Denial spurs a 'war' Hogan over Lanzano move

By George Lavoyn

Herold Reporter

A Manchester man who was told earlier this week that he will not be reappointed as a sheriff when his term expires in June is being unfairly penalized because he supports a candidate challenging Hartford County High Sheriff Patrick Hogan's "hand-picked" successor, Democratic Town Chairman Theodore Cummings charged Friday.

Raymond Lanzano of Lyness Street said Friday he was told by Hogan on Tuesday that he would not be reappointed. He declined further comment and referred all questions about the matter to Cummings, who strongly criticized Hogan and the man Hogan supports to succeed him when he retires this year, John Targa of Plainfield.

"Hogan just wants everything his way and Raymond had the guts to stand up and follow his conscience," said Cummings. "We're going to war with these folks."

Cummings said 20 Manchester's 23 delegates to this summer's nominating convention support Alfred Rioux of Newington for the position of High Sheriff. He and the other Democrats will try to persuade the three other delegates to switch their support away from Targa, Cummings said.

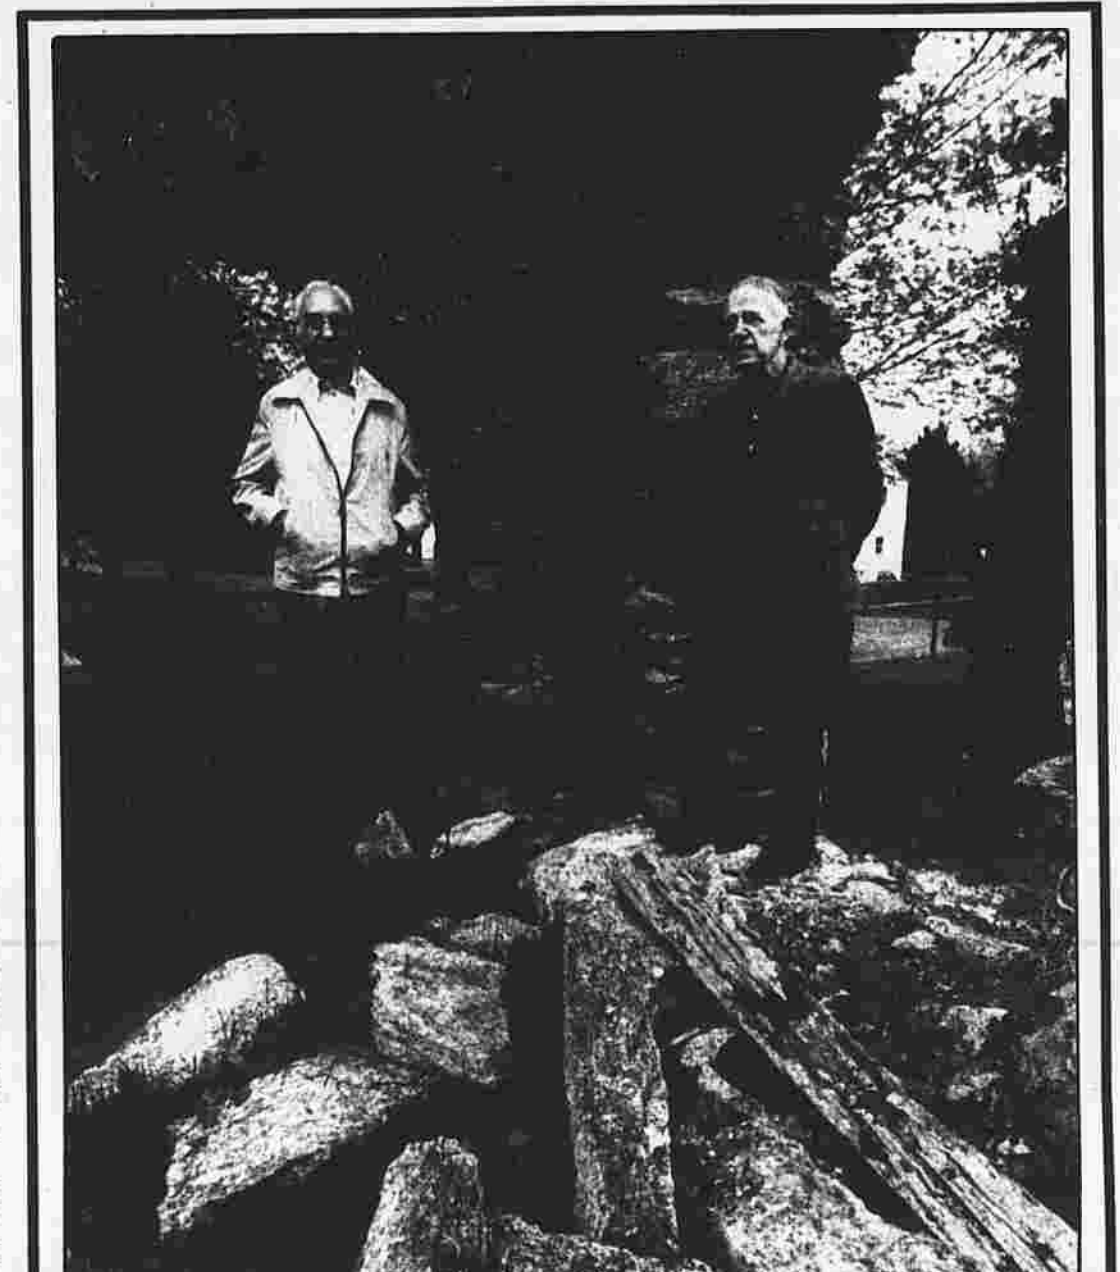

Cummings said a press conference has been scheduled for Monday to denounce the firing of Lanzano, whom he described as "a very good sheriff and a very good man."

At the news conference, Rioux's supporters will "try to make this known and felt strong, loud and clear throughout the first Congressional district," Cummings said.

"If you don't fight that, then anybody could go down at the whim of the high sheriff," said Cummings. He added that if someone does not oppose Hogan and Targa "then you're just as bad as the guy who did the ugly deed."

Hogan, who has been high sheriff for 25 years, could not be reached for comment Friday.

Cummings said Lanzano, employed for the past year, was one of six sheriffs who have come out in support of Rioux. Lanzano was singled out to be punished to "scare" the others into supporting Targa, he said.

Surveying the stones and rubble that have fallen from the Pitkin Glass Works site are Erland Johnson, left, and Dr. Alfred Sundquist. Along with other members of the group that oversees the historic Revolutionary War-era ruin, they are asking townspeople to pitch in to shore it up.

Glass works needs help Pitkin's overseers fear a crash

By Susan Vaughn

Erland Johnson is worried that an earthquake or just natural erosion could bring a quick end to Manchester's only Revolutionary War-era monument, the Pitkin Glass Works.

Nothing reports of three minor earthquakes in Connecticut since October, Johnson, who is president of the Pitkin Glass Works executive committee, said this week that it wouldn't take much for what's left of the walls of the 200-year-old glass works to come tumbling down.

During a visit to the remains of the glass works Thursday, Johnson pointed to loose stones, missing mortar between them and rotting timbers above the windows and archways. Several stones and one large lintel were lying on the ground near one of the inside walls of the ruin, which is at the intersection of Parker, Putnam and Porter streets.

Birds have built their nests in the large spaces under the lintels and poison ivy has filled in the cracks in the walls. Johnson has a rash on his arm to prove the presence of the poison ivy after he and Dr. Alfred Sundquist, a member of the Pitkin executive committee, recently worked to clean up the site.

Rocket failure drew no comment

WASHINGTON (AP) - A NASA research rocket that had flown successfully 120 consecutive times misfired over the New Mexico desert two weeks ago - the fourth U.S. space launch vehicle to fail this year.

Amtrak faces strike threat by engineers

By Vincent Del Giudice

United Press International

WASHINGTON - The union representing Amtrak engineers threatened Friday to stage a nationwide strike against the passenger line as early as Monday over work and safety rules, but the railroad said the only labor dispute it knew of was a local grievance in Delaware.

William Hausteider, the general chairman of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, announced plans for a coast-to-coast walkout in a statement issued by a spokesman in Philadelphia.

"I'm pushing for the early Monday morning deadline of the Railway Labor Act," the union committee voted to authorize a job action over changes in work and safety rules, job assignments and salaries with the advent of high-speed rail service on Amtrak's lucrative northeast corridor between Boston, New York and Washington.

"This has been brewing for a long time. It's a strike by the brotherhood against the Amtrak system. This is a strike by the Amtrak system against the Amtrak system."

"You'd have one hell of a time running the Amtrak system without the engineers," said union spokesman Arthur Shenefelt. "This has been brewing for a long time."

But he added, "If management decided to move over a little, a lot can happen between now and Monday morning."

An Amtrak spokesman in Washington, Bruce Heard, said he knew nothing of a strike or a strike vote against the national railroad and said a statement that said a minor issue has been raised over the question of which union has jurisdiction over the operation of a self-propelled crane at Amtrak's Bear, Del. maintenance facility.

The statement read by Shenefelt said John Sykes, the rail union's international president, authorized a strike vote earlier this week.

The brotherhood represents 450 engineers and firemen on the northeast corridor and 1,500 employees in other parts of the nation.

Expert says sand helped put fire out

MOSCOW (UPI) - A U.S. nuclear safety expert said Friday Soviet firefighters have smothered the fire at the Chernobyl atomic power plant, but he did not rule out the possibility that a meltdown occurred at the crippled reactor.

The Soviets achieved the major step toward controlling the atomic crisis by dropping sand on the plant, and were erecting a cement tomb around the reactor to stem the emission of harmful radiation, said Morris Rosen, head of the International Atomic Energy Agency's nuclear safety division.

Rosen, part of a three-member IAEA team permitted to visit the Chernobyl power plant, said temperatures inside the reactor stood at 572 degrees Fahrenheit, but added the level of radiation around the plant was "significantly reduced."

"The situation appears to be stabilizing," said Rosen, speaking almost two weeks after the explosion and fire at the plant 80 miles north of Kiev that cast radioactive fallout across Europe and trace amounts to the United States.

In Western Europe, West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl said he will send a letter to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev asking for complete details of the accident.

Intensive cooling of the reactor has been under way in order to lower the temperature of the active zone and has helped to sharply reduce the emission of radioactive substances," the Soviet Union said.

Rosen said the fire in the reactor was under control.

Policy no help Index

U.S. policy in the debt crisis faced by many Latin American countries boosted profits for some big American banks but seriously damaged the domestic farm economy, a congressional report said Friday. And, the report concluded, policies implemented by the Reagan administration "have done little to permanently resolve the debt crisis." Story on page 10.

WEATHER

Sunny and milder

Mostly sunny and milder Saturday; highs 65 to 70 with north winds around 10 mph. Partly cloudy Saturday night with lows 45 to 50. Partly sunny on Sunday with highs around 70. Today's weather picture was drawn by Sarah Chapman of Pleasant Street, a fourth-grader at Washington School.

National forecast

Rain and showers are forecast for portions of the northern Intermountain, northern Plains, upper, middle and lower Mississippi Valley, upper Great Lakes, and Ohio/Tennessee Valley regions. Scattered showers are predicted for portions of the central Intermountain, west and east Gulf Coast regions. Elsewhere, weather will be fair in general.

Lightening their lives

Miss America, Susan Akin, says she doesn't mind wearing the tiara all the time and making so many appearances for worthy causes — it's the packing and unpacking she dreads.

"I go someplace new about every two days, and sometimes it's hard to keep things organized," Akin, 21, said Thursday after a visit to a center for children with birth defects in Chattanooga, Tenn. "I have my aerobics clothing mixed up with my evening gowns."

Wearing her rhinestone tiara, the University of Mississippi senior met with children at the Birth Defect Center of the T. C. Thompson Children's Hospital. "I think it lightens their lives," said Akin, who lost a sister to Down's syndrome six years ago.

Stern talks acoustics

Violinist Isaac Stern, president of New York's Carnegie Hall, joined other officials on stage to reassure the performing world that renovation won't harm — and in fact may improve — the hall's acoustics.

Carnegie Hall will close after a performance May 17 by Stern and the Cleveland Symphony, and will reopen in mid-December, with a new maple floor on the stage, a new air conditioning system, and replacement of a panel cut out of the stage's ceiling in 1946 to light the movie "Carnegie Hall."

About $10 million already has been spent on the renovation, which is estimated to cost nearly $50 million, board chairman James D. Wollensohn said Wednesday. He said $45 million has been raised so far.

Today's forecast

Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island: Mostly sunny today. High in 60s and low 70s, except cooler at the shore. Mostly clear tonight. Low in 40s. Partly sunny Sunday, except clouding up north portion in the afternoon. High in 60s and low 70s inland, cooler along the coast.

Maine: Chance of showers today north and east and partly sunny in the southwest. Highs in the mid 50s to lower 60s. Scattered showers tonight and Sunday. Lows near 40 and highs mostly in the 50s.

New Hampshire: Mostly sunny south and partly cloudy up north today. Highs in the upper 50s and 60s. Variable cloudiness tonight with a chance of showers north. Lows near 40. Variable cloudiness with a chance of showers Sunday. Highs 55 to 60 north and in the 60s south.

Vermont: Sunshine today giving way to clouds and maybe a sprinkle late in the day. Highs in the 60s. Variable cloudiness tonight with chance of a shower. Lows in the upper 30s to low 40s. Sunday a mix of clouds and sun. A bit cooler. Highs in the upper 50s to low 60s.

Across the nation

A slow-moving spring storm Friday rolled thunderstorms and snowshowers across the Plains as residents in six states cleared away debris from nearly a dozen tornadoes and drought continued to plague parts of the South.

Heavy rain from the weakening storm, centered over South Dakota, pushed streams and rivers over their banks, flooding fields, streets and basements.

At least 11 tornadoes struck Thursday night in Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Iowa, Nebraska and South Dakota, battering houses and barns and knocking down power lines. No serious injuries were reported.

Residents of the Oklahoma City suburb of Edmond cleaned up after a twisted leveled 45 homes, damaged 100 others and left much of the town without power or telephone service.

"We don't know how many are homeless," said David Van Nostrand, Edmond civil defense director. "Everybody was evacuated — even those whose houses are only slightly damaged — so the area could be secured better."

At least 13 people suffered minor injuries. City Manager Joe Minner said. Police cordoned off the town to keep out sightseers and looters and the National Guard was called in to help clean up.

"It was pretty eerie to hear what sounded just like a train going right over the house," said Paul Johnson.

Today in history

Almanac

Today is Saturday, May 10, the 130th day of 1986 with 235 to follow.

The moon is moving away from its new phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

The evening star is Venus. Those born on this date are under the sign of Taurus. They include Swiss theologian Karl Barth in 1886, Hollywood film composer Max Steiner in 1888 and Dimitri Tiomkin in 1899.

Manchester/Area Towns In Brief

I-84 crash causes injuries. Two men were treated for injuries following the collision of their car with a truck on Interstate 84 near exit 63 in Manchester Friday afternoon.

Rhode Islander, the driver of the car, was taken to Hartford Hospital, where he was treated and discharged. A hospital spokeswoman said Richard Pinto, 52, of Bristol, a passenger, was treated and discharged at Manchester Memorial Hospital, according to a Manchester spokeswoman.

The truck driver, Herman Thompson, 38, was not injured. Both vehicles were westbound when the truck started to change lanes into the Peltier vehicle, causing the car to hit the truck and lose control, state police said. No charges had been filed late Friday.

Latin Club to dress up. FIFTY members of the Bolton High School Latin Club will don their togas and tunics to compete in State Latin Day.

The event, which started in 1979 combines a variety of different competitions, including chariot races, a "College Bowl," Roman projects and academic workshops.

The Bolton club has placed in the top three since the day began. "The event will be held today at Glastonbury High School."

Flower shop changes hands

The Leaf, Stem and Root flower shop on Main Street has been sold to a Vernon florist, the owners of both stores said Friday.

The deal was completed between Leaf, Stem and Root of Manchester and the Vernon-based Michelle's Florals Wednesday. Donna Stratmann, who owned Leaf, Stem and Root for about five years, said she will stay at the Main Street store until after Mother's Day, one of the busiest times in the business.

"I'm staying here just to help her for Mother's Day," Stratmann said. "All I left for is to give myself some peace. I feel like my challenge of running the business is over."

Stratmann employs about three people at her shop, Michelle McConnell, who owns Michelle's Florals and is the new owner of Leaf, Stem and Root, would not say what would happen to the present employees or how many employees she plans to hire.

Neither Stratmann nor McConnell would reveal the selling price. McConnell has owned Michelle's Florals for four years, she said. She owned a grocery store in Manchester before that.

"The store in Manchester we hope will be a very nice business," she said.

"The opportunity to buy came available and we thought it would be an obvious expansion," McConnell said. "We have a lot of Manchester customers already."

Buffalo dies, leaves state minus friend

EASTON (UPI) — Workers at a petting zoo are mourning the loss of their star attraction, a gentle buffalo named Morning Thunder who was killed by a motorist after vandals allegedly cut open a fence.

The 4-year-old buffalo had been at the little roadside zoo since he was a baby. "He was like part of the family," zoo manager Robert Sabia said Friday.

Police said the half-ton animal was struck about 2 a.m. Thursday by a pick-up truck driven by Dorothy Barnett, 22, of Newtown. The truck was destroyed and Barnett was issued a ticket for driving with a suspended license.

Farm owner Irving Silverman said Morning Thunder was so gentle children could pet and feed him and scramble about under his feet.

"We had him for about four years and he wouldn't hurt a fly," Silverman said.

As for the other animals, "He was their mama," Sabia said. "I don't think he knew how big he was." "He'd let the baby animals climb all over him," added Barbara Gerritsen, a farm employee. "He took care of all the other animals."

Sabia said he believes vandals cut the fence late at night.

Most of the animals wandered through the broken fence and were rounded up after sunrise to return to their familiar corals.

Among the goats, sheep, peacocks, chickens, ducks and deer, The zoo's llamas were stolen two years ago, Sabia said.

Sabia said thousands of children visited the zoo each month to feed the various farm animals.

"The biggest attraction was the buffalo," Sabia said. Police are investigating the apparent vandalism.

Sabia said the other animals were another buffalo in action in October and will also try to replace the stolen llamas.

Bike journey may avoid Kiev

WESTPORT — The accident at a Soviet nuclear power plant that spread radiation across the Ukraine and parts of eastern Europe has caused organizers to begin "reassessing a summer 'Bike For Peace' trip that is scheduled to begin in Kiev and end in New York."

The trip by 80 bicyclists from the United States, Canada, Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia is still on although North American organizers say they may ask their eastern bike partners to agree to change the course.

The route the riders plan to take from Kiev to Prague, Czechoslovakia, lies within the area contaminated in the accident, although no details about the extent of the contamination have been released.

"I don't know if we have enough information right now on which to decide whether to insist or begin discussions on whether to change a different location in the Soviet Union," said Christopher G. Senie, a 33-year-old Westport lawyer and founder of Teamworks, a non-profit group sponsoring the 1,400-mile North American leg of "Bike For Peace '86."

The ride is scheduled to begin in Kiev — 70 miles south of the Chernobyl nuclear power plant where the accident occurred — on June 22. The participants are scheduled to ride about 800 miles to Prague, from where they are to fly to Montreal to start the second leg of the ride to New York. The ride ends at the United Nations on July 27. The trip, similar to one organized in 1983 by the same group, coincides with the United Nations' International Year of Peace. Its goal, according to Senie and other Teamworks officials is to bridge cultural differences in an effort to foster understanding and world peace.

Senie said he has examined alternate routes, including one starting in Odessa — several hundred miles south of Kiev in the Ukraine — that would lead the riders well around the site of the heaviest radioactive contamination. Another possibility, he said, would be to duplicate the Moscow-to-Leningrad trip he and other riders made in 1983.

Senie said he would meet with the U.S. State Department on May 16 and planned to talk with representatives of his Soviet partners, the Soviet Peace Committee and the Soviet Sports Committee, to discuss how the accident might affect the trip.

"We'll have a better picture next week," said Senie, adding that his organization had been talking with radiologists and doctors to determine the extent of contamination in the region and its possible effects on the riders.

The Capital Region Education Council will run an employment training program this summer to help high school dropouts in academics and career choices.

CREC, a private, nonprofit education agency based in Windsor, is currently recruiting youths between 16 and 21 who meet certain income guidelines and who have not completed high school to take part in the free 10-week program.

TAKE FIVE AT THE CAPITOL — Jazz pianist and composer Dave Brubeck of Wilton, with his wife, Iola, received an official statement Friday from Gov. William O'Neill naming the day in his honor during ceremonies at the Capitol in Hartford. Brubeck will make a charity appearance with the Hartford Symphony on Sunday.

Royalty in flames Princess Anne's husband, Mark Phillips, who pulled out the Dorsal Horse Trials last month reportedly suffering pain and disorientation, has inflamed nerves on the side of his face, Buckingham Palace says.

Cougar's farm prowls Rock star John Cougar Mellencamp, performing a benefit concert for farmers in Chillicothe, Mo., urged his audience of 8,000 to 10,000 to write their legislators, and donated $5,000 to a farm support group.

Mellencamp, a Seymour, Ind., native whose sister is married to a hog farmer, according to tour manager Harry Sandler, performed outside the Livingston County Farmers Home Administration office Wednesday night.

Mellencamp's hit album "Scarecrow" highlights the American farm crisis.

U.S./World In Brief

Aquino says funds not enough

MANILA, Philippines — President Corason Aquino told Secretary of State George Shultz the U.S. aid level is "far short" of what is needed and asked for more Friday to help pay debts and fight rebels.

Aquino and Shultz met over breakfast for 45 minutes at the glass-paneled government guest house. Later, Shultz emerged from the guest house with a "thumbs up" sign and shouted to reporters the session was "excellent."

Before leaving for Hawaii, Shultz reiterated President Reagan's invitation for Aquino to visit the United States, and Philippine officials said she may do so in November after elections in both nations.

In a briefing for reporters traveling with Shultz, Information Minister Teodoro Locsin said Aquino and Shultz had "a very friendly meeting," discussing the Philippines' economic and military needs in the wake of the Feb. 25 revolt that toppled 20-year ruler Ferdinand Marcos.

Reagan has offered $100 million in economic grants and $50 million in military assistance to help the new government, in addition to assistance already targeted for the Southeast Asian nation.

But Monsod said the offer was "nowhere near enough."

Famed Everest guide dies

CALCUTTA, India — Tenzing Norgay, the Sherpa guide who took Sir Edmund Hillary to the summit of Mount Everest in 1953 in man's first conquest of the world's highest peak, died in Darjeeling on Friday. He was believed to be 72.

Police said Tenzing died from a chronic lung ailment in the West Bengal city about 320 miles north of Calcutta, the state capital. The exact date of Tenzing's birth is not known, but he believed he was born in 1914.

Tenzing, who earned the nickname "Tiger of the Snows" for his early exploits on Mount Everest, was with Hillary in the first successful ascent of the world's highest peak. The pair reached the peak of the 29,248-foot mountain on May 29, 1953, and became instant international celebrities.

Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi issued a statement saying, "The nation bows its head to this hero. My sympathy and condolences to the members of the Tenzing family."

NASA bows on rocket redesign

WASHINGTON — Apparently bowing to a demand by the presidential Challenger commission, NASA announced Friday it is asking independent experts to oversee the redesign of the solid booster rocket joint that is thought to have caused the space shuttle to explode.

The space agency said also that while a redesign team has begun to consider a number of design options, it will not make a final selection until the commission has issued its report and recommendations, expected early next month.

NASA's announcement was made as the commission prepared for the first time, to release the transcript of a session on May 7 that was closed to the public. At that hearing, agency officials as well as engineers from rocket booster builder Morton-Thiokol testified.

Sources familiar with the session said the commission was dismayed on that day to find that a redesign of the rockets was already under way and demanded that the activity be halted, because the space agency seemed to be settling for a quick fix.

Tax reform bill draws support

HOT SPRINGS, Va. — Some of the nation's top business leaders gave tentative support Friday to the Senate Finance Committee's sweeping tax reform bill but they warned their backing could evaporate if the final version bows to special interests.

Meeting in the Allegheny Mountain resort of Hot Springs, members of the prestigious Mountain Council generally said they were surprised the panel, which passed the bill Wednesday, had acted so swiftly on such a radical piece of legislation.

The measure would significantly chop tax breaks in exchange for much lower tax rates for both businesses and individuals.

Even though it is designed, over five years, to raise taxes on business by about $100 billion to help provide lower individual rates, the measure treats corporations much better than either President Reagan's tax overhaul plan or the bill passed last year by the House.

The House measure would increase taxes on business by about $145 billion in five years and has been heavily attacked by corporate leaders.

"I think it is time to quit using tax policy as an economic tool," said General Motors Chairman Roger Smith. "I think in total this is a good bill for tax reform."

Spain sends Libyan envoy packing

MADRID — The government, accusing Libya of financing "extremists of all kinds," ordered the arrest Friday of a senior army officer who met with Libyan leader Muammar Khadafi to seek support for right-wing activities in Spain.

The government also ordered the consul general of the Libyan mission in Madrid to leave Spain before midnight Friday for his role in arranging the meeting between Lt. Col. Carlos Meer de Ribera and Khadafi in late January.

Meer de Ribera, attached to the military government of Avila province, was charged with traveling to Tripoli to seek financial backing for extreme right activities, government spokesman Javier Solana said.

Peres denies Syria attack plan

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Prime Minister Shimon Peres dismissed reports Friday that Israel was planning a military strike against Syria to retaliate for suspected Syrian involvement in an attempted bombing of an Israeli passenger jet.

"I can say with clarity Israel does not have any intention to attack Syria," Peres told Israel radio. "To the best of my knowledge, we do not have indications the Syrians are going to attack Israel the next morning."

"On the Syrian-Israeli relations, there were a great deal of alarming reports which I would suggest to calm them down and have at least a de-escalation in the rhetoric between the countries," he said.

"By judging coolly I cannot see immediate indications for a Syrian attack upon us. The Israeli position is clear: We don't have any intentions to attack the Syrians," Peres said.

His remarks followed a CBS News report that Israel was preparing a military strike against Syria in retaliation for the attempted bombing of an Israeli El Al airliner at London's Heathrow Airport on April 17.

Abu Dhabi's Al Itihad newspaper quoted a Lebanese political leader as saying Israel was planning to attack Syrian forces within a week and that the Syrian army was on full alert.

In Washington, a State Department official said the administration is "always concerned" about tensions in the region. "But we have seen no change on the ground to lead us to suspect there is going to be imminent major hostilities."

Israel and Syria fought in the 1948, 1967 and 1973 Mideast wars. Israeli officials say they believe Syria is attacking the Jewish state, which captured the Golan Heights from Syria in 1967, when it feels strong enough to do so.

The Yedioth Ahronot newspaper said Syria believes Israel and the United States have agreed on a "division of labor," with Washington attacking Libya and Israel striking at Syria. Both Arab nations are alleged by the United States to support terrorism.

Israeli officials who asked not to be identified denied there had been any massing of Israeli military forces in the Golan Heights. They said Israel was monitoring Syrian moves, but no more than usual.

CBS said Israeli Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin has privately told several U.S. officials that Israel will retaliate for the attempted El Al bombing.

Israeli military experts, CBS said, believe the Syrian military threat is growing rapidly and that the sooner Israel moves against Syria the better.

Khadafi lied about family, opponent says

LONDON (UPI) — Libyan leader Col. Muammar Khadafi said his country intends to build a "line of fire" across its coast with 1 million armed men and vowed if invaded, "they will burn, they will die."

A Libyan opposition leader said there were no casualties in Khadafi's family, contradicting Khadafi's claims that an infant daughter had been killed and two sons injured.

Libyan television reports Thursday night monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp. said Khadafi also threatened war against any Arab nation that permitted the Mediterranean-based U.S. 6th Fleet to visit.

In Cairo, a Libyan opposition leader said the April 15 U.S. air attacks on Tripoli and Benghazi destroyed four military barracks and 50 warplanes and killed 300 people, mostly military personnel.

The Libyan government said 45 people died in the U.S. raid, but Western reporters believe as many as 100 people may have been killed. Two U.S. airmen died.

Abdel-Hamid El-Bakoush, leader of the Front for the Salvation of Libya, said none of Khadafi's family was injured in the attack, contradicting reports that an adopted daughter was killed and two sons were wounded.

"Khadafi invented this to make the Libyan people believe that he was sharing with them the consequences of American aggression," he said.

El-Bakoush, in an interview published by the newspaper Al Ahram, predicted an escalation of Libyan terrorism and a more violent American reaction that would force the Libyan army to overthrow Khadafi's regime.

Khadafi, who has been quiet since the U.S. attack, said he would create a "line of fire and confrontation line" from coastal Libya in the east to Zuwarah in the west.

The cities will become "the slaughterhouses for the sheep of America."

"If the Americans land on the Libyan coast, they will burn, they will die," he said.

Khadafi said he was asking each of the 1 million Libyans to buy a Soviet-made AK-47 Kalashnikov

FBI criticized in Presser probe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate investigators said Friday the Justice Department was not under political pressure when it rejected a recommendation to indict Teamsters President Jackie Presser for embezzling money from his union.

But investigators said their own probe of the department's handling of the case involving Presser, a longtime supporter of President Reagan, was hampered by the FBI's refusal to cooperate and provide information.

Investigators Howard Shapiro and John Sopko appeared before the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations on their investigation of the Presser case, which involves allegations that Presser embezzled $700,000 from his hometown Teamsters hall in Cleveland by paying "ghost employees" — associates on the payroll who did no work for the local.

While FBI Director William Webster discussed the case with two committee members, the report said the "FBI's overall attitude toward the subcommittee's investigation can be fairly characterized as one of obfuscation, intransigence and delay."

The subcommittee opened an investigation nine months ago after it was reported the Justice Department had decided to drop its labor fraud investigation of Presser, president of the nation's largest union.

Presser, who is expected to be re-elected to a five-year term this month, also has reportedly served as an FBI informant.

The Senate investigators said they found no evidence to support allegations that the case was dropped because of political influence, although the report did not say whose influence may have been involved.

Instead, they said Justice Department officials decided against pursuing the case after receiving information that FBI agents in Cleveland had "authorized" Presser's conduct.

Navy man called a spy

POINT MUGU, NAVAL AIR STATION, Calif. (AP) — A Navy enlisted man at this coastal base has been charged with espionage and selling a weapons loading manual in the belief a foreign government would use it, officials said Friday.

Petty Officer Third Class Robert Dean Hogue was charged this week with one count of espionage and four related counts and faces a hearing Monday in preparation for a court-martial, said Lt. Cmdr. Don Lewis, a spokesman for the test center.

Hague worked as an ordnance man at the Pacific Missile Test Center, a crucial missile test base, from November 1984 until his arrest March 4.

The challenge of LaRouche

Lyndon LaRouche Jr. continues to spread his bitter brand of extremist ideology in efforts to gain support in a second bid for president. Like a queen bee, he nurtures his followers in the National Democratic Policy Committee, making sure they are able to recapitulate all of his beliefs. When ready, they strike on their own and try to run in state and local elections.

Last week, the party made a move that strikes close to home. Robert Patton, a LaRouche candidate from New Hampshire, proudly introduced to the public two followers, Alton Browning Jr. of Jewett City and Nicholas Tarzia of Stamford, who intend to seek office in Connecticut, and vowed that "there will be more."

Patton's words raise a challenge to the voters of Connecticut, a challenge that one other state faced, but lost, on March 18. When Mark Fairchild and Janice Hart, two LaRouche candidates in Chicago, won statewide Democratic primaries, laziness and ignorance carried the day. Voters were too idle to learn about the candidates they had to choose from, and politicians took the historic power of the big city's political machine for granted.

Thus, Illinois is forced to deal with the possibility of a lieutenant governor and secretary of state who believe that all people should be screened for an Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, and that a quarantine should be in force until a cure is found. LaRouche's followers also say that Queen Elizabeth sells drugs and that Donald Regan, President Reagan's chief of staff, plays a key role in a Mafia money-laundering scheme.

Tarzia is running for Congress in the 4th Congressional District. Browning is running for the Senate. Both said they have funds and concrete plans for campaigning, and each must capture 20 percent of the delegates at a nominating convention this summer to force a Democratic primary.

They plan to talk directly to the voters to drum up support, and therein lies the challenge. Connecticut residents must pay careful attention as the LaRouche followers speak their minds. Voters in the state should be intelligent enough to evaluate what they say and vote accordingly.

Like that queen bee, who doesn't hang around to see her offspring and lives longer than all of them in the end, LaRouche will survive. But his followers will quickly fall by the wayside if people listen closely to their rhetoric.

LaRouche and his drones can run in Connecticut, and they can hide, as some still continue to do, but they won't win here unless voters fall asleep. This state, and its voters, don't need their type of honey.

"You're too late. Thanks to Khadaty, everything on North America is booked this summer."

A warning about the man who would lead

I got a letter from Mario Cuomo the other day. I think it must be a form letter, because he asks me to give "as much as you can" to something called "the Governor's Victory Team," so that he can "ward off the Republican attack" and "keep the truth on record before the people of New York."

Gov. Cuomo knows very well that I am already doing everything I possibly can to alert not only the people of New York but the American people as a whole to the truth about him.

As a matter of fact, that form letter itself is a splendid example of Cuomo's positive gift for duplicity. It is, essentially, a money-raising letter, designed to build up a war chest for Cuomo's race for re-election as governor this fall. But Cuomo hasn't yet declared his candidacy for re-election, and in truth may not have decided, yet, whether to make the race or throw New York to the wolves and concentrate exclusively for the next two years on what is really closest to his heart: running for the presidency in 1988. So the letter had to be phrased in such a way as to constitute an appeal for money (1) for himself if he runs for re-election, and (2) for the alternative Democratic nominee if he doesn't.

THE LETTER is duplicitous in another way too. Like the other governors of both parties who are up for re-election this year, Cuomo has benefitted enormously from President Reagan's policies and the health they have restored to the national

No consolidation, no rule revision

To the Editor: In 1978, Gov. Ella Grasso saw fit to officially honor and recognize the Manchester Fire Department, 8th Utilities District. The tradition and dedication have not diminished since that time.

It is beyond comprehension that the Board of Directors of the Town of Manchester would seek to destroy such a good and cost-effective organization.

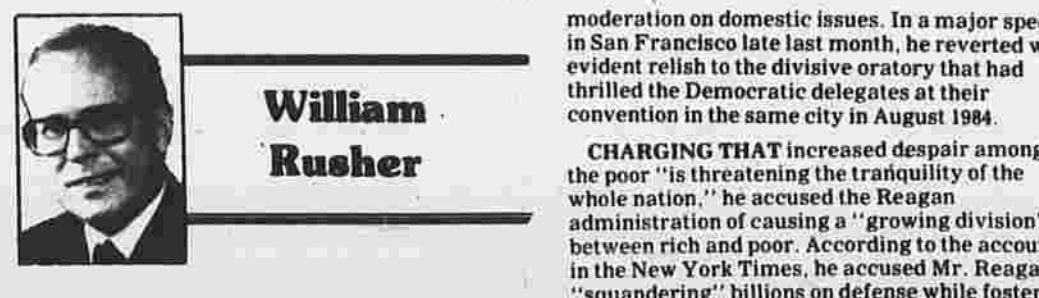

A change in the Town Charter denies all the citizens of Manchester their basic right to self-determination. In this country the rights of the individual are also protected. The Manchester Board of Directors feels differently. Our forefathers who gave us this heritage must be turning over in their graves at this travesty. The destruction of the 8th Utilities District is wrong. There is no honor, in it, just politics and greed.

Citizens of Manchester, keep your rights. Once gone they are never returned; are you then better off? I urge no consolidation, no charter revision.

According to the account in the New York Times, he accused Mr. Reagan of "squandering" billions on defense while fostering "the denial of compassion" in social programs. "We cannot," he declared, "watch the numbers of our poor grow, our middle class shrink, their dreams wither, and think that... increased violence and disorientation will not affect us all."

Hudson's life kept Hoover's men hopping

WASHINGTON — The FBI, fearful that Rock Hudson's apparent homosexual proclivities could harm the bureau's image if he portrayed a G-man in the movies, kept close watch on the actor throughout the 1960s and early 1970s, according to documents in the bureau's files.

Hudson, a Hollywood star for three decades, died last fall after publicly revealing his affliction with Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome. Following his death, there was open speculation of what Hollywood — and the FBI — had believed for years: that Hudson was homosexual.

We first reported 14 years ago that the FBI had secret dossiers on Hudson and other entertainment celebrities. According to the information just released to our reporter, Tony Capaccio under the Freedom of Information Act, the columns we wrote then set off a determined FBI search for our source.

"Efforts are continuing to identify Anderson's source for FBI material through analysis of Anderson's columns, to attempt to isolate a single document or item which might pinpoint Anderson's source," states an internal FBI memo dated May 22, 1972.

THE G-MAN APPARENTLY suspected that the leak came from some other agency. The memo says: "We are checking possibility of Anderson's source being at the White House or Secret Service, through extremely discreet contacts at the White House."

The FBI files make clear that the bureau's sole interest in Hudson was his sexual behavior — and the concern that he might play an FBI agent on the silver screen. As early as 1966, a memo reported on a Hollywood party that was raided by police because of alleged sexual "orgies" on the premises. "Files of guests' names were confiscated during the raid and as a result many prominent individuals have reportedly been revealed as apparently participants in these 'orgies,'" the memo states. The names included Rock Hudson.

In 1966, the FBI sent a memo to the White House that stated the actor had not been the subject of an FBI investigation. However, the memo did inform President Johnson that a confidential informant "reported that several years ago while he was in New York he had an 'affair' with movie star Rock Hudson."

The memo continued: "The informant stated that from personal knowledge he knew that Rock Hudson was a homosexual. The belief was expressed that by 'personal knowledge' the informant meant he had personally indulged in homosexual acts with Hudson or had witnessed or received the information from individuals who had done so."

THE FBI MEMO to the White House also disclosed that another informant had provided similar testimony in 1961, and that the bureau's Los Angeles field office had reported the standard rumors of that time regarding Hudson's sexual practices.

The FBI was particularly concerned about two 1960s movies, "Chicago 7" and "A Fine Pair." A historian at the American Film Institute told our associate Donald Goldberg that "Chicago 7," in which Hudson was to have played an FBI agent on a kidnapping case, was never released. A memo to FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover said the bureau's activities were treated "very favorably and accurately" in the film, but added: "However, our files indicate that Rock Hudson, a prominent leading man, has been alleged to be a homosexual and/or bisexual."

The FBI was alerted to the other movie by an item in Daily Variety of Hollywood on Sept. 5, 1967. It said Hudson was to play "an FBI agent who becomes involved with a jewel thief." The bureau tried desperately to get a copy of the script, but failed. As it turned out, Hudson's role was changed to that of a New York City policeman. But the FBI continued to keep its eye on Hudson.

Confidential file — Those who commit similar crimes, one after the other, have titillated and terrified the public since Jack the Ripper. They're a serious matter for law enforcement professionals. At a recent closed meeting of police and federal agents, it was estimated that as many as 40 percent of the nation's unsolved murders may have been the work of these traveling criminals. And one rapist was linked to more than 100 sexual assaults across the country. The conference will soon distribute a report on better methods of cooperation to track down these unregenerate criminals.

State police crack burglary ring

LITCHFIELD — A burglary ring linked to at least 15 thefts in Washington and New Milford as well as Dutchess County, New York, was cracked this week by state police who made three arrests, officials said Friday.

The State Police Western District Major Crimes Squad and troopers from Troop L in Litchfield said they made the arrests this week after investigating a burglary at an auto repair shop in Washington.

Paul Earl, 23, of Dutchess County, N.Y., was arrested early Thursday morning at New Milford Hospital where he was being treated for an injury he allegedly received while breaking into the auto repair shop, state police said.

Earl was charged with third-degree burglary and is being held at the Litchfield Correctional Center, state police said.

A second suspect, Jeff Hendrickson, 19, of the New Milford-Morris area was arrested at a cottage in Morris by troopers armed with a search warrant, state police said.

Panik demolition plan presented
BRIDGEPORT — Officials Friday announced a $69.5 million plan to demolish the blighted Father Panik Village housing project over the next 10 years and replace it with mixed-income, lower-density housing.

The decaying project's 1,100 families would be relocated in new housing built on the site of the project or in rehabilitated housing throughout the city, Mayor Thomas W. Bucci said.

The day's of dense concentration of public housing such as Father Panik Village are gone, Bucci said.

Key to the plan's success is nearly $50 million in federal funding.

Bucci and other city officials will go to Washington Monday to press the Department of Housing and Urban Development for support in the innovative plan.

Earlier this year, HUD officials angered the state's largest city by suggesting the project be bulldozed immediately and offering only $1 million for the work. Deputy Assistant HUD Secretary James E. Baugh later backed off that proposal.

Approval of the plan would also require rewriting federal regulations governing public housing which now do not allow mixed incomes and a percentage of privately owned units within a single project, Bucci said.

Education helps parent-doctors
NEW HAVEN — Mothers who sometimes think their children to be more ill than they really are can learn to make judgments similar to their doctors' if given proper instruction, Yale University doctors said Friday.

"When a mother is taught how to evaluate specific information about her child with fever, her assessment of the child's illness more closely resembles the pediatrician's," said Dr. Paul McCarthy, professor of pediatrics at Yale and an attending physician at Yale-New Haven Hospital.

"Mothers who are not taught how to think their children are quite a bit more ill than doctors think," said McCarthy, who presented his findings to the 1986 Joint Pediatrics Conference in Washington, D.C.

McCarthy studied 365 mothers, of which 189 were shown a 20-minute teaching film and also given a booklet with instructions on how to observe children with fever.

Physicians hope to improve parents' communication with pediatricians and alleviate the anxiety that often engulfs a mother when her child is sick, McCarthy said.

Klan sets rally in Windham
WINDHAM — The Ku Klux Klan has held a rally and national conference in Windham over the Labor Day weekend. In 1980, the white supremacy group held the state's first public Klan rally in 70 years in the adjacent town of Scotland.

In 1981, a public Klan gathering was held in Windham with few problems. The latest rally will be held in the area known as Plask's Pond on Route 203, the same location as the 1981 rally.

State police said they are aware of the planned rally and have been making plans to deal with it.

Doctors form their own HMO
NEW HAVEN — Connecticut doctors will form their own health maintenance organization in hopes of limiting costs and gaining more control over the care they provide.

The decision came in a unanimous vote at the annual meeting of the Connecticut State Medical Society, which ended Thursday in New Haven. Society officials said the HMO plan was adopted because physicians feel they have been "exploited" so others can make a profit.

The doctors hope to start their HMO in January, opening the plan to all doctors in the state who would continue to provide care in their offices. The society says its HMO expects to charge 10 percent to 20 percent less than the most expensive HMO in the state.

President retires at Quinnipiac
HAMDEN — Quinnipiac College President Richard Terry will retire at the end of August after eight years as the head of the private school in Hamden, officials say.

Terry's announcement Thursday follows months of controversy, and he is said to be taking consultant work as an industrial and organizational psychologist.

Terry was forced to institute cost-saving measures in the past year after a $1.5 million shortfall caused by a nearly 9 percent drop in student enrollment.

Faculty members seeking a new contract took a secret-ballot "no confidence vote" in Terry in February.

Accused gunman to be tested

BETHEL (UPI) — Psychiatric tests were ordered Friday for a motorist accused of cutting down a routing policeman with a 12-gauge pump action shotgun after being stopped for a motor vehicle violation.

Kenneth Ruggles, 46, of Danbury was held in lieu of $200,000 bond on two counts of attempted murder and one count of assaulting a police officer.

Superior Court Judge Edward F. Stodolnik ordered Ruggles to undergo a psychiatric test and continued the case to May 23.

Officer Michael Kaubert, 21, of Danbury, was wounded critically about 7:30 p.m. Thursday when he was struck by three shotgun blasts.

He was listed in critical but stable condition at Danbury Hospital undergoing an operation performed by two teams of doctors that lasted more than 10 hours.

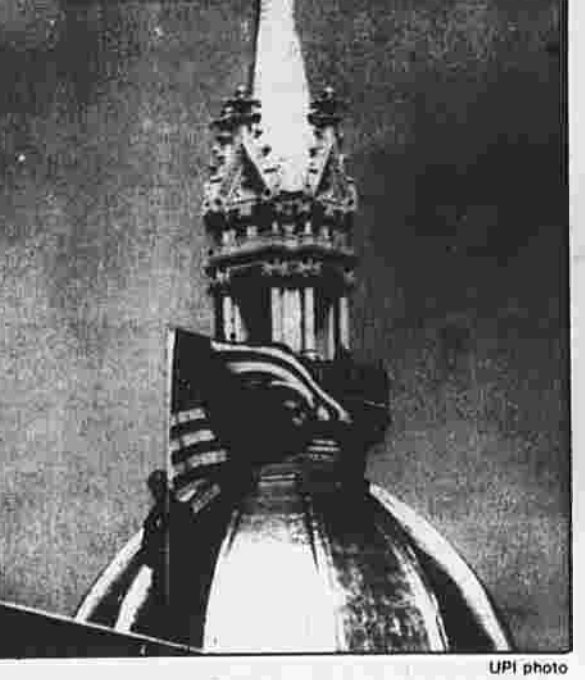

Police Chief John P. Basile said Ruggles emerged from his car wearing a shotgun after being flagged down by Daubert on Mansfield Street in a quiet residential section near the Danbury line.

Daubert also pulled his gun and told Ruggles to drop his weapon. Ruggles was shot three times in the chest, neck and face, with one shot entering "right below his eye," Basile said. Daubert, 47, fired two shots, both of which missed Ruggles, the chief said.

Ruggles was apprehended after he fired shots at a second police officer who responded to the scene.

"The individual had an army bag with quite a few rounds, a hunting knife and a handgun on the seat of his car," Basile said. "There was also a gas mask in the car."

"I don't know what he had in mind," Basile said. State police later obtained a search warrant and opened the car's trunk but found nothing unusual.

With the dome of the Connecticut Capitol in the background, workers attach the final steel beam to a new legislative office building in Hartford Friday. Capitol employees and lawmakers watched as the building was "topped off."

New building gets its top

HARTFORD (UPI) — With legislators proudly watching, the last structural steel beam for a new legislative office building was lifted into place during "topping off" ceremonies Friday.

Wearing hard hats, lawmakers and Capitol employees applauded as the 30-foot-off-white beam was hoisted into the air by a crane and set in place on top of the five-story structure.

The topping off ceremony, a tradition dating back hundreds of years to Scandinavia, marks the half-way point in completion of the $51 million office building going up near the Capitol.

"It is indeed an historic moment to realize the first stage of what was only a dream two years ago," said the Rev. Joseph A. Devine, chairman of the Capitol Preservation and Restoration Commission.

Lawmakers and Capitol employees were invited to sign their names on the final beam before it was lifted into place with a traditional Christmas tree and a state and American flag on top.

The Christmas tree was provided by Sen. John G. Matthews, R-New Canaan, co-chairman of the Legislature's Physical Facilities Subcommittee, which is overseeing construction of the building.

The $51 million building is scheduled to open next year. It will house offices and hearing rooms now cramped into the 107-year-old Capitol building and two temporary buildings on the Capitol lawn.

David B. Ogle, executive director of legislative management, said the project is within its $51 million budget, although $1 million more was allocated this year if the construction costs exceed the current budget.

The office building is being constructed in conjunction with a renovation of the Capitol, which will continue with work to restore the Hall of the House this summer.

Ogle said legislative leaders have tentatively agreed to hold a May 21 special session of the House in the temporary buildings so the restoration of the House chamber can proceed on schedule.

The work on the House will be done in two stages, beginning with the renovation of the House chamber that begins in January and then in the interim period following the 1987 session.

Election ruling unlikely before primaries

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — A top state elections official said Friday there was little chance of completing an investigation into charges filed by Democratic gubernatorial candidate Toby Moffett before the May 20 elections for delegates to the nominating convention.

Moffett is challenging Gov. William A. O'Neill for this year's Democratic gubernatorial nomination, has asked the commission to investigate the activities of a committee known as Democrats For Victory '86. Moffett claims the committee is a "phantom" committee operating and raising money on behalf of O'Neill, who has his own re-election committee.

State law limits candidates to one committee.

Moffett, a former congressman, said during a Capitol news conference Friday that the matter was a simple one and should be settled before May 20, close to 200 delegates to the July nominating convention will be at stake.

But Jeffrey B. Garfield, executive director of the Elections Enforcement Committee, said Friday he doubted Moffett's complaint would come up at the commission's meeting on Wednesday.

"The investigation is on-going and involves some very significant issues," Garfield said. "I don't see the matter will come up (Wednesday) because the investigation has not been completed. The commission will proceed as expeditiously as possible."

Moffett's campaign attorney, Steven G. Mednick, who once held Garfield's job, said he could not be certain that laws had been broken by Democrats For Victory '86, which was created last year by three of O'Neill's closest allies. "Whether or not there is criminal culpability, I'm going to leave to the elections commission," he said. "What we're suggesting that they have to probe, they have to look at the accounts and records, look at the purpose of the expenditures, they have to talk to principals involved in the organization, if people have lied — about the way the money was solicited."

Moffett noted a report this week that the committee had paid for a charter helicopter for O'Neill to travel from a New York City fundraiser back to Connecticut.

George W. Hannon Jr., head of the committee, said this week the committee's "mission" was to "provide intelligence" and other voter data for all Democratic candidates, not just O'Neill. He said Moffett had not asked for any help.

In a complaint filed with Garfield's commission, Moffett claims Hannon's committee improperly functioned on O'Neill's behalf and, in several instances, accepted contributions above the legal limit.

Moffett wants the commission to subpoena the guest list to the New York City fundraiser as well as copies of the invitations in order to determine "the intent of the organizers" (and) the understanding of the contributors.

Grand jury measure becomes law

HARTFORD (UPI) — Gov. William A. O'Neill has signed legislation allowing prosecutors to resume grand jury investigations into allegations of corruption in three communities, the governor's office said Friday.

The bill approved earlier this week by the Legislature reverses a judge's ruling that had put on hold the grand jury probes in Enfield, Naugatuck and Torrington as well as a statewide Medicaid fraud investigation.

The bill took effect when signed late Thursday afternoon by O'Neill, although the governor's office in following its usual practice did not announce the signing until Friday.

Prosecutors suspended the four investigations after a judge ruled the Torrington investigation was covered by a law passed last year that placed time limits on one-man grand jury investigations.

The four investigations, which were under way when last year's law took effect, have exceeded the time limits allowed under the law.

The bill signed Thursday by O'Neill makes it clear that the investigations are not covered by the 1985 law because they had begun before the law took effect and are legally continuing.

No certificates for book entry bonds

Investors' Guide William A. Doyle

QUESTION: Last fall, I purchased a "book entry" municipal bond from a brokerage firm. As I understand this arrangement, the brokerage firm has the bond in its name and collects the semiannual interest. The brokerage then sends me its check for the interest. I am unhappy with this mechanism for several reasons. Is there any way I can have the bond registered in my name and a certificate delivered to me?

ANSWER: You can't obtain a certificate, if that particular bond issue comes only in book entry form. Book entry means that records of ownership are kept on a computer and individual certificates are not issued. Assuming that's the case, the entire bond issue is being held for safekeeping most likely in a vault at Depository Trust Company in New York City. Your brokerage firm's account records your bond and bonds that firm has in "street name" for other investors.

Business In Brief

Market closes with small gain

NEW YORK - Some late buying enabled the stock market to close out a drifting session with a small gain Friday. Trading was moderate. Early in the session, stock prices fell as rising interest rates in the credit markets pushed prices of long-term government bonds down as much as $10 for every $1,000 in face value. But the bond market steadied at that level, and stocks rebounded in the last hour of trading. Analysts said investors were proceeding cautiously as they studied the prospective impact on the economy and the markets of the new tax-revision plan approved this week by the Senate Finance Committee. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial rose 3.22 to 1,789.43, finishing the week with a net gain of 14.75 points. Advancing issues outpaced declines by about 7 to 6 on the New York Stock Exchange. Big Bond volume totaled 137.40 million shares, against 136.03 million in the previous session. The NYSE's composite index gained 37 to 137.12. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .44 at 272.97.

InterRoyal closes Plainfield plant

PLAINFIELD - The InterRoyal Corp., which had filed for protection under federal bankruptcy laws in 1982, has shut down its local plant, according to a company official. Chairman of the Board Alexander Dadorian said Thursday that the creditors' committee gave the company permission to close the Plainfield plant. The corporation's other facility in Warren, Pa., will stay open. Before the company sought help from the state, concessions were asked of the union. In February, workers were asked to take a temporary 10 percent pay cut until October of this year. The union denied that request as well as another which called for eliminating incentive pay. The InterRoyal Corp. manufactures institutional furniture for college dormitories, nursing homes and hospitals. According to a town official the plant employed 230 people.

Open wallet for Boston housing

WASHINGTON - If you are searching for that homey little bungalow with a white picket fence in the Boston area, be forewarned: You are going to have to open that wallet wide, wide, wide. The median price of an existing single-family house in the Boston metropolitan area was $149,000 in the first three months of 1986, the highest in the nation, the National Association of Realtors said Friday. In its latest quarterly survey of 43 cities, the association found that Boston housing prices were almost twice as high as the national median of $78,200. And while prices nationwide increased 5.8 percent from a year ago, prices in the Boston area zoomed upwards by 38 percent. Liz Johnson, a spokesperson for the association, said most Northeast cities experienced sharply increasing prices over the last year for two reasons. One, the financial services and high technology industries, both centered in the Northeast, had good years, boosting the demand for housing. Secondly, Northeast cities simply have less room to expand, putting existing houses at a premium.

Winter wheat crop down 12 percent

WASHINGTON - The Agriculture Department said Friday 1986 winter wheat production is estimated at 1.6 billion bushels, down 12 percent from last year's harvest of 1.83 billion bushels. Officials said the average yield, based on indications as of May 1, was estimated at 37.4 bushels per acre, compared with last year's 38.1 bushels per acre. Farmers are expected to have about 42.8 million acres for harvest this year, down from almost 48 million in 1985. Winter wheat is planted in the fall and harvested the following summer. It makes up about three-fourths of total U.S. wheat production. No 1986 production estimates for spring wheat, corn and other spring-planted crops were included. Those will be issued by USDA later in the growing season.

Another chain halts magazine sales

CLEVELAND - Revco D.S. Inc., the nation's largest drugstore chain, has stopped selling adult magazines, a decision the company says was based on economics, not pressure. Within the last few weeks, Revco has ordered managers of its 2,010 stores in 29 states to stop selling magazines like Playboy, Forum and Penthouse, said Lee Goldman, a spokesman for the company, based in suburban Twinsburg. The action was taken because of poor sales and not because of pressure from outside interests, she said Thursday. Drugstores and convenience stores have come under pressure from groups opposed to sales of adult magazines.

Sales and earnings rise at Zayre

FRAMINGHAM, Mass. - Zayre Corp., a major retailer, Friday reported increased sales and earnings for the first quarter of 1986. Net income for the 13-week period ending April 26, 1986 was $16,696,000 - up from $15,192,000 last year; the company reported. Sales rose 32.2 percent to $1,944,534,000. Net income for the full 52-week period preceding April 26 totaled $96,151,000. "While sales were significantly higher than last year, the increases stemmed primarily from additional stores and our new operations," said Maurice Segall, president and chief executive officer.

Council sees steady economic growth

HOT SPRINGS, W. Va. (UPI) - The nation's economy will expand steadily at least through 1987, with inflation and a slight dip in unemployment, a report by industry leaders predicted Friday. The report, echoing administration forecasts for sustained economic growth of more than 3 percent a year, marked the end of a constant flow of letters from the Council, which meets three times a year to advise government officials on public policy and economic issues. The report, authored by chief economists representing major financial firms, forecasts a 3.6 percent expansion in the nation's gross national product between the final quarters of 1985 and 1986 and 3.2 percent GNP growth in 1987. "The major component of growth will be housing, net exports, increased inventory investment and a reasonably strong or sustained consumer spending," said James D. Robinson, chairman of American Express Corp. and one of the authors. But it also said government and industry statistics do not yet reflect the forecasts. "Very little of the economic strength they have been expecting has yet been confirmed by the empirical numbers that are coming out," said Robinson. The forecast is based on the assumption that residential construction, boosted by a surge in demand and a drop in mortgage interest rates, will remain among the strongest sectors of the economy. The report predicted housing starts will total about 1.92 million in 1986, up from 1.74 million last year, and forecast 1.82 million starts in 1987. It also said an improved trade picture will aid the expanding economy, with a softer dollar reining in the shortfall between imports and exports to an annual rate of about $107 billion in the fourth quarter of 1986 and $85 billion by the end of 1987. Business in general will show greatly improved after-tax profits this year, largely due to cost controls, including personnel layoffs and cutbacks in production, the report said. Unemployment, which averaged 7.2 percent last year, will slip to 7 percent this year and 6.8 percent in 1987, the economists predicted. Lower interest rates will provide businesses with the means to rebuild stock inventories and a surge in consumer spending associated with plunging oil prices will also help economic growth. The report noted, however, "a sense of uneasiness" because several key areas of the economy remain depressed, while others have not responded to positive changes like cheaper oil, lower interest rates and a more competitive dollar.

Firm's assets frozen; bankruptcy expected

BRIDGEPORT (AP) - A Superior Court judge has frozen much of Raymark Corp.'s assets in granting a temporary restraining order to a law firm that claims it has strong information that the company is about to file for protection under federal bankruptcy laws. Raymark's vice president and general counsel, Harry D. Day, said the "trumbull-based administrative and machinery process maker is 'definitely not' planning a bankruptcy filing. He said the company 'will move forward with the order lifted as quickly as possible.' Separately, Raymark announced that cost-cutting moves begun in the latter part of 1985 resulted in the company's best quarterly performance in seven years, as it earned $11 million in the first quarter of 1986. James Early, whose New Haven law firm represented about 250 plaintiffs with asbestos-related claims against Raymark, said that his firm had been "privy" to all of the company's moves. He said that the company is planning such a filing. Early said his firm sought to have $10 million in Raymark assets frozen because "if you think a company is about to go belly up you want to protect your clients' claims." Early said $10 million for his firm's claims - among 24,000 nationwide that have been filed against Raymark alleging health problems because of asbestos exposure - would be "better than nothing." In March, Raymark's board temporarily authorized the company to file for protection from its creditors under Chapter 11 of the bankruptcy code in the event it received an unfavorable jury verdict in a Texas asbestos case. That authorization lapsed when the case was settled out of court. Nevertheless, Day has acknowledged that a huge jury award could wipe out Raymark's insurance coverage and force a Chapter 11 filing. Raymark has been negotiating with insurers to boost its coverage. The company no longer uses asbestos, a carcinogen. In a ruling made Thursday but delivered to Raymark on Friday, Superior Court Judge Burton J. Jacobson issued a temporary restraining order that prevented Raymark from selling any of its real and personal property, including factory contracts and a baseball field used by a women's amateur softball team once sponsored by the company. Raymark currently has a contract to sell the property on which the field is located to a Stratford developer for about $17 million. The judge refused, however, to grant the attorneys' request to freeze the assets in Raymark's

Americares airlift helps Poland

By Henry G. Loegeon

NEW YORK — Workers loaded a cargo plane Friday with a "mercy lift" of more than $1 million in powdered milk, vitamins and iodide blessed by the pope for the people of Poland threatened with contamination from the Chernobyl nuclear disaster.

The mission was organized by AmeriCare Foundation of New Canaan, Conn., whose honorary chairman is Zbigniew Brzezinski, national security adviser to President Jimmy Carter.

"These fires have been estimated 12 tons, was valued at between $1 million and $2 million, said AmeriCare spokeswoman Mary Taven.

The Flying Tigers Boeing 747 carrying the relief supplies was scheduled to leave Kennedy International Airport Friday evening and arrive in Warsaw Saturday morning.

The flight was delayed by an hour because of the huge amount of milk and pills that had to be loaded on the plane.

A cable from the Vatican to AmeriCare said, "This mercy lift has received the enthusiastic blessings of his holiness, Pope John Paul II, and his eminence John Cardinal Krol on behalf of the Polish people."

In a personal statement, the pope said that it was the largest humanitarian endeavor on the part of the United States of America.

Taven said it was the largest relief shipment sent to Eastern Europe since an explosion at the Soviet Union's Chernobyl plant first spewed cancer-causing radiation into the air April 26.

The cargo included 100,000 pounds of protein-enriched dried milk, which amounts to 1.4 million pounds when mixed with water; 100,000 pounds of sterilized high-protein enriched milk, which requires no water or refrigeration; 1.3 million multi-vitamin tablets; and 9,000 pounds of potassium iodide, which equals 600,000 doses.

"Flying Tigers" workers aided by forklifts labored for hours in the sun to load loads of relief supplies onto the cavernous plane.

"This is a humanitarian outpouring from the people of America," said Robert Macaulay, president of AmeriCare. "Milk, milk, milk. That is what they are really asking for."

because they fear their cows were contaminated by the radioactive cloud that spread across their nation from the nuclear blast.

Potassium iodide helps prevent the absorption of radiation by the thyroid gland. Thyroid cancer is one of the most common forms of cancer caused by radiation exposure.

"Warsaw has made no secret of the plight of the Polish people," Brzezinski said in a statement. "They need iodide right now and they will need milk and nutritional help for some time to come."

Macaulay said the supplies will be delivered "to areas of Poland where radioactivity is the greatest.

Policy no help to U.S. farmers, new report says

By Steve Gerstel
United Press International

WASHINGTON — U.S. policy in the debt crisis faced by many Latin American countries boosted profits for some big American banks but seriously damaged the domestic farm economy, a congressional report said Friday.

And, the report concluded, policies implemented by the Reagan administration "have done little to permanently resolve the debt crisis."

The study was conducted by the Joint Economic Committee staff and "clearly shows that since 1982 the administration has pursued policies that, in effect, rewarded the big American banks whose unwise lending policies helped precipitate the crisis, while penalizing American farmers and other American exporters," said committee Chairman David Obey, D-Wis.

In 1982, when it became clear that about a dozen Latin American countries had borrowed more than their economies could repay on time, U.S. commercial banks held $83.9 billion — 25 percent — of those loans.

A year later, the administration won compliance in devising a plan to ensure payments: loan extensions, increased exports and reduced imports, new loans used to pay interest on old loans, and essential economic reforms.

"Thus far a financial catastrophe has been averted, which was the initial goal of the policy-makers," the report said, giving the administration high marks for maintaining international fiscal stability.

"The evidence suggests, in fact, that the policies which were implemented have permitted U.S. banks to maintain and even increase their profitability," the report noted.

But at the same time, those policies have seriously and unnecessarily injured the economic well-being of other sectors of the U.S. economy — agriculture and manufacturing in particular," it said.

The report explained that farmers have been hurt by a dramatic decline in exports to Latin American countries, which tumbled from $6.9 billion in 1981 to $4.4 billion last year.

In addition, farmers have been

Senators hit House plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Republicans attacked the House Budget Committee's spending plan Friday, saying the Democratic-led panel's decision to cut Pentagon funds was "irresponsible" and "ridiculous."

Voting along party lines, the House committee approved a $994 billion budget Thursday that allocated $283 billion for the military in fiscal 1987 — $2 billion less than in the current fiscal year. The House committee also snapped an eight-year record by cutting $1.1 billion less than the Senate granted in its budget, and $35 billion less than President Reagan requested.

Senate Budget Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., said $300 billion for the Pentagon was "about as low as we could get," and predicted compromise with the House would be very difficult if the full House backs the committee.

COVENTRY — Give the Patriots a pat. The host Coventry High Patriots tightened the Charter Oak Conference baseball race Friday, with a 6-2 win over first-place Cheney Tech.

The loss was Cheney's first in the COC this year, after 10 straight victories. It also snapped an eight-game winning streak and was the initial defeat for Beaver ace pitcher Rick Gonzalez, who saw his own sprawling leg slip to the ground.

Coventry, which has played three less conference contests than its Friday foe, is now 7-1 in the COC.

"Today was his day," said Cheney coach Bill Baccaro, of second-place Coventry. "They got gone more than five innings all year, so I wanted to get him out of there at the first sign of trouble. Andriani had started on Tuesday (against Final Tech) and got knocked out in the second, so we knew he had a lot left."

Though the Pats produced four ball outs in four stanzas and had a no-bitter going before tying in the fifth when Cheney plated both its markers.

Andriani, the starting first baseman, took the mound with the bases loaded and two outs and promptly walked in the tying run. The sophomore lefty recovered to retire seven of the final eight men he faced to notch the victory.

"Kevin started against Cheney last time (April 15), and when he looked tired, I didn't take him out," noted Coventry coach Chris Risley. "He hasn't reactor's graphite, a form of carbon used to moderate the plant's nuclear reaction, was smothered with sand dropped from helicopters. Graphite burns at a searing temperature too high to be extinguished with water.

Expert says meltdown possible

"These fires have been extinguished but temperatures remain high," the American expert told a Moscow news conference. "The explosion caused fires in the building housing the reactor."

Rosen said he could not rule out the possibility the plant's No. 4 reactor experienced a meltdown — when the uranium oxide fuel reaches the 5,000-degree Fahrenheit melting point.

"Could there be a meltdown? As a matter of physics it is not completely excluded, it can never be completely excluded," he said. "The reactor core was extensively damaged."

Rosen said that if there was a meltdown, there was little chance the molten material would sink through the base of the plant and contaminate the area's ground water and soil.

Rosen, quoting Soviet officials, said the Chernobyl accident had killed two people, and 294 others suffered

Book angers lawyers

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — The Rhode Island Bar Association plans to file a judicial misconduct complaint against lawyer-author Alan Derahowitz for portraying the state court system as "corrupt" in his upcoming book on the Claus von Bulow case.

In a tersely worded two-paragraph release Friday, the bar association said allegations contained in the book have "cast an unwarranted cloud upon" the court system, its judges and lawyers.

Derahowitz, a Harvard law professor, joined the von Bulow defense team after the Danish socialite was convicted in 1982 of attempted murder of his wife, Martha "Shirley" von Bulow. He later engineered von Bulow's successful appeal before the Rhode Island Supreme Court.

Expos 8, Dodgers 4

At Montreal, Hubie Brooks' two-run double highlighted a four-run Montreal eighth inning Friday that gave the Expos their sixth straight victory, an 8-4 decision over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

With the score tied 4-4, Tim Lincecum singled off Fernando Valenzuela, 4-2, to lead off the eighth and Mitch Webster sacrificed. Valenzuela attempted a pickoff of Raines at second and threw into center field to move Raines to third. Andre Dawson was walked intentionally before Brooks, who earlier tripled and homered, doubled down the left-field line to score both runners.

Astros 3, Pirates 2

At Pittsburgh, Tony Walker scored from third on Jim Winn's wild pitch with one out in the top of the ninth Friday night to give Houston a 3-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates and snap the Astros' four-game losing streak.

Glenn Davis started the ninth with an infield single and Walker came in to pinch run. Walker took the 10th to earn his second save.

Padres 6, Cubs 2

At Chicago, Kevin McReynolds cracked a three-run home run in the seventh inning Friday to support Andy Hawkins' five-hit pitching and carry the San Diego Padres to a 6-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

McReynolds' game-winning shot came off starter Rick Sutcliffe, 1-5, who also gave up solo home runs to Terry Kennedy and Tim Flannery.

Giants 2, Cardinals 1

At St. Louis, Joel Youngblood's pinch-hit single in the 10th inning Friday night scored Rob Thompson to lift the San Francisco Giants to a 2-1 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Mike LaCoss worked nine innings allowing seven hits and one walk while striking out two to improve to 3-0. Mark Davis pitched the 10th to earn his second save.

AL roundup

Indians' streak halted

CLEVELAND — Tim Lulett's pinch-hit, two-run single with two out in the top of the ninth inning capped a three-run rally to help the Chicago White Sox to a 4-3 victory over Cleveland, snapping the Indians' 10-game winning streak.

Lulett's hit helped the White Sox snap a six-game losing streak and made a winner of Gene Linder, who pitched the final 1 2/3 innings. The loss went to Scott Bailes, 4-2, the second of three Cleveland pitchers in the ninth inning.

Yankees postponed

At Arlington, Texas, Friday night's game between the New York Yankees and the Texas Rangers was postponed because of rain.

The game will be made up as part of a double-header Sunday at 3:05 EDT.

Royals 7, Orioles 4

At Baltimore, Darryl Motley hit two of five Kansas City home runs Friday night to power the Royals to a 7-4 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

Wilson Jim Sundberg and George Brett added home runs while Bud Black, 2-3, pitched 5 2/3 scoreless innings of relief. Steve Farr took over for Black in the seventh and picked up his second save.

Cleveland fell three victories short of tying the club mark of 13 straight victories set by the 1942 and 1951 Indians.

Sport of running can cause humbling experience

It's been 17 years since my introduction to running as a sport on the Manchester High School track during my sophomore year. Despite the many years of involvement in running, the many exposures to experienced coaches, and hours of conversations with and observations of fellow runners of all abilities, I have to admit the sport has humbled me once again by what I don't understand about human athletic performance, especially my own. I'd like to briefly share recent training/racing experiences in hopes they might cause someone to prepare for a race in the next couple of months.

Since Thanksgiving Day, 1965, I decided to invest more time and commitment to running than in the previous few years. As December, January and February drifted by, I consistently covered mileage in quantities my body hadn't experienced in years. Nothing too flashy mind you, but good solid training miles.

I decided early in March to enter an indoor track meet and try racing 5,000 meters (3.1 miles). After all, I was rather proud of the training miles covered during the past three months. There were several runners considered among the best in the state. I had to race and I figured it was about time they realized I was going to have to be reckoned with in the near future.

The race didn't unfold quite the way I had planned. After running with the leaders for the first mile, I fell apart. It felt like I had come to a dead stop. My pace

On the Run

slowly despite my efforts to maintain my position with the leaders. Discouraged, I dropped out of the race at 1 1/2 miles. I was at a loss to explain my performance (or lack of). Hadn't I just been through three solid months of training?

In reviewing the performance later that same day, I decided I was just going to have to work harder. More miles and harder miles throughout March. The Charter Oak 10K was scheduled for April and I selected this race to once again prove that I intended to return to high level racing. Unfortunately the results were similar to the race in March except this time I finished. On a day when many runners were achieving lifetime bests for 10K on the flat, fast West Hartford course, I managed to run the slowest 10K of my life. You want to talk about discouraging? I had it bad.

I began to gaze longingly toward my golf clubs. By April I decided to cut back on the quantity of miles. I continued to schedule hard workouts a couple of days each week. The difference was that on the other five days I ran fewer and slower miles than the previous four weeks. For two weeks my mileage totals dropped 25 percent from the average weekly totals of the December to April time period. Sure enough, my golf game improved. During the hard workouts I was beginning to feel stronger and faster.

I reluctantly entered the Bolton Race. The rest, as they say, is history. It was the first encouraging race in a long time. Maybe there was life in this old body yet. Winning the Bolton Race isn't going to put me on the cover of Sports Illustrated. It's a start though. I hadn't run all these miles last winter so I could improve on my lifetime worst performances this spring.

The challenge now is to figure out what the body is trying to tell me. Possibilities include:

- 1. You still have the ability to run well, but you have to learn about how to take advantage of this ability. The body you're training now is not the body you trained 10 years ago. It is capable of accomplishing your objectives, but you're going to have to show more respect for your 32 years. (Read this: 32 is not the end of the world.)
- 2. You can't expect to train at a high level and race at a high level at the same time. You're going to have to plan your training seasons and racing seasons with this fact in mind. During the training period I'm just not going to be as peppy as you'd like me to be, but don't let it discourage you. If you insist on racing while running more miles, do so both a favor and lower your expectations.

3. I'm going to need more recovery days. I know that one of the more popular training philosophies a coach can use is a hard-easy-hard-easy cycle. The meaning of that each hard day of training should be followed by an easy day of running. But remember, this philosophy was applied by college coaches on college age athletes (18 to 22 year old bodies). This philosophy will no longer work effectively on your body (see number 1 above). Our own philosophy may have to be hard-easy-easy-hard.

4. Analyzing your running is going to drive you nuts. The golf clubs are in the back of the car and the driving range is just down the road. Why don't you go trying that duck hook of yours, golf balls are expensive and you lose them at record rates.

5. Appreciate all of you hearing with me while I relieved some frustration. I dislike thinking I know what I'm doing and consistently proving the opposite. I'm planning to race five more times between now and the end of June. At least now if you happen to see the results of any of my performances, you'll be able to smile, shake your head, and know that Gates really doesn't know what he's doing.

East wins a wild affair; Manchester breezes

HARTFORD — East Catholic High coach Jim Penders called it the wildest game he has ever seen with — as a player or a coach.

The visiting Eagles beat the South Catholic Rebels, 15-14, in four hours and eight innings of All Connecticut Conference baseball Friday at Highland Park.

"We won because we went for the two-point conversion," joked Penders, who also called it the longest contest he's ever been involved in.

"Every inning was an adventure, both teams had runners on base in every inning, there was not one 1-2-3 inning."

East, which employed its entire pitching staff, has to play again today against host Stratford High at Penders Field at 1:30 p.m.

"A great performance by Stanford," said Penders, of the reliever who notched his first victory, victimizing Stratford.

Stanford pitched out of a bases-loaded, one-out jam in the bottom of the eighth to preserve the triumph. He took the mound to start the frame, but gave up two singles before switching positions with freshman center fielder Mark Mangiatico.

Mangiatico induced a fielder's choice ground-out but the potential tying winning runs advanced to second and third. With first base open, Mangiatico issued an intentional walk, but then he went to 0-0 on the next batter before Penders called Stanford back in.

Stanford managed to lure the batter into grounding to third, and hot cornerman Kevin Madden fired home for the force out No. 2. Winning pitcher Stanford whiffed Al Torres to end it.

Another big Eagles win was Madden, who stroked a bases-loaded triple and added a double and single.

Mangiatico induced a fielder's choice ground-out but the potential tying winning runs advanced to second and third. With first base open, Mangiatico issued an intentional walk, but then he went to 0-0 on the next batter before Penders called Stanford back in.

Seattle names Williams boss

SEATTLE (UPI) — Dick Williams, who has managed pennant winners in both leagues, Friday was named manager of the Seattle Mariners, one day after the team fired Chuck Cottier.

The announcement came amid speculation that the Mariners would replace Cottier with either Williams, former New York Yankees manager Billy Martin or Chicago White Sox manager Tony LaRussa.

"Needless to say, it's nice to have a job at any time," Williams said. "I'm here for one purpose — to help to produce a contender and a winner. I think this ballclub has great potential. We'll try to work very hard to make the city of Seattle proud of the Mariners."

"This is the first day of a new beginning for the Seattle Mariners."

Cottier, 50, was released after a poor start by the Mariners that included losses in 16 of his 20 games prior to Friday. Cottier guided the Mariners to a 15-12 record after taking over for Del Crandall in 1984, and went 74-88 last year.

Williams has managed the Boston Red Sox, Oakland A's and San Diego Padres and directed each of those jobs to a World Series. He quit his team with the Padres at the beginning of spring training.

Williams will be the sixth manager in the club's 10-year history. The others were Rene Lachemann, Maury Wills, Darrell Johnson, Crandall and Cottier.

Williams has amassed 1,412 victories in 18 seasons as a manager, the same number of years he played as an infielder-outfielder with five teams. He said he would hire friend Ozzie Virgil, as third-base coach to replace Marty Matulis, who was acting manager for Thursday night's game against Boston.

Williams, 57, will receive an estimated $200,000 per year for two years beyond this one, including incentives for victories and attendance.

He is considered an "old-school type" of manager who prides himself on pounding the basics into his players. It will be a contrast to Cottier, who was considered one of the nicest managers in the league.

Williams promised to work hard to bring out what he called the "great potential" of the Mariners. "I'm demanding, I'm not hired to be a nice guy," he said. "There's no reason you have to make excuses for a ballplayer. I'll also be very much in charge of the ballplayer. There's certain things we'll expect a player to do, and when that is done, we'll compliment him on a job well done."

Williams reiterated that he was pleased with the contract he signed with his new club.

"Seattle kept after me and presented something I liked very much," Williams told The Los Angeles Times Thursday night. "By that, I mean I like my contract and the thoughts they presented. I didn't want a five-year contract. I've signed for the rest of this year and two more years, plus an option year at their option. It's a good contract. The best I've ever had."

All day Thursday, the Mariners would not acknowledge that Williams would be the team's next manager.

During a meeting Thursday between team president Chuck Armstrong and Williams, outfielder Phil Bradley asked, "Who is our new manager?"

Armstrong hedged, saying the decision was not final, but said Cottier had been told who his

Underclassmen sweeten NBA lottery

By Jim Luttrell
United Press International

NEW YORK — The choice was big money or finishing college. Big money won.

So five talented underclassmen have applied for early entry into the NBA and added some needed excitement to Sunday's draft lottery.

Syracuse University's Dwayne 'Pearl' Washington is one of a number of underclassmen who will sweeten the NBA lottery. The announcement of the order of draft for the bottom seven teams will be made Sunday.

The heralded players are Chris Washburn of North Carolina State, John Williams of Louisiana State, Dwayne "Pearl" Washington of Syracuse, Memphis State's William Bedford and Walter Berry of St. John's.

In addition, there are Cedric Henderson, who has a reputation in the Italian professional league after flunking of Georgia after his freshman year, and Michael Graham, a forward on the Georgetown championship team of 1984.

"The heading on the lottery sheet says 'Young and Restless,'" said Tom Newell the Indiana Pacers' Director of Player Personnel. "All of a sudden, the lottery becomes an exciting extravaganza."

Marty Blake, the NBA's chief scout, says the underclassmen will be selected high but the seniors will still make their mark in the draft.

"Three or four guys that will come out will be high but the real effect will not be to push some kids out of the top seven," Blake said. "This is the deepest draft in years for guards and small forwards. What that has created is first-round players that will go in the second round not because of the big graduates but because of depth."

Still, the youth movement has some shining stars. "The most promising may be the youngest of the crew."

(John Williams) is a young kid, a baby, an infant," says Philadelphia 76er's general manager Pat Williams. "He's so young he signs his autograph with a crayon and he's a talent. He's got major-league tools. Kind of a George McGinnis-type player."

Others say the 6-foot-7 Williams similar compliments.

"He is probably the most talented of all the players coming out. He handles the ball in both hands, gets his own rebounds. He has limited range — 15 feet and in, but he has the presence of mind to make big plays."

Says Phoenix Suns assistant coach John Wetzel, "Offensively (Williams) reminds me of Elgin Baylor. He drives the middle and hangs. His strongest attribute is he can handle the ball so well for a big man."

Washburn, 6-11, can play either power forward or center in the NBA and also has a lot of raw potential.

"He certainly has incredible physical attributes. Wetzel said, 'I like his ability to shoot the ball from the baseline, he has a nice 8-to-10-foot jumper. He has tremendous strength and probably that makes it seem he can endure and play an NBA schedule.'"

Washington, 6-2, joined Scott Skiles of Michigan State as the only true point guards in the draft.

"He's a type of guard an NBA team would like to have. He can't shoot, but he can run the ball and pass. He's one of the better ball-handlers to enter the NBA since 'Petra' and he was one of the best of all time."

Bedford, 7-foot, joins a group of senior centers that are certain to be transformed to power forwards or relegated to reserve status.

"My impression is, of all the players that come out, he is a true center," Wetzel said. "He has a big body, is active around the basket and his main attribute is he is a smart player. He's the type of player someone defensively and needs an intimidator, he must be considered."

Berry, UPI's College Player of the Year, is a guard who has been in the NBA but it's difficult to do that in this league without the other skills."

not really motivating for me because he did not prove to be a challenge. He didn't get me up, as far as getting my adrenaline flowing. I trained, quite naturally, for the fight, but I was not prepared mentally or psychologically for Kevin. He's no reason here. It was like a preliminary fight."

Leonard bristles when asked if his eye is fully healed.

"No, I'm half blind," he snapped. "I wouldn't do it if there was something wrong with my eyes. I've had extensive examinations and the scrutiny that goes with what has happened to me."

Despite the fighter's optimism about the eye, ophthalmologists fear that a return to the ring could result in recurrence of the detached retina that could lead to partial blindness.

"The risk is there," warned Dr. Wayne Fung, a retina specialist with the Pacific Presbyterian Medical Center in San Francisco. "We can't always cure a detachment. And sometimes a person suffers permanent visual loss from this."

Sugar Ray says he can beat Hagler

By Will Dunham
United Press International

PALMER PARK, Md. — Just up the street from Ray Leonard Road, Sugar Ray Leonard is back in training, sparring both against fellow welterweights and a gathering line of detractors who hoped his 1984 retirement would be final.

Leonard recently surprised the boxing world with his announcement that he would come out of retirement for a fight against world middleweight champion Marvin Hagler — if the "Marvelous" one would sign his name on a contract.

But Leonard generally regarded as one of the finest welterweights in history, has fought just once since February 1982.

He retired as the undisputed world welterweight and junior middleweight champion. November 1982 after undergoing surgery for a detached retina in his left eye. Sugar Ray returned to the ring in May 1984 against lightly-regarded Kevin Howard, but retired for what he announced was the final time moments after he recorded an unimpressive nine-round technical knockout.

Leonard, who turns 30 on May 17, has been a color commentator for televised bouts since bowing out with a 35-1 record, marred only by a June 1980 loss to Roberto Duran that was avenged six months later. Leonard has also been acting to don the trunks against Hagler, the only man of his era who may eclipse Leonard's status in boxing history.

"I know I can beat Hagler, my way," Leonard said recently after a one-hour sparring session at the

"I'm not going to fight Hagler his style, if you understand what I'm saying, I will basically beat him tactically. He's a big guy and I think I can out-box him, out-manuever him and beat him scientifically."

Leonard insists this is no full-scale comeback.

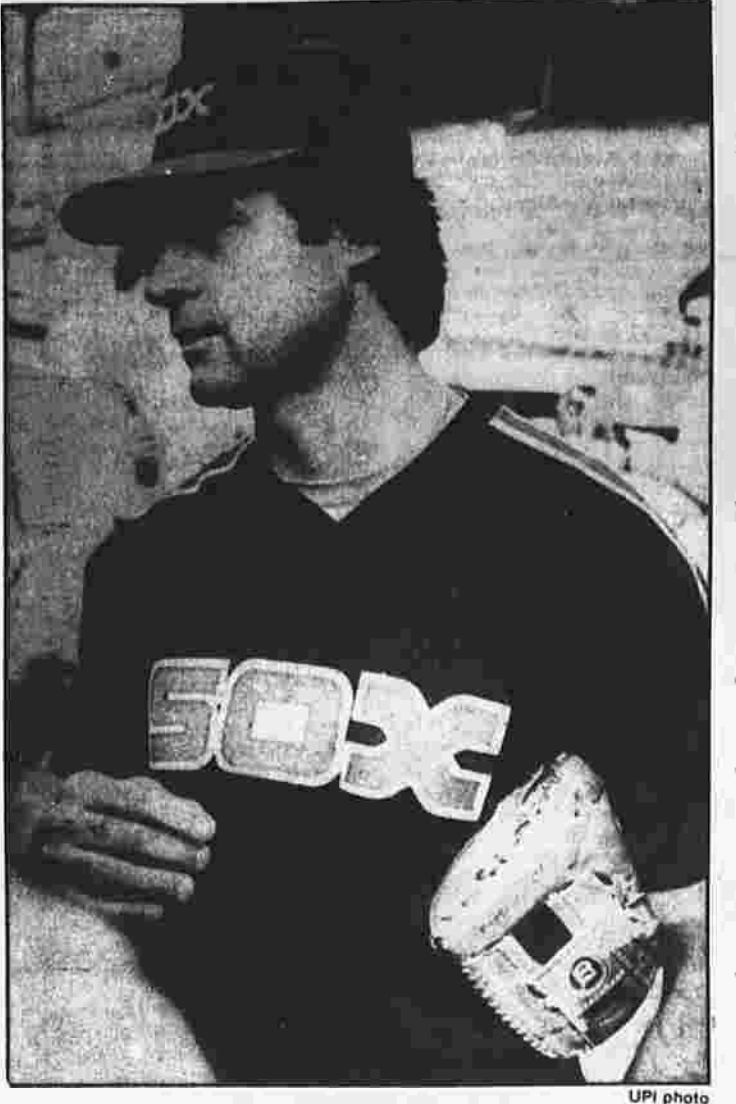

"All I need to fight is Marvin Hagler. My definition of a comeback is a series of fights. I don't need that. I need one particular world middleweight champion Marvin Hagler. That's all I want," Leonard said.

"My mind has never changed. I've always thought about Hagler, never dithered from the performance I had against Kevin Howard," he added. "I should be a surprise to you guys. I think the fact is Hagler wants to fight me and I want to fight Hagler. If he calls, I'll fight him."

Leonard and his adviser, Mike Trainer, said they have not yet heard from Hagler, who was vacationing in the Caribbean when Leonard made his unexpected challenge on May 1. Boxing sources estimate both Hagler and Leonard could earn about $10 million for the fight, which Leonard said has more market value than a Halger-Thomas Hearns rematch.

Some observers are questioning whether Leonard is just another ex-champion whose ego has obscured the fact that it's time to hang up the gloves, while others are saying that Sugar Ray has been obsessed with fighting Hagler since his first retirement.

"Ray is not going to do anything that will make a fool out of himself and he doesn't think he's going to do that here," Trainer said.

Tony LaRussa, who was named American League manager of the year in 1983, will stay on with the Chicago White Sox, it was announced in a news conference Friday.

LaRussa to stay, get his own way

By Kent McDiill
United Press International

CHICAGO — Manager Tony LaRussa will be allowed to run the Chicago White Sox his own way instead of getting fired, team vice president in charge of baseball operations Ken Harrison announced Friday.

Harrison, in his first year in charge of the team's baseball operations, said negotiations for the managerial job had stopped with Billy Martin's lawyer and that LaRussa would be the manager for the foreseeable future.

Martin had been courted by the White Sox for two weeks while the White Sox were losing six straight games and dropping further into last place in the American League West.

Harrison admitted some of his new ideas about the team did not work and said LaRussa will get to run the club his way. Among the ideas which have been scratched for the time being are two pitching coaches and two batting coaches.

"A couple of my modifications have not worked," Harrison said at O'Hare International Airport before the team left for Cleveland Friday. "The players have not responded to them. I am not backing off one bit. I think two pitching coaches is the way of the future. But the players will tell you what you are doing is right or if what you are doing is wrong. I asked myself 'did you put too much on this man who did things his way for seven years?' The answer is 'yes, I did.'"

Harrison met with Martin's lawyer, Eddie Sapir, Thursday then talked to club owners Jerry Reinsdorf and Eddie Einhorn Thursday night. Martin's agent, Ed Sapir, was supposed to get back to Harrison within 24 hours, but the team made the decision before that period elapsed.

"For the sake of the ballclub I had to get things cleared up," Harrison said. "We were unanimous on Tony LaRussa. He has a profile while his future has been publicly debated."

"I don't feel like joking much," he said. "If [his job] is in the players' hands and they lost six in a row, I thought if we beat three more games maybe I could get a contract extension."

"We tried to [work out] two things. One way was to get the ideas Hawk had, and I resisted some of the stuff. I'm going to get my shot to do it my way."

The other idea Harrison had was that LaRussa originally defended putting catcher Carlton Fisk into left field so Joel Skinner could get playing time behind the plate. Neither Skinner nor Fisk are hitting over .200 and Fisk has made four errors in left field.

But LaRussa would not say Friday morning whether Fisk would move back behind the plate this weekend. He said he would save that news for just before Friday's game in Cleveland for the writers who travel with the team.

Judd-Glass

Barbara Jean Glass, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Glass of 105 Scott Drive, married Collins Ralph Judd, son of Margaret Judd of 71 E. Middlebury St., in a ceremony at the home of the bride's parents, the Rev. Lawrence S. Staples of South United Methodist Church officiated.

McGrath-Christensen

Gail Elizabeth Christensen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald B. Christensen of 128 Wetherell St., married Thomas Michael McGrath, son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick D. E. McGrath of East Hartford, on April 5 at Emanuel Lutheran Church.

The Rev. Dale Gustafson officiated. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

Lisa Christensen was maid of honor for her sister. Bridesmaids were Carol Ebersold and the bridegroom's sister, Catherine McGrath.

Richard Rucchio served as best man. Ushers were the bride's brother, Scott Christensen and Paul Russell.

After a reception at the Glastonbury Country Club, the couple left for St. Thomas. They live in Columbia.

The bride, a graduate of Manchester High School and the University of Connecticut, is assistant comptroller at the Savings Bank of Manchester. The bridegroom, a graduate of Penney High School and Central Connecticut State University, is an on-line systems consultant at Connecticut Mutual Insurance Co. in Hartford.

Many mortgage rates sinking to the most attractive levels in years.

Homeowners are planning to refinance existing loans, a trend that countless others are considering.

Refinancing now account for about 30 percent of loan closings, according to the U.S. League of Savings Institutions, trade group for the savings and loan industry. That's an historically high level.

Moreover, adds a spokesman for Lomas & Nettleton, mortgage bankers in Dallas, a number of big banks report that refinancing account for up to 35 percent of their volume.

Many refinancings involve government loans, such as those obtained through VA and FHA programs.

The recent downturn in interest rates explains refinancing's allure. And this accelerated decline comes on top of a falling trend in mortgage rates that dates back to the summer of 1984. In March of '86, rates reached their lowest levels in six years.

The Federal Home Loan Board reports that fixed-rate mortgages for new homes fell to 10.3 percent in March — a drop of about half a point from January's rate of 11.45 percent.

Some lenders offer adjustable-rate loans with caps on how much the rates can change dropped to 9.5 percent, down from January's 10.45.

For many consumers with older adjustable-rate mortgages, these lower rates mean a much more secure at an affordable price.

Lower fixed-rate loans have depended on a variety of circumstances and assumptions, beyond today's rates. "Obviously, you have to look at your existing loan, its interest rate, and have that money for other activities. Incidentally, some lenders offer 15-year loans at slightly lower rates than 30-year mortgages. In this area at this time, that

Mr. and Mrs. David Pullen

Catherine Ann Coslit Auden, daughter of Anna Coslit of Webster, Mass., and the late Philip Coslit, married David Gary Pullen, son of Alice R. Pullen of Yardville, N.J., and the late Cecil D. Pullen, on April 19 at Miller Chapel, Princeton Theological Seminary, Princeton, N.J. The bride was a Manchester resident.

The Rev. Arthur Byers officiated.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Milton Coslit.

The maid of honor was Patti Bernstein, Vicki Auden was bridesmaid for her mother.

Mark Bernstein served as best man. The bride's son, Scott Auden, and William Alexios were ushers.

After a reception at Washington Crossings Inn in Pennsylvania, the couple left for the Poconos. They live in New Jersey.

The bride, a Manchester High School graduate, is employed by ARA Services.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Steiner (N.J.) High School. He earned a bachelor's and a master's degree at the University of Hartford. He is employed by ARA Services.

Special activities planned for Senior Citizens Week

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Senior Citizens' Center.

By Joe Diminico
Activities Director

The month of May has been proclaimed "Senior Citizens Month" by the National Council on Aging as well as May 12 to 16 as Senior Citizens Week. We, the staff, have planned an array of special activities for Senior Citizens Week. Please make note of the following schedule.

May 12 — 10 a.m. — "Celebrity Bingo" — town officials will call bingo: 7 p.m. — military whist and setback card party conducted by Mary Ann Ed McKeever. Refreshments, prizes, $1 donation.

May 14 — 8 a.m. trip to JFK Library and New England Aquarium in Boston. Lunch at Quincy Market.

May 14 — 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. — riding tour of historic Manchester with Herb Bengtson. Includes Bottling Works, oldest house in South End, Cheney Mills, Rogers, Sarah Kehler at 647-3084.

Free of charge. Call for reservation.

May 15 — "Big day" — Chicken dining at 11:30 a.m. (Call for reservation before noon on Tuesday); reading of Proclamation by Mayor Barbara Weinberg, Selection of Mr. and Mrs. Senior Citizen. Entertainment, Bill Levy re-knowned hymns, 10 a.m. square dancing; 11:45 a.m. lunch; 1:30 p.m. exercise with Rose Bush; 2:30 p.m. shopping at 12:30 p.m.

Wednesday — 8 a.m. bus trip to Boston (JFK Library-New England Aquarium); 9:30 a.m. art and craft; 11:30 a.m. Asseritiveness training; 9:30 a.m. stress management; 9:30 a.m. pinchle; 10 a.m. Friends of the Circle; 10 a.m. Riding tour of historic Manchester; 12:30 p.m. bridge games; 1:30 p.m. arts and crafts; 1 p.m. contest of riding tour of historic Manchester. Bus pickup at 8 a.m. Return trips at 12:30 and 3:15 p.m.

There are still openings for golf lessons with PGA golf professional John Nowobilski at Tallwood Golf Course, Thetford, May 14, May 28, and June 11 from 9 a.m. to noon. The fee for the series is $9. If interested, please contact the office.

There will be a second registration for the Montreal-Quebec trip on May 12 at 9:30 a.m. The price of the trip is $235 which includes transportation, four nights at a deluxe hotel, four breakfasts and four lunches and tours. The trip is slated for July 14.

THE TOWN will be sponsoring "Circuit Breaker" clinics at the following locations: Westhill Gardens, May 21, 9 to 11 a.m. and 1 to 2 p.m.; Mayfield Gardens, May 22, 8:30 to 11 a.m.; Spencer Village, May 22, 2 to 4:15 p.m.; and Manchester Senior Center, May 23, 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Qualified renters will receive a rebate benefit check. For more information, contact Dianne Wicks at Sarah Kehler at 647-3084.

Card players are reminded that pinchle will be canceled Monday afternoon so that we can set up for the military whist and setback party in the evening.

Lastly, our condolences to the Golas family over their recent loss of long-time friend Tony Golas.

With mortgage rates sinking, homeowners are refinancing

traditional commonsense advice makes more sense than ever. Shop around!

Sylvia Porter's New Money Book for the 80's: 1,328 pages of down-to-earth advice on personal money management, is available through her column. Send $9.95 plus $1 for mailing and handling to "Sylvia Porter's New Money Book for the 80's," in care of the Manchester Herald, P.O. Box 419150, Kansas City, Mo. 64141. Make checks payable to Andrews, McMeel & Parker.

kind of caps there are. You need to know what sorts of limits are on the loan.

For example, your loan may not have a lifetime cap on the interest rate, or it may have a payment cap that limits the amount of interest you exceed a specified amount after each adjustment. If the latter, your loan balance can actually grow — a process called "negative amortization."

Another key question: How long do you plan to stay in your home?

Refinancing basically means applying for a new loan, and that entails new origination and closing costs. These costs can amount to thousands of dollars that can take years to pay off in savings on your new loan.

One rule of thumb: Unless the difference between your old and new contracts equals 2 percent, and you don't plan to sell for at least five years to recover the new costs, refinancing won't pay off.

Some lenders give you the option to convert from an ARM to a fixed rate. If you have that provision in your contract, you won't have to pay new origination fees.

In still another twist, suggested by Saul Shiefman, Lomas & Nettleton's vice president, consider refinancing to a 15-year term, especially if you've already built up some equity. Your monthly payments won't be much different from what they are now.

Payments on a 30-year $100,000 mortgage at 15 percent cost $1,146 for instance.

To refinance that same $100,000 at 10.5 percent will result in payments of $915 a month — a savings of more than $200.

But look at payments for the same amount of loan at the 15-year term. Payments would be $1,090, 65 less than the old payment. You'll pay off the loan much sooner, though, and have that money for other activities. Incidentally, some lenders offer 15-year loans at slightly lower rates than 30-year mortgages. In this area at this time, that

Gleelwood ghost

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Sir John Gleelwood will star in the title role of "The Cantervile Ghost," a two-hour TV movie for first-run syndication from Columbia Pictures Television.

Also starring in the film will be Andrea Marcovicci, Alyssa Milano and Ted Wass for producer Patrick Drumgoole. The teleplay will be filmed entirely in England under the direction of Paul Bogart.

"The Cantervile Ghost" is loosely based on Oscar Wilde's short story about an American family that inherits an ancient English castle only to discover it is inhabited by a cantankerous 300-year-old spirit.

55 CARPENTRY/REMODELING

Activities. Following an organizational meeting on February 10, the commission held seven meetings and two public hearings. The Town Manager and the President of the District reported to the commission both in writing and orally at a public meeting. Throughout its tenure the commission was assisted by the Town's attorney, who advised the commission regarding the many complexities of the statutory charter revision and consolidation procedures and related issues.

Scope. The commission focused on revisions to Charter Sections 10-10 and 10-11 and on consolidation procedures generally.

55 CARPENTRY/REMODELING

★

Section 10-8
We recommend that Section 10-8 be repealed.

55 CARPENTRY/REMODELING

Section 10-10
We recommend that the present Section 10-10 be repealed and that the following section be substituted therefor:

HAPPY MOTHER'S DAY

Special Love

*There's someone very special
That I love so very much,
Who makes me feel so loved,
With every gentle touch.*

*The caring that's been shown,
Throughout the many years,
The soft and gentle ways,
She'd wipe away my tears.*

*The laughter and the pain,
That together we always shared,
Let me know each day,
How much she really cared.*

*When I had my doubts,
She always helped me see,
She gave me the courage,
To let myself be me.*

*I wish that I could tell her,
How much to me, she means,
But just to say I love you,
is not enough it seems.*

*If at all it's possible,
I love her more today,
I love her so much more,
Than words could ever say.*

*No one could compare to her,
To me there's just no other,
No one quite as special,
As the person I call mother.*

*Mom, with these few words,
I've tried so hard to tell you,
There's no other way to say it,
Except mom, I Love You!*

*For all you do for us everyday,
We love you mom.*

aggravation? Well?
Wasn't I?*

XO - Your Middle One

TAG MUTTI!

*Finals are over at last thanks for putting up with me and being so supportive.
Thanks for just being you
You're one special mom.
Happy Mothers Day and remember
ICH LIEBE DICH!*

DEINE
Andrea

To Mom and Mema

Love,
Kristen

You're the Greatest Mom -

Love,

The story behind the story

By Josie

Q. I am a really big fan of Tim Matheson. Could you tell me everything about him? M.E. Donaldson, Baton Rouge, La.

Tim Matheson.

A. He's 38, was born December 31, 1947 in Glendale, Calif., the son of a pilot and a municipal court clerk who divorced when he was 6. When he was 10, he saw Charles Laughton's performance in the film "Witness for the Prosecution" and decided, then and there, to become an actor.

Two years later, he did: his next door neighbor, a child actor, took him to acting classes where he was discovered by an agent. Appearances followed on such series as "Twilight Zone," "Leave it to Beaver" and "My Three Sons," and films such as "Yours, Mine and Ours." After high school, he enrolled at Cal State University as a psychology major but dropped out after a year and returned to acting at the Actors and Directors Lab in Hollywood.

He practiced his stagecraft at the Old Globe Shakespeare Festival in San Diego and as a contract player for Universal. Appearances followed on such series as "Ironsides," "Night Gallery," "Medical Center" and "Police Story."

He was also a regular on "Bonanza" for a year and co-starred with Kurt Russell in a series called "The Quest." He then moved back into films: "Magnum Force," "National Lampoon's Animal House" and recently "A Little Sex," "To Be or Not To Be," "Fletch" and the TV movie "Blind Justice."

He also veered into directing with an episode of "St. Elsewhere." Currently, he's in the process of developing TV movies for his production company, in which he would star, but nothing has been confirmed as yet.

Q. Please answer; there's a $100 bet riding on this. Was Phil Collins ever married to Liza Minnelli? M and J, Trenton, N.J.

A. No. He was married once before his current marriage to Jill Tavelman and she, twice before her current marriage to Mark Gero; but never to each other.

Q. Please settle an argument. In the first version of the film "Magnificent Obsession," were Robert Taylor and Irene Dunne the stars? My sister is sure it starred Robert Taylor and Loretta Young. Who is correct? M. Whitenack, Cape May, N.J.

A. You are. The 1935 film starred Robert Taylor and Irene Dunne.

Q. Recently, I heard the end of a story about the death of Steve Lawrence and Eydie Gorme's son. Can you tell me what happened? Mrs. D.F.N., Midland, Texas

A. Their 21-year-old son, Michael, died unexpectedly on February 5 at his home in Los Angeles. After a month-long post-mortem, the Los Angeles County Coroner concluded that he died from natural causes, a heart condition.

Q. Please tell me about Wilford Brimley. He seems familiar, but I can't remember what movies I've seen him in. John Lee, Claremont, Calif.

A. He's one of the most in-demand character actors in the business, which means he always does first-rate supporting performances, but audiences aren't supposed to remember or notice him — they're supposed to notice the star.

You've seen him in "The China Syndrome," "The Electric Horseman," "Tender Mercies," "The Natural," "Brubaker," "Cocoon," "Remo Williams: The Adventure Begins" and as a semi-regular, a number of seasons back, on "The Waltons." You should also see him on TV next season as the star of a series called "14 Napoleon Street."

Q. I always liked the actor Michael Parks. Is he still acting? Margy Davies, Scranton, Pa.

A. He is, but according to his agent, he's fussy. "He won't do series TV," he explains. "We don't agree with him but maybe he'll change his mind. Had he gotten 'Miami Vice,' which he read for before Don Johnson, perhaps he would have, but now he's trying to put his own films together and will do a movie-of-the-week now and then."

Dan Rather

Q. Could you please give me some background on CBS anchor Dan Rather? Arthur S. Lassow, Manchester, Conn.

A. He's 54, from Houston, the son of a waitress and a pipeline worker, who also put in time on an oil rig and pumping gas to work his way through school (Sam Houston State Teachers College, the University of Houston and South Texas School of Law). After a stint in the Marines, he worked for UPI and the Houston Chronicle but switched to radio broadcasting (which he'd tried while in college) because his spelling was bad and radio paid $20 a week more.

His switch to radio, specifically the CBS radio affiliate KTRH in Houston, was also beneficial personally and professionally: He met his wife of 29 years, Jean, there; and his work led him to CBS's TV affiliate. His coverage of Hurricane Carla in 1961 for that TV affiliate, KHOU, was so impressive that the network heads noticed and brought him north to New York.

Two years later, he decided to return to Texas on special assignment to cover John F. Kennedy's trip to Dallas and his clear, continuous coverage of the JFK assassination made him, in the network's eyes, a star. The following year, he was made White House correspondent and over the next 10 years conducted tough, public and highly quoted questioning of presidents Johnson and Nixon. He also wrote a novel, "The Palace Guard."

In 1975, he left the White House for a spot on "60 Minutes," where he earned a reputation for being inexhaustible, hard-driving and adventurous, as illustrated by his 1980 infiltration of an Afghan rebel camp.

That, combined with pictures of him in his undercover outfit earned him the nickname Gunga Dan as well. The next year, though, he moved to a more sedentary spot as Walter Cronkite's successor on "The CBS Evening News."

He and his wife have a daughter, Robin, 27, and a son, Dan Jr., 25, who reportedly once remarked to a visiting friend, "Oh, that's Dan Rather when the hardworking, rarely-home newsmen made an infrequent trip home during their childhood. When he isn't working now, he likes to go fishing and listen to Willie Nelson records."

Q. Please tell me if Forrest Sawyer and Diane Sawyer are related. Mrs. Ernest Freitag, McAllen, Texas

A. According to a CBS News representative, no. The only connection seems to be that they're both Southerners. Diane, America's Junior Miss of 1963, is from Glasgow, Ky.; Forrest, a longtime radio anchor, is from Gainesville, Fla.

It's prom time

Are we getting revenge on our kids through this?

By Sarah Overstreet

Despite many decades during which we should have learned better, educators all over the nation are once again preparing for senior proms. Not that proms, of course, are all bad. Teen-agers get practice in dressing up, a skill which will serve them well later in corporate life. And because of the wonderful resilience of youth, most prom-goers will manage to have a modicum of fun.

But there must be a better use of the time invested in putting on and attending a prom — say, giving kids a free day at the lake, or a big end-of-school carnival. Instead, we put the kids through the same paces we went through (if it was good enough for us, it's good enough for you!) year after year, demanding they observe the time-honored rules:

- Thou shalt wear a scratchy piece of clothing for several hours.
- Thou shalt do the latest dance in said scratchy clothing, even if thy body has not caught up with thy feet.
- Thou shalt have a date for the prom, or be subject to humiliation which shall follow thee throughout thy life even until thou art an old man or woman.

The first two rules are heartless enough, but except for the small knot of kids who date as naturally as pigeons roost on City Hall, the third is most criminal.

Consider, for a moment, the plight of the girl belonging to the 85 percent of all high-school girls who are not among the 15 percent with which most of the boys are smitten. She's already been fed four to six years of teen magazine propaganda that portrays every teen-age girl with clear skin, a fantastic wardrobe and dates every Friday and Saturday night. She wonders, if every other teen-age girl in America is like the ones in Seventeen, just what kind of freak she is.

When prom time approaches, she hangs onto every shred of hope that maybe this time will be different, that this time the story will end like those in the teen paperback novels she's been reading. Maybe, like the heroine in "The Summer of the Heart," she'll suddenly develop a waistline and her mousy brown hair will take on golden highlights from working outside as a carhop.

If she's one of the lucky ones, she may receive an invitation by default from a boy who's too scared to ask the popular girl he wants to, but whose mother has threatened to ground him for a year if he doesn't ask someone.

She'll attend the prom with her date, who will treat her with barely concealed ennui. She will nevertheless spend the evening trying to be witty, in hopes that no matter how disgusting a creature he is, he will ask her out again and she can feel more like the girls in Seventeen.

If she isn't a lucky one (or maybe she is, depending on how you look at it), she will attend the prom with a group of girlfriends.

A boy doesn't have it much better. If he isn't among the naturally dating 15 percent, he is faced with an equally traumatizing dilemma: Does he ask the popular girl he really wants to, who probably wouldn't accompany him out of a burning building if he were a fireman, and risk rejection? Or does he ask someone he thinks will accept, even though he'd just as soon take his Irish setter?

If he chooses the former, the girl will tell him she already has a date, which if she doesn't, she soon will. If he chooses the latter, he is then faced with another dilemma: Does he treat her nicely and risk getting her hopes up that he will ask her out again, or does he treat her like he really feels and risk her mother telling his mother?

And boys have an extra problem. While approximately 99 percent of high-school girls want to date, only about 40 percent of boys do. Subtracting the 15 percent for whom dating is a snap, and the 25 percent who secretly want dates although the prospect scares them senseless, that leaves 60 percent who would rather do anything than go to the prom.

Of this 60 percent, a few will eventually end up with prom dates in spite of themselves. The rest will either boycott the prom and endure their parents' scorn, or attend solo and sit in a gaggle across from the unmatched girls.

Every time prom season rolls around, I wonder if the prom sponsors didn't sit in either the girls' or boys' gaggle, and this is their way of getting some revenge. ■

“ If she's one of the lucky ones, she may receive an invitation by default from a boy who's too scared to ask the popular girl he wants to, but whose mother has threatened to ground him for a year if he doesn't ask someone. ”

Valerie Harper is back on TV with NBC's "Valerie."

Valerie is having a ball

'I'm not playing Rhoda,' the popular TV actress insists

By Jane Ardmore

What makes her Valerie Harper is the passion and pleasure she brings to every facet of existence: to her work, to her life as a woman, to the world she yearns to feed. She has incredible energy into The Hunger Project, as witness LIFE (Love Is Feeding Everyone), branchchild of her boyfriend and partner Tony Cacciotti.

The organization has evolved from his concept of contacting supermarkets for free groceries. Now it has three paid employees, 300 volunteers and an old van and is feeding 16,000 a week in Los Angeles. "This number," she says, "will jump to more than 30,000 with our two new trucks, a gift from Lorimar," co-producers of her new TV series, "Valerie," on NBC.

For this spring, after seven years of varied activity on film and theater, Harper is back on prime time in a comedy show in which she plays the mother of three young teen-aged sons, wife of an international airlines pilot (played by Josh Taylor) whose job makes theirs a romantic commuter marriage but also leaves her in the spot of being almost a single parent.

"I'm not playing Rhoda," she insists. "I'm playing a today woman with all her trials, tribulations and laughter... someone pretty much like me with a job and emotional commitment. I love the show.

"Bruce, our assistant director, did 'Rhoda' for five years, ditto the unit production manager and the prop man. We even started shooting the series over on my old stage 14, then we moved to MGM. It's a different business than when I started working with Mary on the 'Mary Tyler Moore Show.'

"That was 10 years ago," she explains. "Prices have escalated. They used to order 24 shows. Now the networks have to do short orders. You get your little family of workers together and shoot six episodes.

"We've had such smooth sailing. Our partners are wonderful. Tom Miller and Bob Boyett. They were responsible for 'Happy Days,' 'Laverne and Shirley,' 'Angie,' 'Mork and Mindy,' plus 'Silver Streak' and 'Foul Play' for the movies, so they're adept at this form."

She continues, "They understand comedy. These gentlemen care about the people they hire, always with the show in mind but never at the expense of the people. They understand that people being happy and fulfilled is what makes a show great."

And Harper herself is happy and fulfilled. She was always caring, always generated warmth. The difference between the Harper of "Rhoda" and today's Valerie Harper is that she is at the very best time of her life.

"Oh, yes, I am. It's a matter of self acceptance, even accepting the things I'd like to change in myself: like seeking approval, like talking too much. I accept them, right now, today, and keep working on it. You have to trust yourself. Completely."

And she trusts Cacciotti. And is totally committed. "We haven't really been separated since we met." When she was filming "Chapter II," there was a bathing suit scene in the film, and although Valerie had long since lost the weight which was part of the Rhoda character on Mary's show, she'd never gotten her figure into the shape she wanted.

He, a former New York actor and assistant movie director, marvelously built, had been hired at "fabulous sums" in Hollywood to condition stars such as Richard Gere and John Travolta. Which is how Harper met him.

"And believe me," she emphasizes, "it was not love at first sight. Tony got me into leg lifts and yoga and running (like three miles a day) in a rubber suit in weather that was 90 degrees. Three hours a day, six days a week."

She continues, "He was entirely businesslike and I didn't have a romantic notion in my head. Here I was sweating, panting, my hair all kinked up, and he'd never let me quit. Always new exercises, always harder. When we went to New York on location, I had him come along so we could keep working."

"It was all platonic up until then. But in New York we suddenly realized how good we felt together and knew we were in love. At first we couldn't believe it. I remember him shaking that handsome head of his and saying, 'But I wasn't attracted to you in any way.' It was almost as if, having gotten me into shape, he'd taken another look and thought, 'Hey, not so bad.'"

When the picture ended, he took her to Italy, to the little town of Abruzzi, to meet his relatives. It was glorious. Harper has always felt that in another life she must have been Italian. Maybe because she and her stepmother have always been so close and she is Italian.

In any event, they have been together ever since, first at Malibu, now in a house above Sunset Boulevard in Brentwood.

"It's interesting. Except for one picture I made which was shot in Tucson, it's just worked out that whatever the project, we've been working on, it's been together. In May, I did a 'Love Boat' in Egypt. Tony was in it too. And when it finished shooting, we went to Rome."

"While we were in Egypt, Tony had his brother Pat pick up their mother and bring her to Rome to see her family. We joined them there and it was unbelievable! His mom is 86. Tony was born very late in her life, so all of his uncles and aunts are in their 80s and 90s, happy, healthy, vibrant people with roses in their cheeks."

She continues, "He arranged a great luncheon party, just the older generations and their children because they number 200. If you had all those kids' children and their children, you'd have had 1,000. He rented a lovely place in the hills, 45 minutes out of Rome, rustic and beautiful. What a feast we had and outside was the music of a concertina. As we were leaving, we passed the little church where his father used to worship."

They ate Italian food and then came back to America and redoubled their effort for LIFE. "Tony has been involved with ending hunger on his own pre-Hunger Project. At the age of 9, his mother tells me, he used to cook for the neighborhood kids."

She explains, "In Italian working-class families, there's a kitchen upstairs where people sit at the linoleum-covered table, chatting and eating, and then downstairs there is another kitchen where you really 'cook heavy.'"

"Tony as a boy would cook huge vats of spaghetti for kids whose families weren't so fortunate. Many people have done the same in their neighborhoods. I don't think they realized how many partners they have. It's like The Hunger Project calls on us to see how many people are in alignment and that each contribution is valuable. Maybe it's one dollar, maybe not a penny, maybe $10,000. It's not the money, it's the soul force that counts."

"I just came back from a Hunger Project conference," she says. "It's going magnificently. In fact, the goal has been realized. The goal was to put the issue of hunger on the front burner, to make people aware."

"There is no reason in the world why you can't end hunger. There's food in the world. It's just a matter of getting it to the hungry. The really courageous people, to me, are those who were working on the hunger issue 50 years ago, when there didn't seem a chance. Save the Children. Save the Children is a 52-year-old organization!"

She reflects, "The Hunger Project has been an education for me. I work with other organizations that feed, but the project itself is the all-important idea. Intangible, but you can do nothing without it."

"With it, well, if we as a planet can make an internal commitment actually to shape the world around us, the sky's the limit as to what the world can be. Ending hunger is the vehicle, but riding it people find out who they are and how powerful they are. Which is why The Hunger Project is central to my life.

Valerie Harper on TV's popular "Rhoda" sitcom in 1975. The actress says her role on today's "Valerie" is much different than her lonely bachelor girl role on "Rhoda."

"That's why I so love LIFE. It is wonderful, active and direct. Tony and I got involved several years ago with a group no longer in existence, whose idea was to buy food, say a quantity worth $50, and sell it for $10."

She continues, "They meant well, but for us it was a bookkeeping nightmare — we had to find a way to get free food and give it free. And to whom? To the poorest of the poor, welfare mothers who give the food to their children and go without, to older people who just aren't making it, older women whose husbands have died and they get half his Social Security. Older women are starving to death."

"Dennis Weaver joined us and agreed to be president. Tony's idea of contacting the supermarkets worked. We are businesslike. We are careful not to interfere with supermarket business or the comings and goings of delivery vans. If we're to be somewhere at 8:08, we are there.

"We receive what we call 'back-room products': all the dated stuff: milk, frozen food, sliced meat, deli, bakery, produce, if something has a slight bruise, cans with the labels on crooked. No garbage. It's all absolutely good food."

"To supplement the perishable, we have food drives where we ask people to donate food or money for food." Harper and Weaver stand out in front of a supermarket and people will go in and bring out a full cart to donate. She gives them a list of 20 needed items. Often they give all 20. Everything is packed in special cases. The market allows the LIFE people to stand outside on Saturdays and Sundays.

"The city is helping: they furnish distribution centers. And the community handles distribution. We work through churches, through shelters. In the L.A. area there are 1.3 million people who don't get enough to eat. And our program is not the solution. Jobs are the solution. Stability in communities is the solution."

She continues, "Our efforts are stopgap. I think similarly about Ethiopia. It's great that we're sending food to Ethiopia. But development, the use of windmills to get the water up and irrigate and combat drought, is the key to ultimate solution there."

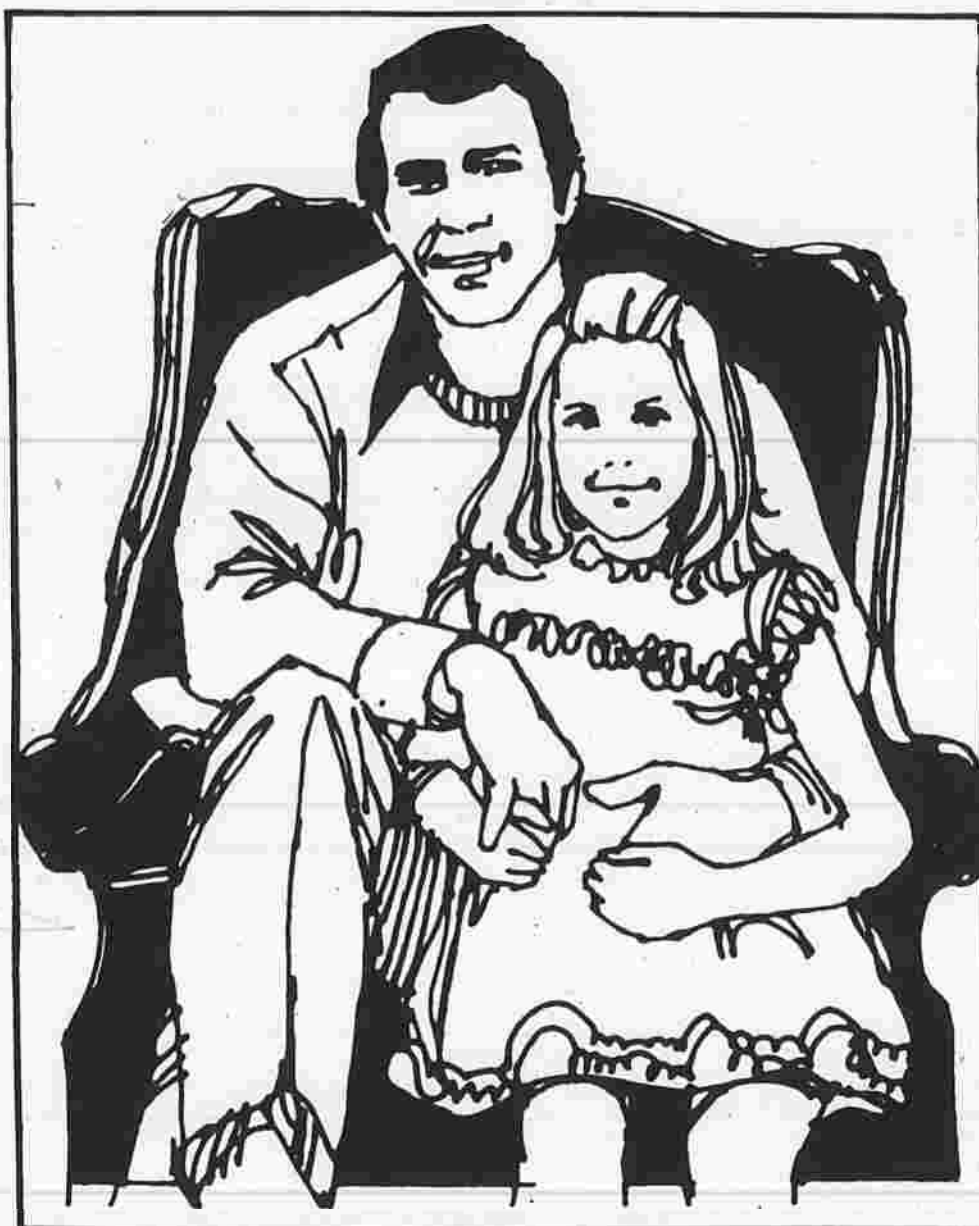

"Here we are not sitting a desert. We have safeguards monetarily in every truck. At Saint Anne's Church an efficient nun says, 'We have this many families. These are the most destitute. We want 150 orders.' That means 150 orders for families of four, food assistance for a week. Not the whole diet but enough to get them by."

"The church, or in other cases, the shelter pays us 10 cents a pound. That doesn't nearly pay for the trucks. We have to keep fund-raising. We have a paid manger at each center, and volunteers sort out the food, cut any wilted leaves from the produce, wash it, assemble orders. ■

Laps

Kids find comfort and safety when one is offered

By Fred Rogers
with Barry Head

Chairs have backs...and arms...and legs...and seats. If I didn't know better, I might be inclined to look under a chair to find the seat; our seats are usually underneath us. But then I can understand the logic: We put our backs against the back of the chair, our arms on the arms, our legs where the chair's legs are, and we put our seats on the seat.

All the same, it seems to me that that's adult logic. If a very young child could tell us what he or she thought the parts of a chair were, I wouldn't be surprised to hear that child call the seat a lap. After all, we don't put just our seats in a chair; we put our laps there, too. Laps often have a deep and special importance for a child. Children usually spend a lot of time there. Laps are closely associated with nursing and feeding. They're warm, safe places. In the earliest days and weeks of life, a child in a lap, leaning up against a caregiver's body, may hear a lot of internal sounds that became familiar during the nine months before birth.

And laps, along with breasts and necks and shoulders, may come to represent for children one of the closest points of physical contact they can have with the caregivers they are growing to love.

One child, whenever his mother would go out and leave him with a babysitter, regularly toddled over to the chair he most associated with his mother and clambered up into its...lap. For him, there seemed little doubt that it was closest thing he could have to his mother's actual body.

Once there, he'd comfort himself during his worry and sadness over her departure by rocking himself (as his mother had often done while she sang to him) and sucking his thumb in a re-creation of the nursing times he and his mother so often shared.

He knew where he was, if everyone else thought he was sitting on a seat.

There's something else that I've seen toddlers do many times, and you may have seen it too: A mother or father will take the toddler's older brother or sister up onto the lap to look at a book or share a hug, and the toddler will come tottering across the room and protest, complaining loudly and tugging at the parent's knees or the older child's legs.

"That's my place!" the toddler seems to be saying. "Mine!" The same thing can happen when a new baby is the one who gets to sit in the lap—sometimes, it must seem, almost all the time. If parents can seem like possessions to a young child, and I believe they can, then a parent's lap may become one of the most intimate and prized possessions that one child can take away from another.

Those kinds of possessions are hard to let go, even to share. Many adults find that they have a favorite chair in the house, a favorite "lap." It can be hard to have a stranger or even a friend unwittingly take that place. That can be particularly true if the chair once belonged to a beloved parent or grandparent, once held a loving lap that held us, too. ■

Beauty begins with the hair

By Sandi Hastings

Hair is essential to beauty. If your hair doesn't look right, your total look will be wrong. To look your best, your hair should be the right color, the right cut, and the right style.

To choose the right hair color you must know what is harmonious with your natural coloring. Because changing your hair color can make a dramatic change in your looks, I recommend you have your hair permanently colored by a professional hairdresser, to ensure your best look.

- Redheads look best with warm golden glints or red tones added to their hair.

- Most blondes look attractive with subtle highlights.

- Brunettes with olive, sallow, ruddy, or dark complexions look best with medium to dark brown hair.

- Brunettes with fair or white complexions should choose ash-brown, dark brown, or black-brown shades.

- Those determined to go blonde should consider beige-blond or ash-blond highlights framing the face rather than an all-over color to create a softer, younger looking effect.

Just as cosmetics can effectively change the shape of your face, your hairstyle can alter the shape of your face. To change the shape of a square face you need to draw attention away from jawline. Get plenty of fullness on the top of your head. If you wear your hair off your forehead, you'll elongate your face and wisps of hair near the jawbone will soften the harsh, square look.

If you have a round face, cutting your hair close to the nape of your neck makes your neck, and consequently your face appear longer. More volume of top also lengthens the face and asymmetrical bangs create a narrowing illusion. Short, blunt-cut hair sweeping upward draws the eye up and adds length to a round face.

The temples and forehead of a heartshaped face benefit by the softening effect brought on by short hair which is brushed back into a sleek wave. The layered bob cuts into the widest part of the jaw, giving a narrower appearance.

A long face needs a lot of fullness on the sides for balance, especially if the chin is rather narrow. A thick headband on the model in the drawing flattens the crown of the head and shortens the face. ■

He suffers from painful erections

Husband refuses to see a doctor because he is too embarrassed

By Dr. June Reinisch

DEAR DR. REINISCH: My husband has had painful erections for the past two and a half months. He says the pain is not unbearable, just uncomfortable. Nothing else is noticeably wrong with either one of us, just a pain in his penis when it is erect.

He refuses to see a doctor because he is too embarrassed. What could be wrong? I am very concerned about this.

DEAR READER: The pain could be from any number of different causes. It's going to take a visit to a physician, and probably tests, to determine if medical treatment is necessary. A number of infections and skin problems can affect the foreskin, glans (head of the penis) and other surfaces of the penis. Another source of penile pain during erection can be infections of the urethra or prostate. Problems like these won't disappear without medical treatment.

If no infectious agents or obvious skin conditions are found, the pain could be from an allergic reaction to some chemical (for example, contraceptive foam, lubricants, laundry soap or any other substance to which the penis is exposed). Has any new product been used in your household lately?

There are also cases in which a sexual device has scratched the penis or damaged penile tissue (in the case of penile rings, for example). Any incidents like this must be mentioned to the examining physician so a correct diagnosis can be made. Pain during erection can be a sign of Peyronie's disease.

Please encourage your husband to consult a physician. A urologist — or, in particular, a specialist in male fertility — might be more familiar with genital problems and better able to relieve your husband's embarrassment about being examined.

Breast test

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I am very anxious to know what experts advise women about mammography. I see my gynecologist every year for a Pap smear and breast examination. Every year he says everything is fine but says he is obligated to recommend a routine mammography, followed by mammographies at least every four years.

Should I follow his advice and expose myself to radiation? I am scared and don't know what to do.

DEAR READER: You did not state your age, but the current guidelines of the American Cancer Society (and the recommendations of the American Medical Association) are: a baseline mammogram (breast X-ray) for women aged 35 to 40; mammograms yearly or every other year for women aged 40 to 49; and yearly mammograms for women over age 50. More frequent or less frequent mammograms may be specified, depending on a woman's individual risk factors or what is found during an examination.

I understand your concern about unnecessary exposure to radiation, but the dosages used by modern X-ray equipment are so low that any risk from radiation is outweighed by the value of X-rays in early detection, especially after age 35.

It is thought that most breast cancers are present for six to eight years before reaching a size that is large enough to be felt by manual examination. Studies have also shown that the rate of death from breast cancer is 30 percent lower among women over 50 who get annual mammograms.

Finding breast cancer early is directly related to survival, and curing it usually requires less extensive surgery and/or other treatment.

Even though mammography is clearly of benefit past age 35, it is not perfect. Approximately 10 percent to 15 percent of breast cancers do not show up on X-rays. For this reason, women must still continue to do monthly self-examinations and have regular manual examinations by a physician to check for lumps and other changes in the breast.

Soft drink douche

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I've heard that a good contraceptive douche (if one is caught unprepared) is a shaken-up Coke or 7-Up or other similar soft drink. True?

DEAR READER: No. Although some soft drinks have been shown to have some degree of spermicidal action in laboratory tests, they have little contraceptive value, because sperm move too quickly to be destroyed by douching with any solution.

Research has shown that within 90 seconds of ejaculation, viable sperm can be found in the Fallopian tubes, where conception occurs.

Being sexually active means accepting the responsibility to plan ahead so that you are not caught unprepared for either parenthood or contraception.

As a further caution, physicians warn that carbonated beverages should not be squirted into the vagina because of the danger that air bubbles can enter the bloodstream, leading to a potentially lethal air embolism (an air bubble in a blood vessel).

Disease worry

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I would like to know if a female can get any type of disease from swallowing a man's semen. My husband loves oral sex, but I'm afraid I will get something from doing this too often. I am terribly worried.

DEAR READER: If your husband has no disease, there is no disease for you to contract.

“ Please encourage your husband to consult a physician. A urologist — or, in particular, a specialist in male fertility — might be more familiar with genital problems and better able to relieve your husband's embarrassment about being examined. ”

So, if he is disease-free, this activity is not dangerous for you, regardless of the frequency.

Diseases that can be transmitted by oral-genital contact include gonorrhea, herpes simplex, chlamydia, condylomata acuminata, syphilis, hepatitis B and AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome). You should avoid all sexual contact with partners known to have an active stage of these diseases.

No ejaculation

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I'm 61 years young and enjoy an active sex life. I reach a climax, but there is no ejaculation. This has been very upsetting to me.

I went to a urologist and was told that when I have my orgasm, the sperm and fluids go into my bladder, and this is nothing to worry about.

I am still very much concerned. Why would I not have a normal ejaculation? I'm a nervous wreck over this.

DEAR READER: The urologist is correct. In general, retrograde ejaculation is not harmful to your health. (In retrograde ejaculation, the neck of the bladder does not close at orgasm and the semen flows into the bladder, rather than through the urethra and out the penis.) However, I can understand why this change in sexual functioning would worry you. Moreover, it's important to find out why this is happening.

Retrograde ejaculation can be an early sign of some disease, such as diabetes, multiple sclerosis and neurological problems. It may also be a side effect of certain drugs taken for hypotension (low blood pressure), notably guanethidine and bethanidine. Certain surgical procedures on the prostate gland, bladder, aortilioic vein or spinal cord also have been implicated in some cases.

If you have not had surgery or do not take medications, you should have a physical examination to rule out any disease that might be affecting closure of the bladder neck at orgasm.

Consult an internist or a neurologist or ask your family physician to order tests for diabetes and neurological (brain) functioning. If a disease is involved, treatment may restore ejaculation.

If the retrograde ejaculation is a result of injury, surgery or a drug you need to maintain your basic health, you may want to discuss the matter with a sex therapist. Because erection, orgasm and ejaculation are separate functions, you can have a satisfying sex life without ejaculating. The semen simply washes out of the bladder when you urinate and poses no danger to your ability to have erections and orgasms. ■

Get in touch with your own sensuality

By Dr. Judith Kurlansky

This is the final part of your spring sensuous makeover. We have discussed how to dress — and undress — for sex and how to evaluate the rooms in your home for the signs of sensuality that exist or might be needed.

Now we tackle the foundation: your sensuous inner self. The key is in the root of the word: your sense.

To be sensuous, you need to heighten all your senses.

In springtime, all those senses come alive. You smell flowers, you see bright colors and you feel the fresh air. Be as alert in sex

Touch. Touch has healing power. Studies show petting an animal lowers blood pressure and thereby reduces stress. Stroking a loved one or being “petted” yourself can be equally soothing.

Other studies on infant monkeys and human babies show that those deprived of maternal contact and comfort even if given adequate food had slower physical, emotional and social growth.

One of Masters and Johnson's major contributions to sex therapy is the exercise called “non-demand pleasuring.” That means you touch each other in a spirit of curiosity. You do it not waiting for the other person to respond, but simply for enjoying the act of touching. Have no expectations. And don't worry that you're taking too much time.

Try this exercise now: Rub your finger against your forearm. Notice how your finger feels doing the touching. Now experience your arm being touched. Separate those two experiences. Notice where the skin is softer or brier. Don't judge what you're doing.

An exercise to do together: Take turns touching, first avoiding any sexual body parts. Set an alarm so you're not thinking about the time. This way you can concentrate on your responses without pressure to respond. As a result, you will respond more.

Scent. The perfume industry plays up this part of sensuality. Indeed, scent can play an important role. Some research suggests pheromones (substances in the body linked to sex hormones and apparently released by secretions as in sweat glands) affect attraction. Musk is marketed on this principle. In one study, for example, men rated photographs of women which were scented as more appealing than those unscented but equally attractive.

But mental associations play a major role in this sense. If you had a wonderful experience in the presence of a certain scent, you'll be likely to get turned on when you smell that again. I know a woman who would have followed any man in English. Leather cologne, which is what her first husband wore when he swept her off her feet.

Scent memories can be so powerful that you could even get excited around the smell of garlic if you once had an especially romantic evening eating a garlicky meal.

Sex therapists encourage couples to appreciate their natural body scents. Women are often particularly harsh on themselves. Learning to enjoy their scent greatly increases their self-confidence in sex.

Seeing. Feast your eyes on something about yourself or your partner you enjoy. Maybe it's the roundness of a hip, the angle of a jaw or a tempting expression. Point it out. Play it up.

First impressions are often made on what you see. You can maximize your physical attractiveness by feeling good about yourself, no matter what you look like, and by projecting an air of pleasantness and confidence.

To be a feast for anyone's eyes, move in ways you enjoy. And in sexual encounters, even ask your partner to move the way you like. One patient of mine found intense new pleasure once she built up courage to ask her husband to pose seductively as if he were a pin-up on a male calendar.

Many women — and men — have never really looked at all parts of their own — or their partner's — body. As in the touching exercises, take time, and turns, looking. Suspend judgment and criticism.

“ To be sensuous, you must heighten all your senses. ”

Such visual examinations are a preliminary exercise in many sex enhancement programs to help couples increase their sexual responsiveness.

Taste. Your mouth kisses, but how often does it actually experience tasting? Just as we have body scents, we have body tastes. This suggestion may make you uncomfortable or embarrassed. If it does, ask yourself why.

This is another area about which women are particularly self-critical. But learning to accept and appreciate it can increase self-confidence in and out of bed.

Sounds. Most people are inhibited about making noises when making love. But sex therapists encourage couples to let out natural sounds. Sighs trigger stress relief.

Some sounds may be associated with pain. But it is healthy to let these out. Reassure your partner he is not doing something wrong, and you don't want to stop.

Eastern philosophies profess the healing powers of repeating certain sounds. Practice making noises that originate not from your throat, but from farther down. That will bring you more in touch with deeper feelings and make you more relaxed as well.

Speaking. Beside making sounds, talking should also not be taboo during sex. I don't mean reviewing the day's troubles. But to heighten pleasure, you might keep a running commentary aloud on what feels good.

If you are inhibited about speaking up, practicing by reading sexy passages aloud from books.

Alert all your senses to how you and your partner feel and your spring sensuality quotient will multiply. ■

Richard Pryor's confession

By Bob Thomas

Self-revelation has been a popular exercise from St. Augustine's "Confessions" to Bob Fosse's "All That Jazz."

Now comes another gifted figure, Richard Pryor, flashing his soul before the public in "Jo Jo Dancer. Your Life Is Calling."

Pryor has denied that the film is strictly autobiographical, although he admits that it is "close, real close." Indeed, both Jo Jo and Richard rose from squalid beginnings and honed their craft in strip joints. Both had four failed marriages. Both were heavy dopers and nearly killed themselves by immolation.

Pryor, who produced and directed the film and co-wrote it with Rocco Urbisco and Paul Mooney, begins the confessional continues with a series of jobs and wives, pushing his comedy to new and daring heights and himself to new plateaus of booze and dope.

Bob Thomas reviews movies for The Associated Press.

Cinema Review

Not a pleasant story, and Pryor tells it with unsparring candor.

The best sequence concerns his first job as comic relief between the strippers. Paula Kelly is marvelous as the compassionate Satin Doll, and so is Billy Eckstine as the singing emcee who helps Jo Jo learn the ropes. Another musical star, Carmen McRae, provides warmth as the boy's grandmother.

Inevitably, "Jo Jo Dancer" is a downer. Though some of the stand-up comedy shines through, it is overwhelmed by the mindless self-destruction of the hero. Jarring, too, is the fact that most of the characters use the same obscenities Pryor uses in his concert act.

A Columbia Pictures release rated R for language, drugs, nudity. Running time: 97 minutes.

as the charred Jo Jo is being rushed to intensive care in a hospital. As doctors struggle to save his life, a ghost-like Jo Jo rises to confront the dying man with his past follies.

We see the young Jo Jo taunted by his schoolmates because his mother is one of the leading attractions at the local whorehouse. Newly married and living with his father, Jo Jo is thrown out of the house because he wants to be a comedian instead of a hog butcher.

Landing in Cleveland and incredibly naive, the young man nevertheless manages to find work as a comic — until he clashes with the Mob. He

Treasure drama

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Cliff Robertson and Loretta Swit will star in "Dreams of Gold: The Mel Fisher Story," a dramatic two-hour TV movie based on a real life treasure hunt.

The Fishers spent more than 16 years searching for the sunken treasure of the Nuestra Señora de Atocha, a Spanish galleon that sank off the Florida Keys in 1622. Their efforts paid off last July, when the family discovered the sunken ship, with hundreds of millions of dollars in gold and silver.

James Goldstone will direct the film, which will be broadcast by CBS-TV in the 1986-87 season.

Title switch

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Tri-Star Pictures announced it is changing the title of "Sexual Perversity in Chicago," adapted from Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright David Mamet's Obie Award-winning play.

When Tri-Star attempted to schedule television commercials and reserve newspaper advertising space for the film's July release, the company learned that the picture's suggestive title was unacceptable to broadcast media until after 11 p.m. Other broadcasters refused to run commercials at all and some newspapers would accept advertising only in their X-rated sections.

The production company, afraid the film would not be effectively marketed, changed the title to "About Last Night..." The picture stars Rob Lowe, Demi Moore, Jim Belushi and Elizabeth Perkins.

Rating guide

Motion Picture Association of America rating definitions:

G — General audiences. All ages admitted.

PG — Parental guidance suggested. Some material may not be suitable for children.

PG-13 — Special parental guidance strongly suggested for children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children.

R — Restricted. Under 17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.

X — No one under 17 admitted. Some states may have higher age restrictions.

Film capsules

Critters (PG-13) — Dee Wallace Stone, Billy Green Bush, Scott Grimes, Terrence Mann. (Sci-Fi Thriller) They are fuzzy little creatures with razor-sharp teeth and poisonous quills. And they're hungry. When they escape from a maximum security prison in outer space and land on Earth, these critters decide to quench their appetites by eating everything — and everyone — in sight. Stephen Herek has directed with precise pacing: There are chills, but also thrills and laughs. And it's all done without the viciousness Spielberg infused in "Gremlins." Grade: B-plus.

Ginger and Fred (PG-13) — Giulietta Masina, Marcello Mastroianni, Franco Fabrizi. (Comedy-Drama) This is a terrific satire of television and the power it has to make — and break — the human spirit. It is also a homage to the '30s era epitomized by Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers. And, like a faded high-school yearbook, it reeks of romance, wifed passion and broken promises as a World War II dance team is reunited for a TV special. This may not be Fellini's finest film, but the Italian master proves he hasn't lost his touch. Augusto Padoerosi is superb as an overzealous transvestite. Grade: B.

Gung Ho (PG-13) — Michael Keaton, Gedde Watanabe, George Wendt, Mimi Rogers. (Comedy) Actor/director Ron Howard comes out of the sea ("Splash") and sky ("Cocoon") to tackle turf. Or, to be more precise, to tackle the problems that occur when a Japanese company invades a small-town auto factory in Pennsylvania. To be even more precise, Howard doesn't tackle the topic; he fumbles it. "Gung Ho" is not a potent social comedy, but a lighthearted romp that manages to be half-entertaining all the time. Rubber-faced Keaton is fun to watch, even after the film runs out of gas. Grade: B.

Just Between Friends (PG-13) — Mary Tyler Moore, Christine Lahti, Ted Danson, Sam Waterston. (Comedy-Drama) A woman (Lahti) discovers that her new best friend (Moore) is married to the man she's been having an affair with. A comedy of errors ensues, then the film takes a more serious turn when a genuine tragedy strikes. Director Alan Burns keeps both the comedy and the tragedy a little too tightly under control, but there are plenty of good moments. All four stars turn in first-rate performances, but Lahti is the standout. Grade: B.

Legend (PG) — Tom Cruise, Mia Sara, Tim Curry. (Fantasy) This one is for undemanding fantasy fans only. The forces of good (represented by Cruise and Sara) take on the forces of evil and darkness (represented by Curry). The story is as predictable as they come, and the creatures of darkness are so grotesque that they're often painful to look at. Curry shows an occasional spark as Darkness, and Sara is lovely to look at, but this flick has little else to recommend it. Grade: C-minus.

Lucas (PG) — Corey Haim, Kerri Green, Charlie Sheen. (Comedy-Drama) In which some clean-cut 16-year-old jock learns a lesson about dedication and bravery from an underdeveloped 14-year-old genius. Haim plays Lucas with verve, and redheaded Green as Maggie, the girl Lucas loves and loses, evokes a gentle warmth. Sheen (another sibling from the Martin Sheen acting stable) is the jock who befriends Lucas and then wins the love of Maggie. The film is somewhat more than a television "Afternoon Special" but somewhat less than a fulfilling adult drama. But it's a great flick for the under-16 crowd. Take the kids! Grade: B.

The Money Pit (PG) — Tom Hanks, Shelley Long, Alexander Godunov. (Comedy) The minute this romantic couple moves into a dream house, its starts to self-destruct. Slime emerges from the pipes, small electrical fires erupt almost every time a light switch is flipped, and the staircase collapses. When they try to have the house repaired, they discover that local workers have to be bribed with outrageous sums to even come and take a look at the place. "Money Pit" has its amusing moments, but none of the gags are original, and watching the house fall apart is sometimes positively painful. Grade: C-plus.

On Valentine's Day (PG) — Halle Foote, William Converse-Roberts, Michael Higgins, Steven Hill, Matthew Broderick. (Drama) Horton Foote ("Tender Mercies," "The Trip to Bountiful") writes lyrical screenplays extolling the virtues of the human spirit. Foote's work is deeply rooted in tradition; Robert Duvall calls it "rural Chekhov." Here, the characters and conflicts of a small Texas town are given some time to work out their problems and work through their imaginations. This is a gentle and slow-moving film that occasionally sags but never wilts. Grade: B-minus.

TV Nostalgia

This modern Stone Age family was the longest-running cartoon series on prime-time TV, yaba-daba-ding on the small screen from 1960 to 1966. "The Flintstones," like a later kids' show, "The Muppetts," contained a fair dose of adult parody and irony. Bedrock was a city of split-level caves where housewives utilized appliances such as baby-elephant vacuum cleaners. Animated guest stars included TV host Ed Sullivan, attorney Perry Mason and movie star Stoney Curtis.

The Flintstones and their neighbors, the Rubbles, bore more than a passing resemblance to the Kramdens and Nortons of "The Honeymooners," albeit with a prehistoric twist. Loud-mouthed and paunchy Fred Flintstone was a blue-collar worker at the Rock Head & Quarry Cave Construction Co. His wife Wilma was sometimes cynical but always forgiving; her voice even had the twang of Alice Kramden's. And Barney Rubble's bumble quotient paralleled Norton's.

Cro-Magnon cavorters also included Pebbles and Bamm Bamm, the couples' children and Fred's ever-emoting dinosaur Dino. "Flintstone" viewers had to reach adolescence before they understood all the parody and caricatures, but Dino's yapping and Fred's floundering still had them begging to stay up late.

Question: "The Flintstones," macabre next-cave neighbors, Weirdly and Creepella Gruesome, were a parody of couples on what two TV shows?

Team for TV

NEW YORK (UPI) — Walt Disney Domestic Television and People magazine have teamed up to produce a new first-run syndicated television show for the fall of 1987.

The result is "People," a topical daily half-hour show delivered five days a week with a special one-hour weekend edition. The show will be fed daily via satellite to participating stations and is targeted specifically for the prime access time period.

"It is unprecedented to announce plans for a first-run syndicated show so far in advance," said Robert Jacquemin, senior vice president of Disney's Domestic Television unit.

Remick role

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Lee Remick and Patrick McGouhan will star in "Of Pure Blood," a new CBS-TV two-hour movie scheduled for next season.

The romantic-adventure film will be shot entirely in Europe on locations in Hungary and Germany. Remick will play a New York professional woman who returns to her native Germany to investigate the violent death of her student son.

Joseph Sargent will direct the film which also features Katharina Boehm, Gottfried John and Edith Scobier.

Jeopardy: in pursuit of the perfect answer

By Frank Sanello

HOLLYWOOD — "The animal for which the Canary Islands were named," declared "Jeopardy!" host Alex Trebek. For this answer, a TV contestant supplied the correct question: "What is a dog (canine)?"

Trebek then offered an explanation: "The birds were named after the islands."

Actually, it was Harry Eisenberg who had put that extra information on the bottom of Trebek's question and answer card.

Eisenberg, 38, who used to be a college history instructor, writes questions and answers for "Jeopardy!"

He isn't embarrassed at all by his mid-life job change.

"I'm proud to be associated with 'Jeopardy!' In a way, the show encourages learning. It's not what (former FCC chairman) Newton Minnow had in mind when he called television a vast wasteland."

Each day in his cramped Hollywood office, Eisenberg, assisted by three other writers, has to think up 74 questions and answers for the nationally syndicated game show. During the 39 weeks each year that the show airs, Harry and his colleagues create 14,000 questions and answers.

"That's the equivalent of two entire Trivial Pursuit games a year," says Jules Minton, the show's head writer and a former fifth-grade teacher.

On "Jeopardy!" contestants win money when they provide the right questions to the answers Trebek reads. I, for example, won $12,000 on the show that was scheduled to be telecast on April 28.

I had gone through the normal contestant selection process just like anybody else. What I learned by going on the show myself was fascinating, so I nighttime soap of the same time. Conceding defeat, Trebek motions to a reporter and says, "Now he's gonna write. 'Alex caves in to his writers.'"

Answer: Alex Trebek
Question: Who hosts "Jeopardy!"?

Eisenberg, a single parent with two small children, taught history at a community college until the teacher he had temporarily replaced returned from sabbatical. He then turned to writing photocopiers, which paid better than his current TV job. Just how much better Eisenberg declines to say, but another "Jeopardy!" employee says writers earn between $500 to $650 a week — not a princely sum by television standards.

Eisenberg shares his tiny office with comedy writer Scott Rubin, who is currently working on a gag version of "Jeopardy!" Looking at a picture gallery of U.S. presidents, Rubin marvels, "There are a lot more presidents with beards than I thought."

Rubin is trying to come up with a funny question and answer about hairy chief executives. Immediately addressing the problem, Eisenberg points out that all bearded presidents were Republicans. All Democrats were clean-shaven except Grover Cleveland, who had a walrus mustache.

The host of "Jeopardy!" 45-year-old Trebek, holds a degree in philosophy from the University of Toronto.

"We're lucky that Alex is bright," Eisenberg says. "Most hosts just take what they're given. Alex shows what he's reading on the air."

But today, Trebek isn't taking what Harry has given him. Trebek wants Harry to change the word "dynasty" to "family" in a question about the Hapsburgs because Trebek thinks "dynasty" is too obscure a word. Eisenberg reminds Trebek about the popular

He got his job by attending a seminar on the TV industry. One of the panelists mentioned that "Jeopardy!" (which had been off the air since 1978) was about to be revived by Merv Griffin Productions.

Eisenberg auditioned for the show by writing a sample gameboard. Later, he learned the sample question that impressed the producers enough to give him the job. Answer: Prostitutes earned their nickname from this Civil War general, who believed they raised his troops' morale. Question: Who was Gen. Joseph Hooker?

"Basically, we all got the job on how well we could write, not on how many degrees we had," Eisenberg says.

Although admitting he doesn't want to write game shows for the rest of his life, Eisenberg says he loves his job. But he hates checking computer printouts to make sure the writers aren't repeating the same categories too often.

It's a thankless — and bizarre — task.

"Just last week I caught five questions on Pakistan," says Eisenberg. ■

Pat Metheny boosts videos

By Ethlie Ann Vare

When avant-garde jazz guitarist Pat Metheny hosted VH-1's "New Visions" program, he also got to pick which videos would be played on the music cable's latest adult-oriented segment.

It was, he discovered, easier said than done.

"The main problem is that there's not that much to choose from," says Metheny, 31, a three-time Grammy Award winner. "Of all the artists I like, virtually none have video product available."

"I had to go through the 100 or so videos that are available in the jazz category — or whatever category this is that we're talking about — and pick out the stuff that came closest."

Metheny ended up using videos by artists ranging from Miles Davis to Kate Bush, Philip Glass to Art of Noise.

"New Visions," a recent addition to MTV's "older sister" station, serves as one of the new outlets for what's become known as New Age Music, a category that includes Metheny himself as well as groups like Tangerine Dream and Shadowfax. These artists make few videos, only partly because there has been, in the past, no place to show them.

Ethlie Ann Vare tunes into rock for Newspaper Enterprise Association.

Video Beat

"If you're a pop artist who sells billions of records," says Metheny, hyperbolically, "The amount of money it takes to make a video is kind of a drop in the bucket. But for an artist like myself, the cost of making a video is usually more than the cost of making the whole record. It's a difficult decision: Make a video of one tune on your new record, or go and make another record."

Metheny has made 14 albums and two videos. He also did the

As an instrumental artist, he never has to structure his own videos with plots taken from the song.

"Instrumental music is a different kind of a challenge," he says. "There isn't a story line that has to be followed in such a strong way. That frees up the director creatively, but makes it harder in another way, since he's got to come up with all the good parts." The right director is vital to Metheny, because, he says, "each artist has to ask himself how much talent he has personally for the visual medium. In my case, I have none whatsoever."

Although video and jazz-fusion may not be the ideal marriage, for a number of logistical reasons, Metheny still feels it's important that someone within his field continues to go out there and give it the old college try.

He's grateful to VH-1 for providing three hours a week in which the product can be seen.

"I feel it's absolutely essential that there be a forum for the artists that don't fit into the MTV format — and that's virtually everyone," he laughs. "Really, with the exception of perhaps 40 acts — really more like 15 or 20 acts — the entire market is not MTV material. And there are a bunch of people out there who are looking for something other than heavy metal." ■

Frampton coming back with a new album

By Larry McShane

NEW YORK — Peter Frampton, who dropped out of sight and mind 10 years ago after doing the biggest-selling live concert album ever recorded, has returned with a "Premonition."

It is his first album in four years, and could once again propel the golden haired pop star to the stage success he once knew.

now to what happened after the live album," says Frampton, his long blond hair and boyish looks intact as his 36th birthday approaches. "It's very easy with hindsight to look back and say, 'Oh well now, shouldn't have done that, eh Pete?'"

The mistakes included a misguided revamping of Frampton's image from rock 'n' roll guitarist to teen idol, incessant touring that burned out and overexposed him and a starring role in a disastrous film version of "Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band."

"All of a sudden I went from No. 1 to nowhere, 'cause my credibility was gone," Frampton said in an interview. His double-album, "Frampton Comes Alive!" has sold 10 million copies since it was first released in 1976.

The Kent, England, native had been working since he was 12, when he made his first recording. Frampton was quickly hailed as a guitar virtuoso, making his mark with "The Heart" and then with Humble Pie before embarking on a solo career in 1972.

After four somewhat successful solo records and subsequent blistering tour performances, he became the proverbial overnight sensation with the live album.

"I was in the middle of a whirlwind," he recalled. "It was almost like at one point the press couldn't get enough of me, and then the public had too much of

NBC wins the week

NEW YORK (AP) — The first fight of the May sweeps was a split decision. The television audience was fairly evenly divided for the major Sunday night movie match-up, and each network could claim it won something.

The first part of ABC's $25 million, 12-hour "North & South, Book II" was the top-rated performer of the Sunday blockbusters, ranking 10th for the week.

The first installment of NBC's four-hour "Deliberate Stranger" finished second for the night and 17th for the week, but improved on a poor lead-in from 42nd-ranked "Alfred Hitchcock Presents." The performance was good enough to keep NBC in front for the week of April 28 to May 4, as the top-rated network ended a two-week drought and topped the A.C. Nielsen ratings again.

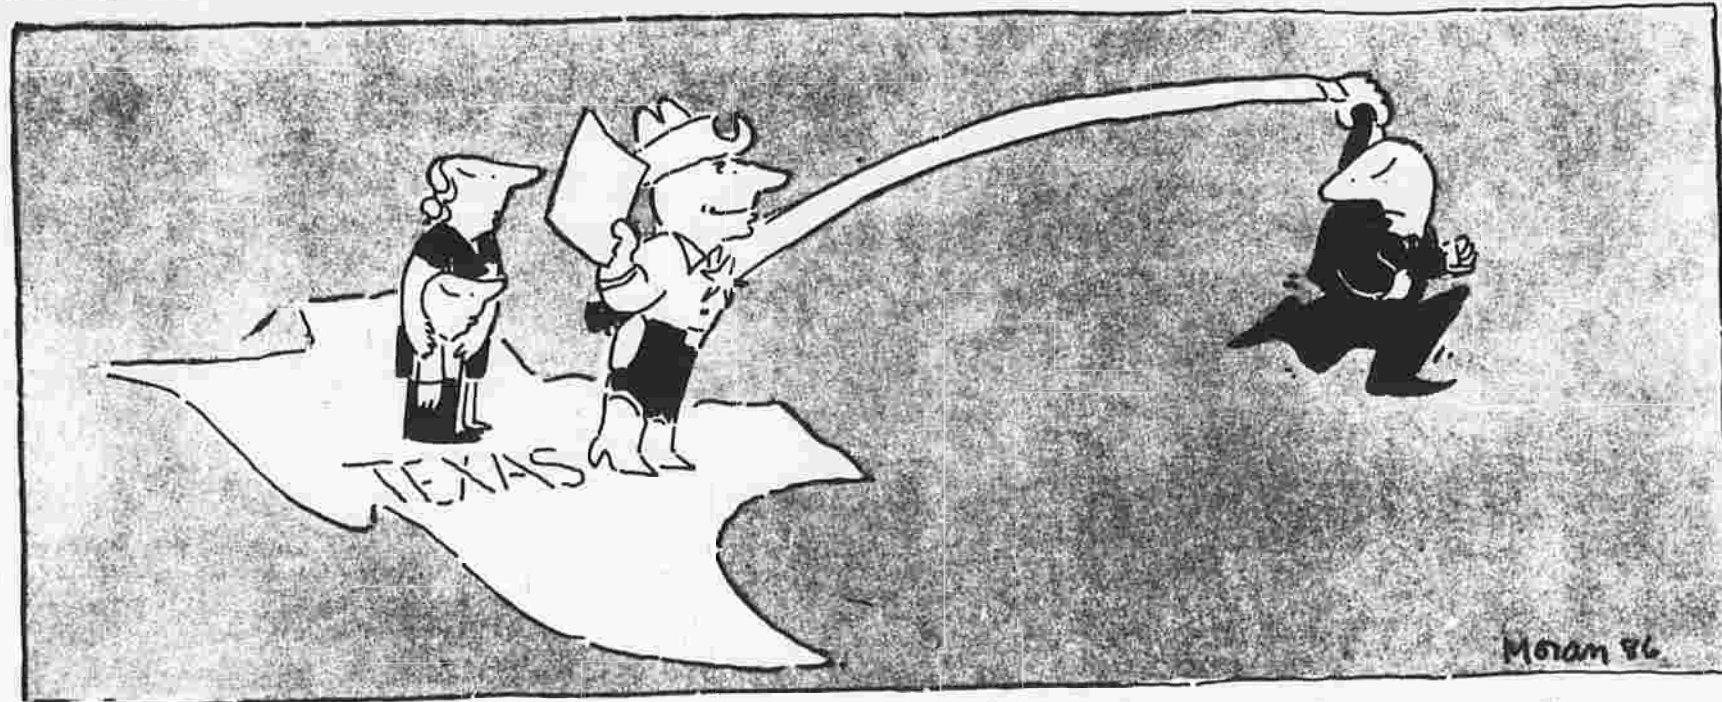

CBS' two-hour film, "Vanishing Act," ranked 20th for the week, but CBS was easily top-rated for Sunday night because of its earlier Top 10 shows, "60 Minutes" and "Murder, She Wrote."

It was one of those cases in which everybody got a piece of the viewing," said Mike Eisenberg, CBS' research director.

According to Nielsen figures released Tuesday, NBC, which had finished third the previous two weeks, won with a 15.4 rating and ABC had a 13.2. A rating measures the percentage of the nation's 85.9 million homes with television. A share measures the percentage of sets in use that are tuned to a broadcast.

A repeat of NBC's "The Cosby Show" ranked first with a 29.5 rating.

Texas is hunting deadbeat dads

There's a new class of criminal on the wanted list

By Susan Crain Bakos

The long arm of the law is a little longer in Texas these days than it is in most states. You needn't have watched many cowboy movies at the Saturday matinee to know the Texas cowboy usually gets his man. Well, Texas has a new class of criminal on its most-wanted lists now: deadbeat dads, non-custodial parents (99 of 100 are fathers) who are in arrears in their court-ordered support payments.

And a new breed of Texas ranger is after them: Attorney General Jim Mattox has organized Child Support Enforcement Units to 1) establish a child-support obligation, 2) enforce that obligation, 3) locate a non-custodial parent and 4) establish paternity. Mattox terms non-support "a form of child abuse," and child abusers find no sanctuary in Texas.

The published lists of delinquent dads (including birthdates, last known addresses, ages of children and amounts owed) are only one phase of this on-going enforcement program which has been hailed as a model for the nation by women's groups, child advocacy organizations and members of the press.

The posters pushing the

program are certainly effective too: "Child support. You owe it to your children," one caption reads above the photo of two kids, one girl, one boy, that typical American family, now split asunder. And in a childish scrawl beneath the picture, "Please pay."

The poster kids, of course, are models. But the real people in the real stories are far more dramatic. It's hard to listen to them without being sad and angry, and finally happy that something is being done.

Jean Ryan, at last a happy woman, has one piece of advice for the downtrodden, especially custodial parents who aren't receiving court-awarded support: Don't give up.

After 22 court dates in a case which had been continued (postponed) for two and a half years, she has finally received a child-support check. Her three children are teen-agers who haven't heard from their father in 10 years. Now thanks to the program Mattox spearheaded, they can eat meat ("and by meat, we mean tuna or chicken") more than one night a week.

Ryan's story reads like a script for a TV movie. I listened to the details recited first by agency staffers and then by Ryan and wondered how anyone could have endured to the last scene.

Following her divorce eight and a half years ago, she was awarded child support by the court. Her ex-husband paid that support for a year and half, though he didn't visit his children. Then the payments abruptly stopped. "And we lost track of him altogether."

Ryan had no money to hire a lawyer, and she soon found the legal services available for women in her position were limited. Everyone was sympathetic; no one could help. She thought her ex had fled the state, but she didn't know.

"And I certainly couldn't afford to hire detectives so I would have accurate information on his whereabouts to give a lawyer."

For the next several years, Jean Ryan and her kids did what most abandoned one-parent families do: They barely scraped by. For one six-month period they didn't have a car because she couldn't afford to have needed repairs made on their old clunker.

In February of '83, Ryan, who works for the Texas Department of Human Services, turned to the attorney general's office for help. The state's Child Support Enforcement Program had just been moved from a social welfare agency to an enforcement agency. And a friend told Ryan that Jim Mattox meant to make Texas, once a haven for non-paying fathers, the toughest state in the country on deadbeat dads.

The agency located Ryan's ex-husband fairly quickly. He had been in Kuwait for several years. He was in New York City, where they filed in May '83.

But in New York her ex hired the one lawyer any good script writer would pit against Mattox in that TV movie: Sidney Siller, the founder of the National Organization for Men and a man who believes women seeking child support are "man-eating tigresses, grabbers." Siller managed to stall for two and a half years, during which time most women would have given up or run out of money on their own.

Ryan says, "I was harassed with interrogatories. One was 92 pages long. Another required detailed information on the last 10 years of my life, including information on business travel, where I stayed, what I spent, etc. If it hadn't been for the attorney general's office and the support they gave me, not only financially but emotionally, I would have given up."

"The day after the hurricane swept through Long Island in October '85, David Ferris (an agency staff member) flew to New York. He finally succeeded in getting a prosecutor to push our case through."

"We learned that the prosecutor's office had kept transferring my case to a new employee who was unaware of how long it had been continued each time — and who was intimidated by my ex-husband's lawyer. The day we got into court, there was no electricity, but they kept the doors open and held the hearing anyway.

"And I was awarded support retroactive to May '83. I got my first check in February '86. Now we have to go back to the support before May '83."

Ryan's case is but one of the 200,000-plus handled by the agency since '83. Collections of delinquent support went up over 80 percent for the first year and are expected to go up another 50 percent this year when computer automation speeds the processing. But few of these cases are as dramatic as Ryan's.

It's ironic that she and her former spouse who haven't communicated in 10 years would be represented by, on her side, the nation's leading champion of child support, and on his side, its most outspoken critic. Sidney Siller tells men, "The key to avoiding involvement in child-support payments is not getting married in the first place, unless one has an iron-clad prenuptial agreement."

Siller's viewpoint aside, non-payment of child support is a national disgrace. And the issue is far bigger than the principles in Texas's, if not the nation's, most flamboyant support enforcement case. The publicity surrounding this case, however, has helped re-focus national attention on the problem — and on Texas's unique solution.

Of the five million families awarded support each year, fewer than half received the full amount, an amount which is seldom enough for the custodial parent to provide adequate care for the children anyway. (One Texas mother was awarded $65 a month for her 18-month-old child — and has trouble collecting that from the father, an oil rigger.)

In 99 percent of the cases, the custodial parent is the mother. Women still earn less than men in the workplace. Thus the mother's standard of living — and her children's also — plummets an average of 40 percent with divorce.

Non-support is estimated at a $3.8 billion a year national problem. Yet it has been regarded as a woman's issue because women nearly always have the kids.

Jim Mattox insists, "It isn't a woman's issue. It's a human rights issue. It's everyone's issue. The children are suffering. If we say only women are responsible for supporting them, we are dead wrong."

Mattox helped his divorced mother raise a younger brother and sister. He knows first-hand the deprivation that a fatherless family experiences, and he is determined to lessen that deprivation for Texas children. He insists the issue is clear-cut: There is only one side: the children's.

Twenty-nine Child Support Enforcement Units throughout the state handled the delinquent cases. Any custodial parent who has a court order ordering the non-custodial parent to pay support and can show delinquency is eligible for help.

If the custodial parent is receiving Aid to Dependent Children, the state can step in when the parent is at least $150 and three months behind. For parents not on public assistance, support must be $500 in arrears. The difference in delinquency is the only difference in the way cases are handled.

To get help, custodial parents must:

- Submit the court order and situation of delinquency.

- Submit a copy of the divorce decree and previous payment record.

- Submit and a completed application plus a one-time $20 processing fee to the attorney general's office. (The fee is waived for families on welfare.)

- Then they must sign a contract agreeing to let the attorney general's office handle the case, including collection of payment.

Because of the tremendous media coverage of the program, some parents begin paying as soon as they are informed by mail that the attorney general's office is now the payee.

"If we can find him, that order goes out within a month of application for assistance," says an agency spokesperson. "For many Texas mothers, the first check arrives within eight weeks of filing."

The names on a recent and typical deadbeat dad list ranged from a father of a 5-year-old behind $1,300 to a father of an 8-year-old who was $12,400 in arrears. Some of the amounts, one for $617, for example, don't sound enormous — a mere drop in the bucket of the nation's unpaid child support. But to women like Anne (name changed), the $315 check she received, her first in six years, makes a difference.

"I got that check in September; and for the first time since my 10-year-old began school, I could buy everything on the school-supplies list. He even got a pair of Nikes."

The names roll on. Each one, each amount listed, represents a one-parent family where the kids are missing something which money could buy. Because the names are published, the situations are changing.

Changes in Texas state laws in the past few years, specifically wage garnishment laws, have made collecting from those listed fathers easier.

Effective January 1, 1984, the state constitution was amended to allow wage garnishments. A father no longer had to be behind in payments. And any custodial parent could apply for garnishment as a collection method. Since then, more than 12,000 garnishments have been ordered. ■

... and lose weight

By Dianne-Jo Moore

Ray, the therapist at the Gestalt Fatness Workshop, recommended that I concentrate on my food without any distractions. I was not to read a newspaper or a magazine or to listen to television or the radio when I ate. "Set aside one meal a day to eat in solitude and really learn how to eat," he said. "Give your food a voice and hear what it might be saying."

The next day I stared at the chicken dinner on my plate. I liked to read during my meals and experienced extreme discomfort and anxiety, giving all my attention to my food. "This is absolutely ridiculous," I scoffed. "Talking to my food has to be as loony as overeating." But then I remembered the counselor's warning: "You may encounter severe resistance to this experiment. Many obese individuals use food to push down uncomfortable feelings. Pay attention to that resistance and discover what type of relationship you have with food."

I gathered up my courage and gave my meal a voice. "You don't want to pay attention to me," the chicken dinner said. "You don't care enough to give me 10 minutes of your time. You just want to use me to make yourself feel better."

Tears welled in my eyes, then I broke into gasping sobs. That had been one of my deepest pains during childhood — that no one seemed to care enough about me to give me 10 minutes of their time, especially my father. And when he did pay attention to me, it was only to alleviate his own loneliness. As an adult, I used food gluttonously to keep that pain sedated. By talking to my food, I had learned priceless insight about my overeating problem.

The statistics show that almost 80 million Americans are significantly overweight, that 52 million are either dieting or contemplating a diet, and that 90 to a staggering 98 percent of all dieters gain back the weight they lose, plus more.

"Diets don't fail in terms of taking weight off," explains Terry Hager, executive director at Community Counseling and Personal Growth Ministry in Grand Rapids, Mich., "but in keeping the weight off, they're notorious failures."

Susie Orbach, a psychotherapist specializing in the treatment of compulsive eating, concurs. In her book, "Fat Is a Feminist Issue II," she says: "Diets turn normal eaters into people who are afraid of food."

Fear of food can actually trigger compulsive eating. When we view food as a powerful demon that must be avoided at all cost rather than a necessary and pleasurable subsistence to nourish us, feelings of deprivation eventually overwhelm us.

Within time we feel unhappy, eat the hot fudge sundae, feel guilty, impose a period of self-denial, such as a diet or fasting regimen, which only leads to more feelings of deprivation and another eating binge. The vicious cycle is repeated time and time again, leaving us feeling like failures.

A more successful approach to the weight-loss dilemma is to stop dieting, listen to the internal cues of our mind and body, and eventually become good friends with food.

For example, Marlene Boskind-Lodahl, then a gestalt therapist in Ithaca, N.Y., and her colleague Joyce Sirlin, used this approach at Cornell University with a group of bulimics — persons who consume vast amounts of food (from 1,000 to 55,000 calories) within a short period of time (from one to two hours), then purge this food from their bodies with self-induced vomiting, laxatives, diuretics or enemas. One bulimic in the group gave her food a voice and described her situation in this way: "I'm your food, and I'm going into you now, stuffing you, making you disgustingly fat. I'm your shame, and I'm making you untouchable. No one will ever touch you. That's what you want, that no one will touch you."

Talking and listening to our food, says Orbach, allows us "to trust that there is a voice, a part of yourself that can inform you about what you want emotionally and what you want from the food."

Experts who use this listening approach agree that many obese people swallow down intolerable feelings and events without chewing, critiquing or evaluating them. In other words, we experience difficulty being aggressive, and we may use food as a symbolic way of biting off someone's head or destroying an idea that isn't really ours.

When we eat with awareness, we can understand our unwanted emotions, express them and then say goodbye to them. We no longer need to abuse food to stuff down our pain.

Another characteristic of many overweight people is that we tend to approach food in the same way we confront or deal with life. Hager gives an example: "By acting as if my food were a person who could speak to me, I might suddenly find myself saying, 'I'll be really nice to you. You can't depend on those folks out there. You've had a hard day, and I'm going to comfort you.'"

"By dialoguing with our food," he continues, "we discover that the primary issues are how we get comfort, how we get it from others and how we need to give it ourselves in more healthy ways if we're going to change the way we deal with food."

When we decide to use this awareness approach to weight loss, we must first be willing to do two very important things: accept our fatness and give ourselves permission to eat — scary ideas, indeed, if for a lifetime we've been trying to rigidly control ourselves with a diet.

For instance, when I attended the fatness workshop, the first thing the counselor told the group was, "You must accept yourself fat before you will be thin." Then he asked all of us to admit, "I want to be fat because I am."

At first I was appalled. For 30 years I had struggled to be thin, and every thought and muscle in my mind and body rejected his suggestion. In time I understood how wonderful it was to allow myself to be me.

Hager explains this concept more fully. "Change happens paradoxically," he says. "We change not by trying to be something different, but we change by being more fully who we already are."

This explains why diets are such miserable failures. We put the cart before the horse, so to speak. We try to change our bodies without fully understanding why we initially gained weight.

"Change for me is like a New Year's resolution," Hager continues. "One or two days, if I'm lucky. We're looking for a deeper kind of change which starts with accepting ourselves. When we try not to change, when we accept ourselves, change emerges."

For instance, I always thought that when I lost weight, I would like myself. Ironically, when I allowed myself to be fat, I stopped hating myself.

Another barrier which may be equally hard to break is to allow ourselves any food at any time without guilt. "The aim of this approach," Orbach directs, "is to encourage guilt-free eating so that you can really listen to what your body is wanting and give it the right kind and amount of food."

Due to our national obsession for thinness, guilt-free eating is difficult to achieve. Few of us have the courage to admit we want to overeat, that we even enjoy eating. The media bombards us with the belief that thin equals normalcy equals happy-ever-after.

Food fears trigger compulsive eating

shows that from 1959 to 1978 the "ideal" weight for Miss America winners and contestants and for magazine centerfolds dropped consistently over the 20 years. In addition, magazine articles on dieting skyrocketed during the same period.

What's more, one researcher found that Elizabeth Taylor's popularity has plummeted since 1970 due to her increase in weight, whereas in 1976 Twiggy was voted the most beautiful woman in the world. And in 1980, it was reported that the winner of the Miss America contest, Cheryl Prewitt, put herself through a "grueling regimen" of physical fitness in order to maintain her size and shape.

Kim Chernin, author of "The Obsession," calls the demand for excessive thinness the "tyranny of slenderness." In her own struggle with the fat-thin syndrome, she says, "Whenever I was in conflict with food, what I needed was permission to eat."

She further explains that when she gave herself that permission, she became friends with food and the "terrible conflict abated and with it the sense of insatiable hunger."

These subtle and not-so-subtle messages to be thin must be rejected if we ever hope to liberate ourselves from guilt-ridden, diet-conscious attitudes and tune in to our own needs.

During the 1970s a popular theory was that fat people eat in response to external cues such as sight, smell, taste and availability of food. Thin people, on the other hand, eat in response to internal cues — hunger for food triggered by the contractions of the stomach and the glucose level of the blood.

This theory was called the "externality" hypothesis and was based on the fact that we're all equipped with an inborn mechanism, the hypothalamus, which is located at the base of the brain and regulates the appetite. The idea was that thin people experience no difficulty sensing the internal cues of the hypothalamus, but fat people are insensitive to the workings of the gland.

But further investigative studies didn't hold up. Some overweight people may walk past a bakery and not be tempted. Some thin people smell the aroma of freshly baked cinnamon rolls and enter the store to buy and eat.

A more current view which explains the difference in individual body sizes is a theory called set point. It goes something like this: Our body has a set weight at which it functions best, and no amount of forced dieting will change our natural weight for any permanent length of time. When we attempt to force our bodies to function below set point, the brain signals intense hunger cues much like a starving person experiences. Overeating may take place in an attempt to bring our body back to its natural weight.

According to the theory, set point also explains why underweight people have difficulty gaining weight. "If this research is reliable," says Hager, "we may force ourselves to take off the pounds, but we'll put the weight back on again if we don't deal with the weight our body wants to be at."

Orbach explains that we can understand how much food our body wants and needs when we hear it say one word — "Enough."

Now we know what to do. We accept ourselves fat, we give ourselves permission to eat, we dialogue with our food and we listen to the messages of our mind and body. But how do we make a transition from insight to change? How do we listen to our food and lose weight? The answer is, we don't try to be slender. We merely let weight loss happen. Each time we want to eat, we allow ourselves to do so without self-reproach. We pay attention to the entire eating process and tune in to our hunger and non-hunger sensations. We think of each eating episode as an opportunity to learn about ourselves and our relationship to food.

For many of us, fatness is a defense — behavior that guards us from real or imagined vulnerabilities. But as the experts point out, when we're busy defending ourselves, we're also busy ignoring life. Dialoguing with our food enables us to contact those internal messages and become more fully aware of our emotional and physical hungers.

What I learned time and time again is that my defenses were outdated. They were childhood fears from the past no longer appropriate for the adult world. I do, in fact, have several friends in my life who are happy to give me much more than 10 minutes of their time.

"When you're willing to take an honest look at yourself," says Christina Urbanik, a counselor in Pleasanton, Calif., "you'll find the things you were scared of don't exist."

How to pick the number one newspaper in a multiple paper town.

In a town like Manchester, you might as well start with readership. In a most recent survey conducted by First Market Research of Boston, the Manchester Herald holds the overall local readership lead. According to the study, the Manchester Herald is the leader for local news, local happenings and local sports, with three quarters of the readers saying the coverage is the most extensive.

Next, the number one newspaper should provide readers with a depth of information needed to make valued and reasonable decisions regarding key local issues that may impact on their lives today, or in the future. Well that same study shows that the Manchester Herald is rated quite highly in terms of space devoted to selected issues in its Opinion pages. Nearly eight in ten readers find that the space devoted to viewpoints on local issues to be more than sufficient in explaining the issues.

The number one newspaper should also provide a service to its subscribers. The Manchester Herald is found to be a good community newspaper by over nine in ten readers, with over one third rating it as very good. The Manchester Herald is also a very effective advertising tool for reaching the Manchester Area public and it is preferred over most other forms of printed advertising.

Caring about its readers should also be a priority with the number one newspaper. The Manchester Herald feels it is their responsibility to listen to what residents in Manchester have to say. They want to hear about readers views on the news — what they think is important, what should go into the paper and what shouldn't. They're especially interested in hearing any comments you may have about the service you get from the Herald. They guarantee prompt delivery and courteous, efficient service on all billing matters. If you're not satisfied, they want to know about it.

If you're still trying to figure out which is the number one newspaper in Manchester, the facts are obvious. Your choice will be the same paper more and more readers in Manchester choose every day. The Manchester Herald — your voice in Manchester.

By Geraldine R. Foty

Anna Jarvis, an unmarried school teacher from West Virginia, started it all. She was 41 when she began a crusade to establish Mother's Day. In 1914 Woodrow Wilson signed the proclamation that the second Sunday in May — the anniversary of the death of Anna's mother — should be observed as a special day for mothers.

Since then, the day has become a time for cheer and despair. Anna led the complaints herself. "They're commercializing my Mother's Day," she wrote in hundreds of newspapers. Later she told a reporter she was sorry she had started the whole thing.

Abigail Van Buren, writer of the "Dear Abby" column, once wrote, "Mother's Day is a day of gladness to most mothers, but not for all. I should know. For weeks following Mother's Day, my desk is covered with tear-stained letters of mothers who have been snubbed, slighted or forgotten."

The relationship between mother and child has always been special. According to a Jewish proverb, "A mother understands what a child does not say."

well-known persons on their mothers.

Thomas Edison: "My mother was the making of me. She was so true and so sure of me, I felt that I had someone to live for— someone I must not disappoint. The memory of my mother will always be a blessing to me."

Ralph Waldo Emerson: "Men are what their mothers make them."

Joe Namath: "She prays to two saints, one when we've got the ball, and one when the other team's got the ball. She's the only person I know who has an offensive and a defensive saint."

Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, about her mother-in-law, Rose Kennedy: "She just bent over backwards not to interfere. I loved her very much. And I do now."

John F. Kennedy: "She was the glue that held us together."

Mario Puzo, writer: "I had every desire to go wrong, but I never had a chance. The Italian family structure was too formidable. I never came home to an empty house. There was always the smell of supper cooking, and my mother was there to greet me."

Cloris Leachman, Academy Award-winning actress: "She was a magician, a witch. She could make something out of nothing."

Edward W. Brooke, former senator from Massachusetts: "I have never been a hater. I think it is because my mother never hated anyone."

The Duke of Windsor, speaking about the sadness of his long exile after abdicating the British throne: "My mother was the only person I missed."

Edna St. Vincent Millay: "Mother, do you know, almost all people love their mothers, but I have never met anybody in my life, I think, who loved his mother as much as I love you."

Liberace: "There are so many things about my mother that I hold precious. I could probably write a whole book about her. And I just feel terrible sometimes that my appreciation of her as a lovable and very special person has been ridiculed."

Sigmund Freud: "A man who has been the indisputable favorite of his mother keeps for life the feelings of a conqueror, that confidence of success which frequently induces real success."

Woodrow Wilson, when his mother died: "My mother was a mother to me in the fullest, sweetest sense of the word, and her loss has left me with a sad, oppressed sense of having somehow suddenly lost my youth. I feel old and responsibility-ridden."

James Whistler, when the famous portrait of his mother was complimented: "Yes, one does like to make one's mummy just as nice as possible."

Marc Chagall: "My mother's love for me was so great that I have worked hard to justify it."

But not all the comments and myths about mothers are pleasant. Now for some "bitter" ones.

Martin Luther: "If a woman grows weary and at last dies from childbearing, it matters not. Let her only die from bearing; she is there to do it."

Paul Erlich, a population expert: "The Mother of the Year should be a sterilized woman with two adopted children."

Philip Wylie, author of "Generation of Vipers," 1942: "Mom is a jerk." Later he said he was describing only the "destroying mothers, about one in 10," but the word "Mom" has never been the same since; sometimes her pedestal wobbles.

Eleanor Roosevelt, about her dominating mother-in-law, Sara Delano Roosevelt: "It is dreadful to have lived so close to someone for 36 years and feel no deep affection or sense of loss."

Judy Garland: "My mother was the stage mother of all time. She really was a witch. If I had a stomach ache and didn't want to go on, she'd say, 'Get out on that stage or I'll wrap you around a bedpost.'"

Then there are comments about and by "other mothers," the substitute or surrogate mothers.

Patsy Gray, a 9-year-old essayist: "A grandmother doesn't have to do anything except be there....Everybody should try to have one, especially if you don't have television, because grandmas are the only grownups who have got time."

Ed McMahon: "Katie was not only my grandmother, but my friend."

Winston Churchill, whose mother, Jenny, was very busy in the Court social life: "It is a strange thing, the love of these women (nannies). Perhaps it is the only disinterested affection in the world."

Jane Addams, after her settlement house for motherless children was founded: "They all became mine."

Let's give mothers a chance to talk back.

Diana Kind, Barbra Streisand's mother: "I see her at family gatherings mostly. Children think mothers are something to visit."

Gloria Connors, mother of tennis star Jimmy Connors: "I've done nothing for 23 years but work for Jimmy."

Elizabeth Taylor, one of the world's most glamorous grandmothers: "The baby is wonderful. She spit up all over me."

Liv Ullmann: "All my life I have read that a mother should and must be home with her child. My guilt is deep seated....I am afraid I am doing Linn an injustice."

Rose Kennedy: "Whenever they (Jack, Bobby, Teddy) needed it, they got a good old-fashioned spanking."

There is a special relationship that does not fit into the usual slots — that of Mary Martin and her grandson, Matthew. Early one morning he led his friends into her bedroom, saying: "Meet my grandmother, Peter Pan."

For most of us Robert E. Lee expressed our feelings for our mothers when he spoke about his mother-in-law, Mary Custis: "She was to me all that a mother could be, and I yield to none in admiration for her character, love of her virtues and veneration for her memory."

Then there is a Jewish proverb that says it so well: "God couldn't be everywhere, so he made mothers." ■

Raising your car-color consciousness

By Richard Harris

My grandfather's first car was a Model-T Ford, and like all new Model-Ts, it was black. Some habits are hard to break. Grandad continued to drive black cars until the day of his retirement, when he headed for Florida in a new flame-red convertible he called his "freedom machine."

I used to think Grandad was a bit eccentric, but the current "Color Me Beautiful" trend has led me to rethink the question of car colors.

Does the color of your car improve your public image, boost your chances for success and lead to romance and self-fulfillment?

Humorist and fashion-industry iconoclast Carl Franz, author of "Color Me Macho (Or Don't Color Me at All)," thinks not. "I recommend brown," he says. "You'll save a fortune on trips to the carwash."

But expert opinions differ. After searching the "color consultant" listings in the yellow pages, I contacted Sally Ann Cremaillere, who advertises "a brand-new you in just 10 days through the magic of eye shadow," and asked what she thought about car colors. "Well," she responded,

Keeping Your Car Alive

"naturally a car should match the driver's shoes and handbag. So if you're a Pisces you'd drive a pink car, and..."

Finally, I phoned one of the Big Three automakers, where I spoke with someone in customer preference research. "Color can increase a car's marketability," I was told. "A whole staff of experts have devoted a lot of time and effort to predicting next year's favorite car colors."

paint color affects its saleability. And they consult color-trend forecasters in the clothing, home-furnishings and building-products industries in a continuing attempt to keep on top of new color fashions and fads.

Car-color consciousness reached its creative height in 1970, when catchy names for new hues came into vogue. American Motors offered cars in Big Bad Orange, while General Motors countered with Hugger Orange and Panther Pink. But Ford was the winner, hands down, of the cute-colors competition. That company featured shades called Freudian Gilt, Hulla Blue, Bring 'em Back Olive and Anti-Establish Mint. No kidding — you can still buy factory-match touch-up paint in any of these colors.

Today, according to the Automotive Information Council, the most popular colors for new vehicles include light red-brown, white, dark blue and light blue. Silver is also "in" for full-sized and intermediate-sized cars; red is in for compact cars and pickup trucks; and light gray is in for pickup trucks only.

The color of a used car affects its saleability, too. The consulting firm of Runzheimer & Co. Inc. recently completed a used-car preference study and concluded that a car's color can make a difference of up to $300 in its resale price. The favorite used-car colors, according to the study, are beige and bright red.

So if you're considering selling your car and it's one of these colors, you could be in luck! If, on the other hand, you're shopping for a used car, you'll be in a much better bargaining position if you're considering a dark-colored car. Peculiar paint jobs — two tones, polk dots or late '60s-style do-it-yourself spray-paint murals — lower a used car's value even more, as does any paint job that's a different color from the original.

I recently found a deal I couldn't pass up on an old Studebaker that had been painted Pagan Purple. When I showed it to Franz, he said, "Well...um...yeah, it makes you look much slimmer." But Ms. Cremaillere's only comment was "Yuehhh!" As I said, experts differ. ■

Wood chips make diet bread filling

By Sonja Heinze

Our family eats a bread called Less which has only 40 calories per slice. Now we've been told some of the ingredients come from trees. Any truth to this?

A number of breads are on the market which do indeed contain an ingredient made from wood pulp. They're low in calories and supposedly high in fiber, and are named Lite 'N Up, Merita Lite, Roman Light, Lite Loaf, Sunbeam Lite, Less, Vim and 40. They are low in calories because some of the flour has been replaced with cellulose, which passes through the body largely undigested and unabsorbed.

If you're worried about finding shivers of wood in your bread, this won't happen. The wood pulp is boiled and bubbled, repeatedly bleached, treated with caustic agents, extensively washed and dried, then ground into a white, odorless powder.

Whether or not this cellulose additive has the same benefits as the natural food fiber is unknown. According to a Nutrition Action Health Letter put out by the Center for Science in the Public Interest, "Truly natural food fiber is a better bet for the health-conscious consumer than a food scientist's concoction that contains only cellulose."

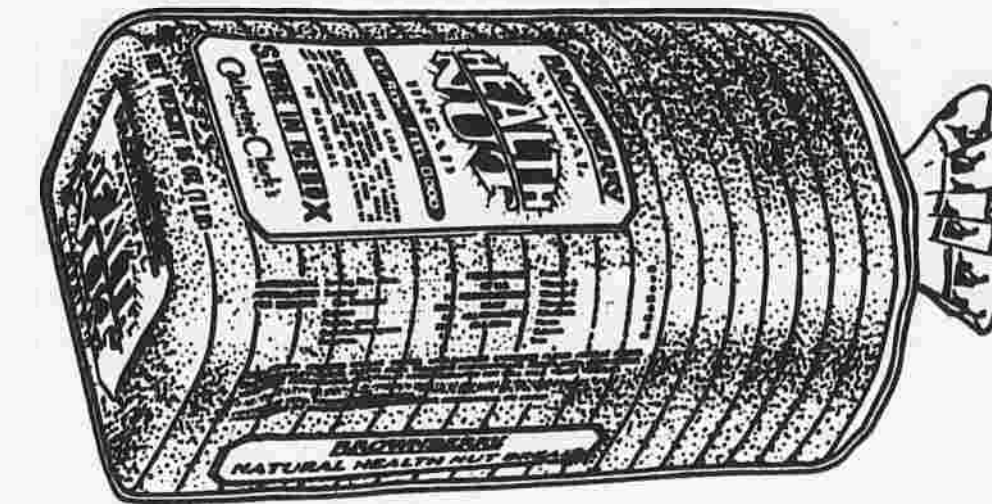

In short, the bread is harmless, filling and sort of like eating enriched sawdust. "When these companies say you're getting 'less,'" says the CSPI Health Letter, "they mean it."

STORING FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

Should fruits and vegetables be stored in the refrigerator in the plastic bags you put them in in the supermarket, or should they be free of any wrapping?

Even after fruits and vegetables have been picked, they are actually still alive — that is, they breathe and consume oxygen. If the product is to be in the refrigerator for any extended period of time and is in a closed plastic bag, it cannot respire. Alcohol builds up in the plant tissue and cell damage results.

Plastic bags are all right for short periods of time because they prevent water loss, but unless you're going to use the product within a day or two, switch it to a paper bag or cellophane wrapping, which allow for air and water passage.

USES FOR BACON FAT? I remember during World War II there was a poster in our butcher shop asking people not to pour bacon fat down the drain but to give it to the butcher for the war effort. I still save bacon fat and have several coffee cans full of it. Any suggestions as to what to do with it?

During the war all fats were in short supply, states Robin Kline, director of consumer affairs of the National Pork Producers Council, and it was recycled and refined for further use as a source of energy. Kline says that the Pork Council still advises not to pour it down the drain, as it would undoubtedly cause problems with the plumbing.

And other than for frying eggs or browning potatoes or onions, Kline doesn't advise using bacon fat for other frying or cooking because of its low smoke point. The fat is also too soft for soap making.

Kline suggests throwing the fat out. If any readers have any worthwhile suggestions for the use of bacon fat, please send them along.

IS BRIE RIND EDIBLE? I never know whether or not to eat the rind of Brie cheese. It has a fake look to it. What is it made of? Also, what causes some Brie to have an ammonia-like smell?

The rind of Brie cheese is edible. It's composed of a mold that develops naturally on the surface of the cheese and is called rind flora. "Pocket Guide to Cheese" by Sandy Carr advises that "cheeses that smell of ammonia are dangerously overripe and should not be eaten."

Brie is at its best when cut from a whole cheese rather than buying it pre-sliced. It begins to lose some of its flavor once it's cut.

Yoplait yogurt advertises that the cultures which are put into their yogurt are imported from France. I know that yogurt cultures are made up of two different types of bacteria, and I was wondering what difference it made where these bacteria came from.

In a brochure sent to me by Kim Dickey, a communications specialist with General Mills, it states that for Yoplait yogurt, the culture is composed of two types of bacteria — Lactobacillus bulgaricus and Streptococcus bulgaricus. In literature published by Dannon yogurt, a competitor, it states that their yogurt culture is composed of the same bacteria.

Although I've never done it, I would think that if I looked at a Lactobacillus bulgaricus under a microscope in Paris it would be identical to a Lactobacillus bulgaricus in Minneapolis.

Kim Dickey states, "There are many varieties of cultures, but at that time (1964) the specific variety used in our recipe was unique to France and not available in the U.S. Today we have the technology and knowledge to grow these cultures ourselves. For this reason, our active cultures are no longer imported from France and we do not state so on the cups." The phrase "imported from France" may not be so stated on the cups, but it is so stated on television commercials. Some years ago Americans got it into their heads that something "imported from France" was superior in some respect. It's advertising hype. And in this specific case, not only is the culture not imported from France, but also even if it were, it wouldn't make any difference.

READERS' FEEDBACK: BLOOD SEEPAGE IN CHICKEN

A reader wrote to this column some time ago expressing revulsion because excessive blood seemed to be oozing out of cooked chicken. She wanted to know if there was a way to soak the chicken beforehand to prevent this. Steve Pretanik of the National Broiler Council responded. Claiming this problem has "always been with us," he suggested soaking deboned pieces of chicken in a brine solution to draw the blood out. What follows are some readers' comments:

Melba Smith, Modesto, Calif.: "I disagree with the answer given for blood remaining in chicken. It has been just in the last few years that this problem has been occurring. I'm 66 years old and have never seen chicken like this before. I agree with the woman who wrote to say she was raised on a farm and never had this problem. It makes me sick!"

Ethel Jones, Colorado Springs, Colo.: "I'm 74 years old, raised and lived on a farm, fried chicken thousands of times. Now I can't fry or bake chicken so I can enjoy it. After cooking it, blood seeps out and sickens me to death. I can't tolerate looking at it. When I eat out, I avoid chicken like the plague because I'm fearful of the blood that is lurking under all the goop they put on it. The doctor has ordered me to eat chicken instead of other meats. Please help me."

Tom Foster, the president of Foster Farms, says, "Many factors in the raising and processing of poultry may contribute to the incidence of excessive blood or bruising. There is some difficulty in detecting certain internal bruises and bloody areas in whole body fryers. Only when birds are cut up does the problem become evident." When these problem areas are able to be detected, they are graded out, he says.

The problem expressed by readers, however, is not so much "bruise spots" but rather blood seepage from the joints, which suggests improper bleeding. Experienced farm women are saying this is a recent problem, not like the old days when chickens were raised quietly and naturally. Today, however, it's a frantic production line where they can't seem to get the chicken parts on the truck fast enough.

Although I'm personally not bothered by this seepage, I would suggest that anyone who is should buy kosher poultry if possible. If nothing else, these chickens are thoroughly bled. Other suggestions for this problem would be most welcome. ■

Apples: new ideas for an old favorite

Thousands of varieties of this fruit have graced our tables

By Bonnie Mandoe

People love apples. For over 2,000 years they were the world's favorite fruit, only recently overtaken in America by the orange. Apples have been with us for millennia. Their charred remains have been found in early dwellings dating back far beyond Biblical times to the prehistoric era. The form of the apple has also been discovered carved in ancient stone.

Thousands of varieties of apples have come and gone in the apple's long history, but only about 40 varieties are grown commercially today. The number of varieties continues to decline as larger and larger scale agriculture takes hold.

Fortunately, apples are grown in more than 35 of the 50 states, and home gardeners continue to enjoy the goodness of a wide variety of apple types.

What new can be done with apples? Well, I'm glad you asked. Read through the recipes below to see how they can tart up a soup, sweeten up a cake and even substitute for whipped cream. For a simply addictive treat, try cutting a crisp, sweet apple into wedges, then smearing the wedges with peanut butter. It's an unbeatable combination.

Children love this. Served with toast or crackers, it makes a hearty lunch or light supper.

CHEDDAR APPLE SALAD

4 cups diced red apples
4 tablespoons lemon juice
1 cup diced celery
1 cup coarsely grated Cheddar cheese
3/4 cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon Dijon-type mustard
1 tablespoon milk
1/4-1/2 cup chopped nuts (pecans are good)

Toss apples with lemon juice in a large bowl and add celery and cheese. For dressing, combine mayonnaise, mustard and milk. Mix salad ingredients with dressing and place individual servings atop lettuce leaves for serving.

SQUASH AND APPLE SOUP

1 pound butternut squash,

peeled and chopped (banana squash, acorn squash or pumpkin may be substituted)

2 green apples, peeled, cored and chopped
1 onion, chopped
6 cups stock or bouillon
1 teaspoon salt (or less to taste)

1/4 teaspoon each rosemary and basil
1/4 teaspoon each nutmeg and pepper
1/2 cup cooked brown rice
1/4 cup cream
toasted, chopped hazelnuts

Simmer together, covered, the squash, apples, onion, bouillon and seasonings. When the squash is tender, cool briefly, then blenderize the soup. Return the smooth mixture to the soup pot and add rice and cream. Stir well and heat thoroughly. Serve garnished with the nuts.

A simple recipe with simply marvelous results.

APPLE CRISP

4 cups thinly sliced apples
1/2 cup water
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 cup fruit sugar (fructose) or 1 cup sugar
1/2 cup butter
1/2 cup whole-wheat pastry flour whipped cream (or Whipped Apple Cream)

Place the sliced apples and the water in a buttered dish. Sprinkle with cinnamon. Separately, combine the sugar, butter and flour. When the mixture resembles coarse bread crumbs, sprinkle it over the apples. Bake about 60 minutes, until apples are tender, at 350F. Serve with whipped cream. Serves 4-6.

For a truly delicious pie made without wheat or sugar, try this infallible recipe. The crust works well with fillings besides apple, too. (For quiche crust, use thyme leaves instead of cinnamon.)

SUGARLESS APPLE PIE IN SPICED OAT PIECRUST

Crust
1 1/2 cups "quick" oats
1/2 cup brown rice flour (toast rice; blenderize until pulverized)
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup cold oil
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 egg

Honey Apple Cake combines chopped walnuts, cinnamon and apples.

2 tablespoons apple juice concentrate
2 tablespoons ground walnuts

Combine oats, flour, salt, oil and cinnamon. Add egg and a bit of the apple juice concentrate. Mix well, gently, and as soon as the dough can hold together, stop adding liquid. Press dough into a 9-inch pie pan with your fingers. Bake 10 minutes at 350F.

Filling

3 1/2 pounds apples
1 cup apple cider
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons arrowroot or cornstarch
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1/2 tablespoon honey

1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
dash nutmeg

Core the apples and peel, if desired. Slice thinly and place in a large pot with cider, salt, cinnamon, nutmeg, honey and the cornstarch dissolved in the lemon juice. Cook over medium heat for about 10 minutes, reducing the heat to a simmer after the pot boils.

Remove the pot from the heat and spoon the filling into the partially baked crust. Bake 45 minutes more at 350F. Before baking, crumble any extra piecrust dough over the top of the filling, if desired. Let pie cool at least 30 minutes before sampling.

WHIPPED (APPLE) CREAM

2 Golden Delicious apples

1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 cup ground raw cashew nuts

Chop the apples coarsely with skins. Discard the cores. Blenderize the apples to a puree, using the lemon juice and a bit of apple juice — as little as possible — just enough to allow the blender to function. When smooth, gradually add the ground nuts. Blend until smooth.

Children love this icy cold.

APPLE NOG

1 cup plain yogurt
2 cups cold apple juice
1 cup ice cubes
1 tablespoon honey
pinch nutmeg

Blend until smooth. Drink immediately. ■

Willie's

By Sondra Astor Stave

There are fashions in food and restaurants just as there are styles in clothing or furniture. Currently, nouvelle cuisine is making way for more homey preparations, sometimes called comfort foods. For those who wonder what came before America's romance with Szechuan Chinese and Japanese sushi, a visit to Willie's will provide the answer.

Willie's Steak House at 444 Center St. has been a fixture in Manchester for so long that it can completely fill its dining rooms and banquet halls on a Thursday evening, even without the benefit of a display ad in either the phone book or the newspaper. The restaurant's popularity has caused it to expand. While an older section of the dining room is primarily paneled, a newer area has cloth-covered walls and more decorative lighting.

The menu features basic American fare. Preparation is simple, and, from the speed with which our orders are brought, at least partially cooked ahead. An appetizer of herring with cream sauce is perhaps the high point of the meal. The generous fillet is of good texture, the sour cream thick and fresh tasting and the garnish of both pickled and fresh sliced onions provides good contrast.

Minestrone soup, a menu regular, has an adequate assortment of vegetables and a tasty broth.

A basket of rolls and crackers comes with napkin wrapper, though nothing within is warm. Best of the lot is the dark pumpernickel bread.

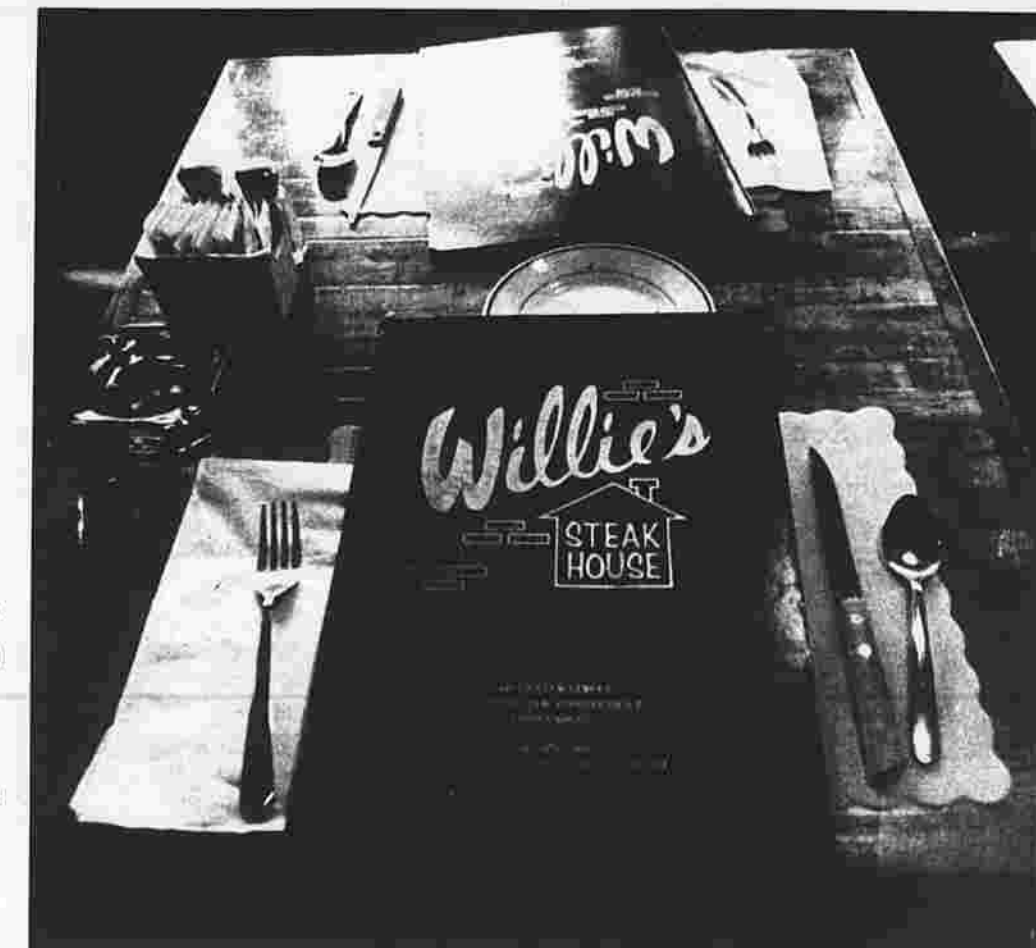

The salad has a good mix of lettuce, carrots and other vegetables. Brown edges in the lettuce and slight dryness suggest that it is cut up and bagged long before being served. The bleu cheese dressing is 50 cents extra. While not spectacular, it is significantly better than the Russian, which is disconcertingly thick and tastes of mass preparation.

Willie's bills itself as a steak house and our steak entree is the best of this course. Our hip steak, the house special, arrived rare as ordered, with good flavor, if a bit chewy in texture.

Baby back ribs are becoming a new American classic and they appear on the menu as a special of the day. The portion, a full rack, is generous, but the meat is soft to the point of blandness. Reasonably good french fried potatoes accompany main dishes, unless baked or mashed potatoes are chosen.

Desserts are primarily pie and ice cream. Blueberry pie is dry of crust with a filling that tastes canned. Spumoni arrives as a rectangular block of four flavors of ice cream and is probably purchased in quantity by the restaurant.

Willie's is open from nine in the morning to midnight every day except Sunday. I recall from previous visits finding sandwiches at lunch more appealing than this particular evening's dinner. At both times, there is a selection of pasta entrees as well. Main dish prices begin in the $5 range for pasta preparations with baked stuffed shrimp and filet mignon topping the menu at about $11. A full dinner, as opposed to a la carte, adds $2 to your bill and includes soup, juice or fruit cup, most desserts and coffee. Waitresses are efficient and appropriately friendly, without becoming obtrusive.

Reginald Pinto/Manchester Herald

Willie's is tradition in a time of fads and fancies. With its extensive hours and decent, if not exciting food, it serves as a viable alternative in Manchester's increasingly diverse restaurant picture. ■

CHRISTA'S CHALLENGE

Christa McAuliffe: teacher, astronaut, American hero. Something wonderful glowed deep within her.

She was a dreamer whose passion was to reach for the stars. Her imagination knew no boundaries.

Today, our future dreams can be found in America's classrooms. It was in the classroom that Christa taught and where she hoped her achievements would one day inspire her students to return — as teachers.

That is why the American Federation of Teachers has established a special fund entitled "Christa's Challenge."

This education and scholarship fund will help encourage more of our nation's brightest students to dedicate their lives to the challenge Christa loved most — teaching.

All contributions to this fund will go directly for scholarships and grants.

Sheriff Lanzano was 'p'

By George Loyno
Herald Reporter

Hartford County High Sheriff Patrick Hogan said this may be a coincidence that a sheriff who supports a candidate for sheriff from Hogan's "hand-picked successor" has been reappointed.

Hogan said he told Raymond Lanzano of Manchester during a "very friendly" lunch at a town restaurant last Tuesday. He would not be reappointed for a new term in July because of "personal reasons."

Hogan, who is scheduled to be reappointed in July 1987, declined to say those reasons were. He said he has been thinking about denying Lanzano reappointment to the office for about a month.

However, Lanzano said he was fired on the morning that the firing is reported. He said he is being let go because he chose to support Alfred Newington, who is challenging Hogan. Hogan is supported by Hogan, who succeeded him. John T. Plainfield.

"You either do things that or you're not one of the boys," Lanzano, who lives on Elm Street, said. "I think I'm being a martyr and a whipping boy."

Lanzano said pressure was exerted on him and the other sheriffs in the office to support Lanzano. He contributed money toward the campaign. Lanzano said he felt the pressure and decided to support Rioux, who would "clear the office."

"The sheriff's department needs an overhaul," Lanzano said. He called Rioux, who was defeated by Hogan in 1982 for the high position, "very good and a professional."

In Connecticut, sheriff court papers and provide courtroom security. General posts go to people of the political party as the high sheriff who under state state discretion over hiring and firing. They are paid on a sliding scale.

Lanzano said once it was known that he supported Lanzano, his job was at risk. But he said he did not think Hogan would be fired from the post he has held since July.

"I didn't think he would have the audacity to fire me for my beliefs," he said. "That's the past."

Hogan denied the sheriff was forced to pursue any political course.

"I never put on any pressure," Hogan said. He was "amazed" at the pressure made by Lanzano, which he attributed to the influence of Manchester Democrat Chairman Theodore Cummings.

"What's happened, he said Cummings," Hogan said. He was reappointed on Friday, Cummings said.
