Dorothy Hatfield of Hilliard Street, left, signs her name to a petition aimed at getting a slate of delegates for Democratic gubernatorial candidate Toby Moffett on a primary ballot in May. 'I didn't expect such a crowd,' she said as she was approached in her yard Thursday afternoon by Moffett, second from right, and a group of campaign workers that included, from left, Teri Ferguson, Maureen Gallo and Mayor Barbara Weinberg.

Mayor accompanies O'Neill rival on petition walk

Gubernatorial candidate Toby Moffett predicted an "uphill battle" for victory in a May 20 primary against Gov. William O'Neill during a 45-minute stop in Manchester Thursday afternoon.

But as he walked along Hilliard Street to gather signatures to force a town delegate primary, Moffett was enthusiastic about the efforts of his campaign workers and optimistic about the outcome of the primary, in which O'Neill will have the backing of most of the town's Democratic establishment.

"The side that does the petitioning has an advantage," he said. "We get organized earlier, we get the people out and we get identification faster."

"I am prepared and proud to come to Manchester without a $20,000 speech writer at my elbow," he said, referring to O'Neill's campaign style.

During his visit, Moffett criticized O'Neill for raising large amounts of money from insurance companies and other large providers. He predicted that people "are not going to be happy" when they hear O'Neill's financial report.

"The way O'Neill is raising his money makes him incapable of relating to the people," he said.

"We have almost 5,000 contributors. That's historic and unprecedented," said the former 9th District congressman.

Moffett said that Manchester, with 23 delegates to the state convention in July, and smaller towns such as Middletown and Hamden, are "extremely important" to the primary campaign.

"I feel we'll do well in Waterbury and New Britain, and I think we'll roll over them in Torrington," Moffett predicted.

In assessing the response to his visit to Hilliard Street resident Veronica Bell, Moffett said, "She's certainly leaning. She's a serious leaner."

Moffett joked with his campaigners, who included Mayor Barbara Weinberg, that he is not sure of anyone's vote "until they kiss me."

Moffett, dressed in a dark suit on the damp and cool day, had his most charming political foot on front. He complimented Mary Capelli on her newly painted living room and Dorothy Hatfield on her daffodils.

At another home, he sought out the children playing in the yard and coaxed them into wearing his campaign buttons, telling them that he could not afford to have big billboard signs.

Moffett said he enjoyed the door-to-door method of campaigning.

"It's a great way to meet people and let them meet you," he said.

He told one surprised resident who opened the door: "This is democracy in action."

Moffett recalled that he had garnered a large number of volunteers from Manchester High School and Manchester Community College when he was director of the Connecticut Citizen Action Group. He said he will be back during the campaign to visit those institutions as well as other places "to get into the fabric of the community."

The Moffett supporters need the signatures of 25 registered Democrats by Friday to get their slate on the May primary ballot. Maureen Gallo, one of the delegates on the slate, said during the petition walk Thursday that the Moffett workers had collected more than half of the needed names.

Teri Ferguson, also a Moffett delegate, said the 35 people she has enlisted for the petition drive are getting a good response to their efforts. They are working mostly in the evenings and will concentrate on this Saturday and Sunday afternoons, she said.

Caller threatens renewed attacks on U.S. citizens

BONN, West Germany — West Germany said today the link between the bombing of a West Berlin disco and Libya was growing clearer and a man claiming to represent a Palestinian terror group threatened more attacks against Americans.

The West German news agency DPA said the man claimed to represent a group called the Liberation of Palestine and said the new attacks against Americans in West Germany would begin soon.

The news agency said the man conveyed the threat in a telephone call to its Berlin office and spoke English. Manfred Ganschow, the head of the West Berlin unit investigating the bombing, said he has never heard of the group.

Thursday, DPA said coded messages intercepted by the CIA showed that Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafi ordered the bombing and today Chancellor Helmut Kohl acknowledged there were many signs of Libyan involvement.

But Kohl said he remains opposed to U.S. demands for an allied economic boycott of Libya in retaliation for Khadafi's alleged support of terrorism.

Citing information from informed security sources, the West German news service said Thursday the bombing of the La Belle discotheque in West Berlin early Saturday was carried out by a Palestinian splinter group on Khadafi's orders.

DPA said its sources in the government believe Khadafi used Palestinians instead of Libyans to stage the attack so he could later deny Libyan involvement.

The special West Berlin police task force investigating the bombing said it had no concrete leads in the attack, which killed an American GI and a Turkish woman and wounded 230 people, including 64 Americans.

But Kohl told reporters: "There are a great many indications that the attack on the discotheque in West Berlin involved Libya also — I stress the word also." He did not elaborate.

However, Kohl again rejected U.S. demands that West Germany join a total boycott of Libya, saying "the Americans on this question react much more emotionally."

In rejecting past calls for economic sanctions, the West German government has said they would damage trade relations, endanger West Germans in Libya and were unlikely to achieve

Carriers moving eastward

By Richard C. Gross
United Press International

Two U.S. aircraft carrier battle groups moved eastward in the Mediterranean today, waiting for the possible go-ahead by President Reagan to launch a retaliatory air strike against Libya, U.S. officials said.

The shift toward the central Mediterranean by the carriers Coral Sea and America, in separate forces totaling 21 ships, was not viewed by the officials as a prelude to an attack but it did bring the ships closer to Libya.

The two battle groups steamed separately as they edged near their potential target and did not form a single task force, the officials said Thursday.

"They will link up if a decision is made to do something, but not right now," said one source, requesting anonymity.

The officials said the administration has decided to retaliate against Libya for the terrorist attack in West Berlin a week ago that killed an American soldier, a Turkish woman and wounded 50 other Americans, but no decision has been made about when to attack or how to carry out the strike.

Reagan has stopped short of pinning the blame on Libyan leader Moammar Khadafi for the bombing of the Berlin discotheque, saying only that the administration was gathering evidence about who may be responsible for the bloody attack and would retaliate only when it had sufficient proof.

Students and citizens must understand AIDS, experts say

By Susan Vaughn
Herald Reporter

Mass education and counseling are the best ways to prevent the spread of Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, health-care officials said at a regional conference Thursday at Manchester Memorial Hospital.

"There is no magic medicine to prevent AIDS," said Dr. James Hadler, chief of the Epidemiology Section for the state Department of Health Services. He said education is the only hope for reducing transmission of the fatal disease, which has afflicted up to 20,000 people nationwide and for which there is no known cure.

"The school system should be a focus of what's being taught about AIDS," he said. Hadler told the health-care workers and educators in the audience of about 140 that a climate of acceptance to education must be created. Then, he said, ways must be developed to educate students on the medical and social issues related to AIDS.

Hadler was a member of a state task force that developed guidelines for schools and is on another that is currently working on curriculum guidelines for teaching about AIDS in the classroom.

John Rankin, an assistant professor of medicine at the Yale University School of Medicine, urged counseling at all levels from elementary school on up.

"The only way to handle it is prevention," he told the audience. "We've got to address it in a forthright way, even if students may be uncomfortable with the subject."

"Every high-risk behavior ought to stop," Rankin said, stressing promiscuity among homosexual men and intravenous drug use, two activities that are believed to put participants at high risk of contracting the disease.

Gay and bisexual men make up the highest risk group and account for about 65 percent of the cases nationwide. Intravenous drug use

Finance panel backs sewer measure

A bill that would help provide Manchester with a grant of $11 million toward improvements to its sewage treatment plant and a 2 per cent loan for the rest of the estimated $26 million cost was approved unanimously by a state legislative committee Thursday and sent to the Senate.

The bill, which was approved by the General Assembly's Finance, Revenue and Bonding Committee, would provide towns with 20 percent grants for sewage plant improvements and low-interest loans for the remaining 80 percent.

David McQuade, an aide to Gov. William O'Neill, said this morning that the finance committee is expected today to take up another proposal that would free up money to provide a higher grant for Manchester and Sufield. Both towns have plans ready to go for improvements, and both have been seeking federal and state grant money that is likely to be phased out.

Both McQuade and state Sen. Carl Zinsser, R-Manchester, said today they expect the committee to act favorably on the proposal. It calls for authorizing a bond issue for sewage plant improvements in Groton when the town resolves a legal dispute over where to locate a new plant.

Money now being held for Groton would be freed for Manchester and Sufield.

Robert Moore, an official of the state Department of Environmental Protection, said today the aggregate grant would be $11 million.

In a November referendum, Manchester residents limited the town to spending no more than $14.3 million in local money for the project.

Moore said that the combination of an $11 million grant and low-interest loans would equal the benefits Manchester would have gotten under the federal and state grant program. The town did not have a high enough priority to get one of the grants.

The key is the difference between the cost of the 2 percent loans and the amount the town would have to have spent to borrow if it had borrowed money on the open market.

Town officials held the November referendum in hopes that Manchester would get a state grant that would be available only if the town of Winsted took action not to accept it. However, Winsted voted to take the grant.

Since then, town officials have been trying to find a way to get grant money, preferably enough to permit it to make the improvements to the plant on Olcott Street without another vote. The improvements, ordered by federal and state environmental authori-

Across the nation

Snow from a slow-moving, weak storm that forced the postponement of the Pirates-Mets baseball game rumbles west parts of New England today, while cold weather to the west prompted livestock warnings in Montana.

Snow showers over northern New England became rain along the central coast of New England today.

Near seasonable temperatures were reported over much of the nation overnight, with readings in the 30s and 40s from New England across the Great Lakes, and temperatures in the 60s in the Rockies and the 50s along the northern Pacific Coast.

On Thursday, snow showers and rain showers stretched from the Great Lakes across the central Appalachians into northern New England, dumping a foot of snow on Terra Alta in the northern mountains of West Virginia.

Elkins, W. Va., which received nearly 8 inches, shattered its seasonal snowfall record with a total of 114.1 inches, breaking the previous record of 107.7 set during the 1970-71 season.

Rock star Bob Geldof Thursday announced his African aid group will sponsor "Sportaid" next month, designed to be "the biggest mass sports participation in the history of the world."

Geldof, appeared at a United Nations conference with James Grant, director of UNICEF, which will co-sponsor the effort to raise funds for African relief.

Geldof said runners in Ethiopia and the Sudan will start May 17 and other runners are expected to reach New York May 25 where they will light a torch at the United Nations May 25.

At that moment, "the world will begin running," the Irish musician said.

Races have been organized all over the world under the slogan "The Race Against Time," he said. Each runner will pay $10 for a T-shirt which will be the entry fee and the chief means of fund-raising. Sportaid is also seeking corporate sponsors, he said.

Familiar face

When Woody Harrelson graduated from Hanover College in Hanover, Ind., 1983 and moved to New York to launch his acting career, nobody knew his name.

But now he's Woody the bartender on NBC's comedy hit "Cheers," the saga of a Boston bar "where everybody knows your name."

Harrelson, 24, returned unannounced to the southern Indiana campus of his alma mater this week and found that everybody knows his name there, too.

Harrelson said his early days in New York were tough. He even tended bar for a while, but it hardly prepared him for his "Cheers" audition.

"I went to bartending school for a while," Harrelson said. "This one guy was kind of my partner. It took him, well, like most of the day to learn how to stir."

The tough times abruptly ended. Just two years out of college, Harrelson was a regular on the popular TV sitcom starring Shelley Long and Ted Danson.

"I'd say he'd fit right in with the coffee shop or farm crowd as far as his attitude. He's really not like a star."

Ired at Guide

Actress Lane Turner and her daughter, Cheryl Crane, have sued TV Guide for more than $100 million, claiming the magazine falsely reported Crane was convicted of murder.

They allege an April 1985 article stated Crane was convicted of murdering John Stompanato Jr., her mother's longtime boyfriend.

The article was about Louella Parsons and Hedda Hopper, two of Hollywood's most famous gossip columnists during the 1930s.

Turner and her daughter are contending it is about a murder conviction were false and libelous because a Los Angeles County coroner's panel in April 1988 absolved Crane of blame in Stompanato's death.

The suit was filed Tuesday against the article's author, Bill Davidson, the magazine and the magazine's publisher, Triangle Publications. It seeks at least $500,000 apiece for Turner and her daughter in general damages and $50 million apiece in punitive damages.

A magazine spokesman could not be reached for comment.

Local effect of 7-Eleven edict limited

Staff and wire reports

The owner of the Main Street 7-Eleven said he has not decided whether to withdraw the magazines. Owner Tom Wilkinson said that because his store is a franchise, he is not required to remove the publications, although he will consult with a representative from Southland, the parent company.

Wilkinson said the magazines are kept behind the checkout counter and the front covers are hidden by racks. He said minors are not allowed to purchase them.

Wilkinson said he personally does not think magazines such as Playboy and Penthouse have a harmful effect on readers. However, he said the more hard-core publications may be detrimental.

"If somebody wants to buy a Playboy, God bless them," he said. The manager of the third 7-Eleven in Manchester, located on Center Street, could not be reached for comment.

Southland Corp. announced Thursday its 4,500 7-Eleven convenience stores will no longer sell Playboy, Penthouse and Forum. The decision reverses a policy Southland had refused to alter last fall, when thousands of people marched in Dallas and picketed 7-Eleven stores to demand a halt to the sale of the adult magazines.

The Rev. Jerry Falwell, who led the march, praised Thursday's announcement and asked Christians to support 7-Eleven financially.

"This is going to put the pornography industry on its knees," the Moral Majority leader told Dallas radio station KRLD.

Playboy attacked the decision as misguided, while Penthouse publisher Robert Guccione called for privatization of stores that don't bow to "censorship."

The three magazines will not be available in 7-Eleven stores owned by Southland after the May issues are sold, said president Jerry W. Thompson.

Southland will encourage the 3,600 7-Elevens operated by franchise to adopt the same policy, he said.

Developers seek OK for houses

Manchester developers Martin, Rothman and Woodbury are seeking subdivision approval for the second stage of a single-family housing project off Garden Grove Road.

The first phase of the subdivision, which is called Northview, included 12 single-family houses off the east side of Garden Grove Road near the Hercules Drive intersection.

The second phase of the subdivision will be built on the southwest side of Garden Grove near Erie Street and will include eight lots on 4.3 acres zoned Residence AA, which allows developers to build up to two single-family housing units for each acre.

Planning officials said today that the application will be part of a business meeting of the Planning and Zoning Commission and not a public hearing. It has not been scheduled yet.

Crenshaw jury hears confession

By George Lown Herold Reporter

HARTFORD — An Olcott Street man accused of killing his 10-month-old daughter last April told police the baby looked up at him before he pressed her face into her crib mattress, and as he left her bedroom, he "noticed the eyes of the baby were twitching," Manchester police detective Joseph Morrissey testified Thursday in Superior Court.

Morrissey's comments came during day-long proceedings in the trial of Marshall Crenshaw, 25, who has pleaded not guilty to murdering his daughter, Dale-Lyn Crenshaw, in their apartment on April 29, 1985.

Morrissey told a three-woman, eight-man jury that Crenshaw admitted to him on five separate occasions that he suffocated the child. In addition, a written confession obtained from Crenshaw — which Morrissey read out loud to the jury — stated that the defendant killed Dale-Lyn because he wanted his life with the child's mother, Susan Lard, to be the same as it was before the baby was born.

Crenshaw said in that statement that he and Lard had an argument on the afternoon of April 29 over how the baby's birth had changed their relationship, Morrissey testified. Lard then left the apartment, and while she was gone, Crenshaw walked into the child's bedroom, the detective said.

The written confession says Crenshaw noticed the baby was awake and that her legs were tangled in the crib, Morrissey said. After untangling her legs, Crenshaw grabbed her head and pushed her face into the mattress for about 20 seconds, the statement said.

Crenshaw THEN ran out of the room, but before he left, he looked back and "saw one of the baby's eyes move, and I thought it was still alive," Morrissey said, reading from Crenshaw's statement.

Public Defender Richard Kelly, who has Wednesday failed in an attempt to prevent the confession from being used during the proceedings, objected repeatedly to various points in Morrissey's testimony.

While on the phone, Morrissey told Crenshaw told him both he and Lard had killed Dale-Lyn, although when the two met 15 minutes later, Crenshaw said only he killed the child, Morrissey said. After Crenshaw then agreed to go to the defendant's apartment, where another taped interview was held and the written confession was obtained.

timony. Kelly will begin his cross-examination of the detective when the trial resumes on Wednesday.

Manchester police officer John Pikiell testified Thursday that he questioned Crenshaw and Lard in the emergency room of Manchester Memorial Hospital on the afternoon of April 29, after the two brought in an unconscious Dale-Lyn. Pikiell said Crenshaw told him he said, "Emergency, emergency. I think my baby's dying," as he came into the emergency room.

Pikiell said Crenshaw and Lard appeared upset, but their actions and speech were calm. However, toward the end of the interview, Crenshaw appeared "pretty shaky," Pikiell said.

Pikiell said Crenshaw agreed to go to police headquarters from the hospital for more questioning, and agreed to be transported in Pikiell's cruiser because he was too upset to drive.

MORRISSEY TESTIFIED that he first interviewed Crenshaw at the station for about one hour and 15 minutes. The first 35 minutes of the interview were tape-recorded with Crenshaw's consent, but after Crenshaw asked for the machine to be turned off, he admitted to suffocating his daughter, Morrissey said.

Morrissey said Crenshaw cried "It's the truth, but it's a lie" after confessing. The interview ended soon after that, but 45 minutes later, Crenshaw agreed to another interview at the station, Morrissey said.

Crenshaw again admitted to suffocating the child during this second, 25-minute interview, Morrissey said. Crenshaw then left the station, but called Morrissey and agreed to meet him at Lynch Motors on West Center Street later that evening, Morrissey said.

Bolton residents approve library-media center

By John Mitchell
Herald Reporter

BOLTON — School board member Michael Parsons said it was only fitting that the voters' approval of a proposal to build a $483,000 library and media center at Bolton High School came during National Library Week.

"I'm pleased it was such a clear-cut decision," School Superintendent Richard E. Packman said after the results of Thursday's referendum on the project had been tallied, showing that townpeople had approved it by a 537 to 192 margin.

The 2,800-square-foot addition, which had been endorsed by the Board of Selectmen, the Board of Finance, the Public Building Commission and the Planning Commission, will cost the town $198,000, or 40 percent of the total, if an application for funding is sent into the state Department of Education by June 30.

"I think it's a gift from one generation to another generation, and an unselfish gift," school board Chairman James Marshall

"I think it's a gift from one generation to another generation, and an unselfish gift," school board Chairman James Marshall said.

"I'm very proud that the people of Bolton supported education."

"I'm very glad it came through after two attempts," school board member Louis Cloutier said.

Voters rejected original plans for the library and media center in a 1984 referendum. Ray Urain, chairman of an advisory committee that studied the project, said the earlier proposal was defeated because it was up against three other projects on the ballot and the total cost for all four was nearly $3 million, causing concern about heavy spending.

"It was up alone, it would have passed," Urain said. The advisory group, which was made up of citizens and school officials, was organized shortly after the 1984 vote.

"We had time to do the homework, and it was done very well," Urain said. "The results of the committee concur with what the townspeople want."

"We would like to see students using the facility a year from this September," Packman said.

funds for the center, which will house a larger library and provide space for a reading room and conference center. After a budget hearing next week, the matter will go to the Board of Finance, which will make a recommendation.

Two possibilities for funding include putting the funds in next year's budget for short-term borrowing, or charging a higher mill rate once the money is in the budget, Urain said.

Union Pond talks 'promising'

By George Lavin
Herald Reporter

A plan to establish a 50-foot buffer between Union Pond and a private cemetery is being discussed by the Conservation Commission and the owner of the cemetery as a way to end a dispute that began in December, committee Chairman Arthur Glaeser said this morning.

Glaeser said commission member Douglas Smith talked with Richard Meagher, head of the Catholic Cemetery Association, about getting easements and re-purchasing part of the land along the eastern edge of Union Pond so that a 50-foot section could be preserved. The move would save a section of the Hockanum River Linear Park from being built over by the association, which bought the land to expand the nearby St. Bridget Cemetery, he said.

Glaeser said negotiations between the commission and Meagher will continue until a written agreement is drafted.

Glaeser said the proposals are "the most promising" that have been discussed so far, adding that he is "quite hopeful that we will come up with something."

In December, the commission decided to ask the town Board of Directors for money to hire an attorney to fight the cemetery association's expansion plans. Members were upset that the Planning and Zoning Commission did not consult with them before approving the plans in September, even though the Conservation Commission had asked on two previous occasions to be advised of any development plans near the pond.

Members said they were also upset with Meagher after he refused to guarantee a buffer of at least 150 feet. Meagher told the commission during a walk of the half-mile hiking trail in January that such a guarantee would hinder the association's plans, which include the commission during a walk of the eastern edge of Union Pond so that a 50-foot section could be preserved. The move would save a section of the Hockanum River Linear Park from being built over by the association, which bought the land to expand the nearby St. Bridget Cemetery, he said.

Glaeser said negotiations between the commission and Meagher will continue until a written agreement is drafted.

Glaeser said the proposals are "the most promising" that have been discussed so far, adding that he is "quite hopeful that we will him in order to reach a settlement. Meagher has said the existing cemetery would not be expanded for at least 10 years.

Turning to other matters, the conservation commission decided during its meeting at Lincoln Conservation Commission request that the Planning and Zoning Commission not allow developers to build within 50 feet of the Hockanum River on property along Route 83 by the Quality Inn, Glaeser said.

In a review of the developer's plans, the commission also strongly urged that wetlands sections in that area not be disturbed so that ground water runoff has a place to collect, instead of flooding Route 83 and nearby properties, he said.

Commission members were also briefed by Town Planner Mark Pellegrini and PZC members Marion Taggart and Truman Crandall about the PZC's proposed plan of development for Manchester. Glaeser said he was "very, very pleased" to learn that recommendations he made four years ago concerning environmental issues, open spaces and passive recreation were kept intact in the revised development plan.

Earlier in the month, members of the town Board of Directors urged the two sides to negotiate an agreement instead of waging a legal battle.

Following the walk, Meagher proposed that commission members continue to meet with

Pentagon picks McCavanagh for state readiness briefing

By John F. Kirch

State Rep. James R. McCavanagh, D-Manchester, will meet the Pentagon in two weeks.

McCavanagh met a contingent of community and business leaders here invited by the federal government to attend a program at the U.S. Defense Department April 21 and 22 to discuss the readiness of Connecticut's National Guard and Army Reserves.

The program, which is sponsored by the National Committee for Employer Support of the Guard and Reserve, a Defense Department agency, is designed to teach state officials how ready Connecticut is should an emergency occur.

"I'm going down there as a learning process," McCavanagh said today. "I hope to get some knowledge about the readiness of the state of Connecticut in case of an emergency."

A Pentagon official, Master Sgt. Beth Jarrell, said today that the program is held once every two or three years. It is by invitation only and has been offered to other states over the past few years, Jarrell said.

About 40 invitations were sent out to Connecticut businesses that employ have members of the National Guard and Army Reserve, Jarrell said. The program is designed to show state leaders the importance of the two groups to the state's defense.

McCavanagh, a real estate broker who is in his second term as a state representative, said he thinks he was invited by the Pentagon because of his work on the General Assembly's Public Safety Committee.

It will be the first time McCavanagh takes part in such a program, he said.

Along with the state legislator, Manchester State Bank President Nathan Agostini III, officials from the Citicorp Insurance Co., Middlesex College, Eastern Corp. and others will attend the program. David Foster, acting chairman of the Connecticut Committee for Employer Support of the Guard and Reserve, said today.

"I think there'll be a good cross section of people going down there with me," McCavanagh said. The program includes a reception where "senior Department of Defense officials" will "brief the Connecticut contingent on the state's readiness. A program will end with a wreath-laying ceremony at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier."

Charges against Rado dismissed

WATERBURY — A Waterbury Superior Court judge has dismissed bribery and larceny charges against former Naugatuck Mayor William C. Rado, saying the prosecution's case was based on hearsay.

Judge William Lavery said Tuesday the case against Rado showed "questionable ethical dealings" on the part of the former mayor, but not enough evidence of criminal activity.

Lavery had refused to allow the jury to hear much of the evidence presented during the nine-day trial.

Rado was accused of having accepted a $9,500 bribe in September 1984 to push through the sale of a 27.5-acre parcel owned by Alfred Corosino and Wayne Kadar, partners in Valley Associates Inc., to the Naugatuck Economic Development Commission.

"I'm happy about the decision and that's all I have to say," Rado said at the conclusion of the trial, which came a year to the day after his arrest on bribery and larceny charges.

Hospital, YWCA form alliance

MERIDEN — Officials of the Meriden-Wallingford Hospital and the Meriden YWCA have announced what they say is a unique collaboration designed to share day care, health promotion, and fitness programs.

Although many details of the agreement have not yet been worked out, it would help alleviate overburdened day care facilities at the YWCA and relieve the hospital of many of its health care programs duplicated by the YWCA, officials said Thursday.

The agreement may be the first of its kind in the nation and could set a precedent for similar collaborations elsewhere, the officials said.

The YWCA's day care program has a demand far beyond the 75 children enrolled, and would be allowed space for expansion into an abandoned factory building being renovated by the Meriden-Wallingford Hospital, said hospital spokesman Ron McKeown.

Restaurateur regroups after mishap

DERBY — The owner of a restaurant leveled by a natural gas explosion which killed his sister and nearly blinded his son plans to open a new eatery in Milford and possibly rebuild his former business in Derby.

"I think it's about time," said Alphonse Ippolito, owner of the River Restaurant, the popular downtown restaurant which was destroyed in a December 1985 gas explosion that killed six people.

Ippolito said he and business partner Richard Conine are preparing a proposal to submit to Milford officials for opening a seafood restaurant in the center of town.

Meanwhile, he said he has not ruled out construction of a new restaurant in downtown Derby at the site of a crater left by the gas explosion.

Federal investigators are looking into the cause of the Derby explosion.

Gas had leaked into the restaurant basement from a massive break in a pipe beneath the street outside, investigators said.

Faculty join Yale apartheid rally

NEW HAVEN — Yale University faculty members have joined students protesting the school's South African-related investments, as about 50 picketing educators staged their own campus rally alongside a student-built shantytown.

The shantytown, which the administration had originally ordered removed, has been allowed until the Yale Corporation meets this weekend and discusses the divestment issue.

While picketing faculty members Thursday declined to specifically criticize the administration's stance, some called the shantytown an important part of the students' education and said South African investments should be seen as inconsistent with Yale's educational values.

The participation by the faculty and by other community leaders who visited the shanties earlier in the day was welcomed by students.

"It makes us feel great," said Beth Pardo, a graduate law student. "I mean the whole point of this thing is that we're not just students, but faculty workers, and New Haven community members, and hopefully the whole nation eventually."

Madison man identified as victim

NEWPORT, R.I. — The body of a man pulled from a sunken car off Goat Island this week is that of Thomas P. Chandler, 37, of Madison, Conn., police said.

Newport police Sgt. Francis Tessina said Chandler's wife, Denise, identified her husband Thursday morning, a day after his body was pulled from 15 feet of water near a pier.

Authorities are conducting further tests to determine the exact cause of death, Tessina said. Investigators do not suspect foul play.

The car containing Chandler's body was recovered Wednesday morning after a marina employee spotted the bumper just beneath the surface. Chandler and his wife were spending their second honeymoon in the city when he disappeared last Friday night, Tessina said.

Chandler was returning from a convenience store at the end of a pier just south of the Sheraton Islander Inn, where he was staying, Tessina said. Chandler may have become disoriented because of a light drizzle and heavy fog the night he vanished, he added.

Chandler apparently mistook an opening along the pier for paved road and drove into the water, police said. The car was upside down in the water just off Goat Island Marina for four days before being found Wednesday.

Committee OKs budget on party lines

Lieberman subpoenas oil firms, wholesalers in price probe

HARTFORD (AP) — The Republican-controlled Appropriations Committee voted along party lines to approve a $4.3-billion state budget for 1986-87.

Thursday's action represents a 9.5 percent increase in spending over this year.

Rep. Otto C. Neumann, R-Granby, committee co-chairman, called the spending plan modest and "extremely reasonable" and predicted it would be reduced by the time it gets through the House and Senate.

The package is about $70 million below the recommendation of Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill.

The Republicans rejected six Democratic amendments to the budget. They accepted one, which added $4 million to address questions of sex-based discrimination in state hiring.

Rejected amendments would have added money for schools, prescription drugs for low-income elderly, property tax relief for cities and towns, and combatting infant mortality.

Meanwhile Thursday, the Republican plan for a $70 million education fund was approved by Appropriations on a 22-15 bipartisan vote and sent to the Senate.

Committee member Rep. Michael Hellgott, D-Willington, ranking member of the Education Committee, urged defeat of the bill, claiming it "does nothing to enhance the teaching profession."

He said opponents intend "to offer a total and comprehensive amendment," most likely in the House, to repair constitutional problems he contended arise from the GOP version's tendency to increase disparities between rich and poor towns.

Attorney General Joseph I. Lieberman said Thursday he has subpoenaed 43 gasoline wholesalers and oil companies to extract information about their distribution and pricing structure.

The move is the latest step in an investigation of retail gasoline pricing begun in February because of the failure of retail prices to fall in step with plummeting world oil prices.

Panel won't probe examiner's office

By Mark A. Dupuis
United Press International

HARTFORD — A legislative committee has turned down a request for an investigation of the chief state medical examiner's office as critics of the office widened their attack on the agency's administration.

The Program Review and Investigations Committee Thursday decided not to investigate the office, questioning the value of a study when the office is undergoing changes because of the ouster of Chief Medical Examiner Dr. Catherine A. Galvin.

Galvin was dismissed by the Commission on Medical Investigations, which oversees the office, and replaced by her deputy, Dr. H. Wayne Carver II, on an interim basis until a permanent replacement is appointed.

Galvin was dismissed after criticism about morale and administration at the office, including charges of delays in completing autopsy reports and the presence of her pet dogs when autopsies were performed.

Galvin and Carver also have been accused of performing autopsies on animals at the medical examiner's office, the state's chief facility for performing autopsies in cases involving violent or suspicious deaths.

Carver's reported involvement in performing autopsies prompted a citizen group to ask Gov. William A. O'Neill to dismiss him as well as Health Services Commissioner Dr. Douglas S. Lloyd, chairman of the medicolegal commission.

Representatives of the Protection of Death group met Thursday with Jay W. Jackson, the governor's legal counsel, to present their demand for dismissal of the two officials.

Jackson listened to the group and agreed to convey its concerns to O'Neill, who was in Canada on state business, said Larry DeBear, the governor's press secretary.

Lloyd also has been instructed by O'Neill to complete as soon as possible a final report on the investigation by the medical commission that led to the dismissal of Galvin, who is suing to get the job back.

The fact Lloyd is working on the report was one factor cited by the Program Review and Investigations Committee in deciding not to do its own study of the medical examiner's office.

The committee had been asked to investigate the office by Rep. Craig P. Taylor, R-Bristol, who said the problems facing the office go beyond those which led to Galvin's ouster.

However, committee staff and members said it would be difficult to do a study while the office is in a state of flux following Galvin's ouster and a planned move early next year to new and larger quarters.

O'Neill leads Moffett in money game

HARTFORD (UPI) — Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill has taken the lead over rivals from both parties in campaign fundraising, campaign finance reports show.

O'Neill's campaign reported total receipts of more than $52,000 as of last Wednesday's cutoff date for the latest report, a sharp jump up from the $26,000 total reported in the last report in early January.

The campaign report filed Thursday with the secretary of the state's office showed O'Neill owed about $3,400 in debts and had about $1,400 in cash on hand as of the cutoff date.

O'Neill's finance report showed that the governor's campaign took out and repaid in total a $185,000 loan during the three-month period covered by the report.

Democratic challenger Toby Moffett reported total receipts of more than $31,000 as of last week's cutoff, but owed more than $17,000 in loans and campaign debts with $5,000 in cash on hand, according to his report.

On the Republican side, former Sen. Richard C. Bozatto of Waterbury had a clear lead over his three rivals for the GOP nomination with total receipts of more than $233,000.

Bozatto, who is considered the front-runner for the GOP nomination, reported cash on hand of about $103,000 as of the cutoff date. His report showed no loans owed, but about $5,222 in unpaid bills or other debts.

Bozatto's closest contender in fundraising on the GOP side was Rep. Julie D. Belaga of Westport, who reported total receipts of about $124,000, which included a $30,500 loan.

Former Sen. Gerald Labriola of Naugatuck had total receipts of more than $68,000, including a $25,000 loan, and former Sen. Romeo G. Petroni of Ridgefield had receipts of about $56,000.

Moffett used Thursday's campaign finance filing date to criticize the sources of contributions to O'Neill's campaign and repeat his calls for the governor to disclose if any of his contributors do business with the state.

Moffett said his campaign "is on target," despite the $177,000 owed in debts and loans. However, he admitted his fundraising might be dampened temporarily by O'Neill's victories in delegate selection meetings last week.

Petroni marked the campaign finance filing date with a trip to the Capitol to declare he will not participate in a series of unofficial GOP primaries set for May 6 and dubbed "Super Tuesday" by GOP leaders.

A critic of the idea from the outset, Petroni said he has now asked Republican State Chairman Thomas J. D'Amore Jr. to take his name off the ballot for the straw polls that will be open to GOP and unaffiliated voters in six towns.

Petroni said he will instead focus on forcing an official delegate primary May 20 in Stamford, where he will be looking to win 26 delegates to this summer's Republican state nominating convention.

UTC says competitor used bribes

By Susan Okubo
The Associated Press

NEW HAVEN — United Technologies Corp. filed a federal court suit this week that accuses a competitor in the helicopter parts business of bribing a UTC employee for information allegedly used to help win government contracts.

A federal judge has issued a temporary restraining order against the competitor, New Haven-based Airborne Apparel Inc., instructing it to stop the alleged bribing and to maintain any UTC materials it may have until further court hearings.

UTC alleges in the complaint that Airborne Apparel, Inc. of New Haven and four of its employees or officers were involved in paying an employee of UTC's Sikorsky Aircraft Division for stolen blueprints and shop drawings between 1984 and February of this year.

Sikorsky, based in Stratford, is a manufacturer of helicopters and provides helicopters to the military.

As a result of the allegedly illegally obtained information, UTC said Airborne was able to win government contracts for helicopter parts. Sikorsky was competing for those contracts, the complaint said.

The Hartford lawyer representing UTC, John B. Nolan, Thursday said he would not reveal the amount of the bribes to the Sikorsky employee, identified in the complaint as Salvatore M. Schippani.

The suit said that Schippani worked as an interior upholstery leadman at Sikorsky's South Avenue facility in Bridgeport from July 1982 until March and had access to "all drawings and blueprints prepared by Sikorsky engineers to be used in the manufacture of helicopters and helicopter parts."

Nolan said he didn't know how much business Sikorsky thinks it lost to Airborne as a result of the actions described in the suit. He also said he didn't know what Airborne made.

A man who would only identify himself as an employee of Airborne said during a telephone interview that the company is involved in sewing. He said he didn't know what the company made for helicopters. He declined further comment.

The complaint, filed Tuesday in federal district court in Hartford, said Schippani confessed to the bribe scheme to a supervisor of internal security for Sikorsky.

The court documents said Schippani provided Aaron Young and Anthony Gentile, employees or officers of Airborne, with about 300 drawings or blueprints and received compensation in return.

UTC accused Airborne of mail fraud, transportation of stolen goods and racketeering and with violations of the Connecticut Unfair Trade Practices Act.

The company asked for unspecified damages and an injunction prohibiting any further alleged bribing by Airborne.

OPINION

NU offer doesn't go far enough

Northeast Utilities' offer this week to reduce its rate-hike request from $147 million to $55 million is far from adequate. The utility does not warrant an increase this year, and the State Department of Public Utility Control should reject any rate hike outright.

Even with the reduction in its request, NU continues to buck the economic trend of the times. With moderate inflation and declining oil prices and interest rates, consumers and businesses in Connecticut should be getting a break. The largest utility in the nation, Pacific Gas & Electric, recently announced plans to apply for electricity-rate reductions of about 12 percent, with further decreases expected later this year. PG&E's actions may prompt similar action within the industry, analysts say.

Why can't NU follow the lead? NU filed its request last November seeking a rate increase of $155 million, $147 million of which would come in electric rates. At a DPUC hearing Monday in New Britain, the utility said it would slash the request by $92 million. That would mean residential customers' bills would go up between $2 and $3 instead of $5 or $6, and be frozen for the rest of the year.

Attorney General Joseph Lieberman called the freeze offer "nothing more than a wolf in sheep's clothing," and went so far as to say that ratepayers deserve a $30 million rate reduction. His contention may well be unrealistic, and it is up to the regulators to make a fair decision. This is an election year, and the DPUC must be cautious about political shots at an easy target.

Nonetheless, it's hard to feel pity for NU, which is crying poverty when all the indicators show economic stability. Future years may see increases in production costs, justifying increases in rates. But not this year.

The ratepayers of Connecticut deserve to reap the benefits from these good economic times.

Don't forget housing month

To the Editor:

It has been eighteen years since President Lyndon Johnson signed into law Title VIII of the Civil Rights Act of 1968, commonly called the Federal Fair Housing Law. The law bans discrimination based on race, sex, religion, color or national origin in the sale or rental of housing.

In recognition of this event, the month of April has been established by the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development as Fair Housing Month.

Since it is apparent that Connecticut has a critical housing shortage, it is exceedingly important that those who provide housing opportunities, i.e. property owners, real estate brokers and housing officials, affirmatively provide for fair housing without regard to race, color, national origin, sex or religion and further provide equal opportunity to all of the citizens of Connecticut in accordance with the requirements of all federal and state laws, and executive orders related to housing.

It is our hope that people who seek housing will be treated fairly by providers of housing not only during "Fair Housing Month," but that discrimination in any form against any person or persons who seek to be housed will no longer be tolerated by the community at large.

Candidate says hat's in the ring

To the Editor:

Recently, I declared my candidacy for the Democratic nomination for state representative in the 13th Assembly District.

Since that time several different versions have reached me as to why I decided to run. Following is the actual reason.

After Jack Thompson was defeated in his second bid against Biz Swenson, Jack stated that he would not run again. Several weeks ago Mrs. Swenson stated to Edward J. Wilson, former deputy state judge what the nation needed to defend itself. "I've spent my life in this, and I know more about it than almost anybody," he lamented in wonderment at the ceaseless demands by his opponents for missiles and bombs. "Did they want to build more and more Atlases (a missile type) for storage in warehouses? It was unconscionable."

Nicholas Von Hoffman

But not only did the president get scant support for his policies within his own administration, he also sometimes got open opposition. The Air Force Chief of Staff, convinced that the United States was on the wrong side of a "bomber gap," testified before Congress in favor of the B-70 bomber which the president didn't want, thus pushing Eisenhower to complain, though to no avail, that, "All these fellows in the Pentagon think they have some responsibility I can't see. I hate to use the word, but this business is damn near treason."

The "BOMBER GAP" vanished to be replaced by the "missile gap," but not before Eisenhower remarked that, "Subsequent intelligence investigation showed that estimate was wrong and that, far from stepping up their production of bombers, the Soviets were diminishing it or even eliminating that production."

The non-existent missile gap was real only to the comptroller, that she would not be running in this coming election. Mr. Wilson told me that his intention not to seek re-election.

Therefore, since it seemed to be an open field I threw my hat into the ring. Since that time, both Jack and Biz have stated that they are now undecided. Jack publicly and Biz to myself in a conversation.

My candidacy is unswerving. I have paid my dues to the Democratic party; have been a Democrat over 25 years; served on the Manchester Democratic Town Committee; served as an officer of the Young Democrats (when I was young); represented Manchester Democrats at a 1st District Democratic convention; and labored in the election efforts of Bob Killian and Bill O'Neill on the gubernatorial level. My financial support of the Democratic party is a matter of record and covers a long span. My friendship and support of Bill O'Neill goes back many years to when we were both in business in nearby towns, and I will say that Bill O'Neill is one great guy.

Should Jack receive the nomination, if he decides to run, he shall have my 100% support. Jack attends daily Mass and anyone who is so faithful has to be a special person. Biz, so far, my hat is still in the ring.

U.S. shifts away from King Hassan

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration's once-ardent support of Morocco's King Hassan has cooled like the desert sands. In fact, we have learned, State Department officials had at least three secret talks last year with the leftist Polisario rebels, who have been battling Morocco for 10 years over the mineral-rich Western Sahara once owned by Spain.

The cause of this startling reversal of administration policy is one man: Moammar Khadafi, the "flaky" dictator of Libya. Though he once supported the Polisario fighters with weapons and money, he astonished the White House in 1984 by announcing a "union" with Soviet Union. Hassan's betrays of the Polisario rebels left Algeria as their only effective supporter.

It was the Moroccan-Libyan solidarity treaty — which the Reagan administration learned of in the newspapers despite years of courting King Hassan — that led the president's policy makers to consider the bizarre tilt from Morocco to Algeria. Conservative Morocco had been regarded as the bulwark of U.S. hopes for influence in North Africa, while Algeria was considered dangerously leftist.

Even President Carter viewed the Polisario as rebels' puppets of Algeria, Libya — and the Soviet Union. Hassan played on these fears to gain increased U.S. military and economic support.

Soviet Leader Mikhail Gorbachev warned earlier this week the Soviet Union would abandon its unilateral test ban if the United States went ahead with Thursday's detonation — the second U.S. nuclear test in less than three weeks.

"As Mikhail Sergeyevich (Gorbachev) warned a few days ago, the further carrying out of nuclear tests by the United States will force the Soviet Union to renew its tests," the television commentator said.

"We regret this, but we shall have to do it as we cannot waive our own security and the security of our allies," he said.

The Soviet Union announced a unilateral test ban if the United States went ahead with Thursday's test at the Nevada test site, however, apparently will mean a new round of Soviet underground explosions. The Soviet television commentator, however, did not say when the Soviet Union would resume testing.

The commentator noted that the moratorium was not fruitless. "The point is that the Soviet Union has won a serious moral and political victory," he said.

The official news agency, in an unusually speedy response, said the U.S. test, coupled with President Reagan's recent rejection of Gorbachev's offer to meet him in Europe to discuss a test ban, proved Washington "is still chasing the will-o'-the-wisp of military superiority."

The test, code named "Mighty Oak," was carried out at 6:08 a.m. Thursday at the 1,350-square-mile Nevada nuclear test facility, 93 miles northwest of Las Vegas.

The blast was set off in a reinforced tunnel, 1,300 feet below the desert floor at Rainier Mesa, an Energy Department spokesman said.

The Department of Energy declined to discuss the purpose but several congressmen and members of the Greenpeace anti-nuclear group said it was to test the effectiveness of an X-ray laser being developed for Star Wars weapons technology and gauge the "effects of radiation on missile re-entry systems."

Congressional critics of the Reagan administration denounced the test.

"Obviously, the administration is bent on proceeding with 'Star Wars' whatever the cost to arms control," Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said Thursday's detonation was not "just another nuclear test." It was a test of our commitment and we are failing."

Gun control advocates to press fight

By Judi Hossen
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The House approved a bill making the transport of rifles and handguns across state lines easier, but despite a continued ban on interstate handgun sales, gun control advocates say the fight for tougher laws is not over.

In the wake of a House vote Thursday to ease gun laws for the first time in 18 years, a spokesman for Handgun Control Inc., said the group is mounting a new drive to require a waiting period before a handgun can be purchased.

"Congress has said there is a difference between long guns and handguns, and now that it's recognized, it puts us in a position to move on the waiting period," Barbara Lautman, Handgun Control Inc.

A similar bill passed the Senate last year and differences between the two must be worked out now before final passage, which would mark the first change in gun laws since the 1968 Gun Control Act was passed in reaction to the assassinations of Martin Luther King Jr. and Robert Kennedy.

The gun bill vote was a victory for the National Rifle Association, which spent $1.5 million to campaign for easing the gun laws. The powerful gun lobby maintained that the 1968 gun law penalized legitimate hunters, sportsmen and gun dealers and did not stop criminals from getting guns.

Soviets respond to test

Wayne LaPierre, spokesman for the NRA, called the House action "a tremendous step forward for honest citizens who have to live within the law."

But gun control groups won a partial victory when lawmakers agreed 235-184 to continue a ban on the interstate sale of handguns, and in a voice vote, banned the sale of machine guns.

Sarah Brady, whose husband, White House Press Secretary James Brady, was critically wounded in an assassination attempt on President Reagan, said the vote on handguns was a victory for gun control advocates.

Brady had argued that others like John Hinckley Jr., who shot Reagan and Brady with a $29 handgun five years ago, would be able to get a gun if interstate handgun sales were not banned. But she said the fight is not over.

"I'm going to keep it up and fight for more controls on handguns. It's not over, not at all," Brady said.

Opponents of any relaxation of the 1968 Gun Control Act, including police lobbying groups, were sharply critical of the tactics used by the NRA.

"Merits were not considered," Rep. Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y., said. "It was pure, callous politics engineered by the NRA."

Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., said the police have the "most to lose" as a result of changes in the law.

"With all of our concern for terrorism abroad and the skyrocketing crime rate at home, I find it hard to believe that Congress would pass legislation which weakens reasonable gun laws and makes it easier for guns to fall into the hands of those who terrorize us," he said.

Bomb scare suspect released, jailed again

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — An Egyptian passenger who prompted the emergency landing of an Eastern Airlines jet by jolting that he had a bomb in his brief case has been put back in jail after being released briefly on bail, authorities say.

Amr Sherin Osman, 24, of Cairo, was ordered returned to jail Thursday after U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service officials re-arrested him for allegedly violating his visa, said INS spokesman Lyle Karn.

The new charges were the latest in a string of misadventures for the young chemist who got into trouble when he innocently flirted with a flight attendant on Eastern Airlines Flight 119, his lawyer said.

Elizabeth Amalie said her client was "only joking" when he told the flight attendant he had a bomb in his attache case. "He didn't realize anything was wrong until he was arrested at the tarmac at Philadelphia International Airport," said Amalie.

"He actually thought the plane had landed (at its destination) in Atlanta."

The incident occurred around 8:20 a.m. Tuesday as the 727 jet was flying from New York to Atlanta with 112 passengers and seven crew members on board.

Police said flight attendant Christine Immundi, during a conversation with Osman, asked him about an unusual object in his open brief case.

"It's a bomb," Osman reportedly told her. He then shut the briefcase and set it on the floor, police said.

The jet made an emergency landing 15 minutes later, and the passengers and crew were evacuated while police combed the plane for explosives. None were found.

Labriola says town is his first target

Staff and wire reports

Republican gubernatorial candidate Gerald Labriola said today he has chosen Manchester as the first town where he will force a delegate primary next month.

Labriola said he has not ruled out May 20 delegate primaries in any of the state's cities and towns, but so far has only decided on Manchester as a town where he will offer a challenge slate of delegates.

Based on a straw poll of Manchester's Republican Town Committee, Labriola said he was favored to get four of the town's 16 delegates with nine going to Richard C. Bozuto and three to Rep. Julie D. Belaga.

Labriola said he will offer a challenge slate May 20 seeking to win all 16 delegates to the July state party convention that will endorse a gubernatorial candidate.

But Manchester GOP Town Chairman Donald Kuehl said this morning that not all of the people on a challenge slate formed last week would back Labriola.

"I would say very definitely that not all of them would support Labriola, but I don't know for sure, definitely what that ratio would be," Kuehl said this morning.

Some of the members of the challenge slate have supported Bozuto, and some are uncommitted, the leaders behind the challenge slate said Thursday.

Five names on the challenge slate also appear on the slate endorsed by the town committee. They include Kuehl, town Director Thomas H. Ferguson and William Diana, state Sen. Carl Zisser and state Rep. Elsie Hadler said the numbers are rising fairly rapidly and that the groups and there are not large numbers of people outside those groups contracting AIDS — trends he called encouraging.

Rankin offered high praise for the draft of guidelines for dealing with students infected with AIDS prepared by the Manchester public school system, which he called "very excellent." He said they are better than he has seen in any other community in the state.

Bankan, Hadler and Stephen Holzman, chairman of the Department of Psychiatry at MMH, provided their views during a panel discussion on the draft guidelines, which were distributed to the participants.

The guidelines recommend that most school children infected with the AIDS virus be allowed to stay in an unrestricted classroom. The guidelines also recommend periodic reviews by an advisory committee of health and education officials and contain various recommendations for preventing the spread of infections.

In response to the guidelines, Hadler stressed the need for periodic reviews and confidentiality in dealing with students afflicted with AIDS. Instead of routine screening or testing,

Federal sewer funding stalled

By Chris Rose

WASHINGTON — Authorization of federal funds that could help Manchester upgrade its sewage treatment plant is stalled in Congress, as lawmakers appointed to hammer out the water bill strain over controversial hazardous waste legislation.

Labriola said he has raised more money since the Fairfield caucus than he had previously in the entire campaign. He said he is taking in about $7,000 a day since the Fairfield caucus.

The winner of the GOP nomination will face the winner of a Democratic fight between William A. O'Neill and former U.S. Rep. Toby Moffett.

But Army Gen. Bernard Rogers, the supreme allied commander in Europe, was not as reticent.

He said in Atlanta Wednesday there is "irrefutable evidence" that Khadafy was behind the terrorist act, according to a Pentagon transcript of his remarks made available Thursday.

The Washington Post reported Friday that the United States had been warned about the bombing of the discotheque. An administration official told the Post the United States learned of the bombing "days before" the attack.

Rogers said U.S. officials tried to warn soldiers about the bombing, but "We were about 15 minutes too late."

He further said two Libyans recently expelled from France by the French government had been part of a conspiracy to "terrorize" the U.S. ambassador to Paris, Joe Rodgers.

"I think you'll find the press in a couple of days releasing the fact they had in fact been part of a party to terrorize the American ambassador in Paris," Rogers said.

Jet attack planes and fighter-bombers aboard the carriers America and Coral Sea were one option. Other speculation has focused on the Air Force bringing into action FB-111 bombers based in Britain or long range B-52 bombers berthed in the United States.

In Tripoli, Libya, meanwhile, the government said Libyans "are ready to die" for their country but it took no action in response to a U.S. threat to retaliate if there is proof Libya is to blame for terrorist attacks that killed six people — five of them Americans.

"We are waiting," an official of the Foreign Liaison Bureau said Thursday.

East powers its way past Manchester

By Bob Ponetti

Herold Sports Writer

All that nice, warm weather that blessed the procession gave way to cold and cloudy skies for Thursday's scholastic baseball opener between rivals East Catholic and host Manchester High at Kelley Field.

On one of those raw and bone-chilling afternoons that puts bees in the bats and knots in the muscles, East Catholic was overpowered.

With double-decision hurler Jim Powers receiving credit for both the win and the save, the Eagles trounced the Indians, 6-4.

Powers also ripped two hits, including a two-run double in the top of the third inning that proved to be the game-winning hit.

East shortstop Kevin Riggs was a perfect 3-for-3, including a wicked solo home run in the first frame off starter and loser Chris Helin.

The 1-0 Eagles built a 1-0 lead before staving off a three-run Indian rally in the bottom of the seventh.

"I almost blew it," admitted Powers. "But then again..."

"Powers the starter gave me a freebie to represent the tying tally. But Powers whiffed Dave Simler and induced Mike Custer to ground into a fielder's choice to end it."

Riggs made it 1-0 in the first when he yanked a two-out Helin hanger to right center that traveled some 400 feet in the air and might've rolled another 400 at fenceless Kelley Field.

"I throw him a curve and it just stayed there," described Helin. "All seem," said Riggs.

"That's the longest home run I've seen hit here," noted Race. Manchester tied it up in its half when McCarthy poked a two-out triple to right center and counted when Riggs muffed Simler's grounder. Roe had led off with a triple to right but was erased while trying to score on Leonard's shallow fly as right fielder Dan Bontempo gunned a perfect strike to catcher J.B. Kaldy.

In the East third, Powers stroked a two-run double, took third on the throw and scored on a passed ball by makeshift catcher Custer to make it 4-1. Regular starting catcher Mike Charter tore tendons in his tricep at the beginning of the week, precipitating the move of Custer, normally a third baseman, behind the plate.

The Eagles tied it in the fourth. Scott Lima walked, the fifth base on balls issued by Helin, and came all the way around when Custer threw Kaldy's sacrifice bunt into right field. Two outs later, Riggs legged out an infield single as Kaldy scored with the sixth run.

"We made a couple of bad plays that cost us a couple of runs and that was the difference," said

Race, whose Indians play against host Newington High at 1 p.m. on Saturday afternoon. Helin, who yielded four hits and three earned runs in four frames, was relieved by fellow southpaw Paul Gavarino for the final three innings. Gavarino gave up just two hits in three shutout innings.

Whalers are win away from ousting Quebec

QUEBEC (UPI) — The curse of the Adams Division hangs over the Quebec Nordiques.

The Hartford Whalers, led by the two-goal performance of Paul MacDermid and the outstanding goaltending of Mike Liut, beat the Nordiques 4-1 Thursday night. The victory, coupled with a 3-2 overtime triumph Wednesday, gives the Whalers a 2-0 lead in their best-of-five Adams Division semifinal series.

The curse for Quebec this year is most notably present in the goaltending of Liut. The lanky goalie blanked the Nordiques the first two periods and made several spectacular saves in stopping 26 of 27 shots.

"Liut has been the highlight in the two games," Quebec coach Michel Bergeron said. "Hartford seems to get stronger as the game goes on because they know Liut is behind them."

Hartford's secret is hard work, Liut said. "This team does not have an overwhelming amount of paper talent," Liut said. "But we have good character and leadership — people who come to the rink every night."

Game 3 and possible elimination for the Nordiques is Saturday night at Hartford.

"The series is far from finished even though the next game is do or die," Bergeron said. "Give credit to Hartford though. Everything is going well for them. We seem to panic and then try to do a little too much."

Hartford took a 2-0 lead in the first period on goals by Stewart Gavin and MacDermid.

"We were the underdogs, but we came here with an open mind," MacDermid said. "I'm sure we're making a lot of people sit up and take notice. We're going to clinch it Saturday."

Whalers defenseman Dave Babych said Liut's shutting out Quebec for two periods was crucial.

"They (Nordiques) come out and play hard in the first five or ten minutes," Babych said. "When you shut the guys out in their building for two periods, that says a lot for you."

Quebec's Michel Goulet (16) falls down after being neutralized by Hartford's Paul Goulet while goalie Mike Liut (1) makes the save in Stanley Cup playoff action Thursday night at Le Colisee in Quebec City. Liut stopped 26 of 27 shots to lead the Whalers to a 4-1 win, giving Hartford a 2-0 lead in the best-of-five series.

skate save on a low wrist shot by Cote through a maze of players two minutes later.

In the third period, he blocked a low wrist shot by an onrushing Pat Price and he stopped Dale Hunter twice from close in on a wrist shot and backhand.

"I'm just trying to do what I do best and make the saves I should," Liut said. "The playoffs aren't the time to analyze whether I'm playing well. I'm just interested in results at this point."

Liut made several key saves. He dropped to his knees to block a Paul Goulet wrist shot with 8:50 left in the second period and made a

At Masters golf tournament

Kratzert, Green share lead

By David Moffitt
United Press International

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Bill Kratzert and Ken Green share something more than the Masters lead. They both have unique caddies. Kratzert, after firing his regular caddy during a Wednesday morning dispute, is using a friend who usually sells electronic components. Green's caddy, here and on the PGA Tour, is his 29-year-old sister, Shelley. Kratzert and Green thrashed while posting 4-under-par 68. The enterprising second round with an eagle stroke led over T.C. Chen, the Chinese golfer who almost won last year's U.S. Open, and Gary Koch. Two-time Masters champion Tom Watson was just two shots off the lead along with frequent Masters threat Tom Kite, Australian Greg Norman, Canadian Dave Barr, Bob Tway, and Japan's Tommy Nakajima who bogeyed the last hole. Kratzert's caddy, 5-handicapper Chuck Hofus of Fort Wayne, Ind., said he had a "blast" caddying in the first of the four major golf championships. "I'm still in awe. I'm going today to do tomorrow what I did today. That means go around without hurting anyone, including myself," Green said.

Rookie carrying Canadiens; Islanders near elimination

By Lisa Harris
United Press International

The Montreal Canadiens and New York Islanders are resorting to risky traditions that helped them forge the NHL's two most glorious Stanley Cup dynasties. The Canadiens are riding rookie success and the Islanders are walking the tightrope. On the strength of three rookies, the Canadiens became one of six teams to take a 2-0 lead Thursday night in the best-of-five division semifinals. The Islanders face elimination after two losses to Washington for the second straight year. Washington took its 2-0 lead by winning 5-2, which the other Patrick Division semifinal is tied 1-1 after Philadelphia's 2-1 triumph over the New York Rangers. Montreal beat Boston 3-2, and Hartford shocked Quebec 4-1 to lead Adams Division semifinals 2-0. Edmonton best Vancouver 5-1, and Calgary beat Winnipeg 6-4 to take 2-0 Smythe leads, and in the Norris Division, Toronto stunned Chicago 6-4 to go up 2-0, and Minnesota beat St. Louis 6-2 to tie that series at 1-1. All teams travel Friday to switch sites and resume play Saturday. We've got to go right after them in the third game because, as history tells, we've got nothing right now," said Washington defenseman Murphy. Last year, the Islanders extended a history of comebacks by becoming the only team in NHL history to pull off a three-game rally in a five-game series. "No matter where you play, it's the game 4 to 5 that's the best," said Islanders goalie Billy Smith, whose sensational netminding sparked last year's playoff comeback. In the first-year netminding tradition Ken Dryden 1971 and Steve Penney 1984, Patrick Roy was brilliant for the second night in a row, making 18 saves for Montreal. Claude Lemieux scored 20 minutes to set a team playoff record for shots in a period.

Yankees squeeze out a win

NEW YORK (UPI) — Dale Berra's bases-loaded tenth-inning squeeze bunt scored Mike Easler and capped a six-run comeback Thursday as the New York Yankees defeated the Kansas City Royals 4-5.

Berra's bunt off reliever Alan Hargreaves scored Easler from third with one out in the tenth inning and helped the revive from a 2-0 deficit. The Royals had staked AL Cy Young winner Bret Saberhagen to the five-run lead by the fifth inning.

"I could see the pitcher (Hargreaves) wasn't throwing well. I had him in the hole and I was 90 per cent sure that I could do it," said Berra who dropped the 2-1 pitch down to the right of the mound as Easler broke for the plate.

Hargreaves, 0-1, did not field the ball cleanly and Easler scored without a play. Berra, after some initial confusion, ran to first and was credited with a single.

"There is no excuse for losing today," said the Yankees Mike Saberhagen who departed after the Yankees scored twice in the sixth to draw within 5-4. The Royals jumped to their 5-0 lead against Yanks starter Joe Niekro.

"We never really gave up in this game," said the Yankees Mike Pagliarulo who started the comeback with his first homer of the season, a two-run shot in the fifth.

Saberhagen coasted through the first four innings, allowing no hits and using only 47 pitches.

Canseco's blast enough for A's

By Joe Huzzi
United Press International

Jose Canseco will have to hit them farther if he is to maintain comparisons with Babe Ruth.

Canseco, whose titanic blasts in batting practice have people already comparing him to the Yankee legend, just cleared the left-center field wall for his first homer Thursday. Still, it was enough to satisfy himself and help the Oakland A's to a 3-0 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

"It's good to get it out of the way," said Canseco, the highly touted rookie who combined to hit 41 home runs in three pro stunts last season. "I might have been trying to hit the ball too hard lately. I found out the game isn't as easy as batting practice."

When he was called up from the minors last September, Canseco clouted five tape-measure home runs, including one which landed on the roof at Chicago's Comiskey Park.

His home run yesterday, off a John Butcher changeup, traveled about 390 feet.

"The ball hasn't been carrying real well here the last few days so I felt it had a chance to go out, but I just didn't know for sure," Canseco, a 5-foot-3 right-handed hitting outfielder, said. "He (center-fielder Kirby Puckett) went up with a decoy like he was going to catch it, but it managed to clear the fence."

His two-run homer in the seventh inning led the A's triumph and made a winner of Moose Haas, Oakland's latest acquisition.

Haas, obtained from the Milwaukee Brewers for a pair of minor leaguers, went 7 2/3 innings and Jay Howell finished for his first save.

Elsewhere in the American League, New York edged Kansas City 6-5 in 10 innings. Boston topped Detroit 4-2. Milwaukee downed Chicago 8-5. Baltimore beat Cleveland 5-1. Toronto out-slugged Texas 11-0 and Seattle topped California 5-2.

Brewers 6, White Sox 5

At Chicago, Billy Joe Roldouski singled home the tying run and Earnest Riles followed with a three-run homer in the ninth to rally Milwaukee.

The victory enabled the Brewers to complete a sweep of the White Sox in their season-opening three-game series.

Orlons 5, Indians 1

At Baltimore, Fred Lynn drilled a three-run homer in the seventh inning and Rick Dempsey added a pair of solo home runs to power the

Blue Jays 11, Rangers 10

At Arlington, Texas, Willie Upshaw smacked a two-run homer and George Bell followed with a solo shot in the eighth inning to boost the Blue Jays over the Rangers. Texas reliever Greg Harris, 0-1, allowed both homers. Tom Henke, 1-0, pitched the final two innings for the victory.

Mariners 5, Angels 2

At Seattle, Alvin Davis went 3-for-4 with three RBI and a homer and Gorman Thomas also homered to back the six-hit pitching of Matt Young for the Mariners. Young, 12-19 a year ago, pitched a complete game in his season debut. Don Sutton was the loser.

DETROIT — Al Nipper may have a new pitch — the breeze ball.

The Red Sox right-hander used the wind blowing in from left field to his advantage Thursday and wound up pitching Boston to its first victory, a 4-2 decision over the Detroit Tigers.

"The wind was blowing in from left and out to right," Nipper said. "I wanted to take advantage of it. He did take advantage of it — and the Tigers too, hurling four-hit ball over a 2-3 innings with Joe Samito getting the final out and a save.

It was Sambito's first save since April 27, 1982, when he blew his elbow out pitching for the Houston Astros.

"He took advantage of the elements," Detroit manager Sparky Anderson said. "Darrell Evans and Mike Laga both hit balls that would have been home runs any other day. No way in that wind."

"It was coming in," Detroit catcher Lance Parrish said of a breeze that made for a wind chill near zero on an overcast 40-degree day.

"I hit a ball in batting practice that I felt sure was out," Parrish said. "I didn't even make the warning track."

"I was concerned in the bullpen because my hands were so cold I didn't have a good breaking pitch," Nipper said.

Boston scored enough runs in the fifth, four of them with two out, to wrap up the game.

"You're supposed to be able to get out of the inning," sighed Petry, 0-1, who lost nine times in Tiger Stadium last season.

"That was a terrible pitch I threw to Ed Romero," Petry said.

Mindy Moore leads LPGA event

SAN DIEGO — Mindy Moore, the vice-president of the LPGA, has taken charge at the 100,000 Kyocera Innamori Classic.

Moore, who Thursday opened with a 6-under-par 65, enters her second round with a three-stroke advantage over Val Skinner, Patty Sheehan, Atsuko Higake, Hollis Stacy, Laurie Rinker and Pat Bradley.

Seven golfers are two shots below par.

Moore is seeking her first victory in six years on the tour. Thursday's 66 was a stroke better than the previous best round of her career.

Yannick Noah loses interesting match

DALLAS — Yannick Noah dropped one service break in his WCT quarterfinal match against third seed Stefan Edberg of Sweden and still lost in straight sets.

"It was an interesting match," said Noah. "I would have had to return better on his second serves and have been more aggressive. On this last surface, the serve is important and Edberg's serve moves well."

Edberg won 6-3, 7-6 (7-3), 7-6 (7-4) Thursday to advance to Saturday's semifinals, where he will meet the winner of tonight's Paul Anconino-Boris Becker match.

In the only other match Thursday, Anders Jarryd upset countryman Joakim Nyström 6-4, 6-2, 6-4.

Lloyd easy straight set winner

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. — Top seed Chris Evert Lloyd defeated 16-year-old newcomer Helen Koles in straight sets Thursday to advance in the Family Circle Cup tennis tournament.

Evert Lloyd, an eight-time winner of the tournament and defending champion, defeated the Canadian 6-4, 6-1 and will meet fifth-seeded Helen Sukova in Friday's quarterfinals.

Sukova advanced with a 6-1, 6-2 triumph over Great Britain's Annabel Croft.

UMass softball hurlers perfect

AMHERST, Mass. — University of Massachusetts women's varsity softball hurlers Thursday threw back-to-back perfect 7-inning games — no runs, hits or errors — against the University of Hartford.

Lynn Stockley, a sophomore senior from Pittsfield, Mass., had 10 strikeouts in winning the first game, 4-0, to up her season mark to 9-1 with six shutouts. She hasn't allowed an earned run in four games.

Lisa Rever, a sophomore from Union, N.J., had four strikeouts in the second game, a 5-0 rout.

Rams ink QB Steve Bartkowski

LOS ANGELES — Steve Bartkowski, a 33-year-old quarterback with a bum right knee, Thursday agreed to a contract with the Los Angeles Rams, his agent said.

The one-year deal, reportedly worth $250,000 plus incentives, had no guarantees about playing time, Leigh Steinberg said. Dieter Brock, a 34-year-old NFL rookie via the Canadian Football League, was the team's starter last year.

"Steve wanted an opportunity to play in the Super Bowl and this affords him to try and make that dream happen," Steinberg said. "We asked that he be given an ability to compete. We didn't ask for any promises to start, nor were any made."

Bartkowski, who has had five knee operations, was paid $575,000 in 1985 and was due to receive $600,000 next season before the Atlanta Falcons released him late last season after 11 years with the team.

Dodgers, Padres split tight series

The San Diego Padres and Los Angeles Dodgers played their first series of the season as tightly as if the playoffs were at stake.

Pitching dominated the four-game set at Los Angeles, in which a total of 10 runs were scored, five by each team. The teams split the first two games, including last night's 3-2 Padres victory.

"We're going to have to win by one run when we go up against the strong pitching that Los Angeles has," Dodgers manager Mark Thurmond said after earning the victory with a seven-hit, four-strikeout performance over 6 2/3 innings. "We had thought all along our pitching was going to be strong, and it looks like it's started off that way."

San Diego manager Steve Boros claims Thurmond has been his most consistent pitcher all spring, having developed a hard slider. Rick Gossage worked two innings for his first save. He had not pitched since April 1, but was not injured, according to Boros.

BROCKTON, Mass. — A four-run seventh boosted Massositt Community College to a 7-4 win over visiting Manchester Community College, sending the Cougars to their fourth straight defeat. MCC, 1-4, hosts Becker Junior College today at 3 p.m. at Cougar Field.

Dave Swain went the distance on the mound to absorb the loss for Manchester. Swain was touched only 10 hits and seven runs, all earned, while fanning four and walking one.

Catcher Rob Hill blasted a three-run homer for the losers in the top of the eighth.

Jeff Brennan and Stan Bize punched two hits apiece for MCC.

Jayne Torvill and Christopher Dean wave to the audience after winning gold medals during the 1984 Winter Olympics.

Olympic gold medalists Jayne Torvill and Christopher Dean mesmerize the world during their performance of "Bolero" during the 1984 Winter Olympics. The pair will perform at the Hartford Civic Center tonight at 7:30 and Saturday at noon.

Torvill and Dean skate into the Civic Center

By Nancy Pappas
Herold Reporter

Seated backstage at the Hartford Civic Center as they nibble on a light lunch of chicken salad and melon balls, Jayne Torvill and Christopher Dean hardly look like revolutionaries. She's a slender blonde with a dab of eye shadow that matches her turquoise silk blouse. He's a tall slim man who still exudes the wholesome look of a young British bobby, which is how he began his adult life.

But the pair from Nottingham, England, are, indeed, revolutionaries. In the past five years, they have revolutionized the sport of ice dancing. Instead of performing routines that look basically like Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers on ice, as the vast majority of ice dancers before them had done, they chose to take a far more dramatic approach.

IT'S NOT MERELY that they hold the British, European, Olympic, World Amateur and World Professional championships. Or that they took almost all of their medals with perfect scores from every judge, achieving scores which shattered records set by other champions.

But in choreographing the programs that won these medals — and now win fans for their professional show — Torvill and Dean extended the frontiers of ice dancing. Instead of performing routines that look basically like Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers on ice, as the vast majority of ice dancers before them had done, they chose to take a far more dramatic approach.

In "Paso Doble," for example, which they first performed at the 1984 Olympics, Dean takes the part of a Toreador, and uses Torvill as his cape. She clings to him, droops on the floor and swoops through the air — as if truly made of fabric.

The judges were as enthusiastic as the Olympic audiences, giving the pair a total of nine perfect 6.0 scores. The triumph of this imaginative work was all the more remarkable, in that the piece was not done as part of couple's so-called "free dance," which caps every competition.

It was choreographed to fit the stringent rules of a compulsory exercise called the set pattern, which each pair in a competition must perform to a rhythm chosen by the International Skating Union. Most skaters choose a simple, rather prosaic routine to fulfill the requirements of the set pattern, saving the fire for later in the competition.

"BUT WE WERE never ones for doing anything 'safe,' or as expected," Dean said this week. "We were always a little — uh — cheeky. I guess, for us, it works."

Those "cheeky" skaters — whom Time magazine called beautiful "almost beyond belief" — are in Hartford this weekend to perform at the Civic Center with their company of 18 hand-chosen champions from around the world.

For Torvill, 28, and Dean, 27, it's a happy return trip. In 1981, they were in Hartford for the World Figure Skating Championships — a competition which they took by storm, walking away with a gold medal and rave reviews.

"This place holds very happy memories for us," Dean said. "But the promoter said there was enough interest for a three-month tour," recalled Dean.

"That's right," put in Torvill. "So they asked us whose skating we liked, and they just started calling all these people for us, from around the world. It was incredible."

The producers rented, then flooded, an unused General Motors warehouse in a suburb outside of Sydney, Australia. The pair was given full artistic freedom to build an ice show in which every number would be of the caliber of those that won Torvill and Dean their medals.

THE SHOW which resulted has been playing to sellout, cheering crowds around the globe. "I think most people have seen us on the TV before they come to a show," Torvill said. "So they show pretty much what to expect. They're not going to get Surfers."

Andy Griffith is going to return to TV's Mayberry

By Mark Schwed
United Press International

NEW YORK — The old Andy Griffith Show would always open the same way. There was Andy, in his sheriff's uniform, and his son Opie, heading out to Myers Lake for some fishing. On the way, they whistled.

"Flain and a whistler" — that's the way we remember ole Andy and Opie. The town they grew up in, Mayberry, N.C., was as American as Aunt Bee's ginseng pie.

Come Saturday, if the weather was just right, Andy, Opie, deputy Barney Fife and maybe Gomer or Goober would head for the lake to fish with Andy carrying his prized fishing rod, "Eagle-Eyed Annie."

Their show, "Torvill & Dean — The World Tour," at the Hartford Civic Center this weekend is a near airing reruns with no end in sight.

THERE'S EVEN "The Andy Griffith Show" rerun watchers club, which was started in 1979 by four devoted fans at Vanderbilt University and now boasts about 100 chapters across the country.

Now, 26 years after the first broadcast, Andy Griffith is on the list of four of a New York City skyscraper — the last place on earth one would expect to find a gentleman sheriff from Carolina who never wore a gun.

The broken back is healed — it took a quarter-inch off his height — but he still is recovering from a disease, Guillain-Barre syndrome, that paralyzed him from his knees down and taught him the meaning of agonizing pain.

Healing, but still in plastic braces, Griffith is talking about the pride of his life. He has just finished work on "Return to Mayberry," the long-anticipated sequel to the Mayberry series starring all his old friends: Ron Howard, five-time Emmy winner Don Knotts, Jim Nabors and George Lindsey. It airs on the "NBC Sunday Night at the Movies" April 13 (9-11 p.m. EST).

"I am prouder of it than anything I've ever done," he says.

FANS of "The Andy Griffith Show" will be sad to hear that this is the last resurrection — Mayberry R.I.P.

Howard is too busy directing.

Nabors is doing a network pilot, and Griffith may find himself playing a criminal defense lawyer in a new series based on the recent movie "Diary of a Perfect Murder."

Griffith has never had a busier year, with four roles "as different from one another as I've ever had." He played a psychotic judge, a criminal defense lawyer, an alcoholic father and Andy Taylor of Mayberry.

"This is the best year I've ever had," he says. "The very best year I've ever had."

Those are mighty happy words from a man who not long ago thought "the ship had sailed."

After recovering from the broken back, Griffith was struck three years ago with the rare disease, Guillain-Barre. Overnight, he was paralyzed from his knees down and in agonizing pain. He was under heavy pain medication for six months and doesn't remember much about the period.

"My primary problem was this incredible, never-ending pain," he said. "Most of it is gone. But these braces diminish it."

Gertrude Ederle of the United States, the first woman to swim the English Channel, won a gold medal and two bronze medals raised by a city contract, two days ago, mayor Dutch Morial and Sanchez announced a tentative agreement. Friday's announcement came a day after Morial said firefighters might be subject to lawsuits if the strike were to lead to a loss of life or property. Morial and the City Council claim there is no money to grant firefighters a pay increase.

No place like home

Whether you're planning to build a greenhouse wing, add insulation or put up a new deck, you're going to find plenty of helpful information at the Connecticut Home Show at the Hartford Civic Center today through Sunday.

The highlight of this year's exhibit is a fully-furnished three-bedroom chalet-style home, from Shoreline Modular Homes of Madison. Seminars throughout each day cover such topics as installing paneling and choosing solar panels.

The show is open tonight until 10, Saturday from noon to 10 p.m., and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. General admission is $4, and $3 for senior citizens and children between 7 and 18. Children under 6 are admitted free.

Free parking is available at the State Office Building lots on Capitol Avenue. Shuttle buses begin running at 11:30 a.m. Saturday and Sunday, and continue frequent trips until 30 minutes after the show closes. Bus rides are 50 cents, round trip, with children riding free.

Here's the beef

Bring the children and grandparents, too, to a roast beef supper Saturday (from 4:30 to 8:30 p.m.) at the Community Hall of Second Congregational Church on Route 44, Coventry. Tickets for the supper, sponsored by the First Congregational Church of Coventry, are $4 for general admission, $3.50 for senior citizens and $1.25 for children.

Have Italian dinner

For a tasty Italian meal, go to the All Saints Episcopal Church, 444 Hill St., East Hartford, Saturday. Dinner will be served at 5:30 and at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $5 for adults, and $2 for children 6 to 12. Children under 6 will be admitted free.

Hear Hart graduates

For a musical treat, listen to cellist Randy Gordon and pianist Sharon Derby Saturday at 8 p.m. in the sanctuary of South United Methodist Church. The event is one of a series, in its eighth season, of high quality musical performances organized by David Cyle Morse, the church's artistic director. Both performers are Hart School of Music graduates who have performed as a duo throughout the state for the past two years. The program will include Sonata in G Minor by Henry Eccles, "Touch the Sky" by Gwyneth Walker, Hungarian Rhapsody, Opus 68, by David Popper and Sonata in A Major by Cesar Franck. Tickets are $3. For more information, call Morse at 647-9142.

Torvill and Dean visit Civic Center

The Civic Center show includes a reprise of many of the numbers which earned medals for the pair, including the duet from Jerry Herman's "Mack and Mabel," and a humorous, acrobatic number called "Barnum on Ice."

There are also a number of new production numbers, including a popular suite called "Song of India," which looks like it could have been part of a Rudolf Valentino sheik film.

The stars themselves appear in about 75 percent of the 2 1/2-hour show; they also choreograph works, train the company and oversee everything from costumes to transportation.

"It's been a very exciting time for us," Dean said. "But I have to laugh when I hear talk about the glittering life of the professional. As amateurs, we were much more pampered."

When they were competing, he said, they would perform for the public about six or seven times in a year; now they are doing at least that many performances each week.

"Also, when we were competing, we would spend the afternoons resting in bed. We could look ourselves in our rooms if we didn't want to talk with the press. Things are much, much different now."

But, so far, the pair said they have few regrets. "It would be nice to get more sleep," said Torvill, who says that her partner, "the hyperactive one over here," never seems to need much rest.

And Dean said he wouldn't mind getting home to Nottingham, England, a bit more often. "At least we used to head home between competitions," he said, somewhat wistfully.

But the drive to succeed with an artistic ice show has sustained them through homesickness and exhaustion. "Off the ice, it's sort of like we're fish out of water," Dean said. "On the ice, we're all we ever dreamed of — and more. It's not something we could ever give up. Not willingly."

Torvill and Dean — The World Tour, will be at the Hartford Civic Center for performances tonight at 7:30, and Saturday at noon. Tickets range from $10 to $15, with 50 percent discounts for students and senior citizens.

Ceilings to floors

When you're through with the home show (above), head for the Connecticut Spring Antiques Show at the State Armory on Capitol Avenue. This year's show includes furniture, of course, but also the hardware, traditional paneling, woodwork and even floorboards needed for restoring an early American home. There will also be an exhibit of tools used by the early carpenters, joiners and home builders — known as housewrights.

The profits from this year's show go to the Thankful Arnold House, a museum in Haddam. The show is open tonight until 10, Saturday from 1 to 10 p.m., and Sunday from 1 to 6 p.m. Admission is $4.50 per person.

Songs of the sea

The Sounding Board, a folk music coffee house, will present Dave Mallett, Schooner Fare and Joe Ferhan in a concert of sea music on Saturday. The concert will be in the Wallace Stevens Theater, Hartford Plaza off Asylum Street, Hartford, at 7:30 p.m. Admission is $8. For reservations, call 523-3283.

'Return of capital' considered non-taxable income

Like many Americans, you may have a large interest in municipal bonds. But as Eli J. Warach, divisional senior vice president of Prentice-Hall, and I agreed, you may, without realizing it, also have another kind of income that's tax-free. Don't make the mistake of paying tax on:

Sylvia Porter

Here is a list of nine kinds of income that qualify as a return of capital:

1. Life insurance dividends: Owners of cash-value life insurance issued by a mutual company receive dividends on their policies. The dividends are first treated as a return of the premiums paid on the policy. You pay tax only on the amount received over the total premiums.
2. U.S. Treasury bill discounts: When you buy a Treasury bill through the mail, you send $10,000 to the government and receive a check equal to the discount shortly after the issue date. The advance check is a return of capital. You don't receive taxable income until the bill matures (in 6 months or 12), and you are sent a check for $10,000.
3. Corporate dividends paid in stock: Ordinarily, a dividend you receive is made out of the corporation's earnings and profits. And it is fully taxable (less the $100/$200 dividend exclusion). However, a distribution in excess of earnings and profits is treated as a reduction in your tax basis for the stock. You pay no tax on that amount.
4. Ginnie Mae certificates: A Ginnie Mae certificate represents a share in a number of home mortgages. Like a bank that holds a house mortgage, the investor receives a monthly payment of principal and interest. The principal is considered a tax-free return of capital. Most Ginnie Mae investors own shares in a mutual fund that owns a number of certificates. The same tax-free return rule applies.
5. Voluntary retirement plan contributions: An employee can make a non-deductible voluntary contribution to his tax-sheltered retirement plan. There is no tax if money is withdrawn from the plan, up to the amount of prior contributions.
6. Installment sales: Many of you sell property — say, real estate — on the installment basis. The seller pays tax on the profit in the year he receives installment payments. A percentage of the payment represents a return of capital.
7. Auto rebates: Say you bought a new car from a dealer that is offering a rebate. You give the dealer $10,000 — the cost of the car — and he gives you back a check for $200 — not subject to tax. The dealer is simply giving you back $200 of your own money.
8. Annuities: Generally, an annuity is a contract between you and an insurance company. You pay money to the company in return for
9. Repayment of a loan: Possibly the most basic example of a tax-free return of capital is the repayment of a loan. Say your brother-in-law needs cash to start up a business. You lend him $20,000 at 10 percent, to be repaid over 10 years. The first year's payments come to $3,173, of which $1,228 is principal and $1,945 is interest. Only the $1,945 interest is taxable. The $1,228 is not taxable.
10. Moral: Make sure you don't pay tax on non-taxable income.

Maine skipper ready to set sailing record

HAMILTON, Bermuda (UPI) — A Maine skipper who has already set an unofficial record for breaking the world record for sailing alone is expected to arrive in Bermuda late today.

Dodge Morgan reported by radio that his 81 million, custom-built, 60-foot cutter American Promise was located 152 miles southeast of Bermuda Thursday, wife Marian, 42, said in St. George, the island's second largest town.

Morgan, 54, is expected to arrive as early as 3 p.m. today in Bermuda, where he began his five-month trip Nov. 12 in which he weathered two cyclones and a near collision with an iceberg.

The Maine entrepreneur has been at sea alone for 149 days in his quest to break the current world record for nonstop, solo circumnavigation of the world that was set in 1971 by Englishman Chay Blyth, who sailed around the world in 292 days.

"He is making good time and expects to be in Bermuda by three

Social Security

Apply early for a card

QUESTION: My daughter plans to get a job this summer. I know she'll need a Social Security card. How early should she apply for it if she begins working around the first of June?

ANSWER: It takes 10 days to 2 weeks to receive a card. It makes sense, however, to apply as early as possible, just in case there are any problems in gathering the proofs of age, identity, and citizenship or lawful admission status that every applicant must submit.

QUESTION: I'm confused about Medicare because I've heard it is a two-part program. Can you explain what that means?

ANSWER: As you pointed out, there are two parts to Medicare — hospital insurance and medical insurance. Hospital insurance can help pay for inpatient hospital care, inpatient care in a skilled nursing home, home health care and hospice care. Medical insurance can help pay for medically necessary doctors' services, outpatient hospital services, home health services and a number of other medical services and supplies that are not covered by the hospital insurance part of Medicare.

QUESTION: My parents have been married for over 25 years, and now they're getting a divorce. Will the divorce have any effect on my mother's benefits? They're based on my father's work record.

ANSWER: The checks that a wife receives based on her husband's work usually stop the month the divorce becomes final. However, if the marriage lasted at least 10 years and the wife is 62 or older, then she will continue to receive her checks. Your mother should notify a Social Security office when her marital status changes.

QUESTION: I get SSI and I'm thinking about moving south to another state. Will changing my state of residence affect my SSI payments?

ANSWER: Moving from state to state or in some states, from county to county, can indeed change the amount of your SSI check because part of that check may be paid by the state you live in. It's known as the state supplement, and it varies from state to state. Contact your Social Security office for more information.

Advice

What's up front or on top doesn't matter much to her

DEAR ABBY: Why all the letters about bald men? What makes people think a man needs hair in order to be attractive? And why should any man let his thinning hair grow long enough to wrap around his head six times to create the illusion of hair?

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

My husband is 33, and he's losing his hair but fast. Do I care? Heck, no. He gets more handsome and distinguished-looking every day. I can't wait until he is out of the military so he can start growing a beard. I think guys with what's on top or hair on their heads are the sexiest-looking men alive. Bald-headed men and flat-chested women have a lot in common. They feel embarrassed because of what they don't have. Some try to "fix it," which is OK if they think they need it. But once they wise up and realize that they have nothing to do with what's on top, they're much happier, self-assured and together.

My problem is not my collecting, but my children. They are all grown with homes of their own and find my habit distasteful. When I leave the house for work, shopping, vacation, etc., they clean me out. They go through my things and throw away what they regard as unnecessary and take for their own use whatever they want. They have discarded, or taken, some of my parents' belongings, baby clothes (special to me only), household items and my "junk."

DEAR BARBARA: As long as your "collection" does not present a fire hazard, is not in plain view and inconveniences no one in your home, your children have no right to enter your home in your absence and clean it out. Your husband's failure to support your right to privacy baffles me. You say, "It is his house as well, and I would have to respect his right to live in a clutter-free environment." Can it be your collection is actually an inconvenience and source of irritation to your husband but he has not verbalized it to you? Discuss it with him, and if that's the case, you owe it to him to stop collecting.

Use sweeteners with care

DEAR DR. GOTT: Which is safest for children: sugar, NutraSweet or saccharin?

Dr. Gott Peter Gott, M.D.

Many nutritionists believe that Americans eat too much sugar. Although the substance itself is safe for general use, a problem may arise because of quantity. Some authorities have questioned the safety of heavy reliance on aspartame (NutraSweet or Equal) in children's diets. Again, the question is one of quantity. Aspartame must not be used by people who have the genetic disorder called phenylketonuria (PKU). Similarly, saccharin is probably best limited to small doses.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 60-year-old male and have what my doctor says is peripheral neuropathy in both feet. He has not given me a very understandable explanation of what this ailment really is or how it developed. Can you do so?

DEAR DR. GOTT: A few years ago, my grandson, 14, was injured in an accident. He suffered a blood clot and had to have surgery on his head which left his left foot and hand in bad shape. Sometimes his hand tightens up, and he also limps on his left foot. Can anything be done to help him?

Facial cream easy to make

DEAR POLLY: I thought you might appreciate my recipe for homemade face cream. It was given to me years ago under the name "West Texas Face Cream" because it was formulated by women ranchers who retained their unlined skin with it despite the constant hot drying winds of that area. I have renamed it "Central Nebraska Face Cream" because my adopted state also has hot drying winds much of

DEAR POLLY: Instead of using baking nails in baking potatoes (which cooks them faster), I use the metal skewers you use to make shish-kabob. You can put more than one potato on a skewer and they are easy to handle. It's also easier to remove the long skewer from the potatoes. MARILYN

But the principal said, "I don't see any reason why Ryan shouldn't be in school. I don't think he poses a threat to anyone." Colby said Ryan is being provided with a separate bathroom and disposable eating utensils, just as he was on Feb. 21. Ryan's mother said the boy was "very, very happy" but "kind of confused about it all."

BUSINESS

Fund worth keeping despite broker's gaffe

QUESTION: Three months ago, I invested $25,000 in a mutual fund through a large brokerage house. I was told I would receive dividend checks for approximately $225 monthly. After two months, I received a statement, showing that my dividends were being reinvested. I contacted the broker, who said a mistake had been made and would be corrected, so that I would receive monthly checks.

Five days after that, I received a $187.20 dividend check for the most recent 30-day period. I went to see the broker again and he insisted the mutual fund pays dividends only quarterly. I read him a section of the fund's prospectus stating: If $10,000 or more is invested, the fund will issue dividend checks "monthly, quarterly or annually."

He had his secretary make a phone call and then told me I will be getting monthly dividend checks. If I don't receive monthly checks, plus my "lost dividends" for more than the first month, what can I do to get back my $25,000, without any penalty? I also feel I should get interest on the money for the time since I gave the brokerage firm my check.

ANSWER: You should take your gripe, first, to the manager of that brokerage office. If you get no satisfaction, contact the Office of Consumer Affairs,

Investor's Guide
William A. Doyle

U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, 460 Fifth Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20549, where all complaints about brokerages should be directed.

Now, for the bad news. It's more than doubtful you'll get everything you want. The SEC doesn't act as a collection agency. And, assuming everything gets straightened out, you won't lose anything.

While your dividends were reinvested, they were used to buy additional shares. So, you now own more shares than your $25,000 purchased. And, when the monthly checks start arriving, they'll be for dividends on a larger number of shares you now own.

If you "want out," you'll lose the charge on your investment - either in the form of a commission at the time of your purchase or a redemption fee.

That broker who fouled up your account twice is a real dunderhead. But, if you like that mutual fund and are satisfied with its dividends, the natural thing to do is keep that investment.

QUESTION: I went to a broker, intending to invest $75,000 in a mutual fund I had chosen. On the broker's recommendation, I put $25,000 in that fund and $25,000 in each of two other funds - all managed by different organizations.

A friend insists the broker collected more commission by handling things this way. Did he?

ANSWER: Yes. "Load" mutual funds have "quantity discounts" - meaning the percentage commission charge decreases on larger purchases. Typically, the load is about 6 percent on each $25,000 investment and about 4.5 percent on each $75,000 investment.

Using these numbers, you paid total commissions of $4,500 - $1,500 on each $25,000 investment - while you would have paid one commission of $3,750, if you had put the $75,000 into one mutual fund or a number of mutual funds managed by the same organization.

QUESTION: I have about one-third of my assets in four different mutual funds, all within the same "family of funds." Is it unnecessarily risky to have that much of my assets within the same management group?

ANSWER: You have no more risk than if you invested in four funds in different management organizations. Each mutual fund is a separate organization and has its own investment objectives. Some mutual fund management groups run 20 or more funds.

It's convenient to invest in two or more funds within the same management group. You can make easy switches from one fund to another within the group, usually by phone. All your statements and shareholder reports are similar. Keeping track of your investments is much less complicated than when you have your money spread among many managers.

Doyle welcomes written questions, but he can provide answers only through the column.

Energy options detailed

QUEBEC (UPI) - New England has a wide choice in trying to fill electricity needs that will increase by almost 50 percent by the turn of the century, says New Hampshire Gov. John Sununu.

(It electricity) can come from a number of sources," Sununu told reporters at an energy conference of New England governors and eastern Canadian premiers Thursday.

"Certainly, our friends north of the border would love to sell us more electricity. Some of the states in the Midwest and South have also been talking with us. It's in our region's interest to begin negotiating aggressively in the good climate that we have right now," he said.

New England now consumes 17,000 megawatts of electricity annually. That figure could go up another 8,000 megawatts by the year 2000, Sununu said.

"Coal is very abundant in the Midwest U.S. and new coal plants burn it cleanly," Sununu said. "Nuclear power going to rebound in the latter part of this decade and oil has become awfully competitive in the last six to eight weeks. They're all part of the solution."

For contented consumers

Sununu met privately with Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa and New England governors on his $17 billion plan to develop a second phase of the James Bay hydro-electric project. Bourassa says it would make an additional 12,000 megawatts of energy available for sale to the U.S.

Sununu told reporters that the New England states could use the extra power within 20 years, but are reticent about increasing their dependency on foreign energy supplies.

By 1991, Hydro-Quebec will supply 10 percent of the 20,000 megawatts of electricity consumed annually in the New England states.

"The question is whether the region wants to go much over 10 or 15 percent," Sununu said. "If the price is high, we might stay at 10 percent. If the price is extremely low, we might be willing to go to 20 or 25 percent. It's more of a buyer's market than it used to be two or three years ago."

Without firm sales contracts with the NUCWEA states, Bourassa will have problems borrowing money on the U.S. market for a James Bay expansion.

"I can assure you that if we can come up with an agreement on long-range costs (with Bourassa), we'd have no problem at all in convincing the various pieces of our economic structures that these (James Bay) were good investments," Sununu said.

Stephen Smith, a senior vice-president of McGraw-Hill Publications Co., told the conference that between now and the turn of the century electricity use will increase 2.8 percent annually in the U.S.

The Labor Department reported

Carbide president repeats objection to fine by OSHA

By Mark Poxton
The Associated Press

CHARLESTON, W. Va. - Union Carbide President Robert Kennedy, arguing against claims that Institute plant workers were used as canaries to detect leaks, says employees are taught to use their heads, and noses, in emergencies.

"I will say flatly that we do not use our employees as 'canaries' at our plant. The folks in the plant are taught to use their heads - and that includes their eyes, ears and noses. In a chemical plant, everybody sniffs for leaks," Kennedy said Thursday.

It was his first West Virginia appearance since the federal government levied a record $1.3 million fine against Carbide for safety violations.

Kennedy, who will take over as Carbide chairman when Warren Anderson retires later this year, members of the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration was unfair when it cited the Institute plant for 221 safety violations, including 130 the agency called "willful."

The OSHA citations followed a six-month inspection of the Institute plant, the site of an Aug. 11, 1985, leak of a deadly gas, which killed 14 workers and injured 100.

Kennedy specifically denied OSHA's contention that employees were told to use their noses to detect leaks of deadly phosgene gas, an allegation that U.S. Labor Secretary William Brock compared to the former practice of using canaries to detect dangerous gas levels in mines.

Kennedy said the Institute plant is equipped with detectors 10 times more sensitive than the human nose and that workers sent out to investigate in-plant alarms are told to use safety devices.

He said company officials do "everything we can" to fight the fines. But he also said Carbide took "corrective action right away" on some violations found by OSHA investigators.

Meanwhile, OSHA spokesman Perry Jones in Charleston said Carbide's fines might have been $150,000 if they had been levied a week earlier. Jones said the fines were issued under a tougher agency policy.

Before then, he said, only one fine was levied for multiple citations of the same violation. OSHA now can fine companies each time the violation occurs.

Company officials have said the majority of the safety citations boil down to differences over how employee injury records should be kept.

THE COMPANY is cutting its inventory of some dangerous substances, including a 32 percent cut in the amount of methyl isocyanate and a 50 percent reduction of phosgene stored at Institute. MIC is the chemical that leaked from Carbide's Bhopal, India, plant in December 1984, killing more than 2,000 people. Phosgene was used as a nerve gas during World War I.

"The less you have sitting around in tanks, the less chance you have of a problem," Kennedy said.

The reductions are a direct result of the Bhopal accident, which made the chemical industry reconsider common practices, Kennedy said.

Kennedy said he met early Thursday with Gov. Arch Moore and with 10 local government officials to discuss the company's plans. He said the company considers it important to communicate with local residents to allay their fears.

The company, however, blocked members of a local citizens' group, People Concerned About MIC, from attending Thursday's press conference.

"We feel as members of the community we have a right to be informed of what is being planned," said Institute resident Estella Chandler, among those prevented from entering the press conference. "Why can't we hear what's being said to the press?"

She said OSHA has taken a great stride in protecting the safety of plant employees but added, "Who will speak for us?"

Meanwhile, Kennedy said 1,200 layoffs planned as part of Carbide's reorganization primarily will affect the company's corporate level.

"I expect those reductions will be very, very minor here in the valley," he said.

He declined, however, to say what part of the company will be affected by an announcement that $1 billion in assets will be sold as part of that reorganization.

One-gallon plastic milk containers are ready for filling at a Phoenix dairy. Some 45 million containers are handled each week in the U.S. alone. A process patented by Phillips 66 trims the amount of Marlex polyethylene needed for each container, providing savings in material without loss of strength that would affect the milk.

Rate rumors spur market rise

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market advanced broadly today on talk of new declines in interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 6.92 to 1,801.22 in the first hour of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by more than 2 to 1 in the early rally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The stock and bond markets have been given a lift this week by speculation that the Federal Reserve might soon reduce its discount rate, which stands at 7 percent. Today's economic news heightened those hopes.

The Labor Department reported that the producer price index of finished goods dropped 1.1 percent in March. And the Commerce Department said retail sales declined 0.8 percent in the same month.

Analysts said a sluggish economy, with inflation at bay, provides a nearly ideal setting for further moves by the Fed to relax its credit policy.

Even though rates have lately fallen to their lowest levels since the 1970s, many observers believe there is room for them to fall further as long as inflation does not revive.

International Business Machines rose 1/4 to 151. The company reported first-quarter earnings of $1.85 a share, against $1.61 in the comparable period a year earlier.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks added $5 to 136.98. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .30 at 269.36.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 15.68 to 1,794.30, bringing its gain over the past three sessions to 58.81 points.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 2 to 1 on the NYSE. Big Board volume totaled 184.76 million shares, against 156.25 million in the previous session.
