they were dealing with," the University of California junior said. "In some respect I don't even think I compare with them. They had a little to work with compared to me. They didn't have biokinetic benches, diet and nutrition and all of the other things we have today. They just got up and swam."

Biondi, a 1984 Olympian, won the 50-yard freestyle Thursday night, highlighting the opening session of the 63rd annual NCAA Swimming and Diving Championships at Indiana University Natatorium. Biondi also holds national marks at 100 and 200 yards.

Biondi's winning time in the 50 was two-hundredths of a second over the mark set at last year's NCAA meet by U.S. Olympian Matt Biondi. Jager, this year's runner-up in 19:35.

"I felt whoever would win the race would set an American record," said Biondi, who was upset by Jager last year in the 50 freestyle after setting U.S. records

Cherry Bowl shortchanges Maryland and Syracuse

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (UPI) — Maryland and Syracuse each will be paid $700,000 less than they were promised for playing in last year's second annual Cherry Bowl in Pontiac, Mich., officials said Thursday.

The schools, lured to the bowl by the assurance of a $1.2 million payment, will instead receive about $499,312 from the financially-strapped Cherry Bowl committee, members of the bowl's board of directors said.

Maryland defeated Syracuse 35-18 in the Dec. 21 game. The $1.2 million payments would have been the highest paid by any of the so-called minor 1985 bowls.

The Cherry Bowl committee also missed the April 1 deadline for delivering the money to the two universities, neither of which have seen any money, a published report said Thursday.

Maryland Athletic Director Dick Dull said he had discussed the payments with bowl officials during the past two weeks.

NY's Radio City says bye, bye to Snow White

By Esther Pesall
United Press International

NEW YORK — Radio City Music Hall has turned an annual profit for the first time in more than three decades by replacing "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" with shock-rock groups such as "Iron Maiden" and "Twisted Sister" on the Great Stage.

The Rockettes were once the raucous entertainment at the famed Art Deco theater, with its 60-foot high grand foyer, 2-ton chandeliers and marble walls. Now it is more a mecca for "Madonna-Wanna-Bes" and "Grateful Dead-Heads."

To Richard Evans, the president and chief executive officer of the company created to save the theater, Radio City Music Hall Productions, and the architect of this transformation, it's simply a matter of economics.

The 54-year-old music hall, for all its glory, was losing millions of dollars a year and came within a hair's breadth of being torn down in 1976 by its owner, the Rockefeller Group.

The 6,000-seat theater, with one of the largest indoor stages in the world, was saved by a public outcry that led to declaring the interior of the building a landmark.

BUT THERE WAS still the question of how to make money. "We had to diversify in order to fill this building up," Evans, 41, says. "We knew that if we were going to keep the Music Hall open, we needed to appeal to a much wider range of audiences. For

"We had to diversify in order to fill this building up," Evans, 41, says. "We knew that if we were going to keep the music hall open, we needed to appeal to a much wider range of audiences. For years you literally had to be Snow White to get on the stage."

Ironically, movies like Snow White seemed to push Radio City Music Hall into its precipitous decline in 1966 when suburban theaters, mass distribution of movies and a desire for something more daring than "grated fare" lured away its traditional audience.

The theater depended on first-run, family-oriented films to keep it going and they became both unavailable and unpopular. The music hall's attendance dropped from a high of 5 million in 1967 to 2 million just 10 years later.

"The G-rating became a kiss of death," Evans says. And what was ONE of the most critical decisions Evans made in his new job was to shove the theater into the 1980s.

"We had to send a strong signal to the industry that we were serious about being in the concert business," said Evans. "We needed to change our image."

And so they did, turning Radio City Music Hall into a "mini-entertainment conglomerate," as

Count Basie's spirit lives on in jazz world

By Ken Franckling
United Press International

BOSTON — When Bill Basie awoke to the music of Walter Page's Blue Devils one hot morning in 1927 in Tulsa, Okla., the sound filtering through his hotel window was one that would have a profound impact on the future of American music.

There was a team spirit, and a bluesy, infectious swing to it, a musical blend that Basie said, "just hearing it made me want to play."

The man who became known as the Count reshaped that Blue Devils sound with his big band over the next five decades in a way that made him one of the great men in American music.

Basie died in April 1984, but his spirit lives on through music, recordings, and his band, which heeded his instructions to maintain that swinging standard.

THE BASIE SOUND came from a pulsing four-man rhythm section, and hard-driving brass and reeds — 16 men woven together by the Count's spare and precise piano touch. It epitomized swing music, and as it evolved, the sound and the acceptance of the band helped break down barriers for other black performers.

The band was an incubator for arrangers like Benny Carter and Quincy Jones, for scores of instrumental soloists, and singers like Joe Williams. His Basie hits included "One O'Clock Jump," "Jumpin' at the Woodside," "Swingin' the Blues," "Blue and Sentimental" and "April in Paris."

The long-awaited publication of Basie's autobiography, "Good Morning Blues," as told to Albert Murray (Random House, $19.95), is getting much attention these days. And rightly so, because Basie's running account of his career is the story of the evolution of jazz in America.

The "Kid from Red Bank," N.J., formed his first band around 1935 with the breakup of the Bennie Moten Band after its leader's death. Contrary to the myth, Basie did not take over the Moten group per se. He formed a new band whose nucleus included key members of the old Blue Devils — bassist Walter "Big Boy" Page, saxophonist Lester Young, trumpeter Oran "Hot Lips" Page and vocalist Jimmy Rushing.

BASIE MAY BE best remembered today for his collaborations with Billie Holiday, Ella Fitzgerald and Frank Sinatra, and for the band battles with Duke Ellington. But Jazz musician Art Famer belts out a song at the El Morocco in Worcester, Mass. Like many in the world of jazz, he admits that his style was heavily influenced by Count Basie, who died in 1984. A biography about Basie was recently published.

Dan Morganstern, director of the Institute for Jazz Studies at Rutgers University, says Basie's legacy is that he "was one of the great masters at setting the right tempo."

That pulse was powered in those early years by Basie on piano, Walter Page on bass, drummer Jo Jones, and guitarist Freddie Green, a steady timekeeper who joined the band in New York in 1937.

Bass player Eddie Jones, who joined the band in 1954 and stayed a decade, is still awed by how Basie's sound changed over the years. For example, in the late '40s, pop phrases — which puzzled many mainstream jazzmen — were worked into the repertoire.

"It was some of the genius of Basie that he was able to recognize the times and change with the times," Jones told a recent Boston Globe Jazz and Heritage Festival symposium.

"It was a good band," Jones said. "We loved so much, we'd often come in an hour early just to play. We'd be scheduled for four hours — and Basie was a slave driver. We'd be exhausted afterward, but we made some wonderful music."

TENOR SAXOPHONIST Billy Mitchell recalled that Basie had a special introduction for each piece. "He never had to call tunes," Mitchell said. "He'd play the opening and the band was there."

Mitchell suggests the biggest mistake a Basie buff can make is in trying to compare the vintage bands with the later editions.

"It's like comparing sauerkraut and oatmeal," he said. "You don't compare a '30 band with a '47 band, or the '47 band with the '52 band. They were all different bands made up of different individuals who did the Basie thing."

Author Murray spent six years collaborating with Basie, talking with him, recording his memories and spending countless hours on the road with Basie and the band.

"I found him to be very much like certain athletes we are, through thoroughly idiomatic. They'd work things out in their minds and then go out there and run over everybody. Basie was like that," Murray said. "He didn't have a piano at home. And he never practiced. With him, music was a matter of performing."

TWO YEARS AFTER Basie's death at age 79, his band remains on the road under the leadership of trumpeter Thad Jones.

'An orchestra builder' Springfield maestro to audition

By Nancy Pappas
Herald Reporter

It's time once again for music lovers to pick up their pencils and perk up their ears. Robert Gutter, a professional symphony conductor who hopes to take over the Manchester Symphony Orchestra and Chorale, will be in town for his audition concert this weekend. He is the third in a series of musicians auditioning to lead the orchestra.

In 1970, when Gutter stepped onto the conductor's podium of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra, the group's annual budget was $150,000 — out of which it attempted to pay salaries to professional musicians. Few outside of the city of Springfield had heard of the group.

Sixteen years later, Gutter says he is ready for new challenges. As he prepares to step down from that podium — to serve only as conductor of merit for the coming years — Springfield's annual budget is just over $1.5 million. The group has won both critical and popular acclaim for innovative programs. In the past year, for example, it has presented the Anthony Davis opera, "The Life and Times of Malcolm X," and a trip to Washington, D.C. to perform the American premiere of

"For an amateur orchestra, it's far and away better than what's available in the rest of the region. I have been extremely pleased."

George Frederic Handel's "Roman Vespers." There is an annual summer concert series in Stanley Park, a summer residency at the Berkshire Choral Festival, and last year, a European tour with the Young People's Symphony.

IF HE'S NAMED permanent conductor, does Gutter have similar grandiose plans for making changes in the Manchester Symphony?

Essentially, yes. I am an orchestra builder," said Gutter (pronounced Gooter), in a telephone interview from his home in Hadley, Mass., this week. "I know how to train an orchestra. I guess I push a group up the incline. Once they're there, then another kind of conductor can take over."

He compared his style to that of a manager hired by a baseball team that's doing poorly. "There's one kind of manager who will bring a team from last place to first place," Gutter said. "It takes skill development, but it also takes pep talks. The kind of person who will get a group to believe in itself."

In all probability, Gutter said, he would not be permitted to increase the frequency of orchestral rehearsals. "After all, these people are all volunteering their time," he pointed out.

On the other hand, he would try to make at least one big change as soon as he was offered the job: He would seek another hall for both concerts and rehearsals. "I think it's clear that they really need a better facility."

"When you're playing there (in the Love Program Center) you're kind of playing in a motel room," he said. "It's a deadly. The audience doesn't get its money's worth when it listens to a concert there."

Worse than the audience reaction, though, is the sense of frustration which the musicians feel. "The clarinet can't hear the French horns. The French horns can't hear the clarinets. It's ridiculous," he said. "They build up an inferiority complex when it's not justified. There's really a lot more coming out of these musicians than anyone can hear."

Robert Gutter is the conductor of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra. He'll audition with the Manchester Symphony Orchestra on Saturday at Manchester Community College's Lowe Program Center.

Bolton vote produces even split between Moffett, O'Neill

By George Lovvo
Herald Reporter

BOLTON — In a reflection of an earlier town committee vote on whether to endorse Gov. William A. O'Neill or challenger Toby Moffett for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, the two delegates Bolton will send to the state convention this summer were split between the two candidates at a party caucus Thursday.

Town Chairman Henry "Hank" Kelsey, an O'Neill supporter, and Aloysius J. Ahearn, the leader of the Moffett campaign in Bolton, were elected to represent the town party at the July 18-19 state nominating convention. About 60 registered Democrats attended the caucus at Community Hall.

Although the town committee decided on March 21 not to endorse either candidate, elected two delegate slates featuring declared supporters of either O'Neill or Moffett in order to ensure a vote for their candidate at the July convention.

Kelsey and Selectwoman Sandra Pierog were nominated by the governor's supporters, while Moffett backers put up Ahearn and labor leader Robert Madore. The result of the paper-ballot vote was almost an even split, with Kelsey getting 33, Ahearn 34, Madore 28 and Pierog 27.

"Evidently it did," he said after Thursday's caucus. "At the time, I did not think it reflected the support of the citizens totally." Ahearn said he was pleased by the result, but "disappointed" both delegates didn't go to Moffett.

"We did well," Ahearn said. "But I would have preferred to get two for the good guy." The former state representative said he viewed the vote as a personal victory. "I personally appreciate the vote of confidence. In a conservative town, a liberal like me was chosen. It makes me feel good," he said.

Ahearn and Winifred Cunningham will attend the 55th Assembly District convention July 24, and Public Building Commission member Jose Ramirez and Mary Van Buren will go to the July 23 and 24 Senatorial District convention.

John Toomey and Marian Kelsey will attend the July 21, 2nd Congressional District convention. In the only other contested ballot Thursday, the caucus decided to send Board of Finance member Charles Holland and Bernard Cummings to the Tolland County convention on July 22. Ramirez had unsuccessfully sought to go to the county meeting.

Library backers plan to blitz voters

By George Lovvo
Herald Reporter

BOLTON — Supporters of the proposed library-media center at Bolton High School plan to blitz town voters with fliers and telephone calls this weekend urging them back to the project in a referendum Thursday.

Board of Education Chairman James Marshall announced the plans during a public hearing held at the school's gymnasium Thursday. The $493,000 addition has the backing of most town boards and organizations, and Marshall said public reaction has so far been "extremely positive."

"We made the effort to get out," he told about 20 people who attended the half-hour session. "We made an effort to get out the proposal."

The 2,800-square-foot addition would cost taxpayers $188,000, with the remaining 305,000 covered by the state Department of Education, according to a copy of the flier that will be distributed by members of the Library Media Center advisory committee. The project would provide space for a larger library, reading room and conference center.

The proposal facing the vote Thursday is a scaled-down version of one that was defeated in a referendum in 1984.

Snowbound

Rudy Besikot, 18, clears a heavy wet spring snow from his car Thursday morning after a major winter storm settled into the Denver area overnight. Several schools and businesses were forced to close because of the storm and travelers at the airport experienced delays of several hours. Another 8 inches of snow is expected before the snow gives way to springtime sun.

Tank mishap fatal to 1,400 trout

By George Lovvo
Herald Reporter

ELLINGTON (AP) — Something happened on the way from the hatchery — about 1,400 trout lost their lives. Workers realized too late on Thursday that something went wrong in one of the carrying tanks used to transport trout from the Quechee Hatchery to the Ellington lake.

John A. Puzgales, a conservation officer with the state Department of Environmental Protection, said two trout plugged an air pump, and oxygen stopped circulating in the tank.

Puzgales said department officials spent three hours netting the dead fish from the bottom of the lake, which was being stocked for the start of fishing season. "We did a good job of cleaning them up," he said. "But I'm sure we missed one or two."

The trout that survived the trip in the blocked tank floated on the lake for several minutes before recovering from the shock and swimming away, Puzgales said.

Southeast part of state in path of gypsy moths

HARTFORD (AP) — After a survey of towns throughout the state, state entomologists say southeastern Connecticut will be hit hardest this summer by a growing gypsy moth population.

Entomologists reported this week a heavy concentration of gypsy moth eggs in the southeast corner of the state and in some towns on the Rhode Island border.

John F. Anderson, the state's chief entomologist, says the gypsy moth, first found in Connecticut about the turn of the century, increases its population in cycles.

Last year's increase appears to be the first step in the predicted six-year cycle, Anderson said.

and, based on past trends, we expect another increase this year," Anderson said.

Figures show the moth population hit a particularly low level in 1984, when about 7,700 acres of trees were damaged. In 1985, about 150,000 acres were damaged.

Nine in ten Manchester area readers prefer the Manchester Herald for local news over any other print publication.

If you live in Manchester then the Herald's the newspaper for you because it's the only one that's geared expressly to the needs of the community. A recent survey conducted by First Market Research of Boston pointed out that the Herald's major strength is in its local news coverage and its intimate focus on the Manchester area. According to the study, nearly nine in ten readers say they read the Herald for the local news and nearly seven in ten say that local news is the most important strength of the paper.

The same study shows that the Manchester Herald is rated quite highly in terms of space devoted to selected local issues in its Opinion pages. Nearly eight in ten readers find that the space devoted to viewpoints on local issues to be more than sufficient in explaining the issues. This extensive coverage provides readers with the depth of information they need to make reasonable decisions on key local issues that may impact on their lives today, or in the future.

In turn, the Letters to the Editor column allows readers an opportunity to vent their views on an issue. One of the most important news categories in the minds of most Manchester area residents is local news, with nearly 75% rating the Manchester Herald very high in this coverage area.

Fund shareholders must pay tax

QUESTION: How can a dividend paid by a mutual fund holding stocks and/or bonds be considered income to fund shareholders, when the value of each mutual fund share is reduced by the amount of the dividend and there is no change in the value of each shareholder's investment?

Investors' Guide
William A. Doyle

market value of the stocks and/or bonds the fund holds. However, you're overlooking the fact that you have the choice of either reinvesting the dividend or taking it by check. Either way, you're required to pay tax on the dividend. The per share value is reduced to $9 a share. I reinvest the dividend and receive 11,112 additional shares. As a result, I own 111,112 shares worth $1,000 — exactly the same as before. And I have to pay income tax on the $10 dividend.

ANSWER: The example is accurate to the penny, assuming there is no other change in the value of the mutual fund's shares resulting from an increase or decrease in the

Money talks slow trading

BRUSSELS, Belgium — Currency trading virtually ground to a halt in Europe today as finance ministers prepared to open talks on a possible realignment of the values of the eight currencies in the European Monetary System.

The suspension of trading left many tourists in a range of financial issues. A source at the Common Market's executive headquarters in Brussels, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the ministers' deputies would begin preliminary talks this evening on a possible currency realignment, following the request by France.

The action would be taken within the framework of the European Monetary System in which the values of currencies from Belgium, France, Luxembourg, Denmark, Ireland, West Germany, Italy and the Netherlands are linked by a formal mechanism.

A change in their relative values, which must be agreed to by all eight governments, would have no direct bearing on their value against the U.S. dollar.

Earlier today, the Bank of France announced that it and other central banks of the European Monetary System had suspended rules designed to keep the latter currencies within a predetermined range.

The move was a first step in the process of negotiating possible changes in the currencies' relative values.

March Domestic Auto Sales

Auto sales fell 15.6% on a daily rate basis in March 1986 with U.S. automakers selling 649,351 cars compared to 768,943 a year ago.

Despite continuing buyer incentive programs, the nation's automakers Thursday reported a 15.6 percent drop in sales for March and a 7.1 percent drop for the first quarter of 1986.

Lehner sues Pilgrim, seeks control

By Peter S. Howes
Associated Press

GROTON — A New York businessman says he dropped an $8.1 million bid to purchase Pilgrim Airlines because the airline's former owner and his advisers misrepresented the company's financial condition.

The businessman, Daniel A. Lehner of Valley Stream, N.Y., in a lawsuit is asking a federal judge to award him control of the airline for about one-eighth the price he'd agreed to pay.

Lehner identified himself as a principal in a Long Island-based company, Inflight Newspapers Inc., that supplies airlines with newspapers and magazines.

The lawsuit, filed March 27 in federal court in Brooklyn, N.Y., seeks reinstatement of Lehner's agreement to buy Pilgrim, the voiding of Pilgrim's recent purchase by the Marketing Corp. of America or reimbursements and damages totaling more than $20 million.

Warnaco bid can proceed, court says

HARTFORD (AP) — A group of California investors can proceed with their $469 million bid to acquire Warnaco Inc., according to a federal judge's ruling that struck down Warnaco's attempt to block the attempted takeover.

U.S. District Judge Peter C. Dorsey, who had heard more than three hours of argument in the case a day earlier, on Thursday rejected each of Warnaco's contentions that W Acquisition Corp.'s March 17 tender offer violated federal securities laws.

WAC Chairman Andrew G. Gelfand said Dorsey's decision "clears the way" for the investors to proceed.

"Our financing is committed and we are prepared to begin buying shares as soon as possible," he said in a statement.

Among Warnaco's complaints were that WAC did not make all the necessary information about the offer available to shareholders the day the offer was made; that WAC failed to disclose information in accordance with securities laws; had not specified its source of funding; that WAC's officers should have disclosed personal financial data; and that, because the offer was conditioned on WAC's obtaining financing, it was illusory.

The ruling leaves intact WAC's offer for all of Warnaco's 10.2 million outstanding shares for $46 per share in cash. The bid, worth about $469 million, is contingent on the tender of $.5 million or 51 percent of Warnaco's shares. WAC has said it has obtained a commitment from Dressel Burnham Lambert Inc. for all of the financing. Shareholder withdrawal rights expire at midnight Friday, the offer expires April 11. Warnaco, which initially had planned to go private in a leveraged buyout by its managers, countered the hostile bid by proposing a recapitalization in which shareholders would receive $7 in cash, notes with a face value of $28 per share and stock in the recapitalized company.

Warnaco has said that if it can sell the notes it could raise the cash portion of the transaction to $22 per share. The company values its proposal at $41 per share, or about $418 million. Shareholders are to vote on the proposal at an April 25 meeting. Warnaco's officers could not be reached at home Thursday evening but a company spokeswoman said they likely would have nothing to say until Friday.

Business In Brief

Chesebrough signs agreement

WESTPORT (AP) — Chesebrough-Pond Inc. has signed an agreement in principle to purchase the assets of Quality Sausage Co. Inc., the companies announced Thursday.

The proposed purchase price is $23 million, and Chesebrough's assumption of specified Quality Sausage liabilities, totaling $4.5 million. The transaction is subject to approval by the boards of both companies at meetings scheduled for April 16.

Firms structure data group

STAMFORD (AP) — GTE and United Telecom have announced the organizational structure for the data group of their proposed US Sprint partnership.

The US Sprint data group will be structured into five subgroups, which will report to J. David Hann, who with two other men compose the office of president.

AMAX plans redemption

GREENWICH (AP) — The board of directors of AMAX Inc. approved Thursday the redemption of all 615,000 outstanding shares of its series E preferred stock.

Allen Born, president and chief executive officer for AMAX, said the redemption is part of a program to reduce outstanding indebtedness and to re-purchase shares of the company's preferred stock.

Carbide buys Amerchol

DANBURY (AP) — Union Carbide Corp. announced Thursday that it has finished the purchase of Amerchol Corp. from CPC International Inc.

Joseph C. Soverio, president of Union Carbide's specialty chemicals division, said the purchase strengthens his company's lines of personal care intermediates.

Stock market declines slightly

NEW YORK — The stock market declined slightly today in a carryover of selling from the stormy last hour of Thursday's session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks dropped 2.99 to 1,763.41 in the first hour of trading. Losers outnumbered gainers by about 4 to 3 in the early count of New York Stock Exchange trading.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by more than 2 to 1 on the NYSE. Big Board volume totaled 148.23 million shares, against 145.30 million in the previous session.
