Merger push draws wrath of minority

By George Lavno
Herald Reporter

The Board of Directors will decide after a public hearing next month whether to schedule a November referendum on the elimination of Town Charter provisions that give the Eighteenth District the power to veto attempts to take its responsibilities away.

The directors scheduled the hearing for their July 1 meeting Tuesday after a report recommending the changes was submitted by the town Charter Revision Commission. The commission's report, approved on a 6-3 vote last week, came after three months of deliberations that have prompted sharp criticism by district supporters of the consolidation attempt.

That criticism was heard again Tuesday from the three commission members who voted against the panel's final report. The three - Republicans Wallace Irish Jr., Nathan G. Agostinelli and Vivian Ferguson - submitted a minority report that called the charter changes "immoral and against the very reasons for which this country was founded."

"Self-determination has been a basic precept of our government and this is being denied," the report charged.

Opponents of the merger are opposed to the manner in which this attempt is being made. This is a coverup for the biggest political blunder in our history - the building of the Buckland firehouse for which the Democratic members of the board seek to justify their foolish error."

Opponents of the charter changes and of consolidation have repeatedly criticized Manchester's Democratic leaders, who are spearheading the efforts to change the charter and called for creation of the charter panel in January. District supporters have also pointed to the town's Buckland firehouse, located on Tolland Turnpike, as the major reason behind the latest effort to force consolidation.

The firehouse was built in the 1970s before the state Supreme Court ruled that the district, which provides fire protection and sewer service to much of northern Manchester, had the legal authority to serve the Buckland area. District backers argue that Manchester Democrats, who supported the station's construction and control the Board of Directors, are embarrassed by the decision.

The minority report on the changes, alluding to the Democratic majority on the charter commission, called the final decision "fore-ordained."

However, Charter Revision Commission Chairman John Yavis, a Democrat, denied the decision was political. He told the board Tuesday that the 1977 commission that drew up the Town Charter - two of whose members who served on the recent panel - unanimously supported consolidation, but postponed the controversial issue so that the proposed town manager-council form of government would win support.

The charter provisions at issue require a separate favorable vote by district residents before consolidation can occur. If they are removed, the town would follow state consolidation procedures that call for one townwide vote.

Yavis said that after 28 years, it is proper for the town to consider the desire of the original charter commission that the issue be handled in the future. Quoting Republican commission member Charles S. House, a former chief of the state Supreme Court who served on the 1947 panel and who voted in favor of the changes, Yavis said, "Perhaps that day has come."

Yavis also read a written statement submitted by Democratic commission member Beldon Schaffer in support of the charter changes. Schaffer, who was out of town, argued that the state consolidation procedures "guarantee that the minority wishes of a special district are not allowed to override the majority wishes of a whole town."

Calling the existence of the district "an obstacle to coordinated growth of the Town of Manchester," Schaffer said consolidation of the two entities would eliminate the confusion of competing sewer plans and fire protection.

However, Republican commission member Irish charged in a separate statement that what is at issue is tax revenue from new development slated for the district.

"What really is at stake is the right to 'cozy up' a little closer to developers who make political contributions, pay higher taxes which make the bureaucracy bigger and eventually a greater burden on small taxpayers," Irish said.

"Democrats on the Board of Directors are more concerned with influence peddling to the rich and famous rather than the small citizen-taxpayer," he said.

National forecast

During early Thursday morning, showers and thunderstorms are forecast for parts of the Upper Mississippi Valley, the Great Lakes, the Ohio Valley and parts of the North Atlantic Coast States. Showers and thunderstorms are possible in the extreme Southern Plains, the Central Plains, the Mid Mississippi Valley, most of the Ohio Valley, the Mid to Northern Atlantic Coast States and the extreme South Atlantic coast. Elsewhere, the weather will be fair.

PEOPLE

Glimpses

The Massachusetts Institute of Technology is honoring an alumnus by naming its space science building after Ronald E. McNair, one of the seven astronauts killed in the shuttle disaster. McNair earned a Ph.D. in physics from MIT in 1977. Kin Novak is getting a recurring role in the prime-time soap opera "Falcon Crest" this fall. She will be a mysterious woman who takes on matriarch Jane Wyman. Novak's most recent movie was "Just a Gigolo" with David Bowie.

Moon Unit's dad

Rock star Frank Zappa named his children Moon Unit and Dweezle but says, "I don't think I've made any mistakes raising children." With Father's Day approaching, Zappa tells Us magazine some of his views on raising children. "I encourage them to get out of school as soon as possible because in California I believe school is bad for your health," he says. His main goal for his four kids is "to give them the opportunity to live a happy life." Zappa is concerned about what he calls the "artificial" method of rearing children. "There seems to be a trend for the young modern parent to have a child for these reasons: for the woman to experience the miracle of childbirth and for the young couple to raise their precious child to be this immaculate artifact of modern society," he says. "If people think today's punk kids are repulsive, wait until they see what these little artifact children are going to do."

Booked again

"Mayflower Madam" Sydney Biddle Barrows has been allowed to keep quiet about potentially lucrative book and movie deals stemming from her guilty plea in prostitution case. A judge in New York City said Tuesday that Barrows, a descendant of Pilgrims, does not have to tell the state Crime Victims Board about her deals because prostitution is a victimless crime. Barrows pleaded guilty in July to fourth-degree prostitution. Authorities said she ran three escort agencies whose employees were expensive hookers. After the plea, Barrows signed to write a book and movie screenplay about her experiences. The Crime Victims Board moved to see whether any money from these deals could be seized to compensate "victims" of her crime, under a state law designed to keep criminals from profiting from their crimes.

Gish pushes

For once in her 84-year career, Lillian Gish was at a loss for words. "After this," she said

Tuesday, choking with emotion. "what do you do?" Then she fell into the arms of Helen Hayes, who had just presented her with the second annual Star Award of the Friends of the Theater Collection of the Museum of the City of New York. The lunch was highlighted by tributes to 88-year-old Gish by such friends as Tony Randall and Lily Tomlin, fresh from her Tony triumph as best actress of the Broadway season. "The nicest thing about Lillian is that she is one of my idols who became my best friend," Hayes said. Gish was escorted to the lunch by James "Hawaii" MacArthur — Hayes's son and Gish's godson.

King of the clinic

King Hussein of Jordan is expected to visit the Cleveland Clinic in Cleveland, Ohio, next week for routine tests, a clinic spokesman says. The spokesman, Gary Weiland, said Tuesday that the clinic had been contacted about Hussein's visit, but has not received official confirmation. Hussein was in Paris on Tuesday to meet with French President Francois Mitterrand. He is to go on to Britain and the United States, where he will meet with President Reagan on Monday. Hussein, accompanied by his American-born wife, Queen Noor, visited the clinic for three days in February 1984.

Hasty award

Comedian Jean Rivers has been singled out for a special award by the Hasty Pudding Theatricals, a Harvard University club that named her Woman of the Year in 1984. Rivers on Tuesday received an "Instant Pudding Award" while at the Harvard Coop department store in Cambridge, Mass., during a book-signing appearance. Peter Ocko, a producer for the club, said the award was "Hasty Pudding's way of saying 'Welcome back to Cambridge, Mass.'" and was "invented just for this occasion." Rivers got the award for her "jojo and impressive contribution to the world of entertainment."

Today in history

On this date in 1972, black militant Angela Davis was acquitted of murder, kidnapping and criminal conspiracy charges stemming from a California courtroom shootout in which a judge and three others were killed. Above, Davis, second from right, leaves court with friends and bodyguards following her acquittal.

Almanac

Today is Wednesday, June 4, the 155th day of 1986 with 210 to follow.

The moon is moving toward its new phase.

The morning stars are Mars and Jupiter.

The evening stars are Mercury, Venus and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Gemini. They include King George III, who lost England's American colonies in the Revolutionary War, in 1783; actress Rosalind Russell in 1912; opera singer Robert Merrill in 1919 (age 67); and actors Gene Barry in 1924 (age 64); Dennis Weaver in 1924 (age 62); Bruce Dern in 1936 (age 50); and Parker Stevenson in 1953 (33).

On this date in history:

In 1896, Henry Ford wheeled his first car from a brick shed in Detroit and drove it around the darkest streets on a trial run.

In 1940, the World War II evacuation of Dunkirk, France, was completed. A flotilla of small boats spent nearly a week crossing the English Channel to rescue 350,000 British, French and Belgian troops from advancing German forces.

In 1942, the Battle of Midway began; the Japanese fleet suffered its first decisive defeat in World War II.

In 1972, black militant Angela Davis was acquitted of murder, kidnapping and criminal conspiracy charges stemming from a California courtroom shootout in which a judge and three others were killed.

In 1985, the Supreme Court struck down an Alabama minute-of-silence law as specifically fostering classroom prayer.

A thought for the day: Automobile inventor Henry Ford said, "History is more or less bunk."

Now you know

The greatest number of spectators at any trial was that of Major Jesus Sosa Blanco charged in Cuba with 108 murders. At one point in the trial, held in the Havana Sports Palace, attendance peaked at 17,000 people. Blanco was found guilty and executed on Feb. 18, 1959.

Step on It

Minnesota officials recently tied yellow ribbons around speed-limit signs to remind motorists to drive safely during the Memorial Day weekend. But movements are now afoot in several states to repeal the 55-MPH speed limit. During World War Two, gasoline was rationed and speed limits were set at 35 MPH. For a short time in 1943, all driving for pleasure was outlawed. Rationing was not implemented to save gas. It was meant to conserve rubber in automobile tires.

DO YOU KNOW — In what year did the federal government lower speed limits to 55 MPH?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — In public, Jack Benny always claimed to be 39 years old.

Sidewalk proposal spurs renewed calls for policy change

By George Lovyn Herald Reporter

Debate over whether the town should build a sidewalk in front of the VFW building on East Middle Turnpike sparked a re-examination of the town's sidewalk policy Tuesday during a meeting of the Manchester Board of Directors.

The board approved construction of new sidewalks along Love Lane and Broad Street, and repair of a walk in front of the Mary Cheney Library. The total cost of the projects is $17,875.

But a proposal to build 250 feet of cement sidewalk in front of the VFW building was tabled until July after questions were raised about the need for the project.

Mayor Barbara Weinberg, a Democrat, opposed construction of the walk on the grounds that it would not be used enough.

"There just isn't the foot traffic on that side of the street at all," she argued.

Weinberg said the $6,725 needed to build the walk should instead be used to help repair existing sidewalks. "They're really in pretty bad shape, and we've taken enough (insurance) claims" because of people falling on walks, she said.

However, Democratic Director Stephen Casano supported construction of the walk. He said residents do walk along that side of East Middle Turnpike — especially to use a food store located in a plaza next to the VFW hall.

In addition, Casano said, students from Iling Junior High School walk along the street to reach a video store located in the same shopping plaza.

Despite his comments, Casano supported tabling the proposal until the Manchester Police Department has been consulted about pedestrian traffic in the area.

"You can't weigh the dollars and cents as opposed to the first kid that gets hit," he told board members during their meeting in Lincoln Center.

The sidewalk would be part of a new path about 500 feet long that would begin in front of the Greenville Hill Condominiums at East Center Street and East Middle Turnpike. The remaining section of the walk is being built by the condominium association.

Democratic Majority Leader Stephen Penny also supported the walk's construction, arguing that the town must follow its 1978 comprehensive sidewalk plan so that proper paths are provided throughout Manchester. He said that plan calls for sidewalks on both sides of major roads, on the north side of secondary roads and none on roads with little foot traffic.

Penny said that plan has been ignored because the Planning and Zoning Commission has repeatedly waived sidewalk requirements for developers.

"It's UNLIKELY in the future we will address the current spotty (arrangement) of sidewalks," Penny said. "But if we don't do it now, we will never catch up."

Weinberg disagreed. "To build sidewalks without knowing what the foot traffic will be... does not make financial sense to me," she said.

The board agreed to try to arrange a special workshop with the PZC, possibly before its August meeting, to discuss the town's sidewalk policy. The workshop was suggested by Director James Fogarty, who said it was needed "to nail this thing down."

Ballila Pagan of Falconer Drive complained to the directors that a number of sidewalks throughout town are in need of immediate repair. In particular, he cited the walks along Pine and Cooper Hill streets, and the dirt path along the corner of McKee and West Center streets.

Public Works Director George Kandra said work is scheduled to begin this summer on constructing a sidewalk along the McKee and West Center Street intersection. He said the work was being done after a number of residents petitioned for the walk, although he said it is usual policy not to put in new walks in already developed areas.

Kandra explained to the directors that his department directs most of its effort toward repairing the town's existing 150 miles of sidewalks.

Director James Fogarty opposed any move of the bureau out of Lincoln Center.

"I don't think we should pay a dime," he told the board. "I think we should make some of these people squeeze a bit."

Weiss said he was hopeful the town would eventually be able to acquire the main Post Office building at the corner of East Center and Main streets. He said the space might be abandoned in a few years and would be ideal for the town Human Services Department and the youth bureau.

Although the directors tabled action on renting space in the Andrews Building until next month, they instructed Weiss to learn the details of future terms of lease and explore other locations.

The board's real estate committee, headed by DiRosa, was also asked to prepare a report for the Youth bureau relocation put on hold

By George Lovyn Herald Reporter

Action on a proposal to move the Youth Services Bureau from Lincoln Center to an East Center Street office building as part of a plan to relieve office overcrowding was tabled by the Board of Directors Tuesday after members asked for more details about the lease and whether all alternatives had been explored.

Town Manager Robert Weiss proposed renting second-floor space in the Andrews Building at 55 E. Center St. for $12,000 a year for the bureau, which assists troubled youngsters, often on a walk-in basis.

Weiss told the directors at their meeting Tuesday that the move would allow the Elderly Outreach program to move to the bureau's current first-floor office at Lincoln Center and enable the Building Department to expand into the current Outreach office space.

Weiss said the rooms at 55 E. Center St. were the only available space near the center of town, which was one of the criteria set by the board when the move was first proposed in February. The rent would be competitive with market prices, he said.

"The space is suitable in every way," Weiss told the directors. Remodeling would be done by the owner and the move would increase the bureau's space from 950 square feet to 1,000 square feet, he said.

Weiss said the lease would probably be for three years, though details of the final two years have not been negotiated.

Other locations eyed by the town became unavailable because the administration had to wait for the bureau's approval, he said.

Democratic Director Peter DiRosa warned that any further delay could jeopardize the town's chances of obtaining the space at the Andrews Building.

However, a number of directors urged that other options be explored. The board decided to expand into the current Outreach office space.

Weiss said the rooms at 55 E. Center St. were the only available space near the center of town, which was one of the criteria set by the board when the move was replaced by a five-bay facility to be constructed on Love Lane. The facility will be designed and partly built by town crews and is scheduled to be completed by April, according to Kandra.

The board also allocated money — previously approved when the 1986-87 budget was adopted — for a number of capital-improvement projects totaling just under $1.4 million. These include new high school tennis courts at $60,000, improvements to the Mary Cheney Library's grounds and building at $21,850, improvements to the police department's computer at $55,831, and improvements to the police communication system at $71,485.

The board approved a new $13,706 health education program for town employees that will be funded by state grants and participant fees. According to a memo from Health Director Ronald Kraatz, the program is designed to reduce the risk of premature death and disability due to heart disease, stroke and certain cancers.

The program is based on a risk-reduction program that has been used for the past two years on a limited basis. The goal of the new program is to reach 150 town employees.

In a related matter, Town Manager Robert Weiss said he is considering proposing the hiring of a risk manager to help identify employees and practices that are more likely to prompt insurance claims against the town. The manager would also work to reduce these risks, Weiss said.

Directors adopt revised landfill ordinance

By George Lovyn Herald Reporter

The Board of Directors Tuesday night approved a new ordinance and accompanying resolution under which commercial users of the Manchester landfill will not be charged for the first ton of waste they dump.

The board had adopted the plan last year, but left out the free-ton provision when it approved the new fee schedule in April. Under the new arrangement, commercial users will be charged $12 for each ton they dispose of after the first. They must also pay a $4 yearly permit fee.

Residents will not have to pay a permit fee or dumping charge.

The board unanimously approved the ordinance, although some questions were raised about it and other aspects of the ordinance and resolution.

Democratic Majority Leader Stephen Penny said small Manchester businesses have complained to him that they were unable to reap the benefit of the free-ton provision because their trash is hauled by a hired firm. Penny added that the increased charges for additional dumping are passed along to the businesses by the haulers.

He asked Public Works Director George Kandra if there was any way to distinguish which trucks are dumped by a commercial hauler in order to credit small businesses, but Kandra said there was not.

Director Stephen Casano said he was concerned that the $3 charge to dispose of old tires would discourage them from being brought to the dump. He said it could lead to more tires being left on the sides of roads.

In other action Tuesday, the board approved using a $50,000 grant from the Federal Emergency Management Agency to replace a town-owned Windsor Street barn that blew down in September during Hurricane Gloria. The barn had been used to store town equipment and will be replaced by a new one.

The houses are being built by Visions Unlimited of Tolland. The rights to all the houses have been raffled off at least once. Additional lotteries have been held, but winners did not qualify for mortgages.

MCC hosts awards ceremony

The 21st annual Scholarship Foundation Awards ceremony will be held Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Lowe Program Center at Manchester Community College.

Thirty-seven awards are being presented this year to Manchester residents who are seniors at either Manchester High School, East Catholic High School or Howell Center Regional Vocational Technical School, and graduates of MCC going on to four-year colleges.

William Johnson, director of the foundation, will serve as master of ceremonies. Allan Thomas, the foundation's president, will present the welcoming address and the Rev. Anne J. Winder, assistant minister at St. Mary's Church, will give the invocation.

The Round Table Singers, under the direction of Penny Dalenta, will present a short musical program.

Flag to fly at glass works

A flag will be hoisted and a new tree planted at the site of the former Pitkin Glass Works during a ceremony on June 14.

Flag Day was chosen to dedicate the new flagpole that has been installed at the Revolutionary War-era site at Parker and Putnam streets, said Erlend Johnson, president of the Pitkin Glass executive committee.

A tree will also be planted in the spot where a 53-year-old oak tree toppled during Hurricane Gloria in September. The Daughters of the American Revolution, Orford Parish, will donate the tree to replace the one the organization planted in 1922 to commemorate the 200th anniversary of George Washington's birth, Johnson said.

Town officials and the public are invited to attend the 2 p.m. ceremony and to view the 200-year-old glass works ruins. Local historian John Sutherland will be the guest speaker at the event.

Weiss agrees to meeting

Town Manager Robert B. Weiss said today he will meet next week with the union that represents former Town Engineer Walter Senkow, who was fired May 13 for what town officials have called sexual harassment of a female co-worker.

Weiss agreed to the meeting in response from a request from the Civil Services Employees Affiliates Inc., which represents about 60 lower management employees at town hall.

"I responded to the union that, while the grievance procedures do not require a hearing, I will nevertheless grant them a hearing," Weiss said. The meeting will take place next week at the town manager's office.

The union is fighting for Senkow's job and has said it will take the matter all the way to the state Board of Mediation and Arbitration in Wethersfield or to the courts if necessary. Senkow was fired after 18 years as the town's chief engineer after he allegedly placed pornographic photographs on a female co-worker's desk. That worker has since resigned to take another job.

Magazine push spurs complaint

By Alex Girrell
Associate Editor

A complaint from a young Manchester woman about a magazine salesman's high-pressure tactics has prompted town Director Stephen T. Cassano to ask about policies to discourage such solicitations.

The complaint was sent May 23 to state Attorney General Joseph Lieberman, with copies to the Board of Directors and the Manchester Parkade Merchants Association.

The incident the woman complained about occurred at the Parkade May 20 when a salesman approached her in the parking lot and began a sales pitch.

The letter-writer said she foolishly let the salesman get into her car and he began writing a receipt even before showing her any magazines. He complimented her on her "beautiful blue eyes" and her complexion, she said.

She wrote that she became so frustrated she agreed to buy the cheapest magazine "just to get rid of him."

Later in the day, she went back to the Parkade and asked the salesman to return her check.

When he refused to do so, she and her parents went to the police to complain.

A police officer recovered the check and returned it to her.

Town Manager Robert Weiss told the directors at a meeting Tuesday that when police get complaints, they investigate the incident.

Gary Wood, a spokesman for the town police department, said today that door-to-door salesmen do not have to be licensed and are not required by state law or town ordinance to register with police. But the salesmen are encouraged to register, he said.

Jeff Jacobs, promotional coordinator of the Manchester Parkade Merchants Association, said today he has not yet received the letter. He said that normally when he hears that solicitors are approaching people in the Parkade lot, he orders them off the premises.

A spokesman for the attorney general's office said the letter was received Tuesday and will be sent today to the complaint section of the state department of Consumer Protection. Joanne Whitehead, consumer information officer for the department, said it will try to effect a return of the letter.

to locate the magazine sales firm to see if there has been any violation.

However, she said merely being arrogant or obnoxious is not a violation of the law.

In her letter, the woman said, "I've learned a valuable lesson from all this, but I feel badly about the other many young women who are not going to be as fortunate as I was."

"I think there should be city and state laws prohibiting high-pressure salesmen soliciting in this manner," the letter said.

Cassano called the letter "very disturbing."

"They've gone beyond solicitation," he said.

He said victims of such pressure tactics should be encouraged to call the police.

Whitehead said that under state law, door-to-door salesmen are required to provide contracts that allow three days for cancellation.

CofC, DOT to meet on battle for Route 6

By John F. Kirch
Herald Reporter

The Chamber of Commerce will meet with the state Department of Transportation next Wednesday to discuss the status of the proposed Route 6 expressway between Bolton North and Windham, said President Anne Flint said today.

Flint said that the chamber, which supports the expressway, will meet with DOT Deputy Commissioner William Lazarus and James Bayard, another transportation official, as part of its study of the issues surrounding construction of the highway.

The chamber is also seeking information from the state Department of Economic Development to determine the economic impact of the project on Manchester. Flint said. Chamber officials have said that the highway would bring more business and a larger labor market to the town.

The chamber is studying the matter so that it can get involved in the heated issue.

A group called the Eastern Connecticut Citizen Action Group is opposed to the 11.8-mile expressway and has filed a lawsuit in U.S. District Court in New Haven against state and federal authorities.

The group is trying to prevent the DOT from acquiring land in the path of the planned $170 million route.

The town of Windham, which along with many other surrounding towns supports the expansion, is seeking to become a defendant in that lawsuit. The town wants to insure that issues pertaining to Windham are addressed properly in the federal court. The court has not yet ruled on Windham's request.

Flint said Windham has established a "future fund" to help pay for the legal fees in the court case against Route 6. The town hopes to collect between $20,000 and $30,000 from contributions. Flint said.

Windham officials could not be reached for comment.

Flint said that the chamber's study could give it some options. "Our strategy has not been defined yet," Flint said. "There's a possibility we would get involved in Windham's fund-raising."

Other options include writing a letter to the federal court in support of Route 6 or asking the Manchester Board of Directors to file a lawsuit. Flint said last week that the chamber might urge Manchester to join Windham as a defendant in the suit.

Safe Rides extends hours

Manchester Safe Rides will be open later this weekend in order to serve students attending high school proms, program adviser Kevin O'Donnell said today.

O'Donnell said 50 students currently help him with the program, which uses the Moriarty Bros. auto dealerships in Center Street as its headquarters.

"We've provided the service to just about 500 people this year since September," O'Donnell said.

Hours of operation for Safe Rides this weekend will be from 9:30 p.m. to 5:30 a.m. The service, which normally runs until 2 a.m., will also extend its hours for graduation.

Crash victim's funeral set

Funeral services will be held Thursday for a Manchester man who was killed in East Hartford Monday when, according to police, the car he was driving crossed the center line and hit an oncoming vehicle.

Timothy J. Donahue, 33, of New State Road, was pronounced dead on arrival at St. Francis Hospital after the accident.

Police said that Donahue was driving east on Burnside Avenue when his car crossed the center line near Martin Park. Donahue hit another car before slamming his head into a car driven by William Lowry III of Cromwell, police said.

Lowry was admitted to Hartford Hospital and, according to police, is in a stable condition with a broken leg.

Police said that the accident is still under investigation.

Services will be held at 8:15 a.m. at the John F. Tierney Funeral Home at 219 W. Center St.

Single moms urged to return to school

NEW YORK (AP) — The first step for single mothers who want to get away from a life on welfare is to get a good education and regain their self-esteem, says Dr. Flora Edwards, president of Hostos Community College.

Edwards suggests that women investigate colleges in their area and learn about the various career planning and financial aid programs available. She notes that many colleges, including Hostos, offer a two-year college in the Bronx that caters to the needs of the inner city, provide free on-campus day care to students' children.

Celts' Walton still has the winner's touch

Boston's Kevin McHale (32) eyes the basket under the watchful eye of Houston's Ralph Sampson during action in Game Four of the NBA

By Frederick Waterman
United Press International

HOUSTON — Nine years after his last appearance in the NBA Championship Series, Bill Walton showed the Houston Rockets he still has the winner's touch.

The Boston Celtics reserve center, who led the Portland Trail Blazers to the 1977 crown, hit a reverse layup off a rebound with 1:38 left to complete the scoring in Tuesday night's Game 4 of the championship series.

The 106-103 triumph gave the Celtics a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven finals, moving them to within one victory of their 16th NBA title.

"This is what I live for," said Walton, 33, traded by the Los Angeles Clippers to Boston last summer. "There is nothing I'd rather do. It's the thrill of a lifetime."

The Rockets, losing for the first time in nine home playoff games, will seek to become the first team to rally from a 3-1 deficit in the championship series. In NBA playoff history, only four teams have come back from 3-1 deficits.

But Houston's Robert Reid told reporters the series is not over.

"The only thing going through our minds is that you can't put in your papers 'The Celtics have won the championship.' In 1981, we lost to Boston beat the Rockets in Houston for the title), we had to listen to 'We're No. 1,' right through those walls.

"The hardest thing is that it happened in our building. We're not going to let that happen Thursday (in Game 5)."

But Kevin McHale said the Rockets will feel the pressure of letting on the brink.

"When you're down 3-1, the hole (the basket) starts shrinking down on you. It's kind of like golf and I never make those shots," he said.

After Dennis Johnson tied the score at 101-101 with a pair of free throws at 3:07, Walton deflected a field pass and Larry Bird eventually turned the possession into a 3-pointer. His shot from beyond the top of the key gave Boston the lead for good at 2:28.

"It wasn't a designed play," said Bird. "It was just what happened. I saw the ball moved the ball around and swung it around to me. The shot clock was running down and I had to shoot it."

After a Rodney McCray tip-in, Walton hit his layin for 106-103 lead. McHale deflected a Rockets' pass and Larry Bird struck with 46 seconds left, but Bird missed a jumper 20 seconds later.

Sampson had only 4 points after intermission and Olajuwon just 6 Boston's double-dreaming defense limited the Twin Towers to 5 of 16 field-goal attempts in the second half.

The Celtics held 58 percent from the floor, hitting 45 of 78 attempts. Parish, who scored just 8 points in Game 3, connected on 10 of 15 shots. The Rockets hit only 43 percent, netting just 45 of 99.

Defense wins for Celtics

By Richard Luna
United Press International

HOUSTON — The Boston Celtics used a swarming defense and key steals by Kevin McHale in the final two minutes to break the Houston Rockets in Game 4 of the NBA final.

With Boston leading by 3 points with 1:38 left in the game, the Rockets were unable to convert on their next three possessions against a determined Boston defense.

The result was a 106-103 victory for the Celtics, who take a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven series. Game 5 is Thursday night in Houston. With a victory, Boston can claim its 16th NBA title.

"I give a lot of credit to our team defense in the second half," Boston center Robert Parish said. "Our defense tightened up in the second half, and our defense was the key down the stretch. We got the big rebound when we had to. We didn't give them anything easy. They earned every point they got."

Added Boston coach K.C. Jones: "The Rockets called on Allen Leavelle, who leads the team with 5-of-11 3-point jumpers in the playoffs, but the Celtics defense swarmed on the Rockets, and McHale again knocked away the ball. This time from Sampson, and Dennis Johnson recovered."

"Ralph wanted to shoot it, but I was on his shooting hand and was able to deny him the shot," McHale said. "There was not much skill in breaking up the play. I just stuck my arm out and was in the right place at the right time."

Another key down the stretch Rodney McCray got the ball back for Houston on a steal from Larry Bird with under a minute to go. Mitchell Wiggins passed to Olajuwon under the basket, but McHale batted away the ball and Ainge recovered.

"It was basically a reaction," said McHale. "I had not tried the quick jump-around on Ainge. It only works once or twice a game. I knew I could get it. Luckily, our defense was the key down the stretch. We got the big rebound when we had to. We didn't give them anything easy. They earned every point they got."

Baylor big hit with Red Sox

By Dove O'Hara
The Associated Press

BOSTON — Midway through the 1985 season owner George Steinbrenner of the New York Yankees decided that veteran slugger Don Baylor no longer could hit right-handed pitchers.

Steinbrenner and the Yankees then moved Baylor from a full time designated hitter to a platoon player hitting only against left-handers.

That was their first mistake. Their second may have been trading Baylor late in spring training to the Boston Red Sox.

Baylor is on a tear, determined to prove Steinbrenner wrong as the Red Sox roll along with a 700 record, 35-15, the best in the American League.

Baylor hit a two-run homer in the seventh inning as the Red Sox pulled away from a one-run lead and went on to a 5-1 victory over the Cleveland Indians Tuesday night.

Baylor, who will be 37 on June 28, also scored a run in the third when he was hit by a pitch for the 10th time this season and the 202nd of his career, a league record.

"I'd like up the number of (career) homers I've had against right-handers," Baylor said after his 12th homer of the year, all but one against a rightie. "The Steinbrenner made that statement about me not being able to hit right-handers without looking at the facts."

"They (Yankees) just wanted me to pinch hit and bat against left-handers. I said good luck. I'll go somewhere. I can play regularly. I wanted to be traded and I ended up here, playing half our games in one of my favorite ball parks."

Baylor missed a great deal of playing time in spring training and got off to a slow start. Now he's making up for it with a vengeance.

In three weeks he has raised his average from .162 to .248. In the last 11 games, he has batted .368 with 6 homers and 15 runs batted in. In his last 15 games, he has hit .365 with 7 homers and 29 RBI. With just four homers at home and eight on the road, he has 38 RBI for the season.

"He's an awesome hitter, he just keeps coming on," Boston right-hander Mike Brown said after improving his record to 4-1 with relief help from Bob Stanley in the final two innings against the Indians.

Bill Buckner had three hits and Rich Gedman keyed a two-run third inning with an RBI double as the Red Sox charged to their fourth consecutive victory, eighth in nine games and 14th in 16 starts.

However, Baylor's blow was the crusher as far as most observers were concerned.

"With a one run lead, we needed a big hit and Baylor did it," Stanley said.

"I'm swinging the bat pretty good and having some fun on this club," Baylor said. "I got off to kind of a slow start, but I knew it would be only a matter of time."

"He's doing just what we wanted when we traded for him," Boston Manager John McNamara said. "He gives us the long ball and is a proven RBI man. He's a threat every time he goes to bat."

Baylor preferred to talk about the Red Sox' amazing record.

"A team that plays 700 baseball is almost unheard of today, or even somewhere near that," he said.

Defense and pitching has been the key to the 700 so far. But the offensive club is going to be there shortly.

"This is still the (pro) basketball season and it's too early to be sure of anything, but New York Baltimore and the others now are aware of what we can do, that we are good and we are training."

Brown allowed eight hits in seven innings, but Cleveland managed only one run, on Andre Thornton's eighth homer leading off the fourth.

The Red Sox finished their fourth consecutive victory, eighth in nine games and 14th in 16 starts.

However, Baylor's blow was the crusher as far as most observers were concerned.

"With a one run lead, we needed a big hit and Baylor did it," Stanley said.

Francis calls honor 'team award'

By United Press International

HARTFORD — Hartford Whalers President and General Manager Emile Francis, after being named the NHL's executive of the year by The Sporting News, says he feels the honor is actually a team award.

"I think that it's pretty much a team award," said Francis, who joined a struggling Whalers club following the 1982-83 season.

"I believe in the old adage, 'You're only as strong as the people you surround yourself with,'" Francis said Tuesday from his Hartford office.

Francis also won the honor voted by his fans following the 1980-81 season while general manager of the St. Louis Blues.

The Whalers finished the regular season at 40-36-4. They were finally defeated in the playoffs by the Montreal Canadiens in the eventual Stanley Cup champions.

The Canadiens defeated the Whalers in overtime of the seventh trades during last season Captain Ron Francis is the only remaining Whalers player who was with the team during the 1982-83 season.

"I'm very happy with the type of team we've built here," Francis said. "They've meshed together well as a team. You had to catch some of the credit but not Francis received 17 of 25 votes in the NHL executives poll. Blues coach Mike Eruzione finished second with four votes.

"This is my third year here and each year we showed an improvement," Francis said. "I can't say enough for our coaching staff. Jack (Evan) has kept the team together."

Francis said the Whalers are currently working out next season's schedule, negotiating contracts and preparing for the upcoming draft. All the front office work is keeping Francis from his favorite summer pastime — following Major League Baseball.

"At least I get to read the box scores every day," Francis said.

Surprise for Joe McCluskey a night to remember

Surprises are part of life and Manchester's most famous all-time sports figure, Joe McCluskey, came home last Saturday night to attend, what he thought, was a special meeting with the Red Sox Committee to help plan the 50th anniversary on Thanksgiving morning.

Instead, it was a surprise 73th birthday party for the Irishman who was born on Manchester's East Side and went on to win 25 national track championships, winning All-American team honors 13 times and twice representing the United States in the Olympic Games.

"This was a great, great surprise. I've never had a bigger surprise in my life. When I walked through the door and saw my family and friends, I couldn't believe it. I was led to believe that I was to attend a Turkey Day committee meeting to discuss the upcoming race," McCluskey said.

His birthday really was on Monday.

The guest of honor, the last to eat any of the delicious food prepared by the Piano Restaurant staff, pulled up a chair at our table and regaled us with some stories of the past. The listeners included two of his Manchester High classmates, Les Buckland and Bob Smith, the latter's wife, Eamon and Sheel Finnagan, and the Yote. Buckland captained the 1929 Manchester High swimming team. Smith had the same honor with the tennis team and McCluskey captained the track squad.

"I ran once in the Sugar Bowl (New Orleans) and received $50. The train fare was $50. I ate a lot of hamburgers."

"There were four to five big spring races along the East Coast Philadelphia and Washington, and I would pay my own way. I ran just for the fun of it and many times did not get any expense money. I loved to run," he recalled.

two-mile competitors the allowable appearance money was almost non-existent and the prizes were trophies and medals, not cold cash.

"The most money I ever got to run was $360 one time to compete in San Francisco. The plane fare was $300. I had to pay for my hotel and food for a couple of days and most times I wound up using my own money to cover expenses."

Duke" during his great career at Fordham University, 1929-1932, McCluskey felt he lacked the proper coaching in college to gain even greater heights.

"Jake Weber was the track coach. He was also the college trainer, his main job. He knew little about track and training."

"I always felt that if I had had some training in college, I would have developed into America's best miler. I needed someone to work with me but Jake was a great guy, but no coach."

"After college, I got the training that I needed and was able to compete against the best in the world for years," he modestly said.

Along the way he did all right, winning more than 200 races, collected 160 trophies and more than $50,000. Seven of his national titles came in the steeplechase which he dominated for nearly 20 years.

World War II put a temporary halt to his career. Following nearly five years in the Navy, as a lieutenant commander, McCluskey just missed by seconds of making the 1948 United States Olympic team. He was a bronze medalist (third place) in the 1000-meter race in Los Angeles and 10th in '36 in Berlin, Germany.

Lauded as coach

"Joe was a legend as a runner and one of the greatest coaches," 1986 Olympic gold medal winner Lindy Remigio noted.

"Joe was phenomenal to have run so many years in world class competition (nearly 20 years). You are a legend. Your kind will never die," he added.

McCluskey tutored Remigio when he coached the New York A.C. to one national title after another in Amateur Athletic Union competition. The former Manhattan College star, long-time coach at Hartford Public High, was coached by McCluskey in the 1950s.

Leconte gains semifinals at the French Open

Boris Becker of West Germany makes a forehand return in his fourth-round match on Monday against Emilio Sanchez of Spain. Becker was to face Mikael Panfors of Sweden in today's quarterfinals at the French Open tennis championships.

PARIS (UPI) — France's Henri Leconte, storming to the net in search of quick points, buried Soviet Andrei Chesnokov, 6-3, 6-4, 6-3 Wednesday to charge into the French Open semifinals. Leconte, the No. 8 seed and the final home hope for the Roland Garros faithful, wasted little time and few aches as he beat Chesnokov, the surprise of the tournament who had beaten second-seeded Mats Wilander. Chesnokov, the first Soviet player to reach the French quarterfinals in 14 years, lost in one hour and 48 minutes. West German Wimbledon champion Boris Becker, the third seed, was next up in the showcase arena in a match against unseeded Swede Mikael Panfors to determine Leconte's semifinal opponent. Becker broke the standard practice for clay-court play, relying on lobs and smashes instead of the traditional leisurely rallies. Leconte broke Chesnokov, who he beat in their only meeting last year, in the first game of the second set after winning the opener in 30 minutes. In action Tuesday, top seeds Ivan Lendl and Martina Navratilova subdued a pair of pesky rivals to reach the semifinals. Lendl very nearly fell two sets down before overcoming ninth seed Andrei Gornes, 6-7 (4-7), 7-6 (7-3), 6-0, 6-4. Navratilova struggled to a 7-5, 6-4 victory over No. 7 Kathy Rinaldi. Lendl termed his match frustrating, and Navratilova called hers awkward. While 14-year-old Mary Joe Fernandez finally had her dream run halted, Johan Kriek continued to surprise everyone, including himself, by claiming the semifinal berth opposite Lendl. Kriek, playing what he called "maybe the toughest match of my life," slipped past 1977 French champion Guillermo Vilas, 3-6, 7-5 (8-6), 7-6 (7-5), 7-6 (7-3), and remains the only American left in the men's draw. "I was under so much pressure," said Kriek, who hadn't even bothered to play the French since 1979 because he didn't anticipate any success. "I don't think I ever felt pressure like that before." Fernandez, a ninth grader in Miami, fell to sixth seed Helena Sukova, 6-2, 6-4, and commented, "I had a great week and a half. I'm not ashamed of it." Lendl, now a winner of 41 of 43 matches this year, went through the first two sets against Gomez without once dropping his serve, yet very nearly was two sets down. "I thought something was going on," the 28-year-old Czechoslovakian said later. "I was having all these bad breaks. I wasn't really happy about it. I felt there was a barrier, and once I broke it things would be OK." Lendl penetrated the barrier in the third set, conceding a mere two points from the second through fifth games, and he continued the barrage in the fourth set. Gomez said he was exhausted after the second set, adding, "My legs couldn't go any more after that. I couldn't keep the pace up with Ivan." After dropping the first set, Kriek looked like he would fade against the 33-year-old Vilas. Kriek broke three successive times in the second set and was up 4-1, but Vilas drew even in the 10th game by breaking at love. Vilas then had three set points to tie up two sets, but this time it was Kriek who fought back to take the tie-break. The next two sets also went to tie-breakers, but Kriek won both and emerged victorious in 3 hours and 49 minutes. Looking ahead to Kriek, against whom he hasn't dropped a set in eight meetings, Lendl said, "To tell you the truth I'm very surprised. I think everyone is, and so is he. But you can't take him lightly if he makes the semifinals of the French." Navratilova needed a service break in the 12th game to win the opening set, and Rinaldi was able to break her twice in the second set, the second time at love when Navratilova was serving for the match at 5-3. Navratilova, though, ended the contest with another break in the 10th game.

Sports In Brief

East offering Hilltop Sports Clinic

Once again, East Catholic High will serve as host for the Hilltop Sports Clinic, which will offer instruction in basketball, football and soccer in the months of July and August. The clinics are designed for the development of youth players and fundamentals of each sport are stressed. The clinic is open to all going into grades 4 thru 9. The camps are: basketball from July 14-18, football from July 28-August 1 and soccer from August 4-8. Cost is $50 per clinic. For further information, contact Tom Malin, athletic director, at East Catholic High School at 647-8627.

East pair makes All-ACC in softball

BRIDGEPORT — East Catholic High girls' softball team placed one on each of the first and second All Connecticut Conference all-league teams. It has been announced. First baseman Chris Raffin made the all-ACC first team while pitcher Lori Bielecki received second team honors. The Eagles finished tied for fifth place in the nine-team conference at 6-10.

USC's Rod Dedeaux to step down

LOS ANGELES — How long has Rod Dedeaux been the baseball coach at Southern Cal? So long, he had Sparky Anderson on his team — as the batboy. The 71-year-old Dedeaux, in fact, began coaching the Trojans in 1942. His association with the school goes back to 1933, when he was the captain of the school's freshman team. On Tuesday, the winningest coach in college baseball history retired with 11 NCAA titles and 28 conference crowns. However, his 54-year "love affair" with USC will continue; he will remain in a newly created role as director of baseball. "I don't look at this as a sad day," the silver-haired, pot-bellied Dedeaux said at an emotional news conference on the USC campus. "I take it as a challenge to bring back Trojan baseball where it belongs. We've had a slogan for 100 years: 'There's nothing like a winner.'"

The school's last NCAA and Pacific-10 championship came in 1978. Dedeaux blamed the slump in part on the reduction of scholarships. The number was slashed from 22 in the 1975 to its current 15, and he said that has hurt private schools, like USC, in particular. Between 1968 and 1978, USC captured seven NCAA championships, including five straight. His record with the Trojans was 1,332-517-11, including a 26-29 mark this season.

Red Wings fire Brad Park

DETROIT — Brad Park was unable to work with general manager Jim Devellano and now he is no longer working for the Detroit Red Wings. Devellano fired Park Tuesday as head coach and director of player personnel of the Red Wings. He said the two "were like oil and water, which don't mix. We weren't on the same wavelength on the way a hockey club should be run." Park, hired in late December, left the club with an 8-29-2 record during his tenure. The Red Wings finished the 1985-86 season with the worst record in the NHL. "Maybe we were like oil and vinegar," Park said. "Sure, we disagreed. But I thought we could work together. I'm shocked and upset, all the natural things that anyone would feel." Devellano said the two were at odds on virtually every aspect of club operations. The disagreements "ranged from the way the team should be coached to the discipline of the players. We weren't comfortable with each other. I feel it's important to have full involvement with a coach, and I didn't have that with Brad." Park, 37, became head coach last Dec. 29 after the firing of Harry Neale. He signed a 2½-year contract that runs through the 1987-88 season.

NFL continues Fryar investigation

BOSTON — The NFL is continuing to investigate allegations involving Irving Fryar in sports gambling, despite a 3½-hour polygraph test that supported his denial, a newspaper reported today. The lie detector examiner said the test proved the New England Patriots wide receiver was telling the truth when he denied he bet on NFL games, including this year's Super Bowl game between the Patriots and the Chicago Bears. But a league source told the Boston Herald that Warren Welsh, the NFL director of security, was in Boston Tuesday pursuing the Fryar matter along with other NFL business.

World Cup roundup Mexico celebrates Mexican victory

By Fred Lief United Press International

MEXICO CITY — The soccer fiesta is on. Thousands danced into the night despite a torrential downpour and turned their city into a raucous street party following Mexico's 2-1 victory over Belgium Tuesday in the World Cup. All across town — from the Angel of Independence to the Zocalo to the front of the National Palace — Mexico City was a carnival of people, flags, posters, costumes, horns, and anything else that makes noise. Talpan Avenue, which runs south from the city to Azteca Stadium, was blocked by cars and trucks packed with jubilant fans heading for the city center. "This is the greatest party in the world — only the carnival in Rio de Janeiro can compare," said a 20-year-old wrapped in a huge Mexican flag. "I feel great and I think we'll be doing this again soon." The euphoria started with the opening goal — Fernando Quirarte's header in the 22nd minute following a free kick. The crowd of some 10,000 was rewarded again in the 38th minute when Hugo Sanchez — the country's most celebrated athlete — struck with a header off a corner kick. "We won because we were able to score with two of our practiced moves," Mexico coach Bora Milutinovic said. Belgium, which played a tentative first half, scored in the minute before intermission of the Group B game when Erwin Vandenberghe converted a header following a long throw-in by Eric Gerets. They were a well-knit team. "Belgium coach Guy Thys said, 'Mexico will go far.' Elsewhere, Portugal upset England 1-0 in Group F at Monterrey and Northern Ireland tied Algeria 1-1 in Group D at Guadalajara. Today, it's Paraguay-Iraq at Toluca, Scotland-Denmark at Nezahualcoyotl and West Germany-Uruguay at Queretaro. West Germany and Uruguay will play without their captains. Forward Karl-Heinz Rummenigge is recovering from an injured knee and goalkeeper Rolfes Bodigies is recovering from an appendix operation. England, considered one of the stronger European teams, had some 11 chances without defeat entering the meeting with Portugal. But the Portuguese jolted England in the 75th minute when Diamantino broke down the right

WETHERSFIELD — Manchester High's golf team split a pair of decisions Tuesday at the Wethersfield Country Club, beating Bristol Central, 4-1, while losing to host Wethersfield High by the identical margin. Wethersfield's Brian Griffin carded a one-over-par 36 to top medalist honors. The hosts sport a 29-2 record. Andy Boggini shot a 39 and was low man for Manchester, now 16-4.

Silk City Invitational captured by Coughlin

Twenty-nine Keith Coughlin left the field behind at the three-mile mark last Sunday and went on to win the sixth annual Silk City Invitational 10K Road Race with a time of 33:02. Coughlin's performance was a good one, considering the rising temperature and difficulty of the course. Willimantic's John Carey and Mark Child of the Silk City Striders placed second and third, respectively, with times of 33:55 and 34:10. Karen Saunders, also of the Silk City Striders, finished first in the women's division, posting a time of 38:53. Beth Hudson-Hankins was second and Sue Shoemelt placed third. In the youth division, Paul Tiland took top honors, while Tom Nurmi's 41:53 time won the men's masters division. Manchester's Mel Siebold placed first in the 50-and-over category. There were no entrants in the female youth,

Attitude toward athletes may fold house of cards

By Hol Brock Associated Press

Perhaps the most frightening statistic uncovered in Sports Illustrated's comprehensive investigation of Americans and their attitudes about athletes is that 86 percent of the respondents believe professional athletes use illegal drugs. "For sports to succeed, fans must care about who wins and who loses. But why should they care if 86 percent of them believe the athletes are on heroin or cocaine, uppers or downers, or some combination of these performance-altering illegal substances?" Pollster Seymour Lieberman, who conducted the survey for SI, said his findings indicate "some erosion in the feeling that athletes are role models and heroes. We begin to see some chinks in the fans' affection (with sports). It returns to be seen if this remains to be seen if this remains to be seen." That spells trouble. Within the drug section of the poll, Lieberman published some other interesting findings. One is that younger respondents were less concerned with the use of drugs by athletes than older people. But more young people than old — 88 percent, and by 10-4 percent, to win the U.S. Open tennis tournament. There was a tiny fraction among the women, 2 percent, who had perhaps the most interesting fantasy of all. They want to win the heavyweight boxing championship.

also led the poll in the perception of drug usage with 82 percent and 54 percent, respectively. That means more than half of all Americans believe that athletes on the country's two most popular sports are using drugs. "Timing is important here. The poll was conducted last November and December, well after the Pittsburgh drug trials in which baseball's dirty laundry was embarrassingly aired, but before the post-Super Bowl drug charges involving the New England Patriots. Would a later survey have increased pro football's numbers? Seventy-three percent of those polled favor compulsory random drug tests for athletes while only 14 percent opposed them. Only 30 percent, however, favored the strongest form of punishment, a ban for offenders. There was a light side to the survey, too. It inquired about what the respondents' greatest sports fantasy would be and discovered that more men, 35-38 percent, would prefer to throw the winning touchdown in the Super Bowl than to get the winning hit in the final game of the World Series. It also found that more women than men, 15-8 percent, would prefer to ride the winning horse in the Kentucky Derby, and by 10-4 percent, to win the U.S. Open tennis tournament. There was a tiny fraction among the women, 2 percent, who had perhaps the most interesting fantasy of all. They want to win the heavyweight boxing championship.

chances with the numerous beer-swilling, shirtless, English fans in the crowd of 11,000 after their notorious behavior in Europe. Stationed outside Tecnologico Stadium were tanks, armored cars, dog handlers, machine gunners and armed police. No incidents were reported. The Irish had almost as rough an afternoon as the English. Algeria tied the score in the 58th minute with Djamel Zidane striking from just outside the penalty box following a short free kick.

NO COOK JAMS: THE 30-MINUTE WONDERS

As you linger longer, admiring fresh seasonal fruits in the market and on farmstands, think about capturing nature's best for enjoyment over the months ahead. "But, I've never made jam before," you may admit. Or, you may think it's simply too much work and takes too much time. With today's no-cook freezer jam method, you don't need a lot of time or fancy equipment. Before you know it, you'll be stashing away fresh fruit jams in the freezer with your very own label!

Today, there isn't any guesswork about making no-cook jams because especially developed recipes are clear and concise. All you have to do is add commercial fruit pectin to the fruit mixture and spoon it into plastic freezer containers. Recipes for the no-cook jams in this collection call for specific pectins, either powdered or liquid. It's the pectin that gives a good "set" so that the jam "jams," so to speak. Because the natural pectin in fresh fruits decreases as fruit ripens, it's necessary to supplement it with commercial pectin.

Are you a rather hesitant newcomer to the world of jam making? Then, try your hand at either Strawberry-Peach Jam or Raspberry-Pear Jam. Each calls for only three or four ingredients, one of which is a relatively new light fruit pectin. This light pectin appeals to those who prefer a less-sweet spread, since recipes developed especially for its use require one-third less sugar than the regular powdered pectin.

Next, you might "graduate" to a tantalizing combination of four fresh fruits in a Fruit Cup Jam. Strawberries, pineapples, oranges and pears unite in a perfect blending of flavors in a jam that promises to make morning toast a gourmet treat. Regular light fruit pectin is used in the recipe. This long-term traditional powdered fruit pectin also has its own recipes. Keep in mind that the two powdered pectins — light and traditional — cannot be used interchangeably in recipes because of the difference in recipe sugar measurement.

As you move on with your jam-making adventure, you'll appreciate the convenience of using liquid fruit pectin that comes in pre-measured foil pouches. Peach-Blueberry Jam and Sweet Cherry-Orange Jam (the latter not shown in photo) call for addition of liquid fruit pectin to prepared fruit mixtures, followed by a quick three-minute stir. It's as simple as that!

Before launching a jam-making session, review these helpful reminders:

- The Fruit
 - Use fully ripe fruit at room temperature. Wash just before using.
 - Prepare fruit for one recipe at a time, even though you plan to prepare several recipes in succession.
 - Do not use more fruit than is called for in the recipe.
- The Containers
 - Use 1-pint freezer containers or 8-ounce jelly jars with tight-fitting lids. Wash, rinse with boiling water and drain; or, use automatic dishwasher with very hot rinse.
- The Easy Process
 - Never substitute one pectin for another because recipes are developed for a specific pectin.
 - Do not reduce the sugar in a recipe. The amount specified in the recipe is needed to ensure correct results.
 - Do not double recipes. Prepare in separate batches.

After preparing these jams and allowing them to stand 24 hours at room temperature, it's heartwarming to know they can be kept in the freezer for up to 6 months. Once removed from the freezer, a jam will keep fresh in your refrigerator for up to 3 weeks.

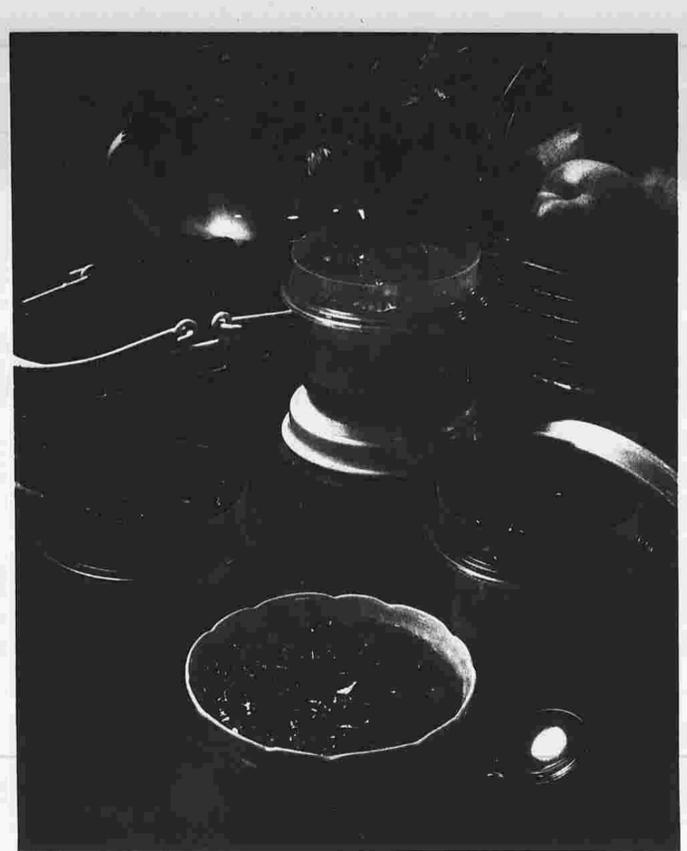

Go ahead and be your creative self now. You'll discover how easy it is to expand your jam-making experience with seasonal fruits throughout the year.

STRAWBERRY-PEACH JAM

3-1/2 cups prepared fruit (about 1 pint fully ripe strawberries and 1-1/2 pounds fully ripe peaches)
3 cups (1-1/4 lb.) sugar
1 box light fruit pectin

First prepare the fruit. Stem and thoroughly crush, one layer at a time, about 1 pint strawberries. Measure 2 cups into large bowl or pan. Peel, pit and grind or finely chop about 1-1/2 pounds peaches. Measure 1-1/2 cups; add to strawberries.

Then make the jam. Measure sugar. Combine pectin with 1/4 cup of the sugar. Gradually add pectin mixture to fruit, stirring vigorously. Set aside for 30 minutes, stirring frequently. Gradually stir in sugar until dissolved. Ladle quickly into scalded containers, filling to within 1/2 inch of tops. Cover at once with tight lids. Let stand at room temperature 24 hours; then store in freezer. Small amounts may be covered and stored in refrigerator up to 3 weeks. Makes 5 cups or about 6 (8-ounce) containers.

Create irresistible no-cook fresh fruit jams, so easy to prepare, so convenient to store in the freezer for enjoyment year round.

RASPBERRY-PEAR JAM

3-3/4 cups prepared fruit (about 3 pints fully ripe red raspberries and about 1-1/2 pound fully ripe pears)
3 cups (1-1/4 pounds) sugar
1 box light fruit pectin

First prepare the fruit. Thoroughly crush, one layer at a time, about 3 pints red raspberries. Measure 2 cups into large bowl or pan. Peel, core and finely chop about 1-1/2 pounds pears. Measure 1-3/4 cups; add to raspberries. Add lemon juice.

Then make the jam. Measure sugar. Combine pectin with 1/4 cup of the sugar. Gradually add pectin mixture to fruit, stirring vigorously. Set aside for 30 minutes, stirring frequently. Gradually stir in sugar until dissolved. Ladle quickly into scalded containers, filling to within 1/2 inch of tops. Cover at once with tight lids. Let stand at room temperature overnight; then store in freezer. Small amounts may be covered and stored in refrigerator up to 3 weeks. Makes 5-1/2 cups or about 7 (8-ounce) containers.

FRUIT CUP JAM

2-1/2 cups prepared fruit (about 1 pint fully ripe strawberries, 1/4 medium ripe pineapple, 2 medium oranges and about 1/2-pound fully ripe pears)
4-1/2 cups (2 pounds) sugar
3/4 cup water
1 box fruit pectin

First prepare the fruit. Stem and thoroughly crush one layer at a time about 1 pint strawberries, measure 3/4 cup. Peel, core and finely chop or grind 1/4 medium pineapple; measure 3/4 cup. Peel and seed and crush thoroughly; measure 1/2 cup. Peel, core and finely chop or grind about 1/2 pound pears; measure 1/2 cup. Combine measured fruits in a large bowl or pan.

Then make the jam. Thoroughly mix sugar into fruit; let stand 10 minutes. Mix water and fruit pectin in small saucepan. Bring to a full boil and boil 1 minute, stirring constantly. Stir into fruit. Continue stirring 3 minutes. (A few sugar crystals will remain.) Ladle quickly into scalded containers, filling to within 1/2 inch of tops. Cover at once with tight lids. Let stand at room temperature 24 hours; then store in freezer. Small amounts may be covered and stored in refrigerator up to 3 weeks. Makes about 5-1/2 cups or about 7 (8-ounce) containers.

PEACH-BLUEBERRY JAM

1-3/4 cups prepared fruit (about 1/2 pint fully ripe blueberries and 1 pound fully ripe peaches)
4 cups (1-3/4 pounds) sugar
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
1 pouch fruit pectin

First prepare the fruit. Finely chop or grind about 1/2 pint blueberries. Measure 1/2 cup into large bowl or pan. Peel, pit and finely chop or grind about 1 pound peaches. Measure 1-1/4 cups and add to blueberries.

Then make the jam. Thoroughly mix sugar into fruit; let stand 10 minutes. Add lemon juice to fruit pectin in small bowl. Stir into fruit. Continue stirring 3 minutes. (A few sugar crystals will remain.) Ladle quickly into scalded containers, filling to within 1/2 inch of tops. Cover at once with tight lids. Let stand at room temperature overnight; then store in freezer. Small amounts may be covered and stored in refrigerator up to 3 weeks. Makes about 4 cups or about 5 (8-ounce) containers.

SWEET CHERRY-ORANGE JAM

1-3/4 cups prepared fruit (about 1-1/4 pounds fully ripe sweet cherries and 1 medium orange)
4 cups (1-3/4 pounds) sugar
1/4 cup fresh lemon juice
1 pouch fruit pectin

First prepare the fruit. Pit and grind about 1-1/4 pounds sweet cherries. Measure 1-1/2 cups into large bowl or pan. Grate the rind from 1 orange, measure 1/2 teaspoon. Section orange, removing membrane; dice the sections and measure 1/4 cup. Add orange rinds and sections to cherries.

Then make the jam. Thoroughly mix sugar into fruit; let stand 10 minutes. Add lemon juice to fruit pectin in small bowl. Stir into fruit. Continue stirring 3 minutes. (A few sugar crystals will remain.) Ladle quickly into scalded containers, filling to within 1/2 inch of tops. Cover at once with tight lids. Let stand at room temperature 24 hours; then store in freezer. Small amounts may be covered and stored in refrigerator up to 3 weeks. Makes about 4-3/4 cups or about 6 (8-ounce) containers.

Astrograph

Your Birthday
June 5, 1986
In the year ahead, you will ascend to new career heights. Your driving ambition will be the motivator.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You stand to benefit today from something not of your making. You'll be invited in because of something special you can offer. Is there someone in your future? To find out what's in store for you, get your Astro-Graph predictions for the year following your birthday, May $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, Box 1846, Concord, NH 03301. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) Today will be most pleasurable for you if you associate with physically active friends. You won't feel at ease being with pals who won't be out of line tooting your own horn today. Management should know who's entitled to the credit.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Activities that stimulate you both mentally and physically will serve to brighten your outlook today. Tennis, anyone?
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Don't be timid about standing up for your rights today. Just because the other guy has a bigger mouth doesn't make him an authority.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 22) Someone you'll talk to today will give you an inspiring idea. File it away for future reference because you'll put it to good use.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Where your work or career is concerned, extra effort will now yield extra dividends. Don't be reluctant to do a bit more.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Attend to your essential duties today, but allow yourself some leisure time. A recreation break will do you a world of good.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Much of value can be accomplished today because you'll be as strong a finisher as you are a starter. Tackle assignments that offer some challenge.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Outside interests will place heavy demands on you today. But you won't mind, because they'll all be fun ways to keep busy.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be assertive today in a situation where you have to protect your material interests. You can do it properly without alienating associates.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't waste a lot of time today wondering if your ideas will work. Put them into action. If you make a mistake, deal with it later.
Canada's continental climate, generally temperate, can vary from freezing cold to blistering heat. The low-to-high variation is well beyond 100 degrees.

Fancy footwork

Fancy footwork
By James Jacoby
Modern bidding is far from perfect. When West overcalled with one diamond, North's negative double said, "Bid something, partner; I'll let you know later whether I have a good hand." That call allowed East to stick in a one-heart bid. Expecting partner to have length and strength in hearts for that negative double, South bid one-trump. North, quickly raised to three, and now declarer had his work cut out for him.
When East played the 10 of hearts on the opening lead, declarer played the nine. He was certain that West's diamond overcall indicated the club king as well as five diamonds. If he took the first heart, West would simply play another when he won the club king, and the defenders would quickly take enough hearts to set the contract. But East, on declarer's strategy, led a low heart back at trick two. Now declarer showed his mettle. He overtook his queen of hearts with dummy's king and led another. East could take three more heart tricks as declarer discarded clubs from his hand and the dummy, but then he had to lead either a club or a diamond. If he led a diamond, South would rise with the king, play four rounds of spades, discarding a diamond, and then come to the ace of clubs. On the third spade West would have to unguard either the club king or the diamond Q. If East were to lead back a club instead, declarer would win his club ace and run spades, again squeezing West in the minor suits.

The House drove the Senate to TV

By Donald M. Rothberg
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The politics of the Senate's decision to enter the age of television was this simple: For seven years members of the House with an inclination to run against senators have gained the edge on local news coverage.

"That's what Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., was talking about when he referred to the Senate as the 'invisible half of Congress.'"

The Senate minority leader said that "today, many Americans think that Congress consists only of the House of Representatives."

In the competitive business of politics, it did not serve senators' interests to have the voters back home watching local newsmen on the House floor while the Senate chamber remained off limits to the curmudgeons who continue to predict dire consequences from the "intrusive eye of television" seem most concerned about people who will watch the gavel-to-gavel coverage on cable systems served by C-SPAN, the Cable Satellite Public Affairs Network. But proponents of televising the Senate sensed the more important audience was the millions of people who watch local news shows.

What will happen to that halved Senate institution, the filibuster? With cameras watching will senators no longer dare try to talk legislation to death? Don't bet on it.

Television might even restore the filibuster to its earlier form, when senators truly talked for hours and kept the chamber in session around the clock. These were the days when filibusters offered the kind of drama that insomniacs could sink their teeth into.

Filibusters today are only pale versions of the battles of the 1960s and before. They are too gentlemanly. They operate on agreements to adjourn for the day and pick up when senators can return, rested and bright-eyed for the next session.

Will viewers slumped in front of their sets become appalled by the frequent quorum calls, the Senate's last resort for several minutes and occasionally for hours and there is no limit on the number.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., a supporter of televising the Senate, pointed out that people will have to understand "sometimes it seems like nothing is happening on the Senate floor and, in fact, nothing is happening."

Yet, for all of that, the Senate is an institution with its own peculiar fascination. It is an arena in which operate 100 colossal egos trying to satisfy driving ambition. It can be an addictive show.

But what tipped the balance to television was not the cable audience and what they might or might not see.

The key was what Stephen Hess of the Brookings Institution calls "the growth industry" in the news business, local television news.

Hess has spent years studying news coverage of the government and his latest book focused on the Senate.

He predicts that when senators vote next month on whether to continue televising their sessions "the vote will overwhelmingly be to make it permanent."

The issue is not gavel-to-gavel coverage, he said, it's the availability of snippets of floor debate for the local news shows.

Primaries thin pack for November

By Donald M. Rothberg
The Associated Press

Sen. James Abdnor survived a political shootout in the South Dakota Badlands while a moderate congressman from northern California outstripped conservative rivals from the southern part of the state to become the GOP nominee against Democratic Sen. Alan Cranston.

Rep. Ed Zschau, who spent $3 million on the California primary campaign, finished on top of a 15-candidate field.

With 100 percent of the statewide vote counted after a 40 percent turnout at the polls, Zschau had 718,317 votes, or 37 percent, while television commentator Bruce Herschensohn had 573,531 votes, or 30 percent. Herschensohn conceded at 2:02 a.m. (PDT) and told Zschau: "Congratulations. Our job is to get behind you."

Los Angeles County Supervisor Mike Antonovich was third with 9 percent. Rep. Bobbi Fiedler had 7 percent and state Sen. Ed Davis had 7 percent. Eight other candidates split the remaining 10 percent.

As the votes were tallied from primaries in nine states Tuesday, the winners included Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, and Reuben Anderson, the first black to sit on the Mississippi Supreme Court.

Rodino defeated Newark Councilman Donald Payne, who argued it was time the district, which is nearly 60 percent black, had a black congressman.

Anderson easily turned back a challenge from arch conservative Richard Barrett.

The busiest primary day so far in this election year set the field in two states — Alabama and South Dakota — where Democrats were most optimistic about unseating Republican senators.

Republicans name Cranston as the most vulnerable Democratic senator facing reelection.

Republican Gov. George Dukeminjian of California and Democratic Mayor Tom Bradley of Los Angeles brushed aside their opposition to square off for a repeat of their 1982 contest, in which Dukeminjian won the governorship on the strength of a strong write-in vote.

California voters also approved an initiative that would limit liability claims in multi-defendant lawsuits.

Other states choosing candidates for govern-forced into a June 24 runoff to determine the Democratic nominee.

Guy Hunt easily won the GOP primary, but the Democratic nominee will be heavily favored in a state which hasn't elected a Republican governor in 112 years.

Wallace, confined to a wheel chair since he was shot while campaigning for president in 1972, watched the returns in the governor's mansion where he has lived for 17 of the past 23 years and said, "All things come to an end."

In neighboring Mississippi, Mike Espy was fighting to avoid a runoff in the race for the Democratic nomination for the House from the 2nd District. With only seven precincts left to count, Espy, a black attorney, was receiving just short of 50 percent of the vote against a white opponent, Pete Johnson who had 24 percent, and Hiram Eastland who had 24 percent.

If Espy's total failed to top 50 percent he would be forced into a June 24 runoff against Johnson.

The winner would face Republican Rep. Webb Franklin in the general election. Despite the fact the district is nearly 60 percent black, Franklin defeated black state Rep. Robert Clark in 1982 and 1984.

In other contests:

Actor Fred Grandy, who played Gopher Smith, the bumbling purser on TV's "The Love Boat," sailed past two opponents, despite being labeled a carpetbagger, to win the GOP congressional nomination in Iowa's 8th District.

In Montana, Sheriff Johnny France, who gained national attention when he single-handedly captured "mountain men" Don and Dan Nichols, was turned out by Madison County voters. Deputy Dick Noorlander defeated France in the GOP primary. No Democrats filed for the job.

France caught the Nichols, who had eluded authorities for months after they kidnaped a young Boston woman in 1980. Noorlander accused the sheriff of not spending enough time at his job.

In New Mexico, where Gov. Tony Anaya was barred by law from seeking a second term, Ray Powell, retired vice president of Sandia National Laboratories, won the Democratic gubernatorial nomination against two write-in candidates. Winning the GOP nomination was Garrey E. Carruthers, former assistant secretary of Interior in the Reagan administration.

Laxalt wavers as DuPont forms committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Paul Laxalt says he is thinking about running for president, but so far is "neither in nor out" of the race for the 1988 GOP nomination.

Former Republican Gov. Pierre S. Dole of Delaware says he'll become a candidate in September if he thinks he can win.

In an interview, Laxalt, R-Nev., said "old Reaganians" — close associates in Ronald Reagan's three campaigns for the presidency — have asked him to "keep my options open" for 1988.

"They're telling me that... I can do the job and that the race is wide open," he said.

Du Pont, a former congressman who was Delaware's governor from 1977 to 1985, acknowledges he's not a national figure, but says that's an asset. "I'm in a wonderful position," he said Tuesday. "I'm unknown. I'm underrated, and there's nowhere to go but up."

Du Pont said he is forming the "Pete du Pont for President Committee" — using his nickname — and if it finds enough support and money to sustain his hopes he will announce his candidacy in September.

Du Pont and Laxalt are the latest entries, but the least known, in a field of undeclared candidates that includes Vice President George Bush, Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, evangelist Bill Robertson, former Sen. Howard Baker and Rep. Jack Kemp.

Laxalt, 63, said he will be more likely to seek the nomination if it becomes clear he can attract important political and financial support for the presidency, and if other Republican has emerged whom he considers electable and strongly committed to carrying on President Reagan's political legacy.

"I'm staying loose. I'm neither in nor out of the race," Laxalt said as Reagan's closest friend in Congress.

Laxalt said that as of now, any sitting vice president, Bush included, "has to be deemed the front runner."

"The question is whether being vice president translates into support for the presidency, and I think at this point that's an open question," Laxalt said.

sweeping piece of legislation.

"This is a 2,000-page bill," noted Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn. "To buy that malarkey that we're just going to float it through to conference just doesn't fly."

Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., complained about the GOP's "stampede" tactics and Sen. Russell Long of Louisiana, the ranking Democrat on the Finance Committee, complained "members certainly were not informed soon enough" about all the provisions of the plan.

Several Republican senators also said they did not accept the leadership's strategy.

"It makes little sense to me that we should leave this to the Democrats," said Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y.

withdrew his amendment after receiving assurances from Republicans on the Judiciary Committee that the bill would be amended so that it would not be passed.

The bill used the non-binding "resolving" procedure for the measure.

The Senate has spoken once more on the bill, but it still recalls a 1982 vote to approve a similar measure, which later died in the House.

Senate battle shapes up over tax proposal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate is set to debate tax reform, but the Republican strategy of trying to force the radical plan through quickly and unscathed is under heavy attack by senators who want to save IRA tax breaks and make other changes.

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole planned to bring the Finance Committee bill to the floor Tuesday, opening a debate he and other supporters would like to complete rapidly, with few alterations to the massive measure.

But, going into the session, the prospects that the battle would be easy and fast appeared bleak.

Dole was confident he had the votes to force debate, but under Senate rules, that could not come before Friday.

In addition, Dole said Tuesday he had already been notified of at least 30 possible amendments to the 1,400-page measure and both Republicans and Democrats complained about the GOP leader's desire to ram the bill through the floor with few changes.

Democratic leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia unsuccessfully pressed for a delay in the debate, complaining that lawmakers had only received the measure and had little time to study it.

"This may be the most important bill this Congress will pass and I think we ought to know what's in it," he told Dole in an exchange on the Senate floor.

But Dole and Finance Committee Chairman Bob Packwood of Oregon said they wanted to take care of any problem with the bill — such as the battle over tax breaks for individual retirement accounts — in a conference with the House, which last year passed a significantly different tax reform measure.

The Senate bill would chop a host of popular tax breaks in return for lower individual tax rates of 15 percent and 27 percent. GOP leaders and a handful of Democratic supporters have argued that the coalition supporting the measure is fragile and could evaporate if significant changes are made on the Senate floor.

But that stance prompted an outcry Tuesday from numerous lawmakers who charged that the bill was unacceptable for the Senate to simply rubber stamp such a

Measure authorizes student loans, grants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Expressing support for an end to court-ordered school busing in desegregation cases, the Senate has voted to authorize higher education student loans and grants for the next five years.

The non-binding procedural vote on Sen. Jesse Helms' proposal to curb the power of federal judges to order school busing came Tuesday before the Senate voted 89-1 to pass the higher education bill.

The higher education bill authorizes $5.5 billion for Pell Grants, direct and guaranteed student loans and other federal programs in the 1987 fiscal year to help financially needy students attend college and graduate school.

The Senate bill cuts $2.1 billion from the $8.6 billion authorized in the current fiscal year and imposes an income eligibility standard for Pell Grants.

Sensors voted 50-45 against tabling the amendment by Helms, withdrew his amendment after receiving assurances from Republicans on the Judiciary Committee that the bill would be amended so that it would not be passed.

The bill used the non-binding "resolving" procedure for the measure.

The Senate has spoken once more on the bill, but it still recalls a 1982 vote to approve a similar measure, which later died in the House.

AT&T strike enters its fourth day

WASHINGTON — The walkout against American Telephone & Telegraph Co. is costing the international communications giant $50 million a day in lost revenues, said the striking Communications Workers of America.

As the strike entered its fourth day, top negotiators for the company and the union held informal morning and afternoon meetings Tuesday, but recessed for the night without announcement. The full negotiating committees did not meet.

Either side could initiate another meeting, AT&T said. The informal meetings involved Robert Livingston, AT&T's chief of labor relations, and John Carroll, the top union negotiator.

Although AT&T had no comment on the talks, union spokeswoman Francine Zucker said, "At this point, overall, no substantial progress has been made on the critical issues."

Rebels accept proposal for talks

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Leftist rebels have accepted President Jose Napoleon Duarte's offer for a third round of peace talks and proposed they be held in the capital "at the highest level."

But the rebel statement, read Tuesday over clandestine Radio Venceremos, dismissed the president's call for insurgents to end their 6½-year civil war and join the political process.

The statement said the guerrillas would send four top political and military leaders to the talks, which Duarte proposed for July or August.

Duarte's surprise proposal for a third round of peace talks came Sunday during his state of the nation address.

He previously had resisted rebel calls to renew the talks after the first two rounds in October and November 1984 — one in rebel-held La Palma and the other in a town under government control.

Bay State clears sale of Tylonol

SOUTHBRIDGE, Mass. — The state allowed a Southbridge town to again sell the pain killer Tylonol, ruling a bottle found to contain a small amount of an antibiotic powder was an isolated incident.

The state Health Department issued clearance Tuesday the Park 'N' Shop Supermarket after reviewing results of laboratory testing on the substance and tablets in the bottle, a spokeswoman said.

The state also tested and cleared other bottles of Regular-Strength Tylonol tablets stocked at the store, she said.

"We do feel it was an isolated incident and no further action is planned at the state level," said Health Department spokeswoman Gail Jackson.

Inter-Moslem fighting wracks Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Tension remained high in Moslem west Beirut today, a day after Shiite Moslem Amal militiamen stormed a Sunni Moslem stronghold in fierce fighting that left 25 people dead and more than 125 wounded, police said.

As the rival Moslem militias battled, sporadic fighting between Amal militiamen and Palestinian guerrillas continued in south Beirut refugee camps for the ninth straight day.

At least 73 people have been killed and 381 others wounded in battles for control of the Palestinian camps, police said.

Amal has been trying to prevent the Palestinians from establishing exclusive control in the areas around their camps as they did before the Israeli invasion of June 1982.

U.S. lawmakers meet with contras

PANAMA CITY, Panama — Thirteen members of Congress whose votes are seen as pivotal in the debate over contra aid traveled to Panama for talks Tuesday capped a four-daying tour that included meetings with Nicaraguan rebel leaders.

The U.S. lawmakers were scheduled to meet today with Panamanian President Eric Arturo Delvalle before returning to Washington.

A Panamanian government spokesman said Tuesday the 13-member House delegation left Honduras for Panama Tuesday after holding private talks with Honduran President Jose Azcona Hoyo and other officials of his U.S.-allied government, said Michael O'Brien, spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Honduras.

The American lawmakers also met with leaders of the contra rebels waging their U.S.-backed fight against the leftist Sandinista government in Nicaragua, from bases inside Honduras, said a Honduran source who asked not to be identified.

Bonner heads for Gorky reunion

MOSCOW — Yelena Bonner headed for a reunion with dissident physicist Andrei Sakharov in the closed city of Gorky today, happy to be returning to her husband but uncertain whether she would ever again leave her home.

"I feel much better now than before I went to the West and tonight I am very happy to go to my husband," she said before boarding a Gorky-bound train Tuesday night. "I hope he'll be there to greet me. I sent him a telegram."

She said she hoped to return to the Soviet capital in the next two weeks to pick up cargo she had shipped from the United States.

"I hope to return to pick up some things, but if I haven't come back by June 15, it is because they wouldn't let me," she said.

Bonner reluctantly returned to Moscow Monday, after six months of freedom in the West, making it clear that Sakharov was the only reason she had returned.

Group charges killing of whales

LONDON — An environmental group today accused inhabitants of the Faroe Islands in the North Atlantic of needlessly killing hundreds of pilot whales every year, often as a fun spectator sport.

The Environmental Investigation Agency Ltd. said annual whale hunts on the islands, about halfway between Norway and Iceland, have no modern economic justification for the islanders.

The 43,000 Faroese often hunt the whales as part of their mid-summer sport, and many spears are used in the process of alcohol and unskilled in killing the whales in a humane manner.

After herds of whales are located and driven ashore by power boats coordinated by radio, they are hooked by metal gaffs in shallow waters and "killed with long knives which cut through the blubber and flesh behind the blowhole to sever the spine," London-based EIA said.

Philippine general issues warning

MANILA, Philippines — The Philippine armed forces chief warned today that the military's ability to contain a communist-led insurgency may deteriorate seriously unless the new government of Corason Aquino can stabilize the political and economic situation.

Gen. Fidel Ramos, assessing national security in the first 100 days of the Aquino presidency, said the insurgency situation had not improved since the overthrow of Ferdinand Marcos but that the general situation has "greatly changed."

Ramos said the Filipino people have a renewed confidence in both the armed forces and in the sincerity and determination of the administration "in dismantling all undesirable vestiges of the old regime."

Although he said "the situation remains well under control," Ramos said it may "deteriorate seriously if political and economic instabilities persist."

Disabled dolls

The Mattel toymakers Tuesday introduced a new line of dolls with disabilities — a handicapped ski instructor (right), a determined guy dressed in a warmup suit and sitting in a wheelchair, and others — to boost the self-image of handicapped children. The dolls are called "Hal's Pals."

Reagan tells Marines pride is back

By Ira R. Allen
United Press International

PARRIS ISLAND, S.C. — President Reagan, making his only commencement speech of the graduation season, addressed perhaps the toughest physical education school in the world today, telling Marine recruits at the Parris Island, S.C., boot camp, "Pride is back. Patriotism is fashionable once again."

After watching a current class of shaved-headed youths struggle through what is euphemistically called a "confidence course" in the stifling, flea-infested swampland, the commander in chief pronounced Platoon 1044, 1045, 1046 and 1047 "Marines." Until now they had been the lowest form of life in the proud Corps.

"The few and the proud... often the first into battle, the first to fight for right and freedom... you've been there when your country needed you," Reagan said.

"You and I are basically in the same business," Reagan told the Marines. "Each day of my presidency, I work to keep our nation strong and secure so that we may always remain free and at peace."

He told the graduating recruits who have spent the last several weeks in isolation from the outside world, "The news about our country is good and getting better. Pride is back. Patriotism is fashionable once again."

In another pitch for Congress to pass his defense budget intact, Reagan said, "To all of those who say we must always cut defense first, that America can't afford a strong military, I have just one thing today: Tell it to the Marines."

Railing against "short-sighted cuts in Congress," the president said it is necessary "to invest a modest level of resources in peacetime to deter war in the first place."

"And in the same way that your DI (drill instructor) instills in his recruits leadership by example, America must lead the world by example — by always remaining true to her ideals."

"It's because of you," he told the graduates, "that we can be sure that America will be 'Semper Paratus' — always faithful to her best hopes and highest ideals."

Afterwards, Reagan was flying to Greensboro, N.C. to help GOP Senate candidate James Brodyhill, now a congressman, raise more than $200,000 for his campaign against former Gov. Terry Sanford.

In old times, the feared drill instructors shouted obscenities at the recruits to motivate them through the course; today such language is not tolerated in the Corps, a Marine spokesman said.

Hazing of recruits was modified after an incident more than 20 years ago when a drill instructor led a platoon on a midnight punishment march in full gear into a creek that was unpredictably deep, and seven drowned.

Parris Island trains all male Marine recruits east of the Mississippi and all women cadets. Those from the West train at San Diego.

In his message to Congress Tuesday, Reagan said he will not allow budget cuts in "Star Wars," the MX missile or three other elements of his program to acquire new strategic weapons.

"The security and peace of the world depend on the credibility of our strategic forces," he said, prodding lawmakers to choose between deterring nuclear aggression by the Soviets or holding U.S. military advances "hostage to short-term budget issues that reduce and delay them at every turn."

"Having come this far, we must not falter now," Reagan warned. "If we do, the fruits of all our labor will be gone in the twinkling of an eye."

Nine in ten Manchester area readers prefer the Manchester Herald for local news over any other print publication.

If you live in Manchester then the Herald's the newspaper for you because it's the only one that's geared expressly to the needs of the community. A recent survey conducted by First Market Research of Boston pointed out that the Herald's major strength is in its local news coverage and its intimate focus on the Manchester area. According to the study, nearly nine in ten readers say they read the Herald for the local news and nearly seven in ten say that local news is the most important strength of the paper.

The same study shows that the Manchester Herald is rated quite highly in terms of space devoted to selected local issues in its Opinion pages. Nearly eight in ten readers find that the space devoted to viewpoints on local issues to be more than sufficient in explaining the issues. This extensive coverage provides readers with the depth of information they need to make reasonable decisions on key local issues that may impact on their lives today, or in the future.

In turn, the Letters to the Editor column allows readers an opportunity to vent their views on an issue. One of the most important news categories in the minds of most Manchester area residents is local news, with nearly 75% rating the Manchester Herald very high in this coverage area.

Paying attention to the needs of its readers is the number one priority of the Manchester Herald. They feel it is their responsibility to listen to what residents in Manchester have to say. They're especially interested in hearing any comments you may have about the service you get from the Herald. They guarantee prompt delivery and courteous, efficient service on all billing matters. If you're not satisfied, they want to know about it. If you let them know how they can improve the paper for you, their readers, then they will continue to be your voice in Manchester.

Bond interest tax liability limited

Investors' Guide

William A. Doyle

QUESTION: Earlier this year I bought a 12 percent $10,000 corporate bond. In addition to my purchase price, I paid the broker $300.45 for "accrued interest." The bond pays interest semiannually. My first interest check, for $600, arrived May 1. Of course, I'll get another $600 interest check on Nov. 1. When I file my 1986 income tax return, will I have to pay tax on $1,200 interest?

ANSWER: No. You'll be required to pay tax on $850.35 interest from that bond — the amount you earned. Like most "marketable" bonds — those bought and sold in the marketplace — the one you own trades on an "and interest" basis. That means you, as buyer, get the interest from the time of purchase. Whoever sold the bond gets the interest up to that date. Although the bond pays interest twice a year, interest accrues on a daily basis. The $300.45 accrued interest you paid went to the previous owner who sold that bond.

QUESTION: I have figured out a way to collect interest from corporate and U.S. Treasury bonds and never pay income tax. I'll buy a bond immediately after its semi-annual interest payment date and sell it shortly before its next interest payment date. I'll be entitled to, say, five months' interest. The buyer of the bond will have to pay that interest, which I'll receive from my broker. Because the interest won't come to me from the bond's paying agent, the IRS will have no record of my receiving it. What are your comments on my idea?

ANSWER: Besides being tax fraud, which could put you in the slammer, it won't work. All payers of taxable interest and dividends — including brokerage firms — are required to send Forms 1099 listing the amount. One copy of each 1099 goes to you, as the interest or dividend recipient. Another copy goes to the IRS in "machine readable" form, to be fed into computers. In your ploy, that in-between-interest-date interest would be listed on 1099 sent to you and the IRS by the brokerage firm or bank through which you bought and sold the bond. The revenuers would nab you.

ANSWER: No. It's up to you or whoever prepares your income tax to do those calculations. That's not too difficult. You should keep records of the municipal bond interest you collect, the accrued interest you pay when you purchase bonds and the accrued interest you receive when you sell bonds. If the calculations aren't done correctly, you'll be in trouble if the IRS audits your tax returns.

Business In Brief

Market pauses after Tuesday rally

NEW YORK — The stock market was mixed today, pausing after Tuesday's late rally. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dipped 1.62 points to 1,868.81 in the first hour of trading. Gainers outnumbered losers by a little less than 3 to 2 in the early count of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. Interest rates declined in spots in the credit markets this morning, responding in part to renewed weakness in oil prices. The price of crude oil for July delivery slumped 77 cents to $13.10 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Among actively traded blue chips, American Express rose 1/4 to 62 1/2 and Sears Roebuck gained 1/2 to 47 1/2. But American Telephone & Telegraph was unchanged at 24 1/2, and Eastman Kodak slipped 1/4 to 61 1/2. The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dropped 29 to 140.75. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .44 at 280.92. On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 8.48 to 1870.43.

Baker urges economic coordination

BOSTON — Cooperation between nations and continuing domestic growth are key factors in achieving international financial security, Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III told a monetary conference. Speaking to the International Monetary Conference Tuesday, Baker said "coordination between the group's member banks" is essential in an increasingly interdependent world. He warned 200 top bankers from around the globe, however, that "coordination of economic policies will not be easy." "The impetus behind the program initiated at the Tokyo Summit (last month) to enhance economic policy coordination among the major industrial nations was the fact that such coordination is essential in an increasingly interdependent world," he said. "The broad thrust of post-World War II international economic policy has been to reduce barriers to the flow of goods and capital across borders," he said.

Gartner Group plans to go public

STAMFORD — Gartner Group Inc., a high-technology research and consulting firm, says it will go public by selling a third of its stock for up to $12.75 million. The stock, which the company expects to be sold by July, would be traded on the over-the-counter market, the Stamford-based company said Tuesday in a statement. The offering will consist of 700,000 shares held by certain Gartner shareholders and an additional 400,000 shares provided by the company. A spokeswoman for Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc., which is managing the offering along with Robertson, Colman & Stephens, said the 1.1 million shares being offered for sale would represent 34.3 percent of the outstanding stock after the sale. "The shares are expected to be sold for $10.50 to $12.50 per share, she said.

Insider trading brings big penalty

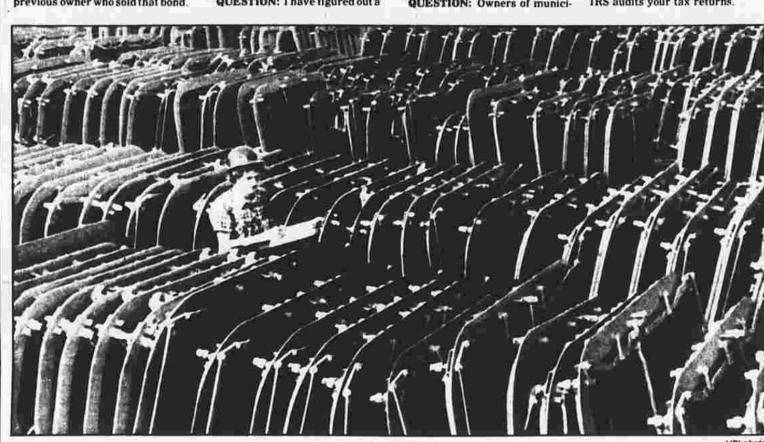

NEW YORK — A judge has ordered a financier to forfeit $3.5 million in profits he and his associates made in stock trading by using secret information provided by Edgar Bronfman, chairman of Joseph E. Seagram & Co. Tuesday's order against Giuseppe Tome by U.S. District Judge Milton Pollack is the largest such penalty in a case of insider trading, the Securities and Exchange Commission said. Tome, who fled the United States in 1981 and lives in Switzerland, still faces a 45-count criminal indictment in this country. Tome, three Panamanian companies he controlled, his investment clients and others whom he tipped made their killing on a March 1981 bid by Seagram to take over the St. Joe Minerals Corp., Pollack said. Bronfman and other Seagram officials did not know about the insider trading, Pollack said.

Magazines enjoy publishing lists

NEW YORK — Magazines seem to enjoy publishing lists. Each year, Forbes lists the 400 richest people in America, Fortune ranks the 500 biggest companies, and Research and Development magazine publishes the 100 most significant new technical products. This past year, R&D gave one of its awards to Phillips Petroleum for advanced thermoplastic composites. The new plastics are reinforced with glass or carbon fibers for additional strength. They are easier to process and lighter than metals normally used in aerospace, aviation, automotive and electronics applications.

Second firm to produce missiles

WASHINGTON — The Navy has found a second company to produce one of the service's most important anti-aircraft missiles, a move that it hopes will save the government $550 million. The decision, announced Tuesday, is the latest blow to General Dynamics Corp., which until now has been the sole producer of the missile, the SM-2, a program worth billions of dollars. The Raytheon Co., which has qualified to begin making the weapon, is expected to be competing directly with General Dynamics by 1988. Raytheon has pledged to offer bids on the "missile program" that are well below the current producer's prices, the Navy said. The service declined to elaborate further, noting firm production contracts must still be negotiated with Raytheon.

Sea of hatches
A shipyard warehouseman takes inventory of a sea of ship's hatches at Litton's Ingalls shipbuilding division in Pascagoula, Miss. The hatches, or doors, are used aboard the Navy's Ticonderoga-class Aegis guided-missile cruisers and the multi-purpose amphibious assault ship Wasp being built by Ingalls.

Study says North's decline over California and Massachusetts to lead in job growth

By Randolph E. Schmid
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Sun Belt remains the focus of the nation's growth, but a new study has good news for older industrial areas too, projecting that California and Massachusetts will lead the nation in new jobs for the rest of the century. "The U.S. population continues to move South and West, but the extreme growth slowdown and even declines in population of many northern industrial states have ended," the National Planning Association reported Tuesday. The new report by Nestor E. Terlecky projects strong growth in goods production, manufacturing and construction but little gain in agriculture or mining in the coming years. The study anticipates Los Angels will add just over 1 million new jobs for a total of 5.3 million in 2000. The report says Boston will add nearly 755,000 new jobs, followed by Anaheim, Calif.; San Jose, Calif.; and Phoenix, Ariz. Overall, there are expected to be just over 26 million new jobs for Americans by 2000, with more than 12 million of them in 30 metropolitan areas, the Planning Association says. The federal Bureau of Economic Analysis, in a study released last December, also picked Los Angeles as the region with the greatest potential for job growth. It ranked Houston second, followed by Boston. The Planning Association study, however, says Houston is expected to rank only seventh in growth with a gain of nearly 498,000 jobs by 2000. That is a substantial difference both from the government study and from the last Planning Association report, issued just over a year ago, which called for Houston to be the biggest gainer through the end of this century. The new study anticipates that Houston will have 2,191,500 jobs available in the year 2000. In 1985 the Planning Association projected that in that year there would be 2,949,000 jobs in Houston. Job growth is continuing in a Houston and similar areas, but with declining oil prices, energy-dependent areas are "less booming" than in the past, commented Carlton N. Strong of the Association. On the other hand, the lowered energy prices are a benefit to older industrial areas which are more dependent on oil and other energy sources.

SEC widens net to check insider trading

By Harihar Krishnan
United Press International

DALLAS — The Securities and Exchange Commission seems to be testing a theory of wide scope in prosecuting a New York investment banker on insider trading charges, says a securities lawyer. If the theory passes legal scrutiny, it could considerably strengthen the agency's attempt to check the growing violations of insider trading, said Bill Hays, a securities attorney in the Dallas law firm of Haynes and Boone. "The theory, under 14c-3 of SEC's regulations, is different from rule 10b-3 in that the former has a broader reach," Hays said. "14c-3 is much more specific in applying the insider trading charge to anybody who has such information about a tender offer."

he was not personally involved. While 14c-3 applies to tender offers, Hays said, 10b-5 applies to any insider trading, prohibiting any trade unless the information is public. The SEC has charged Dennis B. Levine with making $12.6 million between June 1980 and last December by trading on inside information on stocks connected with mergers and buyouts. Levine had worked for four firms during that time, the last being Drexel Burnham Lambert, Inc. of New York. "The implication of the new theory is that if you trade on information that hasn't been publicly announced and whether or not you know where it came from, you are in trouble," Hays said. The issue in the Levine case, Hays said, is whether he should be held liable even for deals in which
