Schools need $10 million for projects

By Susan Vaughn
Herald Reporter

The cost of renovations to five Manchester schools will be just over $10 million and spending approval will probably be sought in a referendum this November, officials said today.

The estimated cost of the projects proposed at four elementary schools and Manchester High School is $10,066,000, the chairman of the town Building Committee said. The committee plans to recommend that the town go ahead with the referendum, added Chairman Paul Phillips.

The estimated state reimbursement on the project is $5,636,300, or 55.9 percent of the cost, leaving the town's net cost at $4,429,700, Phillips said.

Mayor Barbara Weinberg said this morning she would support putting the question of bonding for the projects before the voters in November. Many of the renovations are necessary to meet state health and safety codes, she said, and should be done as quickly as possible.

School Superintendent James P. Kennedy said he sees no reason not to proceed with the referendum, but cautioned that the Building Committee figures can still be adjusted by the Board of Education.

"This is the ball park," Kennedy said of the estimate. "I wish it weren't quite as high."

But Kennedy said construction costs are continuing to climb and will probably not fall any time soon. Any items cut from the proposal would be discretionary items of which "there are precious few," he said.

Francis Maffe Jr., chairman of the school board's Building and Sites Committee, said today he was "mildly surprised" at the $10 million estimate, but had not seen the final figures. Previous estimates have ranged from $4 million to $12 million.

Maffe said he was certain the projects would be supported by both the school board and the town Board of Directors, which must act to get the proposal before the electorate.

The two architects for the projects provided the committee with the total estimates, including expected state reimbursement, at a meeting Tuesday night. The state will pay 63.8 percent of the renovations related to safety and health code violations cited last year, Phillips said.

The work at the high school is necessary to meet state building codes that were revised in 1983, after a $5.5 million renovation project at the school was well under way. The work at the elementary schools will include energy conservation measures, such as replacing windows and installing insulation. The state will reimburse the town only for the labor associated with that work.

The total cost estimates for each school are as follows: MHS, $1,345,000; Bowers School, $2,875,000; Waddell School, $2,290,000; Verplanck School, $2,280,000; and Nathan Hale School, $1,347,000.

Maffe and Phillips both predicted that the voters would approve the project at the $10 million figure.

"If we don't do it now, it will cost a small fortune later," Maffe said, predicting quite a sell campaign.

The Board of Education could act on the proposed referendum in early May and send it on to the Board of Directors for approval, Kennedy said.

Clint Eastwood, mayor-elect of Carmel, Calif., shows off a T-shirt during his victory speech late Tuesday.

Eastwood defeated the two-term incumbent in a landslide that saw a high turnout at the polls.

Government gets another actor

CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA, Calif. (AP) — Clint Eastwood, hero of detective films and spaghetti westerns, proved to be as big a draw at the polling place as the box office as voters turned out in record numbers to make him mayor.

Smiling broadly, Eastwood said the triumph "ranks solidly" with his successes as a director and star. "It's a bit movie at the moment," he said.

"It's surprising and yet it's not surprising," Eastwood had 2,166 votes, or 72.2 percent, to 799 votes, or 28.8 percent, for two-time incumbent Charlotte Townsend. Two other candidates had a total of 37 votes, or 1.2 percent.

Business was brisk at all four polling places in the 1-square-mile village, with 72.5 percent of the 4,142 registered voters turning out. City clerk Jeanne Brehmer said that in five years in office, turnout hasn't topped 50 percent.

"It was a fantastic, enthusiastic turnout," said official poll watcher Louis LaBarbera. "A lot of young people voted and a lot of the retired people. Some had trouble getting here, in wheelchairs and all, but they came."

Townsend conceded less than 90 minutes after the polls closed, saying, "This whole campaign has been totally out of focus and so abnormal."

Eastwood, 55, takes over the $200-a-month, two-year job on April 15.

A resident of this tourist village for 14 years, he complained during the campaign about waste in a $6 million budget, too many consultants and lawyers and about rudeness on the part of the planning commission and city council, which vetoed his plans to build a small office complex.

Libyan envoys expelled

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher today ordered the expulsion of two Libyan diplomats in retaliation for the Berlin nightclub bombing, a ministry spokesman said.

Genscher, according to the spokesman, made his decision after evaluating information developed by a special crisis staff set up immediately after the terrorist attack on the La Belle disco early Saturday. One U.S. soldier and a Turkish woman were killed and 250 people were injured, including 63 Americans.

The spokesman did not identify the diplomats. He said the activities of the diplomats were incompatible with diplomatic practices and that they were to leave the country immediately.

Counterintelligence sources said the two Libyans were known as officers of the Libyan intelligence service and were responsible for counteracting Libyan opponents of the Tripoli government in West Germany.

The United States had demanded the West German government impose economic sanctions on Libya in retaliation for Saturday's bombing at a discotheque frequented by American soldiers.

West German government sources said the Americans demanded West Germany at least drastically curtail its relations with Libya by expelling most Libyan diplomats from Bonn.

West German newspapers carried reports, apparently leaked by government officials, saying economic sanctions would not be imposed because the Bonn government did not consider the American evidence of Libyan involvement strong enough.

After the hijacking of the Achille Lauro luxury ship and terrorist attacks on the Rome and Vienna airports, West Germany rebuffed American calls for economic sanctions.

U.S. Ambassador Richard Burt has said there is "clear evidence" of Libyan involvement in the bombing of the La Belle disco in the American sector of Berlin.

The American government stepped up pressure on West Germany to join in wide-ranging sanctions, West German government sources said.

Defense challenges use of confession

By George Lovno
Herald Reporter

HARTFORD — Questions were raised in Superior Court Tuesday about the admissibility of a written confession allegedly given to Manchester police by an Olcott Street man accused of murdering his 10-month-old daughter last April.

Responding to questions posed by Public Defender Richard Kelly during pretrial proceedings, police detective Joseph Morrissey said Marshall Crenshaw of 40 Olcott St. was not completely advised of his constitutional rights immediately before he signed the confession or before three earlier interviews. However, Morrissey said he "made it very clear" before each interview that Crenshaw was not under arrest and could end the discussion at any time.

The detective also explained that because he advised the 25-year-old defendant of his rights from memory before the written confession was obtained, he inadvertently forgot to tell Crenshaw he had a right to a public defender if he could not afford an attorney and that Crenshaw could stop the interview at any time.

President ready to answer Khadafy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, who in his last public speech warned Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy he will be held "fully accountable" for future terrorism, has a chance today to drop the other shoe.

Reagan was scheduled to speak to newspaper editors at about noon and then field questions from reporters at a nationally televised evening news conference, his first in two months.

In Tripoli, Libya Khadafy said today he and his top commanders have completed military plans to challenge the United States. He renewed his threats against American targets worldwide. (Story on page 4.)

Reagan extended a planned 15-minute meeting with departing Soviet ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin by a full hour Tuesday to discuss the full range of East-West issues and to receive a letter from Gorbachev. Officials would not reveal the contents, but Secretary of State George Shultz announced he and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze would meet in mid-May to prepare for a summit in the United States at an unspecified date.

When Reagan last spoke in public, at a March 27 political fund raiser, U.S. military forces had just completed exercises in the Gulf of Sidra, sailing past what Khadafy called the "line of death," 200 miles off the Libyan coast.

At that time, Reagan warned: "The United States will not be intimidated by new threats of terrorism against us," and, on a prophetic note, "We're aware of intensive Libyan preparations that were already under way for terrorist operations against Americans. Mr. Khadafy must know that we will hold him fully accountable for any such actions."

Buckland sewer becomes district-town battleground

By George Lovno
Herald Reporter

Opting not to wait for a review of the matter, directors of the Eighth Utilities District decided Tuesday to proceed with plans to connect a planned sewer line in Buckland to the North Manchester sewer system at a point east of where the town has said it should be connected.

The decision by district directors was made after they were told by the engineer for the project, Richard Lombardi of Concord, that the route favored by the district would not significantly reduce the main line's capacity to handle sewage.

Democratic senators urge Moffett to quit

HARTFORD (AP) — All 12 Democratic state senators today called on Toby Moffett to drop his challenge to Gov. William A. O'Neill for the 1986 Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

"Continuing the fight between yourself and the governor will only sap the energy and resources of the Democratic Party," the senators said in a letter to Moffett released at the Capitol today.

They said they decided to send the letter after O'Neill's overwhelming victories in last week's party caucuses and town committee sessions. As a result of last week's action, O'Neill's camp claimed the support of 1,146 convicted delegates to Moffett's 134.

Moffett said his count showed he had 184 delegates.

William O'Neill has done an excellent job as governor and the Democrats clearly support his good work," the senators said. They said it was important that Moffett drop out and help unify the party in order to give the Democrats their best shot at regaining the state House and Senate this year.

Merger mania

Leonard H. Goldenson, a top executive at the new Capital Cities-ABC Inc., has a few concerns that the economy may be affected by the recent frenzy of unfriendly mergers. Goldenson, chairman of the "creative committee," said the results to date have not created new values, products, jobs or competitive leadership. "We seem to be forgetting that if it's cheaper to buy a company than start a new one, we will invest only in the past and mortgage the future," Goldenson said. Capital Cities Communications merged with ABC in January. "At ABC, we were able to meet the challenge of an unstable economic environment," he said. "Many important American corporations have not been so fortunate."

A Saudi Arabian prince concerned about keeping poachers and trash-dumpers away from his estate near Rome, Ga., which sprawls across parts of two counties, has bought more than three miles of roads leading to his land. The 8,000-acre spread in Floyd and Bartow counties is owned by Prince Faisal Muhammad Al-Said Al-Kabir. A 50,000-square-foot house is in the planning stages. "Illegal hunters were coming in there and shooting the wildlife, which is abundant," said Sam Singer, the prince's land acquisition agent. "People were dumping trash, and we lost 140 acres to arsonists last year." Singer says the prince wants the land around his home to be an environmental garden spot and a wildlife refuge.

Eleanor Smeal, president of the National Organization for Women, is not discouraged by the group's membership losses and the defeat of the Equal Rights Amendment. "We're committed to an activist agenda and that's attracting widespread support, especially on college campuses," she said at a NOW luncheon in Grand Rapids, Mich. Smeal has refinanced NOW's debt, cut expenses and staff and increased direct-mail recruiting campaigns. She said last month a pro-abortion march in Washington and Los Angeles attracted nearly 200,000 people, almost a third of whom were men. "Many of these young people are products of divorce who have been raised by mothers working at low-paying jobs," she said.

Toeing the line

Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley told a gospel music conference he walks the line between religious faith and his job. Bradley, speaking in Nashville, said politicians have to balance the call to serve human needs and the need for political success. "As a public servant, I also know how it is to walk that narrow line," he said. "You have to walk that path and keep the faith but without a measure of financial success, your chance to reach people will be curtailed. I will be grateful to you for what you have done to constantly remind me of the most important values in our lives." The Gospel Music Association's annual meeting climaxes Thursday night with the televised Dove Awards show.

Across the nation

Scattered thunderstorms doused the central Gulf Coast and the southern Plains today as the South welcomed a violent spring storm that hammered the region with tornadoes, near-100-mph winds and torrential rains. Thunderstorms stretched today from south central Texas to Alabama after strong storms packing high winds and hail buffeted the area Tuesday. Trees were downed and telephone service and electric power were knocked out in Crockett, Texas, while dime-size hail pelted Livingston, Texas. However, by late Tuesday the National Weather Service cancelled a severe thunderstorm watches across the South. Rain fell today over the middle Atlantic coast, and snow blanketed the Great Lakes, upstate New York and northern New England. Frost and freezing temperatures were expected in Iowa and parts of the central Plains. In the West, rain and some snow spread over the Great Basin and central Rockies, with up to 4 inches of snow expected in the northeastern Nevada mountains. A small storm touched down three times in Clark and Ogelthorpe counties in northeast Georgia.

Final district budget linked to sewer cost

The decision by district directors was made after they were told by the engineer for the project, Richard Lombardi of Vertron, that the route favored by the district would not significantly reduce the main line's capacity to handle sewerage. Lombardi said that meters his engineering firm placed on a section of the main line, which is known as the North Manchester Interceptor, indicated it is only 25 percent of its capacity. That figure is less than the town has estimated. The town wants the new sewer line to connect with the existing Adams Street sewer, which runs into the North Manchester Interceptor at a point below where the district has proposed connecting the new line. Town officials have argued that the capacity of the Adams Street line to handle the increased sewage is greater than the upper section of the interceptor, which runs along North Main Street. However, Lombardi said Tuesday that the Adams Street line would not be able to handle the increased sewage. He said his study has "proven conclusively" that the connection favored by the district could better handle the increased flow both now and in the future. At stake in the dispute are lucrative sewer fees that both the district and the town hope to collect from new development under way

Sewer connection dispute heats up

Further widen the gap and require a greater increase in the mill rate. However, Secretary Helen Warrington said the tax rate should not climb over 5 mills. Additional revenue from the hookup fees for the new sewer line will probably be less once financial information concerning a new sewer project is known, district directors said Tuesday. Work on the proposed budget for the 1986-87 fiscal year, which totals $1,062,352, has been essentially completed except for the calculations concerning the cost of the new sewer line. The engineer for the project told the district Board of Directors at a meeting Tuesday that preliminary estimates should be available by Monday, when a public hearing is scheduled on the spending plan. The directors have tentatively called for a 4-mill increase over the current 4-mill tax rate levied against district property owners for fire and sewer services. But that increase and other sources of expected revenue for the next fiscal year still leave the district $15,593 short of the proposed spending. The directors anticipate that the cost of the sewer work will

1984's top 10 taxpayers also 1985's

The 10 largest taxpayers on Manchester's 1985 Grand List remained unchanged from the 1984 list, although some shifted positions slightly, according to figures compiled by the office of Town Assessor J. Richard Vincent. The total assessment for the town's highest taxpayers increased slightly on the new Grand List to $61,119,900, from $60,853,900 in 1984. Assessments against the 10 highest taxpayers account for about 9 percent of the total taxable Grand List of about $713 million. The top three in 1985 remained unchanged from the previous year. They are J. C. Penney Properties Inc., Connecticut Light and Power, and Squire Village Associates. Penney's assessment on the new list was $18,081,640, compared with $19,149,140 in 1984. Connecticut Light and Power's assessment increased to $11,431,510 from $10,574,050. Squire Village Associates' assessment increased to $5,372,550 from $5,087,550. Fourth place on the new list is held by John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co. with an assessment of $4,049,730. The others on the new list and their assessments in descending order are: • Emil Downey and others, owners of Fountain Village Apartments, $3,944,350. • Multi-Circuits, $3,790,920. • Squire Village Associates, $3,616,470. • Developer Raymond Damato, $3,561,540. • And Damato, $3,309,750. The biggest jump was made by John Hancock, which moved from number eight to number four. Its assessment rose by $449,410 to $4,049,730. The figures reflect property ownership as of October 1985.

13th District candidates back Thompson

Two Democrats seeking their party's nomination to run for the 13th Assembly District seat held by Republican Elsie L. Swenson said this week they will step aside if former Mayor John W. Thompson decides to mount a campaign this year. The two, Robert Faucher and Henry E. Agostinelli, both said they hope to be nominated. Faucher announced his intention to run this year, while Agostinelli said late last week that he would seek the nomination. Faucher, a local real estate salesman, has also said he would step aside if Cassano decided to run. But Agostinelli, 52, said during an interview Tuesday that he made a deal with Democratic Theodor Theodore Cummings Monday night to support only Thompson. "I have a firm handshake with Cummings to support Jack Thompson," Agostinelli said. "We did not discuss other personalities." Agostinelli, a state employee who admitted that he faces an uphill battle to win the seat, said he considers himself conservative on moral issues and liberal on some others. He favors school prayer and bringing the Bible into the classroom, and said he would push for legislation to allow such activities. "We can't live without God's word," Agostinelli said. He was a teacher from 1962 to 1972 and said he saw the negative impact on students as prayer and the Bible were removed from the classroom. "I'm conservative on the moral issues," Agostinelli said. "I registered as a Democrat because I believe in the Democratic philosophy of hard work, belief in God and thrift in government." And he insisted that the liberals have almost "ruined the Democratic Party," he said he is liberal on certain issues. Agostinelli said he supports legislation increasing welfare assistance and help to the elderly, wants more financial aid for education and more shelter for homeless people. He said his main reason for running is to get rid of Swenson, whom he called liberal and a follower of Richard C. Bozotto, a Republican gubernatorial candidate. Agostinelli is the brother of Nathan G. Agostinelli, a state Republican Central Committee member and the president of Manchester State Bank. He works for the state Division of Special Revenue, which operates the state lottery and other legalized gambling activities.

Minister's trial set A Bloomfield minister who operates a Pentecostal church and private school on Parker Street will face trial in West Hartford Superior Court May 14 on charges that he beat one of his students, a court clerk said this morning. Dennis Karlzen, 45, was arrested Dec. 31 by Bloomfield police after he allegedly beat a Bloomfield girl at her home in December and took her wallet. He was charged with third-degree assault, risk of injury to a minor, first-degree unlawful restraint and sixth-degree larceny. Karlzen pleaded not guilty to the charges on Jan. 13. The minister has admitted that he has used corporal punishment at the one-room school he operates at 717 Parker St., known as ACE Christian Academy. However, Karlzen denies that he beat the girl, or routinely hit any of the other students at the school.

Downtown gets new parking

A dry well is being constructed in the empty lot south of the Salvation Army Citadel on Main Street in preparation for paving the lot for a 13-stall parking area. The work is being done by the Town of Manchester, which has leased the lot from the Salvation Army at no cost to the town. The lease contains options for renewal. Town Manager Robert Weiss said today the intent is for the town to continue to use the area for parking until the Salvation Army needs it for expansion. Town Highway Superintendent Keith Chapman said today the paving will be done either by town forces or under contract. The town has no operative paving roller, but the Public Works Department is asking for one in the budget for the fiscal year that begins July 1. Chapman said that if purchase of the roller is not approved, the town may consider renting one. The paved lot will provide spaces for public parking. The entrance will be on Main Street and there will be an exit from Brainerd Place.

French teacher feared kidnapped

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A French teacher at a school in Moslem west Beirut disappeared today and was feared kidnapped, a French Embassy spokesman said.

The spokesman, Francois Abi Saab, identified the teacher as Michel Brian, a teacher at the College Protestant Francois.

Embassy sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said gunmen kidnapped Brian as he walked from his apartment in west Beirut's Hamra commercial district to the school in Koraitem neighborhood about five blocks away.

But Saab would not confirm that Brian had been kidnapped. He said the school had reported to the embassy that Brian failed to show up for work today, and that the embassy was "making all the necessary contacts to investigate his fate."

Eight other Frenchmen are missing in Beirut, and a Lebanese-born French physician has been negotiating with Shiite Moslem radicals for the release of at least some of them.

Pilots link bomb to Mexicana crash

WASHINGTON — An airline pilots association official said today there is evidence the crash of a Mexicana Airlines jet that killed 166 people last week was caused by a bomb.

Thomas Ashwood, first vice president of the International Airline Pilots Association, told "The CBS Morning News" that inspection of the plane's wreckage by Mexican officials indicated a cargo door was blown off. He said he had learned from the Mexican pilots' association that there was other evidence of an explosion inside the plane.

"I got information from colleagues in Mexico that had been investigating what we thought was an accident until today," Ashwood said from London. "They said forensic examination of the wreckage indicates that the cargo door was blown off and a forensic examination of other parts of the wreckage also consist with an explosion inside the aircraft."

House to debate gun control bill

WASHINGTON — The House was aiming for a battle today over whether to ease the nation's gun control law to make it easier to buy a gun and transport it across state lines, or to continue the ban on transporting handguns.

With the powerful National Rifle Association on one side and many police groups on the other, lawmakers are expected to debate and vote on changing the law for the first time since the 1968 assassinations of Martin Luther King Jr. and Robert Kennedy.

In the wake of those killings, Congress passed the Gun Control Act, a sore point for the NRA, the nation's gun lobby, which claims the law unfairly penalizes legitimate hunters and sportsmen.

The House has scheduled seven hours of debate today on the two competing bills, including one with NRA backing, which would legalize the interstate sale and transportation of handguns.

Weinberger shrugs off bomb blast

BANGKOK, Thailand — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger shrugged off a bomb explosion outside a hotel where he planned to attend a banquet, saying there was no evidence to show it was an assassination attempt.

Weinberger, who ended a three-day visit to Thailand, was to fly to the Indonesian island of Bali today for a brief stopover, then travel to Australia, where problems affecting U.S. military relations with New Zealand and Australia were expected to be discussed.

A bomb went off Tuesday night at the gate of a hotel where Weinberger was to have attended a banquet in his honor. Three people were seriously wounded.

Weinberger called the bombing "a very unfortunate, unhappy thing" but said he doubted he was the target.

Police said today they had no suspects in the case. No one has claimed responsibility for the bombing.

NASA prepares accident report

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The space agency's chief trouble-shooter says NASA overlooked earlier hints of potential catastrophe and accepted a "marginal" rocket joint design that ultimately doomed the shuttle Challenger.

"The simple answer to the public is I think NASA has taken an awful lot of bows on these prior launches," J.R. Thompson, who is in charge of NASA's accident investigation, said Tuesday. "On this one we just fumbled."

National Transportation Safety Board officials today planned to outline their findings about how the shuttle broke up after the explosion of its external tank on Jan. 28, a blast triggered by a rupture in a joint between two fuel segments in Challenger's right-side rocket booster.

Several large pieces of the shuttle apparently hit the water 8.9 miles below relatively intact. The crew cabin, for example, was found in 100 feet of water in a compressed mound of wreckage.

Voyager's route spurs concern about collision

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The Voyager 2 spacecraft, flying toward a 1989 encounter with Neptune, could be destroyed in a collision with boulders or pebbles orbiting the planet if its route isn't changed, scientists say.

But the researchers prefer to stick with Voyager's planned trajectory because it would take the probe near Triton, a moon of Neptune which apparently has organic sludge, methane ice and possibly lakes of liquid nitrogen.

"It's very possible we will just decide to take our chances," deputy Voyager project scientist Ellis Miner said Tuesday at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

Scientists have been aware of the potential collision problem for more than a year. It was revealed publicly Tuesday by Fred Scarf, a TRW Inc. physicist and Voyager science team member, during a luncheon with reporters at the company's Redondo Beach offices.

"There is something circling around Neptune that we had not planned for in our initial considerations of trajectory for Voyager 2," Miner said later.

He said evidence accumulating since late 1983 suggests that in addition to two known moons — Triton and Nereid — Neptune is orbited by three "arcs," or thin, incomplete rings different from the complete rings of giant, pebbles or boulders circling Jupiter, Saturn and Uranus.

Scientists still aren't sure the arcs exist. But if they do, Voyag-

Protesters claim victory in test delay

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Anti-nuclear protesters claimed their demonstrations forced scrub a scheduled atomic weapons test, but Energy Department sources said the blast was called off because of high winds in the Nevada desert.

Tuesday's explosion, scheduled in the face of protest from Congress, the Soviet Union and demonstrators who invaded the Nevada Test Site, was postponed because of the weather, government sources said.

The Department of Energy has not acknowledged that the test was scheduled, and did not announce its cancellation, but DOE sources in Washington said it was scheduled for 2 a.m. PST and delayed because of wind. They said it would be conducted when weather permits.

A dozen anti-testing activists, including Daniel Ellsberg, who released the Pentagon Papers in the 1970s, were arrested after invading the test site before the decision to postpone was revealed. Another 75 people were arrested when they walked across the boundary of the site. All refused to sign their citations and were held pending appearances before a justice of the peace.

Protest groups suggested they may have played a major role in the decision to scrap the test.

"We've drawn a lot of attention to this even if it is postponed only a few days, it gives a chance for the moratorium," said John Murphy of the Southern California Bilateral Nuclear Weapons Freeze. "This means we have won a significant victory."

Despite an earlier barrage of criticism of the American test, the Soviet Union's government-controlled media were silent after Washington canceled the blast.

The test would have taken place while President Reagan was meeting with departing Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin in Washington. White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the postponement was not related to the meeting.

Congressional opponents urged the administration to go along with the Soviet moratorium on testing and an offer by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev to halt all testing if the United States does.

"The Soviets have said they want to stop testing and are willing to accept on-site inspection to verify a test ban treaty," said Rep. Ed Markey, D-Mass. "Why don't we call their bluff?"

Also attending the news conference were Sens. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, Donald Riegle, D-Mich., and William Proxmire, D-Wis.

Hijacking victim's family sues TWA

NEW YORK (UPI) — The family of a Navy diver who was killed in the hijacking of a TWA jet last June is suing the airline for nearly $21 million, claiming mishandled security checks in Greece enabled terrorists to board the plane.

The parents, brother and sister of Robert Stethem, 23, of Waldorf, Md., filed the suit Tuesday in U.S. District Court in Manhattan, seeking $14.75 million in compensatory damages and $6 million in punitive damages.

Stethem was aboard TWA flight 89 when it was hijacked June 1 on a flight from Athens to Rome, beginning a 17-day odyssey of terror in which the plane was forced at gunpoint to shuttle three times between Algeria and Lebanon.

Early on, the Shiite Moslem hijackers dragged Stethem into the plane's cockpit where they beat him, shot him and then dumped his body onto the airport tarmac in Beirut, Lebanon.

Stethem's family charged in the suit that Trans World Airlines was "reckless" in its handling of passenger and aircraft security before the plane was boarded in Athens.

The suit said disorder prevailed at the security checkpoint and that security guards let one of the hijackers go through a weapons detector backward and board the plane without a physical search.

It said this was done even though one terrorist twice set off the weapons detector and once threw up his hands to indicate surrender.

Stethem had been returning to the United States with fellow divers after completing work on a Navy communications station in Greece.

A spokesman for TWA said the airline was aware of the suit but declined to comment on it. However, the spokesman said that at the time of the incident TWA had stated, "We had checked all security checks passengers go through...and we found at the time all to be in order."

The suit charged the hijackers "tortured (Stethem) in a variety of ways. He was kicked repeatedly in the ribs. He was beaten repeatedly on the head with the butt of a pistol. He was also clubbed with a broken arm rest that had a sharp, protruding screw."

Khadafy ready to challenge U.S.

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Libyan leader Col. Muammar Khadafy said today he and his top commanders have completed military plans to challenge the United States. He renewed his threats against American targets worldwide.

Khadafy invited about 10 news reporters to his heavily guarded bunker in the capital of Tripoli. They were escorted behind a sandbag barricade to the tent where Khadafy conducts many of the affairs of government.

Shortly after the reporters were placed in position about 30 yards from the front of the tent, about 20 top-ranking military commanders ended a meeting and said goodbye to Khadafy.

Khadafy, dressed in a green military uniform with a black beret, then answered questions for about 20 minutes.

"We have just finished making military plans for confrontation in response to the latest American threats to us," Khadafy said. "It is axiomatic that America will be defeated militarily." Khadafy said. "It is axiomatic that if aggression is staged against us, then we shall escalate the violence against American targets, civilian and non-civilian, throughout the world."

Khadafy occasionally glanced away from the reporters and gazed into the sky as he answered questions in a calm, restrained voice.

Nine in ten Manchester area readers prefer the Manchester Herald for local news over any other print publication.

If you live in Manchester then the Herald's the newspaper for you because it's the only one that's geared expressly to the needs of the community. A recent survey conducted by First Market Research of Boston pointed out that the Herald's major strength is in its local news coverage and its intimate focus on the Manchester area. According to the study, nearly nine in ten readers say they read the Herald for the local news and nearly seven in ten say that local news is the most important strength of the paper.

The same study shows that the Manchester Herald is rated quite highly in terms of space devoted to selected local issues in its Opinion pages. Nearly eight in ten readers find that the space devoted to viewpoints on local issues to be more than sufficient in explaining the issues. This extensive coverage provides readers with the depth of information they need to make reasonable decisions on key local issues that may impact on their lives today, or in the future.

In turn, the Letters to the Editor column allows readers an opportunity to vent their views on an issue.

One of the most important news categories in the minds of most Manchester area residents is local news, with nearly 75% rating the Manchester Herald very high in this coverage area.

Paying attention to the needs of its readers is the number one priority of the Manchester Herald. They feel it is their responsibility to listen to what residents in Manchester have to say. They're especially interested in hearing any comments you may have about the service you get from the Herald. They guarantee prompt delivery and courteous, efficient service on all billing matters. If you're not satisfied, they want to know about it. If you let them know how they can improve the paper for you, their readers, then they will continue to be your voice in Manchester.

Coventry's Lewis warns of tax hike or cut in services

By Jacqueline Bennett
Herald Correspondent

COVENTRY — Without financial help from the state, the town faces a "bad situation," Town Council Chairman Joan Lewis said Monday night.

Lewis said the town will lose $100,000 in state and federal funds and can only make up $175,000 of it using local revenues.

"Without additional money, there will either have to be a larger mill-rate increase or the people will have to take a cut in services," she said during a meeting on Town Manager Harold Hodge's proposed budget of $9.6 million for the fiscal year that begins July 1.

The council began deliberations last week on the proposal, which calls for a 25 percent increase in government spending and a 21.9 percent increase in property taxes. If passed intact, it will require a 7-mil increase in the tax rate paid by Coventry property owners.

"Already $120,000 has been cut, mostly in the area of new personnel," Lewis said. "The easy cuts are over. It gets harder from here."

The requests of several department heads have already been rejected or modified.

POLICE CHIEF Frank Traszkos had requested three new officers and an investigator. His department will get one patrol officer and a half-time clerk under the current plan.

The highway department had asked for a foreman and a half-time landfill laborer. Only funds for the laborer have been approved.

Building Inspector John Wilinauer warned the council of a backlog of inspections and potential liability claims against the town for substandard inspections due to insufficient personnel and had requested an additional construction inspector to alleviate the workload. Instead, Assistant Building Inspector Alwyn Broderick will become a full-time inspector and a half-time assistant sanitarian will be hired.

Lewis said equipment requests have not yet been discussed. More than $500,000 was requested for capital items such as new dump trucks and police cruisers. She said only $49,000 was figured into Hodge's proposed budget for these costs.

Another expense facing the town is $54,000 in start-up costs associated with the sewer system currently being built under state mandate. That amount also was not included in Hodge's spending proposal and had to be added, Lewis said. The council was able to take about $15,400 from a contingency fund to cover part of that cost, but now must come up with the remaining amount, she said.

Lewis said she is still hopeful the town will receive more money from the state if Gov. William O'Neill's plan to use surplus funds to help towns is passed.

HODGE HAS BEEN CRITICIZED by some Town Council members for his budget recommendations. Democratic Councilman Patrick Flaherty, for instance, said they would place an "intolerable burden" on the taxpayers.

But Republican Councilman Phillip Bouchard has defended Hodge. The five-member Democratic majority on the council directed Hodge to draft his budget to reflect the town's needs and that Hodge has done exactly that, he has said.

"It is a gross injustice that he is now being castigated publicly for implementing the policies imposed upon him by the same council majority that is now afraid of the consequences a 7-mil tax increase would bring," Bouchard said.

In a prepared statement, Hodge said Coventry has been avoiding tax increases by not replacing equipment and failing to complete needed projects, with each political party blaming the other for not getting the job done. He said state bridge and infrastructure programs now offer Coventry a chance to correct many of these projects.

"We have an educated and well-rounded council. Now's the time to do some planning," Hodge said.

In Brief

Vote Thursday on Bolton LMC

BOLTON — Townpeople will go to the polls Thursday to vote on plans to build a $485,000 library and media center at Bolton High School.

The proposed 1,600-square-foot addition, which has the backing of most of the town's parents and civic organizations, would provide space for a larger library, reading room and conference center. Supporters have argued that the current library is smaller than standards and could jeopardize the school's accreditation with the New England Association of Schools and Colleges Inc.

No opposition to the plans was voiced at a public hearing held last week.

The cost to taxpayers would be $198,000, with the state picking up the remaining $287,000 in the form of a loan. The town must file an application with the state by June 30 to obtain the funding.

If the plans are approved, work will begin in the summer of 1987 and be finished by the fall. The project is a scaled-down version of one that voters defeated in a 1984 referendum.

The polls will be open from noon to 8 p.m. at Community Hall.

At a town meeting tonight, residents will be asked to authorize the spending of $14,000 in federal revenue sharing funds to improve the town garage and $50,000 to buy land next to Community Hall for expansion. Like the original library and media center plans, voters rejected the garage improvements and town hall project two years ago.

Head Start takes new applications

The Windham Area Community Action Head Start Program is now accepting applications for children of low-income families for the 1986-87 school year.

The program is designed to meet the educational, social, health, nutritional and psychological needs of participants. Children who have handicaps or documented special needs are eligible regardless of family income.

OPINION

Vote 'yes' on LMC in Bolton

There are several capital-improvement projects in Bolton that can be considered pressing needs, but one stands out because it involves a limited investment which will provide a tremendous payback in the future.

The top-priority project is the proposed library-media center addition at Bolton High School. Bolton residents should vote "yes" on the $493,000 proposal in Thursday's referendum, which runs from noon to 8 p.m. at Community Hall.

The school addition could be the best bargain Bolton will get in this century. Although the project will cost nearly half a million dollars, Bolton's share is just $138,000. The state will pay the rest.

The project is a pared-down version of a proposal rejected by voters in 1984. Besides its smaller scale, the 1986 plan differs significantly in that it is the result of a nine-month fact-finding study by a 24-member, nonpartisan citizens' committee.

The committee found that existing high school spaces devoted to the library, special education classroom and computer lab are substandard. The library doesn't meet state requirements; special education students meet in a half-sized classroom; corrective and remedial reading classes take place in a windowless office; and it is difficult to use computers because they are housed in a cubicle attached to the library.

To correct the situation, and provide adequate facilities for the next 15 years, the committee recommended a 2,800-square-foot addition, renovation of one classroom, and conversion of the existing library to two classrooms. The total $493,000 price tag includes all necessary equipment and hardware.

In 1984, there is some opposition to a high school addition. Some people, ignoring the changing curriculum and the need for excellence in education, continue to wrongly believe that an addition is not warranted because the high school was designed, more than two decades ago, for more students than ever will be enrolled.

Others, while not opposing the plan, are concerned that the proposal is not enough to handle the building boom that could result from the improvement of highways in eastern Connecticut. But the extent of such a boom is unpredictable, and the design of the high school addition could easily provide for future expansion.

Proponents of the project have made a good case for its approval. The citizens' committee has provided all the data necessary to make an informed decision. And if Bolton voters heed those facts and figures, they will have no choice but to vote "yes" in Thursday's referendum.

The library-media center is needed now, and for the future. A vote for the project will be a vote for excellence in education. Bolton's students are worth it.

Use the process, but don't abuse it

To the Editor: As I participate in the local Democratic Party gubernatorial nomination process, I am becoming concerned as I watch the emotions on both sides appear to take control.

Yes, there is a threat to the future of the Democratic Party. It is not the situation that exists, but rather how each side participates in it.

In this contest both sides believe they are fighting fairly and that the other is not. Who is right? Both sides believe they are and only God truly knows who really is.

The Democratic Party is good. Its basic belief is that people should be free and that all citizens deserve equal rights. Interpretations on how this is done may differ, but basically this is the core.

Those in the formal section of the Democratic Party believe the fight is exactly fair as the other side will be labeled "endorsed." However, it is the contest that exists and our main concentration should not be on who wins, but rather on "fighting" fairly.

The petition for a primary goes out, the Democratic registrar of voters reviews it, the primary happens and the people decide. This is the process.

As this contest goes on it should be remembered, by both sides, that it is more important how one wins than if it wins. One side should not justify any type of counter-action to action performed by the other side if it does not interpret as being fair. How it ends is very important. Both sides must be ready to support the final winner of this contest and go on to a Democratic victory in November.

The American right of freedom in selection of government is never special. It should be used and abused.

Science winners deserve publicity

To the Editor:

Recently the Manchester Herald ran a photo of three of the winners of the Assumption Junior High School science fair. Actually there were seven winners, some of whom went on to the state finals at Quinnipiac College.

A photo of all seven was taken by your photographer Gary Tucker but not used due to the space limitations. More than three children can be in a photo. How this differs from a team photo is a complete mystery. At least 90 percent of the Herald's subscribers take the paper for the local coverage and shouldn't be shortchanged.

When asked for permission of this mini-photo policy, a subscriber should be given a reasonable explanation and not belligerent excuses.

For the record the winners of the science fair were: Eighth grade: Stephanie Reichart, first; Karen Mitchell, second; Kelly Keane, third; and Jennifer Moran, Daniel Langer, Melissa Barkadale, Christopher Behlke, Kim Stoebel, Susan

'Yes' vote good for Bolton kids

To the Editor:

The voters of Bolton have the opportunity to make a real difference in the facilities available for learning at Bolton High School when they vote Thursday in the referendum about the library-media center addition.

As a member of the LMC Citizens Advisory Committee I could see that the present facilities are outdated when compared to needs of the student preparing for the information age. A "yes" vote will make a real difference by providing adequate tools for the students and the teachers.

I believe that the LMC addition will be used enthusiastically by all involved and that it should be accorded a top priority by the voters of Bolton.

Terrorism nothing new to Khadafy

WASHINGTON — A series of State Department cables disclose the far-ranging, Libyan-sponsored acts of terrorism and subversion that aroused the Reagan administration's ire against Libyan troublemaker Moammar Khadafy.

The cables covered five years of incidents, from the Italian island of Sardinia to the deserts of Sudan — each one chronicled in detail by American Embassy officials in the countries targeted by Khadafy and his assassins. A 1981 report by the State Department's intelligence and research bureau, which had been classified Secret, attempted to sum up what was then known about Khadafy and to share this information with U.S. embassies.

"Libya has been an active supporter of international terrorism since at least 1972," the intelligence analysis noted, citing evidence that Khadafy had "targeted several world leaders" and carried out assassinations of Libyan exiles and dissidents in Europe and the Middle East.

"Khadafy's CURRENT FOCUS is on subversion of neighboring North African states," the report warned. It specified that Sudan, Niger, Mali and Chad "have been among his targets."

The intelligence experts estimated that Khadafy had spent "hundreds of millions in support of international terrorism since the early 1970s." Among the disruptive actions Khadafy's oil millions financed were "operational assistance" to subversive militants, provision of safe houses and weapons, the use of Libyan embassies "as support bases for terrorist operations," and the sharing of intelligence.

Interestingly, the 1981 report noted that Libya also "provided false documentation for a variety of terrorists" — exactly what it was accused of doing for the terrorists who attacked the Rome and Vienna airport last December.

Reports from U.S. embassies in the next few years confirmed the 1981 intelligence warning.

HERE ARE SOME HIGHLIGHTS of these cables, which were obtained under the Freedom of Information Act by our associate Lucette Lagarde:

• In July 1982, the Madrid embassy learned of a Libyan plot to assassinate Saudi Arabia's King Fahd. "The group which would carry out the murder had access, through a U.S. agency intimately connected with the CIA, to the Saudi royal family's security measures," the embassy cabled.

• In March 1984, the embassy in Amman, Jordan, reported on a plot to destroy the Jordanian embassy in Libya. The cable said the Jordanian prime minister had provided details about the planned attack.

• In December 1982, the embassy in Rome reported a Libyan plot to help "separate Sardinia from Italy." Fifteen Sardinians had been arrested in the conspiracy. An Italian political party was implicated, as was "a Libyan by the name of Geri Mehad Tabet, currently at large, with whom the separatists apparently had contact in October 1981."

"The Libyan government was to supply money for the breakaway militants, who planned to undertake a number of ambitious acts of sabotage at airports and a NATO military base... (and) to kidnap an American military officer."

In June 1984, a Libyan airline employee gunned down a Libyan-born shop-owner in downtown Athens. The victim, who survived, was the publisher of an anti-Khadafy paper. Three other Libyans in Greece were killed the following month.

• In July 1984, the embassy in Khartoum, Sudan, reported a plot by Libyan-backed terrorists to assassinate then-President Gaafar Nimeiry and blow up the American Embassy and other targets. The plotters were caught and confessed that their Sudanese revolutionary movement was led by "a Libyan hireling."

Pentagon watch
When Congress passed a law in 1980 requiring ex-military personnel to report their employment with defense contractors to discourage favoritism among old service buddies, a sponsor of the bill remarked: "Sunshine is a great disinfectant." Unfortunately, the Pentagon's less than enthusiastic enforcement of the law has produced an environment more suited to mushroom-growth than disinfecting. Only 13.6 percent of former Army personnel comply with the law, according to a General Accounting Office investigation. About 18 percent of former Navy and Marine Corps people comply, while some 60 percent of ex-Air Force employees do.

GOP leaders continue talks

HARTFORD — The top leaders of the Republican majorities in the House and Senate met in a closed session Tuesday to try to iron out differences between the two chambers over spending levels in the fiscal year that begins July 1.

House Republicans have endorsed a $4.34 billion spending package, while the Senate's Republican majority has called for cutting another $80 million to allow for up to $100 million in tax cuts in the new budget year.

The meeting of the top leaders was held late Tuesday, and Senate Majority Leader Reginald J. Smith, R-New Hartford, said he did not expect any final decisions until at least today.

The $4.34 billion budget endorsed by House Republicans is about $72 million less than the budget proposed by Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill, but also about 9 percent over current spending. That is two percent more than the Senate leaders are willing to spend.

Ospina funeral is Saturday

STRATFORD — The funeral for Alberto Ospina, the Stratford resident killed in the explosion aboard a TWA jet on April 2, will be at 10 a.m. Saturday at St. James Church.

Raymond Piatey, owner of Piatey Family Home in Stratford, said today that the burial will be at the Gate of Heaven in Trumbull. Piatey said he expects the body to arrive on Thursday.

Four people were killed after a bomb exploded on the jet, ripping the side of the Boeing 727 liner.

Two indicted for tax fraud

BRIDGEPORT — A federal grand jury has returned a seven-count tax evasion indictment against two executives of a Stamford air conditioning firm, U.S. Attorney Stanley A. Twardy Jr. said.

Anthony Cerulli, 42, of Ridgefield and John F. McCormack Jr., 36, of Monroe allegedly diverted to themselves checks for work done by Landmark Air Systems, Twardy said Tuesday.

It convicted on all seven counts, each of the two faces up to 35 years in prison and $70,000 in fines.

Melet defendant free on bail

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — Antonio Camacho Negron, one of 19 people charged in the 1983 Wells Fargo robbery in West Hartford, Conn., was released from the Metropolitan Correctional Center in New York after posting a $150,000 bond.

In a telephone call shortly after his release Tuesday, Camacho said he would return to Puerto Rico this weekend. He was the sixth of 16 arrested on a federal grand jury indictment to support bases for terrorist operations, and the sharing of intelligence.

Camacho was arrested March 21 near his home in Rincon, in the western part of Puerto Rico, after the grand jury handed down a new indictment, increasing the charges against the original 16 and charging three additional people.

Governor says surplus shows unexpected leap

By Mark A. Dupuis
United Press International

HARTFORD — Gov. William A. O'Neill announced today that "new found" wealth has unexpectedly pushed the state's estimated budget surplus up to more than $222 million.

O'Neill said extraordinary tax collections and other factors have pushed the surplus up to $222.7 million, about $75 million higher than the last official estimate released just a week ago Tuesday.

O'Neill proposed using the unexpected bonanza to create a fund to help cities and towns hold the line on local property taxes and for between $40 million and $50 million in state tax cuts.

The unexpected jump in the estimated surplus throws a new twist into efforts by the Legislature to rework O'Neill's proposed budget and come up with a spending plan for the fiscal year that begins July 1.

The Republican-controlled Legislature has been working to reduce the budget proposed in February by the Democratic governor and to cut state taxes by up to $100 million in the coming fiscal year.

Until today, O'Neill had opposed any major state tax cuts, recommending instead an increase in state aid to cities and towns to help hold the line on local property taxes.

While saying he now favors $40 million or so in state tax cuts, O'Neill proposed pumping the bulk of the new-found surplus money into a trust fund to help provide money for property tax relief through 1990.

The $125 million fund would provide grants for property tax relief beginning Sept. 1 and annually thereafter through Sept. 1, 1990.

If their legislative Republicans don't take advantage of this kind of proposition with this new-found wealth... I think it would be a serious mistake for the state of Connecticut," O'Neill said.

There was no immediate reaction from Republican leaders as to whether they would consider added aid to cities and towns or how the new surplus estimate would affect their tax and budget proposals.

O'Neill said he learned only Monday of the unexpected surge in tax revenues and the other factors that pushed the estimated surplus for the current fiscal year to $222.7 million.

Just last Tuesday, the governor's administration projected the surplus at $147.3 million.

O'Neill said the jump in the surplus resulted from extraordinary corporate profits that pushed up tax revenues, tax assessments and other factors, including lower oil prices.

Protest continues

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Yale students occupying a campus shantytown erected to protest university investment policies spent a rainy day planning events for the rest of the week.

Small groups of students gathered in the plastic and cardboard tent-like structures Tuesday to discuss actions they would take by the weekend, when university officials have said the shanties must come down.

"We're determined to keep it up until we determine when to take it down," said Matthew Kimble, a junior from Eugene, Ore.

The students want Yale to sell its estimated $300 million in stocks in businesses that do business in South Africa. They are against the South African government's apartheid policies, which discriminate against blacks and people of mixed race.

Law School student Beth Pardo, of Shoreham, N.Y., said the protesters were making a large rally on Friday and a "major escalation" of action Saturday, when Yale wants the shanties down.

Moore didn't plan to be a lawbreaker

By Lyda Phillips
United Press International

BRIDGEPORT — The co-author of "The Happy Hooker" says he did not go into a tax-fraud scam which may have cost the U.S. government $37 million as a lawbreaker but when he found out it was wrong he "still went along with it."

"Needless to say I'm sorry it ever came to this," author Robin Moore, who also wrote "The Green Berets" and "The French Connection," said in a telephone interview from his home in affluent Westport.

Moore faces up to five years in prison after pleading guilty to tax fraud Monday before Chief U.S. District Judge T. F. Gilroy Daily in Bridgeport.

U.S. Attorney Stanley A. Twardy Jr. said Moore provided tax shelters for wealthy individuals by artificially inflating the amount he expected to receive in royalties for paperback books.

"I never went into this thing as a lawbreaker," said Moore, 61. "I can't say I never realized what was going on, because I did and still went along with it."

Investigators said when the books did not make as much money as "The Happy Hooker," which sold 9 million copies, the investors were able to take huge depreciation deductions.

"If they were all 'Happy Hookers' they would" have made as much as the promoters claimed they would, Moore said.

"My offense was that I did not stop the promoters from overvaluing the books," some of which were collaborations with unknown authors, he said.

"There are not that many bookers around who can do the trick," Moore said. "None of them was able to reach the heights, or depths, that Xavier Hollander was able to."

Hollander was the call girl whose story was told in "The Happy Hooker."

O'Neill backers plan delegate challenges

HARTFORD (AP) — Backers of Gov. William A. O'Neill are plotting to win 19 convention delegates now committed to challenger Toby Moffett in four towns and perhaps 15 delegates in three more towns.

The Moffett campaign says O'Neill must be getting nervous if challenges are being mounted for such small numbers of delegates.

O'Neill Chairman Richard F. Schneller said Tuesday that challenges would "very likely" be held in Clinton, New Canaan, Middlebury and Simsbury. He said three other towns — Ridgefield, Canton and New Milford — were "still in the maybe category."

In each of those towns, Moffett won all of the delegates in last week's Democratic caucuses. In all, 34 delegates from those towns will go to the July nominating convention. That represents less than a percent of the total 1,349 delegates.

Challenges to last week's results, in the form of delegate primaries, will be settled on May 20.

"In all cases, the desire to primary has come from within the town organizations," Schneller said. "We really haven't urged any town to primary. It was really spontaneous on their part."

The left that the caucuses were stacked or very close or that people were brought to the caucuses that normally don't come out.

Those people, Schneller said, "really were not representative of the majority of the Democrats in the community."

In last week's caucuses and town committee sessions O'Neill won 146 of the delegates to Moffett's 134, according to O'Neill's figures. Moffett claims he won 164 delegates. He needs 270, or 20 percent of the delegates, to qualify for a primary against O'Neill in September to decide the party's gubernatorial nominee.

Marc Caplan, Moffett's campaign manager, said he was not worried about O'Neill's challenges.

"We're ready for them," Caplan said.

Toby has more to defeat than just O'Neill

Toby Moffett's biggest enemy, as he continues his struggle to be the Democratic candidate for governor this year, isn't Bill O'Neill, the fellow who has the job and wants to keep it.

Moffett's problem is the perception, planted firmly with the public and fanned by media coverage, of O'Neill as unstoppable now because of the huge bulge in delegates he won in party caucuses and town committee meetings.

That is a formidable psychological hurdle for Moffett, and he recognized it last week when he summoned reporters to his New Haven headquarters for a few post-mortems on the delegate selection process that seemed to work so well for the governor.

"It could have demoralized our people," said Moffett, referring to big headlines that trumpeted O'Neill's performance.

But Moffett refuses to play dead. Instead, he told the assembled reporters in his third-floor war room in all places, the Palace Theater building, that he has O'Neill right where he wants him now, all pleased with himself and complacent.

"HARTFORD HAS BECOME the capital of self-delusion," said Moffett. "I love it." And the gift of Moffett's arguments, as he talked about challenging O'Neill delegate slates in a few carefully-selected towns in primaries on May 20, is that he'll win enough of them to assure him the 20 percent he needs at the July state convention to qualify for a statewide primary in September for the nomination.

Capitol Comments

September primary will give that bloc of Democrats the opportunity to run someone else. In this scenario, Moffett is the someone else.

And with respect to this year's election, Moffett was also citing, indirectly, that lovable old philosopher from the Bronx, Prof. Lawrence Berra, who said, "It ain't over 'til it's over."

Moffett expects to make a maximum effort, starting next week, to challenge O'Neill's total of 1,146 delegates by chipping away at such places as Waterbury and Stamford where all 60 seats went, in each case, to O'Neill, and New Britain, where O'Neill picked up all 40.

THE CHALLENGER'S TEAM is made up, among others, of former House Speaker Ernie Abate in Stamford, Town Chairman Tom Gahan in Waterbury and State Rep. Irene Favreau in New Britain. He'll be counting, perhaps, on getting back seven seats in Willimantic, where Dennis O'Brien is the Moffett crew leader.

Moffett was delighted at seeing his backers win all eight delegate seats in Simsbury, the hometown of O'Neill brain-truster Jim Wade and party Vice Chairwoman Arline Bidwell. Moffett said one of the two seats in Essex was his, though that is where former State Sen. Dick Schneller, a key O'Neill supporter, lives.

The challenger's big point, in talking with reporters, was that he never expected to win many delegates in the first go-around. In fact, said Moffett, he did much better than he ever anticipated. D-Day, he said, will be May 20.

By this time in the press conference, the confidence was fairly running right out of Moffett's shoes. He was lusty for the May 20 showdown and predicting, as he has all along, "There will be a primary in September."

HE WILL NEED 270 delegate votes in his pocket by then. He is woefully short of that total now. And he is given to confessing, from time to time, that on May 20 a place like Waterbury "could decide the whole thing."

But the public (translation: the electorate) perception is tough for Moffett just now. In the same way, Republicans could be revising their attitudes toward their candidates in the aftermath of a Fairfield primary where Gerald Labriola did so well and rivals Dick Bozzuto and Julie Belaga did not.

The Republicans have another shot at establishing their reactions when six towns in the Hartford area ballot on Super Tuesday, May 6. Moffett's second chance comes on May 20, and will be no less an encounter with feelings that are influenced by the early limited primaries and caucuses.

Defense challenges confession at trial

Morrissey said today that Crenshaw interrupted him while he was being read his rights and supplied the ones that Morrissey didn't recite.

Morrissey's testimony was part of proceedings held on Kelly's motion to suppress the confession and records of the interview. Crenshaw is accused of suffocating his 10-month-old daughter, Dale-Lyn, on April 20, 1985, while she slept in their Olcott Street apartment.

Crenshaw and the child's mother, Susan Lard, were both advised of their constitutional rights when they first brought Dale-Lyn to Manchester Memorial Hospital the evening of April 20. Sgt. Roy Abbie testified Tuesday, Abbie said he and officer John Fitchell questioned the two at the hospital emergency room after being called by doctors.

"At issue are three other interviews held with Crenshaw later that evening and a confession obtained at Crenshaw's apartment in the early morning hours of April 21," Morrissey said.

Morrissey, who conducted all four interviews with the defendant, told Assistant State's Attorney Dennis O'Connor that Crenshaw was not threatened and was advised he was not under arrest and could leave at any time.

However, under cross-examination by Kelly, Morrissey said Crenshaw was not advised of his specific constitutional rights before the first three interviews, even though the detective considered Crenshaw to be a suspect and had tape recorded part of the first interview.

Crenshaw's "degree of being a suspect increased" during the successive interviews, Morrissey said. "But he was a suspect no less."

Morrissey testified that Crenshaw admitted to pressing Dale-Lyn's face into a mattress during the first interview held at police headquarters at about 7:30 p.m., but only after asking that

Kevin Girlsold, 4, of New Britain, adopts a grim look as he poses for a police mug shot. The occasion was a recent tour of Central Connecticut State University's police headquarters given to the New Britain Cooperative Nursery School.

Crenshaw signed the written statement confessing to murdering Dale-Lyn at his apartment, Morrissey said. Crenshaw was advised of all but two of his constitutional rights before the confession, and Morrissey write the confession after telling police he could not write at that time, the detective said.

Morrissey said work on obtaining a warrant for Crenshaw's arrest was not begun before the written confession was obtained. Crenshaw was arrested at 5:30 a.m. on April 21.

Testimony on the pretrial motion continued today, with a decision expected later from Superior Court Judge Francis R. Quinn.

Police hold Hartford man after turning up warrant

A Hartford man was charged Tuesday with sixth-degree larceny and criminal impersonation in connection with the attempted theft of two fishing reels from the Sears store in the Manchester Parkade, police said today.

Julian Marcellus Odum, 32, was stopped by two Sears store security guards at about 8 p.m. Tuesday, as he allegedly walked out of the store with two fishing reels under his jacket, police said.

Police said that when they arrived on the scene, Odum told them his name was Lorenzo Shelton. He was held at police headquarters because he had no identification, police said.

level," the senators said.

In a response to the letter, Moffett's office said in a prepared statement: "We're not going to let a handful of polls in the clubhouse stop 700,000 Democrats from deciding whom they want to see as governor."

Meals need manager

Although hot meals for senior citizens at Mayfair Gardens will continue to be available as long as there are volunteers, the program currently lacks a director, town Human Services Director Thomas H. Fergusson said today.

Fire sharing concept praised by directors

By Alex Girelli
Associate Editor

The idea of sharing the town-owned fire station in Buckland with the Eighth Utilities District won general approval today from Mayor Barbara Weinberg and four other town directors.

Weinberg said she campaigned for re-election last year on a platform that included sharing the station and still feels the idea should be explored.

Weinberg said, however, that she does not think details of a sharing proposal can be worked out before April 18, the date by which Eighth District President Walter Joyner said the district must decide whether to go forward with construction of its own firehouse — one that would be only two doors away from the town's station on Tolland Turnpike.

"If both sides act in good faith, something can be worked out," Weinberg added.

Other directors who backed the idea of sharing today were Democratic Stephen T. Cassano and Deputy Mayor Peter DiRosa, and Republicans Donna Mercier and Thomas H. Fergusson.

"Talk of sharing came up again this week after Joyner said Tuesday that he and other district directors would be receptive to a proposal under which the town's Town Director Stephen T. Penny reiterated his support for consolidation of the town and Eighth Utilities District during a speech to members of the local Kiwanis Club Tuesday afternoon.

About 20 members of the club attended the luncheon at the Manchester Country Club, where Penny, who leads the Democratic majority on the board, said the town has been losing vital tax dollars because of the existence of industrial and commercial growth has been in northern Manchester.

"We are losing today $175,000 in tax revenue for our fire department in respect to the Buckland Industrial Park," Penny said. He said that the town paid to help build the industrial park in northern

Nordiques are wary of the hot Whalers

Mike Liut was flat on his back here for the Whalers, but they expect him to stand up and take charge against the Quebec Nordiques as the teams open their best-of-five playoff series tonight in Quebec.

QUEBEC (UPI) — The Quebec Nordiques enter the opening game of their Adams Division playoff against the Hartford Whalers tonight with a blend of confidence and fear.

"We're scared, but confident," said Quebec defenseman Pat Price. "Being overconfident wouldn't do us any good. We're going to play prudent, disciplined hockey, but we'll play our style."

"We have home-ice advantage and we're going to exploit that. We know we're facing a very good team, but we have enough talent to win," Price added.

Quebec coach Michel Bergeron said his first-place Adams Division team will likely have butterflies before they step on the ice against the fourth-place Whalers.

"My players know what they're up against and they're ready," he said.

The Nordiques face a jinx in that the team finishing first in the Adams Division during the regular season has never advanced to the conference playoffs in the division's five-year history.

Former Hartford defenseman Risto Siltanen, who came to Quebec in a trade for forward John Anderson last month, said the Nordiques are in for a difficult series.

"It won't be a piece of cake," he said. "When Hartford is hot, they're hard to beat. I know the guys on the team and they're unpredictable. If goalie Mike Liut is hot, the whole team is hot."

Quebec may have to face the Whalers without No. 1 goalie Clint Malarchuk, who was hit in the face mask by a shot from Boston Bruins' defenseman Reed Larson last Saturday. The mask cracked and a piece of wire from it scratched the goalie's left eye.

The Nordiques are missing defenseman David Shaw and Normand Rochefort with injuries. Defenseman Robert Picard is questionable because of a shoulder injury suffered 10 days ago.

The Whalers enter the series with an injury to rookie defenseman Dana Murray, who suffered a bruised shoulder in practice last Saturday.

Hartford has been the hottest team in the league since March 1 with a record of 12-2. Quebec was a respectable 9-2-1 at that stretch.

Hartford coach Jack Evans says the Whalers might be a playoff surprise.

"Goalkeeping will be the key and we feel we have more stability there," he said. "We've got three good lines and a good defense."

The teams split the eight games they played this season, with each winning twice on the other's home ice.

"We've got to shut down their big guns," Hartford forward Kevin Dineen said. "We'll have to play tough defensively. People may feel we're the underdogs, but we don't feel that way. The way we finished the season, we're one of the hottest teams in the league."

Yankees emotional, win opener for Piniella

By John Nelson
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — They promised, nearly to a man, to tone it down. But on this opening day, there was a lot of emotion among the New York Yankees.

They had won on Opening Day for the first time since 1981, and they had given former teammate Lou Piniella his first victory as Yankees manager.

Catcher Butch Wynegar hit a three-run homer and Ron Guidry pitched the first five innings to earn his first opening-day triumph in seven tries as the Yankees defeated Kansas City 4-2 on Tuesday. Guidry had to leave with a slight strain of his right calf, which was not thought to be serious.

"We've been built up as winners this year," said relief pitcher Dave Righetti, who had to work out of trouble in the final two innings to preserve the victory. "And we needed to get off to a good start. We were pumped up in the clubhouse before the game. That's the first time since I've been with the ballclub it's been like that."

"After the game, I got the ball from Butch and gave it to Lou. There was a lot of emotion out there today, but I'm sure we'll get back to normal."

Wynegar homered in the second inning off Royals left-hander Bud Black, making his third straight opening-day start. Dave Winfield walked and Dale Berra singled before Wynegar's homer.

"It was very nice to win because of Louie P.," Wynegar said. "He's got his first win under his belt, and we'll cherish this one for a while before we go out after them again."

"Opening Day in front of 55,000 people, of course it was a big thrill," Wynegar said. "I usually don't show so much emotion, but I was screaming at that ball to get out. That's all I wanted."

The switch-hitting Wynegar hit a 3-2 pitch from Black deep into the left field seats. The homer was his first as a right-hander since he connected in the Yankees home opener last year.

"It was the right pitch but the wrong location — up too high," said Righetti, who had a pitch in somebody's glove, but it wound up in the seats.

The loss was the first in an opener for Black and the seventh in the Royals' past 10 openers on the road.

The only Royals runs scored in the fourth inning against Guidry when Hal McRae hit a two-run homer. In the fifth inning, Guidry felt a twinge in his calf on a ground ball hit hard to first base by Jim Sundberg. Yankees first baseman Don Mattingly wound up covering the base himself.

"I felt a little spasm in it," Guidry said. "It's a light strain that I've had for the last two weeks or so. It's one of those things that I want to make sure it doesn't get hurt. Eventually, it'll be all right."

Guidry, 22-6 for the Yankees last year but 0-2 with four opening-day

Yankees emotional, win opener for Piniella

no-decisions going into this start, said he was glad to finally break through.

"I just wish I could have pitched a little more," Guidry said. "We have a history of bad starts on opening day. I didn't want to go out there and pitch a bad game and make the club fight an uphill battle. I wanted to make sure whoever came in after me came in even."

The Yankees picked up an insurance run in the fifth inning on Willie Randolph's bloop RBI single. Rod Scary worked 2-1-3 innings in relief of Guidry, leaving with one out in the eighth after hitting Lonnie Smith with a pitch.

Righetti got Willie Wilson to hit into a fielder's choice, but the Yankees lefty then walked George Brett. Righetti got out of that inning when Hal McRae bounced into a fielder's choice.

Frank White led off the Royal ninth with a single. After Steve Balboni lined out, Darryl Motley and Cardinals manager Whitey Herzog were asle at first and White went to second when Meacham single-handedly Motley's grounder. Sundberg then singled to load the bases. Righetti got out of the mess by striking out pinch-hitter Greg Pryor and Smith.

"Only one pitch made the ballgame. Whether it came in the second or the ninth inning, that was the ballgame," Royals Manager Dick Howser said. "We still had a chance, but we couldn't put two hits together back-to-back in the last two innings. Give credit to their pitching."

And Brett thought some credit might also have to go to the Yankees' new manager.

"Every time they get a new manager, they seem to win," Brett said. "Maybe it inspires them. But they do have a good ballclub."

Stellar pitching performances light up the senior circuit

By Steve Irollo
United Press International

Stellar pitching performances — three of them in openers — lit up the National League Tuesday night.

In St. Louis, John Tudor and Chicago's Rick Sutcliffe both turned in shining efforts in the Cardinals' 2-1 victory. San Diego's Dave Dravecky and the Dodgers' Orel Hershiser duelled in Los Angeles, with the Padre left-hander prevailing 1-0 on a brilliant three-hitter. In Atlanta's opener, Rick Mahler's sparkling, hurling a five-hit shutout over Montreal.

Finally, the league's brightest star last year, New York's Dwight Gooden, struck out six and scattered six hits, going the route in the Mets' 4-2 triumph over the Pirates.

"Ironically, one of the evening's finest outings was in a losing effort. Sutcliffe, who was put on the disabled list three times last year and made only 20 starts, gave up just two singles to the Cardinals, and still lost."

"Winning pitcher John Tudor safely put his performance from the seventh game of last year's World Series behind him. Pitching in front of a sellout crowd of 68,672, Tudor scattered five hits in his first opening day start."

Tudor was shelved for five runs in three innings by Kansas City of Game 7 en route to the Royals' winning the title.

Tudor, 21-1 last year, has won his last 12 regular-season games and his last 17 decisions at home.

"I just looked at it like another game," Tudor said. "Last year was last year. I didn't even think about it. I just stayed within myself. I had a good fastball and I kept it down."

The Cardinals scored both their runs in the fourth inning. Tommy Herr, who walked, never stopped at second when Jack Clark cracked a batted, but single to left-centerfield and beat Cubs centerfielder Bob Dernier's throw to third. Clark took second on the throw, and both scored on the only other St. Louis hit — Andy Van Slyke's single to right.

"We had a walk and two singles. A real Big Mac attack," said Cardinals manager Whitey Herzog. "But Sutcliffe did have some good stuff."

The Cubs spoiled Tudor's shutout bid in the seventh when Jody Davis scored Keith Moreland with a sacrifice fly.

Padres 1, Dodgers 0

At Los Angeles, Hershiser was the loser in a similar duel. His 11-game regular season winning streak — dating back to last July — was snapped, as Terry Kennedy's RBI single provided the only support Dravecky would require. Dravecky allowed a single in the fourth and then retired 15 batters in a row.

Hershiser, who lost for the first time at home since Sept. 9, 1984, gave up nine hits — seven in the first three innings.

Braves 6, Expos 0

At Atlanta, 1985 NL home run king Dale Murphy hit a two-run homer and Mahler went all the way for an opening day victory to power the Braves. Starter Bryn Smith took the loss for the Expos.

Mets 4, Pirates 2

In Pittsburgh, Keith Hernandez drove in two runs with a single and a double, to back Gooden's complete-game. The loss spoiled the Pirates home opener and the debut of the new owners, front office, and manager Jim Leyland. Veteran Rick Reuschel, who gave up three runs on five hits over six innings, took the loss.

Giants 8, Astros 3

In Houston, Nolan Ryan was a loser allowing homers to rookie Will Clark (in his first major-league at bat), Jeff Leonard, and Bob Brenly. David Maldonado's three-run triple in seventh broke a 3-3 deadlock and chased Ryan. Mike Krutkov won six innings for the victory, and Mark Davis picked up the save.

Picks here are the Mets, Reds, Tigers and Twins

The Major League baseball season swung into action Monday.

"That's one of the rites of spring. Another ritual, time-worn but time-tested, is for the 'experts' to predict the four division winners. The so-called experts are more times incorrect than on the mark, but it's a fun thing regardless. So, here goes."

THE CONSENSUS AMONG THE WRITERS in Florida was that the New York Mets are prohibitive favorites in the National League East Division. Being a Mets fan, that scares me to death. It's just like the Sports Illustrated jinx. You like being on the cover, except you don't like the consequences. The only one of note who has avoided such a predicament is cocky Larry Bird, but he plays in his own league and never comes down to earth every once in a while to play with the rest of the boys in the NBA.

The Mets are picked because they have the "Doc", Dwight Gooden, and a supporting cast that includes Darryl Strawberry, Keith Hernandez, Gary Carter, Ron Darling, etc. What the "experts" haven't talked about, or are unwilling to mention as negative, is the Mets' untestedness at third base, shortstop and second base, and the problems that could crop up in the bullpen. Neither Ray Knight nor Howard Johnson have proven they can do the job at third base offensively. And Rafael Santana at shortstop is hardly a name that will scare the rest of the league. Second base appears more settled with Wally Backman and Tim Lincecum, and a supporting cast that includes Darryl Strawberry, Keith Hernandez, Gary Carter, Ron Darling, etc. What the "experts" haven't talked about, or are unwilling to mention as negative, is the Mets' untestedness at third base, shortstop and second base, and the problems that could crop up in the bullpen. Neither Ray Knight nor Howard Johnson knows he's a liability when he tries to catch a baseball. So why is everyone picking the Mets? Including yours truly.

Reverse psychology would dictate picking someone else, but how can I go against my boys. I can't. The Mets do have chinks in the armor, but so does everyone else in the NL East. Can the Cubs' starting pitching staff hold up? Can John Tudor repeat his '85 campaign for the Cardinals? Who is going to replace Andruw Jones in the NL East? Can the Cubs' starting pitching staff hold up? Can John Tudor repeat his '85 campaign for the Cardinals? Who is going to replace Andruw Jones in the NL East? Who is on the mound for the Expos?

And can anyone play the game of baseball on the Pirates?

The pick, maybe reluctantly, is the Mets.

THE OTHER DIVISIONS will be synopsized briefly. The Dodgers should be the odds-on pick in the NL West, especially with their starting pitching rotation that includes Orel Hershiser and Fernando Valenzuela, but the loss for three months of Pedro Guerrero is immeasurable.

The Reds, who were shown a year ago by feisty player-manager Pete Rose that they can win, are the up-and-coming boys on the block. Watch out for the San Francisco Giants. But the pick in the West is Cincinnati.

The Kansas City Royals are always expertly handled by Dick Howser in the AL West Division and their pitching staff is young and improving. But so, too, are the Minnesota Twins. An established Bert Blyleven, with Manager Ray Miller showing the rest of the youngsters how to do it, will surprise all. Oakland and Kansas City will make it an exciting race.

The American League East is always fascinating. How can it not be with George Steinbrenner, the irrepressible New York owner, still on the scene? There are those pointing the finger at his Yankees as the favorites. But there are too many questions, particularly with the Yanks' aging starting pitching staff. That's why 47-year-old Phil Niekro, who can still pitch, was released and a youngster, 25-year-old Bob Tewksbury, was given a slot in the starting rotation.

Look for the Yankees to contend, but look for the Detroit Tigers to bounce back and overtake the Toronto Blue Jays for the AL East Division crown.

The American League will exhibit some exciting baseball inasmuch as the Texas Rangers and Milwaukee Brewers have junked their aging pitching staffs and opted to go with some youngsters. It's risky but there is a precedent they're following. Just check the New York Mets of 1984.

Coupon file needs an ID

DEAR MARTIN: I am writing in the hope that my letter will help someone else avoid the loss that I suffered last week when I accidentally left my coupon file in the supermarket. I had several hundred dollars worth of coupons, including a number of coupons for free products that I received from refunding. Unfortunately, I had never put my name and address on the file.

As soon as I returned home and realized I didn't have my coupon file, I called the supermarkets where I had just shopped. I was told that no file had been found. They took my name and phone number and said they would call me if it was found. The next day, I drove back to both stores, but no luck.

This morning, when I picked up the newspaper and turned to the supermarket advertisements, it really hurt to see the specials for which I had had so many coupons.

If I had put my personal identification on the file, I am sure an honest shopper would have called me or turned it in. I hope other shoppers can learn from my sad experience.

ELLEN KERR, ENON VALLEY, PA.

DEAR ELLEN: I know it really hurts to lose a coupon file, since so much time and effort goes into putting one together. I hope that every reader will follow your advice and check to make sure their names, addresses and phone numbers are on the files.

I know you feel that it is lost, but I think you should make one last effort to find the file. Try putting up "Lost Coupon File" signs on the bulletin boards at both supermarkets, and consider offering a reward.

On my coupon wallet underneath my address are the words "Reward if Found." I decided a long time ago that I would gladly pay the reward if I ever lost my wallet.

DEAR MARTIN: Good grief! I read your column about the companies that have decided not to send refund to post-office boxes, and now I believe I know why some of the refunds I have sent for never arrived.

I live in Sandgate, Vt., and, like residents of countless other small towns across the United States, we get our mail from the post office in a neighboring town. It used to be that our mail was addressed to us in Sandgate, but a few years ago the system changed.

Our mail is now addressed to us at "RR 1, Box..." in Arlington, Vt.

Except for the address, nothing has changed. Each day, my mail is delivered by the same postman and placed in my own private mailbox. This is a regular mailbox, not a mailbox rented for convenience.

Postal Services representatives and wrote about the companies denying refunds to consumers with post-office-box addresses. I did not consider the plight of shoppers with Rural Route addresses.

Letters like yours have brought this sorry state of affairs to my attention, and I will let the Postal Service know about it.

In the meantime, I would appreciate hearing from other Rural Route readers who, like yourself, believe they have missed out on manufacturer refund offers because their addresses included a post-office-box number.

Sweet kids sour on budget cuts

EDWARDSVILLE, Ill. (UPI) — Saying the budget cuts in higher education forced by the Gramm-Rudman law have left a sour taste in their mouths, students at Southern Illinois University plan to send the White House 10,000 lemons.

The lemons — 135 cases worth — were put on display Monday in the University Center. Signs near the crates urged students to "Send a Lemon to the White House" and "Send a Lemon to the White House."

"The Great Lemon Lobby" package likely will be shipped April 14 to the White House, Munit said.

"We were looking for some way to protest the Gramm-Rudman cuts. Letter-writing campaigns often prove futile. We decided to do this to create as much attention as possible," student Ray Munit said.

Lasagne is top choice of cooks who plan ahead

Microwave Kitchen
Marge Churchill

Lasagne is a family favorite. This hearty casserole can be made ahead of time and put into the microwave for later cooking and serving. What a bonus for the busy cook!

The traditional lasagne recipe required that the noodles be cooked before the sauce is assembled. Cooking the noodles in the microwave does not save time. We suggest that you follow the direction for cooking the noodles in the usual manner in boiling water on top of the stove.

For those of you who would like to try a less traditional method, two recipes have been developed for the microwave using uncooked lasagne noodles, straight out of the box.

Here are some hints for microwave lasagne. Check the size of the dish in which you plan to microwave your lasagne. Some microwave ovens will not hold a 2- or 3-quart rectangular dish. In that case, a large oval dish should be substituted.

When filling the dish, have all the ingredients ready before starting. The sauce should be bubbly hot. Pour one-third of the sauce into the bottom of the pan.

Place packages of broccoli in a 2-quart rectangular or oval dish. Microwave on high for 8 to 9 minutes. Drain and squeeze out moisture; discard liquid. Set aside broccini.

Place butter in a 2-quart bowl and microwave on high for 1 minute. Blend in flour and onion powder. Using a wire whisk, blend in milk. Whisking midway through cooking, microwave on high for 6 minutes; then microwave on 70% (medium-high) for 25 to 28 minutes. Let rest for 20 minutes before cutting for serving.

Cover with plastic wrap. Rotating 3 times during cooking, microwave on high for 6 minutes; then microwave on 70% (medium-high) for 25 to 28 minutes. Let rest, covered for 20 minutes before serving. Yields 6 to 8 servings.

The two lasagne recipes which follow use the traditional method of cooking the noodles before assembling the ingredients for the lasagne.

Cheese lover's lasagne
1 egg
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup cottage cheese
1/2 cup shredded carrot
1/2 cup chopped celery
1/2 cup chopped pimiento
1/2 cup chopped green pepper
1 package (10 ounces) chopped spinach, cooked, drained well
1 tablespoon flour
1 cup plain yogurt
1 can (10 1/2 ounces) condensed cream of onion soup
6 plain or whole-wheat lasagne noodles, cooked and well drained
8 ounces sliced sharp process American cheese
Butter 4-7-by-12-inch baking dish; set aside. In a medium bowl, beat egg. Stir in first amount of flour, cottage cheese, Parmesan cheese, carrot, celery, pimiento, green onion and well-drained cooked spinach; set aside. In a medium bowl, whisk second amount of flour into yogurt.

Whisk in soup, mixing well. In prepared baking dish, layer half of the noodles, then half of each of the cottage-cheese mixture, sharp process cheese and yogurt sauce. Repeat layers. Cover with vented plastic wrap. Microwave at 100% (high) for 15 to 20 minutes. Let rest for 10 minutes before serving. Yields 6 to 8 servings.

Advice

Invitation exceeds boundaries of taste

DEAR ABBY: My 7-year-old daughter (I'll call her Jessica) received a mailed invitation to a bridal shower. The bride-to-be is "Thelma" — a young woman who is marrying Jessica's father, whom I divorced when I learned that he and Thelma were having an affair.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Since Jessica doesn't drive yet, or do her own shopping, and I expected to purchase a shower gift for the bride and take Jessica to this event?

A little background: My husband met and fell in love with Thelma while he was commuting to work for his latest job change from Los Angeles to Newport Beach. Since I was not aware of the affair, I put our home on the market and moved to a few months, and we moved.

In less than a week, I learned about Thelma. I immediately moved back to Los Angeles, where my family, friends and career have always been. I also filed for divorce. I'll admit, I was burned up about selling our home and disrupting Jessica's school, plus bearing the expense of moving — both ways, since I wouldn't have moved in the first place had I known the score.

JESSICA'S DISGUSTED MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I have never recommended ignoring an invitation, but considering the tastelessness of this one, I am making an exception.

DEAR ABBY: We have seen letters in your column praising Worldwide Marriage Encounter; it offers weekend retreats for married couples who want to strengthen their marriages. Worldwide Marriage Encounter weekends are offered to couples through their churches and synagogues.

Please be fair, Abby, and acknowledge the existence of National Marriage Encounter. We are not affiliated with any specific church or faith and will accept any married couple whether they are churchgoers, into second marriages, or whatever.

We do not discriminate against mixed marriages, ethnic groups or anything else.

Father Gabriel Calvo, the founder of our movement, believes that all married couples should have the marriage encounter weekend experience, and so do we.

Anyone wanting information about National Marriage Encounter may write to: Chuck and Sandy Ogg, 4704 Jameson Place, Orlando, Fla. 32807, or Father Bob Leza, St. Joseph Church, Appleton, Wis. 54911.

THE LOPACKS, FOUNTAIN VALLEY, CALIF.

DEAR LOPACKS: Thanks for the information about National Marriage Encounter. It was news to me, and should be good news to couples who have no religious affiliations but who want the marriage encounter experience.

Readers, please send a self-addressed, stamped envelope, as this is a non-profit organization.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 27-year-old security guard. I live with my parents. (I'm not married.)

I have a seizure disorder, which is kept under control with medication, but that's not my problem. This is: In my work, I have to carry a pistol. I have a seizure from carrying a pistol, but my father won't let me carry a pistol. He is afraid I might hurt myself. I explained that I had an OK from my doctor, and if I don't carry a pistol, I could lose my job. Please tell me how to handle this problem.

LIKES MY JOB

DEAR LIKES: Explain to your father that your job requires you to carry a pistol, that you are competent to handle it and are very careful, so there's no need to worry.

See neurologist about bad headaches

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 17-year-old daughter, who seems to get a lot of headaches and tells me that at least twice a week everything goes black. One of my other children died recently of congenital heart disease, and towards the end, that poor child really had it rough from seizures, although all the tests showed no sign of epilepsy. Could the headaches be the start of something serious?

from frequent, severe headaches. I think she ought to be examined by a neurologist who can diagnose the cause of her headaches and suggest appropriate treatment.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Do you know what Sweet's Syndrome is? My doctor says I may have the start of it, but admits he knows little about it.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a healthy female, 26, with varicose veins. I wear support hose and exercise three to four times a week. Could you please explain the process of stripping the veins — what kind of doctor should I see? What are the pros and cons?

DEAR READER: Varicose stripping involves an incision at the bottom of the swollen vein, an incision at the top, introduction of a long instrument into the vein and a procedure to cut the vein. The incisions are then closed and allowed to heal. Infection and swelling are complications. The blood trapped in the leg must find alternative pathways to the heart. Therefore, until new channels open up to accept the flow of blood, the patient may experience pain and edema (fluid accumulation) of the leg. Unfortunately, new varicose veins may form.

Venous stripping can be performed by most qualified general surgeons. However, before you opt for the operation, first try elastic stockings (which are heavier than support hose) and leg elevation; this approach is safer and cheaper.

Elsie Turkis is queen at WATES ceremony

Elsie Turkis was crowned this year's queen at the 31st WATES annual banquet, which took place at Imperial Caterers in East Windsor Thursday.

Turkis, a Vernon resident, lost 29 pounds, more than any other member of the club.

Other top winners were Dorothy Hayman, 25 pounds; Esther Armstrong, 17 pounds; Elsie Mincicucci and Marion Nais, 16 pounds each; June Lee, 14 pounds; Alice McCavannah, 13 pounds; Kathryn Meschian, 12 pounds; Barbara Schwantor, 12 pounds; Frances Cone, 11 pounds and Evelyn Foglio, nine pounds.

Club members honored for maintaining their club goals included Rees Thomson, Elsie Brig-nano, Dorothy Langer, Harriet Zaturky, Florence Carlin, Nicky Savard and Alberta Norris.

Seventeen members were honored for perfect attendance. Special mention went to Elizabeth Pavelach, with 29 years' perfect attendance, and Alice McCavannah, with 22 years' perfect attendance.

Joyce Beebe won the club's eager beaver award and Florence Carlin won the club's founders' award.

Harvey Ward Jr. acted as master of ceremonies. WATES stands for Women's Association to Enjoy Slimming. The club meets on Tuesday nights at the Orange Hall, 72 E. Center St.

Theater puts off season

STRATFORD (AP) — The first full production season since the American Shakespeare Theater entered bankruptcy proceedings in 1982 will not take place for another year as management has scrapped the two plays that had been scheduled for this summer.

The theater's management decided last week to postpone its first full season to give work crews time to make vast renovations to the 31-year-old building.

The theater, which plays had in 1985 as the first permanent nest for Shakespearean productions outside the Shakespeare Memorial Theater in England, had planned a summer run of two productions — "Hamlet" and "The Taming of the Shrew" — starting in July.

The theater filed for reorganization of its finances under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code in 1982. A plan for the repayment of nearly $1 million in debts was approved by a federal bankruptcy judge in November 1984.

A spokeswoman for the theater said Tuesday that the plays had been canceled because that renovations are completed in time for a spring 1987 student season. The decision was "not taken lightly" and was made by the theater's board of directors last week, the spokeswoman, Erica Rosenfeld, said.

In 1984 and 1985, the theater did produce its student audience seasons, and Ms. Rosenfeld said this year's four-week student season, which opens April 28 with "Hamlet," will take place as planned.

In fact, she said, in response to a large number of requests from older Shakespearean enthusiasts, the theater has made matinee tickets available to senior citizens.

While the theater has not had an artistic director since 1982, three-time Tony Award winner Zoe Caldwell, a theater director, is currently serving in that capacity although not in title.

Ms. Rosenfeld said necessary renovations to the building's stage, stairs, electrical and air conditioning systems were discovered to be "much more extensive than expected." That work had been scheduled for the fall, after the completion of the summer schedule, but Ms. Rosenfeld said that under current conditions there was a chance it would not be completed before the 1987 student season.

"That was an unacceptable risk," she said, explaining that revenues from the four-week student season account for about 60 percent of the theater's annual income. The theater has an annual operating budget of about $500,000, Ms. Rosenfeld said.

The once-renowned theater was more than $2 million in debt when it filed for protection in bankruptcy court in January 1982. The state assumed and then paid off its $1 million mortgage when the bank that held the note threatened foreclosure and a private buyer could not be found.

In November 1984, U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Alan W. Schiff affirmed an agreement reached between the theater and creditors representing about $950,000 in debt. The first in a series of fund-raising benefits was held in September 1984 featuring jazz vibraphonist Lionel Hampton.

Know deductions for moving costs

Sylvia Porter

Countless tens of thousands — maybe hundreds of thousands of you — pay needless totals of thousands of dollars each year in taxes on your annual return to the IRS because you do not understand what you can deduct for moving expenses. And the odds that you'll overpay the IRS in this area are much greater than the odds that you'll underpay.

In digging into deductions for moving expenses, Eli J. Warach, divisional senior vice president, director of tax services, is generally uninformed on what you can and cannot deduct.

When it comes to this short series is hint at the big deductions you might miss and by so doing, guide you on where to look for limits on the how to avoid the cure of the IRS.

Overall dollar limit: While direct moving expenses are completely deductible, there is a $3,000 overall dollar limit on the deduction of indirect moving expenses. Moreover, the portion of indirect moving expenses that is for house hunting and temporary living expenses cannot exceed $1,000.

How to qualify: To get a deduction for moving expenses, you must satisfy two tests: 1) Distance test: The new job must be at least 50 miles farther from your old home than the old job was from the old home. If you have no former place of work, the new job must be at least 50 miles from the former residence.

2) The 39-week test: An employee must work full time in the general vicinity of the new job location for 39 weeks during the 12 months following your move. A self-employed taxpayer must continue full-time work on the new location (as a self-employed person or as an employee) for at least 78 weeks during the 24 months following the move, of which at least 39 weeks must be in the first year.

NOTE: If an employee moves and changes to a self-employed status before meeting the 39-week test, you are subject to the longer 78-week test.

When to claim the deduction: You may elect to claim a deduction for moving expenses in the year they are paid or incurred even though the post-move time requirements haven't been met. If the deduction is taken in one year and the time test is not satisfied in a later year, an amount equal to the deduction taken is included in that subsequent year's income.

If, though, you do not claim a deduction in the year of payment, but in a later year you meet the time requirements, you may file an amended return for the year the expenses were paid.

IMPORTANT: If an employer reimburses you for moving expenses, you must include the reimbursement in income and then take a moving expense deduction by filing out Form 3903, and transferring the amount on line 11 to line 24 of Form 1040. Any reimbursement must be reported on line 7 of Form 1040.

Thoughts

"Beware! Don't always be wishing for what you don't have. For real life and real living are not related to how rich we are. And besides, what's the use of worrying? What good does it do? Will it add a single day to your life? Of course not! And if worry can't even do such little things as that, what's the use of worrying over bigger things?" (Luke: 12: 15, 26)

I never met a teenager who didn't worry. Worry about what others are thinking about them. Worry about their clothes — their hair — their friends — their image. But what they don't worry about is tomorrow. Most teenagers live for today, and although that is not always a bad idea, it can cause such frustration, because they are concerned about the temporary instead of what should be permanent in their life.

No amount of worrying is going to make your life better or longer or more enjoyable. And worrying about the smallest parts of our daily life will only take away from being concerned over the temporary future. Christ wants us to give our worrying over to Him — to allow Him to care for us and "do the driving," so to speak.

Cardinal says mass wine untainted

ROME (AP) — Italy faces an international backlash from contaminated wine that has killed 20 people, but a Vatican official assured Roman Catholics that the wine used during mass is not tainted.

Cardinal Paul Augustin Mayer, who heads the Vatican's Congregation for Sacraments and Divine Cult, said Tuesday that a long-standing church regulation requires that only the "purest wine" be used and that bishops and priests make sure it is obeyed.

Authorities said 20 people are known to have died in Italy from drinking wine laced with methyl alcohol used illegally to raise the alcohol content, and many more have gotten sick.

Police continued a nationwide seizure of poisonous wine and three more people allegedly supplied methyl alcohol to Italian wine merchants were arrested in northern Italy, raising the total arrests in the case to 16.

Italy is the world's largest wine producer and the government fears the scandal could lead some countries to bar imports. The Agriculture Ministry has ordered that bottles intended for export carry a certificate guaranteeing they are free of methyl alcohol. U.S. officials have said none of

Stock certificate names mean tax difference

QUESTION: All my stock is in my name only. I understand that when I will the stock to an heir, the heir's cost "basis" will be the market value of the stock on the date of my death. If, while I am still living, I name the person who will be my heir as joint owner with right of survivorship, will the same basis rule apply?
ANSWER: No. In that situation, only half of the stock's basis will be its value as of the date of your death. If you put the stock into joint ownership with that other person, he or she will become half owner of the stock. Then, when you leave this vale of tears, that person automatically will become the sole owner.
 At that point, the basis for half of the stock will become its value on the day you die, unless the executor or administrator of your estate uses an alternative valuation date. The basis on the other half will remain unchanged.
 Here's an example. Say you bought 100 shares of XYZ stock at $10 a share. Your basis is $1,000. Say that XYZ is worth $50 a share at the time of your death.
 If that stock is in your name, your heir's basis becomes $5,000. If the stock is jointly owned, the surviving joint owner's basis becomes $1,000. That's because half of the basis — $500 on the half he or she already owned — remains unchanged and the basis on the other half "steps up" to $2,500.
 It's important to keep track of the basis. When stock or any other capital asset is sold, the difference between the basis and the proceeds from the sale is either a capital gain or capital loss and must be reported on the seller's income tax return.
QUESTION: My husband has bought a bit invested in stocks. Some are in his name and his name. But he can't get him to add my name. If he passes away before I do, won't I have trouble selling the stocks registered in his name?
ANSWER: Assuming you inherit the stocks now registered in your husband's name, you'll have no more trouble selling them than you will selling the jointly owned stocks.
 If the stocks have risen in value, you'll have less capital gains tax to pay on the stocks you inherit than on jointly owned stocks. As noted above, only half of the basis on jointly owned stocks steps up when one of the joint owners dies.
QUESTION: We are in the process of settling an estate and selling its assets—a house, stocks, etc.—to distribute the money among heirs. Your column confirms that the basis of all the assets is the value at the date of death. However, we don't want any tax surprises. Where is it written that the Internal Revenue Service "relinquishes its share" by not levying capital gains tax on the difference between the price at which the assets were purchased and the values at time of death?

ANSWER: In the Internal Revenue Code.
 The Tax Reform Act of 1976 would have made the basis of inherited assets the value of that property as of Dec. 31, 1976 — a so-called "fresh start date" — and would have resulted in heirs getting hit with more capital gains tax. That provision also would have required everybody who owned any capital assets, including houses, securities, jewelry, furniture — even my rolloff desk — to have inventories of values as of that date.
 If that crazy system had been put into effect, heirs would have had much lower basis — and higher capital gains tax — when they sold inherited assets.
 That provision of the '76 Tax Act caused so much confusion and so many complaints to Congress that our lawmakers, in a rare demonstration of common sense, repealed it before it became effective.
 Don't fret. You're in for no surprises. The form of capital gains tax on appreciated assets in that estate you are settling.
 Doyle welcomes written questions, but he can provide answers only through the column.

Business In Brief

Pattis open East Hartford studio
 Joseph and Irene Pattis, formerly of Manchester, have announced the opening of Distinctive Gallery, an art and portrait studio at 280 Burnside Ave., East Hartford.
 The gallery sells original works of art, including a collection by local artist Henry J. Sutton and Gloria L.L.
 The Pattis are members of the Manchester Art Association and the Laurelton Art Association. The public is invited to visit the gallery on Saturday and Sunday from 10 to 6.
Cattlemen sue over cow slaughter
WASHINGTON — The government, trying to reduce milk surpluses by slaughtering dairy cows, has been sued by two Texas cattlemen's groups who fear the threat of huge meat surpluses that could come from a sudden million-head reduction in the size of the American dairy herd.
 It was the second blow to the new dairy program in its first week of operation. On Friday, a federal judge in Rochester, N.Y., barred the Agriculture Department from enforcing a regulation that requires cows destined for slaughter to be branded on the face with a three-inch "X."
 The cattlemen's suit, filed in U.S. District Court in Lubbock, Texas, contends that the department has failed to meet the terms of the 1985 farm bill by failing to spread out the slaughter of dairy herds evenly over the life of the 18-month program.
 Heavy loading of the slaughter in the first six months will produce a glut of meat that depresses both live cattle markets and futures prices, the beef producers contended. A hearing is set for April 22.
Ginnie Mae authority exhausted
WASHINGTON — Ginnie Mae officials say they will ask Congress to extend the agency's $65.3 billion authority to guarantee mortgage-backed securities that was exhausted by the rush of homeowners to refinance mortgages at lower interest rates.
 The 1986 fiscal year authority to guarantee securities backed by mortgages insured by the Veterans Administration and Federal Housing Administration was exhausted on Friday, said Lou Gasper, Ginnie Mae's executive vice president.
 "We have never run out, it's the first time we've done it," Gasper said Tuesday.
 The Office of Management and Budget is expected to ask Congress to extend Ginnie Mae's commitment authority by at least $20 billion, Gasper said.
 Ginnie Mae, a federally chartered corporation known formally as the Government National Mortgage Association, will not be able to guarantee any new security issues until Congress extends the commitment authority, he said.

WAC blasts Warnaco rejection

BRIDGEPORT — The California investors trying to acquire Warnaco Inc. reacted angrily to the apparent company's third rejection of its overtures, saying Warnaco had showed "callous disregard" for its shareholders and was trying to entrench management.
 On Tuesday, Warnaco rejected a merger proposal from the investors and sweetened the recapitalization plan it intends to submit to shareholders in two weeks.
 The board said it was raising the cash portion of its offer from $7 per share to $9 per share and was increasing the value of notes that would be issued to stockholders from $25 per share to $30 per share.
 The revised package, at Warnaco's valuation, is worth $44 per share, or about $44.8 million based on the company's 10.2 million shares outstanding. It tops by $1.56 the all-cash merger offer made Monday by W. Acquisition Corp. of Encino, Calif.
 Despite Warnaco's determination to remain independent, cracks began to show in the company's board Tuesday, Robert W. Anthony, director since 1971, resigned, apparently because he felt the recapitalization plan was becoming too debt-heavy.
ANTHONY, A PROFESSOR of management control at Harvard Business School, declined in an interview to say why he resigned. But Warnaco's chief administrative officer, general counsel and director, Lloyd P. Stauder, said the board's understanding of Anthony's motivation was that "in his judgment the proposal was more highly leveraged than he thought prudent."
 "We will go to whatever extremes are necessary to keep Bryant in Bridgeport," Buccci said.
 Buccci said state and city officials have offered Bryant both financial incentives and existing space to stay in Bridgeport.
 Robert Innis, manager of human resources for Bryant, said neither state nor city officials had made formal offers to the company.
 "The union will hold a rally and march Saturday to show support for keeping Bryant in the state's largest city.

Westinghouse decision spurs Bridgeport fear

BRIDGEPORT — Union and city officials are calling on Westinghouse Electrical Corp. to commit itself to staying in Bridgeport and keeping its Bryant Electrical Division open.
 Union leaders fear a recent decision by the corporate giant to expand its Bryant operation elsewhere marks a long-term intention to close the State Street plant, putting about 600 people out of work.
 "I was very disturbed by the news that expansion was directed at communities outside Bridgeport," Mayor Thomas W. Buccci said Tuesday.
 Westinghouse Friday announced it was extending a study of the feasibility of continuing to manufacture electrical circuit breakers in Bridgeport.
 "We are also going to establish complementary manufacturing capacity at another Westinghouse facility where excess manufacturing space already exists," the company statement said.
 "The union's position is that the people who work in the shop and the community in general deserve something better than a feasibility study that turns out to be a hoax and an smoke-screen," said Kathi Garay, president of United Electrical Radio and Machine Workers Union Local 269.
 "We will go to whatever extremes are necessary to keep Bryant in Bridgeport," Buccci said.
 Buccci said state and city officials have offered Bryant both financial incentives and existing space to stay in Bridgeport.
 Robert Innis, manager of human resources for Bryant, said neither state nor city officials had made formal offers to the company.
 "The union will hold a rally and march Saturday to show support for keeping Bryant in the state's largest city.

Stock market stages another rally

NEW YORK — The stock market staged a broad advance today, extending Tuesday's rally amid talk of new downward pressure on interest rates.
 The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks climbed 17.84 to 1,787.60 in the first hour of trading. Gainers outnumbered losers by nearly 4 to 1 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.
 The market drew further impetus from reports that the United States is working toward a possible new round of discount-rate reductions among leading industrialized countries.
 In the U.S. credit markets, prices of long-term government bonds, which have moved in the opposite direction from interest rates, rose about 21/8 for every $1,000 in face value this morning.
 Among actively traded blue chips, American Express rose 1/4 to 67. General Mills 1/4 to 73 1/4; General Motors 3/4 to 83 1/4, and K mart 1/4 to 45 1/4.
