8th's backers pack hearing, blast proposal

Charter panel's members don't plan to reverse stand

More than 300 boisterous supporters of the Eighth Utilities District Tuesday sought to persuade members of the Charter Revision Commission to reverse their preliminary decision to call for changes that would make it easier for the town government to force the district into a merger.

However, both district activists and panel members said after a public hearing at Bowers School that there is little likelihood the commission's decision, affirmed by a 6-to-5 vote last week, will be changed when its final report is submitted to the Board of Directors later this month.

"I think this commission knew its end before it began its first meeting," Robert Blechman, head of the district group called Stop Tampering with the Eighth's American Liberties, told panel members at the hearing. "The people of Manchester have the good sense to see through your charade."

The draft report calls for eliminating sections of the Town Charter that require a separate, favorable vote by district residents before consolidation can take place. If the change is adopted, a single townwide vote could take away the district's right to provide fire protection and sewer service in northern Manchester, a right it has exercised for almost a century.

Donald Marsh, who lives in the District on Starbuck Street, echoed Blechman's comments. "Your actions have left me very disappointed," he told the panel.

Marsh argued that the decision to change the Town Charter had been made before the proceedings even began by the town's Democratic leadership, which initiated the revision process in February. Marsh said the commission "looked for the tools to end the Eighth" after being "told to do it, but didn't know why."

District Director Thomas Landers charged the panel's decision was made in "smoke-filled backrooms frequented by the Democratic majority of this town." He warned that the "Eighth District is not going to lie down and die for the greater glory of the Democratic Party in this town."

In all, some 40 speakers aired their opinions about the Charter Revision Commission's preliminary decision, which came eight meetings after the panel was formed. All but five of the speakers during the two-hour hearing were in favor of the district's position. The commission is scheduled to approve a final report on May 27 and submit it to the Board of Directors, which must then decide whether to approve the proposal and schedule a referendum this November on the charter changes. A vote on actual consolidation could be scheduled later if the changes were approved.

The board's Democratic majority, which decided to appoint the panel in February, is widely seen as likely to favor the changes. The majority leader, ...

Eighth Utilities District supporters Karen Morrell, left, and Fran Kucka display their sentiments at the public hearing conducted Tuesday by the Charter Revision Commission. More than 300 people — most of them district supporters — attended the meeting to voice their opposition to the commission's proposal to remove the district's veto power over attempts to force it into consolidation with the town.

Copas faces hearing on cause

By Susan Vaughn Herald Reporter

With all the pretrial publicity," he said, Schwebel referred specifically to comments by defense attorney Jerry Gruenbaum and to the fact that several newspapers cover the Tolland County court.

Gruenbaum told the Manchester Herald Tuesday that he wanted to waive the probable cause hearing and enter a plea for Copas of innocence by reason of insanity because of the evidence against him.

Schwebel refused to comment further on the statement after the court session.

Security was tight around the 25-year-old Copas during the appearance. He was brought in a sheriff's van to the court in the Rockville section of Vernon from the Brooklyn Corrections Center, where he is being held on a $200,000 bond, and kept in a detention area until the five-minute appearance in court. Court officials used a metal detector and physically checked everyone who entered the courtroom.

Dressed in a sports jacket and with trimmed hair and beard, Copas had a neuter ...

Zinsser's wife makes it official: He'll seek third term as senator

By Alex Grell Herald Editor

"I have permission from my wife to run again," Republican state Sen. Carl Zinsser told supporters Tuesday night at a $25-a-plate fund-raising dinner at the Army and Navy Club.

The remark was Zinsser's way of formally announcing his intention to seek a third term representing the Fourth Senatorial District at the Capitol, something that has been obvious to political observers for a long time.

Zinsser, 48, predicted a "hard-hitting, clean and exciting campaign" against his Democratic opponent, whoever the candidate turns out to be.

Last week, Democratic town Director Stephen T. Cassano and William Ferris, the Democratic town chairman in Glastonbury, both announced plans to seek the Democratic nomination to oppose Zinsser. Cassano, who lost to Zinsser in 1984, said he would force a primary against Ferris if necessary.

"It made my skin crawl," Dyment said. "There's not enough that can do."

Police reports show that Bieu, who had attended MHS since December, had been stabbed 18 times and suffered blows to the head.

House GOP to offer budget compromise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House opens debate today on a Democratic budget calling for sharply lower federal spending than the amount requested by President Reagan.

But House Republicans have decided to offer a budget that splits the difference.

Debate on the fiscal 1987 budget is scheduled to last two days and approval of the Democratic-sponsored spending plan, passed by the House Budget Committee last week, would set up a confrontation with the Senate, which wants to spend more for the military.

President Reagan told GOP leaders Tuesday he doesn't like either the House or Senate versions, but he prefers the Senate plan since it allows higher military spending. But House Budget Committee Chairman William Gray called the White House objections to defense cuts "mindless poppycock."

House Republicans decided early today to offer an alternative budget that would split the difference between the Senate and House Democrats' funding for the military. The House GOP budget would allocate $28 billion for defense, include no more than Reagan requested and cut the deficit to the Gramm-Rudman required $14 billion next fiscal year.

"It's a defensible document," House GOP leader Robert Michel said. "It's not as good on defense as some would like to have."

Michel added Reagan "was going to get a lower figure no matter what."

The House Budget Committee allocated the Pentagon $28 billion, while Reagan requested $320 billion.

A bad Apple

Apple Computer co-founder Steve Wozniak says the development of personal computers has become less rewarding for inventors since the industry moved from the garage to the corporate laboratory.

"It's so planned now and structured that the feeling you get out of it isn't the same," Wozniak said Tuesday. Wozniak, who now runs his own small computer company, left Apple last year, saying it had lost its soul.

"The feeling from the motivations point of view is different when it was just a bunch of kids scrambling around. We had a place of importance in the world," said Wozniak, who was in Boston to judge a contest for the most significant pioneering personal computers. Wozniak and his partner Steven Jobs assembled the first Apple computers in a garage in 1975 before they linked up with a business manager and raised capital. The company grew to a half-billion-dollar-a-year business six years later.

No laughing matter

Actress Judy Carne, known for her role in the 1960s television series "Laugh-In," has lost an appeal against a three-month jail sentence for drug possession.

Carne, 46, former wife of actor Burt Reynolds, dabbed tears from her eyes when a judge announced the decision Tuesday in the Court of Appeals in London.

She has been in jail since April 23, when she started serving the sentence handed down in Northampton Crown Court for two drug charges. The court suspended an additional six-month sentence.

Carne pleaded guilty to possessing cocaine and amphetamines at her home in the village of Church Brampton last October and to trying to bring cocaine and marijuana through London's Heathrow Airport in December.

Unannounced visit

Comedian Joan Rivers, who had canceled an appearance on NBC-TV's "Late Night With David Letterman," burst onto the set during taping and drew loud applause from the audience.

Rivers on Monday canceled an appearance on the show because it is co-produced by Johnny Carson's production company, and Rivers is planning her own late-night show to compete with Carson.

On Tuesday, while "Letterman" was being taped, Rivers suddenly walked onto the set and stayed about 90 seconds, said NBC spokeswoman Virginia Holden. "I was in the control room and I assure you this was not expected."

"Letterman, of course, was real cool, but the audience was hysterical — hooting, clapping," Rivers explained to Letterman. "I just wanted to invite you to the NBC evening party because I don't think I will be going. Bring me back a sandwich."

Just before she appeared on the "Letterman" set, Rivers had been interviewed by a news program in the same building about her new talk show.

Hamill's career on ice

Ice skating queen Dorothy Hamill says that after 10 years on the road she's tired of touring.

"I don't want to say I'm retiring, because I might change my mind," said the 23-year-old former Olympic gold medalist. "I'm just tired of touring, of living out of suitcases."

Hamill, who is engaged to Los Angeles fitness expert Ken Forsythe, is giving her final tour performances in Honolulu, Hawaii, in "Festival on Ice." The show opened Tuesday night and continues through May 18.

Hamill said she hopes to conduct skating clinics, and wants to teach blind people how to skate.

"I'll always skate, because it's therapy for me. I can get away from everything, from home problems, professional hassles," she said.

Today in history

On this date in 1942, Congress established the WAACS — Women's Auxiliary Army Corps — for World War II duty. In this photo taken in August 1942, Col. Don Falch, commandant at Fort Des Moines, Iowa, inspects WAAC company quarters with Oveta Culp Hobby, center, WAAC director, and company Commander Elizabeth Wilbarn.

Almanac

Today is Wednesday, May 14, the 134th day of 1986 with 231 to follow.

The moon is moving toward its first quarter.

The morning stars are Mercury, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn. The evening star is Venus.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Taurus. They include Prussian physicist Gabriel Fahrenheit, who introduced the mercury thermometer, in 1686; English portrait painter Thomas Gainsborough in 1727; conductor Otto Klemperer in 1885; opera singer Patrice Muniel in 1925 (age 61); singer Bobby Darin in 1936, and film director George Lucas in 1944 (age 42).

On this date in history:

In 1643, Louis XIV, "The Sun King," ascended the throne of France.

In 1904, the Olympic Games were held in the United States for the first time, in St. Louis.

In 1942, Congress established the WAACS — Women's Auxiliary Army Corps — for World War II duty.

In 1975, U.S. forces recaptured the American merchant ship Mayaguez, which had been seized by the Cambodian navy in the Gulf of Siam. Forty-one U.S. servicemen were killed and 50 wounded in the rescue operation.

In 1985, Maryland Gov. Harry Hughes ordered 102 privately insured savings and loans to limit depositor withdrawals to $1,000 a month to stop a run set off by charges of fraud against one major savings and loan.

A thought for the day: Clark Schurz, the Civil War general and journalist who died on this date in 1906, said, "Our country, right or wrong, when right, is to be kept right; when wrong, to be put right."

Medieval Assassins
Terrorist violence is not new to the Middle East. In the 12th and 13th centuries, a murderous sect of religious fanatics terrorized one part of the region. The town of Alamut in South Persia, now Iran, was its base. Its members killed under the influence of drugs. The sect flourished for 200 years, until it was wiped out by Mongols in the 1200s. The group's Arabic name was Hashshishin, which means "users of hashish." The Anglicized version of their name is "assassin."

DO YOU KNOW - Who is the current religious leader of Iran?

With ethics clarified, O'Marra states view

Having won approval last week to speak before the Charter Revision Commission, town Zoning Enforcement Officer Thomas R. O'Marra Tuesday criticized the panel's proposal to change sections of the Town Charter that would eliminate the Eighth Utilities District's veto power over consolidation attempt.

"The right of self-determination is immune to the will of the majority," O'Marra said.

If the charter is changed, one townwide vote would be held — something that would allow the majority to decide on the issue. Currently, the charter requires a separate, favorable vote by district residents before consolidation can occur.

O'Marra said the original charter provided for "a full and true commitment to the Eighth's protection" and should not be changed.

Last week, the Manchester Ethics Commission ruled that town officials have the right to address any municipal agency to state their personal views. O'Marra had requested the commission's opinion because the Town Charter prohibits town employees from representing anyone other than the town before a municipal agency.

Before speaking Tuesday, O'Marra told the Charter Revision Commission that he was the town's zoning enforcement officer and the district fire department's spokesman.

"I don't come before you in any of those capacities," O'Marra said. "The decision to appear here has not been easy ... (but) citizenship ... imposes obligations to stand up and be counted."

District backers make presence felt

The Charter Revision Commission's public hearing Tuesday was a physical affair.

Opponents of the panel's preliminary recommendation to change the Town Charter so that the Eighth Utilities District will no longer have the power to veto an attempt to force it into consolidation with the town made their presence felt in no uncertain terms.

They showed up at Bowers School on Princeton Street over 300 strong, filled most of the seats that had been set up and occupied all empty space to the rear and sides of the room — which, appropriately enough, was a gymnasium.

Before the hearing began, district backers milled about in the school's parking lot, distributing handouts and "I love the Eighth" stickers. Two imposing district fire trucks were parked in one corner of the lot.

Once inside, the crowd taped up pennant-shaped cardboard signs which carried such slogans as: "100 Years of Faithful Service Railroaded Out," "The fate of the 8th should be by the 8th, of the 8th and for the 8th," and "Why pay more for what's freely given? Support volunteers."

Before and after each district supporter spoke, a loud round of applause, occasionally accompanied by the boom of stamping feet, resounded in the room. A thundering standing ovation was given district firefighter David "Pa" Mordavsky, who was singled out by one district speaker for his 48 years of service with the department.

When speakers supported the town, the chorus turned to one of hoos and jeers.

Physical activity was not restricted to the audience. Commission Chairman John Yavis helped set up chairs as the crowd grew larger before the hearing began. Commission member Amy Burns pulled out extra folding chairs from under a stage and Mayor Barbara Weinberg helped carry the seats to the back of the room.

Some of the speakers strongly criticized commission members for their earlier decision to back changes in the charter. On one members said after the meeting that they would not alter their support for the charter changes.

occasion, district supporter James Sables of Hilliard Street spoke so loud that the tape recorder and amplifier had to be turned off and readjusted after an ear-piercing squeal rang out.

He berated the commission members for not being more physically active in their duties. "You sat behind your desks and made political decisions — you didn't use your guts," he said.

Although Yavis seemed a bit taken back by the commotion of the meeting, he and other

OPENING DAY — Olivia Newton-John cracks a big smile Tuesday as she cuts the ribbon on her second Koala Blue store at the Westside Pavilion in Los Angeles. It was the first public appearance of the singer-actress since the birth of her daughter in January. With the opening of this store, Newton-John and her business partners hope that the chain will eventually grow to 200 stores.

us," he said after the crowd heard remarks by Roger Eddy, the GOP candidate who will oppose U.S. Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., in November.

Zinsser said that in the next session of the Legislature, he will return to work on a bill to restrict computerized telephone solicitations. Such a bill passed the Senate during the last term, but was defeated in the House.

Zinsser, who is co-chairman of the Legislature's Energy and Public Utilities Committee, introduced the bill, which would have restricted hours for computerized phone solicitations from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. and required the message to identify the caller.

"How can a bill that passes in the Senate by a vote of 34 to 2 lose in the House by 24 to 14?" Zinsser asked. "Some folks in the house thought we had a problem with freedom of speech."

Another measure Zinsser said he would support again is a provision to disbar lawyers convicted of felonies. He said the proposal passed the Senate after being petitioned out of the Judiciary Committee and went to House. "Where it was never heard from again."

Reviewing accomplishments of the past two years, Zinsser cited a measure to require a study of telephone service before opening up telephone competition within the state.

"We are concerned about the cost to make calls across town. What do we accomplish if we lower the cost for business and increase it for residential users?" Zinsser asked. "Maybe the biggest mistake we made was to break up AT&T."

Zinsser said he has talked to Town Manager Robert Weiss and School Superintendent James Kennedy in preparation for the special session of the Legislature next week, where a measure to provide funds for education will be considered. Zinsser said he would talk to officials of other towns in the Fourth Senatorial District — which includes Manchester, Bolton, Hebron, Columbia and Glastonbury — before the session begins next Wednesday.

Zinsser, who voted against a compromise education bill in the closing hours of the regular session, said of it: "I don't think people are serious about this at all the ramifications."

He said he favors raising salaries of teachers as proposed in the bill, "but I'm sure we won't improve the quality of education in the process."

Nathan Agostinelli, a member of the Republican State Central Committee and master of ceremonies at the dinner, had joked earlier that some lobbyists were disappointed at the low price — $25 a plate — for the event. He was alluding to reports in Connecticut and in Washington of the high ticket prices lobbyists are charged for some political events.

"If people listen to what he's saying, he will be the next U.S. senator from Connecticut," Agostinelli said when he introduced Eddy.

Eddy took the crowd he is facing an uphill fight in his campaign against Dodd.

He said he is not running for office. "I've never seen it until it hit the (House) floor," she said.

Swenson, who defeated Thompson in the 1982 and 1984 elections, said the chances of her running again are "over 50 percent."

"I enjoy my job. I've never missed a day in six years," she said. "I have a lot of unfinished business." She said a final decision will not be announced until after the upcoming special session of the General Assembly.

THOMPSON, 53, said he believes his chances of unseating Swenson this time are good because Ronald Reagan is not running for president. "I think two years ago when I lost by five votes it was a good year for a Republican with Ronald Reagan at the head of the ticket."

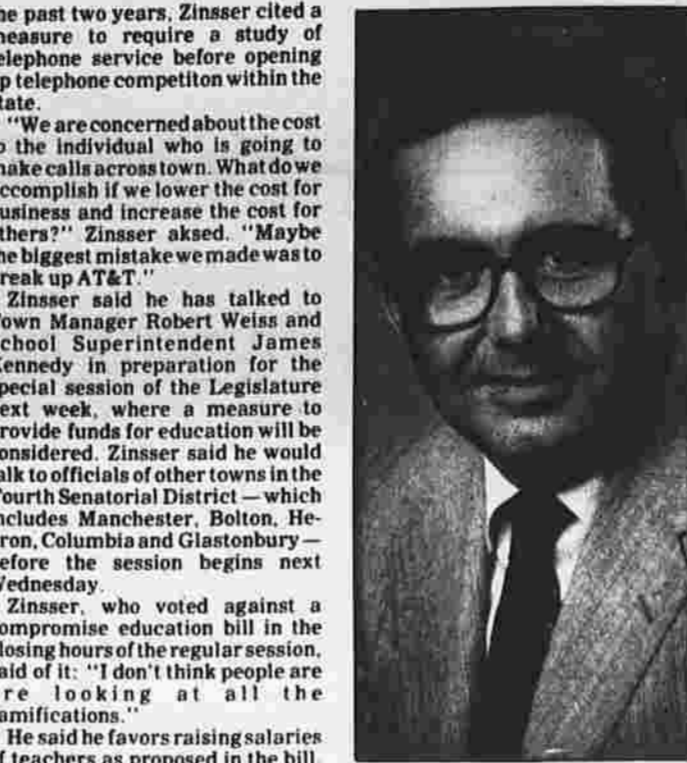

But Thompson vowed it will be a long fight. "I certainly wouldn't have supported that legislation — no way."

Thompson said consolidation would be good for the town, adding that he was encouraged that the issue is finally going to be resolved.

CARL ZINSSER seeks third term

Eddy says Dodd does nothing

Roger Eddy, the veteran Republican who will oppose U.S. Sen. Chris Dodd, D-Conn., in the November election, attacked Dodd in a talk in Manchester Tuesday night.

"My opponent has taken a stand on only one issue. Central America, and he's wrong about that," said Eddy, the main speaker at a fund-raising dinner for Republican state Sen. Carl Zinsser of Manchester. "Dodd believes nothing, says nothing and does nothing."

Eddy, a member of the Republican National Committee, characterized Democratic Gov. William W. Miller as a "crazy" administrator, a packaged individual, part of a machine.

Eddy said that for the first time in his political career, "I'm going everywhere and saying I'm a Republican. I have never seen a state and nation turned around the way Ronald Reagan has turned this nation around."

Eddy charged that O'Neill is taking credit for economic recovery that came about as a result of Reagan's administration.

"Nobody is speaking for the people," Eddy said of government leaders. He indicated he will be making a major policy statement on that subject soon.

"I am urging you to be worried about government by special interest," he said. "Too many people, he said, are speaking for industry."

"I think every one of you lobbyists here would agree with me," Eddy said, addressing several lobbyists who were among the guests at the Zinsser dinner. Insurance cost shuts water slide

NEW LONDON (AP) — The water slide at Ocean Beach Park looks like a huge three-leaf clover, its twisted chutes, which look out of place in the cold months, are becoming more tempting as summer approaches.

But the slide may remain an unused skeleton, a victim of high insurance rates.

"We're in big trouble," said Jack Baldoni, the builder of the slide. "I'm out of business."

The ride is 35 feet high, with three chutes that are 34 feet long and empty into a pool of water. Riders slide down the chutes on foam rubber mats on hot summer days, carried along on jets of water.

Baldoni, who is also a nightclub operator, built the slide about five years ago. He said he thought it would be a good source for a second income.

"I figured I could make $25,000 working the summers," he said. "But the business is marginal at best. It takes 90 days to want to ride it. Everything has to be right."

Baldoni says he must carry a $1 million liability policy for his ride. In the slide's first four years, he said the policy cost him $4,000. Last year, it was $6,000.

This year, the only company that would even talk with Baldoni said they would charge him $30,000.

"If I have a bad summer, I just manage to pay the bills," Baldoni said. "How can I pay $30,000?"

Anthony M. Pero, manager of the amusement park, called the slide one of Ocean Beach's most popular attractions.

"As we don't have a big roller coaster," he said. "This is our roller coaster. It is a problem for us. Our mechanical rides consistently finally get insurance. But the water slide, no. We've been going around in circles."

Insurance problems have hit the owners of other amusement parks or rides said Robert Hanson, a Wellesley, Mass., insurance broker who is putting together a group mass insurance program for amusement parks.

"It is having an impact on the whole summer recreation scene," he said. "Ironically, this is a year when lower gas prices should bring in a lot of people. There are a few rides that don't open in different parts of the country. People are voluntarily going out of business, modifying their locations, delaying their openings."

Baldoni said in past years, claims against him were always covered by the $500 deductible portion of his policy.

He said the only way he can keep his business going is if he cut his bank to allow him to stop making mortgage payments for a while.

Meanwhile, Pero said he is worried about what will happen to the park without the slide.

"What we do, people come in and keep asking when it will be open?" he said.

Young Afghanis get treatment

NEW BRITAIN (UPI) — Seven young victims of the war in Afghanistan have arrived in Connecticut to receive medical treatment for wounds they said were suffered at the hands of Soviet troops occupying their homeland.

The young people are among about 36 Afghan refugees being brought to the United States by Heal the Children, an international non-profit group based in Seattle. The Afghans arrived Tuesday at Bradley International Airport after spending time in a refugee camp in Pakistan.

One of the young victims said through an interpreter that Soviet troops entered her home one night looking for her father, a rebel freedom fighter, and threw acid in her and her sister's faces.

"Both of the kids that we will have at our hospital will be coming in and will be thoroughly examined by physicians and orthopedic specialists," said Lynne Baranski, a spokeswoman at Newington Children's Hospital.

Crash victim told of copter's flaws

By Jeff Wilson The Associated Press

SANTA ANA, Calif. — A Marine killed in the fiery crash of a CH-53E Super Stallion helicopter said in a tape recording that flight crews were worried about mechanical defects in the huge military choppers.

Sgt. Dulles Arnette, who died Friday with three other Marines in the desert crash, described manufacturing flaws in a taped interview released Tuesday by a lawyer suing the manufacturer of the CH-53E Super Stallion, Sikorsky Aircraft of Stratford, Conn.

The attorney, Mark P. Robinson Jr., represents the families of two of the four Marines killed in the crash. Another Marine, Sgt. Arnette, also died in the crash of another Marine CH-53E Super Stallion helicopter in June 1984.

Robinson said Arnette, upset at the death of a friend in the ocean crash off San Clemente Island, had agreed to testify in a lawsuit filed in California.

"We had problems, there's no doubt about it," says a voice identified as Arnette on a tape Robinson said was made shortly after the ocean crash.

Arnette, from Silver Spring, Md., had been with the Heavy Marine Helicopter Squadron 465 at Tustin Marine Corps Helicopter Air Station, 35 miles southeast of Los Angeles.

As the crew chief, it had been his job to be in the in-flight trouble shooter for the $24 million Super Stallion, which crashed and burned at a training center near Twenty-nine Palms.

Jip Ventrillo, a spokesman for Sikorsky, a subsidiary of United Technologies Corp., said the company would not discuss the matter because it was in litigation.

Since 1984, 16 servicemen have died and 16 have been injured in Super Stallion crashes — a record that led those who worked with the choppers to look closely for problems, Arnette said on the tape.

He said he had found crucial bolts loose when new Super Stallions arrived from Sikorsky, and described finding broken parts on the ground.

Thompson vows hard fight

Former Mayor John Thompson, a Democrat, announces his candidacy in the 13th Assembly District this morning at his wife, Elizabeth, looks on. Thompson, 53, has been beaten twice before for the post by Republican incumbent Elsie Swenson. Swenson told the Herald today she would probably seek another term in November.

THOMPSON, 53, said he believes his chances of unseating Swenson this time are good because Ronald Reagan is not running for president. "I think two years ago when I lost by five votes it was a good year for a Republican with Ronald Reagan at the head of the ticket."

But Thompson vowed it will be a long fight. "I certainly wouldn't have supported that legislation — no way."

Thompson said consolidation would be good for the town, adding that he was encouraged that the issue is finally going to be resolved.

Researcher hails math program

The program, called "Development Approach to Mathematics," is one of 12 math and science programs that has been recognized as nationally promising and will be written up in a directory to be distributed to school systems across the country.

The program, one of 350 nominated for recognition, has been instituted in all elementary school classes and focuses on a problem-solving approach. Lessons stress involvement and activity using three-dimensional objects and graphs.

Brigham said she saw students doing estimates, applied problem solving and data collection.

Allan B. Chesterton, director of curriculum for town schools, said the program is unique because "everything they learn about is worked into a word problem."

Brigham agreed, adding that the program makes learning more enjoyable. "It's a lot more fun doing a ditto sheet," she said. "They're seeing what they can do with what they've learned."

Brigham said the program was effective because it contained common sense. "It's truly new, it's timely, it's a very well thought out, developed and documented program," she said. "It shows the district made a commitment to the concepts for the program."

"This kind of understanding will last long after rote number facts are forgotten," she said.

Brigham said that the information she gives to the NSF will be distributed nationally starting next year.

Town acts on presumption body is woman's

Although the medical examiner has yet to make a positive identification, officials are acting on the presumption that the dismembered remains found May 2 at a house on Spencer Street are those of the 44-year-old Jessica Lamprecht.

OPINION

Happy ending came to pass despite error

The story of the lottery held last Wednesday to pick the winner of the right to buy the last available house being built under town contract on Love Lane has ended happily, thanks to the intervention of a citizen who didn't like the way the plot was developing.

If it had not been for the effort of Alan Robbins of Bolton, the outcome could have been quite different and the town could have found itself in an embarrassing position.

The right to buy the house in question was first raffled off along with rights to buy the other 13 "starter" houses. But the original winner, for some reason, did not qualify as a buyer.

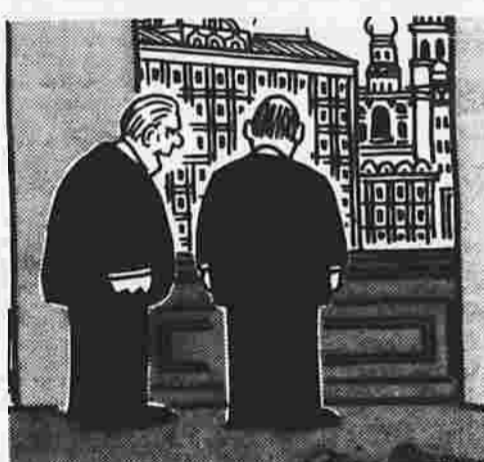

Another raffle was held, all in accordance with rules that had been agreed upon in advance. Like the raffles for the other houses, it was conducted with scrupulous care for the protection of the rights of the many people who had applied to purchase the houses, which were built under a contract between the town and Visions Unlimited of Tolland that was intended to make houses affordable to people who might not otherwise be able to buy them.

The problem arose after the new winning ticket was picked last week. Visions Unlimited discovered the winners had gone on vacation and were scheduled to be back at work on May 19. And despite repeated efforts, officials of Visions did not succeed in locating the winners. Visions decided then, with the approval of the town attorney, that another raffle should be held to pick a new winner.

That decision was an insensitive mistake. If a new winner had been selected, the winners of the second lottery, Ali and Lynette Esami, would have been bypassed through no fault of their own. The whole Love Lane project would have been sullied and the town's effort to do something innovative and practical would have come under just criticism.

When he read in the Herald of plans to call a new lottery, Robbins was disturbed. He took on the task of locating the Esamis, and, with a lot of effort and perseverance, succeeded.

As a result, Visions and the Esamis have been in contact and the Esamis will be a given the chance to qualify to buy the house. The judgment of Robbins was right. Visions and the town officials were wrong.

Visiting nurses are wonderful

The Visiting Nurse and Home Care agency of Manchester is a wonderful organization, from the coordinators right on through to the homemakers.

We have just been served for the past five months by this most dedicated, well trained, knowledgeable, caring, friendly, supportive group and would like to acknowledge to each of them how much we appreciate all they have done for us.

We are very fortunate to have such a wonderful group to reassure us during this time of need. Our most humble thanks to all of them.

Choice belongs to town's voters

Does anyone in the state of Connecticut honestly believe that Gov. William A. O'Neill is beyond, or at the very least, unaware of the corruption that is going on at the state government level? I don't think that anyone needs to be reminded of all the charges that have surfaced in the last two years.

Mr. O'Neill has acknowledged in the past that there is a corrupt system in place in Connecticut, but "it was already in place when I took office what do you want me to do about it?" That's great. Our governor has made the statement that he doesn't know what to do about the corruption in state government. I guess that's why he hasn't done anything about corruption.

The more I listen to the statements coming out of the state Capitol the more I am convinced that the more I am reminded of Richard Nixon. On May 20, Democrats in Manchester and many other area towns have a choice. They can vote for the state of delegates that are in support of Governor William A. O'Neill and perpetuating the corrupt system now in place in Connecticut, or they can vote for the delegates in support of Toby Moffett. It's that simple. The choice is yours.

It's 'Play Ball' time around town

I've been enlightened, excited, and proud to watch our Bennet girls practice at Charter Oak Park.

These youngsters came out in good and bad weather and patiently showed the girls how to catch, throw and field - which each girl did, giggling away as they tried. Some missed a throw, others "got with it." However, most of these girls perhaps have played previously, or appear to be well trained and interested.

How many times, in years past, I've observed and read of youngsters on different teams, which our Manchester Herald "covers" very well. No exclusion is meant for the boys or young men's teams - what great times they have had they try.

Each coach is to be commended, and the score-keeper, who sits in the extreme heat along with his parents and grandparents, are relieving our own youths as we watch.

All over towns the cry is out "Play Ball!" Let's support these youngsters and their players. Perhaps the "oldsters" are 17 to 30 - a years young. But they're there - and that's the name of the game!

We all have many interests, and young parents who must work should make time to urge your particular team to victory. While everyone can't be a winner, no one loses, when each team goes onto the field to Play Ball!

Good luck to all.

Cemetery vandals should be caught

I did get down to the St. James Cemetery and saw the destruction done on the stones.

It was too bad to see it done. Thank God, at least, that where my parents were there was no damage. Whoever did it picked on the smaller stones and not the large ones.

There probably were a few fellows who were on drugs and thought what they were doing was great. They probably didn't realize the damage they were doing. I hope they can catch them before more is done.

Capitol Comments

Believe he is their best bet against the Democrats. The word in political circles was that State GOP Chairman Tom D'Amore didn't care who won Super Tuesday just so long as he spelled her name Julie Belaga. D'Amore was never too crazy about Dick Bozzato, but the chairman still cannot believe Bozzato was shut out. So D'Amore, who intended to give his personal blessing to a candidate after Super Tuesday, is biding his time and trying to figure out where his election express is going. D'Amore's first move on the day after, assign the old political job at state headquarters, Pat Futner of South Windsor, the job of analyzing Super Tuesday and advising on the next moves.

Super Tuesday was at least a public relations smash. It propelled the GOP into media attention for weeks. It also left the party sort of back on Square 1. And, in our judgment, experienced realists are correct. The race and the convention are wide open now.

D'AMORE DOESN'T AGREE with that. He says the nominee will be one of the four declared

Soviet stance on nuke plants is a nightmare

WASHINGTON — The Soviet government's appallingly cavalier attitude toward the dangers of nuclear power came as no surprise to us. Two years ago this month, when we reported secret details of earlier Soviet nuclear accidents, the Soviet Embassy here responded with a smart-alec letter ridiculing our revelations.

The wisecracks of the embassy information officer, Eugene Zykov, must have turned to ashes in his mouth since the nuclear disaster in Chernobyl last month. His letter's tone of mingled sarcasm and braggadocio was tragically inappropriate in light of what is now confirmed about the Soviets' shocking failure to build and maintain nuclear reactors with a rudimentary concern for safety.

One grim disclosure we made two years ago, citing secret and top secret CIA reports, was that many hairless sailors were in Soviet veterans' homes, suggesting overexposure to radiation leaking from faulty nuclear submarine reactors. This evidently tickled the embassy flack's funny bone. Our story about the "radioactive nightmare" in the Soviet Union, he wrote, "could cause even those 'hairless sailors' supposedly in Soviet veterans' homes to have their hair stand on end."

WITH THE GALL of a true propagandist, Zykov continued. "Being too engrossed in his macabre narration, the author failed to mention one more point. No organizations such as 'National Campaign for Radioactive Waste Energy,' 'Supporters of Silkwood' or 'Musicians United for Safe Energy' exist in the USSR... They do not exist because we have not had the same problem that the nuclear power industry in the U.S. seems to have."

Without trying to match Zykov's sarcasm, we suggest that there may be other reasons that anti-nuclear protest groups don't exist in the Soviet Union. Ask Andrei Sakharov or the hapless mentors of the Helsinki Accords how the KGB treats outspoken critics of the Soviet regime.

The embassy letter proceeded to point out - correctly - that the world's first nuclear power plant was completed in the city of Obninsk, 60 miles from Moscow, in 1954. It claimed that all Soviet nuclear power stations must have "at least three or four fail-safe systems for protection against radioactivity," and that about half the construction costs go into the protection systems.

The letter then lists three government agencies responsible for "overseeing the strictly required safety measures," and added: "That's why it stands to reason that Soviet experience in nuclear power engineering wins recognition among many prominent foreign experts."

THE EMBASSY LETTER then descends to a flat-out lie, stating that "within the last 30 years, the prestige of the Soviet stations has never been undermined by tragic accidents like the one which occurred at Three Mile Island in May 1979."

As we had pointed out two years ago in now widely known, the Soviets had two serious reactor shutdowns in the early 1980s, and the near-bolocaust in 1957, when carelessly stored nuclear wastes exploded at a plant near Chelyabinsk, rendering an area of hundreds of square miles uninhabitable to this day.

Referring to Three Mile Island, Comrade Zykov wrote: "With the proper safety measures the probability of such an accident, a Soviet scientist estimates, is one every 10,000 years of the reactor's operation." He then stated that people living within two to three miles of Soviet nuclear plants get an annual dose of radiation equivalent to "a few hours on the coast of Miami Beach," and added:

"That is why the USSR plans to construct more stations close to major industrial cities in the European part of the country, to provide heat and energy."

The frightening thing is that the Soviet leaders may do just that. Under the dome

Fear of terrorism threatens to turn the United States Capitol into the Malemute Saloon, with half the population carrying a shootin' iron on his hip or in her purse. A state-of-the-art firing range is now within two to three miles of Soviet nuclear plants get an annual dose of radiation equivalent to "a few hours on the coast of Miami Beach," and added:

Students know little about AIDS
BRIDGEPORT — Many high school students don't think AIDS victims should be allowed to live. The study, conducted by the American Red Cross, shows that 80 percent of the 348 local students surveyed in April acknowledged they don't know much about the disease and want more information.

The Yale study, released to the Board of Education Monday, was proposed by Bridgeport Health Director Christopher Cannon to help local schools set up AIDS education programs. "A lot of kids are reflecting information or misinformation that they've received from parents," Cannon said. "Students not only need to be educated, but parents really need a whole lot of educating too."

Dr. Steven Helgerson of the Yale School of Medicine in New Haven said the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta is looking at the study and considering a national AIDS education program based on Yale's findings.

UB raises tuition 8.5 percent
BRIDGEPORT — The University of Bridgeport will raise its tuition 8.5 percent for undergraduates next year, bringing the overall cost for a resident undergraduate to more than $12,000. Overall costs, including board, tuition and fees, will rise 8.1 percent.

All colleges face increasing costs for energy, salaries, equipment replacement and uncontrollable items in order to maintain high quality programs for their students," UB President Leland Miles said. Standard tuition for full-time undergraduate students at UB for 1986-87 will increase by $610 to $7,810. Room and board fees will increase $200, to $3,980, a 5.3 percent increase. Total costs for 1986-87, including fees, will be $12,105.

Judges in tug-of-war over probe
HARTFORD — Two Superior Court judges got into a legal tug-of-war over custody of a woman considered a crucial witness in the grand jury investigation into alleged corruption and illegal gambling in Torrington, a published report said.

Caught in the middle was Louise Bill, a Torrington resident and former companion of a convicted gambler, Paul Seiser. The Hartford Courant reported in today's editions, Bill was subpoenaed to testify before the grand jury about an alleged bribe that is said to have led to the failure of a gambling wiretap in June 1981, the Courant reported.

With prosecutors racing a June 6 deadline to make arrests in the wiretap case, Judge Anthony V. DeMayo, the grand juror, Monday ordered state police to take Bill, 37, into custody after she failed to appear before his grand jury.

While she was being taken to court in Milford, Judge Walter M. Pickett Jr. signed a conflicting order. It demanded state police bring Bill to his court in Litchfield instead, for a hearing on a motion to quash DeMayo's subpoena of Bill.

Belaga, Mosley top absentee list
HARTFORD — Two legislators campaigning for statewide offices missed the most roll-call votes taken among House members during this year's legislative session, legislative records show.

Republican Rep. Julie D. Belaga missed 253 of the 595 recorded House votes while Democrat Maurice Mosley missed 163, according to a review of legislative voting records compiled Tuesday by the Waterbury Republican newspaper.

Belaga, of Westport, is seeking the Republican nomination for governor while Mosley, a Waterbury lawmaker, is seeking the Democratic nomination for state treasurer.

Two other House members who are also running for higher offices missed far fewer votes, the newspaper's check showed. Rep. Christine M. Niedermeier, a Fairfield Democrat running for Congress, missed 32 of the roll-call votes while Republican Pauline R. Kezer of Plainville, a candidate for secretary of the state, missed 52 votes.

Hospital group can file lawsuits

HARTFORD — The Connecticut Hospital Association has the right to file lawsuits on affecting its member hospitals, the state Supreme Court has decided in overruling a lower court.

The Superior Court had ruled the CHA had no standing to bring suit against the Department of Mental Health over state mental hospital admissions policies because the association is not directly harmed by the DMH rules.

But Monday's decision by the Supreme Court reinstates the CHA and the Connecticut Association of Health Care Facilities as plaintiffs in a pending 1983 lawsuit.

The suit contends the DMH is violating the law by refusing to immediately accept patients committed to state hospitals by emergency room personnel.

Lawyer nominated for judgeship

HARTFORD — Gov. William A. O'Neill announced he plans to nominate an East Lyme attorney to succeed outgoing Superior Court Judge Paul J. Faisey.

The Democratic Governor Tuesday wrote the co-chairmen of the Legislature's Judiciary Committee disclosing his intention to nominate attorney Stuart M. Schimelman to replace Faisey, whose term runs through July 1.

The Judiciary Committee will hold a public hearing on the nomination next Wednesday and is expected to vote the same day on whether to approve Schimelman for an interim appointment.

Since the Legislature is not in regular session, the committee has the power to approve or reject the nomination. If approved, Schimelman would still need confirmation from the full Legislature in the 1987 regular session.

Mak letter may violate ethics code

STAMFORD (UPI) — A letter to 13 deputy sheriffs demanding a partial payment for the high sheriff's campaign may be a violation of the state code of ethics, but officials have not decided whether to launch a formal investigation.

Edwin S. Mak, the high sheriff of Fairfield County, announced his candidacy for re-election Tuesday in Norwalk.

He has disavowed the letter written by Constantine Brandi, chairman of the Stamford Republican Town Committee and the chief deputy sheriff in Stamford.

David Eaton, executive director of the State Ethics Commission, said Tuesday the letter may violate the state code of ethics which bars state employees from using their position for personal or financial gain.

"The person being benefited was the (high) sheriff and as far as we can tell he did not order it," Eaton said.

"It apparently was kind of an unfortunate phrasing and the individual is wishing he hadn't written it that way," Eaton said. Mak called the letter, which asks the sheriffs to contribute $250 each to Mak's re-election campaign, "stupid."

The letter was sent to 16 deputy sheriffs who work in the Stamford Superior Court, who said they thought they would lose their jobs if they did not contribute to Mak's campaign.

"A donation of $250 for Ed Mak's campaign is now being collected," the letter read. "A partial payment will be accepted if you feel $250 is impossible to come up with now. Then the balance thereafter."

"I would never agree with this," Mak said. The deputy sheriffs in Stamford made only about $240 a week, he said.

"For me to ask for a donation of $250 or any amount would be ridiculous," he said. "They don't have to give me a penny if they don't want it."

Jeffrey Garfield, the executive director of the State Elections Enforcement Commission, said the letter doesn't constitute a bribe because special deputies are not in the civil service.

Deputies in other courthouses in Fairfield County said they had not been pressured to contribute to Mak's campaign.

Brandi could not be reached for comment.

HARTFORD — A group of clergy, government and labor officials calling themselves "The Colt-45" have been arrested at a sit-in outside the Colt Firearms plant where a strike marked by violence entered its 16th week.

"We're doing this in the tradition of civil disobedience," said Louise Simmons, a state labor official who was peacefully escorted into three paddy wagons by about 25 police officers at the scene. Police later said people were charged with obstructing free passage.

Those arrested issued a state-lettered demand that the state peacefully escorted into three paddy wagons by about 25 police officers at the scene. Police later said people were charged with obstructing free passage.

The protesters were greeted by another 300 Colt strikers and folk singers who, as planned, did not join in the civil disobedience. The strikers and folk singers, however, joined in on chants of "UAW's here to stay," and "We want a contract."

Police warned the protesters, which included state legislators and Hartford city councilmen, to leave the main gate where they had seated themselves or face arrest.

"We want Colt to sit down and negotiate," said Rep. Carrie Saxon-Perry, D-Hartford. "This is what it's all about. Perry said before being escorted into a paddy wagon. Efforts to speak to the company by local, state and federal elected officials and representatives from the community have been consistently met with an attitude of non-cooperation," the "Colt 45" said in its statement.

Colt officials said the company's regular spokesman was unavailable and refused any comment on the arrests or any other related matter.

"We were expecting this," said Police Chief Bernard R. Sullivan, who was at the scene. "We got word earlier that there would be some kind of civil disobedience, he added, calling the demonstration orderly and peaceful.

Democrats want Patterson to fill seat in Coventry

By George Loyne
Herald Reporter

COVENTRY — Former Democratic Town Council member Betsy Patterson has been recommended by the Democratic Town Committee to fill the seat vacated earlier this month by Sandra Pesce, the chairman of the party's nominating committee said this morning.

Nominating Committee Chairman Brian Heath said Patterson, 44, who served on the council from 1980 to 1983, was the unanimous choice of town committee members who voted during a regular meeting Tuesday at the Town Office Building. The recommendation now goes to the Town Council, which traditionally approves candidates nominated by the respective parties.

Heath said no other names were considered by the town committee. "We went to her right away because of her previous experience," he said. He added that the committee wanted to find another woman to replace Pesce, who left the panel for what she said were personal and health reasons.

Patterson, who works at the University of Connecticut's financial department in Storrs, was chairwoman of the Town Council's steering committee before deciding not to seek re-election in 1983. She has also served on the Zoning Board of Appeals, the Water Pollution Control Authority and the Democratic Town Committee.

Patterson has lived in Coventry since 1976 after growing up in Manchester, N.H. She has three children and three grandchildren. In a news release read this morning by Heath, Patterson said she supports the 1986-87 fiscal year proposed by the Democratic majority on the Town Council, and urged residents to support the $9.3 million spending plan at a referendum on Monday.

"To cut the budget any further would be irresponsible," she said. Some residents have complained about the 4.8-mill tax increase the budget would require.

Prague blasts GOP over education stall

By Jacqueline Bennett
Herald Correspondent

COVENTRY — Democratic state Rep. Edith Prague of Columbia came out swinging at her Republican counterparts when she addressed the Democratic Town Committee Tuesday night.

"Prague, who represents the 8th Assembly District, came to speak about the recent legislative session, and the issue of education seemed to be foremost on her mind. "There's a time when politics should step out of politics," she said, referring to the failure of the education bill. Prague blamed Republican Sens. Reginald Smith and Philip Robertson for his defeat.

"It's their fault we don't have an education package," she told the 25 committee members who attended the meeting at the Town Office Building. The bill, which was backed by the House of Representatives, failed to pass the Senate by one vote because of the Republican leadership she charged.

Prague said the recommendations of the bipartisan Committee for Equity and Excellence in Education for a model state starting salary of $19,300 and other increases for teachers "would have made education more attractive for people to go into and stay, but the Republicans made it political — they wanted to put their stamp on it."

The compromise package, requiring towns to reach a $20,000 starting salary within three years, returned from the Senate to the House in an unacceptable and "Prague" form. Prague said it lacked on funding for second license plates and a $25 million revenue sharing plan.

According to Town Council Chairman Joan Lewis, state funding for education in Coventry was cut severely this year. If the town budget is rejected in an upcoming referendum, education spending will probably be $6 million, she said.

The council has slashed the $6 million Budget of Education budget to $1,000. The board cut several teaching positions and instructional and other materials to help make up for the loss.

Prague said legislators would be back to work on the education issue next week and promised, "We will have an education package and Democrats will have something to say about it."

Coventry PZC leaves CFL rezoning on hold

COVENTRY — Planning officials again discussed a zone change on Broad and Mill streets, but took no action on the matter Monday.

Lemieux, owner of CFL Construction of Coventry, wants 22 acres rezoned from residential to light industrial so that he can build a warehouse to store construction equipment. He plans to build back on the property, but the road would have to be built through the wetlands to the building.

At a public hearing in April, several area residents said they opposed the rezoning, citing a fear that further industrial development will depreciate the value of their property. Other concerns include: increased noise, industrial waste disposal and the poor condition of Broad and Mill Streets, which some residents said cannot handle heavy vehicle traffic.

Gatzkiewicz said Route 31 is another problem. "It's a state road, Route 31 is out of our hands, but it's bumpy and may be too narrow for overwide vehicles," he said.

CFL is currently working on the state mandated sewer project in town. Lemieux has said some rezoning is left on his side and he needs the warehouse.

According to Gatzkiewicz, the town's Master Plan indicates the area would be good for light industrial development.

"The plan is 10 years old, single-family housing was sparse there. A lot has changed," she said. Eleven single-family homes have since been built across the street from Lemieux's land and the developer has proposed building 23 more. The residential growth is one reason Gatzkiewicz feels the rezoning may be inappropriate.

Gatzkiewicz said she thinks the PZC is currently split on Lemieux's application. The PZC must make a decision on the rezoning proposal by June 23.

Latchkey program studied in Bolton

By John Mitchell
Herald Reporter

BOLTON — Two working mothers contended Monday that town schools can't house a "latchkey" program for their children and said they will be considering other options as officials study the matter.

At a Board of Education meeting Thursday, School Superintendent Richard E. Packman said he would recommend a study to determine if the creation of a latchkey program is justified.

Lisa Allen is one of three mothers pushing for some type of program in which before- and after-school care would be provided for children whose parents work.

"It's still really in the planning stages," said Allen, a medical anthropologist.

The idea came about after the three parents, who represented a number of others, asked for a survey of town parents to see if the program was needed. They told the Board of Education that they and other working parents in Bolton are having problems getting care for their children before and after school.

"At this point, the feeling of the parents is we need to do an assessment," Allen said. "We want to see a quality program, not kids sitting inside watching TV."

Allen and Susan Frampton, who works at the Sickle Cell Service, toured Bolton Central School with Packman and Bolton Elementary School Principal Alan Rash Monday and looked into what type of space was available.

"What they found was not promising. 'It's clear that the inside of the school cannot handle this type of program,'" Allen said.

"Their feeling was that they didn't want kids to be there before school hours," Frampton said. The two agreed that there were problems with timing. "They use the same rooms for a number of different activities," Frampton said. "We'd have to move from room to room and that would cause problems."

Allen said that one reason it wouldn't work during the regular school day was that kindergarten enrollment is so high that all classrooms need to be used.

Rash said that another problem is a lack of storage space. She cited the fact that the school serves as a community center, as the main reason reason rooms wouldn't be available. "It's not typical in terms of an elementary school," she said.

Frampton said that alternatives include using the community room at the new firehouse and getting help from the churches that have nursery schools.

The women want to get their questionnaire out in the next couple of weeks. "Hopefully by the beginning of June, we'll be able to sit down and get organized," Frampton said.

Band ready for Montreal

Talbot gives $20,000 to Cheney Hall

Roger and Irene Talbot have contributed $20,000 toward the restoration of Cheney Hall, according to an announcement today from the Cheney Hall Executive Campaign Committee and the Little Theater of Manchester Inc.

Talbot, who operates the Ambulance Service of Manchester, told the Herald earlier this month that he had made a contribution to a charity after learning that he could not legally pay the town $20,000 he had agreed to pay under a contract for ambulance service in connection with the town's paramedic program.

State law prohibits such a payment.

"At the time, Talbot declined to identify the charity and said he had asked that it not be made public," he said. He told the Cheney Hall campaign committee to release the information about his contribution in whatever way it normally releases such information.

Talbot said that after an article was published about his contribution in the Herald May 7, he received calls from charities wanting contributions.

"The thing about baseball is, you've always got another game the next day."

SPORTS Celts in easy romp

By Frederick Waterman
United Press International

BOSTON — As the Milwaukee Bucks will attest, strategies that look good before a game can prove embarrassing in retrospect.

Despite Milwaukee's starting a pair of 7-footers, the Boston Celtics limited the Bucks to 12 points in the first quarter Tuesday night and went on to a 128-86 victory in the opener of their Eastern Conference final.

"On paper, we seem to match up well," said Milwaukee's Pat Mokeski. "But it just didn't seem to work out."

In the first quarter, Milwaukee shot just 17 percent as Boston rode a 2-6 surge to a 28-12 advantage. The Bucks, who missed 19 of 23 shots from the floor, tied six other teams for the NBA playoff low of points scored in an opening quarter.

"We just came out flat in the first quarter," said Ricky Pierce, who thought the emotionally draining seven-game triumph over the 76ers might have had an effect. "We were a little bit tired from the Philadelphia series."

The two agreed that there were problems with timing. "They use the same rooms for a number of different activities," Frampton said. "We'd have to move from room to room and that would cause problems."

Allen said that one reason it wouldn't work during the regular school day was that kindergarten enrollment is so high that all classrooms need to be used.

Ingleswood, Calif. — In squaring the Western Conference championship series, Ralph Sampson and Akeem Oluajuwon played like Towers of Power and the new Kareem Abdul-Jabbar look like an aging superstructure.

The 7-foot-4 Sampson scored 24 points, collected 16 rebounds and 5 blocked shots to spark the Houston Rockets to a 112-102 victory over the Los Angeles Lakers. But this was not a one-man show. By any means.

On a pair of Craig Hodges free throws and trailed thereafter. Boston led 7-6 at 7:30 when it started the decisive run, which included 10 points by Kevin McHale. Reserve center Bill Walton came in to score 9 during the break after Robert Parish was whiffed for three fouls in the first 7:55.

The sport included back-to-back 8-point plays by Jerry Sicking and Walton, whose down-the-lane slam over four Bucks drew a standing ovation from the sellout crowd of 14,880. His free throw provided a 41-14 lead which a pair of McHale jumpers extended to 46-16.

In the third quarter, Milwaukee shot just 17 percent as Boston rode a 2-6 surge to a 28-12 advantage. The Bucks, who missed 19 of 23 shots from the floor, tied six other teams for the NBA playoff low of points scored in an opening quarter.

McHale said the Celtics' play on Tuesday night was simply too good for Milwaukee to match.

"We did everything we wanted to do and he's playing that well, you just go into a total funk," he said.

Bird pointed to Boston's defense as the primary reason for the game's lopsided outcome.

"I don't think we did anything special, we just played good man-to-man defense," he said. "And we know how to play defense because we've been together so long."

In its last playoff game May 4, Boston limited the Atlanta Hawks to 6 points in the third quarter, the all-time playoff low for a quarter.

McHale finished with 10 points against the Bucks, all in the first half. Walton had 15 and Dennis Johnson 14.

Milwaukee, which shot 38 percent overall, was led by Fields' 18 points and Hodges added 14.

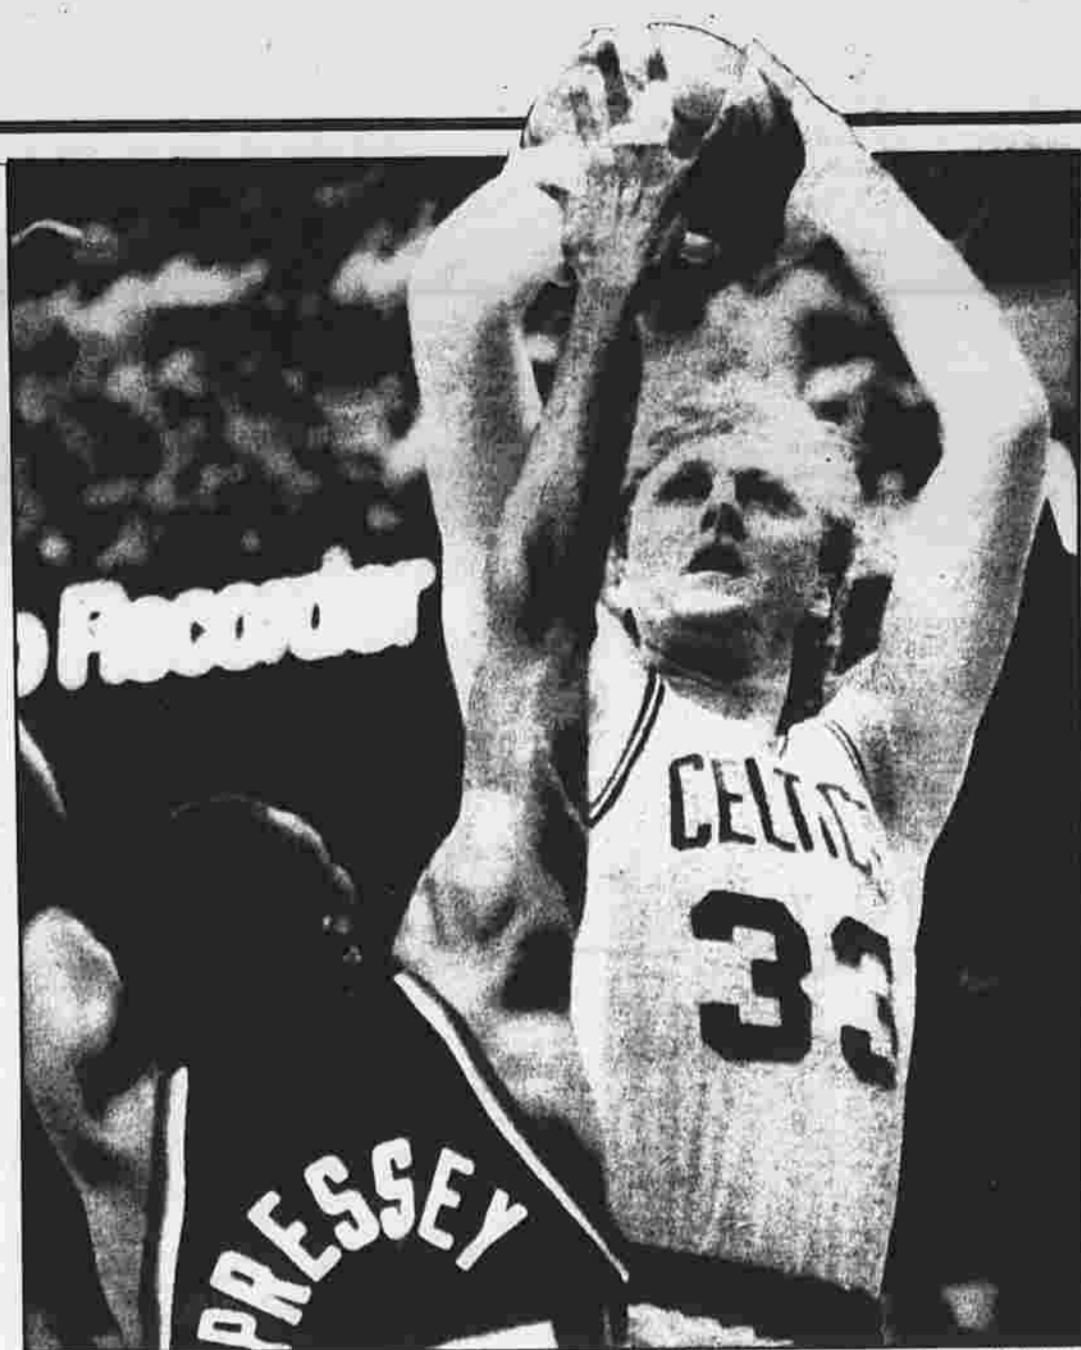

Boston, 8-1 in post-season play, won its 27th consecutive home game. The Celtics have lost only once in 47 home contests this year.

John went to spring training with the Minnesota Twins in St. Paul. He is expected to be in the Minnesota locker room, Alton Lister said his team will forget Game 1 and concentrate on Game 2.

"You can't dwell on the past," he said. "You can't try to figure it out. Once it's over and all you can do is prepare for the next one."

The Rockets will host Game 3 of the best-of-seven series Friday night in the Summit, with Game 4 Sunday afternoon, also at Houston. Los Angeles, which trailed by 14 points with about 14 minutes left, crept within 106-96 on Abdul-Jabbar's layup with 4:32 remaining, but teammate Bryon Scott then missed a layup and jumper.

Yankees win behind John

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Tommy Jones once dreamed of winning 300 major-league games, but those dreams were crushed by injuries.

Crushed dreams, however, didn't mean crushed spirit for the New York Yankees' left-hander, who turns 43 on May 27.

John went to spring training with the Minnesota Twins in St. Paul. He is expected to be in the Minnesota locker room, Alton Lister said his team will forget Game 1 and concentrate on Game 2.

Moore puts clamps on Red Sox

By Tommy Jones
Herald Reporter

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Donnie Moore, encountering problems the year after setting a California Angels' record with 31 saves, is out of commission with a sore shoulder.

It's safe to say Doug Corbett hasn't been beset with sympathy pains.

Getting a chance to reclaim his almost-forgotten glory, Corbett picked up his fourth straight save in the Angels' 5-4 victory over the Boston Red Sox Tuesday night.

"This is the best I've ever pitched in a California uniform. And the best I've felt about it," said Corbett.

His four saves match his total for the previous three seasons, which saw him decline from the lofty status he attained by saving 40 games for the Minnesota Twins in 1980-81.

"I don't want to talk about the past, just the present," said Corbett after lowering his earned run average to 1.23 for eight appearances.

He has allowed only eight hits in 22 innings, but was never more dramatic than Tuesday night, when he protected a one-run lead by pitching out of an eight-inning, bases-loaded situation with none out.

Indians start over again

By Barry Wilner
The Associated Press

There's nothing like being on the wrong end of a rout to give your feet back. It was the key for Seattle.

The Cleveland Indians proved that Tuesday night, returning from a 12-3 loss the previous evening. The Indians were out of control last night.

The Indians had dropped four consecutive games after a 10-game winning streak ended last Friday. The first three defeats were close games.

Seattle's triple play in the first inning came after Randy Reed and Ernie Riles walked to start the game. Cecil Cooper grounded to first baseman Alvin Davis, who threw to Domingo Ramos at second to force Riles.

UConn basketball coach, the $64,000 question

Who's going to be the new University of Connecticut men's basketball coach? That's the $64,000 question going around.

There have been reports that the candidate list has been whittled down quickly to a trio of names — Jim Calhoun from Northeastern, Mitch Buonaguro from Fairfield and Nick Macarubuk of Canisius. There was a slight rumor going around when Don Pemco resigned as head coach that Terry Holland, the head coach at Virginia, was seen at Bradley International Airport. It would make sense inasmuch as the new UConn president, John Casten III, came from Virginia.

But I guess that was nothing more than a rumor. It would be nice, though, to get a solid coach and recruiter out of the Atlantic Coast Conference.

The three finalists — if that's what they are — have impressive credentials. Calhoun, at Northeastern, has guided the "other Huskies" into NCAA bubble three straight times. Northeastern won the CCAA North Atlantic title the last three years and Calhoun has had five players drafted by the NBA.

Impressive.

Buonaguro, long-time assistant to Rollie Massamin at Villanova, took over a floundering Fairfield program and everyone at that end of the state at least 19 games in four of the last five years. He is a former assistant under Dave Gavitt, the Big East Conference's commissioner, at Providence College. Macarubuk does have some ties to UConn in Howie Dickenman. Dickenman is a former assistant under Macarubuk at Canisius.

There are those who are rooting for Calhoun, a proven winner at Northeastern. Others like Buonaguro, particularly off of what he accomplished in one year at Fairfield and his age, 32. Macarubuk is 44. Calhoun is 42. Macarubuk is the darkhorse.

Whoever does land the job, good luck. He'll be starting at the bottom of the Big East, with the much of a recruiting class coming in, and hungry Husky fans looking for someone to guide them out of the dark side of the forest.

The man who "wins" the job has his work cut out for him.

Task force critical

So, what did you expect. Did you expect them to come back with a report that said everything is rosy with UConn athletics.

FOCUS/Food

THINK SUMMER...THINK SALADS

From the first breath of spring to the first fall chill, thoughts are focused on the special joys of the sun-drenched season—vacations, fun-filled weekends or just occasional lazy days to spend at the beach or in a hammock under a tree. Thoughts turn, too, to the salads of summer...so cool, so refreshing, and as appealing to the eye as to the palate.

Gone are the days when a salad consisted of a few limp leaves of lettuce topped with a pale slice of tomato. Today, the salads of summer are often main-dish salads featuring meat, poultry, seafood, or pasta, plus various fruits and vegetables, the whole enhanced by any one of a myriad of delicious dressings, even artistically bottled and standing ready on the pantry shelf.

A different commercial dressing provides the "seasoning" in each of the following recipes. All contain a blend of spices and herbs for a perfect balance of color, taste and texture. There are a vast variety of flavor choices among the "pourables," "spoonables," and dry mix dressings available in today's supermarket.

Another pantry item that adds a fresh, sweet touch to an entree salad is California cling peaches. Use your favorite type and taste—packed as halves, slices or in fruit cocktail, regular or light, in juice or with extra light syrup. California peaches are picked at the peak of freshness for best flavor and greatest nutrition retention.

An always welcome companion to the summer salad bowl is the frosty, iced tea pitcher. Truly refreshing because it is non-sweet and non-carbonated, iced tea has a clean, fresh taste that goes well with all types of dishes. Make it with a quality brand following one of the easy methods below.

Prepare fish in microwave for tender, flaky results

Fishing season is open. If you have a fisherman in the family, you have some delicious ways to prepare that catch in the microwave.

Fish prepared this way achieves tender, flaky results in a minimum of time. Because fish is tender, most varieties cook very satisfactorily at full power. To see if the fish is done, gently lift the flesh in the center of the fish, using fork tines. The flesh should begin to flake. It will continue cooking during the standing time.

Fish cannot be successfully reheated unless the fish is in a sauce. The reheating time is often equal to the cooking time, and the fish will become tough from overcooking.

Whole trout can be stuffed or poached in a Pyrex or other regular microwave cooking utensil, or it can be prepared in a clay pot. The clay pot is a moist heat method of cooking which is a modern adaptation of an ancient cooking method. The results will be superb. If using the clay pot, follow the manufacturer's directions carefully for preparing the clay pot for use in the microwave. Staking is an essential part of this preparation.

- 2 tablespoons fresh snipped parsley
- 1 tablespoon fresh snipped chives
- In a medium bowl, combine mayonnaise, sour cream, lemon juice and mustard. Mix well. Fold in celery, capers, pimiento, parsley and chives. Cover and refrigerate until serving time. Serve over hot fish.
- Continental whole fish in a clay pot
- Garlic salt to taste
- 1 cleaned whole fish (approx. 2 1/2 pounds)
- Garlic salt to taste
- 1/2 cup chopped fennel
- 1/2 cup sliced celery
- 1/2 cup chopped radishes
- 3 tablespoons butter
- 3 tablespoons white wine
- Soak clay pot and lid in cold water for 20 minutes, or according to manufacturer's directions. Soak in fish, onion, leeks, and radishes. Sprinkle cavity of fish with garlic salt. In a small bowl, combine fennel, leeks, and radishes. Stuff fennel mixture into cavity of fish. The fish cavity with string to hold stuffing. Place fish on a microwave rack or inverted saucers in a 4 quart clay pot. Place butter in a custard cup. Microwave on high for 30 seconds, or until melted. Stir in wine. Wipe sword or spinach leaves around the entire fish. Drizzle butter mixture over the fish. Cover with clay-pot lid. Microwave at full power for 40 to 45 minutes, or until center of fish is beginning to flake when tested with a fork. Give clay pot a half turn once during the cooking time. Serve fish with cooking juices.

Poached whole trout with creamy caper sauce

POACHING LIQUID:
2 cups water
1 cup white wine
1/2 cup chopped carrot
1/2 cup chopped celery
1/2 cup chopped onion
6 sprigs parsley

4 lemon slices
1 large bay leaf
16 whole peppercorns

1/2 teaspoon salt
In a casserole, 3 to 4 quarts, combine all of the above ingredients. Cover and microwave at full power for 8 to 10 minutes, or until boiling.

Fish:
2 whole trout, cleaned, weighing approximately 12 ounces each

Wrap each trout in cheesecloth, leaving enough cheesecloth at each end of trout to use to lift trout into and out of casserole. Lower trout into hot poaching liquid. Cover and microwave at high for approximately 8 minutes, or until center of fish is beginning to flake when tested with a fork. Turn fish over once during cooking time. Let stand for 5 minutes. Cover. Lift fish from poaching liquid using cheesecloth. Serve with creamy caper sauce. See recipe below. Yields 2 servings.

Creamy caper sauce:
1/2 cup mayonnaise
1/2 cup dairy sour cream
2 teaspoons lemon juice
2 teaspoons Dijon-style mustard
1/4 cup finely chopped celery
2 tablespoons drained capers
2 tablespoons chopped pimiento

Basic stuffed whole fish

1 recipe of rice stuffing (see recipe below)

1 fish (2 1/2 to 3 pounds) cleaned and whole

2 tablespoons butter
1/2 teaspoon dried basil
1/2 teaspoon leaf oregano
Lemon slices

Prepare stuffing according to the recipe below. Fill cavity of the cleaned whole fish with the stuffing. The fish cavity closed in several places with string so fish holds shape. Place stuffed fish on microwave rack or inverted saucers in a 9-by-18-inch baking dish. Place fish in a microwave oven. Microwave at full power for 30 seconds, or until melted. Stir in basil and oregano. Brush butter mixture over surface of fish. Top with lemon slices. Cover with vented plastic wrap. Microwave at full power for 12 to 14 minutes, or until center of fish is beginning to flake when tested with a fork. Give dish a half turn once during the cooking time. Let stand for 5 minutes. Yields 4 servings.

Apartment refunds difficult

By Martin Sloan
United Feature Syndicate

DEAR MR. SLOANE: Your recent column brought to light a problem which I live in apartments face in getting refunds. Rochelle Olkey of Boca Raton, Fla., complained that she could not obtain a $2 refund from the redemption house our winery. Ed & Gallo, used during a recent promotion. Apparently, she received a letter stating she was ineligible for the offer since a refund had already been sent to her address. (She lives in a high-rise condominium.)

I think I can explain what happened. The redemption house uses a computer to keep track of refunds so that one consumer or address does not unfairly receive more than one refund. Whenever apartment dwellers forget to list their apartment numbers in their addresses, the computer assumes, sometimes incorrectly, that the second address lives in a house that has already been sent a refund.

Olkey's difficulty is of serious concern to us. We spread a great deal of time working out all possible problems before a promotion begins, so that all of our customers, including apartment dwellers, can participate in our money-saving offers.

Had Olkey written us, we would have promptly refunded her money — and reimbursed her for her postage costs as well. Her refund is now in the mail. We both thank you for raising this issue, and we invite your readers to contact us directly should they have any problems with our wines or promotions. The address is Ed & Gallo Winery, Modesto, CA 95253. DANIEL J. SOLOMON
COMMUNICATIONS DIRECTOR, ED & GALLO

DEAR MARTIN: I enjoyed reading your column, and the kudos you gave to Publix supermarkets for their child-safety signs are deserved. But I think you should mention Winn Dixie as well.

Winn Dixie stores in my area not only have "Watch Your Child" signs on shopping carts, but they've also gone one step further. Many of the carts now have special seats with safety straps that hold a child firmly in place.

In the second of two that a parent turns his or her head to reach for an item on the shelf, a child could fall from an ordinary cart. With safety straps, it can't happen. Winn Dixie should be commended!

Dance teacher focuses on simple meals, picnics

By Nancy Poppo
Herold Reporter

Priscilla Gibson feels more at home executing pies and pastries than turning out souffles and sorbets.

That's not surprising. As owner and lead teacher at Priscilla Gibson School of Dance Arts on East Middle Turnpike, she puts in far more hours at the barre than at the stove.

Her busiest hours are between 3 and 9 p.m., when her students are available. She manages to have supper in her home in Bolton only one evening a week.

But this doesn't mean that Gibson has given up on culinary efforts completely. It's just that she focuses on simple impromptu meals and afternoon picnics. "This family will pick up and go off to a picnic at a moment's notice," she said.

To simplify these last-minute take-offs, she's always got fruit, cheese and vegetable sticks in the refrigerator, cookies and imitation crabmeat in the freezer. She also keeps the ingredients for her two favorite dips on hand: Hidden Valley ranch-style dressing to mix with sour cream, and curry powder to stir into mayonnaise.

Simple doesn't mean slouched at a Gibson picnic. The Gibsons take glass goblets, their best silverware, and cloth tablecloths on their picnics. There is often a pair of candlesticks in the wicker picnic basket, as well.

The family's favorite picnic spots are Devil's Hopyard State Park, Quabbin Reservoir in West. Mass., and Wickham Park. "But there are all kinds of fantastic picnic places around the state," she said.

Here are some of the Gibsons' favorite picnic dishes. The chocolate cake is one which came from Gibson's grandmother. "It was always my favorite as a little girl," she said. Fortunately, all that work in her ballet studio keeps her figure trim, and allows for occasional indulgences, like these.

Early-retirement plans widespread

How would you respond if your employer unexpectedly offered you a chance to retire — with special benefits — in advance of the usual date? Would you grab this as a way out of a stressful, complicated situation? Or would you shrink from making a decision for which you are unprepared and which would affect the rest of your life?

Increasing numbers of companies, including the giants as well as small businesses, are looking to early retirement programs as a graceful way to trim payrolls and cut costs. United Carbide, Polaroid, CBS, Phillips Petroleum, and Exxon are among companies recently making early retirement offers.

Most of these offers are take-it-or-leave-it packages, usually loaded with incentives. What happens if an employee chooses to "leave" is not always clear — not yet, anyway.

Sylvia Porter

These programs target older employees — 50 years old, or more likely 55 and up. As sweeteners, employers may offer enhanced pension benefits, sometimes coupled with cash or other bonuses. Or they also may continue to make available medical benefits for those postretirement years.

About one-third of 529 companies surveyed late in 1985 by Hewitt Associates, a benefits consulting firm, had used early retirement offers, and another 50 expect to offer a plan sometime in 1986.

Of those offering an early retirement program, 80 percent provided improved or liberalized pension benefits; 51 percent offered a cash payout, too.

Of those eligible to accept or not to take the offer, 36 percent, on average, accepted and retired.

Unmistakable fact: More and more of you who are employees will have to face this type of program and try to reach a decision that fits into and improves your lifestyle.

If you suddenly face this choice, careful assessment of your situation is crucial, even if your inclination is to panic, rather than analyze.

Many employers provide counseling along with the information about the deal. If it's available, use it.

"People most likely to know about income —" says Maryann Laketek, a consultant at Hewitt — "how much, what will be coming in retirement programs at all over their plan sometime in 1986."

Maryann, executive director of Consumer Financial Institute, in Newton, Mass., says, "Can I afford to retire?" and "If I do, what's the best way to use the resources the company will make available?"

To answer the first question, review your assets and sources of income.

"Early retirement is really a family decision," Barbee says. "For example, if your spouse works, you can rely on that income along with your pension and Social Security (if you're eligible). Possibly you and your children can continue on your spouse's benefit plan."

Consider, too, whether you want to look for another job, or even switch fields. Or is this the chance you've been yearning for — to use your accumulated capital and borrowing power to go into your own business?

As you pull together income from all sources and match it against your current expenses, you may discover that you can live relatively comfortably.

Honestly ask yourself, "How secure is my job?" As Maryann Laketek advises: "Will you be laid off after this stress is all over, but without the financial incentives?"

Do you have a future where you are? "The choice stands out boldly when it is put in these terms: Retire when your company gives you resources and years to plan, or retire when you merely have time to clear out your desk."

Peking's trendsetters like first cocktail bar

PEKING (UPI) — Peking's first cocktail bar for Chinese, offering mixed drinks like "The Golden Dream," has become a prime nightspot for young trendsetters since communist authorities allowed it to open last month on a trial basis, said the bar's staff said today.

The "New Times" bar, glittering behind a facade of neon lights in Peking's western district, caters to fashion-conscious young Chinese eager to sample some of the West's most sophisticated tastes, according to the official Xinhua News Agency.

Inside the dimly lit bar, a young waiter with stylishly coiffed hair and Western suit stands attentively behind a counter, offering drinks few Chinese have ever heard of, let alone tasted.

"We have Manhattan, Tom Collins and Vodka Bronx," the bar's 25-year-old supervisor, Li Zhongnan, told a recent visitor, rattling off a list of American favorites transliterated into Chinese.

The cocktail menu also includes original blends like "The Golden Dream," a concoction of whiskey, vermouth, orange juice and curacao, said Li, who asks patrons to call him Drinks.

Drinks cost around 4 yuan (11.23 each, expensive for the Peking worker, who earns an average monthly wage of 95 yuan ($30)).

The New Times is the first Western-style cocktail lounge to open for Peking's 9 million residents since the 1949 communist revolution, Li said. Hotel bars in Peking cater to foreigners and are restricted for Chinese citizens.

In a departure from communist puritanism, Chinese officials authorized the New Times owners, the Peking No. 2 Cake Factory, to open the bar last month on a "trial basis," Li said.

Advice

Excessive use of perfume may render you friendless

DEAR ABBY: A reader named "Audrey" writes: "When you can smoke and keep all the smoke inside yourself and not blow it into the air I must breathe then you have the right to smoke, but you don't have the right to decide that I must breathe in your smoke."

Now, please quote me: "When you can wear perfume, cologne and after-shave and keep all the aroma inside yourself and not fill the air I must breathe, then you don't have the right to decide that I must breathe in your perfume, cologne and after-shave."

Let's hear if for signs that read: "Thank you for not wearing perfume, cologne or after-shave."

FRANK IN PHOENIX

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

My husband and I have checking accounts in three separate financial institutions, none of which return the original checks with their statements. So a thank-you note would never be seen by either one of us.

So, for those who are too lazy to write a thank-you note for a check, a telephone thank-you would be better than none at all.

The common courtesy of a thank-you note is a combination of personal caring for the feelings of others, sincere gratitude and parental teaching. I have a 12-year-old niece who still does not write a thank-you note unless I make a federal case out of it. For her 13th birthday, instead of a gift, I plan to write her a letter explaining that I am tired of having to ask for a thank-you, so I'm not sending her anything. Think she'll get the message? (Her mother is just as bad.)

CHRIS P.

DEAR CHRIS: Most parents have to remind, nag, threaten or bribe their children to write thank-you notes. Some parents are so embarrassed or impatient, they write the notes themselves and beg the child to "copy it."

I believe that children learn responsibility from having to own the consequences of their own actions. To rush in and rescue an ungrateful, procrastinating or lazy child teaches him only that if he doesn't do it, Mama'll do it.

Not everyone feels the same about receiving a "thank-you." Some give for the joy of giving and others to get something in return. If you are the latter, your children will know. However, people with good manners send a written note of thanks — promptly.

DEAR FRANK: Now that fragrances have become big business, one enters a crowded elevator without a gas mask at his or her own risk. The problem is not actually perfume, cologne or after-shave—it's the "smelly goods" who drench themselves in it.

Let's be fair, Frank. While too much can be merely annoying, it's life-threatening only to those who are highly allergic. The solution: all fragrances should be labeled.

Warning: Use sparingly. Excessive amounts may render you friendless.

LISTEN, ABBY: I'm sick and tired of reading about the "rights" of non-smokers to shove smokers

SMOKEY SAM FROM DELAWARE

LISTEN SAM: You lose.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding your response that "thank you" scribbled on the back of a check (given as a gift) is better than no thank-you at all. Not in our case.

It's best to see the doctor

DEAR DR. GOTT: Quite often I have problems with both ways. During these attacks I get some numbness and a burning sensation up through my chest, my arms and hemmorrhoids and pass a light yellow stool.

Could this be an ulcer or a diet problem?

Dr. Gott
Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What problems can occur because of a reduction of white blood cells? Does this condition indicate a serious disease?

DEAR READER: White blood cells are the body's infection fighters; therefore, any reduction in their number is a cause for concern. There is a wide variation in white-cell counts, and some innocuous viral infections (like mononucleosis) are associated with temporary reduction in the white-cell population. Physicians take very seriously any severe or longstanding low white-cell count, because such a reduction can make the patient extremely vulnerable to any and all infections. In my opinion, a persistent low white-cell count requires medical evaluation.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have had a problem with my ears for two years. They are damp and itchy deep inside. My doctor says he can't see anything wrong. I do have allergy problems. Could this be the cause of the itching and earaches?

DEAR READER: Allergies could certainly be the cause of your ear problems, as could a chronic skin infection (like yeast). Wait until you are having symptoms again, and then get in to see an ear-nose-and-throat specialist. The doctor will be able to tell more about your ears if you are seen at a time in which your symptoms are active.

cloisonne enamel to its original beauty and luster.

DEAR MRS. G.K.: Cloisonne enamel cleaner, furniture polish and window cleaner, all use a simple detergent and water solution. Just mix a little mild dishwashing liquid in warm water and let the jewelry soak in it for a couple of minutes. If necessary, rub the pieces gently with a soft cloth dipped in the solution or with a very soft toothbrush. Do not use anything abrasive such as a stiff brush, since this might scratch the finish. When the jewelry is clean, rinse in clear water and dry it with a soft cloth. This should restore the

Surprise party fetes Fracchias

Mr. and Mrs. Lebero Fracchia of 260 Spring St. were surprised with a 50th wedding anniversary party recently at Vito's Birch Mountain Inn in Bolton.

The couple was married April 17, 1936, in St. James Church, where both are members. He was born in Italy. Mrs. Fracchia, the former Emily Pillard, is a Manchester native.

The couple's two daughters, Mrs. Russell (Nancy) McKinney of Manchester and Mrs. Michael (Janet) Strange of Cheshire, gave the party. The Fracchias' six grandchildren were among the 100 relatives and friends at the party.

Fracchia retired from the Manchester Police Department, where he had served as a dog warden for more than 30 years. Previously, he owned and operated his own service station, Lee's Esso, on Center Street. He has been a volunteer member of the town of Manchester Fire Department Co. 1. He's a dog trainer and a fisherman, and belongs to several area sportsmen's clubs.

Mrs. Fracchia was active for many years in the Manchester Senior Citizens' Center. She is a charter member of the Manchester W.A.T.S.

Thoughts

President Lincoln was taken to task for his attitude toward his enemies. He was constantly asked, "Why do you try to make friends of them? You know that they will betray you." "You should try to destroy them," Lincoln graciously replied, "Am I not destroying my enemies when I make them my friends? And a friend is never a traitor."

Lincoln critics remind us of an immature pose of brothers, James and John. When James was

United Press International

UNION, Ill. (UPI) — What appears to be Adolf Hitler's personal photo album from World War I has surfaced in a collection sent home from Germany by a young World War II Army private in 1945.

Technical testing requested by United Press International and the opinions of two University of Chicago scholars tend to support the authenticity of the album, taken as a war trophy from Hitler's Munich, Germany, headquarters during the Allies' advance at the end of World War II.

The former G.I., who asked to be identified only as "Bill," told UPI he found the album and two second-edition copies of "Mein Kampf" in a small, sparsely furnished room in Hitler's private home from Germany by a young World War II Army private in 1945.

Veteran recalls finding Hitler memorabilia

By Marci Persky-Hooper
United Press International

CARY, Ill. — In the closing days of World War II, a 20-year-old Army private scavenging the bombed-out rubble of Munich discovered what he believes are the personal photographs of Adolf Hitler.

Forty years later as he was cleaning the attic of his northern Illinois home, the veteran nearly threw out the red leather-bound album containing 68 black-and-white photographs apparently taken during World War I.

The snapshots show a young Cpl. Hitler posing with members of his regiment of the 16th Bavarian Reserve Infantry. Some of the photographs depict war-ravaged areas of Belgium and northern France.

A forensic expert has verified the photographs were made during the time of World War I, and two historians, who examined the photographs, said there is nothing to dispute what he believes are the personal belongings of the Fuhrer, although they said it may be impossible to establish the fact conclusively.

Bill, a retired insurance claims manager who asked that his last name not be revealed to protect his privacy, said he remembers clearly the chaotic time when he found the photographs in the Prinzregentplatz, an elaborate building in a residential section of Munich that Hitler at one time called home.

Behr had been interested in them," he said. "Somebody could have gotten them before me easily

One of the undated photos in the collection bought by the Seven Acres Antique Village & Museum shows Adolf Hitler talking with Benito Mussolini at a train station. The collection also includes two second-edition copies of Hitler's "Mein Kampf."

Nice home has history, great view

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — In the market for a nice size home with a rich history and a great view...

The historic 81-year-old, 28-room French Renaissance-style Harbor Court mansion on the former home of multimillionaire John Nicholas Brown and his high society wife, Ann Southwick Kinsolving Brown, is up for sale.

Brown, who was known as the "world's richest baby" because he was fed milk from a cow that drank only distilled water, died in 1979 at age 79. His wife, a patron of the arts and a military historian, died last November, prompting their three children to put the mansion on the selling block for $4.5 million.

Brown's great-grandfather, Nicholas, an American manufacturer and philanthropist, founded Brown University in Providence. The deal includes 3.3 acres with a sweeping view overlooking Newport harbor, a landscaped knoll, formal garden, two playhouses, a stone-walled pond with footbridge, a greenhouse, ice house and carriage house.

The $4.5 million price tag is the highest asking price for a residence in the famed "City by the Sea." The mansion is located on the city's historic district, just off picturesque Ocean Drive.

"It is a glorious piece of property," said Newport Tax Assessor Richard Weiss.

The Browns' three children decided to sell the luxury mansion because maintenance costs have escalated to $275,000 a year and taxes run the family $27,335.

"We wouldn't be doing it if we didn't have to," said daughter Angela Fisher, who had her debutante ball in the mansion. "It's purely the U.S. tax man when they come and take 70 percent of your father's estate."

Santa Cruz slugs off and crawling

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (AP) — The Banana Slugs are off and crawling.

Chancellor Robert Seinsheimer of the University of California at Santa Cruz bowed to the will of the student body Tuesday, declaring the banana slug — a slimy, yellow, snail-like creature — will be the school's official mascot.

Seinsheimer, who last week said he wasn't going to go along with the unusual nickname that was the overwhelming choice of students, said he made the decision reluctantly. He said the designation would stand "until such occasion as the students might wish to hold another election."

The previous nickname of UC-Santa Cruz teams was the Sea Lions. Seinsheimer said he decided that he would not give a majority of the school's athletes indicated they'd rather be known as the Slugs than the Lions.

The councilor did get in a last word on the subject. He suggested in a prepared statement that the university support a program of genetic research upon the slug to improve the breed.

One picture shows Hitler standing among a group of eight men some with their heads bandaged. A spotted dog, identified as Hitler's dog, "Fuchs" or "Foxy," by author John Toland in his book, "Adolf Hitler," is in several pictures on the laps of various men

All the photographs have typed captions underneath, many bearing the words "Graben-RJ-16," identifying the men posed in trenches and in front of rubble and burned-out buildings as members of Hitler's infantry regiment.

Newborn said.

John Boyer, professor of German and Austrian history, also at the University of Chicago, said he generally agreed with Newborn, who has a more specific specialty in the Nazi era.

Also in the collection are letters, some on Hitler's personal stationery, written by Bill to tell his wife of the University of Chicago, said he

"I wrapped them up and sent them home through the Army Post office there," Bill said.

Bill said he wasn't sure when Hitler had abandoned the apartment. "I wouldn't say it looked like he just jumped out of his drawers and ran out," he said. Hitler committed suicide in his Berlin headquarters in 1945 as Soviet troops entered the city.

The artifacts remained stored in Bill's attic for nearly 40 years.

"I said to my wife, 'The girls aren't going to want these things. We don't want them any more, and they're going to be up in the attic where it's hot as a pistol in the summer, cold in the winter and damp throughout. They're just going to deteriorate...'"

Bill eventually sold the items to Danley, owner of the Seven Acres Antique Village & Museum in Union, Ill.

Scientists fear threat of mosquito

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A hardy Asian mosquito that may carry disease that has struck more than 300,000 people in Brazil could establish itself all over the United States after its recent arrival, a scientist says.

Dr. Chet Moore, an entomologist with the Centers for Disease Control in Fort Collins, Colo., said the insect, previously unknown in this country, has been found in Memphis, Houston, Jackson, Miss., and near New Orleans.

That prompted officials to believe it may have arrived on ships bringing goods from the Orient, he said. The normal habitat of the mosquito, scientific name Aedes albopictus, is in the Far East and South Pacific.

"It means this is an incredibly adaptable mosquito, and so it could conceivably establish itself over large portions of the United States," he said Tuesday in a telephone interview.

Laboratory tests on the species show it can carry several types of encephalitis that can affect humans, Moore said. And officials are primarily worried that the mosquito can carry dengue virus, a potentially fatal fever related to Yellow Fever, he said.

"None of them as far as we are aware have the virus," he said.

There is a major epidemic of about 300,000 dengue cases in Brazil, although no one has died yet, said Moore.

He said the last known outbreak of dengue in the United States was in 1980 in Texas. No one died, but a 1981 epidemic in Cuba killed 156 people.

Dengue, a disease of the tropics and sub-tropics, is common worldwide but unusual in the United States. It is characterized by severe pain in the joints and the back, fever and a rash.

Soviet Union expels U.S. diplomat

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union ordered a U.S. Embassy defense attaché to leave the country because he was caught spying, the official news agency Tass said today.

Embassy spokesman Jaroslav Verner said the diplomat, Erik Sites, left the Soviet Union on Saturday. Verner declined comment on the espionage allegations made by Tass.

The Tass report was attributed to the KGB secret police. It was the second time this year that an American diplomat was ordered out of the Soviet Union. In March, the Soviets expelled Michael Sellers, an embassy second secretary.

Asked if Sites held a military rank, Verner said, "I don't have that." He said Sites was a member of the staff of the defense attaché's office but declined to say how long he had been in Moscow.

Jakarta rocked by explosions

JAKARTA, Indonesia — Police said bombs exploded today at a national monument and outside an office building, but that three primitive projectiles fired at the Japanese and American embassies failed to blow up.

No casualties were reported in any of the incidents.

Police said a Japanese suspect was arrested and that they were seeking three Libyans.

Intelligence sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said there were unconfirmed reports that the three Libyans sought had been denied permission to visit the island of Bali a week before President Reagan's arrival April 29 for talks with President Suharto and the Association of Southeast Asian Nation foreign ministers.

Reagan tries to save arms deal

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, hoping to turn around a fight considered central to his Middle East policy, is training his persuasive and political powers on Congress to salvage a $354 million arms sale to Saudi Arabia.

In contrast to the detached role he played in the arms sale debate, which led to back-to-back setbacks last week, Reagan is twisting Senate arms to escape a searing blow to his foreign policy.

A pair of meetings Tuesday with Senate Republicans, where he warned that blocking the missile sale could damage U.S. credibility for years, was to be followed by additional lobbying today and Thursday before he carries out his threat to veto the resolution defunding the deal.

Reagan told GOP leaders Tuesday he "will have no choice" but to veto the resolution. With that action, expected later this week, the fate of the deal will rest on whether he can survive a veto override attempt by Congress.

Trade debate will be partisan battle

WASHINGTON — This year's trade deficit may be as high as last year's record deficit, Treasury Secretary James Baker says, assuring a continuing partisan battle over who is to blame and what to do about it.

Meanwhile, the White House and congressional Republicans look aim at a House Democratic trade reform bill Tuesday, calling it a protectionist measure that would spark a trade war.

House and Senate Democrats countered that Congress is forced to take matters into its own hands because the administration must not delay funding and, ultimately, construction of America's permanently manned space station.

Administrator James Fletcher, sworn in Monday to lead NASA out of its deepest crisis, planned a news conference today to announce the operative legislation to determine the final design of the planned space station.

The station design is expected to feature two large American laboratory modules, a third from the European Space Agency and a fourth from Japan in an $8 billion project mandated by President Reagan, who in 1984 called for the station's completion within a decade.

"The immediate problem is pretty clear to all of us," Fletcher said, referring to the Challenger disaster. "Beyond that, I think NASA does have to keep its eye on the future. It is a future-oriented agency and it's designed to be that way."

Fletcher: Space station is a must

WASHINGTON — The new chief of the space agency says NASA must "keep its eye on the future" and that the Challenger disaster must not delay funding and, ultimately, construction of America's permanently manned space station.

Former Nazi sentenced to death

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia — The 86-year-old former interior minister of the Nazi puppet state of Croatia was found guilty today of ordering the murders of hundreds of thousands of people during World War II, and sentenced to death by firing squad.

Andrija Artukovic, who was extradited by the United States on Feb. 12, and tried by a five judge panel of ordering the killing of 231,000 Jews, Gypsies, Serbs and political prisoners. The judicial panel, headed by Milko Gajski, said Artukovic was guilty of "crimes against humanity" as well as crimes against international law and war crimes.

The state-run Tanjug news agency said, "Thus the month-long trial of the Himmler of the Balkans, responsible for the death of several hundred thousand people and for the suffering of millions of Yugoslavs, finally ends."

It's the thought that counts

WARSAW, Poland — The government will send blankets and sleeping bags to New York's homeless in response to an "arrogant" U.S. decision to send milk to Poland because of dairy contamination from the Chernobyl nuclear disaster.

To a chorus of laughs from journalists, government spokesman Jerzy Urban said Tuesday the American government milk would be accepted, but grudgingly.

"The American milk is being served on a dirty plate," Urban said, containing the boot by unfriendliness and possibly by defects from long storage for which it will have to be tested.

In return, Poland will send 5,000 blankets and sleeping bags through a U.S. relief agency "because we have learned from the American press that in New York City there are many thousands of homeless people in the streets."

"This is staggering for Poles because it happens in such a rich country," Urban said.

Commission links porn to violence

NEW YORK — A Justice Department commission has concluded that most pornography sold in the United States is potentially harmful and can lead to violence. The New York Times reported today.

The Attorney General's Commission on Pornography, in its introduction to the report, urged action against pornography, including more severe penalties for violation of obscenity laws, the Times said.

The report and a 26-page list of recommendations are to be made public in July.

The commission found that exposure to most pornography "bears some causal relationship to the level of sexual violence, sexual coercion or unwanted sexual aggression," the Times said.

Sweden detects plutonium fallout

By Charles Mitchell
MOSCOW — Soviet officials briefed Western diplomats for the first time on the cause of the Chernobyl nuclear disaster, and scientists in Sweden reported they detected plutonium — one of the deadliest radioactive elements — in fallout from the accident.

The government newspaper Izvestia reported workers at Chernobyl Tuesday began covering the ground within 20 miles of the plant with a "special decontaminating film" to keep radioactive dust from seeping into the soil and water.

Government-run television said Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev addressed the nation tonight but gave no indication of the topic of his speech, though diplomats said they expected him to talk about the Chernobyl accident.

Representatives of 13 countries, including the United States, Britain, West Germany, Canada, Italy and Sweden, were called to a meeting with Soviet officials Tuesday and briefed on the explosion that touched off the disaster — the worst nuclear power plant accident in history.

The April 26 explosion at Chernobyl, 600 miles southwest of Moscow, released a radiation into the atmosphere as far away as Japan and the United States. Soviet officials say six people were killed in the accident and 35 remain in serious condition.

"The Soviets confirmed that it was a reaction brought about when superheated water (steam) came into contact with pipes when the cooling system failed that led to a chemical explosion," a U.S. Embassy spokesman said.

But, the spokesman said, diplomats were not told why the cooling system failed and "many questions went unanswered."

But Velikhov noted, "The reactor has not been rendered harmless yet.

He said workers were creating "a cooling zone" to reduce heat in the reactor.

"Preparations are under way to bury it," he said.

Pravda said "the liquidation of the accident's aftermath is only beginning," and that it will take a "long time, perhaps even months" to clean up the area.

Swedish experts said small quantities of plutonium, which remains in the environment for up to 24,300 years, were found in a rainwater sample on the country's east coast in recent days.

In an article Tuesday in the Communist Party newspaper

Pravda, Yevgeny Velikhov, the scientist in charge of cleanup operations at the plant, said efforts were continuing to entomb the damaged No. 4 reactor in concrete and contain the radiation.

But Velikhov noted, "The reactor has not been rendered harmless yet.

He said workers were creating "a cooling zone" to reduce heat in the reactor.

"Preparations are under way to bury it," he said.

It's woman vs. woman in Nebraska

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Nebraska guaranteed themselves their first female state legislator while "creating a little history" by setting the stage for the first woman-governor race in the state's largest gubernatorial primary state ever.

"We're creating a little history," said Orr, 47. "It's an exciting opportunity for us to make people aware of what Nebraska's all about."

"That has never happened in the history of our country, and I think that says something for Nebraska," said Boosalis, a Democrat and the first female mayor of a U.S. city of more than 100,000, were elected Tuesday from the state's largest gubernatorial primary state ever.

Republican state Treasurer Kay Orr and former Lincoln one-term Helen Boosalis, a Democrat and the first female mayor of a U.S. city of more than 100,000, were elected Tuesday from the state's largest gubernatorial primary state ever.

"We're creating a little history," said Orr, 47. "It's an exciting opportunity for us to make people aware of what Nebraska's all about."

Soviet dissident Anatoly Shcharansky is besieged by reporters while microphonically addressing President Reagan Tuesday. Shcharansky thanked the president for helping him win his freedom and urged continued efforts to gain freedom for other Soviet Jews.

Quiet diplomacy not enough, Shcharansky says of plight

By Tim Ahern
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Quiet diplomacy will not be enough to save other Jews who wish to emigrate from the Soviet Union, freed Soviet Jewish dissident Anatoly Shcharansky said today, adding that there must be public pressure on the Soviet government.

The gubernatorial race "is going to get a lot of attention at first but ... but I don't think that will be a sustained thing," said Orr, who was the first woman elected to statewide office in Nebraska in 1982. She had been appointed to fill a vacancy in 1981.

"I am proud for Nebraska and for my party, much more so than personally," she said.

"This election is about one thing, Nebraska's future, and which one of our candidates has the vision for that future," said Boosalis, who served two four-year terms as Lincoln's mayor beginning in 1975.

when he was freed Feb. 11 after almost three years in Soviet prisons, met Tuesday with Reagan, who has pushed for "quiet diplomacy" on the issue of Soviet Jews, the question of human rights, the question of Soviet Jewry, the question of free emigration are very closely connected with their basic economic and political interests.

He held a news conference later that day in which he said that the sale included polymer processing machinery and general machinery businesses. The price was not disclosed. The assets being sold by Emhart will become the Farrel Corp., a new company being formed by Interamerican Investment Group, First Funding Corp. and private investors.

In a prepared statement Tuesday, Emhart said the company's chief executive will be Rolf Liebergehel. Farrel operations are, located in Connecticut, Texas and England and produce polymer processing equipment and large machinery.

Emhart sold its Farrel roll products division earlier this month to the American subsidiary of Schwabe's Huettenwerke, a West German manufacturer of iron and steel processing equipment.

Libya challenges West to prove charges

LONDON (UPI) — Libya has challenged Western nations to prove it supports international terrorism, and Malta's prime minister said Libyan leader Muammar Khadafy wants to defuse the terrorism problem by meeting with European and Arab leaders.

The confrontation between Libya and countries accusing it of sponsoring terrorism took a new turn Tuesday when Italy expelled a Libyan diplomat from its post in Salerno, Sicily, for what was called "activities incompatible with his diplomatic status."

Whitehead, the No. 2 official at the State Department, also said in an interview with United Press International Tuesday that the United States "has no doubts about" Israeli claims Syria was involved in the Libyan-backed terrorist bombing of a West Berlin nightclub.

But Whitehead drew a distinction between Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy, "a self-confessed terrorist," and Syrian President Hafez Assad, who he said is "a very sane and reasonable man."

President Reagan ordered a bombing raid on Libya last month, but the attack was called off. Khadafy's government ordered and executed the April 5 attack on the LaBelle disco in West Berlin, where a U.S. serviceman and Turkish woman were killed and scores more wounded.

The new measures, Whitehead said, will put pressure on Khadafy and diminish the need for military action.

Asked about the U.S. response to Syria's purported involvement in the attack, Whitehead said, "That remains to be seen. We have to study all the information."

Bonnici to call for a conference of Western European nations and Arab leaders to discuss the terrorism problem.

Bonnici told reporters in Brussels on Tuesday that Khadafy was ready to discuss terrorism with Western European and Arab nations.

"I have reasons to believe that Libya would be prepared to take part in such a conference," said Bonnici, who met with Khadafy Jan. 15.

But he said countries such as France and Italy have shunned such a conference because of U.S. opposition to regional peace initiatives.

"The situation is very disturbing," he said. "If the Europeans let it drift, it will drift into more armed conflict and confrontation that would indeed involve more nations."

The challenge to the West to prove Libyan involvement in international terrorism came in a Tuesday editorial from the official Libyan news agency JANA, which called diplomatic expulsions by the West "arbitrary" and "unfounded."

BUSINESS

Heritage customers 'won't lose anything' in sale

By John F. Kirch
Herold Reporter

The sale of the financially troubled Heritage Savings and Loan Association should benefit area residents who have their money deposited at the Manchester-based institution, officials said today.

"They're not going to lose anything," Janet Hale, assistant treasurer at Heritage, said Tuesday. "You can't say 'no, they won't see any changes. But the changes they see will be increased services."

Under an agreement signed Tuesday, Suffolk Savings Bank is to purchase Heritage for an estimated $9 million by purchasing shares of common stock for $18.50 each. If shareholders and regulators approve the deal, Suffolk will form a holding company called the Suffolk Financial Corp. and will operate Heritage as a state-chartered savings bank rather than a savings and loan.

Suffolk officials said today that the purchase will allow an increase in services for Heritage customers, including a hike in the amount of mortgages the institution can approve.

Charles Smith, a senior vice president at Suffolk, said that while Heritage does not give many home mortgages, Suffolk's stronger financial base will increase Heritage's lending power.

"WE WILL REVITALIZE their lending ability in the Hartford and New Haven areas," Smith said. "For customers, it will affect them positively. Heritage will continue to do business as usual."

State officials said the change from a savings and loan association to a savings bank will mean little to Heritage's customers.

"There is very little difference between a savings and loan and a savings bank," said Cindy Weiss, public information officer at the state Department of Banking. "It has nothing to do with what will affect consumers. It is to do with their (the banks) investment powers."

A law passed by the General Assembly last year will eliminate almost all differences between S&Ls and savings banks by 1988, Weiss said.

She refused to speak directly on the Heritage-Suffolk deal.

Heritage and Suffolk signed the purchase agreement Tuesday morning after seven months of negotiations. It now goes to the stockholders of each bank and then to state and federal regulators for approval, a process that bankers have said could take nine months to a year.

In that time, Suffolk will form a holding company and raise cash to finish the purchase. Should it go through, as most officials think it will, combine assets of Suffolk and Heritage will total close to $550 million. The new bank will have 16 branches around the state.

SUFFIELD ANNOUNCED in October its intentions to buy the troubled Heritage, which has been strapped with a failing loan portfolio for the past few years.

Suffield was originally supposed to buy Heritage in a "stock swap." But changing circumstances have led to a cash purchase, officials said.

Since October, the stock value of each bank has changed. In addition, Smith said that at the time Suffolk signed a non-binding letter of intent last fall, the bank was not aware of the full extent of Heritage's loan problems.

"That changed the circumstances somewhat," Smith said. "A cash deal allows Heritage stockholders to invest any way they please."

Another problem, Smith said, is Heritage's municipal bond portfolio.

"We've taken a conservative, prudent view on those loans," Smith said. "The purchase price of the bank has been adjusted for the projected losses."

Heritage has been setting aside funds to cover potentially bad loans it acquired when it merged with Fidelity Federal Savings of New Haven in 1984. The loans are connected with the Landbank Equity Corp. of Virginia Beach, Va., Heritage officials have said.

Business In Brief

Inventories up 0.4% in March

WASHINGTON — Manufacturers and trade inventories increased 0.4 percent in March, the largest month-to-month inventory expansion since October 1985, the Commerce Department said today.

U.S. inventories were valued at an estimated $587.7 billion at the end of the month, after adjustment for seasonal changes, an increase of $2.6 billion over the revised February level of $585.1 billion.

Manufacturers and trade sales for the month decreased 1.6 percent or $6.8 billion to $429.3 billion. It was the third consecutive monthly decline and the largest decline since June 1985, when factory sales fell by 1.7 percent.

The ratio of inventories to sales for the month was 1.40, up 0.03 over the previous month. The ratio was higher than it has been since May 1983, when it was also 1.40, according to Census Bureau analysts.

Market opens on stronger note

NEW YORK — The stock market opened on a stronger note today as buyers returned their attention to the blue chips.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 5.21 to 1,790.55 by 10:30 a.m. on Wall Street, the largest gain since Oct. 1985.

Advances led declines by 509-496 on the New York Stock Exchange and 484 issues were unchanged. The NYSE composite index moved up 0.29 to 138.64.

Sperry topped the active list, up 1/4 at 73 1/2. The company today called Burroughs' $70-a-share takeover offer inadequate and announced plans to buy back 25 million shares of its own stock for $80 a piece. Burroughs gained 1/8 for 108.

Airline and auto stocks were among the actively traded issues in the early going. Eastern rose 3/8 to 9 1/2 and Republic was unchanged at 15 1/2. Ford went up 1/8 to 7 7/8 and Chrysler climbed 1/8 to 37 1/2.

Woolworth, which today said its first quarter earnings more than doubled from last year's first three months, gained 1/4 to 8 1/2.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones Industrial average dipped 1.99 to 1,785.34.

Northeast Savings reports income

HARTFORD — Northeast Savings F.A. is announcing net income of $42.3 million for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1986, compared to a $5.1 million net loss the previous fiscal year.

Net income per common share was $7.07 for 1985, compared to a loss of $2.08 per share the fiscal year before, the company said in a prepared statement Tuesday.

Net interest income for the year was $82.7 million, or an increase of 64 percent over $50.3 million reported last year, the company said.

Fourth-quarter net income was $10.8 million, or $1.67 per share. Last year, Northeast Savings reported a net loss of $3 million or 83 cents per share for the same period.

Emhart sells most of Farrel

FARMINGTON — Emhart Corp. is reporting the sale of the principal part of its Farrel operations in the United States and England.

The sale included polymer processing machinery and general machinery businesses. The price was not disclosed. The assets being sold by Emhart will become the Farrel Corp., a new company being formed by Interamerican Investment Group, First Funding Corp. and private investors.

In a prepared statement Tuesday, Emhart said the company's chief executive will be Rolf Liebergehel. Farrel operations are, located in Connecticut, Texas and England and produce polymer processing equipment and large machinery.

Emhart sold its Farrel roll products division earlier this month to the American subsidiary of Schwabe's Huettenwerke, a West German manufacturer of iron and steel processing equipment.

State firm designs for Corning

CORNING, N.Y. — Corning Glass Works has chosen a Connecticut firm to design its new world headquarters in this central New York city.

Kevin Roche, John Dinkeloo and Associates, the firm that designed the modernist headquarters for Union Carbide Corp. in Danbury, Conn., will design the Corning complex.

The company's other design projects include the Ford Foundation, UNICEF and Morgan Bank, all headquartered in New York City, and John Deere and Co. in Moline, Ill.

Dollar strengthens in Europe

LONDON — The dollar opened stronger today on major European money markets following a strong rally in Tokyo against the yen. Gold fell slightly.

The dollar opened in Paris at 7.0675 francs against Tuesday's closing of 6.94, in Zurich at 1.8217 francs against 1.8022.

The dollar opened in Brussels at 45.0850 francs, up from 44.6650, in Milan at 1,565.50 lire against the previous close of 1,493.40 and in Frankfurt at 2,195 marks against 2,174.

The dollar opened slightly stronger in London where the pound started the day at $1.5365, compared with $1.5370 at the close Tuesday.

The dollar closed today at 164 yen in Tokyo against Tuesday's close of 166.95. Some dealers attributed the sharp rise to remarks by Treasury Secretary James Baker in Washington expressing concern about the rapid fall in the value of the dollar over the past few days.

The dollar bought $1.3785 Canadian Tuesday, down slightly from $1.3787 at the close on Monday.

Gold opened in Zurich at $343.50 against Tuesday's close of $344 and in London at $342.75 against $345. Silver opened in Zurich at $5.10 — the same as the previous close — and in London at $5.05, a drop from Tuesday's close of $5.13.

IRA withdrawal options limited

Investors' Guide

William A. Doyle

QUESTION: My husband passed away last year. I am the beneficiary of his individual retirement account. I am 57. What are my options for receiving money from his IRA?

ANSWER: That depends on whether your husband was past age 70 1/2 and had begun making mandatory withdrawals from the IRA at the time of his death.

If that's not the case, you can leave the IRA in your husband's name or you can roll it over, tax-free, into your own IRA.

If you leave it in his name, you'll be able to start taking money out, without any extra tax, at the time your husband would have reached age 59 1/2. Any earlier withdrawal will result in a 10 percent tax on the amount withdrawn. If he was past 59 1/2 when he died, you can start withdrawals right now. You'll be required to begin making withdrawals by April 1 following the year in which he would have turned 70 1/2.

If you roll it over into your IRA, you can start withdrawals without the 10 percent penalty when you reach 59 1/2 and begin the required mandatory withdrawals after you turn 70 1/2.

You have five years from the date of your husband's death to decide if you want to roll over his IRA into yours. However, if your husband had made any individual withdrawals before his death, you can't go the rollover route. Furthermore, if this is the case, you'll have to continue as they have.

QUESTION: My brother died in February 1985. I am the beneficiary of his individual retirement account, which consists of stocks and bonds. The IRA was alive, kicking about $90,000. I am 56. My husband is 63 and will retire in a few years.

We are in the 50 percent federal income tax bracket.

The broker who handled my brother's IRA says I can withdraw all the money over a five-year period after my brother's death and pay income tax on it as ordinary income. Is he right or can this be extended?

ANSWER: The withdrawals probably could have been stretched out over a much longer period, if your brother had no other income and if you had acted sooner.

The withdrawal regulations are different for a non-spouse IRA beneficiary than when a spouse is beneficiary.

A non-spouse beneficiary can arrange to receive the IRA's assets in installments based on his or her life expectancy or the joint life expectancy of the beneficiary and his or her spouse. But that can be done only if the first payment is received within one year of the IRA participant's death.

You missed that deadline. As a result, the IRA's value will be treated as a lump sum in February 1985. I am the beneficiary of his individual retirement account, which consists of stocks and bonds. The IRA was alive, kicking about $90,000. I am 56. My husband is 63 and will retire in a few years.

QUESTION: It is my understanding that a non-spouse beneficiary of a non-spouse IRA who is under the age of 500,000 or other federal income or federal estate tax. If one spouse leaves $100,000 in an individual retirement account to the other, is that money excluded from the tax?

ANSWER: Not forever.

There is no federal income tax on what anyone leaves when he or she joins the checkout. And one spouse can leave to the other an unlimited amount, free of federal estate tax.

However, when an IRA beneficiary makes withdrawals, that money is subject to income tax as ordinary income. This applies whether the beneficiary is the spouse or anyone else. Income tax has to be paid on the withdrawals, just as if the IRA was alive, kicking and using the money out for his or her own use.

Apartheid worries Xerox

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — If no progress is made to end apartheid in South Africa and pressures continue to mount against U.S. companies doing business there, Xerox Corp. says it may pull out of the nation.

David Kearns, chairman of the giant photocopier company, said Xerox has not made a final decision about leaving the racially torn nation, but does have increasing concerns about doing business there.

Kearns called the situation in South Africa "a mess" and expressed doubts that real change in the nation's policy of apartheid is occurring, the newspaper said.

"I am not optimistic about South Africa," he told the newspaper. "I don't know whether we'll stay or not. We're not packing our bags, clearly. But I think I've got through the essential issues. There really isn't any progress at all down there and you add no progress in South Africa with the building of economic pressure in the United States... we might pull out."

The remarks for the first time set a timetable for possible departure from the troubled nation. Xerox in the past had supported staying in South Africa, saying American companies there were a positive force for change.

Xerox, based in Stamford, Conn., has about 790 workers in South Africa, mainly in sales and service positions. The company has operated in South Africa since 1964.

Debt level leaves lag in sales

By The Associated Press

A 6.5 percent increase in retail sales was half the expected gain, according to analysts who say the performance indicates that high consumer debt levels are keeping Americans from buying.

Nevertheless, the increase reported Tuesday by the Commerce Department was the biggest since a 1.2 percent rise in December, and followed declines of 0.9 percent in March and 1 percent in February.

Analysts said that without a gain in retail sales last month, overall retail sales would have fallen by 0.4 percent.

"The consumer is largely spent out," said David Wynn, an economist with Data Resources Inc. of Lexington, Mass. "Lower oil prices just are not going to give us the kind of consumer boom that some people were looking for."

Wynn said consumer debt rose in March at its slowest pace in nearly three years. It was still, however, indicated that Americans were using extra cash to pay off loans rather than incur new debt, he said.

Consumer spending is a vital component of economic growth, accounting for two-thirds of all economic activity.

Sales figures during the past three months have been generally sluggish for the nation's retailers, although J.C. Penney Co. — the No. 3 U.S. retailer — said Tuesday its profits during that time rose 24.9 percent as sales grew by 0.7 percent.

Nevertheless, a survey of small businesses owners by the National Federation of Independent Business indicated the group's optimism about the economy was at a two-year high, even though weak consumer spending and high levels of personal debt were seen as hindering growth for small businesses.

The group's quarterly index, which had a 1978 base of 100, rose to 105.7 in April from 101.2 in January. The previous high was 109.8 in April 1984.

The San Mateo, Calif.-based National Federation of Independent Business has 560,000 member companies and prepared the survey based on responses from 2,846 small businesses employ about half of the nation's non-farm work force, so many economists regard the survey as significant.

In other economic news Tuesday, the Labor Department said Louisiana led the nation with 11.1 percent unemployment during March.

High-tech water

Bill Stephens of Beaverton, Oregon, a marketing manager for Tektronik, checks out an integrated circuit water Monday as he prepares for the opening of Electro/Mini Micro '86 in Boston. The show, which runs through Thursday, was expected to draw about 50,000 engineers and high-tech professionals.

Iroquois meeting goes smoothly

GREENWICH, A.P. — Iroquois Brands Ltd. Chairman Terence J. Fox, after presiding over a short, uncontroversial annual meeting that was heavily attended by reporters and photographers, said the attention paid him following his arrest on drug charges was "much ado about nothing."

During the meeting Tuesday, Fox called 1985 a "difficult" year for Iroquois Brands but made no mention of his November arrest on charges of possession of cocaine and conspiracy of narcotics paraphernalia.

Noting that the meeting was

"uneventful" despite the media turnout, Fox said the attention was "much ado about nothing."

After five months of court appearances and negotiations, Fox in April reached a bargain with state prosecutors in which the charges were dropped. He is not convicted of a crime during that period.

Hartford Superior Court Judge Michael Black made no finding of innocence or guilt in approving the agreement.

Fox, 48, was arrested in November at a Hartford hotel where police said they confiscated 17 grams of cocaine.

Based in Greenwich, Iroquois Brands manufactures and markets a variety of foods, beverages and nutritional products including Champale, Bomanoff caviar and Schiff vitamins.

The 20-minute annual meeting was attended by only about a dozen shareholders, none of whom raised questions about either the company's performance or Fox's arrest.

Addressing the meeting, Fox said, "The year 1985 was a difficult one as our core businesses experienced downturns."

Man kills his children, then himself

By Herald Staff

EAST HARTFORD — A 28-year-old man apparently killed his children to death, police said today.

The man, whose name has not been released, was found in a back yard Wednesday morning, after a 911 call was received from a neighbor. The man was found with a 9mm pistol in his hand and three children, ages 4, 6 and 13, were found nearby.

Det. Robert Kenary said police received a report at 10:25 a.m. that four people had been killed in a three-family house at 46 Orchard St. Police believe the father shot his two daughters and provided by the neighbors.

The family lives on the first floor of the three-story wooden duplex just off Main Street.

Several neighbors said that earlier this week they saw a man in the back yard waving a gun around, but didn't know who the man was. All of them declined to give their names.

Joseph Moyes, 25, of Wallingford, who was painting a pool at a nearby apartment building this morning, told a Herald reporter he heard a shot between 8:30 and 9 a.m.

One neighbor, who refused to identify himself, said the family seemed quiet. He said that earlier this week, the whole family was out in the yard digging a garden.

"It didn't seem like anything was wrong," he said.

Hartford State's Attorney John Bailey refused to disclose any information about the case. He said information would be released at a news conference at 2:30 p.m.

A spokesman for East Hartford paramedics said today his unit was called to the scene at 10:26 this morning after someone reported hearing gunshots. Paramedics, however, never entered the house because police had already called the medical examiner, the spokesman said.

Three ambulances from the Ambulance Service of Manchester were also called to the scene this morning, officials said.

The state police Major Crime Squad had not been called into the case as of noon, an official said. He said he had no information on the shooting other than what he heard on police radio.

Police still at the scene early this afternoon were interviewing neighbors.

Toddler Michael Saterinis daysdreams this morning on the fence around the playscape at Charter Oak Park. Michael, who is almost two years old, lives on School Street.

Arlington ceremony moves town vet

By Chris Rose Scripps League Newspapers

WASHINGTON — In a ceremony Wednesday at Arlington National Cemetery, Connecticut became the 46th state to honor its war heroes for giving their lives in the service of their country.

Gov. William O'Neill, accompanied by veterans and members of the state Legislature and congressional delegation, presented Connecticut's Medal of Valor to Gen. Maj. John Ballantine for placement in the cemetery's display room "among the medals of highest honor."

"It feels good to be an American citizen today," said Glenn Beaulieu, a Manchester Vietnam veteran who traveled with the governor.

Beaulieu, who owns the Main Pub, was invited to attend the presentation when the governor made a campaign swing through Manchester last week. "To recognize and honor on the state level the soldiers that have given the supreme sacrifice certainly makes me proud to be an American and citizen of Connecticut," Beaulieu said.

During the two-part ceremony, Beaulieu watched with 50 other invited guests. O'Neill placed a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and an army band bugler played "Taps."

"It was very moving," Beaulieu told the Herald this morning after returning to Manchester. "It was a once-in-a-lifetime experience, something that you remember for a long time."

After the wreath was placed, the delegation moved to the cemetery display room where Connecticut's memorial was placed among those from other states.

O'Neill said 13-year-old Kathryn Weinschenk, of Durham, Conn., was actually responsible for Wednesday's ceremony. The young girl visited the cemetery in February, noticed Connecticut was not represented and wrote to the governor.

"Kathy realized Connecticut wasn't represented," among the state medals of valor and she contacted the governor's office, O'Neill said.

"Because of she and other students, that is what makes this all worthwhile," O'Neill said. "We are so proud of our state, and proud of young people like Kathy here today."

U.S. Rep. Barbara Kennedy, D-Conn., said she, too, was impressed with Kathy's initiative. "We must honor our veterans. We must think about them and what they have done for our country," she said.

"Obviously, I am moved any time I come to Arlington Cemetery. The whole responsibility of going to war is so evident... We must realize who our veterans are, and what they did," Kennedy said.

As Connecticut secretary of the state, Kennedy signed a General Assembly resolution to honor the state's war heroes some years ago. A Kennedy spokesman said the delay in acting on it could have been caused by scheduling problems.

Group claims hostages killed

By David Zenon International Press United Nations

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A man claiming to be a spokesman for the Islamic Jihad Organization today said the shadowy group had killed more American and French hostages and that the rest will be the "first to pay the price" if there is pressure on Syria to secure their release.

In a statement read to a Western news agency office in Moslem West Beirut, the caller did not say how many of the five American and four French hostages the Islamic Jihad had killed or when the men were executed.

"If the West fails to stop its pressures and maneuvering against Syria, the remaining American and French hostages will be the first to pay the price," the man said.

"We are aware of the pressures on Syria and we respect them. If they do not stop their pressure on Syria and the Islamic Jihad, then we shall make the earth shake under their feet," he said reading from a statement.

"The statement could not be authenticated and political sources said its authenticity was in doubt."

The statement coincided with reports from Washington that Syria was engaged in intensive efforts to free the American and French hostages in Lebanon.

Syria has made no comment but political sources in Lebanon said the Washington reports were being treated as a form of pressure on Syria to act and clear its name, which has recently been linked to international terrorism.

"We denounce and condemn the pressures on Syria and the Islamic Jihad Organization to free the American and French hostages we are holding and whose numbers have greatly decreased because we have executed some of them."

The man said reading from an Arabic text of what he said was a statement from the Islamic Jihad.

The man did not explain what the statement meant by "whose numbers have greatly decreased."

Rioux threatens state complaint against Hogan

By George Lovno Herald Reporter

AL RIoux, a candidate for Hartford County high sheriff, said today he may file a complaint with the state over charges that retiring High Sheriff Patrick Hogan denied Manchester man reappointment as a deputy sheriff because he supported Rioux.

Rioux, who lost to a battle for the nomination to Hogan in 1982, said this morning he and his attorney are considering filing a complaint with the state Elections Enforcement Commission based on a 1976 U.S. Supreme Court decision. In that case, the court ruled that dismissal of a non-civil-service employee on the basis of political partisanship was illegal.

Sheriffs are not considered to be civil servants and Rioux contends that he was not reappointed to the office because of his support of Rioux.

Rioux, who has served as a sheriff since July 1985, charged last week that Hogan decided not to reappoint him to the post when his term expires in June because he did not endorse Hogan's bid for re-election to succeed him.

Hogan, who is scheduled to retire in July 1987, has denied the dismissal was politically motivated. He said on Monday the decision was based on "personal reasons," but he would not elaborate.

Rioux, the Democratic chairman in Newington, did not say when the complaint might be filed with the elections commission. However, he said the action would be the first step he would take in response to Hogan's action.

"Pat Hogan wants his man in that job," Rioux said.

Hogan could not be reached for comment.

Jeffrey Garfield, executive director of the state Elections Enforcement Commission, would not comment on the matter this morning.

But Allan Pflosky, an attorney with the state Ethics Commission, said today it was unlikely any legal action would succeed.

World votes against U.S.

By Gene Kramer The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Most of the world voted most of the time against the United States during the 1985 session of the U.N. General Assembly, the annual report to Congress of U.N. voting trends showed today.

Preliminary details of the report were released at a congressional hearing by Sen. Robert Kasten, R-Wis., who in 1983 authored legislation requiring the State Department to make a yearly tabulation of General Assembly votes for and against positions taken by the United States.

"Again in 1985, Israel was our staunchest ally, siding with the U.S. 91.3 percent of the time," Kasten told a Senate Appropriations subcommittee. The 1985-86 U.N. membership as a whole "voted against U.S. interests nearly 80 percent of the time," he said.

This voting trend, a product of bloc solidarity, especially in the Third World's numerically dominant "non-aligned" group, has drawn fierce criticism in Congress.
