Elsewhere, the weather will be fair in general.

PEOPLE

New leaf

A few weeks ago the New York City Parks Department had Steve "Wildman" Brill arrested for eating the dandelions in Central Park and now the department wants to hire him. Brill, who became known as the man who ate Central Park, may be turning over a new leaf. "We would like to have the benefit of his expertise on wild plants without his plundering our parks," Parks Commissioner Henry Stern said.

"The problem is that Steve has a great hunger for the limelight as well as plant life," Stern said. The department would drop its charges against Brill if an agreement was reached over a job. "We never wanted him to do time. We just wanted to make our point that one park is not his blue plate," Stern said. Brill was making his living leading free-lance tours of the parks, pointing out wild edible plants like mushrooms and dandelions. City officials want him to do the same thing on behalf of the parks department.

Long-distance love

Arnold Schwarzenegger says "over-the-phone sex" won't work when he and new wife Maria Shriver get ready to have children. Schwarzenegger says Maria will eventually want to have kids and leave her job as co-anchor on "The CBS Morning News." "We fly back and forth as much as possible and we run up thousands of dollars in phone bills," Schwarzenegger said in an interview with Boston television station WBZ. "We have over-the-phone sex," he joked, "but there's no way we can have children with her on the East Coast and me on the West Coast." For now, he said, he supports her sticking to CBS duties. "It's only a temporary thing," he said. "But she should do it because she'll be happy the rest of her life because she's done it."

Shallit for dog catcher

Officials in the Berkshire Mountains town of Stockbridge, Mass., have proposed a second career for NBC movie critic Gene Shallit — community dog officer. Shallit, who has a home in Stockbridge, has joined in fighting the town's leash law, signing a petition in support of Sasha, a neighbor's white Samoyed who was ticketed for a violation. Shallit went Police Chief Richard B. Wilcox, who also serves as town dog officer — to support Sasha as "the most gentle of dogs" and to call the complaint against the animal an outrage.

The Stockbridge selectmen this week proposed drafting Shallit as dog officer since he's a professional animal lover. Wilcox, in his own defense, says he is only enforcing town bylaws and told selectmen he would step down as dog officer if the public so desired.

The old record-holder at Josten's was a size 22 — but that was for Perry, too, while he was in college at Clemson, Dahms said. "I don't know if he's still growing or what."

Fitting the fridge

The company making the Chicago Bears' Super Bowl championship rings says the one for William "Refrigerator" Perry will be his biggest ever — a size 23, slightly larger than a half-dollar.

"It's really huge. When you get up to a size 18 or 19, that's considered incredible. But this — this is really huge," Al Dahms, manager of the Josten's Inc. plant in Princeton, Ill., said Thursday.

Childhood memories

A good memory is the most important quality for a father, said Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III as he, comedian Soupy Sales and 11 other notable dads were honored in New York as "Fathers of the Year."

"If you can remember what it was like when you were a kid, you'll be a better father," Baker said Thursday as the 13 were honored by the National Father's Day Committee for the example they set as fathers.

Baker and Sales were joined by Gov. Arthur H. Kay of New Jersey; Arthur Levitt Jr., chairman of the American Stock Exchange; William Webster, director of the FBI; Maxwell M. Rabb, ambassador to Italy; Lou Piniella, New York Yankees manager; Ozzie Zelnick of the St. Louis Cardinals; Denis Potvin of the New York Islanders; Tim and Tom Gullikson, twin tennis pros; Herbert Green, golf pro; and Roland Smith, a CBS newscaster.

Soft drinks have come a long way in the last fifty years. During the Depression, Charles Grigg sold a drink called Bib-Label Lithiated Lemon-Lime Soda. It was marketed as an anti-acid, and it was a huge success.

Advertised as the beverage that "takes the ouch out of a growl," the drink contained lithium carbonate, a drug now prescribed for manic-depressives. The name of the drink was later shortened to 7UP. Lithium was listed on the label until the mid-1940s.

All in the (political) family

Teri and Tom Ferguson stump for Moffett, Labriola

By Susan Vaughn Herald Reporter

The Ferguson families have long been active in Manchester politics, almost always on the Republican side of the fence.

But since Teri Ferguson joined the Democratic Party to work for gubernatorial candidate Toby Moffett this spring, family gatherings have become more lively.

Teri, who is married to Ron Ferguson, a cousin of Republican town Director Thomas H. Ferguson, last month headed up the petition drive that succeeded in putting Moffett's slate of delegate candidates to the state convention on Tuesday's Democratic primary ballot.

Tom Ferguson, on the other hand, is chairman of Republican gubernatorial candidate Gerald Labriola's town campaign.

Teri, 26, and Tom, 29, are both natives of Manchester and have been friends since high school.

But Tom didn't know Teri was dating his cousin and said he was quite surprised when he found out they were getting married. Teri said she married "the boy next door," since he and his parents lived in her neighborhood.

Ron's parents are Walter R. and Mildred Ferguson, both Republicans. Tom's parents are Thomas F. Ferguson, a former GOP town chairman, and Vivian Ferguson, a former Republican town director.

"TERI AND I kid each other a lot," Thomas H. Ferguson said. On one recent visit to Ron and Teri's home on Valley Street, he said, a Labriola commiserated appeared on the television screen.

"I jumped up and down and Teri just gave me a look," Tom said. Both are firm in their political convictions and particularly loyal to their candidates.

"I work for Toby just because I know he's the best man," Teri said bluntly.

Prior to this spring, she said, she had always been registered as an unaffiliated voter. Although she said she has always supported Moffett, this is the first time she has actively worked for him.

Teri said the split in party affiliations within the family does not bother her. She grew up with

Tom Ferguson said he had no choice but to be a Republican. "I'm Republican by birth," he quipped. He said that when he went to register to vote, his mother told him, "If you don't register Republican, don't come home."

Tom also is thoroughly sold on his candidate, whom he came to know personally through his friendship with Gerald Labriola Jr.

WHEN HE MET the elder Labriola at his home in Naugatuck, Tom said he found the pediatrist to be a "caring and honest person." His loyalty to the family convinced him to head up the Manchester Labriola campaign, he said.

Although Teri and Tom's political philosophies don't jibe, they do agree that there is plenty of room for both.

"The name of the game is who the people want," Tom said.

The two also agreed that they have to work extra hard to get their candidates elected because of the tough primary election laws in Connecticut, which require a candidate to get 30 percent of the state convention vote in order to qualify for a statewide primary.

They also said the May primaries for convention delegates have confused people even more.

Manchester In Brief

Plan available to public The revised version of the town's proposed new Comprehensive Plan of Development is on file at the Town Clerk's Office and can be reviewed during regular business hours.

The Planning and Zoning Commission has scheduled a public hearing at 7 p.m. May 28 in the Illing Junior High School cafeteria to discuss the proposed plan, which would be used as a guide for all land-use decisions over the next 10 years.

The original plan was released in September. But two public hearings revealed widespread opposition to some of the housing density proposals made for the southwestern and northeastern sections of town, prompting town officials to change sections of it.

The proposed plan would replace a plan adopted in 1963.

MCC gets minorities grant Manchester Community College has received a $4,000 scholarship award again this year from Aetna Life & Casualty to attract promising students from minority groups to any career or transfer program at MCC. Financial Aid Director John Taylor announced.

The Aetna Life & Casualty Foundation Scholarship Grant is usually divided into 20 awards of $200 each, Taylor said. Students should apply for the scholarships through the MCC Admissions Office or call 647-6140 for more information.

Cheney ground-breaking set A ground-breaking ceremony will be held May 27 near Cheney Hall to mark the start of public improvements in the Cheney Historic District, where former textile mills are being converted to apartments.

The work, being performed under a $819,191 contract between the town and Milton C. Beebe of Storrs, will include the widening of Hartford Road in front of Cheney Hall, and reconstruction of Forest Street from Chestnut to Pine Street.

Plans call for Hall Court, which runs behind Cheney Hall, to be narrowed. The parking lot of the hall will be revamped, landscaped and lighted with historic lighting fixtures.

Plans for the work have been approved by the state Historical Commission.

A bond issue of $750,000 has been approved for the work. Some of the cost is for sewer and storm sewer work and will be paid for by developers who are converting mills to apartments.

The ground-breaking is set for 9:30 a.m. Town officials and members of the Cheney Hall Foundation and the Cheney National Historic District Commission will participate.

School board honors nurse The Board of Education presented Lynne Gustafson, head nurse for the public school system, with a certificate of recognition Monday night for her election as president of the National Association of School Nurses for 1986-87.

Gustafson has served as a school nurse in the Manchester system for 17 years. She is currently president of the Connecticut School Nurses Association.

She told the school board that she took on the national position as a "challenge and opportunity." She thanked the school board and administration for its support.

Helicopter to land at Parkade A World War I tank and an Army National Guard helicopter will be among the items on display at the public Saturday at the Manchester Parkade during a military exhibit presented by the Guard.

The six-ton Renault tank is one of only four of its type still in the United States. The helicopter is scheduled to land in the parking lot near the Sears store at about 11 a.m.

The public will be allowed to see the inside of the helicopter as well as view the jeeps, ambulances and weapons on display from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

There is no charge to view exhibits. The event is sponsored by the Manchester Parkade Merchants Association in celebration of Armed Forces Day.

School orchestras perform The first townwide string performance by 200 Manchester public school students in grades 3 through 9 will be tonight at 7:30 at Manchester High School's Bailey Auditorium.

Performing groups include the beginning string ensemble, the townwide elementary orchestra, the combined Bennet and Illing junior high school orchestras, and 12-piece chamber orchestra.

Patrick Smith, director of school orchestras in Amherst, Mass., will be a guest conductor for the mixed classical program.

The shirts and hats worn by Chris Ferguson, 3, left, and Tommy Ferguson, 4, make their gubernatorial preferences clear. The cousins are held by their parents, Teri Ferguson, left, and town Director Thomas H. Ferguson. Teri is working for Democrat Toby Moffett, while Tom is heading the local campaign for Republican Gerald Labriola.

on the ticket as a "kickoff dinner honoring Bill O'Neill."

In response to reports that some of the contributors made their contributions on the assumption that they were contributing to O'Neill's campaign, Sullivan said, "I would think they knew they were helping O'Neill."

Robert Price, a former Manchester town director who contributed $100 to VOTE PAC, confirmed that today. "When I gave the contribution, I personally had thought it was going to Bill O'Neill," Price said.

Other contributors reportedly include John Figuerra, a developer seeking to build a mall in Manchester; Democratic Town Chairman Theodore R. Cummings; and Francis Maffe Jr., a Democratic member of the Board of Education.

Sullivan said the governor is the leading candidate in the party and that he felt the first contribution from VOTE PAC should go to him.

Both Sullivan and Michael Guay, the Democratic town chairman in Windsor, said a contribution has been made to the campaign of John W. Tarca, a candidate for Hartford County high sheriff.

Charles Monaga, press secretary for the O'Neill campaign committee, said the fundraiser at the Steak Club was held without the knowledge of O'Neill's committee. He also said campaign leaders made sure it was legal to accept the money.

Zoners don't want hearing on town plan to be postponed

By John F. Kirch
Herald Reporter

It is unlikely that the Planning and Zoning Commission will be asked to postpone a public hearing on a proposed rezoning of a portion of the town of Manchester to a date later than the hearing scheduled for Monday night, according to a spokesman for the town's zoning board.

Members of the Southwest Property Owners Association plan to present the PZC with a letter Monday night asking that the public hearing be postponed. The association's spokesman said that members need more time to review the plan and want to hold a townwide meeting to inform Manchester residents of what the plan says.

Since the 10-year development guide was released in September, members of the group have criticized its contents and its authors. At one point, they called for the resignation of Planning Director Mark Pellegrini.

Bayer said he liked the idea of Werhoben organizing an educational meeting. But he and some other PZC members said Werhoben and others have had plenty of time to review the proposals.

"It seems like they have enough time with two weeks (before the hearing)," commission member Truman Crandall said. "It's before vacation. We considered setting the date before everyone went away. It might be better to have it early. You may get more people involved." PZC Vice Chairman Ronald Gates said today he would like to see the hearing held as scheduled. "I think we have a good plan," he said.

Monument requires typo fix

A mistake in the Manchester Holocaust Memorial will be sandblasted out of the stone within the next few weeks, the designer of the monument said.

The mistake occurred in the inscription on the face of the memorial, which was written in Hebrew with the English translation just below it. It reads: "Do Not Forget," on one line and "Their Martyrdom" on the second, referring to the 6 million Jews who perished during the Holocaust.

The words "Their Martyrdom" will be sandblasted out of the stone in order to get the error corrected, said Nathan, who designed the memorial on paper before sending it to Vermont to be cut.

The Manchester Holocaust Memorial was dedicated May 4 by Temple Beth Shalom in the synagogue's memorial park on Autumn Street. It will stand as a reminder of the Holocaust victims who perished under the Nazis earlier this century.

Injury spurs suit vs. town

A Newton couple is suing the town of Manchester and Glenn Construction Corp. of Manchester for a sum "greater than $15,000" after their son suffered a broken right elbow and left ankle and bruised his hands, chest and face after he fell down near Main Street last October.

The suit charges that Glenn Construction left the street "torn up, uneven and jagged," did not provide adequate warning of the danger and did not erect barriers to keep people out of the area.

It says the town had authorized the sewers to be installed and that Purnell Place was a public street. The suit charges that despite the town's knowledge of the area's dangers, it took no steps to remedy the situation.

Hearing is set on road plans

A public hearing will be held May 22 to address the town's recommended plans for road and intersection improvements, the state Department of Transportation announced today.

The hearing, which will take place at 7:30 p.m. in the Lincoln Center hearing room, will give the public and state and federal agencies a chance to offer their comments to the estimated $2 million plan.

The project involves the following intersections: Haynes and Main streets, Summit and East Center streets, Spruce and Charter Oak streets, and East Middle Turnpike and Summit.

According to William Camosci, assistant town engineer, reconstruction will begin in the spring of 1988. "The plans will be complete before that, but it will be a year to 18 months before we get a right of way," he said.

The urban systems project is the second of four to be done around town, and 75 percent of it will be paid by the federal government. The town will pay 12 1/2 percent, as will the state.

Prosecutors deny stall, say Fargo case 'overwhelming'

By Bruno V. Ronello
United Press International

HARTFORD — Federal attorneys have described the $7 million Wells Fargo robbery case as "overwhelming," but denied they are stalling prosecution of 15 defendants arrested more than eight months ago.

"Simply, it's the overwhelming volume of the case," Assistant U.S. Attorney Albert S. Dabrowski when asked about the delays by Clarie.

"How can we prepare a case when the deadline the court has set are meaningless," said Richard Reeve, attorney for suspect Isaac Camecho Negron, who is one of nine suspects being held without bail since Aug. 30.

When pressed about a tape recording made in 1984 which the prosecution plans to use as evidence, Assistant U.S. Attorney Carmen Espinosa Van Kirk said that a transcript had not been provided.

All but one of the 19 indicted in the case are members of Los Macheteros, a Puerto Rican independence group which has claimed it staged the $7 million robbery of a Wells Fargo terminal in West Hartford on Sept. 12, 1985.

Last March 21, 16 of the suspects were indicted and charges against one were dropped. Three new suspects were indicted and arrested the same day.

Campaign targets teen pregnancy

By Susan Okula
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Planned Parenthood has developed a legislative and public education campaign to try to reduce the rates of teen-age pregnancy in the United States, the group's national leader says.

Faye Watleton said Thursday that about 1.2 million teenagers become pregnant each year in the United States, leading many of the young women who choose to have and keep their babies into a life of poverty.

"The costs are unacceptably high — for the young women and their children. Their health is at risk, their education is at risk and their futures are at risk," she said at a news conference.

Watleton was in Hartford to attend a regional meeting of state Planned Parenthood chapters. She said television could become part of the public education campaign in trying to teach teenagers about sex.

Peters has a plan to evaluate judges

HARTFORD — The state's chief justice has proposed creation of a new committee to evaluate judges and help weed out those who should not remain on the bench.

Chief Justice Ellen A. Peters said Thursday the new committee would set definite standards for reviewing judicial performance and provide more information to the governor and Legislature for the appointment of judges.

Peters declined comment on the General Assembly's decision to give close scrutiny to judges this year and the rejection of the nominees, saying she instead wants to offer ways to improve the screening process in the future.

The committee would be created under a proposed constitutional amendment and enabling legislation calling for the creation of another 12-member panel to choose lawyers for nomination by the governor as judges.

The amendment will be on the November ballot for approval by voters, and Peters said the enabling legislation could then be rewritten by lawmakers to include the second committee she proposed.

Faye Watleton, president of Planned Parenthood Federation of America, talks with reporters Thursday during the organization's North Atlantic Regional Meeting in Hartford.

Watleton was in Hartford to attend a regional meeting of state Planned Parenthood chapters. She said television could become part of the public education campaign in trying to teach teenagers about sex.

Watleton criticized television's portrayal of sex and network prohibition of contraceptive commercials. "We would like to see J.R. talk about contraceptives occasionally," Watleton said, referring to the popular night series "Dallas" and its main character, J.R. Ewing.

Television romanticizes sex and gives teenage viewers an unrealistic picture of relations between men and women, Watleton said. "Look at a program on national television. There is an explicit presentation of sex and sexual relationships. I have never seen a program when the question of contraception takes place in the context of a sexual relationship," she said.

The networks should lift their "blanket prohibition" of advertisements for contraceptives to allow informative commercials on products that help to prevent pregnancy, she said.

Planned Parenthood is also working for effective sex education programs in the nation's schools that start in kindergarten and continue through high school.

A Harris Survey that Planned Parenthood commissioned last summer showed that 85 percent of Americans support sex education in the schools, Watleton said.

Vocal opposition to sex education obscures that broad-based support, she added. Some states, including New Jersey, have sex education courses that run from kindergarten through high school, she said.

Parents and schools have to start educating their children about sex well before youngsters reach puberty, Watleton said. A person's sexual identity should be established as part of the natural developmental process, she said.

OPINION

White House must consider arms offers

White Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev failed to provide a rational explanation Wednesday night for his government's actions following the Chernobyl accident, he did offer at least a sideways bow to arms control — one that should not be automatically dismissed by the Reagan administration.

The Soviet leader, who finally hit the airwaves 18 days after the worst nuclear catastrophe in history got under way, wasted most of his time trying to turn subsequent events to the advantage of the Kremlin propaganda machine. At one point, he leveled an attack on the United States and NATO for using Chernobyl to "defame the Soviet Union."

Such distortion, incredible as it may be, can be dismissed as yet another illustration of the constraints that come into being when a government is so frightened by popular opinion that it cannot explain the truth about crucial matters to its citizens. Wherever Gorbachev is believed, intelligence and common sense are scarce.

In the course of his assault on the free press and other things Western, however, Gorbachev announced that the Soviet Union plans to extend its unilateral ban on nuclear testing through Aug. 6. By no coincidence, that date is the anniversary of the U.S. bombing of Hiroshima in 1945.

Nonetheless, the statement represents the continuation of a Soviet negotiating position that has been ignored in Washington for little apparent reason. It was followed by the presentation in Geneva of a new Soviet proposal on limiting medium-range missiles in Europe.

Because Gorbachev's comments gave rise to the possibility of a superpower summit focusing principally on nuclear arms, they were quickly rejected by the administration. A similar fate befell the missile proposal, which was described by a White House spokesman as "not new and startling."

On both scores, it appears U.S. policymakers have once again acted too hastily. The idea of a single-subject summit should not be rejected out of hand. Nor should any opportunity to reach a compromise on missiles or eliminating nuclear testing.

Whatever the atmosphere surrounding the proposals, they deserve more serious consideration than they appear to be getting. If there is ever to be any real movement on arms control, the United States, as well as the Soviet Union, will have to show the courage to tread in areas that have not yet been charted.

Campaign plans mean awkward sentences

Sen. Carl Zinsser is a candidate for re-election. He finally admitted it Tuesday night at a fund-raising dinner. Indeed, it would have been difficult for him to pretend he had not decided to run again while he was addressing a group of people who had each paid $25 to attend a dinner to help finance his campaign.

In making his announcement, Zinsser referred to the fact that a reporter had been asking when he would announce. He didn't mention that the reporter had been asking every other day for several weeks.

When an elected public official acts like a candidate for re-election, but does not say he will run, he poses some semantic problems for reporters.

You can't say, "Jones is a candidate for re-election." Jones just might decide not to run again and leave you looking like a dope.

You have to find ways to say Jones is a candidate without saying he is a candidate, and in the process you make yourself look like a dope, which some candidates probably feel is poetic justice.

IT COMES OUT in the paper something like this: "Jones, who has not announced he will seek election, has done nothing to discourage the assumption that he will."

That is one of the subtlest and silliest of the lot. It is printed in the vain hope of smoking out the candidate early, but it never works.

That one was used on Zinsser and he probably got a chuckle out of it.

Another version: "Jones, who is expected by most political

EMS chairman disputes a critic

To the Editor:

As chairman of the Manchester EMS Council and medical director of the Department of Emergency Medicine at Manchester Memorial Hospital, I feel compelled to respond to Wayne J. Tripp's letter of 5/13/86. I am unaware of Mr. Tripp's involvement in our EMS system and have neither met nor heard of him in the two years that I have been in my current position.

I do not claim to be an expert on fire suppression services, and certainly do not claim expertise on Town of Manchester-Eighth Utilities District politics. I do, however, have substantial experience in the planning, development, operation, and evaluation of Emergency Medical Services (EMS) systems. To set the record straight, the Manchester EMS communication system is characterized by the following:

1. Manchester utilizes the "Call Priority Dispatch System," a well-proven, carefully-structured system used across the United States. This system is designed to ensure the appropriate level of EMS response. In this system, ALL responses are designated in advance based upon the medical information related to the dispatcher by the citizen calling "911."
2. Our dispatchers are trained specifically in EMS communications by the police department and Manchester Memorial Hospital.
3. Dispatch protocols have been developed and revised jointly by representatives of the Town of Manchester Fire Department, the Eighth Utilities District Fire Department, the police department, Ambulance Service of Manchester and Manchester Memorial Hospital.
4. Protocols, actual EMS responses, and operational problems are reviewed on a monthly basis by representatives of all of the organizations listed in #3 above.

Policy issues pertaining to our EMS System are reviewed publicly at EMS Council Meetings. Representation on the EMS Council includes all organizations listed in #3 above, in addition to public participation.

Our paramedics respond to medical calls based upon information related to the dispatcher by the citizen calling "911." On occasion the information is provided by a scared or panicked caller and may not be complete or totally accurate. In these cases our EMS response is designed to ensure adequate response. If the paramedics arrive and find that their services are not needed, they place themselves back into service immediately and are available for another call.

Our paramedics are firefighter-paramedics and therefore they may be dispatched to non-medical calls. However, medical responses always take precedence.

Our paramedics do not transport patients! They do accompany select patients to the hospital when the Advanced Life Support level of care is required.

"Rescue" is "out of service" only when the paramedics are providing medical care. The judgment to remain "out of service" is based upon the patient's medical needs. The "out-of-service" times are closely monitored by the EMS coordinator.

In conclusion, I firmly believe that our EMS system has excellent monitoring mechanisms, which will remain so due to the balance in representation from all of the concerned organizations. Mr. Tripp's suggestion that "The town manager and police chief tell the dispatchers who to send to what" is totally unfounded. His other allegations simply are not substantiated by the facts as they stand today. Although I am quite sympathetic to the critical issues creating disharmony in Town-Eighth District relations, I feel saddened that an individual has chosen to use a vital public forum to malign the excellent services provided by our EMS system (which, by the way is made up of the very special people of the Town of Manchester Fire Department, the police department, Manchester Ambulance Service, Manchester Memorial Hospital and the Eighth Utilities District.)

Veterans, peace get VFW salute

To the Editor:

Once again as we have for many years, we pause to remember and honor those who served their country in time of war.

We decorate the graves of all the veterans from the War of Independence to the cause of Vietnam. We hold parades, and conduct memorial services and pray for their memories.

Their graves are all marked with an American flag in honor of their services to God and country. The American Legion and Auxiliaries go out and sell their familiar, "red poppy."

Last Memorial Day we dedicated the Vietnam Memorial. This year at long last we dedicate new monument to the Korean veterans in their honor. All in all we salute all veterans of all wars.

But let us not forget there is another veterans' group — those who are in the VA hospitals. Wouldn't it be great if national upon nation could live together in peace and the only monuments needing to be erected were those for man's achievements, and not for the destruction of the world?

Soviets keep 'Spetsnaz' under wraps

WASHINGTON — They are the true mystery men of the Soviet Union — that riddle wrapped in a mystery inside an enigma. Only the few Kremlin officials who even know about their existence refer to them by their proper name: "Spetsnaz," or Special Purpose Forces.

Needless to say, the Soviet man on the street knows exactly "nitchevo" about the Spetsnaz. He has read no tales of their derring-do in far-off lands; he knows none of their names, though some could be classified as Soviet heroes.

A secret Pentagon report explains why the Spetsnaz have kept a deep dark secret:

"Considering these units as clandestine assets and being an integral part of their intelligence and security organization, the Soviets have kept these units out of public scrutiny to a far greater degree than their conventional forces.

"Glorious descriptions of their achievements in training exercises are never published (and there is no distinctive uniform or insignia identifying them. Instead, the usual uniform is that of the airborne forces, or in the case of naval (Spetsnaz) simply the standard navy uniform."

BECAUSE OF THIS, it has taken Western intelligence services years to form even the murkiest picture of Spetsnaz's activities. What Western analysts have determined is that the Spetsnaz are used for special missions at the behest of Soviet intelligence and security services.

Whether these special agents report to the GRU (military intelligence), the Red Army or some other Soviet agency, U.S. intelligence experts have decided that the KGB retains ultimate control and responsibility, under direct supervision of the Soviet Central Committee.

In addition, though, the KGB has its own Spetsnaz people, the most notorious of whom are the professional killers of Department Eight of the KGB's First Chief Directorate. Department Eight has been connected with assassinations, kidnappings, sabotage and other direct action operations for decades, "according to one Defense Intelligence Agency expert."

There are also the KGB troops on the Soviet Union's borders, numbering at least 250,000, who could be classified as special forces. And while the Pentagon and CIA experts may haggle over the fine points, they agree that certain units under the Ministry of Internal Affairs, which maintains Communist Party control, should count as Spetsnaz — like the Moscow-based pretorian guard known as the Dzerzhinsky First Motorized Rifle Division.

BUT THE MOST DANGEROUS Spetsnaz operatives are those who report to the Soviet military intelligence organization, which is the second largest spy outfit in the world (second only to the KGB).

In each Spetsnaz brigade, the career officers "are the most highly trained individuals and are fluent in one or more foreign languages," the Pentagon report states, adding, "Their primary mission is reported to be the assassination of enemy leadership."

Each brigade includes three reconnaissance and destruction battalions of some 30 teams of 10 men each, plus signal, engineer and medical units. Naval Spetsnaz units, though smaller, include paratroopers, frogmen and mini-submarine forces.

"Evidence of the (Spetsnaz) being a growth industry is both recent and convincing," the secret Pentagon report warns. "This trend appears to extend to the non-Soviet Warsaw Pact Special Purpose Forces also. Collectively, these factors show the Spetsnaz threat to NATO's rear area is growing."

How'd that again? Federal lawmen, and particularly FBI agents, are notorious among local police departments for their reluctance to share information in criminal investigations, insiders tell us. That would explain why a top intelligence official of the FBI was greeted with laughter at a recent closed-door meeting of state and local police brass, when he claimed the FBI is always very cooperative in sharing its information. Strangely, though, the police aren't willing to put their derision in writing. A recent Justice Department poll showed that most local police officials rated the FBI's cooperation as at least "satisfactory."

Reagan must seek compromise

House Democrats slash defense, raise domestic spending

By Elaine S. Povich
United Press International

WASHINGTON — House approval of a Democratic budget that cuts Pentagon funds leaves President Reagan and his party looking to an upcoming House-Senate bargaining session as their best hope of increasing military spending.

Brushing off a blistering letter from Reagan warning them not to "cripple" the military, the Democratic-led House approved a budget Thursday that would cut Pentagon spending, raise taxes to trim the deficit and increase funds for a group of children's, education, and jobs programs.

Within minutes of the vote, White House spokesman Larry Speakes denounced the House plan as "a recipe for economic disaster and a military setback that could have serious consequences."

The $994 billion House budget, approved on a nearly straight Democratic party vote, allots $285 billion for the military, $16 billion less than the GOP-led Senate's budget approved last month with bipartisan support, and $2 billion less than this year's allocation.

But even the Senate's budget did not approach the $350 billion Reagan wanted for the Pentagon next year, a strong indication he is not very likely to get what he wants for the military.

THE SENATE BUDGET hit the Gramm-Rudman deficit target of $144 billion, while the House plan came in at $137 billion in red ink, using new taxes to further trim the deficit.

House Budget Committee Chairman William Gray, D-Pa., pledged to go quickly to conference with the Senate to work out a compromise approach, and that includes revenues.

Reagan has rejected new taxes, despite both House and Republican plans contain the same in new taxes, $13 billion. That is about $7 billion more in new revenue than Reagan requested.

The Democratic plan passed on a near party-line vote of 245-179, with 17 Republicans and 229 Democrats voting for it and 19 Democrats with 160 Republicans voting against.

On a similar vote earlier, the House rejected a last-ditch GOP effort to provide more defense money — but still less than that agreed to by the Senate.

Rep. Lynn Martin, R-Ill., predicted the House-Senate compromise would fall near the House Republicans' suggested plan and "will be passed (eventually) by this House."

And House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., added Reagan "must realize he will not get his way on defense and foreign aid without participating in a balanced approach, and that includes revenues."

HOUSE LEADERS SAID the extra taxes would be aimed at the deficit, but GOP opponents said there was no practical way to ensure that is how the tax money would be used.

Reagan's letter, which arrived just before the vote, complained the Democratic budget would "cripple the combat readiness of our conventional forces and take unacceptable risks with our national security."

"It would be wasteful and irresponsible to cut short this program by denying the funding necessary to this program by denying the funding necessary to carry it out," Reagan wrote.

Republicans said the letter came too late to do much good, but Gray said it carried little weight because Americans want spending reductions done "in a balanced way" — meaning the military should share the pain.

Deduction for IRAs may be kept

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Republican leader Robert Dole is hinting that a sore point in the tax reform bill — the ban to drop most IRA deductions — may be fixed, and a bipartisan group is pushing a new way to save the cherished tax break.

Dole, of Kansas, noted Thursday several areas in the Finance Committee's bill drew numerous complaints, including the plan to eliminate most tax deductions for the popular Individual Retirement Accounts. "We may be able to fix up some of those," he said.

The statement, though far from a mark of support for restoring the IRA deductions, seemed to be a softening of Dole's earlier position. Previously, he had said there would be attempts to restore the tax break, but he would fight such amendments and expected them to lose.

The Finance Committee plan would cut individual income tax rates to their lowest level in about a half century, but a two-bracket scheme of 15 percent and 27 percent — and pay for that by curtailing a host of tax breaks. Many of the items that would be dropped are used mostly by the wealthy, but some are considered basic provisions for the middle class.

The most sensitive has been the IRA proposal, which would allow the maximum annual $2,000 individual tax deduction for contributions to an IRA for anyone covered by another pension plan. It is estimated about 20 million of the 28 million American households with IRAs would lose the deduction.

Dole and President Reagan have been leading a campaign to keep the tax bill free from major changes because they fear that large-scale tampering, such as raising tax rates, could cause overall support to unravel.

Dole, who wants to bring the tax bill to the Senate floor next month, said there "are conditions forming on each side" of the massive measure, but predicted "there will be much more support than opposition."

Meanwhile, a group of senators proposed paying for retention of the IRA deduction by delaying the manner in which the tax overhaul bill would adjust tax rates for inflation. It is estimated about $25 billion would be needed in the next five years to restore the IRA deduction to the measure.

The five senators who proposed the idea, led by Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., and Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., said preliminary figures from the Joint Committee on Taxation indicated that a one- or two-year delay in the inflation adjustments — known as "indexing" — may raise enough money to keep the deduction.

But they asked the joint committee, which advises lawmakers on tax questions, to study several options for how to best delay the indexing and not harm lower-income people.

"I've heard from my constituents on this issue more than any other part of the tax bill," said Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., who joined in backing the new IRA proposal. "It has struck a raw nerve across the country."

D'Amato said he had "delegated my office" with complaints about the IRA provision and he predicted the deduction would easily be restored if the public kept up the pressure. "IRAs are going to be retained," he said. "I'm very confident of that."

Also pushing the plan were Sens. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., and Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska.

The IRA deduction is preserved in the tax bill approved last year by the House.

A thought for the day: Norwegian writer Henrik Ibsen said "The spirit of truth and the spirit of freedom are the pillars of society."

Ann Boudreau

Ann (Smith) Boudreau, 71, widow of Romeo Boudreau of 471 Parker St. and Clearwater, Fla., died Thursday at her Manchester home.

She was born in Prince Edward Island, Canada, and had lived in Manchester and Clearwater for the last five years.

She is survived by two sons, Edward J. Boudreau of Danvers, Mass., and Richard A. Boudreau of Manchester; six grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren.

A memorial service will be May 23 in Portland, Maine, at the convenience of the family. There are no calling hours. The Newkirk & Whitney Funeral Home, 318 Burnside Ave., East Hartford, has charge of local arrangements.

Memorial donations may be made to the American Cancer Society.

Vincent G. Grieco

Vincent G. Grieco, 52, of the Rockville section of the city, died Wednesday at an area convalescent home. He was the son of Theresa (Garripoli) Grieco of Manchester and the late Ralph Grieco.

Besides his mother, he is survived by two brothers, John Grieco of Meriden and Ben Grieco of the Bronx, N.Y.; a sister, Eleanor Tantillo of Tolland; several nieces and nephews; and several grandnieces and grandnephews.

The funeral will be Saturday at 10 a.m. at the Burke-Portin Funeral Home, 76 Prospect St., Rockville. Burial will be in Elmwood Cemetery, Cemetery Road, Rockville. Calling hours are today from 2 to 4 and 7 to 9 p.m.

White, born May 6, 1915, was stricken three days after his birthday while writing a sequel to his autobiography at his East Side townhouse, according to his long-time friend, writer Richard Clurman.

The "Making of the President" series began with the 1960 race between John F. Kennedy and Richard M. Nixon and included four of his 11 books.

The first book sold more than 4 million copies, won him a Pulitzer Prize and spawned competitors who tried to match White's reporting style.

Because his aim was post-election history, White could ignore day-to-day reporting, getting fill-ins as needed from colleagues.

But by the 1972 race between Nixon and George McGovern, White said he had invented a method of reporting "which I now sincerely regret."

"I'd get into a room and disappear into the woodwork," he told an interviewer. "Now the rooms are so crowded with reporters getting behind-the-scenes stories that nobody can get behind-the-scenes stories."

He also said the process had made McGovern a fish in a bowl. "All of us are observing him, taking notes like mad, getting all the little details... Whocares if the guy had milk and Total for breakfast?"

In a 1978 review of White's autobiography "In Search of History," William Greider, then of The Washington Post, said White's influence "still frames the way in which most reporters look at politics and history."

White writes like a fair wind, refreshing the landscape, Greider wrote. "He tells a story so well that familiar events become compelling, pulling readers forward to a climax they already know."

MCC student leader blasts petition action

By Susan Vaughan Herald Reporter

The student senate president at Manchester Community College today criticized the college faculty for not acting Thursday to retroactively place certain students on the dean's list.

Senate President Michael Pohl said the Faculty Senate, which met Thursday, "condoned a violation of student rights" by not reversing its vote last week not to place the students on the dean's list, even though students had petitioned for the action.

The dean's list policy approved Thursday will require that students have a 3.3 grade point average for a minimum of 12 semester hours, said Dr. Wayne Shurey, chairman of the Academic Standards Committee. Students who receive an incomplete for a course will be allowed 60 days to make up the work to qualify for the dean's list, but students who withdraw from a course during a semester cannot qualify for the dean's list under the new policy.

Pohl had collected signatures on a petition for a referendum on the issue, but he said that the president of the Faculty Senate, David Gidman, would not accept the petition at Thursday's meeting. Pohl said he was not given a reason for the action.

"They did not stand up for the students," Pohl said of the faculty, adding that some faculty members spoke up for the change the students requested.

THEODORE H. WHITE Pulitzer prize-winner

Theodore White, journalist-author, dies at age 71

NEW YORK (AP) — Theodore H. White, the Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist whose "Making of the President" books chronicled the presidential elections from Nixon vs. Kennedy to Nixon vs. McGovern, has died at age 71.

White, who also was responsible for the insider style of reporting on politics and the characterization of the Kennedy years as Camelot, died late Thursday at Lenox Hill Hospital.

He had been in critical condition at Lenox Hill since he was admitted May 9 after suffering a stroke, said hospital spokeswoman Anne Warner.

White, born May 6, 1915, was stricken three days after his birthday while writing a sequel to his autobiography at his East Side townhouse, according to his long-time friend, writer Richard Clurman.

The "Making of the President" series began with the 1960 race between John F. Kennedy and Richard M. Nixon and included four of his 11 books.

The first book sold more than 4 million copies, won him a Pulitzer Prize and spawned competitors who tried to match White's reporting style.

Because his aim was post-election history, White could ignore day-to-day reporting, getting fill-ins as needed from colleagues.

But by the 1972 race between Nixon and George McGovern, White said he had invented a method of reporting "which I now sincerely regret."

"I'd get into a room and disappear into the woodwork," he told an interviewer. "Now the rooms are so crowded with reporters getting behind-the-scenes stories that nobody can get behind-the-scenes stories."

He also said the process had made McGovern a fish in a bowl. "All of us are observing him, taking notes like mad, getting all the little details... Whocares if the guy had milk and Total for breakfast?"

In a 1978 review of White's autobiography "In Search of History," William Greider, then of The Washington Post, said White's influence "still frames the way in which most reporters look at politics and history."

White writes like a fair wind, refreshing the landscape, Greider wrote. "He tells a story so well that familiar events become compelling, pulling readers forward to a climax they already know."

Indictment of Presser imminent

By Pete Yost The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Jackie Presser, the Teamsters president and former labor adviser to the Reagan administration, is facing imminent indictment because he used funds from a Cleveland local to pay so-called ghost employees who did no work, federal law enforcement officials said.

Presser, 59, should be indicted by a grand jury before Monday's opening of the Teamsters convention in Las Vegas, Nev., the officials, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said Thursday.

In Cleveland, meanwhile, the attorney for an FBI agent implicated in the Presser probe said today the Justice Department had told him his client would also be indicted.

Agent Robert Friedrick, supervisor of the Cleveland FBI organization, is alleged to have told Justice Department investigators that the bureau had authorized the payments and that Presser was an FBI informant.

The attorney, William D. Beyer, told The Associated Press he expected the indictment of his client in Washington today.

CBS News also reported Presser had been told by the Justice Department he will be indicted by a grand jury in Cleveland today.

The network, quoting sources familiar with the investigation, said Presser was scheduled to appear for arraignment in Cleveland on Saturday.

The New York Times, in today's edition, also reported Presser would be indicted today.

CBS and the Times reported that an FBI agent also would be indicted.

White, born May 6, 1915, was stricken three days after his birthday while writing a sequel to his autobiography at his East Side townhouse, according to his long-time friend, writer Richard Clurman.

indicted on charges of making false statements about the Teamsters' relationship with the bureau.

Presser would become the third of the past four Teamsters presidents to be indicted while in office. With an income from the Teamsters of more than $755,000 last year, he also is the nation's highest paid union official.

The Teamsters, with 1.6 million members, is the nation's largest union.

Duke Zeller, the union's chief spokesman, did not return phone calls to his hotel room in Las Vegas, where he was preparing for next week's Teamsters convention, which is held once every five years. Presser is expected to be re-elected to a five-year term as the union's president at the meeting.

Presser's attorney, John Cimmaco, also could not be reached for comment.

According to a report issued a week ago by the Senate permanent investigations subcommittee, the ghost workers investigation of Presser collapsed a year ago when several FBI agents reported to the Justice Department that they had authorized Presser to make the payments.

The payments had been authorized in Presser's role as an FBI informant, it has been widely reported.

Presser, in his role as secretary-treasurer of Cleveland Teamster Local 507, made the payments to his uncle, Allen Friedman, to John Nardi Jr., the son of a slain Cleveland mob leader; and to others.

The Senate subcommittee said more than $700,000 had been paid out to the ghost workers on checks co-signed by Presser.

The government had planned to use both Friedman and Nardi as witnesses against Presser. But the FBI agents' statements that the agents had authorized the payments destroyed the case because it would be difficult to prove criminal intent on Presser's part, the subcommittee report said.

Nardi was placed on the local's payroll in order to prevent warfare between competing organized crime factions in Cleveland, witnesses told the Senate.

Nardi testified that he received $300 a week from 1972 to 1978. Friedman, according to court records, received $1,000 a week until 1981.

The Justice Department decided last July that it could not prosecute the case because of the involvement of the FBI. But the Presser investigation was subsequently reopened amid questions over whether the FBI agents were telling the truth.

According to the Senate subcommittee's staff, which interviewed a number of Justice Department officials, "there was evidence that the agents' authorization claims were not credible."

Town fires top engineer

The source said middle-management employees were told that Senkow had been fired and nothing else.

When a reporter phoned the Engineering Division today asking for Senkow, he was told simply that Senkow had been away for a week and would not return on Monday.

Senkow has been the town engineer, the highest position in the Engineering Division of the Public Works Department, since February 1980. At that time, he was selected from among three candidates to succeed Walter Fuss, who resigned his twin posts as director of public works and town engineer and became a private consulting engineer.

As the engineer, he appeared before various town commissions whenever he was needed. He regularly appeared before the Planning and Zoning Commission to answer questions concerning engineering matters of developments.

The firing took effect Tuesday, Werbner said.

Town Personnel Officer Linda Parry could not verify his current salary this morning, but said it was somewhere between $31,405 and $37,686.

Prior to his appointment as town engineer, Senkow was a highway engineer with the State of Washington Highway Department for 5 1/2 years.

Senkow is a native of Waterford. He graduated from New London High School in 1964, attended the U.S. Coast Guard Academy and graduated from the University of Connecticut in 1969.

As the engineer, he appeared before various town commissions whenever he was needed. He regularly appeared before the Planning and Zoning Commission to answer questions concerning engineering matters of developments.

Calhoun steps into tough UConn post

By Len Auster Sports Editor

STORRS — There's an old saying that says, "If you can't beat 'em, join 'em."

Maybe that's what Connecticut did Thursday as it was formally announced at an afternoon news conference that Jim Calhoun has been appointed the university's 17th head basketball coach.

Calhoun succeeds Dom Perno, who submitted his resignation on April 14. It was an extensive 31-day search by the select committee to come up with the 44-year-old Calhoun. Calhoun has one more year to go on his five-year contract at Northeastern but had a built-in escape clause.

Calhoun led the Northeastern Huskies to the Connecticut Mutual Classic championship last December, doing so convincingly against the Connecticut Huskies. Calhoun comes to UConn after a successful 14-year tenure at Northeastern where he led the program from Division II status to a perennial NCAA Division I tournament team, compiling an overall record of 256-137, a winning percentage of .656. He is the winningest coach in the school's history.

Calhoun said the decision was not an easy one. "I said no to myself 15 times," he acknowledged. "But after a few no's, the yesses came out," he added. The biggest question was why. Why would Calhoun, who has constructed a successful program at Northeastern, want to take the Connecticut job?

"It's an opportunity and I see a new direction set up by the task force. The commitment I have set up is long term and I'm a long term guy."

The new UConn coach admitted to some thoughts as he drove from Boston to Storrs Thursday. "I was coming down the Mass Turnpike, maybe too fast, and you could say I was going away but I see it as coming to something special and new."

Jim Calhoun, 44, takes over as 17th head basketball coach at the University of Connecticut. The former Northeastern coach succeeds Dom Perno, who resigned on April 14.

Calhoun would not divulge the length of his contract, only saying, "UConn has extended me a very good contract of more than sufficient length. It shows to me their commitment. He was asked about the salary and answered, "I'm now working in the Big East, not the ECAC, and I'm being paid like a Big East coach."

Rick Pitino, who took over at Providence a year ago, is reportedly working under a $100,000 a year contract.

Northeastern the last three years went 75-39, including 26-5 this past winter, and has been in the NCAA Tournament each year. In five of the last six seasons, Northeastern has won 20 or more games. His task at Connecticut is to rebuild a program that went 12-16 a year ago, winding up in the Big East cellar and being ousted in the Big East Tournament's first-round game. UConn has four consecutive losing seasons, a trend it hopes to correct under Calhoun.

Calhoun said he's well aware of the task that awaits him. "I've looked at UConn very hard. I know there are problems to overcome but I feel progress is being implemented by the task force report. It's a mission of 2-3 years of incredible proportion. I do understand what is going on and I feel I can be a large part of it."

The new Husky coach, accompanied by his wife, Pat, and their two children, James, 18, and Jeff, 13, to the news conference, recently turned down an offer from Northwestern of the Big Ten. He was quoted as saying he was not a miracle worker. "I don't have any easy answers," he cited. "I don't work miracles. But my game plan is to work as hard as we possibly can."

Calhoun said his team would present a fast-break offense. "I don't know how well we'll play but we will play hard. There will be good human beings playing for Connecticut. We will be a physical, well-conditioned team that comes out at you."

One of his early goals is to contact each player on the current UConn roster and meet with them and their families. He also said he plans to make an announcement shortly on the status of assistant coach Howie Dickenman, who stayed on the Connecticut staff after Perno's resignation. He did indicate Dickenman would be asked to stay on. He added that probably one of his assistant coaches at Northeastern would follow him to Connecticut.

UConn had three of its players, Earl Kelley, Terry Coffey and Al Armstrong, run into academic difficulties in a troubled season. Calhoun, who graduated 27 players in succession, said there's room for academics and athletics. "I feel a commitment toward athletics, social life and academics go hand in hand."

Calhoun said he looked into the UConn situation before feeling the water. "Anyone who doesn't do their homework is a fool. I grew up in New England and had my own perception of Northeastern, referring to the school as 'we.' We and they may be interchanged for 3-4 weeks. I can't forget those kids. I will attach myself to others. They will be we, too."

East losing top scorer

STORRS — The departure of Dom Perno as University of Connecticut basketball coach will have a ripple effect on the Eastern Catholic High School program.

The Pernos have purchased a home in Bristol, hometown of Perno's wife, Cindy, and are selling their house in Storrs. That means East will be losing 6-2 junior forward Matt Perno, who led the 2-18 Eagles a year ago in scoring with a 12.5 points per game average. The younger Perno, reportedly, will attend St. Paul High next season where he will play for Fran Serratore.

Calhoun said his team would present a fast-break offense. "I don't know how well we'll play but we will play hard. There will be good human beings playing for Connecticut. We will be a physical, well-conditioned team that comes out at you."

"YOUR VOICE IN MANCHESTER"

FOCUS/Weekend

Fast-tapping feet declare "We're in the Money" in one of the splashy musical numbers of "42nd Street," David Merrick's Tony Award-winning Broadway musical at Bushnell Memorial Hall.

Dazzling '42nd Street' is one fine evening

By Suson Vaughn
Herald Reporter

HARTFORD — The curtain at Bushnell Memorial Hall rises only part way for the opening of "42nd Street," revealing 100 feet tap dancing at full speed. When the curtain goes up all the way, the audience sees a chorus of young dancers wearing the hairdos and dress of the 1930s. The energy of this Broadway troupe and the '30s tone prevail throughout the evening.

"42nd Street," the David Merrick Broadway smash, premiered in Hartford Tuesday night for an eight-day run. Because the show has so many energetic numbers, the few quieter scenes are a welcome respite.

The "show within a show" carries the troupe from an audition for "Pretty Lady" in New York to a pre-Broadway run in Philadelphia and back again to Broadway. The Cinderella plot centers around an aspiring starlet, Peggy Sawyer, from Allentown, Pa., who's just arrived in New York determined to make her mark on the Big White Way.

SAWYER IS played by Cathy Wydner. Her cherubic good looks make her just right for the role. She's a talented dancer with a pleasant voice.

Jim Walton as leading man Billy Lawlor smiles his way through the role, as he tries to tap dance his way into Peggy's heart. His tenor voice is nearly equal to his superb dancing ability.

Gary Marshal as Julian Marsh starts out as the tough director during the Depression trying to re-establish himself with a Broadway hit. "You're on your way to glory and 32 bucks a week. You're going to dance your feet off," he tells the chorus, and the dancers follow his orders.

During the first act, director Marshal seems almost like an awkward appendage on stage, separate from the cast. But as rehearsals for his show progress, he, too, is smitten by the bungling and delightful Peggy, and his tough-guy exterior dissolves.

THE TURNING POINT for Marshal's character and the show comes when a veteran star is injured and he must use his charms to convince Peggy to take over the lead support role. In that scene, Marshal leads into the familiar "Lullaby of Broadway," gradually calling on the talents of the entire cast. "Lullaby" is probably the best number in "42nd Street," as it demonstrates the range of the cast.

Elizabeth Allen as the aging ingenue Dorothy Brock plays her role effectively, evolving from the demanding leading lady to a rejected lover and fading star.

Allen draws laughter in her portrayal of a klutzy dancer magnified behind the curtain in the "Shadow Walks." Allen sings a heart-wrenching "I Know Now" and "About a Quarter to Nine," though her voice is not consistent.

Her acting talent is stronger when she tells Wydner how to play the leading role: "Act out there so swell you'll make me hate you," she tells him.

Bibi Osterwald is perfectly suited to the supporting role of Maggie Jones, the brassy sign-wright and mother hen of the cast. Chorus member Cathy Susan Pyles, a sassy redhead, stands out in a lead support role.

ALTHOUGH THE PLAYERS are strong, the overall power of "42nd Street" comes from the winning combination of familiar tunes such as "Shuffle Off to Buffalo," and "We're in the Money," along with 500 lavish costumes and an energetic chorus.

Unfortunately, the voice projection in some numbers was not at its best on opening night. I don't think it was overpowering by the orchestra so much as a weak audio system. Another distraction were sets that sometimes swayed along with the dancers.

A trip to the Bushnell this week is like a delightful trip back to 42nd Street in 1933. "42nd Street" invites you to "come and meet those dancin' feet."

"42nd Street" is at Bushnell Memorial Hall through Sunday.)

Willimantic conductor to audition with MSO pops

By Nancy Pappas
Herald Reporter

ANTHONY TOLOKAN
conductor candidate

There's only one way to catch Anthony Tolokan with his feet firmly planted in one spot: Go to a rehearsal where he's the conductor.

Tolokan is a man on the run. He puts in at least 65 hours a week as the director of orchestra operations for the Hartford Symphony, scheduling rehearsals and performances, bringing in soloists, and arranging auditions.

As if this were not enough, Tolokan, 34, conducts the Willimantic Community Orchestra, and plays the violin in his spare time. And this weekend, he'll be the fourth musician to audition for the position of permanent conductor of the Manchester Symphony Orchestra and Choral.

"It's an incredible workaholic," says Tolokan, who lives in Storrs. "Being a workaholic, I don't see it as impossible, fitting the Manchester commitment into my schedule."

The symphony's pops concert is tonight and Saturday at 8 p.m. It will feature pieces from musicals such as "South Pacific," "West Side Story" and "Oklahoma."

Tenor Peter Harvey will be soloist. The orchestra will perform several Aaron Copland pieces, a movement from a Schumann symphony, and the area premier of a new piece, "Essay for Orchestra," by Connecticut composer Gwyneth Walker. The work was commissioned two years ago by several community orchestras, including the Manchester Symphony.

Walker. The work was commissioned two years ago by several community orchestras, including the Manchester Symphony.

Walker will be introduced at Saturday's performance.

TOLOKAN SAYS that the rehearsal weekend's performances have meant returning to a group he greatly enjoyed. While a student at the University of Connecticut, he played the violin with the Manchester Symphony for three seasons. He was encouraged by Jack Heller, then the conductor of the group, and a faculty member at the university. In fact, Heller drove him to rehearsals.

"I love being back," Tolokan said Thursday. "I think the orchestra is delightful, and the people are wonderful, and I wouldn't change anything about the group at all."

The musicians' skill has impressed Tolokan. "They are extremely professional. They conduct themselves in a highly professional manner," he said.

To a great extent, the work he has done in managing the Hartford Symphony and directing Von der Meulen Hall is what Tolokan believes makes him a valuable asset to the Manchester group.

"Management is very exciting. In many ways, it's what really keeps a whole organization working," he says. "Few conductors have any idea what really goes on back stage. They snap their fingers and think something is going to happen. They don't realize how much work is involved in putting together a rehearsal, a performance."

Tolokan says he plans to remain in the management end of music. "My sights are set on this side of the field," he said. "I have no aspirations to get onto the podiums of any major symphonies. But I would like to keep my hand in conducting. I believe that the Manchester orchestra gives me an excellent chance to do just that."

Perry Mason fans have a treat in store

NBC two-hour special brings back efficient Della Street

By Vernon Scott
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD — Good old reliable Della Street. Perry Mason's secretary in the Eric Starline Gardner whodunit novels, set the pattern for a generation of girls-Friday in TV series.

She was a marvel of efficiency, femininity, diplomacy and piquancy. She dressed conservatively, not to say stylishly. Her hair was always neatly in place and her voice was pleasingly modulated.

One other thing. There was a nagging suspicion among certain viewers of the "Perry Mason" series that sweet, hard-working Della was also fooling around with her attorney boss on certain episodes.

"Could be," said Della's alter ego, Barbara Hale. "But we left

Hopper, who played Paul Drake; William Talman, as district attorney Hamilton Burger; and Raymond Burr in the role of Perry Mason, the long-suffering cop.

Hale's son, William Katt, will play detective Paul Drake Jr. in the May 25 movie, as he did in the first two-hour version, "Perry Mason Returns."

"It's strange to be doing Della almost 30 years after I first played her in the pilot show," said Hale, who remains a vital, humorous woman with a twinkle of mischief in her eye.

"AFTER THE PILOT show, I agreed to do only 18 shows. I didn't think it could possibly go longer than that because the demands of the script, all that dialogue and those long courtroom scenes, would be too much for Raymond or any other actor."

"Then, more than 300 episodes later they carried me off the set. And while I convalesced, Raymond got into a wheelchair and rolled over to star in 'Ironside' for many more years."

"But let me remind you, I was only 8 years old when I began the show and Raymond was only 9."

Hale, mother of three and grandmother of four, has been married to former actor Bill Williams (TV's "Kit Carson") for 40 years. Although she likes to think of herself as matronly, there is a youthful effervescence about her.

"I'm proud that Della was sort of a prototype for TV secretaries," she said. "There really was no such thing as a character on TV when 'Perry Mason' came along."

"Della wasn't really a very big role. I had six days, six lines and six wardrobe changes a show."

When I changed clothes it signified another day had gone by in the script.

Della was sort of a delicate beginning of the feminist movement. She never stood up to Perry, but she wasn't intimidated by him either. She adored Perry and was comfortable with him. Viewers never really knew if he had a romance going.

"We've picked up the characters 20 years later in their lives. Della is still single and Perry is still a bachelor. In the intervening years Perry became an appellate court judge and Della became an executive assistant in a large corporation."

"Raymond was wonderful on our first day back at work. He rushed into the courtroom scene, stopped in the middle of his entrance, looked at me and said, 'My God, 30 years have just evaporated.'"

RAYMOND BURR
... plays Perry Mason

Hale said she hadn't done much acting since "Perry Mason" left the air in 1974. She did work with son Bill in an episode of his defunct series, "The Greatest American Hero" and in the movie "The Big Wednesday."

Sharon Morin holds her baby, Kelly Elizabeth Morin, who was born at 3:02 a.m. Sunday. Joanna Longo holds Tamera Anselmo Longo, who was born Sunday at 12:06 a.m. Both babies were born at Manchester Memorial Hospital. Kelly, who weighed 8 pounds at birth, also is the daughter of David Morin. The Morins live on Bush Hill Road. Tamera, who weighed seven pounds and seven ounces at birth, also is the daughter of Peter Longo. The Longos live on Bunce Drive.

About Town

MCC has women's confab

A one-day conference, "Women's Issues of the 80s," will be held Thursday at the Lowe Program Center, Manchester Community College. Deanne Shapiro of the University of Connecticut School of Social Work will be the speaker. Her topic will be "Power is Not a Dirty Word." Morning workshops will include: stress-burnout, self-esteem, mid-life and juggling roles. Afternoon workshops will include: relaxation, re-entering the work force, networking and alcoholism. Pre-registration is $8. Registration at the door will be $1. The fee includes lunch.

Squares meet, dance

The Manchester Square Dance Club Inc. will have its annual meeting Saturday starting with a potluck at 5:45 p.m. at the Waddell School cafeteria. A club-level dance will begin at 8 p.m. Earl Johnston will call the squares and Walter Benoit will cue the rounds.

Purdy receives plaque

Jack Purdy accepts a plaque from Joanne McCormick, standing, as Jean McGrath congratulates him. Purdy is president of Purdy Corp., where 65 pints of blood were collected at the firm's bloodmobile recently. McCormick is assistant director of Greater Hartford Blood Services and McGrath is volunteer chairman of the blood services committee, Connecticut Valley East Branch, American Red Cross.

Senior play postponed

The senior play scheduled for Thursday at the Manchester Citizens' Center has been postponed indefinitely.

And now ... birth control for roaches

NEW YORK (UPI) — Carl Djerassi, who invented the hormone that led to development of an oral contraceptive for women, may now have done for those dark spaces under the sink and behind soap cans what the pill did for the bedroom. He has developed an insect birth control spray that keeps cockroaches from maturing — thereby preventing them from reproducing.

"We found in tests that our birth control hormone for fleas was also having an effect on nearby roaches — it was serendipity," said Djerassi, who received a National Medal of Science from President Nixon for his work on the pill. "We have refined the hormone to specifically suit roaches," he said. Djerassi helped ignite the sexual revolution in 1951 by inventing Norethindrone, a synthesized hormone in the human birth control pill. More recently, he led a team of scientists who invented the roach spray for his research company, Zeecon Corp., in California. The invention was announced Thursday. Company scientists have also created a birth control spray for mosquitoes, he said.

The synthesized hormone, called insect growth regulator, or IGR, mimics the roaches' own chemistry and prevents baby roaches from maturing, he said. The immature roaches, which are about the same size as adults, live a normal 150-day lifespan, then die without reproducing.

A female roach can produce more than 250 offspring in her lifetime. Djerassi said the roaches ingest the hormone when it is sprayed on their food sources. IGR is harmless to humans, said Djerassi, who said in some parts of the world, mosquito birth control hormone is

Monkey brain-cell transplants stop disease like Parkinson's

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Scientists at Yale University and the University of Rochester have successfully transplanted brain cells in monkeys to reverse symptoms that are similar to those in humans suffering from Parkinson's disease, Yale has announced.

The animal model used in our present study seems to provide an essential step toward eventual application of cell grafting techniques in humans," said Dr. D. Eugene Redmond Jr., an associate professor of psychiatry at Yale and the director of the research project.

"Additional studies will be needed to confirm the functional improvements resulting from the transplants and to assure the safety and effectiveness of the procedure," Redmond said in a Yale University School of Medicine statement released for today.

The school said the project may be a step toward human brain cell transplants to treat central nervous system diseases.

The team's work is reported in the May 17 issue of "The Lancet," a British medical journal, and is the first scientific report published on the survival of transplanted brain cells in primates, the university said.

The Yale-Rochester team studied monkeys with motor movement and tremors nearly identical to the symptoms of Parkinson's in humans. Parkinson's is a degenerative disease characterized by tremors and muscular rigidity. The symptoms are believed to result when cells using a chemical substance in the brain, dopamine, are destroyed.

"Our research team transplanted dopamine neurons from fetal monkeys into the areas of the brain which usually contain dopamine and are thought to trigger Parkinson's disease symptoms," Redmond said.

Within a day after the transplants, the monkeys began to show improvement in their motor function and tremors, he said.

After 70 days, both monkeys had improved dramatically, with one returning almost to normal and the other having diminished tremor, the researchers said. A third monkey that was used as a control with inappropriate cells transplanted into different locations deteriorated in motor function during this same period, they said.

The team conducted the transplant research at the independent Axion Research Foundation Facility in St. Kitts, a West Indian island where the monkeys are studied in a more natural environment, Redmond said.

Other investigators in the study were Dr. John B. Sladek, chairman of neurobiology and anatomy at the University of Rochester Medical Center, Rochester neurobiologists Drs. Timothy J. Collier and Suzanne Haber, Robert H. Roth, professor of psychiatry and pharmacology at Yale; and Drs. John Elsworth and Ariell Y. Deutch, neurobiologists at Yale.

AIDS virus grown in animal cells

WASHINGTON (AP) — California researchers for the first time have grown the AIDS-causing virus in animal cells in a development that may unlock the secret of why some cells slow the germ's reproduction.

Until now, the virus — which can destroy the body's protective immune system — has been grown only in cells of the human immune system. The ones it attacks and kills after causing acquired immune deficiency syndrome, researchers said.

In a report published today in the journal Science, scientists at the University of California, San Francisco, and the Chiron Corp. of Emeryville, Calif., say they now can grow the virus in non-immune cells from monkeys, minks, mice and humans.

Dr. Jay A. Levy, principal investigator of the study at the university, said viral reproduction was poor in these cells, especially those from mice. The virus grew best in the human cells, but not as well as in human immune cells.

This slow reproduction means that either the animal cells lack something that more susceptible human cells have, or that human cells lack an inhibitor to the virus that the others possess, Levy said.

Levy and Dr. Cecilia Cheng-Mayer, as well as Drs. Dino Dina and Paul Luciw of Chiron, said they used fibroblast cells from humans and different animals for the experiments. These are the cells that make up the body's fibrous tissues, such as tendons.

The major barrier to the virus getting into the fibroblasts so that it could reproduce is the membrane surrounding the cells. The researchers said they overcame this block by putting a molecular clone of the virus, produced by bacteria, into the fibroblasts.

This slow reproduction means that either the animal cells lack something that more susceptible human cells have, or that human cells lack an inhibitor to the virus that the others possess, Levy said.

Chernobyl death toll rises to 13

MOSCOW — An American doctor treating victims of the Chernobyl nuclear accident indicated today that the death toll has reached 13. One Soviet newspaper said five were firefighters who braved fierce radiation to battle flames engulfing the nuclear reactor.

Dr. Robert Gale, who left Moscow shortly after giving interviews to U.S. television correspondents, told ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" and the Cable News Network that only 24 of the 35 people previously listed in grave condition still were alive.

He declined to say when the latest deaths occurred. Gale told a news conference Thursday that 28 of the 35 most seriously injured were alive, adding more deaths were inevitable.

Deaver goes behind closed doors

WASHINGTON — Former White House aide Michael K. Deaver, saying "it's my turn today," went behind closed doors to tell a House panel that his activities as a private lobbyist did not violate conflict-of-interest laws.

Speaking to a crowd of reporters outside the Rayburn House Office Building, Deaver said, "After five months of innuendos and leaks, it's my turn today."

On Thursday, Deaver's spokeswoman at his firm, Michael K. Deaver & Associates, sounded the same theme. Deaver "is very much looking forward" to his testimony, spokeswoman Pamela Bailey said.

Pastora leaving the Contra fight

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica — Eden Pastora, a major Nicaraguan rebel figure recently stripped of his command, headed for an isolated region of Costa Rica today to relinquish his battle gear and seek political asylum from the government.

Costa Rican officials Thursday planned tight security measures at the site just inside the border with Nicaragua, along which Pastora concentrated his guerrilla fight after leaving a position in the leftist Sandinista government.

Costa Rican Deputy Security Minister Rogelio Castro Pinto said Pastora, along with up to 450 Contras who pledged to join their leader in requesting political asylum, would be escorted to San Jose immediately after they turned over their arms.

Costa Rican President Oscar A. Sanchez has said his government would study Pastora's request for asylum.

Twisters kill two in Missouri

Violent Midwest storms forced Missouri with tornadoes that killed two people and mangled officials to seal off devastated towns today as they worked to preserve order and restore telephone, power and other services.

In all, the National Weather Service said severe thunderstorms in the Mississippi and Ohio valleys Thursday produced an estimated 28 tornadoes — concentrating their fury on the southeastern coast of Missouri.

The extent of the damage was difficult to calculate because the storms knocked out the AT&T microwave transmitter near Bloomfield, cutting telephone service in southeast Missouri, and police prevented traffic from entering the towns of Vanduser and Sikeston so they could "get a handle on things."

"The tornado is reported to have produced widespread destruction in Vanduser, Mo., and there have been two deaths and many injuries," said Brian Miller, of the Emergency Operation Center in nearby Cape Girardeau, Mo.

Yet almost tossed Hitler album

UNION, Ill. — A World War II veteran says he never realized the value of a photo album he took as a souvenir from Adolf Hitler's Munich apartment in 1945 and nearly threw it away after leaving it to gather dust in his attic for 40 years.

Wilbert W. "Bill" Massman also was surprised by the publicity generated by the album and some loose photographs he said in Hitler's sparsely furnished apartment on Prinzregentenplatz, a square in the heart of Munich, at the close of the war.

"This has been wearing to me," Massman, 70, said in a calm, hoarse voice at a news conference he held Thursday to defend his claim that the photo album once belonged to Hitler.

Couple tell movie-like tale of intrigue

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The bizarre tale of international intrigue, abduction and betrayal sounds like a script for low-budget adventure film, but a South Korean film director and his actress wife swear it is true.

U.S. and South Korean officials, after thoroughly questioning film director Shin Sang-ok and his wife, Choi En-hui, say they believe the story of how the two were kidnapped on the orders of North Korean leader Kim Il Sung's son and their apparent eight-year sojourn so they could make movies to bolster North Korea's film industry.

The two said they escaped to the West while in Vienna earlier this year and plan to stay in the United States, where officials have granted them permission to remain indefinitely.

The couple said they were seized by North Korean agents in Hong Kong in separate incidents and that Kim Jong Il, the North Korean leader's son, told them he had ordered their capture.

Shin and Choi said they were directly involved in making about seven films in North Korea and that last year, using a ruse they did not describe, broke away from their captors and sought U.S. asylum.

The State Department, without using the word "asylum," said they are free to remain in the United States. The South Korean government has said they can freely visit their relatives in South Korea.

The Energy and Commerce oversight and investigations subcommittee was questioning Deaver today in closed session about his lobbying activities for Canada and other countries, as well as his representation of domestic companies, according to panel counsel Michael F. Barrett.

Shin and Choi said they were directly involved in making about seven films in North Korea and that last year, using a ruse they did not describe, broke away from their captors and sought U.S. asylum.

The State Department, without using the word "asylum," said they are free to remain in the United States. The South Korean government has said they can freely visit their relatives in South Korea.

The report signed by all 14 panel members calls for abolishing undergraduate education degrees, creating a board to certify top teachers, and pegging teachers' salaries in part to their students' performance.

It demands more power and autonomy for teachers, and even suggests that some schools do away with principals and be run instead by a committee of "lead teachers" earning salaries of $65,500 a year or more.

The 78-page report, "A Nation Prepared: Teachers for the 21st Century," said bolstering the profession is the key to turning factory-like public schools into places where children will learn to think for themselves.

To avert "a massive decline in our standard of living" and the growth of a permanent underclass, it said, "our schools must graduate the vast majority of their students

South Korean film director Shin Sang Ok and his wife, actress Choi En Hui, smile after telling reporters of their escape from North Korea.

The packed news conference in the Watergate hotel where the husband and wife told their story was surrounded by security from the South Korean Embassy and District of Columbia police. Shin, who said he managed to bring $2.3 million when he fled, has been accused by the North Korean government of fleeing to take the money.

The abduction tale, recounted in meticulous detail by the couple, began when Shin ran into trouble with the South Korean government to bring $2.3 million when he fled, has with achievement levels long thought possible for only the privileged few. The Carnegie Corporation announced today it is giving Stanford University $417,000 to develop ways to measure teachers' skills for the proposed national certification board. Stanford education researcher Lee Shulman said teacher tests now used in most states are "a travesty."

The task force, whose chairman is IBM chief scientist and vice president Lewis M. Branscomb, said that in exchange for greater autonomy, local teachers must be prepared to accept greater accountability if pupils fail to learn. The panel called for establishing a new pecking order within the profession, with "lead teachers" working year-round; advanced certificate holders earning $42,000 for 10 months' work, and certified teachers — the majority — earning $35,500 for 10 months.

The average teacher now earns around $25,000. The panel said teachers' pay should be pegged to productivity, as determined in part by students' performance. But it said the existing ways of measuring students' progress are not satisfactory.

On the issue of letting teachers run schools, Scott Thomson, executive director of the National Association of Secondary School Principals, said, "I don't feel threatened by it... Nothing is ever run well by committee."

U.S. Secretary of Education William J. Bennett, in a telephone interview, said he was "very pleased" so many of the recommendations move in the directions we've been urging: merit pay, high standards, parental choice, liberal arts for prospective teachers.

But he said, "there's a missing person in this report: the principal." When a parent comes to school, she does not want to see a committee.

Two Chinas plan historic talks

HONG KONG (UPI) — Airline officials held preliminary meetings on neutral ground today to work out details of the first formal talks between the two Chinas since the communists came to power on the mainland in 1949.

Spokesmen for China Air Lines and Peking's Civil Aviation Administration of China (CAAC) said today the exact time and place of the historic meeting had not been decided, although preliminary talks between the two sides were underway.

The importance of the talks — which would break a 37-year ban by the Taiwan Nationalists on contact with the "rebel" communist regime — was underscored by the arrival in Hong Kong of Eugene

Chen, special assistant to the president of China Air Lines, to join two Hong Kong CAL officials in the negotiations.

Two Chinese officials arrived in Hong Kong Thursday for the talks, joining Zhenyu Ruyi, CAAC's Hong Kong office manager, to make up the Peking team.

"Representatives... of China are now in Hong Kong, ready to discuss with representatives from Taiwan's China Air Lines on the hand-over of the Boeing 747 cargo plane and two crew members and the goods on the plane," Peking's official Xinhua news agency reported.

Choi, 54, who was then running a South Korean artist's school, said she went to Hong Kong to set up a branch school and, while taking a boat tour of Hong Kong harbor, was abducted in January 1978 by a woman who said she was a North Korean agent.

Asked where she was being taken, one of her captors said, "You are headed for the embrace of Kim Il Sung."

"I felt my blood was draining away and I fainted," she said. "When I awoke I found myself being carried on the back of a man aboard a freighter. I was screaming, crying."

She said she was taken by boat to North Korea where she was greeted by Kim Jong Il, described as a film buff who has an archive of thousands of films in a VIP guest house compound surrounded by three banks of barbed wire where she was kept.

Her husband, 60, said he was abducted in July 1978 in a phony robbery in Hong Kong. "I was being driven to a dinner by somebody I later found was a North Korean agent," he said.

"The back doors opened suddenly and three men jumped in with a knife. They held a knife on me and said, in English, 'Give your money.' They put a nylon hood over my head and then they gave me a sedative that made me sleep."

They said they at first refused to make films in North Korea but finally gave in and under pressure also made a videotape saying they had defected.

Wholesale prices down; housing starts brisk

So far this year, wholesale prices overall have fallen 11.1 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices, down four months straight for the first time in more than two decades, dipped 0.8 percent in April as the benefits from depressed world oil prices rippled through the economy, the government said today.

The decline, led by an 8.4 percent drop in energy prices, came amid indications that the slide may be ending. But the news for April was good: gasoline prices off 10.4 percent; heating oil costs off 8.7 percent; natural gas prices off 5.6 percent.

So far this year, wholesale prices overall have fallen 11.1 percent, the steepest four-month fall recorded since such calculations began in 1947. Not since the period of December 1962-March 1963 have wholesale prices been off for such a long period.

Gasoline prices had fallen 21.9 percent in March. Home heating oil had been down 8 percent that month and 28.2 percent in February.

In other areas of the economy, there were signs of inflation. Food prices inched up 0.1 percent, one-third of the March increase.

Gains were posted for fresh vegetables, up 20.9 percent after an 8.7 percent rise in March, and for poultry, up 3.6 percent. Beef and veal prices dipped 3.7 percent; egg costs fell 7.8 percent and fresh fruit prices skidded 6.2 percent.

Starts for April stronger than they have been since January

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ground was broken on new homes at a brisk annual rate of 2,009,000 in April, up 4.1 percent from the previous month, the Commerce Department said today.

The surge in homebuilding followed a setback from an annual rate of 2,001,900 in February to 1,930,000 in March, according to revised figures contained in this month's report.

multi-family homes begun during the month was an estimated 187,600, up from 146,800 in March, the Census Bureau report said.

The current housing boom, one of the key elements in Reagan administration projections for a 4 percent overall economic growth this year, is powered by a drop in mortgage interest rates to around 10 percent, down about 3 percent from April 1985.

multi-family units, weak in the first quarter because of rental vacancies and the expiration of tax-exempt financing provisions, were begun at a rate of 663,000, up from 641,000 in March.

Regionally, the South recovered somewhat following a slump induced by depression in the oil industry. Starts for the month rose from 783,000 to 802,000 in the Southern states in April after rising to 999,000 in January.

Business In Brief

Heritage loss in the millions

The Heritage Savings and Loan Association reported a net loss of nearly $3 million for the second quarter of 1986 that ended March 31, bank officials said today.

Heritage, a Manchester-based savings and loan institution that was recently sold to the Suffolk Savings Bank, reported a loss of $2,934,918 or $5.92 per share for the second quarter. That compares with earnings of $182,020 for the same period one year ago.

The reported results, Heritage officials said, were primarily due to losses booked on the futures contracts related to the S&L's municipal bond portfolio and the early redemption of certain municipal bonds at a value less than book value.

The bank is also anticipating losses on remaining municipal bonds.

Unemployment claims decline

Unemployment claims filed in Manchester dropped 3.1 percent for the two-week period ending May 3, according to figures released by the state Labor Department.

The decline was consistent with a statewide downward trend in unemployment claims. Statewide claims in the two-week period dropped by more than 2,100 to a total of 27,171.

In Manchester, unemployment claims totaled 744, including 112 new claims.

Statewide, initial claims declined from an average of 3,551 in mid-April to 3,368 and continued claims from 25,781 to 23,803. During the same period last year, initial claims average 3,798 and continued claims were 25,585.

Xerox won't pull out of S. Africa

JOHANNESBURG — The Xerox Corporation is not going to pull out of South Africa as long as the white government continues on the path of racial reform, the company said in a newspaper advertisement.

"If the government keeps its word, there is no way that Xerox will pull out of South Africa," said the full-page advertisement on Thursday that was signed by David English, the managing director of Rank-Xerox, South Africa.

English said the advertisement was in response to a speech in the United States by Xerox Chairman David Kearns Tuesday saying the company might pull out if there is no progress toward eliminating apartheid.

The advertisement said, "Xerox will remain in South Africa as long as real change continues to take place."

FmHA running low on loan money

WASHINGTON — The Farmers Home Administration is rapidly running out of money for its direct farm operating loan program, but officials are counting on meeting credit needs through loan guarantees made to banks.

Vance L. Clark, FmHA administrator, said Thursday that some states have exhausted their allocations. In all, he said, the agency has about $159 million that has not been formally obligated as loans to farmers.

But most of that is carried in the states as unused funds, while the FmHA's actual national reserve is down to less than $60 million, which is expected to last only a matter of days.

Clark said the FmHA plans to concentrate on loan guarantees to see farmers through the remainder of the spring season and will not seek additional funds for direct operating loans.

"We think we can do it," Clark replied when asked whether the guarantees will take care of the demand.

Dollar up, gold mixed in Europe

LONDON — The dollar continued a generally broad four-day recovery and opened higher on European money markets today. Gold was down in Zurich but unchanged in London.

In Paris, the greenback crossed the 7-franc barrier, opening at 7.0365 francs against Thursday's closing of 6.9840 francs. At the day's start in London, the pound was worth $1.5215, an improvement for the dollar from the previous closing of $1.5340.

In Frankfurt, the dollar opened higher at 2.2060 marks against Thursday's final 2.1897, in Zurich at 1.84477 Swiss francs against 1.8212, in Brussels at 45.35 Belgian francs against 45.80 and in Milan at 1.515 lire against 1.50175.

Stock market loses more ground

NEW YORK — The stock market lost more ground today despite favorable economic news.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 10.05 to 1,764.63 in the first hour of trading.

Losers held a 2-2 edge on gainers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Before the market opened, the Labor Department reported that the producer price index of finished goods dropped 0.6 percent in April. Meanwhile, the Commerce Department said housing starts ran at an annual rate of just over 2 million units last month.

But with that favorable background, the market still seemed to be suffering from the after-effects of Thursday's decline, which sent the Dow Jones industrial average down 33.60 points.

Among the blue chips, International Business Machines rose 1/4 to 145 1/2. General Electric was unchanged at 76, and McDonald's dropped 1 1/4 to 102 1/4.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks lost .54 to 134.75. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .32 at 271.75.

Carbide expects success

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — Union Carbide Corp. President Robert Kennedy says investors should not be worried by recent restructuring because the chemical giant has a strong future in the areas it plans to keep.

"What you've really got to look at is the quality of our business," said Kennedy, who this fall will take over from Warren Anderson as Union Carbide's chairman.

"People tend to stay in businesses they're making money in, and they tend to get out of businesses they're losing money in."

After a series of chemical leaks and a takeover threat by GAF Corp., the Danbury, Conn.-based Carbide last August it would fire workers and sell some of its subsidiaries in a move to "streamline" the company.

Among the businesses being sold is its highly visible consumer goods line, which features Evidry batteries and Glad trash bags.

It is retaining its agricultural products division, which makes the popular pesticides Temik and Sevin.

Some stock analysts question Carbide's insistence to keep its petrochemical operations, given the instability of oil prices here and abroad.

Kennedy says agricultural products made at plants like Institute and South Charleston — which depend on technology developed by Carbide — will be a strong business.

"Our position is so strong, in percentage of capacity relative to the whole industry," he said. "We have a low-cost position. We can make money when the high-cost producers are losing money."

Kennedy, in Charleston on Thursday for a meeting of an organization that encourages minorities to enter business, said that in the first two months of the year Carbide's exports were up 25 percent over the same period last year.

In the first two months of 1985, Carbide was still suffering from a December 1984 chemical leak in India that killed more than 2,000 people.

"We had a good first quarter, we're having a good second quarter," Kennedy said. "Beyond that, you've got to guess what direction the economy will go. There are as many signs up as down. I don't think it will worsen much."

Walker inspection

Bryan Weiss, manager of Avon Products' Foster Medical Division in Scotch Plains, N.J., inspects a shipment of walkers for home health-care patients at the company's distribution center.

According to industry sources, more than $15 billion will be spent in the U.S. on home health-care equipment and services by 1990.

Stocks and bonds plunge while money supply bulges

By Rick Gladstone
The Associated Press

Financial markets are depressed over fear of higher interest rates, a trade war with Europe, an unexpected rise in industrial production and a bulge in the nation's money supply, but many analysts say the economy remains lethargic and credit conditions likely will ease in coming months.

On Wall Street, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks fell 35.86 points Thursday to 1,774.66, its seventh-largest point loss ever and the biggest drop since the indicator declined by 41.91 on April 30.

Analysts said the stock market reacted partly to a plunge in bond prices, which move in the opposite direction of interest rates. The price of some long-term Treasury bonds fell nearly $25 Thursday for every $1,000 in face value.

The bond drop was caused partly by a belief among investors that economic growth may be strengthening, based on a Federal Reserve Board report that industrial production rose 0.2 percent last month. Many economists had predicted a decline in output by the nation's factories and mines.

Signs of a strong economy dampen prospects that the Fed will ease credit conditions and make fixed-income securities such as bonds less attractive.

The Fed announcement that the nation's basic money supply rose by $1 billion in early May, double the expected increase, intensified bond selling.

Some analysts contend a surge in the money supply can cause inflation and discourage the nation's central bank from pushing interest rates lower. Others say the Fed does not emphasize money supply growth in setting credit policy.

"The economy remains weak, it is still struggling, and the fact that industrial production was up doesn't negate that," said Philip Braverman, chief economist at Irving Securities Corp. in New York.

On the commodity markets, prices for grains and soybeans declined Thursday, partly because of a report that the Soviet Union does not require grain imports to replace supplies tainted by the Chernobyl nuclear disaster.

That slide intensified when President Reagan announced restrictions on European imports of white wine, beer, cheese, chocolates and other products in retaliation for quotas on U.S. food sales in Spain and Portugal. The move was seen as an escalation in a trade war that could hurt U.S. agricultural exports.
