U.S./World In Brief

Hostage families denounce Reagan

WESTMINSTER, Calif. — The families of seven former and current American hostages in Lebanon prayed tearfully Friday for the safe return of their loved ones and angrily accused President Reagan of disregarding the captives' safety. Some 1,000 school children, singing the charity anthem "We Are The World" and "Let There Be Peace," joined the families in an hour-long tree planting ceremony and prayer at Liberty Park as a Marine Corp color guard stood by.

Volcano rumbles, eruption feared

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — The restless Augustine Volcano sped more ash and gas Friday, intensifying fears it was building toward a big blast — one which could cause a tidal wave and endanger clam diggers. Augustine's high plume rose 2 miles on Thursday and grew to 4 miles, said Betsy Yount, a U.S. Geological Survey volcanologist. Yount said the 4,025-foot mountain was leaking material from numerous holes on its north face and scientists fear it could erupt in a violent blast that could send a giant chunk of the unstable mountain into the sea, causing a tsunami — a giant wave.

AIDS cases in New York increase

NEW YORK — AIDS cases in the nation's largest city are again on the rise, breaking a pattern where new cases of the deadly disease leveled off for six months, health department officials said Friday. A study showed 228 new AIDS cases were reported in February and 282 in March, said Dr. Stephen Schultz, deputy director for epidemiology at the City Health Department. The previous six months, in which 190 monthly cases were reported, was actually a "statistical phenomena" that has occurred periodically, Schultz said.

Reagan invites Aquino to visit

MANILA, Philippines President Reagan telephoned President Corason Aquino for the first time since she came to power two months ago and invited her to visit the United States, officials said Friday. A government statement said the conversation took place at 11 p.m. local time Thursday and lasted about three minutes. According to the statement, Reagan invited Aquino to visit the United States and suggested a date sometime after the U.S. elections in November.

Briton fatally shot in France

LYON, France — A hooded gunman Friday fired two shotgun blasts into the chest of a Briton working for the American food company Black and Decker, fatally wounding him as he stood on his front porch. A caller saying he represented an Arab group claimed responsibility for the slaying of Kenneth Marston, director of Black and Decker's French operations, in telephone calls to two news agencies. "We will destroy all English and American capitalist interests in the world," he said.

Spain orders expulsion of Libyans

MADRID — Spain ordered the expulsions Friday of 11 Libyan diplomats, students and teachers for alleged involvement in terrorism and restricted the movements of other Libyans allowed to remain in the country. The ministry said one diplomat, identified as economic attaché Ramadan Mohamed Rubheim, and two administrators at the Libyan embassy in Madrid were told to leave because of alleged terrorist activities incompatible with their diplomatic status. Eight other Libyans — five teachers at a Libyan-run school and three university students — were ordered expelled because of their links with "activities contrary to state security," the ministry said.

Reagan wants new mobile ICBM

WASHINGTON — President Reagan has directed the Pentagon to study the feasibility of building a mobile multiple-warhead intercontinental ballistic missile, about the weight of the silo-based Minuteman, administration officials said Friday. A month ago, the Pentagon directed the Air Force to study four options in developing a new missile with weights ranging from 30,000 pounds to 75,000 pounds and with one to three warheads. Reagan's order for the study marked the latest twist in a long debate about the proposed Midgetman missile, originally conceived as a single-warhead truck-transportable weapon weighing 30,000 pounds. Cost estimates for building 200 of the missiles and their transporters range up to $50 billion. A report commissioned by the Pentagon and released March 31 concluded that the missile should weigh 37,000 pounds, with the extra weight needed for decoys within the nose cone to fool Soviet defenses.

Britain sends some Libyans home

By Larry Thorson The Associated Press

LONDON — The government Friday barred more than 300 Libyan student pilots and airplane mechanics from continuing their studies, citing a risk to national security, and put 22 other Libyan students on a flight out of the country. The government said that about 16 Libyans studying to be pilots and about 320 studying airline maintenance would be affected by the order. It said they would be expected to leave the country when their visas expire in a few months. The 22 Libyans expelled Friday had been detained earlier in the week for alleged revolutionary activity. They included a student pilot who reportedly offered to form suicide squads to attack U.S. targets.

Security officials at London's Heathrow Airport go through the luggage of expelled Libyan students Friday. Britain. They were escorted aboard a Libyan Arab Airlines Boeing 727 by police with submachine guns. They shook their fists and chanted slogans against President Reagan and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher as they walked from police vans to the plane at Heathrow Airport. A number of the Libyan plane crew handed out posters and postcards showing Libyan leader Col. Muammar Khadafi with his adopted 15-month-old daughter, who doctors and officials in Libya say was killed in the April 15 U.S. air raid. "Daddy you loved me, Reagan killed me," said the caption on one of the postcards. Thatcher backed the raid and allowed U.S. planes based in Britain to take part. Her government did not order the approximately 336 Libyans

Reagan off on 'winds of freedom' trip

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan heralding "a new era" of democracy around the globe set out on his "winds of freedom" trip to Asia to reaffirm political ties and rally U.S. allies against terrorism. Carrying a message of political and economic cooperation, Reagan received a rousing send-off as he began a 22,000-mile journey that will include discussions of Southeast Asian security in Indonesia and of terrorism and economic problems at the summit in Japan. Vice President George Bush, members of the Cabinet and scores of political appointees and invited guests were on hand to cheer Reagan as he left the White House, bound first for an overnight stop in Los Angeles. The Marine Band played "Stars and Stripes Forever" and the crowd waved as his helicopter lifted off for the brief flight to Andrews Air Force Base in nearby suburban Maryland. In brief plumeside remarks minutes before takeoff for California — the first of several rest stops designed to minimize jet lag — Reagan said he wanted to "reaffirm and renew our economic, strategic and political ties" with allies. Reagan described the agenda for

Packwood changes tax reform strategy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Finance Committee Chairman Bob Packwood, R-Ore., conceded Friday that his panel had made much progress in rewriting the nation's tax laws and said he would try to revive efforts by putting his draft bill aside and exploring other options. After weeks of unsuccessfully trying to write a major tax reform bill, Packwood called his committee members into private session Thursday to discuss a radically different and simpler approach — wipe out all deductions and lower tax rates. "The committee was asked to start from square one," he told reporters Friday. "It was clear we were not making any progress on square two."

Waldheim memo says he'll refute allegations

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Kurt Waldheim's autobiography does not mention that from 1942 until the end of the war he served as a German officer in the Balkans, but he has acknowledged it since. The World Jewish Congress alleges Waldheim was involved in or knew of the deportation of 42,000 Greek Jews to Nazi death camps in 1943 while he was a first lieutenant stationed in the Balkans. It also claims he took part in operations against Yugoslav partisans in West Bosnia in 1942. Waldheim's Vienna office said in a statement: "This suggestion (by the World Jewish Congress) is only a recommendation made on a low bureaucratic level of the American Justice Department and is therefore at no decision-making stage."

Thieves stretch test drive into a three-week joy ride

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are tired. We had a second car that we no longer needed, so we decided to sell it. I parked the car on front lawn with a "For Sale" sign on the windshield. During the noon hour, a young man rang our doorbell and said he was looking for a second car for his wife. (She was waiting in their car, in our driveway.) I went out, unlocked the door and started the engine. He asked the price and seemed interested. Then he asked if he could drive it around the block. I said he could, so he motioned for his wife to come. He asked her if she would like to drive. She got under the wheel, and he got in on the passenger side. She backed the car into the street, and they drove away.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Thirty minutes later, they had not returned, so I called the police. A policeman came and checked the car this couple had left behind. It had been stolen in Oklahoma City — some 35 miles away. This happened three weeks ago and our car is still missing. How could this have happened?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have been in the hospital several times over the last four or five years, and every time I get a urinary tract infection within 24 hours. My doctor and I experimented and found that the problem was caused by the soaps used in the hospital, all of which kill body odor. Now I take my own soap and have no more problems. Shouldn't hospitals use non-allergenic soap?

DEAR READER: Because some people appear to react to deodorant soaps, many hospitals have changed over and are using the hypoallergenic varieties. Thank you for sharing your experience.

Erma Bombek says "It frightens me, somehow, to imagine what the world would be like without them." Amen, Erma. Without them we would have to close the doors to the emergency shelter and to the soup kitchen.

This column would not be typed, your checks to aid those in need would not be deposited, isolated elderly would not be remembered at Christmas, the good as new used toys which bring joy to both parents and children of low income families would grade the garbage can instead of the Christmas tree.

FINAL RECKONING! After a truly heroic struggle, the cops overpowered the robbers 63 to 55 with John "The Judge" Cashman high scorer for the police and the Rev. Paul "The Troll" Kroll high scorer for the clergy team. Laura Gunatan and Travis Hiller were winners of the 12 and over open pool shooting contest and Jon Gelas captured the 12 and under award.

Others participating were Chris Prue, Jennifer Gates, Sarah Hiller, Paul Dean, Tyler Miller in the 12 and under award.

Problem might be in the air

DEAR DR. GOTT: For the past four or five years, starting in December and continuing until about February, I felt slightly nauseated, with a headache, weakness and shortness of breath. Do you think I should have my furnace checked out?

Dr. Gott
Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR READER: I don't know — but it certainly couldn't hurt. While you are at it, also check the muffler on your car. Fumes from burning oil and gasoline can cause the symptoms you describe.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband died, without any warning, of myocardial infarction. What is this?

DEAR READER: When a blood clot lodges in a coronary artery, a portion of the heart muscle is deprived of oxygen and dies. This heart attack is called a myocardial infarction or a heart attack.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have been in the hospital several times over the last four or five years, and every time I get a urinary tract infection within 24 hours. My doctor and I experimented and found that the problem was caused by the soaps used in the hospital, all of which kill body odor. Now I take my own soap and have no more problems. Shouldn't hospitals use non-allergenic soap?

DEAR READER: Because some people appear to react to deodorant soaps, many hospitals have changed over and are using the hypoallergenic varieties. Thank you for sharing your experience.

Thoughts

"Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called children of God."

All of the beatitudes. This may be the one that we understand best. It speaks to our time as it speaks to all times. Peace is hope, a dream, a goal. It is a sign of God's presence.

of dealing with others (whether the focus is within the family, or as neighbor to neighbor, or nation to nation or race to race) that makes the difference.

But it is not solely us, because left to our own devices we tend always to do that which defies and destroys peace. Left to our own will and initiative, peace is elusive and at times, even non-existent.

WEST POINT, Pa. (AP) — Many adults probably remember chicken pox as a brief, unpleasant episode in childhood which was over after a few days of discomfort and itching.

More than 3 million Americans contract chicken pox, or varicella, each year, and by the time they reach age 10, as many as 85 percent of all children in the United States have had chicken pox, according to Merck Sharp & Dohme, a pharmaceutical firm.

For some who contract the pox, it is no minor matter, however. It accounts for about 4,500 hospitalizations and an estimated 100 deaths in this country each year.

Dr. Gott's new Health Report on Irritable Bowel Syndrome explains the causes and management of this common problem. For your copy of the report, send $1 plus your name and address to P.O. Box 2597, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to ask for the Health Report on Irritable Bowel Syndrome.

The story behind the story

By Josie

Q. I recently saw the films "The Coca Cola Kid" and "Heat and Dust" and was impressed by the performances of the actress Greta Scacchi. Could you tell me about her? Grant Bishop, North Fork, Calif.

A. She was born in Milan in 1960, the daughter of an Italian father, who was an art dealer, and a British mother, a former dancer-turned-dancing-teacher. Her parents separated when she was 3, and her mother moved her and her older twin brothers back to England. From the age of 8, she wanted to become an actress, something her father, to whom she was not close, actively discouraged.

When she was 15, though, she moved with her mother and by-then stepfather to Australia and began to appear in plays at the Festival of Perth. At 17, she returned to England, worked as a model and studied at the Bristol Old Vic, from which she graduated in 1981. Appearances in films and TV followed, among them a low-budget film called "Dead on Time," a German film called "Das Gesicht" and a British TV series called "Bergerac."

"Heat and Dust" was her big break. Projects that have followed are the British TV productions of "The Ebony Tower" opposite Lord Laurence Olivier and "Doctor Fischer of Geneva" opposite Alan Bates and the late James Mason; the CBS TV movie "Camille" and the Australian movie "Burke and Wills" and the miniseries "Waterfront," both of which could be imported to the U.S.

Vanessa Williams

Q. I haven't heard much about ex-Miss America Vanessa Williams lately. What has she been up to? Felicia Washington, Fresno, Calif.

A. She's been doing guest appearances on TV shows, such as "He's the Mayor," "The Red Fox Show," "Love Boat" and "T.J. Hooker." But, according to an associate, she's thinking more along the lines of a music career at the moment. "She just sang on a George Clinton album and she loved it," says the aide.

Q. Could you please tell me what Kurt Russell is doing now, if he's married and if he has any children. K.K., Olyphant, Pa.

A. He just finished a movie called "Big Trouble in Little China" that should be out in June. He isn't married, as we go to press, but he and Goldie Hawn have been living together since they co-starred in "Swing Shift" and are expecting a baby this summer. He also has a 6-year-old son, Boston, with ex-wife Season Hubley.

Andrew Ridgeley and George Michael

Q. Please tell me a little bit about George Michael and Andrew Ridgeley of Wham! Jaime McLennan, Saint John, N.B., Canada; Tami Lindsey, Tunkhannock, Pa.; Shirley Wyatt, Ontario, Calif.

A. They're 22, both first-generation British (Michael's real name is Panayiotou and his father is a Greek Cypriot; Ridgeley's father is Egyptian) who met as schoolmates at 12 in the Hertfordshire town of Bushey.

In those days, Michael was significantly pudgier and wore glasses. Ridgeley was (and, by all accounts, still is) something of a troublemaker. But they had two things in common. They both like Elton John's music and they both wanted to make some of their own: Michael had wanted to become a pop star since the age of 7.

They formed a band and at 16, left school to pursue the music full time in a group called The Executives. That band didn't last long, and by 1982 they were a duo signed to a small label called Inner Vision Records. With 20 pounds of their advance money, they bought studio time and with a few musician friends and a drum machine, recorded a demo of a song they'd written called "Wham Rap (Enjoy What You Do)."

By the summer, the clubs were playing it, conservative radio stations were banning it, and Wham! was on its way. The single "Young Guns (Go For It)" followed and brought them to America, where their first album, "Fantastic," was released in July 1983.

The second album, "Make Me Wake Up Before You Go-Go" and "Careless Whisper" established them further. When they were invited to China last spring to perform, the first Western rock band to do so, they, obviously, made a little history as well.

Now, though, as you may have heard, the band is splitting, a decision Michael made, apparently, without telling Ridgeley or their record company first.

The reasons given seem to be both political and personal: Michael bolted after learning that their management company was being taken over by a company partly owned by the South African businessman who developed the controversial Sun City resort; but he was also reportedly disenchanted with his partner's negligible contributions to the band of late.

Plans now call for the already-in-progress Wham! single to be released; after that, Michael will do a solo single and an album next year. Ridgeley says he has acting plans, but the details are sketchy.

Barbara Mandrell

Q. I am a big fan of Barbara Mandrell. How is she feeling and what is she doing? Millie Boyer, Albert Lea, Minn.

A. According to a friend, she's feeling "fine — almost completely recovered" and is currently finishing up a two-month concert tour to prove it. (The stage set, though, features more ramps than stairs, to make sure that she doesn't in any way put any strain on her leg, which was severely injured in a September 1984 car accident but has healed.)

After the tour ends on April 29, she should have a new album out; she was working on it prior to leaving on tour. And following that, she has plans to shoot a TV movie, tentatively titled "A Question of Guilt."

Sock question is hairy

If nothing is showing, you're OK

By Sandi Hastings

QUESTION: My wife informed me I'm wearing the wrong kind of socks, because I don't wear over-the-calf length socks. I can't believe she can be so picky. What difference does it make what socks I choose to wear?

ANSWER: Your socks should be long enough to cover a hairy leg when you sit down or cross your legs. You can be sure to avoid this problem if you wear over-the-calf length socks in brown, black or navy with your suits. If your socks cover your legs when you are seated and your legs are crossed I don't feel you need to change your socks.

QUESTION: I recently had my makeup done and I was told I looked better without black eye liner. I have dark hair and dark eyes and have worn black liner for years. I feel as though I have no makeup on when I don't wear the eye liner. Do you agree that less is best?

ANSWER: Yes, I also believe less is best. In fact, I believe makeup should be very natural looking — a second skin. Many women wear black eye liner and often it overpowers their eyes. Others notice the eye liner, not the eye. Using lighter color shadows and a lighter color liner will open the eye and make it look larger and brighter. I suggest you follow the suggestions given to you by the professional makeup consultant. Initially wear the eye colors a bit darker than recommended and gradually lighten the color as you get used to the new technique.

QUESTION: My wife bought me a paisley tie for Christmas, but I'm reluctant to wear it to work. Is it too flashy for someone in a conservative industry to wear?

ANSWER: Paisley ties have caused a stir in men's fashion. Although most stores reportedly sold all paisley ties in stock during the Christmas season, many speculate that the ties were bought by women for men who would never wear them. Men in New York, Chicago and other big cities are wearing these ties, but you must judge what is appropriate in your particular industry. If men in higher positions have incorporated these ties in their wardrobes without negative attention, it's safe for you to wear one. If no one else is wearing a paisley tie it might be best to let someone else blaze the trail. Do wear your paisley tie in non-business situations for an updated look.

QUESTION: I have been encouraged to color my gray hair by my hairdresser, but I'm afraid it will drastically alter my image. I do feel I look more drawn and tired since my hair began to gray. Do you recommend coloring the gray or should I keep it natural?

ANSWER: It's difficult to answer the question without seeing your hair. In general, it depends on the hair color and whether or not the gray enhances or ages a person's image. The desire to cover gray hair is one of the strongest motivations for professional women to color their hair. In the business world, men are considered distinguished looking when their hair grays; however, women are considered old looking. If you trust your hairdresser, it's probably a good idea to let her color your hair. Be aware it's not a good idea to darken your hair when covering the gray because it may end up with a flat shoe-polish look. Instead select a shade one step lighter than your natural color.

M. Renee Taylor

Feeding time at the zoo! M. Renee Taylor, the Manchester Herald's arts critic, prepares to feed her birds. A few "devils" are already out for an early-morning fly.

Her apartment is for the birds

Manchester Herald's arts critic likes ruffled feathers

Arts critic by night and bird breeder by day — that's me! How did I get involved in the bird fancy? Believe me, it's remarkably easy.

Family and friends think it's an insane hobby which has gotten out of hand. For me, though, nothing beats the pride and joy of holding the season's first live chick.

There are 40 million of us bird owners in the United States. Once we get one color or type of bird, we think we need another.

I sometimes think that every bird sold should carry a warning: this bird may be hazardous to your wallet and sanity. Still, for all the hard work and patience birds require, there isn't a bird owner alive who isn't bubbling over with happiness at some cute thing their "Polly" did.

My passion is parakeets, both the Americans and their larger English cousins. They all derive from the same grasslands seed-eater that was first exported from Australia in the 1840s. Flocks of yellow-faced greens still roam the interior from open waterhole to another.

Classified as melopsittacus undulatus, they're called Budgerigars (bud-ger-e-gars) by the Aborigines. It means "pretty good eating." There's not much meat on budgies, though. They are 6 inches and 2 ounces of frisky sociability. Centuries of selective breeding have produced a wide variety of colors and wing markings.

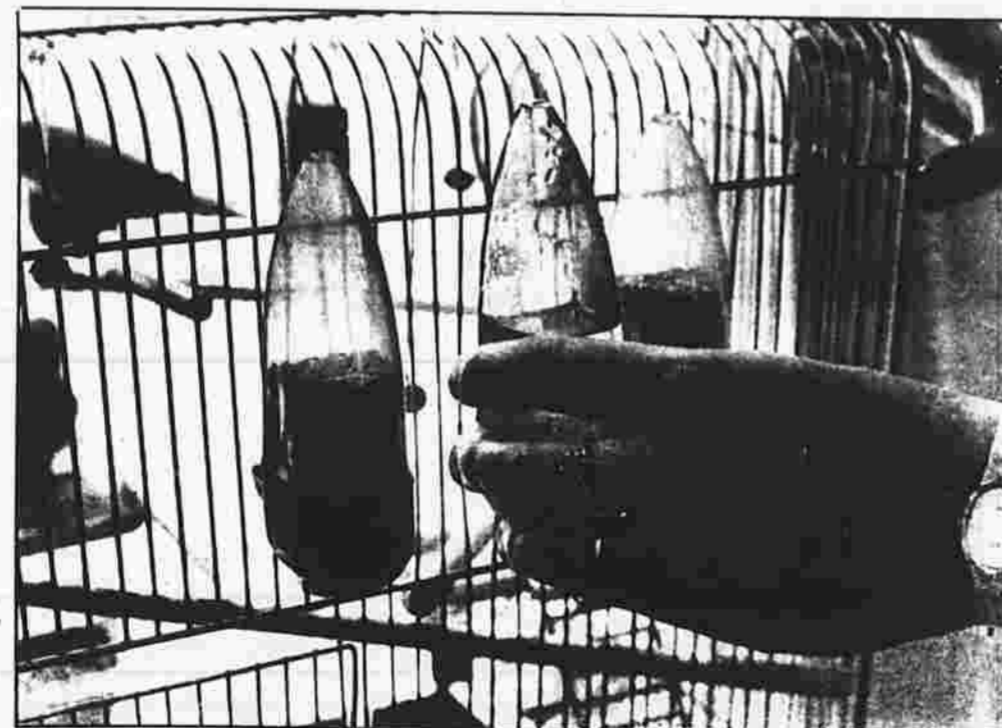

A back yard feeder was my undoing. Before I got that and a field guide to identify the 40-odd species that came to the feeder, I hadn't taken more than ordinary notice of birds. Several well-hidden pairs were nesting in pine trees by my house and I grew curious about how they lived and raised their young.

Two Christmases ago, I received a pair of parakeets. They were as afraid of me as I was of them the first few days. Soon they had the run of the house and were joined by others as I collected different colors, and more cages from tag sales.

Birds do tend to take over your life. I don't know what you're doing at 7 a.m. but I'm usually vacuuming seed hulls, cleaning cages and banding six-day-old chicks.

You want a vacation? You'd better arrange for reciprocal bird sitting with some other bird person. If the little guy should get sick, you'll pay more than his original price to have a vet see him.

The breeding started as a curiosity, but I discovered that they'd only breed if several pairs were put up, each in its own cage with a nest box.

Misery loves company, I guess. It's against all the rules, but the first season I let the virgin birds pick their own mates, just to get things started. My spoiled pets resented the confinement in a small cage with no toys and only one bird with which to chat.

It was a battle of wills. What would break first — their stubbornness or my soft heart? They were all old enough and in perfect condition to breed. So, after a month and a half of suspense, and my encouragement ("Atta boy, Cochise"), one hen after another started laying her eggs.

Sweetheart, my yellow pied hen, only settled down to married life after a solid month of henpecking. Poor Robin Hood, her patient cock. I must admit to some psychological warfare there. I placed her cage close to Saltine's. Saltine was my green hen who was already hatching peeping babies. Worked like a charm.

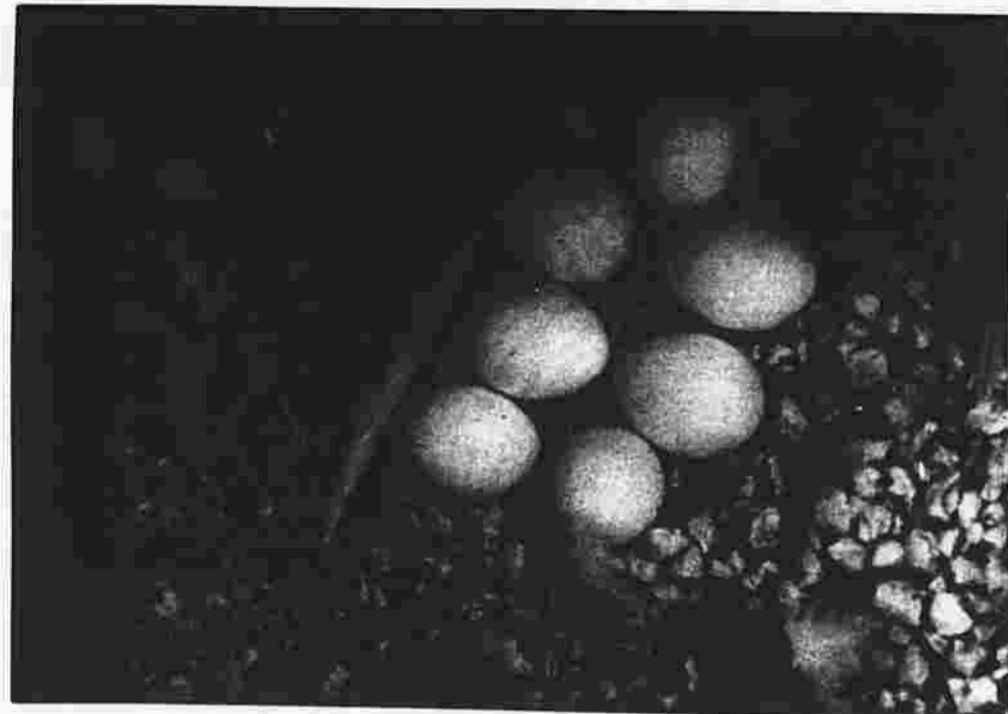

Romeo, my blue hen, first laid her two eggs outside the box on the cage floor. When I placed them inside the box, as if to spite me, she smashed them. Always was a rotten bird. She finally settled down and laid six eggs. She laid them in the corner instead of the middle of the box, but the six chicks are gorgeous.

Just when I was getting smug.

Continued ...

The teenagers' flight cage is a busy place. On a cloudy day, birds are usually subdued but they brighten for the Weekend Plus photographer.

This is Romea's second clutch of eggs. They started hatching several days later. The eggs are white and about the size of a fingernail.

These are two of Saltine's offspring. The top is a barhead, about 3½ weeks old. The 2½-week-old fledgling near it still has down and pin feathers, making the bird look a bit like a porcupine.

tragedy struck. One of Romea's six babies developed a feather problem on the back of its head. One day I came home to find four of Romea's babies prematurely out of the box. It takes five weeks to go from a fledgling, naked and helpless, to downy fluff and feathers.

Romea poked her bloody head out of the nestbox and joined her family, calm as you please. The birds seemed oblivious to the fact that she had just killed the sick chick and another one that had the bad luck to be trapped inside at the time.

I tried to convince myself that it was merely instinctive behavior and one of the hazards of livestock management, but for weeks I kept thinking of Romea as a murderer. Now she's raising a second clutch of babies with no problem.

I'm on a roll, and think I'm an old pro after one season. The first group has finished their two clutches for the year and will soon go to the large flight cages to shape up for six months. Feeding demanding chicks every 15 minutes wears the parents down.

That's Verdi and Grieg on the Weekend Plus Magazine cover. I love all my birds and have a name for each hen, cock and chick. It's hard to get the sexes straight on some colors when they are babies. Saltine was

Others are hooked, too

There are other bird people around you.

Chris Voronovitch is the secretary of the Connecticut Association for Aviculture. She lives in Manchester. "I've learned so much since joining CAVA three years ago," she said in a recent telephone interview.

Ever since she rescued one finch from a woman who gave it up because it wasn't the canary she thought it was, originally Salty, Romea was Romeo, and so on. Most serious breeders would consider this sentimental rubbish. To them, the birds are a means to an end, an investment or a chance for a ribbon.

I am trying to follow one policy of the experts. "Save the best and cull the rest" refers to keeping only the best-looking birds for next year's breeding and selling the rest. Sometimes the nicest-looking birds have the worst personalities. One little guy I liked wasn't cute enough to keep. I've felt guilty for selling him ever since.

Budgies can be taught to talk just like parrots but I haven't Voronovitch has increased her flock to several species of African finches. "I go to pet stores like some people go to zoos," she said.

Suzanne Atwood is also from Manchester. She's turned an interest in birds into a career. She manages a local pet shop. Atwood has had several small birds before, but now contents herself with a peach-colored Moluccan cockatoo, a few canaries that she breeds and some amazon parrots she hand trains and fees. "My Cockatoo 'Chief' is like a 2½-year-old child," Atwood said. "He demands all of my attention. He gets the full run of my townhouse. He goes down two flights of stairs to his cage and turns on the lights and television himself. He's insanely jealous. When I go down to Florida to hand pick the birds, he rejects me for a week after I return."

I put out shallow dishes of water with chicory and they come to take their bath. They look like they are wounded fluttering around in the water. Often on the way over, they dive bomb through my hair. It's a friendly dare they never seem to outgrow.

You'll become a jack of all trades with birds. Budgies are destructive. Lord knows how many houseplants they've cheerfully shredded. So you can't keep diffenbachia or poinsettia around.

The proven expertise of a fellow breeder is invaluable. When Romea killed her chicks, I worried and asked advice of another breeder in the Connecticut Association for Aviculture.

A couple of weeks ago, I fell in love with and brought home an orange winged amazon parrot. It really wasn't all that sudden. A few months before I'd gone from skepticism to intense interest in parrots when a DAFA member let me shoulder his parrot for a couple of hours of fun.

Mine is named Ziggy for his perchtop sidestep and sway routine. From the beginning my adaptable budgies didn't take much notice of him even when he let loose with a couple of dozen squawks.

Besides the usual "pretty boy" and "Polly want a cracker," I'm trying to get him to say a few more exotic phrases. Can you picture this big green bird calmly sitting there with his head cocked sideways while his silly mistress makes a fool of herself repeating over and over, "No way, Jose," and "uptight dude"?

You'll become a jack of all trades with birds. Budgies are destructive. Lord knows how

Menstruation facts need clarification

Hemorrhage isn't the right term to describe this process

By Dr. June Reinisch

DEAR DR. REINISCH: Why do women have menstruation? Why does the body have to hemorrhage? Is it excess blood that we must get rid of? Also, one of my friends told me that she had sex while she was flowing and nothing happened. Is that true? Whenever I've asked other people these questions they look at me like I'm kidding or they are too embarrassed to discuss the matter.

DEAR READER: The menstrual flow is a sign of good health and indicates that the complicated reproductive sequence of events is functioning well.

The flow consists of various fluids from the uterus (sometimes called the womb), pieces of the endometrium (the lining of the uterus) and blood from the endometrial tissue (not directly from veins or arteries). The average amount of blood in each total monthly flow is around two fluid ounces (or 16 teaspoonful) spread over four or five days.

Although the menstrual flow looks as if it consists entirely of blood, it is not directly connected to a woman's blood-circulatory system, so the flow shouldn't be thought of as "excess blood." It also should not be thought of as a hemorrhage (a medical word that usually refers to a problem of bloodflow in an unusual location or in a heavy amount.) A few women do have exceptionally heavy menstruation that requires medical attention and monitoring for anemia.

The entire monthly reproductive sequence has only one function: to mature an egg in the ovaries and to prepare the uterus to receive an embryo if that egg is fertilized. As soon as one menstrual period is over, the walls of the uterus again begin to thicken and the endometrium becomes more filled with tiny blood vessels. When the mature egg is released from an ovary (about halfway between periods), the levels of two specific hormones rise. This makes the lining of the uterus become thick, spongy and filled with nutrients that will be needed if the egg is fertilized, reaches the uterus and becomes implanted there to begin its nine months of growth into a baby.

This regular growing and shedding of the endometrium takes place every month in which a woman is not pregnant, is in good health and is between puberty and menopause (the last menstrual period, which usually occurs between ages 45 and 55.)

It is not clear what you expect might happen if a woman has sex during menstruation. However, there is no harm in having sex then. Some women object because it seems messier, while other women say that sexual activity or orgasm during menstruation is beneficial because it reduces menstrual cramps.

Sagging breasts

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I'm a 19-year-old woman who jogs. Will it cause my breasts to sag if I run without a bra?

DEAR READER: Some physicians say that exercising without a bra might damage the breasts' supportive ligaments. However, research on women athletes has not clearly established that permanent damage occurs.

Studies have found that short-term soreness can result unless breast movement is minimized by a bra and/or an elastic binding. The larger the mass of the breast, the greater the likelihood of discomfort if support is not used.

Loss of libido

DEAR DR. REINISCH: Eight years ago, at age 34, I had a hysterectomy, which also removed all but a portion of one ovary. Along with the usual menopausal symptoms (hot flashes, no lubrication), I also experienced a dramatic loss of libido that has not responded to estrogen treatment, which I've only used off and on.

Now I've read a newspaper article that said testosterone was the hormone responsible for libido. Can women take this? What hormones are women supposed to take after surgical menopause?

How can I find someone to help me? Passion remains a mere memory and the two gynecologists I've asked have been unsympathetic. Surely I'm not the only woman with this problem.

DEAR READER: Call the department of endocrinology at the nearest medical school and ask for an appointment with the specialist who assesses women who have had oophorectomies. Ask if they have a faculty member who is also a gynecologist.

It's important to get a complete picture of which hormones your body is still producing, and in what amounts, before you consider hormone-replacement therapy. Before the correct regimen of replacement hormones is found, you and your physician might have to experiment with varying amounts, combinations and treatment-cycle patterns while your hormone levels are being monitored. Then you may have to stay on these drugs for several months before you notice any changes in your sexual functioning.

The use of replacement hormones should involve a commitment to careful follow-ups and complete compliance on the part of the patient. A person cannot expect results from these drugs if she takes them on an irregular basis. Skipping

"Also, one of my friends told me that she had sex while she was flowing and nothing happened. Is that true?"

treatment days, deciding to increase or decrease dosage or ignoring warning signs for known side effects do not contribute to the successful use of any drugs, especially hormonal ones.

The few clinicians who have written about this situation advise patients and their partners to have a sense of humor about it. Be glad about the woman's sexual responsiveness.

Kinsey visit

DEAR DR. REINISCH: Can the general public visit the Kinsey Institute to look at the research materials?

DEAR READER: No. Legal interpretation of a 1957 decision in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York restricts access to much of the institute's collections to scholars, scientists, advanced students and professionals researching topics not available in other libraries. For example, physicians, lawyers, criminal-justice officials and clinicians may apply to search the Institute's collections for a particular research project or informational need. Their credentials are verified before a visit date is set.

Providing researched-based information to the general public is currently limited to the letters answered by this column, the books and articles published by the Institute, and the fee-based information services, which are available by mail.

Embarrassed

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I have a problem I have never heard of before. Ever since having my second child, I sometime pass wind through my vagina. This is very embarrassing to me, especially during sex. Have you ever heard of this before? What causes it? How can it be cured?

DEAR READER: Although there is no data on how many women experience this, it is not uncommon for women to have air become trapped in the vagina and then released with "embarrassing" sounds.

At your next regular pelvic examination, ask if there are any indications of vaginal hernias or prolapse (when the top end of the vagina bulges back down into the lower end), since some physicians consider this air problem to be an early sign of pelvic relaxation.

If there are no physical problems, you should find it reassuring to know that the sounds probably indicate good sexual responsiveness. As a woman becomes sexually aroused, the top section (or inside end near the cervix) of the vagina "tents" or "balloons" open. As the man thrusts, air is expelled.

Give your home a sensuous makeover

By Dr. Judith Kurlansky

A few weeks ago I suggested a spring sensuous makeover to spice up your sex life, and the first step was to redo your wardrobe. Next step: Put new spring in your bed by making over your house.

When it comes to sensuality, there's no place like home.

Your home can turn you on — or off — depending on decorations and accessible accessories.

Close your eyes and picture yourself in a place where you feel excited. It could be someplace you have been before (on vacation, for example) or have only seen on TV or in the movies. What is it you loved? Colors, style, lighting? How can you make your own environment close to that?

A couple I treated complained of boredom after only two years of marriage. "What was your most pleasurable time?" I asked. "Our honeymoon in Ixtapa," they answered. Solution: They redecorated a corner of their living room and called it the Ixtapa corner and spent nights of renewed romance there.

Men dream of the bachelor pad, the ultimate den of seduction. Stop your husband from such yearning by asking him how your home can approximate that fantasy.

And women, whether single or married, should think of what the equivalent environment would be for the femme fatale.

If you're embarrassed because your home is a mess, you need the sensuous home makeover.

If you're always going to his house because it's more conducive to romance, you need a sensuous home make-over. And if you're married and swamped with children's toys and take-home work, you need a sensuous home make-over.

Your living room. To renew excitement, sex therapists often advise making love in new places. Try the living room. Even if you don't have a crackling fireplace and fluffy bearskin rug, make this room invite romance.

Like the couple with the Ixtapa corner, redesign your space to remind you of good times and places. When funds are limited, just rearrange the furniture.

Being relaxed is a key to seduction, so make this room comfortable. Is there something soft and cozy to sit or lie on? Cold bare floors and stiff couches don't lead to sinking into lustful embraces. Even if you like parquet floors, a barefoot walk across a long-haired scatter rug can offer an unexpected ticklish surprise.

And if you, like my mother, insist on plastic covers over your furniture, keep an afghan or other blanket nearby to cushion the seating.

prepared with strategically placed lamps you can switch on and off without much disruption. And keep your options open with adjustable wattage bulbs.

Consider lights out and spending the night in the living room.

Your bedroom. Honeymoon suites at lovers' resorts. What comes to mind? Mirrored ceilings, heart-shaped beds, plush red carpets. How does your bedroom compare?

If your answer is, "not close," what changes can you make?

As in your living room, the right lighting, soft places to lie on and other accoutrements are essential.

Some people prefer love-making in the dark, but if you enjoy peeks, try a pink or red bulb. Put it in a lamp with the bed so you can control it without getting up. ■

'Salvador' is fast-paced

By Lee Siegel

Two photojournalists walk among the mangled, bloodied bodies of victims of Salvadoran death squads, snapping pictures as they nonchalantly discuss their past exploits in other wars.

The scene epitomizes "Salvador," a fast-paced look at journalists trying to cover a brutal civil war while maintaining the detachment needed to insulate themselves from its horrors.

"You've got to get close. Rich, to get the truth. But if you get too close, you die," photographer John Cassidy (John Savage) tells his colleague, played by James Woods. Woods portrays Richard Boyle, the real-life photojournalist who wrote the script with director Oliver Stone.

In the script, Boyle comes across as a sleazy, conniving photographer on the fringes of respectable journalism during Lee Siegel writes for The Associated Press.

This fictionalized account of war and repression in El Salvador in 1980-81.

Woods plays the part with brilliance and energy, surpassing even his performances in "The Onion Field," "Once Upon a Time in America" and "Against All Odds."

Woods' Boyle is a yuppie-hating, womanizing, hard-drinking "weasel." He sneaks into the troubled Central American nation with his disc-jockey buddy, Dr. Rock (James Belushi).

When Cassidy asks Boyle why he came to El Salvador instead of covering the war in Angola, Boyle replies: "Angola doesn't have any nightlife."

But as "Salvador" relentlessly progresses through a series of killings—including the assassination of Archbishop Oscar Romero and the slayings of American nuns—Boyle's hedonistic detachment slowly dissolves, and he tries to save the lives of those he loves.

Despite the gripping action scenes and a mostly witty, mile-a-minute, off-color script, the movie ultimately fails to produce the emotional tug of other films about journalists in war, particularly Roland Joffe's "The Killing Fields" and Peter Weir's "The Year of Living Dangerously."

The script borders on pompous silliness when Boyle launches into a diatribe on American hypocrisy, and unbelievable sentimentality when Salvadoran rebels are shown in heroic poses as Latin American folk songs ring out in the background.

Nevertheless, "Salvador" still has the gritty, violent quality shared by other films by Stone: "Midnight Express" and "Scarface." None of these films is easy to watch, but each keeps you glued to the screen.

Rated R—violence, profanity and limited nudity and sex. ■

Chorus girl steals the show

By Kim Mills

NEW YORK (AP)—If Karen Akers' rise to stardom were made into a movie, it would sound like the sequel to one of those 1930s musicals where the feisty chorus girl gets a break and steals the show.

She's played a major role in Broadway's "Nine," for which she received a Tony nomination. She gave a solo concert in Carnegie Hall in 1983 and sold out the house. Her first movie was "The Purple Rose of Cairo," and her second film, opening in July, is "Heartburn," starring Meryl Streep and Jack Nicholson.

Even Miss Akers has a hard time believing her string of successes.

"I've had lots in my life that's not the real world. I mean, it's crazy. To have 'Nine,' and to have your first film be a Woody Allen movie, and your second film directed by Mike Nichols, ..." She trails off.

"Carnegie Hall, ..." She has a faraway look in her dark eyes.

Some of her success has been serendipity, she admits. But once you've heard her sing or seen this almost 6-foot Nefertiti walk across a room, it's clear she's got something special.

To hear Miss Akers tell it, she used to be painfully shy and serious, afraid to sing in public. Slowly, she ventured out into New York's club scene in the 1970s, becoming a favorite in Greenwich Village clubs.

How she landed her role as Luisa Contini in "Nine"—which starred 21 women and one man—is the stuff of which theater legends are made.

She began her audition by singing "La Vie en Rose," immortalized by Edith Piaf. When she was asked to do something in English, she sang "I Met a Man Today," a torch number by Craig Carnelia.

Director-choreographer Tommy Tune approached the stage in tune and asked her to sing something upbeat. So she sang Stephen Sondheim's "Can This Be a Boy Friend?" and immediately landed the role.

Since then came the two movies, tucked between steady club engagements. She divides her time between Washington, where she lives with her lawyer husband and their two sons, and New York, her hometown.

With "Heartburn" finished, Miss Akers plans to visit the Soviet Union this summer to sing and read poetry. She'll also do another album.

She uses independent producers because she said no major record company ever made a serious overture to her.

"They can't figure out who my audience is; that's the main thing," she said. "It's a mixture of straight and gay, pink and purple, young and old. I'm not a nostalgia trip but I don't seem to be doing the songs that are written absolutely at this very moment in time. I'm going to have to do it on my own terms, that's all." ■

Film capsules

Critters (PG-13) — Dee Wallace Stone, Billy Green Bush, Scott Grimes, Terrence Mann. (Sci-Fi Thriller) They are fuzzy little creatures with razor-sharp teeth and poisonous quills. And they're hungry. When they escape from a maximum security prison in outer space and land on Earth, these critters decide to quench their appetites by eating everything — and everyone — in sight. Stephen Herek has directed with precise pacing: There are chills, but also thrills and laughs. And it's done without the viciousness Spielberg infused in "Gremlins." Grade: B-plus.

Down and Out in Beverly Hills (R) — Nick Nolte, Bette Midler, Richard Dreyfuss, Little Richard. (Comedy) This is a grapefruit: full of juicy pulp, sometimes tart, usually acidic — but never satisfying. Loosely based on Renoir's classic 1932 film "Boudu Saved From Drowning," this flick ridicules the bourgeoisie: What happens when a bored, rich family saves a bum from drowning? Renoir made it work; Paul Mazursky didn't. His direction is leaden. And Midler — playing a guru-guided princess — refines the word ham. Grade: C.

Gung Ho (PG-13) — Michael Keaton, Gedde Watanabe, George Wendt, Mimi Rogers. (Comedy) Actor/director Ron Howard comes out of the sea ("Splash") and sky ("Cocoon") to tackle the problems that occur when a Japanese company invades a small-town auto factory in Pennsylvania. To be even more precise, Howard doesn't tackle the topic; he fumbles it. "Gung Ho" is not a potent social comedy, but a lighthearted romp that manages to be half-entertaining all the time. Rubber-faced Keaton is fun to watch, even after the film runs out of gas. Grade: B.

Just Between Friends (PG-13) — Mary Tyler Moore, Christine Lahti, Ted Danson, Sam Waterston. (Comedy-Drama) A woman (Lahti) discovers that her new best friend (Moore) is married to the man she's been having an affair with. A comedy of errors ensues, then the film takes a more serious turn when a genuine tragedy strikes. Director Alan Burns keeps both the comedy and the tragedy a little too tightly under control, but there are plenty of good moments. All four stars turn in first-rate performances, but Lahti is the standout. Grade: B.

Lucas (PG) — Corey Haim, Kerri Green, Charlie Sheen. (Comedy-Drama) In which some clean-cut 16-year-old jocks learn a lesson about dedication and bravery from an underdeveloped 14-year-old genius. Haim plays Lucas with verve, and reheaded Green as Maggie, the girl Lucas loves and loses, evokes a gentle warmth. Sheen (another sibling from the Martin Sheen acting stable) is the jock who befriends Lucas and then wins the love of Maggie. The film is somewhat more than a television "Afternoon Special" but somewhat less than a fulfilling adult drama. But it's a great flick for the under-16 crowd. Take the kids! Grade: B.

The Money Pit (PG) — Tom Hanks, Shelley Long, Alexander Godunov. (Comedy) The minute this romantic couple moves into a dream house, it starts to self-destruct. Slime emerges from the pipes, small electrical fires erupt almost every time a light switch is flipped, and the staircase collapses. When they try to have the house repaired, they discover that local workmen have to be bribed with outrageous sums to even come and take a look at the place. "Money Pit" has its amusing moments, but none of the gags are original, and watching the house fall apart is sometimes positively painful. Grade: C-plus.

9½ Weeks (R) — Mickey Rourke, Kim Basinger. (Drama) Director Adrian Lyne has transferred some of the urgency of Elizabeth McNeill's novel about an intense, short-lived sadomasochistic relationship to the screen, but he hasn't captured — or dealt with — its complexity. It's not as if he didn't try: The film was made more than two years ago and was shelved because its explicit sex scenes would have brought an X rating. So Lyne reedited and edited what could have been a fascinating look at a fascinating subject. Basinger gives a compelling performance. Grade: C-plus.

Pretty in Pink (PG-13) — Molly Ringwald, Jon Cryer, Andrew McCarthy. (Drama) John Hughes has written a soapy saga about teenage misfits. This traumatic tale pits rich kids against poor kids; the film is infused with social clashes and emotional threats. Alas, it has been told before — and much better. In his directional debut, Howard Deutch has failed to give the film any spirit; except for brief reprieves, its pace is heavyhanded. Shame on Richard Marks, who has done a terrible editing job. Cryer, however, is superb as a zany, frustrated outcast. Grade: C-plus.

NBC loses week, wins season

NEW YORK (UPI) - NBC came in last in the prime time ratings race last week but was proud as a peacock over winning for the season - the first time the peacock network has been able to take sole possession of the No. 1 title. CBS was the winner for the week, pushed along by the fine showing of its "Dream West" miniseries, while ABC came in second. NBC was third, despite the fact that its "Cosby Show" and "Family Ties" finished in the one-two spots for the week, as they did for the season. In the last week of the regular season - before the onslaught of reruns that will be punctuated by original material during the May sweeps - CBS captured a 16.3 rating and a 27 percent share of the audience, while ABC had a 14.2 rating and a 23 share and NBC had a 14.0 rating and a 23 share. For the season to date, NBC registered a 17.5 rating and a 27 share, CBS wound up with a 16.7 rating and a 26 share, while ABC had a 14.9 rating and a 23 share. ABC may have been last for the week, but it had a winner with its new "Perfect Strangers" sitcom, which took seventh place. The third and final chapter of CBS's "Dream West" tied for eighth place, while the second part of the miniseries ranked 15th. The "Mike Hammer" movie on CBS ranked 14th, which could mean a return of "Hammer" and Stacy Keach next season. News viewing was up for the week, reflecting the high-voltage events in Libya, with the "CBS Evening News with Dan Rather" taking first place with a 13.7 rating and a 25 share. "NBC Nightly News with Tom Brokaw" came in second with a 12.7 rating and 23 share and "ABC World News Tonight with Peter Jennings" had a 12.2 rating and 22 share. The top 10 prime time shows for the week ending April 20, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co., were: 1. The Cosby Show (NBC) 2. Family Ties (NBC) 3. 60 Minutes (CBS) 4. Cheers (NBC) 5. Who's the Boss? (ABC) 6. Golden Girls (NBC) 7. Perfect Strangers (ABC) 8. (tie) "Dream West," Part 3 (CBS) 9. Newhart (CBS) 10. Night Court (NBC)

Nostalgia

The year 1964 was big for ghoulish extended families. Both 'The Munsters' and 'The Addams Family' made their debuts. But the latter certainly outdid any cadaverous competitors. Gomez, the head of the Addams family, was a bulgy-eyed millionaire who crumbled at his wife's elucidation of a few foreign words ('Tish... you spoke French'). Morticia Addams, the lady of the house, glided around in a clingy black dress that looked like a cross between a black widow spider and something out of Cher's wardrobe. Pugsley and Wednesday were the offspring of this creepy union. Also inhabiting the Addams abode were Uncle Fester, who relieved his headaches via a medieval torture chamber, and Grandmama Addams, the witch. Visitors to the Addams household encountered Lurch, the 7-foot butler whose catch phrase was 'You Rang?' Then there was Thing, a hand who was a sort of valet and resided in a box, hairy Cousin Itt in the attic and Morticia's exotic pets. Unlike 'The Munsters,' who made monstrous attempts at integrating into society, 'The Addams Family' thought everyone else was batty. Morticia never did figure out why she couldn't find a governess for the kids, no matter how many newspaper ads she placed. Question: What was Morticia Addams' maiden name? Answer: Frump

Dancing away

NEW YORK (UPI) — The producers of the syndicated TV show "Dance Fever" are looking for a few good dancers to appear on the program next fall and they're traveling to 35 cities to find them.
Auditions begin in the second week of April in Minneapolis, and continue through June.
"If it moves on the floor we're interested," said producer Paul Gilbert.
Successful applicants get an all-expense paid trip to Los Angeles and a chance to win $56,000 in cash and prizes.
For more information write Gilbert at "Dance Fever," 1541 N. Vine St., Hollywood, Calif., 90028.

Film for Mills

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Donna Mills will spend her hiatus from the "Knots Landing" series this spring starting in "Encounters," a two-hour dramatic TV movie for Columbia Pictures Television.
Mills will portray a woman undergoing mental and emotional disintegration after 15 years of a supposedly happy marriage.
Larry Thompson, executive producer of "Encounters," said the plot involves the woman's constant sexual fantasies that gradually control her mind until they become real encounters that threaten her marriage and sanity.

Stacy Keach and the one-man campaign

by Mark Schwed

NEW YORK — "Welcome back to New York," said the doorman, as he thrust a piece of paper at the star and asked for an autograph.

As the star strolled toward Rockefeller Center for a picture session at the ice skating rink, heads snapped and jerked.

"Is that Stacy Keach?" some would say. Others knew. "That was Stacy Keach!"

Keach, arm-in-arm with Lauren Hutton, who turned her share of heads, too, drew a big crowd. Kodaks clicked and arms extended for handshakes.

"Welcome back," they said.

"Good to see you."

For Keach, the comeback trail from two years of heavy cocaine abuse, which led to six months in a London prison, was long and rough. But there were friends who made it easier. Folks like Frank Sinatra, who called him a hero; Gregory Peck, Al Pacino, Roger Moore and Burt Reynolds, who wrote him letters and talked of his courage.

Of course, a man who is arrested for attempting to smuggle 1.3 ounces of cocaine into London's Heathrow Airport should not be lauded as a hero. But it is the way Keach handled himself that commands respect.

He went to London expecting to pay a heavy fine and go home. That's what his lawyers told him would happen. Instead, British authorities gave him nine months in prison, perhaps to make an example of the popular American private eye, the character he played on "Mickey Spillane's Mike Hammer" series on CBS.

The show was put on extended hiatus and everyone waited. Six months after entering prison, Keach left a free man. He paid a heavy price. While Keach was wasting away in prison, one man put his money and job on the line to make sure that the actor would have something to return to. The result is "The Return of Mickey Spillane's Mike Hammer," a two-hour movie starring Keach, Hutton and others.

If all goes well, the series will return in the fall.

Much of the credit for the return of Hammer goes to Jay Bernstein.

Some call him Hollywood's last superstar-maker. In 1974, he took a little-known actress named Fawcett and put her on a show called "Charlie's Angels." That worked out fine. He also transformed a third-lead actress named Susanne Somers into a household word on "Three's Company." And he did the same for Kristy McNichol.

Bernstein also serves as executive producer for the Hammer series, and when Keach went to jail, Bernstein went to work.

First, when Variety reported that the series had been canceled, Bernstein took $2,000 of his own money and took out ads in both Los Angeles trade magazines to say it wasn't so.

Then, when CBS was wavering about the future of the Hammer series, Bernstein hit the trail at a cost of $60,000, visiting 15 major cities to drum up fan support. He went to Chicago, Houston, Detroit, New York, Washington, Baltimore, Oklahoma City, Philadelphia, to name a few, asking everyone he met to write Harvey Shephard, senior vice president, programs, at CBS.

"I figured I'm going to take this to the American public. In America, you only make someone pay for a mistake once, not twice. You give someone a second chance. They wrote so many letters to Harvey Shephard that his mail was screwed up for months.

"Finally, he said OK, we're going to give you a second chance. We're going to give you a two-hour pilot but just stop those letters."

Columbia Pictures, which produces the Hammer series, also helped out. When CBS decided to use Hammer reruns to keep the series fresh in the public's mind, Columbia pumped in $1 million for promotion, much more than the ordinary rerun P.R. budget.

And Bernstein took his case to Los Angeles, where he went to a hip Hollywood restaurant known as a star hangout and had the waiters wear buttons which said "I love Stacy Keach." When Keach was released, Bernstein issued new buttons that said, "Hammer is back."

And when it was decided to do the return of Hammer show, actors like Danby Coleman, Dionne Warwick and Mickey Rooney donated their time to appear in the show. It was a show of faith in Keach and the Hammer series.

"I wasn't going to let go of a quality show like Mike Hammer and I wasn't going to let go of Stacy Keach," Bernstein said.

"I have great respect for Stacy Keach. I admire a man who's the president of his high school, who goes to Yale, who studies at the Royal Academy in London, who won all these awards for acting — so the guy made a mistake. Let's don't kill him for it. He certainly paid more than anybody we know."

CBS makes more changes in prime time

By Andrew J. Edelstein

On Thursdays — a night conceded long ago to NBC — CBS has moved "Simon & Simon" back an hour to 8 p.m. as a sacrificial lamb against the formidable one-two punch of "The Cosby Show" and "Family Ties."

The Simon brothers' former time slot is now occupied by "Bridges to Cross," a drama starring Suzanne Pleshette as a Washington, D.C., news-magazine reporter. The cast also includes Jose Ferrer as the editor and Eva Gabor as a Washington socialite.

"Magnum, P.I.," another one-time Thursday stalwart for CBS, has been moved to Saturdays at 10, starting May 3. The venerable Tom Selleck vehicle has been clobbered on Thursday nights the past two seasons by NBC's "Cosby Show." A move to the easier Saturday slot (against the fading "Love Boat" and "Remington Steele") may rejuvenate the show and ensure its renewal for next season. To hype ratings, producers of the Hawaii-based drama might consider giving the island's newest resident, Ferdinand Marcos, a recurring role as Magnum's aide-de-camp.

On paper, the CBS move looks wise: It now has built a solid action-adventure block ("Crazy Like a Fox," the recently returned "Airwolf" and now "Magnum") to compete against the largely comedic programming of NBC and ABC on Saturdays.

CBS has added another new series to its schedule, "Leo & Liz in Beverly Hills," which airs on Fridays. Harvey Korman and Valerie Perrine star as a couple of transplanted Easterners trying to adjust to life in Lotusland. It was spun off from a segment on "George Burns Comedy Week," one of CBS's fall '85 casualties.

On Monday, NBC rebroadcasts "An Early Frost," one of this season's most acclaimed TV movies. Aidan Quinn ("Desperately Seeking Susan") plays a successful lawyer who must tell his parents (Gena Rowlands and Ben Gazzara) not only that he is gay — but that he is also dying of AIDS. Veteran actress Sylvia Sidney puts in a Golden Globe-winning turn as the young man's grandmother.

Just in case you wanted to know: On Tuesday, NBC's "The A-Team" rebroadcasts the episode in which "Wheel of Fortune" hosts Pat Sajak and Vanna White are the guest stars.

CBS. John Lithgow stars as an Army officer who journeys to a small Georgia town to assist in the burial of a black Vietnam war hero in a cemetery that has been restricted to whites only. Frances Sternhagen plays the mother of another dead soldier, who donated the plot to the black family; and G.D. Spradlin plays the biggest editor of the local newspaper.

Bob Dylan was one of the few not wearing formal duds.

He was presented with the ASCAP Founders Award by the American Society of Composers Authors and Publishers.

Dylan — only the second songwriter to receive this honor (it was awarded to Stevie Wonder in 1985) — did seem uncomfortable when ADCAP President Hal David called him "the poet of his generation."

Later, Dylan said he accepted the plaque not for himself but on behalf of Jimmy Reed, Hank Williams, Muddy Waters and others who "should have gotten awards like this, too."

Dylan then proceeded to turn heads when he arrived at his celebratory party in the company of Elizabeth Taylor.

He accepted the congratulations of guests including Whoopie Goldberg, Dudley Moore, Leonard Cohen, Chrissie Hynde, Donny Osmond and Bob Seger.

Poor old Black Sabbath is having singer troubles yet again. Glenn Hughes, who only joined the group for its latest album, bowed out of the band's concert tour claiming strained vocal cords. He has been replaced by Ray Gillen. 25.

A '50s shoe made out of new leather

By Mike Berry

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Carl Perkins describes it as a "'50s shoe made out of new leather."

The ageless rockabilly was referring to a record that reunited four music giants in a legendary studio in Memphis.

Perkins, Jerry Lee Lewis, Johnny Cash and Roy Orbison filed into Sun Record Studio last fall to commit their roots to vinyl.

Mike Berry writes for United Press International.

The result is "Class of '55," subtitled "Homecoming," an album brimming with lusty guitar, barrelhouse piano and outlaw singing. Memphis hasn't heard anything like it since the great Sun recordings of the 1950s under Sam Phillips.

"I'd say it has the feel of a '50s shoe made out of new leather," said Perkins at a recent banquet celebrating the record's debut.

"It's a good album," said producer Chips Moman, a man of few words.

Moman, who had the idea to bring the musicians back to Memphis after 30 years, said 40,000 copies of "Class of '55" have been pressed for starters.

The album will be distributed nationally by America Records, he added, and should be in stores in a few weeks.

"It's been a very exciting venture all the way," said Perkins, but he concedes he had some initial apprehensions about Moman's project.

"I wondered how he would ever get four old, worn-out rockabilly legends together, and get them to harmonize and make sense out of it." But harmonize they do on two of the record's ten tracks.

On the rest, they share spotlights. Cash lends his locomotive-deep voice to chronicle the Sun story in "I Will Rock and Roll With You." Orbison's wistful, longing voice dominates "Coming Home" and Lewis' trademark adrenalin piano revs up "Keep My Motor Running." Listeners will have no hint that Orbison was ill throughout the session and Lewis was suffering from ulcers.

The result is country, rock 'n' roll, blues and gospel all percolated and served up steaming hot. The music evokes images of endless highways, all-night cafes, bus stations and muddy rivers.

Perkins is particularly proud of "Birth of Rock and Roll," a song he penned for the album.

with opening lines that reflect what "Class of '55" is about: "Well, Nashville had county music but Memphis had the rock. The white boy had the rhythm and that started rock 'n' roll."

The record "is a thing I think music needed to happen. And it needed to happen here in Memphis, where it all started," Perkins said.

"There were some emotional experiences with all of us," he said of the "Homecoming" session. "I saw wet eyes on a person that has been called 'The Killer,'" none other than Jerry Lee Lewis, the only one of the four who lives in Memphis.

Bad habit facts help us defend our own vices

By Frances Sheridan Goulart

How's your bad habit savvy? Smoking, soda pop and sugar may be bad for building health, but they sure help you look better, get the housework done and speed your recovery from injury.

If you've been on a chip-and-dip, not a sprouts-and-celery, roll, here are a few upbeat food facts to cheer you up.

1. Sugar: Sugar is the No. 1 cause of tooth decay, but nothing halts hiccupping faster than a spoonful. It's also No. 1 if you need an emergency antibiotic. Combined with butter, sugar can cool a burn, remedy a cut or skin sores and prevent infection, says Dr. Richard Knutson of Delta Medical Center in Greenville, Miss., who has used this old-time Southern remedy on over 1,700 patients and reduced his antibiotics use at the center by 80 percent.

There are even cosmetic reasons to do the cube. Granulated sugar moistened and gently massaged into the skin removes makeup less abrasively than commercial scrub grains.

And why does a sugary drink make a better sleep aid than sugar-free milk? It does a better job of boosting serotonin levels in the sleep levels of the brain, says MIT's Dr. Judith Wurtman. Sugar's also first-rate first aid for roof-of-the-mouth pizza burn and puts out the flame of a coffee or jalapeno-pepper-burned tongue.

Try putting a cube of sugar in the bottom of your crispier. It keeps bleu cheese from turning green because it is a five-star mold retardant.

2. Chocolate: Chocolate is 56 percent sugar, high in fat and contains three times more caffeine than coffee. Now the good news. A little controlled chocolate-cheating causes fewer cavities than a dried-dates binge.

In fact, something in chocolate seems to modify the cavity-producing ability of the sugar, says Buddhi M. Shrestha, D.D.S., director of nutrition at Fairleigh Dickinson University School of Dentistry.

Even better, a chocolate bar or brownie provides more calcium, vitamin A and protein than the chocolate substitute carb, has fewer calories than a big banana, a small glass of grape juice or a single slice of American cheese. And it's even better than Cheddar for baiting the cellar mousetrap.

Another bit of good news about chocolate? The dark kind is rich in copper, a cholesterol-lowerer.

As for hot chocolate? It's 100 percent more fattening than seltzer water, but if you have a headache, the caffeine in a mug of hot cocoa can make an aspirin work 20 percent faster and 40 percent better, says the Rockland Research Institute in Orangeburg, N.Y. And the magnesium in cocoa helps you fight pre-menstrual tension.

3. Coffee: Getting mugged can block sleep and make you hyper. But if you have edema, asthma or an aerobics class to attend, don't unplug the pot. The caffeine in a strong cup of coffee relaxes the bronchial tubes better than theophylline-based asthma medications and reduces premenstrual fluid retention better than water pills.

And according to David Shore, director of the venereal disease department of Bristol Polytechnic in England, caffeine extracted from coffee applied in a salve inhibits the growth of the herpes virus.

And if you're getting physical, two cups of coffee improves exercise-to-exhaustion time by almost 20 percent by increasing the body's supply of free fatty acids, a fuel that promotes burning of fat. Used coffee grounds even provide a growth perk for houseplants.

And a water-and-instant-coffee-paste makes a non-toxic polish for a shabby wooden salad bowl.

4. Salt: Lots of it boosts blood pressure, but a little bit fights fatigue. One teaspoon of baking soda (the equivalent of 1/2 teaspoon of salt) is a "buffer booster," says Dr. Norman Gledhill, a professor at York University in Toronto. It neutralizes lactic acid waste products.

Rich sweets like these have their good side. Dark chocolate, for instance, is rich in copper, a cholesterol-lowerer.

Salt's medicinal and cosmetic. Scrubbed on gums, it prevents periodontal disease. Half a cup of table salt dissolved in the bathwater makes an effective treatment for vaginal infection. Salt neutralizes the system in a food allergy attack, and a saltwater gargle is good for a sore throat.

5. Soft drinks: Pop may be the "pits" for your dental health, but it's tops if you have the flu. Ginger ale contains gingerol, a mild natural anti-nausea stimulant, and cola provides plant alkaloids that get the digestion gently moving again. Carbonated drinks even fight cardiovascular disease, say doctors at Cedars of Lebanon Hospital in Los Angeles. They have found that by stretching the stomach wall, soda bubbles produce clearer heart X-rays. Soda's household good side? With only nine calories an ounce, just a trace of sodium and as much healthy carbohydrates as bread, a little "lite" beer can prevent the "temporary diabetes" that is a common side effect of high-protein, low-calorie crash diets, says New York nutritionist Jackie Stokes.

And moderate tippling (2 to 3 cans a day), says Thomas B. Turner, M.D., dean emeritus of the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine, improves your mood by relieving tension and depression, paving the way for a good night's sleep.

6. Tea: Regular tea contains calcium-blocking oxalates, and some black tea blends supply even more caffeine than instant coffee. But don't donate your tea cozy to Goodwill yet. Recent studies reveal tea drinking — because of the polyphenols and vitamin C it contains — reduces the risk of hardening of the arteries, strengthens blood vessels and prevents high cholesterol. ■

7. Beer: According to Dr. Jean Ellis of Mercy General Hospital in Santa Anna, Calif., moderate alcohol intake elevates high density lipo-proteins (HDL) in your blood. The higher your HDL level, the lower your risk of heart attack.

It's a super cleaning agent. Regular cola removes mildew, loosens rusted bolts; cleans counter tops, even removes wax from floors. And club soda removes stain and smell or animal urine from carpets. Seven-up is a liquid life extension for cut flowers.

Paula Leone shows how her cupboards roll out to allow her to select the pots she needs.

Custom touches help her get around

By Susan Pless

Architecturally, the Ansaldi-built home on 62 Kingswood Drive is different from others in the neighborhood. The angled, low-slung facade presents an interesting contrast to traditional two-story colonials and capes in the area.

But the differences are more than skin deep. This home, a spacious one-floor contemporary, was designed and built to accommodate its owner, Paula Leone, who has multiple sclerosis. Diagnosed 18 years ago, she has not been able to walk for three years.

When one thinks of building a home accessible to the physically handicapped, one thinks of major renovations and expensive additions. For the Leones, however, the concessions have been few.

A concrete ramp in the garage and another ramp leading from a sun porch to the back yard are the only obvious indicators of a wheelchair. And the couple has planned it exactly that way. "Cosmetically, if you walk through this house you don't see a thing," says Paula's husband, Bill, an industrial sales manager for DuBois Chemicals. "It's a home that's been built to help a handicapped person but it doesn't look like a handicapped home."

In fact, the custom-made details are subtle, and the conveniences would be appreciated even by someone who was not wheelchair-bound.

Hallways and doorways, for instance, are a bit wider than usual. But the total effect is one of airiness and open space, a feeling that is accentuated by expanses of windows and Southern exposure. "It's very spacious, very open, which I like," says Paula.

Often the handicapped need special considerations in the kitchen. Countertops are made for women who stand to work, and sometimes pantry space and cabinets can thwart a woman in a wheelchair.

But Paula made few changes in her kitchen. "I had the option of having the counters lowered, but I didn't," she says, demonstrating her electric wheelchair with a seat that can be raised or lowered to reach. A microwave was supposed to be installed overhead, at average eye-level, but she asked to have it moved to the top of a counter, instead, at her eye-level.

One particularly interesting design in the kitchen is the storage space. Long, narrow drawers under the counters roll out completely to allow Paula to select a utensil from the back. "I wanted this very badly, so the carpenter did it," she says, demonstrating the ease with which she can find and reach a saucepan. "She does everything herself," her husband notes with pride.

Paula would be the first to admit that her independence may be a mixed blessing — the laundry room is also accessible. The dryer opens from the side, instead of from the top, so she can reach clothes inside. A small ironing board is tucked into a closet, and can be folded down on a type of hinge to exactly the right height. "The guys who built the house wanted to see Paula and make sure everything was right for her," her husband says.

And a wide closet just outside the laundry serves as a pantry, but instead of holding canned goods, stores Paula's craft materials, flower arrangements, wrapping paper, and seasonal decorations. "I can't go down the cellar," she says. "For me, this takes the place of a basement."

The master bedroom is standard, though exceptionally large. But changes were made in both storage and bath. "Most people have a walk-in closet. This is called a drive-in," says Bill with a laugh. The closet, in fact, is unusually wide to accommodate Paula's chair.

The tiled bath has no tub, but includes instead a modified shower stall, two to three times the size of the average. Inside the shower is a seat for Paula, and a bar for her to grasp. There are few other modifications. The living room, guest room and office are standard. But the sun porch, located through glass sliding doors off the living room, is level with the rest of the house, rather than being a few steps down.

Prior to building their new home, the couple lived just around the block in another Ansaldi home, a colonial. But the lot was on a hill, and Paula was virtually housebound.

"I got discouraged because I couldn't get out into the beautiful weather," she says. "This (home) allows me to live an almost active life, a normal life." She is the coordinator for the Manchester support group for multiple sclerosis, an organization that meets the second Tuesday of every month from 10 a.m. to noon at the Church of Christ on Lydall Street.

Before building the Leone home, Ansaldi had never constructed a contemporary, the couple says. An architect friend of Paula's designed the home. "We showed Ansaldi the plan and he liked it," Bill says.

Customizing an existing home for a handicapped person can be expensive, especially when major structural changes must be made. The Leones decline to quote the final cost of their new home, but they say that including special needs in the plan was no more expensive than building from standard plans.

"If you plan these things and incorporate them into a home, if you take into consideration what you can and cannot do, then it won't be any more expensive," Bill says.

"Drive around and see the number of ramps. There are a lot of handicapped people in town," he says. "But they don't have the proper facilities."

"People are fearful and think it will cost them too much money. But it doesn't bother me to spend our money to live well. I'd be willing to talk about designing a home for the handicapped."

First aid for a broken fan belt

By Richard Harris

Keeping Your Car Alive

A nylon stocking makes the best emergency substitute for a broken fan belt.

This arcane bit of automotive lore could save you a long hitchhike some day — if you haven't heeded my advice to always carry spare V-belts in the trunk of your car.

I learned about nylon stockings when a friend and I drove his Fiat Spyder along the desolate 160-mile desert of I-10 between Lordsburg, N.M., and Tucson, Ariz., one February. (Why? To prove to skeptics that the old Spyder, bought without wheels for $50 a few months before and restored in the garage, could actually make it to cactus country and back in a weekend.)

Then a red light on the hardwood dashboard lit up. Modern sports cars have gauges that tell you exactly how much electricity the car's engine is generating. But aged sports cars, and most moderate-price family and compact cars, even today, have "idiot lights" to tell you when the battery isn't charging.

If the light flickers on and off, it means there's a problem with the battery recharging. It could mean something serious, like an alternator or voltage regulator going bad, but it probably just means that your car's alternator V-belt is loose or worn and should be replaced soon.

There may be several V-belts under your car's hood. They are big black rubber bands that link pulleys on the front of the engine to pulleys that turn other devices, such as the air-conditioner compressor and the power-steering pump. The

V-belt that runs a car's alternator usually also turns the fan that sucks in air through the radiator to cool the engine, which is why it's often called a fan belt. A nylon stocking can substitute for any of these V-belts.

When the alternator "idiot light" comes on suddenly and stays on, as it did in the middle of the desert that February evening, you can be 90 percent sure that the fan belt broke and flew off on the highway somewhere behind you. This means that your car's spark plugs, headlights, tape deck and other electrical accessories are draining the battery, and the engine isn't generating any more electricity to keep it charged up.

How long can you go under these circumstances before the car stops dead?

Well, by the time we'd gone 30 miles, the headlights had dimmed to orange flickers. We almost collided with a coyote who didn't see us until it was nearly too late. Then we were almost run down by a semi-truck with the same problem. After that, we limped along the shoulder in the dark, out of harm's way. It was 52 miles into Bowie, Ariz., where the car chugged to a stop in front of a closed gas station.

When the mechanic arrived soon after dawn, he shook his head and told us that we ought to carry a spare fan belt out in that desert. We admitted that we had forgotten. Then he said, "Well, boys, you oughta carry along a stocking then."

We were too speechless to say that we hadn't thought to bring one of those along, either. Just take the stocking, or one leg from a pair of tights or panty-hose, he explained, and loop it around the V-belt pulleys. Tie it as tightly as possible with a square knot and cut off any extra nylon. It will last long enough to get you to the nearest place where you can buy a new V-belt.

It was sound advice. I've tried it since, and it works. A word of caution, though: Men, if you plan to carry an emergency stocking in your car, you had better tell your wife or girlfriend what you're doing and why you're doing it before she discovers the stocking herself. ■

A case against overparenting

By Joni Winn

The scene was festive as Erica, a nursery-school pal of my son's, opened her birthday presents. Wrappings flew through the air as she squealed with delight. Dolls, tapes, clothes, books — each gift was pounced upon by Erica's friends, who showed their mommies what they wanted for their birthday.

Michael snatched one of the storybooks and urged his mother to read it to him. Slightly away from the hubbub, she settled comfortably into a chair and read aloud "The Three Little Pigs."

When the wolf blew down the first little house and "that was the end of the first little pig," she clutched Michael to her chest in some kind of maternal choke hold. "The pig died, Honey," she said. "But don't you worry about it. I'm never going to die and leave you, all right?"

Michael stared up at her. "And then what happened?" I buried my grin in a terry-cloth bath set which had been passed to me to admire.

What has happened to parenting? Suddenly I'm hearing mothers at the supermarket telling kids who have just poured a bag of sugar into the dairy case, "Use your words, Andrea. Tell me what's bothering you."

Toy-store owners are perplexed by the growing number of parents who want a game "where everyone wins."

All at once it seems the whole world has graduated from Parent College, where textbook children never "act out," where peer pressure is conveniently overlooked and where moms and dads proudly step up to receive their diplomas for mastering two very bad kinds of parenting.

The first is the "never-never land" theory, to which Michael's mother is a charter subscriber. Parents who follow this method protect their children from pets that might die, games they might lose, pressures they might perceive. In short, from reality.

The second version is the "monster maker" technique, by which parents breathe life into children's fears simply by vehemently calling attention to them, then assuring the kids that such fears are needless. This process creates a fertile environment for the self-fulfilling prophecy.

Danny's mother, for example, picks him up at school and, upon seeing his splashy artwork, says, "Oh, very good, Danny. Don't feel bad that you're not drawing people yet. You'll catch up to the others. Don't compare yourself."

Small wonder that Danny learns to avoid paints and easels.

I think we've been reading too many books on how to protect our children's delicate psyches. What many have started out as healthy interest in parenting has now become a guilt-ridden battleground where parents wage war against imaginary obstacles to their children's emotional growth.

Hyperanalysis has replaced good old-fashioned love. We're getting the same thing we got in Shakespeare's "Othello." My favorite character in that play is a jerk named Iago, and he is my favorite because I know half a dozen Iagos in my neighborhood alone.

Iago pretends to be saying kind, comforting things. But when he tells Desdemona's father not to worry about her running off with a bum, Iago knows that now this is precisely what her father will fret about.

How many children begin worrying about bullies because we have so carefully assured them that we will protect them from the masses of rowdies who will undoubtedly populate future playgrounds?

How many toddlers are frightened of monsters at night because we have so thoughtfully explained the impossibility of just such creatures?

And how many kids might never worry about their parents

getting a divorce if Mommy didn't keep turning to them during "toothpaste cap" quarrels and announcing, "Don't worry; Mommy and Daddy are not going to get a divorce."

Methinks — and plenty of kids think — thou doth protest too much.

I'm not against communicating. I'm not against explaining a situation to ease a troubled heart. I'm not against assuring children that their world is happy and secure. I'm not against loving my kids.

I'm against bandaging souls that aren't bruised. I'm against stirring up trouble and making monsters where none lived before.

I felt the same way when I took a class in making stained glass and the instructor said, "Don't worry about cutting yourselves on the glass; that never happens." I remember mumbling, "Then why bring the matter up?" My suspicions were quickly confirmed with a number of stitches.

I have two young boys with active imaginations. If, even jokingly, I said, "Don't worry that I won't pick you up after school," you can guess what they'd think about all day. I might as well tell them not to worry that a shark is under their bed.

It's time to calm our kids' butterflies with more appropriate weapons: nets of normalcy and common sense. Put the sharks under the bed to rest and allow our own rational behavior to show children what's worth worrying about and what isn't.

Microwave radiation tester isn't reliable

If your oven door doesn't close properly, contact an expert

By Sonja Heinze

I thought it was almost impossible for a microwave oven to leak. But I received an ad which says that these ovens should be checked for radiation leakage every month, that a bump in shipment could easily deform the seals and allow the oven to emit radiation. It also says the seals can wear out. For $25 you can buy a radiation tester called The Seeker.

Don Witters of the Food and Drug Administration's National Center for Devices and Radiologic Health states, "We have evaluated several of the inexpensive leakage devices, including the Seeker unit, and found them to be generally inaccurate and unreliable."

In a pamphlet published by the FDA titled "Microwave Oven Radiation," the following information is given: "There is little cause for concern about excess microwaves leaking from ovens unless the door hinges, latch or seals are damaged, or if the oven was made before 1971."

"In FDA's experience, most ovens tested show little or no detectable microwave leakage. If there is some problem and you believe your oven might be leaking excessive microwaves, contact the oven manufacturer, a microwave oven service organization, your state health department or the nearest FDA office."

There is a standard regulated by FDA that limits the amount of microwaves that can leak from an oven throughout its lifetime, which is 5 milliwatts of microwave radiation per square centimeter at approximately two inches from the oven surface.

FDA claims this is far below the level known to harm people. And as you move away from an oven, the level of any leaking microwave radiation that might be reaching you decreases dramatically. For example, someone standing 20 inches from an oven would receive approximately one one-hundredth of the amount of microwaves at two inches.

If your oven door doesn't close properly, if the latch is broken or loose or if the seal around the door is damaged in any way, don't use the oven. Contact an expert for help.

WHITE MARK ON TABLE
How can I take off the white alcohol mark or ring on a lovely old mahogany table?
Mrs. A. Sausa, Portland, Ore.

Although I have never tried it, there's a product you should be able to find in your hardware store called Jasco's White Ring Remover. It's a treated cloth that comes in a box. Supposedly heat and water marks are eliminated by rubbing the spots with the cloth.

However, if the white ring is a bona fide alcohol stain caused by a spilled drink, medicine, skin lotion or perfume, Alma Moore, in her book "How to Clean Everything," says you have a real problem.

"For old stains," advises Moore, "use rottenstone (a form of limestone) or powdered pumice, mixed to a thin paste with raw or boiled linseed oil. Rub lightly in the direction of the grain. Wipe with a cloth dampened with plain linseed oil. Repeat as many times as necessary, then polish."

In some cases, refinishing may be necessary. If readers have other suggestions for this common problem, please send them on.

SUGAR IN SERUTAN
I would like to know how much sugar is in Serutan. My husband is a diabetic and cannot eat sugar. A.M. Phillips, Somers Point, N.J.

Mardie Barr, product information specialist with Beecham Products, manufacturers of Serutan, claims that since the sugar content of this product varies with the formulation, the company would prefer to contact consumers individually and requested your name and address.

I informed the Serutan representative that there are probably many people who would like to know the answer to this question, but Beecham insisted that the question be answered on a personal basis. Toll-free numbers were supplied for consumers to call.

I called the number, (800) 245-1040 in all states except Pennsylvania, where the number is (800) 242-1718, and was given the following information:

"There is little cause for concern about excess microwaves leaking from ovens unless the door hinges, latch or seals are damaged or if the oven was made before 1971."

There are two types of Serutan — the granules and the powder. The granules contain .4 grams of sucrose and 4 mg of saccharin. As to the powder, there are two types: one, called the Regular Concentrate, which is flavorless, contains 2.7 grams of dextrose. The other one, which is fruit-flavored, contains 2.6 grams of dextrose, .3 grams of sucrose, and 24 mg of saccharin.

WINE AND SPECKS IN MUSTARD
On the label of Grey Poupon mustard it says it's made with white wine. How much wine is in it? Also, what are the specks of black in the mustard?

Heublein, Inc. makes this mustard, and John Grikis of that company tells us that the black specks are probably either small bits of ground spices and/or minute pieces of the mustard seed coat. When the mustard seed coat is crushed, the mustard is pumped through a fine mesh screen. Inevitably some pieces will pass through the screen.

Since the formula for the mustard is confidential, Grikis couldn't tell us how much wine is in the product. The maximum alcohol level in food, established by the Food and Drug Administration, is one-half of one percent, which won't set you reeling.

Incidentally, in the 14th century when the Duke of Burgundy invited his cousin, the King of France to a festival, 70 gallons of mustard were consumed at a single dinner. Could it be that the percentage of wine in the mustard in those days was considerably higher?

READER SUGGESTION: TIMER
Mary Nicoletti, Atlantic, N.J.: "I thought I'd send you my idea. I was given a timer for the kitchen that can be carried with you. It really saves me a lot of time when I am in another room working. I don't have to run downstairs so many times to see if what I am baking is done." ■

The artichoke is a civilized sort of veggie

By Ted Larsen

It may come as a bit of a shock, but of all the foods we eat, the artichoke is the only true flower that's regularly gobbled up. To heap on more surprise, it's really a thistle, a member of the daisy family.

The artichoke dates from ancient Mediterranean times, its name a corruption of the Arabic "al qarshuf." Like asparagus, it was prized by the Romans, but was transformed to lofty heights of perfection by Renaissance gardeners, who perfected most of the breeds we enjoy today. Artichoke appears to have gotten its English name about 1530.

The vegetable remained a European phenomenon until the 1900s when a group of Italian immigrants settled around Half Moon Bay, Calif. The planted a few hundred acres of artichokes and sent their first shipment East in 1906. Consumption is still meager.

The artichoke is an unusual food, or flower, or whatever. No one sums up the case more artfully or elegantly than contemporary food pundit Jane Grigson in her "Vegetable Book":

"The artichoke above all is the vegetable expression of civilized living, of increasing delight by anticipation and crescendo. No wonder that it was once regarded as an aphrodisiac. It makes no appeal to meat and vegetable mentality. One cannot attack an artichoke with knife and fork and scoff in three mouthfuls. It is first for admiration, then each leaf has to be pulled away for eating and dipped. When the leaves have gone, there is still the fibrous and tickly choke to be removed before the gray-green disc — the 'bonne bouche' — can be enjoyed."

In addition to being a tasty thistle-flower, the vegetable has another scientific quirk. Artichokes contain a unique chemical, "cynarin," which confuses the taste receptors of many people. Exposed to this organic acid, many diners suddenly feel everything tastes sweet for several minutes.

The reaction appears to be purely hereditary. Some people, myself included, have it, others do not.

This delicious and colorful salad features the simplicity of prepared, marinated artichoke hearts.

ARTICHOKE SALAD WITH SPINACH PASTA

2 (6-ounce) jars marinated artichoke hearts
2 cups spinach pasta, any shape
1/4 cup alfalfa sprouts
1 small green pepper, finely chopped
1 medium carrot, grated
1/2 cup black olives, pitted and sliced
1/8-1/4 cup red wine vinegar (to taste)
1/2 teaspoon basil, dried
1/8 teaspoon thyme, dried, crumbled salt
pepper

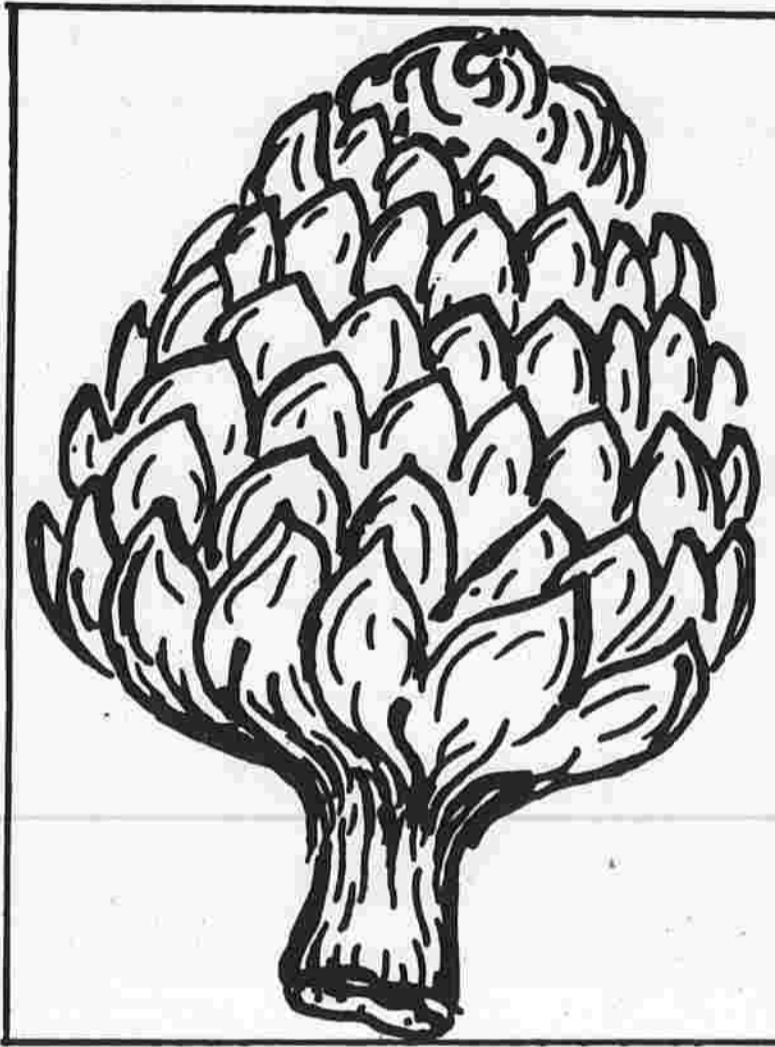

Follow manufacturer's directions for cooking pasta until "al dente," cooked but not mushy. Rinse with cool water, drain and place in large salad bowl.

Chop artichokes into 1/2-inch pieces and add to pasta. Add sprouts and toss salad with a fork to separate sprout strands. Toss while adding remaining ingredients except salt and pepper.

Allow salad to stand for at least 2 hours at room temperature before serving, or refrigerate overnight. Before serving, adjust seasoning and add salt and pepper.

HINTS

If you prefer a less pungent sprout, substitute bean sprouts. Radish sprouts are even zettier than alfalfa.

This can be turned into a dinner salad by serving on a bed of greens surrounded by hard-cooked eggs and cheese.

Naturally, any pasta can be substituted for the spinach variety; it just won't be as colorful. If available, add the rosy hue of tomato pasta.

This simple little recipe is a rich and tasty way to serve artichokes, either fresh or canned, as a dinner vegetable.

ARTICHOKE BOTTOMS WITH BASIL CREAM

10 artichoke bottoms, fresh or canned
1 1/2 sticks butter, very cold, cut into small cubes
1 cup heavy cream
1/2 lemon
1 teaspoon basil, dried
1 teaspoon parsley, dried

If fresh artichokes are used, remove stems and cut bottoms flat. Boil whole for 30 minutes, or until tender when pierced with a fork. Drain and peel away leaves and prickly center. Remove fuzzy choke and heart, leaving bottom. Trim away non-edible parts. Cut into 1/2-inch cubes. If canned are used, drain and cut into cubes.

HINTS

If you prefer a less pungent sprout, substitute bean sprouts. Radish sprouts are even zettier

Reserve in a warm oven.

Pour cream into saute pan and bring to a boil. Reduce slightly to thicken. Remove from heat and begin whisking in butter, piece by piece, until all is incorporated and sauce is thick. Season to taste with lemon and add basil and parsley. Add artichoke pieces and warm over low heat. Serve immediately.

HINTS

If sauce begins to separate from overheating, whisk in about 3 tablespoons ice water.

A bit of tomato paste, whisked into sauce, makes a nice variation.

If you substitute tarragon, oregano or sage for the basil, you create entirely different cream sauces.

This zesty recipe features whole artichokes and enough garlic to keep away any cold, flu or werewolf.

GARLIC ARTICHOKE ITALIA

4 medium artichokes, ready for cooking (see Hints)
1 1/2 cups chicken stock, fresh or canned
1/4 cup olive oil
1/2 cup parsley, chopped
3 teaspoons fresh garlic, minced

salt
pepper

Preheat oven to 400F. Fill 3-quart saucepan half-full of water, bring to a boil and cook artichokes 10 minutes. Remove and drain upside down. When cool, remove prickly center leaves and choke.

Mix together the oil, parsley, garlic, salt and pepper. Place the artichokes in a glass oven dish and pour the oil/garlic mixture over them. Place in oven and cook for 20-25 minutes or until the artichoke leaves turn a lustrous brown.

Remove from oven and pour a couple of tablespoons of pan juice over tops. Turn on broiler, return artichokes to oven and broil for a couple of minutes till lightly browned. Serve with remaining pan juice spooned over artichokes.

HINTS

To prepare whole artichokes for cooking, cut off thick stem and slice off 1/4 inch of bottom. Rub with lemon juice to prevent browning. Trim away tough small outer leaves. Place artichoke on side and cut off 1 inch of top. With scissors, cut off thorny tips of each leaf. ■

Cavey's Upstairs

By Sondra Astor Stave

Of all the restaurants in this area, Cavey's is probably the best known among people who live outside of the area.

The Italian restaurant at 45 E. Center St., located above its pricier French cousin, is beautiful to look at. Its rear room features paintings on white brick walls. The front area is dominated by a long window wall and sparkling lights that make every day look a bit like Christmas.

The white table linen is bright and crisp. Service is prompt and professional. The ambiance suggests an elegant meal: one wishes that the food kept this promise.

A bread basket and a small dish of marinated cucumber arrive with the menus. The pickle is just mildly spicy and awakens one's tastebuds for the meal to come.

The rolls are chewy and even better when spread thickly with butter. The Italian-type bread is just that — it looks like the real thing, but the taste is flat, a harbinger of other disappointments throughout the meal.

The appetizers, as a group, are a highpoint of the meal. A special of the evening, smoked trout, arrives as two moist fish filets. A leaf of lettuce serves as a bed for the caper and egg garnish. It is a pretty dish.

Torta with smoked salmon seems, at first, a peculiar combination but the spinach and cheese torta and the mild smoked salmon play off well against each other.

Fettuccini verdi con porcini provides well cooked green noodles in a rich cream and cheese sauce. There are just enough mushrooms to make one wish for more.

A mixed green salad is included in the price of the entrees and it combines a variety of lettuce leaves with onion, pepper and an olive. Ground pepper is offered from a mill so large it seems more appropriate to a battlefield than an elegant dining room.

Caesar salad carries a surcharge of $1.50 and while it is properly prepared, one searches in vain to discover why romaine, anchovy and croutons are so much more valuable than the dinner salad.

As one who relies on the kitchen to determine seasoning, I found myself uncharacteristically reaching for the salt and pepper. Best, perhaps, was the calves liver alla Veneziana. The organ meat was tender and flavorful as were the traditionally fried onions.

A breast of chicken rollatini was tasty, though the stuffing ingredients were hard to identify. But the rice milanese along side was more palatable than the moist and creamy preparation that milanese promises.

Saltimbacca alla Cavey's combined tender veal slices with prosciutto, cheese and sage. Nothing to criticize, but neither anything to excite.

Filet mignon alla griglia was supposed to be marinated in olive oil, garlic and rosemary. The texture of the meat could not be faulted and it arrived rare as ordered, but again the taste was flat. The marinade had not done its job.

A special of the evening, grilled tuna, looked lovely on the plate. But this steak, too, cried for more assertive seasoning. The tomato puree served underneath provided more for the eye than the palate.

Small red potatoes and braised red cabbage were served family style. The cabbage offered a crunchiness and blandness of the meats on the table.

Cavey's makes its own ices and ice creams and the former are generally excellent. The evening we visited the flavor was grape, and it was easily the best of the meal's conclusions.

The true fruit flavor and minimum amount of sugar left the mouth puckery but fully satisfied. For those who like white chocolate, the white chocolate ice cream is rich and smooth. Commercial flavors such as chocolate chip were available as well.

Chocolate mousse cake seems to have become a standard at restaurants, but the execution varies widely. Cavey's version was two layers of light chocolate cake with a creamy filling. It did not offer the richness that one expects of this dessert.

With appetizers at three to five dollars and main dishes ranging from eleven to fifteen, an appealing physical plant, thoroughly professional service and an attitude that proclaims a first class kitchen, one expects Cavey's to deliver a very special dining experience. A meal we enjoyed two years ago more than lived up to that anticipation. A meal in November was a near disaster. This evening's dinner delivered good but not great food. If Cavey's is to be Manchester's premier restaurant, one is entitled to expect more. ■

Battle in P

By Jack Reed
United Press Inter

MANILA, Philippines — Separatist guerrilla and government troops clashed during the weekend in the Philippines, killing at least 21 soldiers, two journalists and five soldiers, the army said today.

The resurgence of fighting between government and communist troops in northern Philippines followed a lull in activity that began last month. At least 21 soldiers, 10 guerrillas and two journalists died.

Troops also battled in the south. An army of a political ousted ruler Ferdinand Marcos fled the South on Feb. 25 after a revolt.

Today, Defense Secretary Ponce Enrile said the government force was back in control. Corazon Aquino's call for reconciliation but the "hard-core" elements of communist insurgency still appeals "unless it is in their own or advantage."

Enrile made the announcement at a security conference with some 10,000 Marines gathered in a school in Manila to press for a return home in exile in a radio broadcast.

Libya som

TRIPOLI, Libya — Responding to a European demand to drop down on its diplomatic relations, some European countries imposed travel restrictions on those who remain, one Western official said.

Word of the restrictions came amid reports of a shake-up in Moammar Gaddafi's government.

The Western diplomatic representatives in Tripoli moved to the Foreign Office Saturday and told Gaddafi of the expulsions and travel restrictions. He said they were being taken into consideration in a decision by the community foreign ministers to cut the size of Libya's trade mission.

A Libyan television broadcast showed the heads of missions from Italy, Spain, France, Germany, Belgium, the Netherlands and Denmark were "rejecting the measures against the European countries."

"We have no objection to these measures — adopted without consultation — except to report said."

The television broadcast said Europeans gave i
