Poison suspect bought options on drug stock

By Lila Compuzano
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A 24-year-old man is accused of spiking cold, allergy and diet capsules with rat poison in an alleged scheme to make money on the stock market, the FBI said today.

Edward Arien Marks of Temple City, Calif., became the first person charged with tampering in any of the spate of U.S. drug-tainting cases that have claimed at least nine lives since 1982.

He was scheduled to be arraigned before a U.S. magistrate in Los Angeles today on one count of tampering with consumer products, FBI spokesman Jim Neilson said.

Neilson said Marks was arrested in connection with 10 Contac, Dietac and Teldrin capsules containing rat poison that were found in Orlando, Fla., and Houston, Texas, on March 19 and 20.

No consumers were injured as a result of the poisoning, which the U.S. Food and Drug Administration said was sufficient to sicken, but not kill, anyone who took it.

The FBI is investigating a possible connection between Marks and other drug-tampering cases, officials said.

Marks was arrested without incident in a parking lot at Los Angeles International Airport Thursday evening, Neilson said. He had just returned from Boston, the spokesman said, but he declined to say what agents believe Marks was doing in that city.

On May 24, a U.S. magistrate in Orlando, Fla., issued an arrest warrant for Marks based on a complaint filed by the FBI. Neilson said.

An unidentified agent claimed in an affidavit that Marks, using the name "Gary," called several news agencies and the manufacturer of the capsules, Smith, Kline Beckman Co., from March 19 through 21.

During the telephone calls, Marks allegedly warned of the poisoned capsules in a plot to force the manufacturer to withdraw its products from the market, according to Neilson.

He said Marks bought special options on the stock of the products' manufacturer that would pay him if the stocks dropped in value.

Small amounts of warfarin, a blood thinner used in rat poison, were discovered in capsules of the drugs, investigators said. The discovery prompted an $8 million recall by Philadelphia-based SmithKline, and a $900,000 reward was offered by the Proprietary Association, a group of drug manufacturers.

Meanwhile, in Austin, Texas, bottles of Anacin-3 capsules have been removed from drugstore shelves after Kenneth Wayne Faries, 24, a senior at the University of Texas at Austin, died of cyanide poisoning that authorities linked to a bottle of Anacin-3 bought at a Walgreen drug store.

Faries was the fourth person to die this year from cyanide in cases related to over-the-counter drugs. The February death of a New York woman remains under investigation as does the death in April of a Pullman, Wash., woman. That of a Nashville, Tenn., man in February was ruled a suicide.

'It's over' for 640 grads at MCC

By John F. Kirch

"It's over, it's over, it's over," one mother said as she embraced her son following graduation ceremonies at Manchester Community College Thursday night.

She was just one of many happy parents and friends watching at the Bicentennial Band Shell as graduates from every generation lined up to receive their associate's degrees from what MCC President

William E. Vincent called one of the most "innovative and dynamic institutions in the country."

About 640 students graduated during the college's 22nd commencement as temperatures rose into the upper 80s and a cool breeze swept across the campus.

The commencement, which lasted about two hours, featured nine speakers and a processional played by the Manchester Pipe Band. "You are your community,"

Vincent told the graduates. "To the Class of 1986, I congratulate you. Keep in touch with us, and let us know how you have met your challenges."

About 120,000 students have taken classes at MCC during the past 20 years, Vincent told the graduates. Of those, more than 10,000 have received associate's degrees before moving on to other challenges.

Thursday night, the speakers stressed the need for a positive attitude and a strong desire to succeed.

"This is a sign I have at my house," valedictorian Linda Daniels told her classmates as she displayed her message. "It says, 'I am somebody special.' So are all of you."

Daniels said she keeps the sign on her refrigerator door to keep her attitude positive and her desire to succeed high.

State report says EDB limit should be 10 times greater

By Paul A. Basken
United Press International

HARTFORD — The state's limit for the acceptable amount of EDB in drinking water is too conservative and should be at least 10 times greater, a state-funded study reported today.

The state's EDB limit, which is based on federal guidelines that are also used by many other states, is supported by the most conservative possible safety estimates, the Connecticut Academy of Science and Engineering reported.

The academy's report, produced by two Yale University professors, said they could find no data to support the estimates used to set the state's limit "except the general attractiveness of conservative assumptions."

EDB, or ethylene dibromide, is a suspected carcinogen that had been widely used as a pesticide by farmers across the country and has now been found in levels above state limits in more than 300 wells across Connecticut.

The study by CASE, a state-charted, non-profit public service research organization, was commissioned by the state Legislature in 1984, said Dr. David M. Wetstone, secretary of the academy.

An earlier CASE study that was also commissioned by the Legislature's Environment Committee in 1984 found it would take hundreds of years before the EDB would naturally filter out of wells.

The acceptable level of 0.1 parts per billion of EDB that was established by the state in 1984 was based on "extraordinarily conservative" extrapolations of data gathered from tests on animals, Wetstone said.

"Some people say when you're setting public policy and dealing with human lives, nothing is too conservative. That's fine, but there's also some people's livelihoods at stake," Wetstone said.

"In exchange for the level of conservatism established by the state, you've got a lot of property values being ruined," he said.

Rep. Teresalee Bertinuso, D-Melrose, who requested the study as chairman of the Environment Committee in 1984, agreed with the panel's concerns but said she could not support relaxing the standards.

Bertinuso said she recalls a mixed reaction at a public meeting in Somers when her constituents were first told that their water contained unacceptably high levels of EDB.

"A great many people were very upset and concerned about their children, but a good many of the people there were upset about the values of their property and thought we were overreacting," Bertinuso said.

However, Bertinuso, who now serves on a state Department of Health scientific advisory panel which is also studying limits on groundwater pollution, said she does not expect the CASE report will prompt state officials to relax their standards.

"I don't disagree scientifically with what they're saying, but for the public perception to move to a less strict standard could be confusing," she said.

The CASE study was conducted by Dr. Robert W. Berliner, professor of physiology and medicine, and Dr. Jan A.J. Stolwijk, professor and chairman of epidemiology and public health, both at the Yale School of Medicine.

Town presence insignificant

Only one private well out of 28 tested in Manchester more than a year ago showed any evidence of the pesticide EDB, town Sanitarian John Salcius said today.

That well, located on private property at Tolland Turnpike and Taylor Street, was below the state standard of 1 part per billion, Salcius said. The first time the well was tested the reading was .07 parts per billion and the second test showed .05 parts — both acceptable levels, he said.

The Health Department's sampling of the wells — all located near former tobacco fields in various parts of Manchester — was done over a period of several months from September 1984 to May 30, 1985, Salcius said. The state standard was set in 1984.

None of the other wells tested showed any evidence of EDB, Salcius said, including 15 town wells tested. He said the findings showed that no EDB was used on the tobacco fields in Manchester.

The EDB detected in the Taylor Street well may have come from a nearby gasoline station, the findings showed, Salcius said that EDB is used as an additive in leaded gasoline.

A recent state study on EDB, which has been found in water sources in other parts of the state, criticized the state standard limit as too conservative. But Salcius said it is hard to say if the standard is too conservative because there is no real safe standard for EDB.

Deputy seeks injunction to stop firing

By George Lavno
Herald Reporter

A Manchester man who was told by retiring Hartford County High Sheriff Patrick Hogan that he will not be reappointed as a deputy sheriff when his term expires Saturday plans to seek a court injunction in an effort to keep his job.

Al Rioux, a candidate for Hogan's job, said this morning that Deputy Sheriff Raymond Lanzano of Manchester, who was told by Hogan earlier this month that he would not be reappointed, will file for the injunction today in U.S. District Court in Hartford. The suit charges that Hogan decided not to reappoint Lanzano because he supports Rioux instead of Deputy Sheriff John Tarca of Plainfield — the candidate backed by Hogan to replace him when he retires in 1987.

The injunction request asks for an expeditious decision by the court because Lanzano's term is set to expire Saturday, Rioux said. The request, which Rioux said might be heard today, asks that the court reappoint Lanzano as deputy sheriff on the grounds he was illegally let go by Hogan.

The basis of the request is a 1976 U.S. Supreme Court decision in which the court ruled that the dismissal of a non-civil-service employee on the basis of political partisanship was illegal because it violated the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the U.S. Constitution, Rioux said.

Sheriffs, who are considered non-civil service employees, deliver court documents and provide courtroom security. The high sheriff has wide discretion in hiring and firing sheriffs, and the positions generally go to people of the same political affiliation.

Hogan could not be reached for comment. He has said Lanzano was not reappointed because of "personal reasons," but has refused to say what those were.

Rioux, Tarca and Robert Myette of South Windsor are the only three Democratic candidates who have so far begun campaigns to replace Hogan, a Democrat who is scheduled to retire in July 1987 after some 25 years as high sheriff. According to a spokeswoman for the Secretary of the State's office, there are no declared Republican candidates for the position.

There is no deadline by which a candidate must declare his candidacy before the election this November, the spokeswoman said. Democrats are scheduled to hold a convention in late July to nominate one of the three candidates for the post, though a primary can be waged if another candidate wins the backing of 20 percent of the delegates.

Rioux said he also plans to file complaints against Hogan with the state Elections Enforcement Commission and the state Ethics Commission in the near future.

Lanzano said Thursday he was confident that the effort to get an

Hays days in Ohio

Wayne Hays, the once-powerful Ohio congressman brought down by his affair with secretary Elizabeth Ray, has survived his latest political battle. He was re-elected as chairman of the Belmont, Ohio, County Democratic Central Committee despite the efforts of a strong anti-Hays coalition. Hays, who won the vote 64-31, had been accused of trying to make a deal so that he could appoint a new county treasurer. Hays resigned from the House 10 years ago after being accused of putting Ray on his payroll in return for sex. When last heard from, Ray was taking acting lessons in New York.

Custom-made news

Ted Koppel says everyone wants to manipulate the media and that the people at the White House are quite good at it. The ABC "Nightline" anchor was headlined in Nashville, Tenn., for a Thursday night discussion on influencing the media with NBC anchorman Tom Brokaw, ABC chief Roone Arledge, Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala., and Soviet commentator Vladimir Pozner. "People are constantly trying to manipulate the media, whether it's a member of a local Chamber of Commerce... or the lawyer of some indicted felon," Koppel said. "This White House is particularly good at it by making the president and information alternately accessible and inaccessible." Koppel also had some criticism for his own medium. "It's devastating that so many people do rely on television," he said, characterizing society as sometimes too lazy to read. "You can't get a complete picture just by watching television."

President Reagan's acting career had its ups and downs. In 1954, with his movie career fading, Reagan took a job in a Las Vegas nightclub. He did a stand-up monologue, introduced other acts, and concluded the show by wrestling with the bandleader. Although the Reagans felt out of place in Las Vegas, critics loved the act. One wrote, "Rolling Ronnie proves that he can blend in with veterans... dancing, singing, and clowning, complete with pratfalls."

Fireworks troubles seem to be resolved

By Alex Girelli Associate Editor

Problems in getting adequate insurance that threatened a fireworks display planned at Manchester's Independence Day celebration appear to have been solved and the necessary paperwork is being processed to clear all legal hurdles.

Barbara Moser, a member of the Independence Day Committee planning the townwide celebration, has been working on the insurance problem for a couple of months. She said Thursday that she and other committee members will be relieved when a signed contract and a copy of an insurance certificate are in their hands.

Repeated extermination hasn't cleansed house

By Susan Vaughn Herald Reporter

The Spencer Street house where dismembered human remains were discovered earlier this month has been exterminated for rodents twice and the process must be done again before the house is demolished, according to a town building official said today.

James Fitzpatrick, assistant chief building inspector, said it might be the end of June before the house is demolished, depending on results of the latest extermination.

The town Building Department ordered the house demolished and the Health Department ordered the extermination after remains believed to be those of Jessica Lamprecht, 24, the owner of the house.

The report in the form of a calendar, gives information about town administrative departments, budget, auditing of funds, and various rosters, directories and schedules.

The front cover of the report is a picture of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial and the back cover is made up of pictures illustrating the conversion of the Cheney Bros. Ribbon Mill to apartments. The report was prepared by town personnel and printed in the town's print shop under the direction of John Raymond, print shop supervisor.

The problem arose when Atlas, which has put on the display in Manchester for two years, had difficulty getting the $1 million in blanket insurance coverage required by the state for fireworks displays and other types of amusements.

Most states require only $500,000. Kane said. He said Connecticut's higher minimum has been a problem in the past, but is more of one now in the light of general problems in getting some kinds of liability insurance.

Atlas had $500,000 in coverage to begin with and state Insurance Commissioner Peter W. Gillies intervened to arrange for an added $500,000. Kane said. Pelkey, however, said Atlas found a second underwriter for the added $500,000.

The insurance gives Atlas blanket coverage for the 60 displays it plans this season in Connecticut. Pelkey said the firm's insurance costs this year increased overall by 120 percent and in Connecticut by 180 percent.

The contract being mailed to Atlas today for the Manchester display specifies that the Town of Manchester and Manchester Community College will be co-insured under the policy. The celebration at MCC will also feature food and entertainment.

The lesson in the delay

The latest word from majority Republicans at the Capitol about what's in store for Connecticut's public schools won't exactly rekindle their credit when legislative history is written.

It seems that more than a week after the General Assembly's special session opened, GOP senators are still awaiting financial information from towns and school districts around the state. That means the session will be prolonged beyond necessity, as will the uncertainty of educators thinking about the future and that of municipal officials who have been left with substantial budget questions concerning the fiscal year that begins in just over a month.

While the lawmakers' desire to assemble as much data as possible is laudable, they've long since had plenty of time to do their research. Indeed, it was clear well before the 1986 session opened that the issue of teacher salaries was perhaps the most important matter facing the Legislature.

Nonetheless, next to nothing of substance was accomplished between the time the legislators convened in February and their adjournment earlier this month.

On May 7, the last day of the regular session, the Senate rejected a last-ditch compromise that had been passed by the House of Representatives. Although critics were right to say that some aspects of the bill were of dubious merit, that shouldn't obscure the broader question: Why did the majority, which began the year with a fairly intelligent school proposal from Gov. William O'Neill, waste so much time and get so little done?

In fairness, part of the reason for failure lies in the complexity of the matter, as is clear from the explanation given for the latest delay in getting a bill passed. And at least a small part rests with the governor, who tossed his plan on the table, then sat back as the legislators floundered about in their fruitless search for a satisfactory package. But most of it rests with the majority lawmakers who chose to practice one-upmanship and at the same time ignore the fact that sometime soon, minimum salaries will have to be mandated if quality teachers are to be drawn into the schools.

After the regular session closed, Senate Majority Leader Reginald J. Smith complained that the upper chamber had "been ignored" by its counterparts in the House. His comments were echoed by Sen. Carl Zinsser, R-Manchester, who said: "I think we educated the House a little bit in making them understand that nothing gets approved without the Senate."

That may be true, but the instruction was more costly than it should have been.

At this late date, the best that can be hoped for is an improvement over the House bill, which, as Robertson said, was designed to protect "political backslides." But the Republicans can learn their own lesson from the weaknesses that have shown so clearly this year.

Compromise — especially on matters vital to the state, its schools and its children — should be achieved in a timely fashion, after the homework has been done. If that is to happen, leaders of the majority, instead of waiting for failure and then wasting time on snide remarks, must dedicate themselves to debate and productive negotiations during the time allotted for legislative deliberations.

Money sure hasn't made Perot intelligent

H. Ross Perot rubs the blackened bronze surface of his Frederick Remington cowboy statues and that magic contact gives the Texas billionaire the moxie to order his employees into Rambo uniforms, send them to Persia and rescue two of his executives held in jail by Moslem religious fanatics who have overthrown the duly constituted, forward-looking government of the Shah of Iran. Such is the stuff of a two-part pipe dream made available to the viewing public by NBC a few days ago.

The glorification of Mr. Perot, played in the approved heroic manner by Richard Crenna, is the sort of millionaire worship which harkens back to the 1920s. That too was a decade when the Mr. Moneybags of the day were celebrated as much for their wisdom as for their magnificence. Men like Andrew Mellon, J. P. Morgan, Samuel Insull or Henry Ford were consulted on every subject and every occasion.

In that same tradition of groveling and deference to the very, very rich, reporters called up H. Ross Perot after the bombing of Libya to ask the man who made this pile selling computer services to state governments what he thought of the episode. He thought it was wonderful but he was bothered by the French, who refused to allow American bombers to fly through their air space to execute this escapade.

"MY STRONGEST FEELINGS are about the French. We saved their nation twice in this century. I would like to see every French leader," said our patriotic plutocrat, "to go to the cemeteries at Normandy, where the American fighting men who fought for France are buried, and examine their conscience... If we ever start to consider spilling a drop of American blood for the French, I'll use every resource to see that we

Disclosure forms don't let public in on elective ethics

By Donald M. Rothberg

WASHINGTON — The financial disclosure forms which all senators are required to file often don't disclose much — and the report by Sen. John D. Rockefeller IV is the most obvious example.

The figures on the West Virginia Democrat's form fall somewhere between $100 million and $150 million short of estimates of how much he is worth.

The other senator from West Virginia happens to be the leader of the Democratic minority, Robert C. Byrd. His financial statement tells what little there is to know about his finances. He has four bank accounts and a U.S. Treasury bill.

A pretty fair county fiddler, Byrd earned $124 last year in royalties from a record album.

Both statements are covered by the same rules.

Byrd just doesn't have much to list, while Rockefeller's statement goes on for page after page of trusts and limited partnerships, stocks and capital gains.

VIEWED FROM the bottom up, it is clear that because Byrd is not wealthy, he is forced to tell what his colleague being rich as Rockefeller gives just a hint of his holdings.

Viewed from the top down, the richest senators might ask, how much is enough? Should the great-grandson of the founder of Standard Oil be required to list the value of each of his trust funds? Or even more list what is in them?

There are only three of the trust funds. Each is in the top category for the disclosure forms, meaning each is worth $250,000, or more. No doubt those trust funds are worth millions more than that base amount.

Because the senator is a member of a family with fabbed wealth, the public would love a full accounting. On the other hand does the public have a right to rifle through his financial records simply because he is a Rockefeller?

Who's the wealthiest member of the Senate? Sounds like a simple, straightforward question the disclosure forms ought to answer. But they don't.

Based on the disclosure forms, the richest senator is Claiborne Pell, D-R.I. His listed assets total $17 million, give or take several million.

NEXT IN LINE, with assets listed as $9.9 million or more, was Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., heir to the Ralston Purina fortune.

At $8.8 million or more was Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., of the ketchup and pickles family. Rockefeller's form lists assets

Mexico waits for von Raab to back charge

WASHINGTON — Relations between the United States and Mexico have been badly strained by the recent accusations — both unwise and unprovable — made against Mexican officialdom by U.S. Customs Commissioner William von Raab.

At a Senate hearing, von Raab blurted out the charge that "massive" official corruption existed "way up and down the ladder" in Mexico, and suggested that this was the major reason the United States has been unable to solve its drug-traffic problems. Von Raab presented no proof of his charges.

We have criticized the Mexican government many times in the past, but von Raab's intemperate remarks were out of line and in some cases just plain wrong. We say this on the basis of information Dale Van Atta gathered on two recent trips to Mexico City, where he has become a critic of the government as well as officials. He also received a special briefing from Drug Enforcement Administration sources.

The conflict has been building ever since DEA investigator Enrique Camarena was murdered in Mexico in February 1985, while he was working with Mexican drug agents. The investigation of the murder seemed slow, but Mexican police began to round up suspects.

U.S. FRUSTRATION over the progress of the investigation led to a mid-April meeting in Cancun, Mexico. It was attended by Attorney General Edwin Meese, his Mexican counterpart and several other high officials from both countries. Von Raab didn't show up, but sent a subordinate. The meeting was amicable, and Meese expressed appreciation for Mexico's efforts to curb the drug traffic.

But Mexican officials were shocked to receive a message from von Raab saying, as two Mexican cabinet officials described it, that as far as von Raab was concerned, all Mexican officials were corrupt, and were guilty until proven innocent. This not only smacks of racism, but it is demonstrably inaccurate.

Our own investigation over the last two years has made it clear that there are many Mexican officials who are not only honest, but who are diligently trying to curtail the drug traffic at considerable personal risk. As Mexican and U.S. sources point out, more than 100 Mexican drug enforcement officials have been killed since 1978. Thirty-four were killed in 1984 and 54 last year trying to keep drugs from entering the United States.

Senior Mexican officials repeatedly point out that if there were no lucrative U.S. markets for illegal drugs, and no corrupt officials on this side of the border, there would be few drug problems in Mexico. Finance Minister Jesus Silva Herzog said Mexico would not be a "diving board" for drugs if there were no "swimming pool" — the United States.

SILVA HERZOG was perturbed by von Raab's rhetorical shotgun blast at the Senate hearing. He recalled that his customs chief had asked von Raab for specifics on charges the U.S. official had made in an earlier telex, but that von Raab never responded.

Mexicans also resent the Washington myth that Mexico isn't bearing its share of the drug traffic burden. They note that as a percentage of the national budget, the Mexican justice department alone spends three times more on drug enforcement each year than the entire budget of the DEA. As for U.S. complaints that Mexico has been slow to investigate the Camarena murder, the Mexicans recall that it took the U.S. government two years to extradite the former Mexico City police chief on corruption charges. In 15 months, Mexican authorities have jailed most of the Camarena suspects.

In short, von Raab owes the Mexicans an apology.

Watch on waste

Trying to save money can be a tricky business when you're not used to it. State Department officials, to their credit, decided that it was costing too much to maintain the palatial Victorian residence of the U.S. consul-general in Sydney, Australia — roughly $50,000 a year. The Sydney overlooking Sydney Harbor is worth about $4 million; surely more modest digs could be found. So an international real estate firm was hired, and it agreed that the $4 million property was a bit extravagant. As an "appropriate" substitute, they recommended a residence costing — are you ready? — $1 million. Could we try again, maybe?

Radicals linked to crime wave

BOSTON (UPI) — Eight members of a radical terrorist group tried to overthrow the government through a nearly decade-long string of bombings, bank robberies and murders in the East, federal officials charge.

Members of the Sam Melville-Jonathan Jackson Unit and the United Freedom Front were indicted late Wednesday on charges that include the 1981 murder of New Jersey state trooper Philip Lamocosa, officials announced Thursday.

The attempted killing of two Massachusetts state troopers and a Portland, Maine police officer were also said to be the work of members of the group who were charged with the 1979 slaying of a Massachusetts state trooper.

Other charges stem from 19 bombings and attempted bombings of military and political targets, including a 1976 explosion at the Suffolk County courthouse in Boston that injured 22 people — and 12 targets in the New York metropolitan area.

The group was also tied to 10 robberies that netted nearly $900,000 from banks in Portland and Augusta, Maine, New Britain, Conn., South Burlington, Vt., Orono, Me., and Norfolk, Va.

Charged were Raymond Luc Lavasseur, 39, and Patricia Helen Gros, 31, both formerly of Calais, Maine; Thomas William Manning, 39, 2nd Carlory Ann Manning, 31, both formerly of Sanford, Maine.

Also charged were: Jean Karl Laaman, 38, and Barbara Curzi, 28, of East Boston; Richard Charles Williams, 38, of Boston; and Christopher Everett King, 36, of Cambridge.

The grand jury action culminates a four-year investigation by a task force representing 15 local state and federal law enforcement agencies. FBI Special Agent in Charge James W. Greenleaf said the task force will continue to deal with terrorism in the Northeast.

The indictment alleges Lavasseur, Thomas and Carl Manning and Gros formed a criminal group in 1974 with the goal of overthrowing the U.S. government. The conspiracy included murder, robbery, and the theft of weapons, including dynamite used to make bombs.

Prosecutors charge Laaman and King joined the group in 1980, followed by Williams in 1981 and Curzi in 1982.

The indictment charges between 1976 and 1979 — under the banner of Sam Melville-Jonathan Jackson Unit — the group bombed or tried to bomb buildings in Boston, Lowell, Revere, Needham, Marlboro, Wakefield and Waltham, Mass., and Eastchester, N.Y.

From December 1982 through September 1984, under the United Freedom Front banner, the group attacked 11 buildings in the New York City area including a South Africa Airways office, military reserve and training centers and corporations with sizeable military contracts.

After each bombing, prosecutors said, the group issued a "communique" claiming credit for the attack and advocating the violent overthrow of the United States.

The indictments charge the bombings were financed through the robberies conducted between October 1975 and June 1984. A total of $87,479 was taken in the holdups across five states.

Prosecutors also charge Lavasseur and Manning engaged in a shootout and attempted to murder a police officer during a holdup in Portland, Maine.

As part of the racketeering charges, authorities allege Williams and Manning murdered New Jersey trooper Lamocosa on a deserted stretch of Interstate 40 in a 1981 shootout.

The pair are being held under tight security in the maximum-security Trenton, N.J. state prison.

Couples shows some life by tying course record

By Will Dunham
United Press International

BETHESDA, Md. — Fred Couples, mired in a horrendous slump, showed his first signs of breaking loose in 1986 on the course that provided his first PGA Tour victory three years ago. Couples missed the cut in last week's Memorial, and has failed to finish a tournament in the top 10 in 10 months. Thursday, he tied the course record with an 8-under par 64 to set a three-stroke lead after the first round in the $500,000 Kemper Open.

Garbacz tops LPGA event

MASON, Ohio (UPI) — Lori Garbacz, leader of the $300,000 LPGA Championship after one round, will have to break with her personal history to win the tournament. Garbacz has enjoyed several leads and a lot of high finishes in her eight years on the LPGA tour, but she has never been able to hang on to win a tournament. She sure has another great start going though. With seven birdies and no bogeys, Garbacz fired a 7-under par 65 Thursday to seize a one-stroke lead. "I feel marvelous," said Garbacz, 27, a native of South Bend, Ind., now living in Boca Raton, Fla. "I played solid golf. No bogeys. With stars like Pat Bradley and Patty Sheehan included in field of 144, it was a surprise to find someone who had never won an event leading the pack. Even Garbacz was startled. "I don't think anyone is more surprised with a 65 than I am," she said. "But it's not going to get any easier on this course."

Asako Okamoto of Tokyo, a six-time tour winner, was second with a 6-under par 66. Bradley, the only woman golfer to top $2 million in career earnings, and playing the best golf on the LPGA tour this year, was third with a 5-under par 67. Tied for fourth at 4-under par 68 were Connie Chikley and Ok-Hee Ku of South Korea. Sharing sixth place with 3-under par 68 were Debbie Skinner, Patty Hayes, Hollis Stacy and Robin Walton. Well-known players back in the pack included Jan Stephenson at 70, JoAnne Carner at 71, Sheehan at 72 and Beth Daniel and Amy Alcott at 73. The winner of last week's LPGA tournament, Laurie Rinker, shot an 8-over par 80 and was in 18th place. Rain played a part in Thursday's scores. Play was interrupted by showers for 75 minutes in the middle of the day. The best scores were shot by golfers who finished before the rain made the fairways soggy and slow. The 72-hole tournament at the Jack Nicklaus Sports Center north of Cincinnati stands up Sunday with the winner receiving $45,000. Like Garbacz, Okamoto and Bradley also played bogey-free rounds Thursday. "I had a very solid consistent round today, five birdies, no bogeys," said Bradley. "Whenever I shoot under par I'm always pleased. And, I'm extremely pleased shooting an opening round of 67 at the championships." Bradley has been playing fantastic golf in recent weeks. In her last six tournaments, she has finished third, first, second, first, 11th and second. Chikley, whose best finish this year has been 46th, attributed her four-under par 68 to some recent church-going. "I've been playing like a 30-30 this year and when I didn't make the cut in last week's tournament, I went to church," she said. "I needed some spirit. The way I played today was a miracle."

Soto put on disabled list

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The Cincinnati Reds placed right-hander Mario Soto on the 15-day disabled list Thursday, retroactive to May 24. Soto, 35, with a 4.14 earned run average, threw for 10 minutes Thursday night and experienced the same stiffness in his right shoulder that caused him to miss his last start Tuesday in Chicago. The Reds replaced Soto on the 24-man roster by purchasing the contract of left-hander Chris Welsh from their Class AAA Denver farm club in the American Association. The 31-year-old Welsh, a native Cincinnati who was the last player cut from the major league roster after an outstanding spring, was 5-2 at Denver with a 4.02 ERA and three complete games.

confidence," said Couples, who shot a 91-83. "I've had none for a while in all aspects of the game. But today it felt good to go out and play and get back on a course where I felt pretty comfortable. I just played very well." Playing under ideal conditions on a course that has the reputation of being one of the toughest on the PGA Tour, an unusually high number of low scores were posted. Chasing Couples, the 1983 Kemper champion, were Larry Mize, Charles Boling and Tom Sieckman, who each carded five-under 67a. Four strokes back at 68 were Leonard Thompson, David Ogren, Dennis Trisler and

Mike Reid. "Congressional will never play tamer than it did today," Boling said. A total of 58 players recorded par or better. Couples birdied Nos. 1, 4, 5, 6, 8, 9, 10, 15 and 18, while bogeying No. 2. He had a chance for an even better round, but his putt for a birdie on the seventh hole lipped out and he missed a short putt for a birdie on 11. "This was probably one of my best rounds I've played since I've been on the Tour, putting-wise," said Couples, who joined the Tour in 1980. Couples was six-under after 10 holes and fired in a course-record nine birdies (next to one bogey), breaking defending champion Bill Glasson's mark of eight birdies set in the fourth round last year. George Burns (1983 Kemper) and Tommy Jacobs (1964 U.S. Open) previously recorded rounds of 64 at Congressional, the second-longest course on the PGA Tour. "I don't know who played for me today," joked Couples, whose best finish this year was a 14th place tie in February's Los Angeles Open. Couples said he hasn't made any drastic mechanical changes recently, although he said he re-shafted his clubs Wednesday. "I made them a little shorter. I felt like I was gripping the club too far from the end and standing away from the ball so I cut them down ever so slightly," he said. "It didn't change my stance any, but it felt a little bit better." The last time Couples cracked the top 10 was a sixth place tie in the PGA Championship in August, 1985. Couples missed the cut last week at the Memorial at the Muirfield Village Golf Club in Dublin, Ohio, with a two-round score of 152. The LaQuinta, Calif., native has failed to make the cut in seven of the 15 tournaments he has entered in 1986. Mize lost last year's Kemper by one-stroke when Bill Glasson sank a 45-foot putt on the final hole. Mize bogeyed the first hole and rebounded with seven birdies and just one more bogey to put the heat on Couples. "I let it slip away last year and I want to see if I can get it back this year," said Mize, who wasted a five-stroke lead midway through the final round last year. Boling, a top 10 finisher just twice since joining the tour in 1984, said: "I've been playing long enough to know the 18th hole is a long way from the 72nd hole." Play continues through Sunday with the winner taking home $90,000.

Noted Manchester residents reveal their summer plans

It's May 30. Traditional Memorial Day. The time when folks start thinking about what they'll be doing for those "lazy, hazy, crazy days of summer."

What will you be doing for the next few months? Putting a new roof on the garage? Or traveling to some wonderful and exotic location?

That's what we asked some of Manchester's citizens. Here were the replies we got:

Frank Amara, principal, Keeney Street School: The Amaras, who have four children, plan to take at least eight mid-week day trips to places like Sturbridge, Mass., and Mystic, Ct. "We go on Wednesdays and Thursdays, and things are less crowded," he said. They'd like to get down to Washington, D.C., for a few days, as well. Other than that, the family will remain at home, in Farmington.

Ted Cummings, chairman, Manchester Democratic Party: He didn't see much chance for relaxation this summer. "Mostly I'll be working," Cummings said. "If I'm lucky, I'll get a little play in."

Anne Flint, president, Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce: She is planning a trip to Florida with her children, as soon as school is over. She also hopes to start building an addition on her house.

Marjorie Frank, librarian, Bowers and Verplanck schools: Frank is best known as the head of the children's department at Mary Cheney Library, a position which she left on May 9. In her new position at Bowers and Verplanck schools, she will have her summers free. She plans to take a graduate course in Eastern Connecticut State University.

Wally Irish, Manchester Republican: For five years the family has had a cottage on a small lake in West Brookfield, Mass. "I could just sit there and watch the grass grow," Irish said. It will be the first trip for his three-month-old daughter, Anna Marie. The family swims, fishes, does a little boating and rents films for the video cassette recorder.

Shepard Johnson, minister, South United Methodist Church: The Johnsons will be traveling to the World Methodist Conference in Kenya, Africa.

Walter Joyner, president, Eighth District: The family will spend a few weeks in a summer home in Bradford, N.H.

Steve Ling, director, Lutz Children's Museum: With his new wife, Thea, Ling is going to Cape Cod for two weeks in August. He's also looking forward to nights at the Bicentennial Band Shell, the Wednesday curillon concerts at Trinity College, and getting out on his sailboat. "It lives in my garage, and doesn't get out onto Bolton Lake often enough."

Donna Mercier, recently resigned as Republican town director: The Merciers are looking forward to a reunion picnic in Manchester, for which family members are coming in from Canada and California. Mercier will visit her brother in Maryland, and the family will spend some time at Riverside Park on miniature golf courses.

Rabbi Richard Plavin, Temple Beth Shalom: Plavin and his family will spend a week on the Delaware shore. With his wife, he will travel to a conference on alternatives in Jewish education in Maryland. They may also start an addition on their home.

Dr. Gail Rowe, principal, Waddell School: Rowe plans to be milking cows and serving strawberry suppers in the little town of South Readsboro, Vt., where she has had a home for 20 years. The house, she said, is in constant need of repair. When she's not working on it, or helping neighboring farmers with their chores, she hopes to reupholster a few pieces of furniture.

Cornelius Shea, prosecutor, Superior Court: Shea won't take his vacation until the winter, because he prefers warm weather. "I like to be up here in the summer, and down in Florida in the winter," he said. "So you'll see me in court all summer."

Elaine Sweet, director, American Red Cross, Connecticut Valley East branch: "I'll probably put off any real vacation until the fall," she said. The summer is the busiest time for the Red Cross water-safety courses. She will take a few weekend trips to Mystic and to Coventry Lake. "I'll just be looking for a little relaxing time to be away from the office."

Mimes perform

There will be mimes and clowns, magicians and puppets at the Very Special Arts Festival on Saturday in front of Hartford's Wadsworth Athenaeum. The festival celebrates artists who have a disability. At noon, the Cridders, a nationally known professional theater troupe, will entertain. There will also be face painting, crafts for the children, square dancing and lots of balloons. The activities, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., are free.

Going up!

The city of Hartford is continuing to celebrate the 350th anniversary of its founding. This weekend, you can see the city's 17th century meetinghouse going up on the lawn of the Old State House. Historic restoration carpenters, dressed in period costumes and using only tools of the 1600s, have been working at the site. Demonstrations of the "technology" of 1636 are offered daily.

Parading around

Another part of the birthday party which

Hartford is throwing for itself is the Settlers Parade, on Saturday at 11 a.m. There will be marching bands, floats, clowns and costumed scenes depicting the settlers of early Hartford. The parade will go up Main Street. For more information, call 522-4171.

Bluegrass is free

The city of Hartford opens its season of free concerts in Elizabeth Park tonight at 6:30. This evening's concert features the bluegrass band, Traver Hollow. An evening of square dancing and English country dancing follows, with caller Tom Gregory and the ContraBand. For more information, call 521-8714.

The cutest tomato

The cutest, most flavorful tomato you can grow this season is the Celebrity tomato. At least, that's the opinion of Comstock, Perre & Co., a seed and garden firm in Wethersfield. The company is giving away 10 tomato plants to each family which visits headquarters on 263 Main St. in the heart of historic Wethersfield. The Celebrity tomato, the 1984 all-America winner for new varieties, is a disease-resistant plant with fruit of exceptional flavor. To introduce the item,

"Mr. Tomato" will be on hand from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday.

Free music

A musical afternoon will be offered free at the First Congregational Church on Route 6 in Andover. The recital features Richard Taylor, baritone, and Linda Spector on the organ and piano. Popular and Broadway show music will be presented, along with classical pieces of Mendelssohn and Vaughn Williams. The concert is at 4 p.m. Sunday.

Lively library

Things will be lively on Sunday over at Center Park, next to Mary Cheney Library. You can admire the paintings, baskets, flower arrangements and other artwork at the Manchester Art and Craft Show, sponsored by the Manchester Art Association. From 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., more than 100 artists and craftsmen will display their works, many of which will be available for sale. At the same time, Manchester Friends of the Library will hold an outdoor book sale. Books recently taken from circulation will be sold. At 3 p.m., Refreshments will be sold throughout the day.

Reagan honors intelligence officers

WASHINGTON — President Reagan gave a posthumous medal today to a naval intelligence officer who was denied honors after the Navy overruled Japanese codes that led to the critical U.S. victory at Midway Island in World War II. Reagan awarded the Distinguished Service Medal to the children of the late Capt. Joseph Rochefort in a Roosevelt Room ceremony from which reporters were barred, despite its characterization by spokesman Edward Djerjejian as "a unique event."

Lamm calls for immigration control

WASHINGTON — Colorado Gov. Richard Lamm, saying Americans have been "blinded by the Statue of Liberty," has called for better controls on immigration. "We should stop illegal immigration, but we also must maintain responsible limits on legal immigration," Lamm said Thursday at congressional hearings held by Rep. James Scheuer, D-N.Y.

Smuggling charges called 'frivolous'

WASHINGTON — A Nicaraguan rebel leader and five American supporters are vigorously denying charges that they helped sell huge caches of cocaine in Miami to buy weapons for the rebel Contras. They also scoffed at allegations, made by two journalists in a $23.8 million damage suit, that they conspired with former CIA officials to assassinate Lewis Tambs, the U.S. ambassador to Costa Rica and former ambassador to Colombia, and bomb U.S. embassies in Costa Rica and Honduras.

'T-r-r-e-d' speller wins national bee

WASHINGTON — A "T-r-r-e-d" Jon Pennington, who won the 59th National Spelling Bee by correctly spelling "odontalgia," has a busy schedule today that isn't likely to allow much time for r-e-s-t. Pennington's plans today included a meeting with President Reagan and appearing on an early morning television program. Pennington, 14, of Shireston, Pa., beat out 17 regional champions Thursday by rattling off the spelling of "odontalgia," meaning dental pain.

Chernobyl death toll raised to 23

MOSCOW — An American surgeon treating victims of the Chernobyl nuclear disaster says he will visit the site of the accident, which has claimed at least 23 lives and left 59 others in "acute life-threatening danger." Dr. Robert Gale, a bone marrow specialist leading an international team of physicians, said Thursday the Soviets have given him permission to go to Chernobyl for an "on-site inspection" that will allow him to assess the accident's long-term health effects on nearby residents.

Zaccaro nicknamed 'the pharmacist'

RUTLAND, Vt. — A policeman testified Geraldine Ferraro's son, John Zaccaro, earned the nickname "the pharmacist" for his alleged cocaine dealing on campus, and a college security guard said he heard, "John was selling to high school kids." Those statements, and testimony from another police officer who said he bought a quarter-gram of cocaine from Zaccaro in an undercover sting operation, came during a pretrial hearing Thursday in Vermont District Court.

Packwood: 31 fight change in bill

WASHINGTON — Senate Finance Committee Chairman Bob Packwood says almost one-third of the chamber has vowed to oppose any changes to the panel's tax reform bill — including restoring IRA tax breaks — when it reaches the floor next week. While he promoted the "no amendment" promises from 31 senators as a show of strength for his bill, Packwood refused to say Thursday how many of the chamber's 100 members had declined to line up with him, or were still undecided.

Cyanide death appears isolated

AUSTIN, Texas — Tests of Anacin-3 capsules from local stores failed to turn up evidence of poison or tampering, and officials said it appeared the cyanide death of a former chemistry student was an isolated incident. The Food and Drug Administration tested 2,697 Maximum-Strength Anacin-3 capsules from the 10 Walgreen stores in the Austin area Thursday after it was determined Kenneth Wayne Faries, 24, died on May 20 of cyanide poisoning and a capsule of Anacin-3 containing cyanide was found in his apartment.

Soviet warships guard Libyan coast

By United Press International

Soviet warships guarded the Libyan coast and Tripoli restricted foreign travel by its citizens to prepare for "the confrontation against America," Egypt's Middle East News Agency reported. Coinciding with the report of four newly arrived Soviet ships off Libya, the United States Thursday moved to force American oil companies out of the North African nation by June 30. In other developments, Italy expelled 12 employees of Libyan companies and their families, and the head of Libya's Madrit mission, who was accused of funding terrorism, returned to Tripoli. The Middle East News Agency of

Reagan and Khadafy know their insults

By PHILADELPHIA (UPI)

President Reagan and Muammar Khadafy appeared to have been coached in their recent round of name-calling because they chose words that are particularly offensive in the other's culture, an anthropologist says. Reagan used some of the most striking language known to the Arab world when he called the Libyan leader a "mad dog" who heads a "rogue regime," said Paul Mason, an expert on Middle Eastern culture, said Thursday.

In-state booze buying costly to the military

By Norman Block

The law was passed through the efforts of Rep. Thomas D. DeLay, R-Texas, and Sen. Mark Andrews, R-ND. During House debate, DeLay described the proposal as a "minor fair market adjustment" that was needed because "there is no public policy reason for alcoholic beverages to find their way into the civilian marketplace at prices cheaper than local merchants can provide them."

Lobbyists for alcohol wholesalers and distributors, who played a key role in securing passage of the law, counter that the Pentagon procurement intervention was necessary because the Defense Department was embarking on a plan that would have "wiped out the wholesale system in this country."

Although the law will expire Sept. 30, it was resubmitted to the Senate Armed Services Committee this month to repeal it immediately. And a ranking member of the House Armed Services Committee, Rep. Dan Daniel, D-Va., vowed to pursue a similar step.

NASA eyes three flights during 1987

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla.

NASA is studying a "best case" post-Challenger launch schedule that features three shuttle flights in 1987, two of them classified military missions, a top NASA manager says. But Robert Sieck, shuttle operations manager at the Kennedy Space Center, said Thursday the "manifest" depends in large part on when — and if — NASA decides to launch a hydrogen-fueled Centaur rocket aboard a shuttle to boost a science probe called Galileo to Jupiter.

In any case, Sieck said it will be "sometime this summer before we know what all the work is ahead of us leading up to the (first) launch" and he stressed no final schedule decisions had been made. The $1 billion Centaur program faces possible cancellation because of safety concerns, although Sieck is confident those problems can be resolved given enough time and money. NASA had hoped to launch Galileo in December 1987 but Sieck said current planning is aimed at a July 1988 launch.

Given that proposal, tentative plans call for resuming shuttle flights in July 1987. The first cargo would be a $100 million shuttle tracking satellite like the one lost Jan. 28 when Challenger was destroyed. In a related development, NASA announced Thursday a replacement satellite will be built by TRW and delivered to the space agency by 1991. Details of the contract remain to be negotiated. The first post-Challenger launch in July 1987 would be followed in September or October by the launch of a military satellite originally scheduled for flight from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif.

to the government of Col. Moammar Khadafy by requiring the hasty abandonment of U.S. assets.

Also Thursday, the head of Libya's mission in Madrid left Spain but a spokesman said his NATO allies on its decision to longer be bound by the SALT 2 nuclear arms limitation treaty with Moscow. The agreement, the centerpiece of U.S.-Soviet arms control for more than five years and of great symbolic importance in Europe, has dominated the semi-annual meeting of NATO foreign ministers.

The newspaper Diario 16 said Tripoli agreed in secret talks to recall Naka before a state prosecutor's report was made public on the envoy's alleged role in terrorism.

NATO allies oppose Reagan decision on SALT 2

By Matthew C. Quinn

The officials conclude their two-day meeting today. The deliberations among the 16 NATO ministers are supposed to be confidential, but officials said Secretary of State George Shultz and his counterparts exchanged sharp words over SALT 2 at Thursday's session. Shultz and NATO Secretary-General Peter Carrington scheduled news conferences today where they were expected to discuss the issue further.

Casey acknowledges backlog, seeks restraint from media

By Michael J. Sniffen

WASHINGTON — CIA Director William Casey acknowledges the backlog in conducting routine polygraph tests and background checks of their employees. "I think they're behind schedule, yeah. But it varies how far," Casey said.

Casey blamed a recent spate of intelligence leaks on "a breakdown in discipline in the government, primarily." But he said to solve the problem officials need news organizations to exercise restraint in publishing secrets leaked to them, while the government tries to get its own house in order.

Casey spoke with The Associated Press in a unique joint interview at CIA headquarters on Thursday. Appearing with him were Lt. Gen. William Odom, director of the National Security Agency, and CIA Deputy Director Robert M. Gates. During the interview, the officials played down their recent threats of criminal prosecution against news organizations which print secrets about the gathering of communications intelligence and even backed off slightly from a warning they had issued only the night before to reporters covering the espionage trial of former NSA communications expert Ronald Pelton.

Casey said, "We recognize that the first line of defense is to increase discipline within government itself, to control the flow of sensitive information within the government."

decision, announced Tuesday, to break out of SALT 2 limits this fall, while dismantling two aging submarines to keep in compliance for now. Shultz left the door partly open to continued U.S. compliance, if the Soviets halt alleged widespread violations of the agreement. But he also labeled the pact a relic of the past, according to a participant at the meeting.

Essentially Shultz seemed to pronounce the treaty dead, calling it "increasingly obsolete" and saying the United States is seeking a more effective substitute in stalled arms control negotiations with the Soviets in Geneva, the participant said. Shultz stressed the administration is not throwing away the concept of mutual restraint, if the participant said, but is "seeking to develop a truly effective form."

After the meeting, Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney said a final U.S. decision to scrap

SALT 2 "would not be endorsed by NATO, certainly not by the government of Canada." A British spokesman would only reiterate a statement from earlier in the week: "We would much regret it if the provisional decision by the president to exceed limits had to be implemented."

Gerber sales and earnings drop

SOUTH WINDSOR - Gerber Scientific Inc. is reporting a 24 percent drop in fourth-quarter sales and earnings from the same period a year ago.

The company on Thursday reported net earnings for the fourth quarter ended April 30 of $5 million or 28 cents per share, down from $6.5 million or 38 cents per share for the same period a year ago.

Fourth-quarter sales were $48.9 million, down from $64.4 million a year ago.

For the year ended April 30, the company reported net earnings of $18.2 million, or $1.05 per share, compared to net earnings of $25 million or $1.45 per share the previous year, a 27 percent decline. Sales for the year were $191.6 million, a 14 percent decline from sales of $224.2 million the previous year.

Stock market shows small loss

NEW YORK - The stock market showed a small loss today after a hour of selling at the opening.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down more than 10 points in the early going, was off 1.32 at 1,881.03 by 10:30 a.m. on Wall Street.

Losers outnumbered gainers by more than 2 to 1 in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The market's strength late Thursday enabled the Dow Jones industrial average to edge upward to a new closing high despite a very weak bond market.

Among actively traded blue chips, International Business Machines slipped 1/4 to 152 3/4; General Electric lost 1/2 to 80 1/2; and American Express was down 1/2 at 63 1/2.

U.S. Steel rose 1/4 to 21 1/2 in active trading. Some analysts lately have begun to discuss the company as a possible store of undervalued assets.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dropped 1.15 to 142.22. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .21 at 231.03.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average gained 4.07 to 1,882.35.

Banks announce merger plans

BRIDGEPORT - Officials with American Bancorp Inc. and Lafayette Bancorp Inc. have announced plans to merge the companies for a new multi-bank holding company.

A letter of intent from Donald P. Calcagnini, president of American Bancorp, and Thomas L. Gray, president of Lafayette Bancorp, calls for each bank to maintain its own identity within its own market area by retaining its name, existing management structure and board of directors.

American Bancorp is the parent company of the nine-office American National Bank based in Hamden. Lafayette Bancorp is the head organization for 10 Lafayette Bank and Trust Co. offices headquartered in Bridgeport.

The new holding company would have total assets in excess of $43 million with 19 banking outlets, according to a joint statement issued Thursday by the companies.

New home sales down in April

WASHINGTON - New single-family homes were sold at an annual rate of 862,000 in April, down from a revised record high of 893,000 the previous month, the Commerce Department said today.

Actual home sales for the month were an estimated 81,000, down from 97,000 in March. If extended for 12 months and adjusted for seasonal differences, the rate of sale slipped back 3.5 percent to 862,000.

The March sales rate, initially estimated to be 903,000, was the swiftest pace of new home sales since the Commerce Department's Census Bureau began keeping the statistics in 1963, analysts said.

U.S. dollar surges in Europe

LONDON - The U.S. dollar surged higher today at the opening of European foreign exchanges. The price of gold was mixed.

The dollar opened in Frankfurt at 2.3065 German marks against the previous close of 2.2739 on Wednesday, in Zurich at 1.9025 Swiss francs against Thursday's 1.8996 and in London at $1.4845 to the pound against $1.4927.

The U.S. unit began trading in Paris at 7.3545 francs against 7.3090, in Brussels at 47.16 Belgian francs against 47.10 and in Milan at 1,582.3 lire against 1,566.30.

In Tokyo the dollar closed at 172.05 yen against 169.70.

Invest in a 'true' no-load fund

QUESTION: You have been telling readers not to invest in mutual funds with 12b-1 plans for a number of years. I guess I didn't pay much attention to your warnings. Now, I realize I should have. Recently, two magazines said to steer clear of such funds. My financial advisor has put my investment into a mutual fund with a 12b-1 plan. What's in it for him? Should I redeem my shares of that fund and start over?

ANSWER: It's impossible to say exactly "what's in it" for your advisor, because the details of 12b-1 plans vary widely among different mutual funds which have different mutual funds which have different mutual arrangements.

The odds are long, however, that the 12b-1 plan of the fund the advisor put you into will provide him with fat commissions.

The really outrageous thing about 12b-1 plans is that the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission allows some mutual funds with such plans to promote themselves as "no-load" funds - because there is no commission fund. There are many such funds - with no commission at the time of purchase, no 12b-1 plan and no redemption fee.

Investors' Guide

QUESTION: It is often stated that the success of a mutual fund is primarily dependent upon the skill of the fund's manager. How is it possible for an investor to stay currently informed on any changes in the management of a fund whose shares he owns?

ANSWER: It's virtually impossible for the average shareholder to stay as current on every management change. Mutual fund presidents, vice presidents, portfolio managers and other "stock pickers" change job with reasonable frequency.

Unless a fund executive making a switch is very well known, it's seldom noted in the press. A fund's shareholder report might not even mention such a change.

However, when a mutual fund changes its investment advisory contract, shareholders must approve the new contract by majority vote.

QUESTION: Because of fears about terrorism, fewer Americans will go to Europe this summer. Will this reduction in tourist dollars in European countries make international mutual funds risky investments?

ANSWER: I'd count that as unlikely. As the term implies, international mutual funds invest in foreign stocks. The major thing that moves the value of foreign stocks is the rise and/or fall of our dollar.

When the U.S. dollar declines against overseas currencies, the values of foreign stocks go up. Because that's been the trend for more than a year, international mutual funds have done quite well. Without going to far out on a limb, I have to say there's no indication our dollar is going to shoot up in foreign exchange dealings in the near future.

QUESTION: How can I find out if a mutual fund in which I am considering investing is a load or no-load fund, has a 12b-1 plan or a redemption fee? I get a smile when you describe a redemption fee as a "rear-end load" - a kick in the investor's rump.

ANSWER: Read that mutual fund's prospectus - very carefully. A prospectus is a disclosure document, in which pertinent information must be revealed. Sometimes, getting all details of costs is a "hard study."

WASHINGTON - The nation's merchandise trade deficit narrowed sharply in April to $12.1 billion, reflecting reduced oil prices and the long-awaited impact of a declining U.S. dollar, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the trade imbalance fell by 16.6 percent from the March level of $14.5 billion.

The improvement in April was led by a 10.2 percent drop in overall imports - which totalled $30 billion in April, down from $33.4 billion in March.

This drop offset a disappointing 4.3 percent decline in exports in April, down to $18.6 billion from March levels of $19.1 billion.

The April trade deficit was the lowest since a $10.9 billion imbalance last August.

The April figures showed the impact of both the world drop in oil prices and efforts to stabilize the U.S. dollar against foreign currencies.

The dollar has fallen about 30 percent against other major currencies since a year ago.

Analysts have been looking for a turning point in the trade deficit. But despite today's good news, economists generally did not expect major improvements in the trade deficit from the declining dollar until later in the year.

"Given a level playing field, Americans can out-produce and out-compete anyone, anywhere on earth. That's why it's the policy of this administration to open markets abroad, not close them at home," the president told the National Association of Manufacturers.

The House-passed bill would force the president to retaliate against countries that engage in unfair trading practices and would require steps to lower by 10 percent a year the trade surplus with some countries, including Japan, West Germany and Taiwan, have with the United States.

The dollar is now at a more competitive level with foreign prices and efforts to stabilize the U.S. dollar against foreign currencies.

Administration officials have predicted a significant narrowing in the trade deficit, which reached a record $14.8 billion for all of last year, in the second half of 1986.

Reagan claimed the bill would escalate a trade war with U.S. trading partners, resulting in retaliation against U.S. products.

"The Democratic leadership may think this is clever politics in an election year, but the American people see this for what it is - kamikaze legislation that could take their jobs down in flame," the president said.

His remarks were criticized by Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee.

"Fear of retaliation didn't stop Reagan from bombing Libya. The trade war is just as real as the war of terrorism, and Democrats don't want to surrender either one," Coelho said.
