WEATHER

Occasional rain

Today: Occasional rain and a few thunderstorms ending during the afternoon, followed by partial clearing. High of 65 to 70. Wind northeast 10 to 15 mph shifting to the west by evening. Tonight: Partly cloudy with a low in the mid-50s. Wind light northwest. Saturday: Mostly sunny with a high of 80 to 85. Today's weather picture was drawn by Matthew Neil of Bolton, a fourth-grader at Bolton Elementary School.

National forecast

During early Saturday morning, showers and thunderstorms are forecast for parts of the Central and Mid Mississippi Valley. Scattered showers and thunderstorms are possible in the Upper Mississippi Valley, the Great Lakes, and the Western Gulf Coast and South Atlantic Coast states. Elsewhere, the weather will be fair.

PEOPLE

The deb's handbook

Cornelia Guest says she's not a professional socialite even though Life magazine called her the "debutante of the decade" when she came out in 1982. Now she's 22, an aspiring actress and author of "The Debutante's Guide to Life." "It's a tongue-in-cheek view of the debutante life," Guest says. "It's sort of like 'The Prep Handbook.' I wrote it so people could enjoy it and have a good time with it." Guest estimates she went to about 300 parties in her debut year but says the social whirl has slowed since.

FINISHING TOUCHES — Two pastry chefs put the finishing touches on a chocolate Statue of Liberty in Paris this week. The statue weighs 2 tons, is 2 meters high and will be shipped to New York for July 4th celebrations.

McQueen's star

Steve McQueen's star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame is a posthumous one. His children, Chad and Terry McQueen, were scheduled to attend the Thursday ceremony to honor the star of "Bullitt," "The Great Escape" and "The Magnificent Seven." McQueen died at 50 in November 1980 of a heart attack following surgery to remove cancerous tumors at a Juaraz, Mexico, hospital.

'MASH' freak

Chicago Bears quarterback Jim McMahon sounds like he would like to lower his profile a bit. "I've always wanted to be a success but it gets old talking to people about football and being chased down by news people every day," he said, blaming the media for creating his flamboyant image. "You like to have some time for yourself," McMahon, in El Paso, Texas, for a golf tournament to benefit cancer research, says his idea of good time is watching television with his family. "I'm a real 'MASH' fiend," he said. "I could sit and watch 'MASH' all day and never get bored. I also like 'The Cosby Show,' 'Family Ties,' 'Knots Landing' and 'Cheers.'" Another thing he enjoys is the big money he is making with the Bears and for his commercial endorsements. "I never have to work another day in my life if I don't want to," he said. "That's a good feeling. That's a feeling many hard-working people in America will never have. I wish everybody had money."

Courtroom blues

John DeLorean just can't stay out of the courtroom news. A judge in White Plains, N.Y., Thursday gave DeLorean's ex-wife, Cristina Ferrare Thomopoulos, the model-turned-talk-show-hostess in Los Angeles, seven days to come up with a detailed list of items in her possession that she and DeLorean jointly own. It's all part of the battle for some $1 million in furniture, rugs, jewelry, paintings and other items. Attorneys for the former automaker, Thomopoulos and the trustee in the bankruptcy for DeLorean's auto company all claim the property is theirs. DeLorean says the property belongs to a trust for the couple's children but Thomopoulos' lawyer says the things were gifts to Cristina and that the attempt to get them back stemmed from bitterness over the couple's divorce. They split not too long after DeLorean was acquitted of charges that he made a big cocaine deal to save his auto company.

Today's forecast

Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island: Some clearing this afternoon from west to east. Highs in the 60s and low 70s. Partly cloudy tonight. Lows from the mid-50s to low 60s. Mostly sunny Saturday. Highs 80 to 85 inland, cooler at the shore.

Almanac

Today is Friday, June 13, the 164th day of 1986 with 201 to follow.

The moon is moving toward its first quarter.

The morning stars are Mars and Jupiter.

The evening stars are Mercury, Venus and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Gemini. They include Gen. Winfield Scott in 1786, poet and dramatist William Butler Yeats in 1865, actor Basil Rathbone in 1892, Mexican composer Carlos Chavez in 1899, television host Ralph Edwards in 1913 (age 73), Bulgarian born artist Christo in 1935 (age 51), and actor Richard Thomas in 1951 (age 35).

Today in history

In 1823, B.C. Alexander the Great died of fever in Babylon at age 33.

In 1944, the first German V-1 "buzz bomb" hit London.

In 1977, James Earl Ray, convicted killer of Martin Luther King Jr., was captured in a Tennessee wilderness area after escaping from prison.

In 1982, King Khalid of Saudi Arabia died and was succeeded by Crown Prince Fahd.

In 1983, the robot spacecraft Pioneer-10 became the first man-made object ever to leave the solar system, 11 years after it was launched.

In 1985, Mexican-style cheese made in Los Angeles with faulty equipment caused the nation's deadliest tainted food case of that day as that badness resulted nationwide by July 25, when federal health officials declared the crisis was nearly over.

16th century docs researched

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The recent translation of a book on 16th century medicine shows that attempts to understand and cure baldness are at least 400 years old.

So says Dr. Richard L. Sutton Jr., a Kansas City dermatologist who recently published "16th Century Physician," a translation of the first book on diseases of the skin.

"The most popular theory of that day was that baldness resulted from drying out of the brain, brought on by insomnia, worrying, late-night studying and excessive love-making," says Sutton.

However, Hieronymus Mercurialis, the Italian physician whose lectures are recorded in the book, agreed with the ancient Greeks that lack of hair is not a malady but rather a sign of man's superiority over other creatures. He noted that the hairiest animals, such as sheep, are the stupidest, while he said those with few hairs, such as man, are the wisest.

Cardinal mission

Cardinal John J. O'Connor has gone to Lebanon to review a charity group's work and to greet religious leaders in that country.

O'Connor and Monsignor John G. Nolan, pastor of St. Monica's, Albany, are making the trip to review the Catholic Near East Welfare Association's work in Lebanon. The group is the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York. The association runs hospitals, schools and other charitable associations in the Middle East.

O'Connor and Nolan, who left Thursday, plan to return home via Rome, the spokesman said. Monsignor Peter Finn, archdiocese director of communications, said he could make no comment about whether the cardinal expected to do any negotiating on behalf of five kidnapped Americans in Lebanon. "To comment would jeopardize the lives of the people involved," he said.

Celebrity cut

A bevy of Canadian celebrities, including hockey star Mario Tremblay of the Montreal Canadiens, have cut a bilingual record and a video urging fellow citizens to protect the environment. The single "No More Wasting Away" includes singers Kim Mitchell, Carole Pope and Mark Holmes on the English side of the single. On the French side are Ginette Reno, Claude Dubois and Martine St-Claire. Tremblay appears in the video with hockey player Rick Valde of the Toronto Maple Leafs, baseball player Tim Lincecum of the Montreal Expos and two Olympic gold medalists, diver Sylvie Bernier and speedskater Gaetan Boucher.

Lyrics hit home

Faith Stoneman's family sings on the Grand Ole Opry about pain, suffering and hard times, but their lyrics were just words to the 15-year-old girl until a car accident three weeks ago. The wreck near Faith's West Nashville, Tenn., home left her with a broken pelvis, a cracked right arm, cuts and bruises. Later, in the hospital, she suffered a stroke that left her left side paralyzed. On June 6 on the Grand Ole Opry, entertainer Roy Acuff and announcer Grant Turner asked country music fans to keep Faith Stoneman in their prayers. Her mother, who sings with The Stoneman Family, hopes to help pay for medical care until a new record to be released next week. The title? "No Sad Songs Tonight."

Waste Away

This site at the Hanford Nuclear Reservation in Washington is one of three finalists recently picked as locations for the first nuclear waste dump. Scientists say nuclear fusion, as opposed to fission, could someday produce energy without damaging the environment. In fusion, hydrogen atoms fuse at temperatures exceeding 200 million degrees Fahrenheit. Using about a truckload of water per day, a fusion plant could produce as much energy as a modern coal-fired power plant.

DO YOU KNOW — What element is used as fuel in nuclear power plants?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — Bangkok is the capital of Thailand. 6-13-86

Conservation panel wants more recycling

By George Lovno Herald Reporter

In an effort to promote Manchester's recycling program, the Conservation Commission Thursday recommended placing a sign at the entrance to the landfill urging residents to separate metal, glass and paper from regular garbage.

Manchester in 1985 recycled 857 tons of paper, 144 tons of glass and 919 tons of metal in 1986, according to Eleanor Smith of the Glastonbury Public Works and Sanitation department.

Smith said that glass and paper in operation since 1975 — is strongly supported by residents. Glasser agreed, calling that program "much, much more extensive" than Manchester's.

Smith said that in order to encourage Glastonbury residents to separate their recyclable wastes, satellite receptacles are set up throughout the town to make disposal more convenient. The waste in these bins is brought to a central collecting station and sold by the town, she said.

However, Hieronymus Mercurialis, the Italian physician whose lectures are recorded in the book, agreed with the ancient Greeks that lack of hair is not a malady but rather a sign of man's superiority over other creatures. He noted that the hairiest animals, such as sheep, are the stupidest, while he said those with few hairs, such as man, are the wisest.

Sullivan re-elected

John J. Sullivan of Manchester was re-elected Thursday to an eighth two-year term on the Democratic State Central Committee.

Sullivan, 70, who has served 14 years on the Democratic party's statewide governing body, said Joan Rowley of Hebron was also re-elected to her second term during a meeting of delegates from the 4th Senatorial District at the Knights of Columbus building on Main Street.

Elected as honorary vice president to the state nominating convention in July was former Manchester town Director Eleanor Colman. Irene Pisch, an assistant registrar of voters in Manchester, was chosen as honorary secretary to the convention.

Bolton Democratic Town Chairman Henry Kelsey was selected to serve on the state platform committee. In all eight people from the 4th Senatorial District were elected without contest to various state party posts, including the credentials committee and rules committee, Sullivan said.

The district includes Manchester, Bolton, Glastonbury, Hebron and Columbia.

Union complains in Senkow firing

By John F. Kirch Herald Reporter

Charging that Town Manager Robert B. Weiss is withholding information concerning the firing of Town Engineer Walter Senkow, the union that represents Senkow has filed a complaint with the state Board of Labor Relations.

The complaint was filed after Weiss met Thursday morning with officials of the Civil Service Employees Affiliates Inc., which represents Senkow and about 60 lower-management town employees, to discuss the circumstances surrounding the firing, a union official said.

Joseph M. Carosella, field director of CSEA, said that during the 10-minute meeting at the Municipal Building, Weiss refused to release information pertaining to Senkow's firing was not a grievable matter.

From the start, town officials have said Senkow's termination cannot be ruled by the union under the rules set up in its contract because the former chief engineer violated town personnel regulations. The union disputes that claim.

Weiss fired Senkow May 13 because of what town officials deemed sexual harassment of a female co-worker. According to police records, Senkow admitted to placing pornographic photographs on the woman's desk more than once, but said he did so only to cheer her up.

"IT APPEARS we have a problem," Carosella said. "I asked him (Weiss) direct questions in connection with this case and he refused to answer."

He said CSEA would not sign any document forfeiting its right to fight for Senkow's job.

"He's not going to pull that one on us," Carosella said. "He's dealing with professionals now."

Weiss reiterated this morning that the town is not obligated to hold a hearing under the terms of its contract because Senkow's firing was not a grievable offense.

He said that when Thursday's meeting was arranged, he assumed the union had agreed to that condition in order to have the hearing outside of the contract.

Carosella charged that because Weiss would not reveal any information concerning Senkow's firing, the town is in direct violation of the state Municipal Employees Relations Act. The union needs the information, Carosella said, to decide how far to take the case.

"Without this information, it's impossible to get a kind of settlement or to find out what happened," he said.

CAROSELLA SAID he wanted to know who was harassed and whether she complained. He said he was confused about the entire situation, adding that "There's something here that doesn't meet the eye." He declined to comment further.

Weiss said this morning the union interprets the Municipal Employees Relations Act differently than the town. He said he is "not concerned" about its complaint to the state labor board.

In the complaint, the union asks that the town be forced to comply with the law, which requires management and labor to make every reasonable effort to resolve issues as quickly as possible.

The union is also requesting that the labor board reinstate Senkow with back pay for the time he has lost.

Carosella said he informed Weiss at the meeting that he was violating the state law and that a complaint would be filed.

WEISS HAS 10 DAYS after the meeting to notify the union in writing of his decision pertaining to Senkow, Carosella said. If CSEA is not satisfied with Weiss's response, it can take the case to the state Board of Mediation and Arbitration — the final phase in a three-step grievance procedure outlined in the employees' contract.

Under that procedure, Weiss was the second step of the process. However, because in this case the town has not recognized the matter that is grievable, the town contended a meeting was optional. Weiss has said he decided to grant the meeting with the union not because it is part of the procedure but because he wanted to.

The union insists that Weiss was required to meet with them.

OPINION

New clash hurts GOP

The success of the nation's political system is based primarily on having two pragmatic parties, each of which continuously fights the other for control at various levels of government.

When the parties honestly battle one another — operating within certain unwritten rules that prevent annihilation — the system works pretty well. One party wins and the other loses for a time. Or better still, one party wins bigger than the other and neither gains complete control.

The system bogs down in situations such as the one that played itself out at the Capitol this week. Comedy replaces common sense, and nothing gets accomplished.

It also bogs down when one political party insists on doing most of its fighting within its own ranks. Unfortunately, that is exactly what Manchester Republicans seem to do best.

The Republicans fought about their former registrar of voters, Fred Peck, and they replaced him.

They fought about their former town chairman, Curtis Smith, and he removed himself, though his critics insist he is still calling the shots.

They fought about the petition process for a delegate primary on one set of grounds, and after they had resolved that fight they had to abort the primary for an entirely different reason.

Then on Wednesday night, Republicans from the 4th Senatorial District, which includes Manchester and four other towns, clashed over naming a delegate to the rules committee at the state convention.

Admittedly, the rules committee could play a critical role, with three candidates vying for the Republican gubernatorial nomination. But the animosity generated by that Wednesday battle is all out of proportion to the potential gain for any faction.

In the fray, supporters of Richard Bozzuto for the gubernatorial nomination gained one more member of a 36-member committee. In the process, they embarrassed State Central Committee member Nathan Agostinelli, a supporter of Bozzuto rival Gerald Labriola.

From the flak that followed, people would have a perfect right to conclude that personalities had as much to do with the encounter as political strategy.

Agostinelli said Mary Willhide, who defeated him for the rules post, should resign as Manchester's Republican registrar of voters if she wants to be active in politics within the party. Willhide said she was innocent of any wrongdoing toward Agostinelli.

This is not the first time Republican clashes over the governor's race have left them looking disorganized and overly concerned with the minutiae of the political process. Nor, obviously, is it the first time local Republicans have damaged their own cause by intra-party feuding.

The Democrats, too, have their family fights. But somehow they manage to keep them from producing the image of total disunity and confusion. Perhaps that is what has kept them in control of Manchester for well over a decade.

'What's-his-name' may really be Qadhafi

WASHINGTON — Over the last few months newspaper readers have seen many references to Libyan leader Moammar Khadafi. Over the same period, they might have read elsewhere about Libyan leader Gadhafi or Qadhafi or Gheddafi or Qathafi or Kaddafi or any one of at least 30 spellings. At times his last name is preceded with an "al" or an "el."

This has undoubtedly left most of America confused. After all, it seems a simple matter. Why can't America's news media agree on how to spell the Libyan leader's name? In reality the problem is both simple and complex.

Generally speaking, translating from languages using different written characters from Latin languages is a difficult proposition. Sometimes governments publish an official translation, as the government of China does. Fairly recently that official translation was changed, leading to extensive alterations in how Chinese names and place names are spelled in Latin characters — "Peking" becoming "Beijing," for example.

IN OTHER SITUATIONS, nations with non-Latin alphabets have established semi-official Latin-alphabet versions of their languages simply through usage. Japan has done this. But there is no official or even generally accepted semi-official translation of Arabic characters into Latin alphabet. To make matters even worse, experts on the subject disagree sharply over how Arabic should be written in the Latin alphabet.

This has left people desperately trying to translate Arabic names, either people's names or place names, by coming up with what amount to phonetic spellings — spelling a name the way it sounds. Given how exotic most Arabic languages sound to Western ears, it's no surprise that phonetic spellings have so much variance.

Many countries and Middle Eastern figures have made the problem somewhat simpler by

"I feel used."

Prom coverage was an insult

To the Editor:

I confess that I always find Rhea Talley Stewart's columns nauseating, but the June 10 episode, "Scarlet Meets Her Match," was insulting.

After the usual rundown of who's who and who wore what she closed with "This was the night when no senior, worthy of the name would think of going to bed."

And what would Stewart have to do with those kids who for one reason or another were not able to attend the prom? Should they withdraw from society? Would a public apology be sufficient?

Maybe Stewart should remember that not everyone is on the "A" list.

stating a preference as to how a name should be spelled in English. But Libya's leader never has, and in his own country he is known simply as "The Leader."

ADDING TO THE CONFUSION is the fact that official Libyan sources can't agree on a Latin alphabet when they use it. JANA, the official Libyan news agency, uses Al-Gadhafi. The Libyan U.N. Mission uses Muammar Qadhafi. The official Libyan English language magazine, "Jambhriya Review," uses Qadhafi.

It is really any wonder that U.S. news media can't come up with a uniform spelling? The New York Times and Washington Post use Qaddafi. The Wall Street Journal uses Qadhafi. Time magazine spells it Gadhafi. Newsweek uses Kadafi and U.S. News & World Report uses Qadhafi. In England both The Times and The Economist use Qaddafi.

The U.S. government uses still another version: Muammar Qaddafi. They adopted this spelling after asking the Library of Congress to research the matter and come up with a version. But there is even some disagreement among the library's experts.

Christian Filstrup, head of the library's Arabic section, says the proper, classical way to translate the name from Arabic into English is "Qadhafi." He says, however, that library

Governor is rude to state citizens

To the Editor:

In seeking re-election, Governor O'Neill is portraying himself as a tireless servant of the people. Yet, when a group of people requested to meet with him to discuss why the state is moving so precipitately to condemn their homes for the proposed new experts felt that the double "dh" looked so strange in English it was decided to simply use a single "d" instead.

Other Arabic scholars disagree completely with the Library of Congress experts. Some Arabic scholars insist the way the name sounds depends on who is speaking, because the language is accented very differently from region to region. In Libya, they say, an accurate phonetic spelling would be something in the order to "Gazaly," while in Egypt it would be much closer to "Azzaly."

BUT THERE IS SOME HOPE on the horizon. For the first time the Libyan leader himself seems to be voicing a preference. In a recent series of letters to some American clergy, "what's-his-name" wrote his signature in Arabic script over the typed name: "Colonel Moammar El-Gadhafi." Previously he had made an elaborate point of only signing in Arabic script, and he has never used a typed version in Latin characters.

So relying on these letters as the first "official" statement as to how he wants his name spelled, both the Associated Press and United Press International have changed their official stylebooks to make the spelling "Moammar Qadhafi."

In notifying its client papers of the change the Associated Press said, "The AP will not use 'El' because that is essentially a courtesy title and is not used for other Arab leaders. The AP's previous spelling was based on the advice of Middle East specialists when he came to power in a 1969 coup. But the Associated Press Stylebook says, 'People are entitled to be known however they want to be known as long as their identities are clear.' Given that both AP and UPI are in agreement as to a spelling, it is likely that all U.S. media will eventually adopt the spelling.

'For sale' sign only result of Egypt fiasco

WASHINGTON — In Egypt, land of the pyramids, lavish construction projects are certainly nothing new. But the U.S. government's extravagant 20-year effort to provide a suitably posh residence for the American ambassador would make a pharaoh blush.

So far, the boondoggle has swallowed $6 million of taxpayers' money like so much dishwater poured onto the sands of the Sahara — and with about as much effect. There is still no residence.

Here's the story, as gleaned by our associate Lucette Lagnado from Internal State Department documents, including an inspector general's report and a General Accounting Office study requested by Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas.

In 1966, State purchased an elegant villa in the ritzy Cairo suburb of Giza, near the Pyramids. The house dated back to the British colonial era and was magnificently situated on the banks of the Nile. All it seemed to need was some refurbishing to transform it into an impressive ambassadorial residence.

But this modest undertaking was stopped cold when Egypt broke off diplomatic relations after its disastrous night, lumbered along a dozen miles in almost a straight line, crossed Interstate 91 and swam both the Farmington and Connecticut Rivers, according to a state official.

"He's driven by something if he's going to swim the Connecticut River," said Dale May, a state wildlife biologist.

When relations were resumed in 1974, the State Department raised the residential ante with a two-pronged approach: Renovation of the Giza property would resume, while a second mansion was purchased to house the ambassador in the meantime.

THE NEW PROPERTY, purchased in 1975, was a mansion in the suburb of Maadi. It cost $1.8 million, and an additional $1 million was spent fixing it up. That was accomplished in only four years.

But when it was ready for occupancy, the ambassador, Hermann Eilts, refused to move in. He complained that it was too far from the embassy in downtown Cairo, and grumbled that no other ambassadors were living in the neighborhood. He also faulted the security arrangements.

So the ambassador pre-empted the home of a charge d'affaires, a relatively modest place in the Zamalek suburb. The fancy digs in Maadi were left unoccupied.

Meanwhile, then-President Anwar Sadat decided he wanted the Giza property — the first site, remember? — for his own use. So State turned it over to him, and demolition crews leveled the old colonial residence on the Nile.

Then Sadat changed his mind and returned the bulldozed site to the State Department, which hired a Washington architectural firm to design a new residence.

THERE WERE SOME PROBLEMS — including a cost overrun of more than 100 percent of the original $180,000 contract — but eventually the design was accepted despite the misgivings, and an Egyptian construction company was contracted to build the house. "Apparently, no attempt was made to conduct a pre-award survey to determine if the builder was financially or technically qualified," the inspector general noted.

In fact, the contractor had previously done inferior work for the embassy, the inspector general noted.

The results were predictable. As the years — and the millions — rolled on, the project became a shambles. A former embassy official informed Washington by letter that it "is the most poorly constructed project I have ever seen," and said one observer "described it as looking like Swiss cheese."

A special investigating team from Washington reported that the building "can be made functional only at great effort and expense and can never be brought up to the level of quality originally intended."

The expensive wreck now at Giza sits vacant. "For Sale" signs are posted on it and the Maadi home. So far, there have been no takers.

The Argentine armed forces may not have performed so brilliantly with their modern weapons of war, but they're experts in selling them, according to State Department sources. And politics doesn't play much of a role. For instance, Argentina and Israel have been involved in joint weapons development and production of jet trainers, tanks and other armored vehicles. But the Argentine government has also sold sophisticated weapons to Arab states, notably Iraq. And it exports arms and agricultural products to Persian Gulf countries, including Iran, as well as grain and technology to Algeria.

Vernon officials begin mapping fire prevention strategy

By John F. Kirch
Herald Reporter

VERNON — Town officials have taken the first step in a planned educational blitz on fire prevention following a deadly blaze in the Rockville section last week.

Mayor Marie Herbst met Thursday with officials of the town's health, building, fire and police departments in an effort to generate ideas on how to educate people about fire prevention.

The town has been especially concerned about fire prevention in the wake of a blaze on Village Street June 6 that killed Thomas and Deborah Miner and their two daughters, Gina, 7, and Angela, 2.

A third daughter, Michelle, 13, jumped from a second-story window and survived.

Two other people in Vernon have died in fires since the beginning of the year, including a 7-year-old girl.

"We broke down three contributors to the fires we are having," Herbst said Thursday after the meeting.

The first is a lack of education about fire prevention and individual response to fires once they begin, Herbst said. Many fires start because of carelessness, the town has found.

THE SECOND is a lack of early-warning detectors. Even though smoke alarms are required in residential buildings, many homes are not equipped with them, Herbst said.

The third factor, Herbst said, is the balloon-frame style of many of the older houses in Vernon — especially in the Village Street area. The style was common in the late 1800s and "contributes to the rapid movement of the fire once it starts," a fire official said after the June 6 blaze.

To combat this, Vernon officials — including Herbst, Fire Marshal Donald Maguda, Acting Fire Chief Robert Kelly, firefighter Anthony Patrizi, Health Inspector Gene Bolles and Vernon Police Chief

James Thomas — will begin looking into ways to educate the public on fire prevention.

Herbst said fire officials will prepare one or two pamphlets on fire prevention to be distributed by members of Welcome Wagon, a local organization that hands out informational materials to new residents in town.

Along with that, Maguda will continue a fire-prevention program in the local elementary schools in September, Herbst said. For adults, she said, Maguda and Kelly will formulate a plan to schedule four educational meetings in various parts of town between September and June 1987.

However, some Town Council members have indicated that further cuts in the $9 million town budget — rejected in a referendum last year — will likely affect the education budget. The council has to rework the budget before July 1, the beginning of the new fiscal year.

Republican Council member Michael Cleary has said he would like another mill worth of spending cut from the education budget. One mill in taxes equals $153.361.

But school board member Richard Ashley said additional revenue could possibly come from the state and ease the local situation.

"We may not sustain additional cuts in view of the (state) revenue picture," he said.

Democratic council members said earlier this week that Coventry might receive $55,000 under Gov. O'Neill's proposal to distribute state surplus funds to towns and cities.

Coventry's education budget includes a 10.25 across-the-board salary increase for teachers. The town's teachers, however, are now among the lowest-paid in the state. Starting salaries are about $13,000, nowhere near the $20,000 suggested by state legislators in their newly adopted education bill.

Coventry school board frets over cuts

By Jacqueline Bennett

COVENTRY — Concern over staffing reductions continues to mount among members of the Board of Education.

At a school board meeting Thursday night, member Lawrence Mickel argued for the restoration of a fifth-grade teaching position that was cut for budgetary reasons.

"I don't know by what means we can do it, but I'd like to see it done," he said. The size of some classes has escalated as a result of the elimination of some teaching positions, officials said.

It was a conversation between Mickel and Town Council member Patrick Flaherty that prompted the council to slash $100,000 from the proposed $6 million Board of Education budget in April. Flaherty said at the time he had been told the budget could handle an $85,000 cut, but that the other $15,000 was a "gamble."

The fifth-grade position was eliminated when the $100,000 was cut. This year, a total of four and a half teaching positions have been eliminated, two of them for budgetary reasons. Prior to the council's action, a seventh-grade teaching position at Nathan Hale was cut. At the time, Edmund Steinfeld, chairman of the Education Association of Coventry, protested the loss and charged that it could have a negative impact on the quality of education.

At a public hearing on the proposed education budget in March, parents also complained about the loss of teachers. They voiced concerns that the students would be shortchanged if courses had to be eliminated because of staff cuts.

The board tried Thursday to juggle funds to come up with the money for the fifth-grade position. "But we still don't have a budget," said chairman Judy Halvorsen. She said any action this week would be premature and asked that the matter be postponed until the board's next meeting on June 26.

Both School Superintendent Nathan Chesler and Halvorsen have warned that further cuts in the education budget would be "devastating." To accommodate the $100,000 loss, the board has already reduced funding in areas such as instructional materials, special education transportation and fuel purchases, as well as the teaching positions. Chesler has warned that other staff and teaching positions are in jeopardy.

Special session is still on hold

By Mark A. Dupuis
United Press International

HARTFORD — A special legislative session was delayed again today when House and Senate leaders met behind closed doors in an attempt to end a boycott by Democratic lawmakers.

The House was scheduled to meet at 10 a.m., but that was put off because the chamber could not reach a quorum. Republican leaders said they hoped the session could begin early this afternoon.

Democrats and Republicans have little, if any, differences on the single bill on the agenda for the session, but Democrats say the session itself was called illegally and that cannot legally enact any legislation.

The session was called to make changes to the state's program for providing property tax relief to elderly homeowners and renters. Without the changes, many people will have their benefits reduced or eliminated.

With a series of bizarre twists marking the session, House Speaker R.E. Van Norstrand-R-Darien, said the bill has now become a secondary issue to the dispute over the legality of the session.

"I really believe this is larger than the question before us. I think the power of the General Assembly is at issue," Van Norstrand said, who has defended the legality of the session.

The dispute centers over a resolution adopted last week by the House and Senate to call the special session, which began Wednesday but has yet been unable to take any action.

The resolution passed the House by a majority of the number of lawmakers present for the vote, but not a majority of the chamber's 151 members, as Democrats claim is required.

The state attorney general's office has issued a legal opinion siding with the Democratic view, but Republican leaders have questioned the validity of any opinion from the executive branch agency.

In addition to the Democratic boycott, the session has been marred by a Democratic caucus. Wednesday evening, House Republicans voted to have state Capitol police "compel" missing Democrats to attend with another Democratic vote to end the session.

Van Norstrand and other Republicans said Stolzberg had no authority to call the House to order and a short time later called the House to order on their own and recessed the House to continue the session today.

Another strange twist came Thursday morning when House Minority Leader Irving J. Stolzberg, D-New Haven, took control of the House and along with another Democrat voted to end the session.

Van Norstrand and other Republicans said Stolzberg had no authority to call the House to order and a short time later called the House to order on their own and recessed the House to continue the session today.

Design One picked to design a survey

BOLTON — After interviewing representatives of two companies that submitted bids on a planned survey of town buildings, the Public Building Commission has decided to recommend the one that submitted the lowest bid.

"They had the lowest price," Chairman Michael Misarri said Thursday, explaining why Design Group One was chosen. "The price was paramount."

Misarri said that while proposals from six companies were running as high as $45,000, Design Group One submitted a bid of $7,500. The commission had narrowed the bids down from six to two, Misarri said, and the other contender, Storch Associates, submitted a bid of $9,000.

Misarri said that the commission will now submit its recommendation to the Board of Selectmen, which may decide to approve the bid at its next meeting.

The survey is the first step in plans by town officials to develop a preventive maintenance strategy for roofs, boilers and other parts of the nine town-owned buildings. The 1984-87 budget allocates $10,000 for the review.

Misarri will leave his PBC post at the end of June, also reported that construction on the firehouse is continuing on schedule, and plans call for a grand opening in late July.

Former Republican Town Chairman Curtis Smith said today that Wednesday night's defeat of State Central Committeeman Nathan Agostinelli for a post at the Republican state convention was a "democratic election and he lost."

After Agostinelli was defeated by Mary Willhide, Manchester's Republican registrar of voters, for a post on the rules committee at the convention, he said Willhide should resign as registrar if she wants to remain active in politics within the party.

Agostinelli also said Willhide has been ineffective as a registrar and that the registrar's office has become a "social club."

Some of those who did attend regarded Agostinelli's defeat as an insult to him. They included Vivian Ferguson and state Sen. Carl Zinsner, both of whom are Labriola backers, and Mark Johnson, Republican town chairman in Bolton, a backer of Julie Belaga of Westport for the GOP nomination.

Others elected Wednesday besides Willhide were Donald Kuehl, a Bozuto backer, for the permanent organization committee; Johnson for the credentials committee; and Nancy Owen of Glastonbury, uncommitted in the gubernatorial race, for the resolutions committee.

With that type of course and Thursday's punishing weather making scores average nearly 8 over par, Tway, fresh off last Sunday's Westchester Classic victory, entered today's second round a stroke ahead of Greg Norman. He led the money winner on a year's PGA Tour.

A hail dozen others, including former champion Tom Watson and South African Denis Watson, who tied for second in last year's Open, were two shots back after opening 72.

Play, delayed by an early afternoon rain suspension and hampered by heavily overcast skies, was halted for the day at 7:33 p.m. EDT. The 18 golfers still on the course at that time were to resume their opening rounds at 9 a.m. EDT. Leader among those 18 was Mark Calcavecchia, who was 3 over with two holes to play.

"It was, in general, a very difficult day," said Tway, who is in only his second year on the Tour but has already won more than a half million dollars. "It was just kind of a survival day. You could really blow yourself out of the tournament with conditions like this."

"I've played in conditions worse than these, but 80 degree weather, rain, and humidity are difficult in calm, 80 degree weather. It's an obviously difficult but fair golf course. But I wouldn't say the weather is fair."

Tway, who earlier in the year won the Andy Williams Open, was sitting in the interview tent when play was temporarily suspended because of flooded greens.

"I didn't think it could get any worse," he said. "But listening to the rain beating on the tent, I guess it is."

Norman came to the Open with the hottest hand, having posted two victories (Las Vegas Invitational and Kemper Open) and two seconds (Masters and Heritage) in the past two months.

Senators today were debating an amendment offered by Sens. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, and Robert Kasten, R-Wis., that would restore the deduction for charitable contributions for people who do not itemize their deductions.

The writeoff is due to expire at the end of the year, and the bill would not continue the deduction that was claimed on 25.5 million tax returns filed in 1984.

With that type of course and Thursday's punishing weather making scores average nearly 8 over par, Tway, fresh off last Sunday's Westchester Classic victory, entered today's second round a stroke ahead of Greg Norman. He led the money winner on a year's PGA Tour.

A hail dozen others, including former champion Tom Watson and South African Denis Watson, who tied for second in last year's Open, were two shots back after opening 72.

Play, delayed by an early afternoon rain suspension and hampered by heavily overcast skies, was halted for the day at 7:33 p.m. EDT. The 18 golfers still on the course at that time were to resume their opening rounds at 9 a.m. EDT. Leader among those 18 was Mark Calcavecchia, who was 3 over with two holes to play.

"It was, in general, a very difficult day," said Tway, who is in only his second year on the Tour but has already won more than a half million dollars. "It was just kind of a survival day. You could really blow yourself out of the tournament with conditions like this."

"I've played in conditions worse than these, but 80 degree weather, rain, and humidity are difficult in calm, 80 degree weather. It's an obviously difficult but fair golf course. But I wouldn't say the weather is fair."

Tway, who earlier in the year won the Andy Williams Open, was sitting in the interview tent when play was temporarily suspended because of flooded greens.

"I didn't think it could get any worse," he said. "But listening to the rain beating on the tent, I guess it is."

Norman came to the Open with the hottest hand, having posted two victories (Las Vegas Invitational and Kemper Open) and two seconds (Masters and Heritage) in the past two months.

Senators today were debating an amendment offered by Sens. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, and Robert Kasten, R-Wis., that would restore the deduction for charitable contributions for people who do not itemize their deductions.

The writeoff is due to expire at the end of the year, and the bill would not continue the deduction that was claimed on 25.5 million tax returns filed in 1984.

Most observers agree that Bozuto has a plurality of the delegate vote.

It has also been reported that the Republican leadership is considering a rule under which the convention would be closed after a fixed number of ballots, even if it has not endorsed a candidate. That would mean a statewide nominating primary without any candidate saving the advantage of party endorsement.

Smith said control of the rules committee is important not only to Bozuto but also to the other candidates.

There are 37 state convention delegates from the Fourth Senatorial District and 20 of them are Bozuto supporters, he said. Smith said that if they had decided to take all four committee positions filled Wednesday night, they could have done so. He said they concentrated instead on the most important one, the rules committee.

Smith did not attend the meeting Wednesday. He is an alternate delegate.

Open brought down in big chill

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. — Shinnecock Hills took no prisoners Thursday's opening round of the U.S. Open was played in gusty winds, rain and bone-chilling temperatures so none of the golfers were surprised that Bob Tway's even-par 70 was good enough to take the lead — the first time a first-round leader had failed to break par in the Open in 12 years.

Shinnecock Hills is a nearly 100-year-old course located on the eastern tip of Long Island and the site of the second-ever Open in 1896. It is similar to the British Open courses with its narrow fairways, knee-high rough and tiny greens.

"I've played in conditions worse than these, but 80 degree weather, rain, and humidity are difficult in calm, 80 degree weather. It's an obviously difficult but fair golf course. But I wouldn't say the weather is fair."

Cheney Tech is rained out

By United Press International

EAST HARTFORD — Cheney Tech's Class L state tournament semifinal baseball game with Bristol Eastern at Ray McKenna Field was postponed on Thursday, due to rain. The game is tentatively rescheduled for today at 3 p.m.

Cheney is 18-4, while Bristol Eastern stands at 15-8. The winner plays in the state championship contest against the winner of Bethel vs. East Lyme.

Yanks' Don Mattingly is congratulated by third base Gene Michael after boiling first-inning home Thursday night against the host Orioles.

Fisher threw well and Righttelli closed the door. Our pitching is better and it's going to get better."

New York took a 3-0 lead in the first. Rickey Henderson walked and scored on Mattingly's 12th homer of the year. Griffey's seventh homer of the year, a solo shot with two out, knocked out starter Ken Dixon.

Winfield helped protect the margin by robbing Lee Lacy of a two-run homer with a leaping catch over the right field fence in the fifth inning.

"It was three feet up on the fence and I jumped to ensure getting on top of the ball," Winfield said. "Defense allows you to do something like that, whatever it takes for us to win. That's a win for today and confidence for tomorrow."

Benitez led off the second with his first homer of the game, pulling Baltimore within 3-1. Henderson singled across two runs in the fourth for a 6-1 lead.

Benitez homered in the fourth run on today, making it 5-2. After Cal Ripken doubled to lead off the sixth, Murray homered, chasing starter Pulido. Benitez followed with his third homer of the night, fourth of the season, tying the score 5-5.

"It was one of those nights. I hit the ball good and it went out of the ballpark, but I was surprised. After all, I am a line drive hitter," Benitez said. "But we didn't win and I feel bad about that."

The only other Oriole to hit three homers in a game at Municipal Stadium was Bobby Grich, June 18, 1974, against Minnesota. Benitez fouled out to first in the seventh, and grounded out to short in the ninth.

Tway shows way

By Will Dunham
United Press International

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. — Bob Tway, likening himself to a rhinoceros, showed the way to a muddy track, made the best of miserable conditions in Thursday's opening round of the U.S. Open.

"I'm a mudder, as you would say," said a dumpy Tway who shot an even-par 70 at Shinnecock Hills Golf Club. "In the past on some bad days, I've shot some pretty good scores."

Tway, one of five golfers to have won two tournaments this year, patiently bled a steady rain and wind gusts close to 30 miles an hour.

"I think you have to have a lot of patience," he said. "You're going to make bogeys — hopefully you can make some birdies to counter it, but when things aren't going to turn out good, you just have to have a lot of patience and just keep trying."

Tway, one of the rising stars of the PGA Tour, has done more than just try in 1986. Coming off his one-stroke victory over former Oklahoma State teammate Tom Wood in last week's Westchester Classic, Tway finds himself third on the PGA money list, with $941,418 behind Jim Greg Norman and Andy Bean.

Tway was 2-under after a 25-foot birdie putt on No. 12 bogeyed a 4 and 15 and made three fifty saves on the final three holes to save par for the sixth time in April. He birdied the third, eighth, 11th and 12th holes, while bogeying the fourth, ninth, 14th and 15th.

"I think anytime you're playing well, you get more confidence and it next week," he said. "That helped me today. I had confidence in the way I was playing and I had a few good things happen. I made some long putts and I made some good saves, hit a lot of good shots and was just able to shoot a good score."

With a handful of golfers shooting in the 80s, Tway's round looks all the better.

"It's hard to compare it to a normal day," he said. "Today's just kind of a survival day. I think if you shot in the mid-70s, you're still going to be in the hunt."

Henderson scored an insurance run on Winfield's single in the ninth inning after stealing third base for the seventh time this season. Henderson led the American League with 39 stolen bases.

The Orioles struck out seven and allowed only four hits in five innings. The winner, Brian Fisher, 2-2, was relieved. Dave Righttelli finished for his 14th save. Tippy Martinez, 1-1, took the loss.

"Pulido did a good job and kept us in the ball game," Finiella said.

Salter's is full of fish after politician's push

The state has stocked Salter's Pond with fish for the first time since 1978 at the request of state Rep. James McAvanagh, D-Manchester.

McAvanagh said rainbow and brook trout were put in the pond off Lydall Street.

McAvanagh said he arranged for the stocking last year after persuading the state Department of Environmental Protection that the pond — now owned by the Manchester Land Conservation Trust — is open to public fishing.

The state discontinued the stocking after 1978. McAvanagh said, because officials felt the pond was not open to the public for fishing. The former owners, Lydall Inc., restricted fishing to children and senior citizens.

In 1980, Lydall donated the pond to the land trust.

McAvanagh said he checked with Malcolm Barlow, legal counsel for the trust, who told him the pond is open to the public.

McAvanagh said he is trying to Raffin said she attended East Catholic because many of her friends and family did. "All my brothers and sisters went there. It's a family place," she said.

Christa Larson said she remembered being a little afraid during freshmen orientation, when a speaker of her classmates was "initiated" to the school by upper classesmen.

Larson — who plans to study art at Simmons College in Boston — said back then, she never thought she would make it to graduation. Thursday night she was excited, but said she was also a little afraid of the future.

"God has a lot of surprises in store for you," the Rev. Joseph T. Devine told the graduating class during his address. Some of the surprises, Devine said, "will blow your mind."

After the commencement ended and the post-ceremonial congratulations had been given and received, the graduates filed out of the church with their high school careers behind them.

Cubs decide it's time for a change, fire Frey

By Randy Minkoff
United Press International

CHICAGO — Jim Frey, Bobby Wine, Bill Virdon and Bob Lillis are among the experienced baseball people available to replace Jim Frey as manager of the Chicago Cubs.

Frederick Green said of the Cubs' National League East title during a news conference at Wrigley Field. "But we had to make a change on the field. Whatever Jim Frey was doing wasn't getting results."

In his place, first base coach John Vuckovich will serve as interim manager for today's doubleheader with the St. Louis Cardinals. Third base coach Don Zimmer, a close friend of Frey's, was also dismissed in the shakeup of a club that was in fifth place, 23-33, and a distant 16 1/2 games behind the front-running New York Mets.

"We hate to lose Jimmy and Jim but we're going to get ourselves ready to play a doubleheader," said Vuckovich, a former major league utility infielder.

Speculation on who Frey's successor would be began from the time Green announced the firing after a brief meeting Thursday morning. (Green said he actually decided to make the change after Tuesday night's loss at Pittsburgh.)

Frey, manager of St. Louis' triple-A team in Louisville, Wine, the former Philadelphia coach, Lillis, the former Houston manager, and Virdon, who has managed Pittsburgh, the Yankees, Houston and Montreal, were mentioned as possible successors.

Wills drills Page

By United Press International

LOS ANGELES — Mark Wills defeated Greg Page in a slugfest Thursday night when the former World Boxing Association heavy-weight champion failed to answer the bell for the 10th round.

Wills, of Van Nuys, Calif., floored Page in the first and ninth rounds with left hooks. Page held on for the remainder of the ninth but was unable to come out for the final round.

"It was all my fault, I was clowning around," said Page, who weighed in at 242 pounds.

Page, of Louisville, sent Wills to the canvas in the second round with a left hook, but was behind on all three scorecards when the fight ended. His record fell to 25-7 with 20 knockouts.

Page, once billed as a young Muhammad Ali, has spent the last few months battling a weight problem. He won the WBA title on Dec. 1, 1984, when he defeated Gerry Coetzee, but lost the crown on a unanimous decision to Tony Tubbs last April 22.

Wills, 221 pounds, improved to 9-5 with eight knockouts.

The fight, held at the Forum before a crowd of 4,550, was part of the Strahl's Heavyweight Boxing tournament. Wills advanced to the semifinals to meet Jerry Halstead, who earlier defeated Steve Eisenbarth.

Leonard may get his wish

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Sugar Ray Leonard is hopeful that Marvellous Marvin Hagler's trainer is serious about a Hagler-Leonard bout in 1986.

Saying he hopes the report is true, Leonard said, "We've yet to hear anything from Hagler or his people."

"The way we left it, we had to hear from them to get the ball rolling."

Goody Petronelli, the trainer for the middleweight champion, told the Washington Post on Thursday that such a matchup was "a reality, no question about it" and that the two would meet before the end of the year.

"It will come off, title or not," the Post quoted Petronelli as saying. "It's possible that the fight of the century. It's going to happen this fall."

Leonard said he was caught off guard by Petronelli's remarks. Leonard had said on Wednesday he thought Hagler was going to fight Thomas Hearns as his next opponent. "I'm not going to wait that much longer," Leonard had said.

Leonard issued his challenge to the middleweight champ May 1.

FOCUS/Weekend

FRIDAY THE 13TH

Here are 13 tips for the 13th

1. It's Friday the 13th. Has anything weird and awful happened to you yet? For more than 1,000 years, people have considered this day to be a doubly unlucky one. First, the number 13 was considered by numerologists and fortune tellers to be a very powerful evil number. This belief goes back thousands of years, but it was reinforced by the fact that there were 13 people who sat down together at the Last Supper, say encyclopedias of superstition such as "Man, Myth and Magic."
2. Friday came to be considered an unlucky day in the Western Hemisphere for a similar reason, says Mark Jordan, the new curator of education at the Latin Children's Museum. He taught a class on Friday the 13th and other superstitions on June 3.
3. When you really talk with people, I mean normal adults, you find that they have an unlucky number and a best number. They may claim not to be superstitious, but they've got a golf shirt that they always wear or some lucky token that they always carry." Jordan said.
4. To ensure a truly awful day, one might break a mirror on Friday the 13th. Breaking a mirror was considered to be bad luck because a mirror showed a reflection of one's face — and therefore, the soul, Jordan said.
5. Hungry for a little heartburn? At Jasper's Tex Mex Cafe, Friday is all-you-can-eat buffet night, and there's a '50s and '60s dance from 8 p.m. until 2 a.m. By that time, it'll be Saturday the 14th, and you'll be safe, right? The club's at 22 Union Place in Hartford.
6. If all this talk about spooky happenings reminds you of Halloween, you're not alone. The Club at BTHII, 80 Towline Road, Rocky Hill, is sponsoring a summertime Halloween Party tonight, with $250 in cash for the person who shows up in the best costume. Oldies music and nickel hot dogs from 5 to 8 p.m. and follow it up with an evening of dancing starting at 9. The whole evening will cost you $5.
7. Some would prefer to take off their costumes. Mirage a dance club at 886 Washington St., Middletown, is featuring a show called "The Men of the Playboy Channel," starring Marty Brown from the soap opera Another World. The gentlemen in question wear the traditional collars and cuffs of Playboy bunnies — and only a bit more. Shows run from 8 to 10:30 p.m.
8. Like to check out a few cheap films? You can terrific flicks for just 39 cents. Steven Spielberg's "Money Pit" and Danny DeVito's "Wise Guys" are at the UA Hartford. Insurance Group, 699 Asylum Ave. You can pay for your $12 tickets at the door, but call 528-2143 to make a reservation. Let's hope they don't break a leg.
9. What spot could be better for "happy ever aftering" than "Carolee"? You can catch a show tonight at Coachlight Dinner Theater in East Windsor. Doors open at 6:30 and dinner is served at 7. The show will begin at 8:30, transporting you far beyond the reach of any bad luck. But your escape will cost $24.95.
10. Got itchy feet? There's a singles dance at Marc Antony's, 1000 Wethersfield Ave., Hartford, from 8:30 p.m. until 2 a.m. Sponsored by Singles' Alternative, the club announces that "proper dress is required."
11. But you say you can't dance? Then head for the U.S. Dance Club, 38 New Britain Ave., Rocky Hill. There you can take a lesson in ballroom and disco dancing at 8, and follow it up with an evening of dancing starting at 9. The whole evening will cost you $5.
12. You'd prefer to sit this one out? Then ask yourself this question: "Is There Life After High School?" That's the title of the show put on tonight by Cigna Theatre at the Cigna Corp.'s Wilde Building, 900 Cottage Grove Road, Bloomfield. Tickets are $6 general, $4 senior citizens.
13. Want to watch someone else singing, dancing and roller skating all at once? Then catch the last weekend of The Producing Guild's current hit, "The Rink." Shows are tonight and Saturday at 8:30 at the Wallace Stevens Theatre, Hartford. Insurance Group, 699 Asylum Ave. You can pay for your $12 tickets at the door, but call 528-2143 to make a reservation. Let's hope they don't break a leg.

Versatile comedian

George Carlin ready to try his hand at acting

By Jerry Buck
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Comedian George Carlin waited a long time to become an actor, but he's quickly nailed down roles in a special for Home Box Office and in a movie in production.

Carlin plays a private eye named Mark Holder in a miniature film noir that wraps around the HBO special, which debuts Saturday.

And he's burned-out hippie who tuned out in the 1960s in the Disney comedy spy thriller "Outrageous Fortune," now filming in Los Angeles.

"This is important for me because I held my acting ambitions in check because I had some bad experiences with trying to do some acting in the 1960s and '70s," he said. "Acting is something I've always wanted to do since childhood."

"I didn't feel confident before. Now I've worked past most of those internal blocks. I'm free now to pursue this deferred goal. The main kickoff to show people, the public and people in this business that I'm ready is 'Outrageous Fortune.' But my special is another step in that direction."

Carlin stars in his sixth original special for HBO, "On Location: George Carlin in Concert — Playin' With Your Head." The difference this time is that the special includes a short film, done in black and white like a 1940s detective movie, called "The Envelope." In it private eye Mike Holder is trying desperately to evade hoodlums who want the envelope he holds.

The minivan sets the tone and introduces themes and characters for the standup performance that follows.

Carlin, who previously appeared regularly on commercial television, took his act to cable television in 1978.

"I went to cable for two reasons — for the freedom in language and subject matter and the freedom from commercials," he said. "You rarely see a standup comic on the networks any more. There's just too much interference. On cable you get no interference and no second guessing."

"I have great freedom in the use of language... I use language the way a playwright does, to enhance the impact of certain thoughts. A long time ago I decided I didn't want to preclude my use of language. Having come from a street background, I felt comfortable with that language. I don't think it's healthy to restrict yourself."

Carlin said many of his routines don't require strong language, but he still wants to know he has the freedom if he needs it.

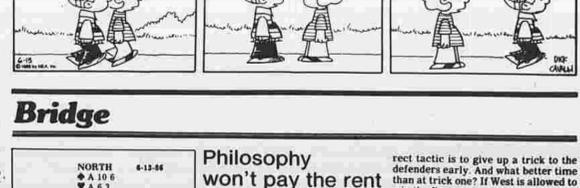

It was during the years on commercial television that Carlin became widely known for two characters, Al Pouch, the Hippy-Dippy Mailman, and Al Siebert, the Hippy-Dippy Weatherman.

Carlin, 49, grew up in Manhattan and served in the U.S. Air Force.

Carlin makes about 100 appearances a year, including dates in Las Vegas and Atlantic City. He also has a new album coming out, called "Playin' With Your Head."

Philosophy won't pay the rent
By James Jacoby

South liked to wax philosophical as he played. "Ace were meant to take kings," he remarked, as he won the opening lead with dummy's spade ace. He then carefully played four rounds of clubs while discarding a spade, next played the three high hearts, and finally the A-K-Q of diamonds. Alas, because West had started with four diamonds to the jack, the contract failed. Declarer had a saying for this too: "Just my luck to be playing this hand on Friday the 13th, when suits don't split."

North was not so stoical. "My bad luck on this hand was in letting you be declarer," and he was right. On a deal where declarer needs 12 tricks and there are no finesses to be taken, he should first count his sure tricks. Here there are only 11. In that case, the correct tactic is to give up a trick to the defenders early. And what better time than at trick one? If West is allowed to win the first trick, he will continue the suit to dummy's spade ace. Then come four rounds of clubs (South discarding a spade), followed by three rounds of hearts ending in dummy. Since every heart is down to four cards, West will either throw away his high spade, making the 10 in dummy good, or have let a diamond go from four to the jack. Either way, declarer collects his slam bonus and can save his philosophy for the Great Books class.

New Zealand, composed of North Island and South Island and other smaller islands, has an area of 163,736 square miles — about the size of the state of Colorado. Connecticut In Brief

Labor market poses challenge

BRIDGEPORT — The biggest educational challenge Connecticut faces will be meeting the demands of an expanding labor market, according to Jeremiah Lowney, the chairman of the Board of Governors for Higher Education.

The labor force in Connecticut will be far below the state's demand for workers, Lowney said at a Thursday meeting of the Board of Governors at the University of Bridgeport.

How Connecticut's higher education system can meet the labor demand will be addressed in a report by the governors' board to be released Tuesday, Lowney said. The plan for higher education will call for more cooperation between the public and private sectors as well as better training to meet the demands of businesses, he said.

Other suggestions that will be included in the report are more cooperative education programs, increased responsiveness to small businesses and job training for displaced workers at technical colleges, Lowney said.

Governor vetoes two measures

HARTFORD — Gov. William A. O'Neill has vetoed two bills, one from the regular 1986 legislative session and one from the special session that concluded last week, O'Neill's office said.

The governor vetoed the bills Wednesday, his office announced on Thursday.

O'Neill said that the first measure would have allowed employers to require prospective employees to sign what amounts to an "employment promissory note," which would require the employee to pay the employer a specified sum if he quits before a stated period of time.

Such notes are already prohibited under state law.

The governor's veto of that bill completed action on the 493 bills passed during the regular 1986 session. He signed 488 bills and vetoed five.

O'Neill also vetoed a special session bill authorizing the construction of a grade crossing in Sprague as a result of the temporary closing of the Shattuck River Bridge. The grade crossing was to be used by emergency vehicles to reach the section of Sprague that was effectively isolated by the bridge's closing.

O'Neill said the matter was already being handled by the Department of Transportation and the bill was unnecessary.

Waterbury warrant 'first step'

WATERBURY — A state prosecutor has named the suspect wanted in connection with alleged voter fraud in Waterbury's Democratic delegate primary, but has refused to say if the man was involved with any campaign.

Jose Antonio Vargas, 30, of Waterbury was named in the warrant issued in connection with the investigation of fraud in Waterbury's May 20 primary, but the warrant had not been served, State Attorney John A. Connelly said Thursday.

Connelly said the warrant issued earlier this week is "only the first step" in a probe by his office into allegations of absent ballot fraud in the delegate primary between Gov. William A. O'Neill and challenger Toby Moffett.

Connelly initiated the investigation into the primary after The Hartford Courant reported in a copyright story that the primary was marred by fraud, including at least one case where a dead man was recorded as having voted.

O'Neill was declared the winner of the crucial primary by a 49-vote margin over Moffett, giving the governor all of the city's 49 delegates to the July Democratic state nominating convention.

Sales tax revenues up in April

HARTFORD — Connecticut experienced a bonus in sales tax collections during April because of lower oil prices and other positive economic factors, a budget official says.

The state collected $172 million in taxes on April sales, or $3.8 million more than officials had been expecting, Edward Balda, chief of revenue and economic forecasting in the Office of Policy and Management, said Thursday.

He said the April figures, when adjusted to reflect economic growth, showed a 16.8 percent increase over the same month a year ago. Budget officials had predicted a 13.4 percent growth rate.

"It's doing better than we expected," said Balda, who attributed the stronger than expected showing to lower oil prices, interest rates, inflation and unemployment.

Health union ready to strike Institute

HARTFORD (UPI) — Unionized workers at a third Connecticut health care facility have announced a strike deadline as employees of the nation's largest private psychiatric hospital threatened to walk off the job this weekend.

The union covering about 285 psychiatric technicians and licensed practical nurses at The Institute of Living said they would go on strike at 6 a.m. Sunday unless a new agreement is reached, union spokesman Bill Meyerson said Thursday.

Meanwhile, no new talks were planned before Monday in the Waterbury Hospital employees who were thrown out of work last month when the hospital closed down because of the threatened strike by the 1,100 unionized workers.

Peraro is expected to rule next week on the "very complicated issue" of whether unionized workers who were also laid off in anticipation of their own strike deadline are also entitled to benefits, said spokesman Richard C. Ficks.

The hospital, which asked the Labor Department to expedite its ruling on the two issues, has argued against any unionized workers getting unemployment benefits, Bulat said.

Truck group calls for better enforcement

WEST HARTFORD (AP) — A spokesman for the Connecticut Motor Transport Association is calling for increased enforcement of trucking laws by state police after three trucking accidents occurred on a dangerous stretch of Interstate 84 within 10 days.

John McLeod said the curve where the wrecks have occurred is on a narrow stretch following a wide-open area near the Corbin's Corner shopping malls.

"We know it's not properly designed," McLeod said, noting that there is an exit on the left followed by successive entrance ramps on the right and left "all in the space of this curved area."

Trooper Jim Barnes said driver Timothy E. Finck, 30, of Sunbury, Pa., died in the accident in the eastbound lanes near the Park Road exit shortly after 5 a.m.

It was the third truck accident in 10 days in the same area of the highway, according to state police. Neither of the previous two crashes was fatal.

Finck was hauling a load of concrete reinforcing steel bars from the Milton Manufacturing Co. of Milton, Pa., to a construction job in the Hartford area, according to Fred W. Cornell, chairman of the

Consultant suggests wider antitrust probe

By Dean Golembek
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — A computer analysis company has recommended that the Connecticut attorney general's office expand its investigation into possible antitrust violations by the state's road paving contractors.

Management Technology Data Systems Inc. of Alton, Mass., won a $46,000 contract last year to analyze paving contract bids from a five-year period for possible evidence of collusion.

The analysis was sought while the federal government conducted its own investigation into highway paving contracts. The federal government contends that companies split up paving contracts on a geographic basis.

Dr. Jeffrey Osleeb, who heads MTD's, said Thursday his company recommended the attorney general's office broaden its investigation. But he said the recommendation does not mean his company found solid evidence of any crime.

"The report is merely an initial investigation. I don't think anyone would want to make any hasty decisions based on that alone," Osleeb said in a telephone interview. "It wouldn't be fair to anyone."

Osleeb said one problem with the analysis is that it is based only on a review of contracts from a five-year period. He said the contracts ran from the late 1970s to the early 1980s.

He said the attorney general's office has to decide whether it wants "to do any real investigative work" based on his findings.

Robert M. Langer, who heads the attorney general's antitrust unit, refused to comment on the MTD report. He also refused to say if an investigation is under way.

A copy of the report also was given to Transportation Commissioner J. William Burns and other officials. Burns had no comment on the report, saying "antitrust isn't my bailiwick."

DOT officials were given a copy of the report because they, along with the attorney general's office, contracted MTD's.

The Associated Press has filed a complaint with the Freedom of Information Commission seeking a copy of the MTD report. The attorney general's office has argued against disclosure, citing protection under the state's anti-trust and trade secrets laws. The FOI Commission has not decided the case.

Docs withhold non-emergency care

TORONTO — Organizers predicted a strike by thousands of doctors in the province of Ontario would grow today and "snowball" by Monday as physicians withdraw non-emergency care to protest government plans to limit their fees.

Hospital officials expressed fears over doctors' threats to shut down emergency wards in their escalating dispute with the Ontario government over legislation to punish physicians who charge patients more than set fees.

Doctors in Canada's most populous province began the strike Thursday.

The Ontario Medical Association said it did not know how many of its 15,000 member physicians canceled all but emergency care, but it did dispute several polls indicating about half the doctors were on strike.

Abortion protesters arrested

DENVER — Anti-abortion protesters today tried to block the door of a Planned Parenthood abortion clinic today to "stop these babies from being killed." Twenty protesters were arrested and a policeman was pushed through a glass door, authorities said.

The disturbance came on the second day of the National Right to Life Committee's annual convention, which is being held in a hotel six blocks from the National Organization for Women convention.

Police spokesman Pete Lombard said most of the anti-abortion protesters were taken to court, instead of jail, to be charged with trespassing and creating a disturbance. One man was jailed for resisting arrest.

Administration considers leak law

WASHINGTON — Three Commerce Department employees will be fired and security of sensitive economic data will be tightened following an inquiry that could lead to the outlawing of leaks of potentially valuable information.

The dismissals, announced Thursday by Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige, concluded a nine-month investigation by the department's inspector general, the FBI and the Securities and Exchange Commission into a leak in September 1985 of gross national product figures for the second quarter of 1985.

The three employees worked in the Bureau of Economic Analysis, which is responsible for preparing reports on the GNP, the leading financial indicators and other sensitive data, Baldrige said.

NASA says booster test impractical

WASHINGTON — NASA has vowed to meet all the recommendations of the Rogers Commission, but vertical test firing of redesigned shuttle booster rockets poses an engineering challenge that may be impractical to meet, officials say.

South Africa calm in wake of order

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — South Africa appeared calm today following President Pieter Botha's declaration of a second state of emergency in a year and the detention by police of up to 2,000 anti-apartheid dissidents around the country, detaining more than 1,000 trade unionists, clergymen, civil rights activists and political leaders.

The nationwide emergency declared Thursday gave police sweeping powers to detain people without charge, imposed severe restrictions on media coverage of black political violence and prohibited calls for economic sanctions.

The streets of the major cities were quiet and apparently normal and there were no reports of disturbances in any of the country's black townships.

Police appeared to have stepped up patrols in the streets of Cape Town, but there was no apparent increase in police vigilance in Johannesburg or Pretoria.

2nd infant heart recipient 'doing well'

By Linda Wopar
United Press International

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Baby Calvin — ruled unsuitable for a heart that went to Baby Jesse in California earlier this week — received a new heart today in a six-hour operation and was reported "doing well."

Doctors worked overnight to implant the donor heart into 22-day-old Calvin, whose urgent need for a transplant came to light amid publicity about the Baby procedure and respond to questions "at a news conference this morning," he said.

Baby Calvin, who was born May 21, had waited about a week longer for a transplant than Baby Jesse, who was born May 25 and got his new heart Tuesday. Jesse's doctors denied that Calvin had been "passed over" arbitrarily for a new heart, saying the first one located was better suited for Jesse.

Calvin was born with hypoplastic left heart syndrome and was 11 days old when a plea for a donor

Reagan ends confusion, says treaty dead

By Helen Thomas
United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Reagan says the SALT 2 nuclear arms treaty is dead and has indicated that any restraints put on the U.S. weapons buildup will depend on Soviet actions.

Reporters asked Reagan pointed questions Thursday about his stance on SALT 2, after a series of ambiguous statements from administration officials and Reagan's own remarks at his Wednesday night news conference confused the issue.

Reagan may be asked to explain his reasons for scrapping the unrattified 1979 treaty when he hosts a luncheon for regional reporters today.

Thursday he endorsed remarks by chief White House spokesman Larry Speakes, who said the agreement is finished as a foundation for arms control.

The SALT treaty limits no longer exist, Speakes announced. "If we take future actions in the area of arms control, it would be for reasons other than the SALT agreement."

Reagan later told reporters, "I think you can trust what Larry Speakes told you."

However, Reagan hedged when asked whether the United States would surpass the SALT 2 limits later this year.

"Anyone going into negotiations, I think, has a right to remain silent, so that nothing could be used against him," he said. "We're trying to replace it with a better deal."

In the past several weeks, he has claimed a pattern of Soviet violations forced him to declare the treaty finished as a foundation for arms control.

AIDS forecast: 179,000 deaths in 5 years

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A special task force is predicting a dramatic increase in AIDS cases — a cumulative 270,000 cases by 1991 with 179,000 deaths — and calling for creation of a national commission to head the fight against the disease.

The anticipated AIDS death toll for 1991 is 54,000, more than annual auto deaths. The government's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration reported this week there were 43,800 traffic deaths in 1985 and 44,257 in 1984.

"I think the numbers speak for themselves," Dr. Donald Ian MacDonald, acting assistant secretary for health in the Department of Health and Human Services, told a news conference Thursday. "It's a huge problem."

MacDonald was one of 85 participants in a conference in West Virginia last week that issued a report updating the government's 1985 plan to control and prevent the spread of acquired immune deficiency syndrome by the end of the century.

The participants called for a national commission representing public, private and voluntary sectors to coordinate fund-raising, education and other anti-AIDS efforts, but did not decide who should set up the commission, he said.

"We estimate that in 1991 the medical care of AIDS patients will require between $8 billion and $16 billion," MacDonald said.

AIDS virus may trigger defenses

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Scientists have found that once someone is infected with one of the many forms of the AIDS virus, they become resistant to other types in which could help in the development of treatment and vaccine against the deadly disease.

Once inside a person, the AIDS virus evolves into many variations, all apparently bearing a sort of genetic "fingerprint" that differs from patient to patient, the scientists said.

"It has tremendous implications," said Dr. Beatrice Hahn, a research assistant professor in medicine and microbiology at the University of Alabama and a principal investigator in the study.

In a telephone interview Thursday, she said the study "does open a new (research) path in the respect that more information is available now. It will provide a more rational approach to development of treatments and a vaccine against the AIDS virus."

Hahn is co-author of a report on the study appearing in the journal Science, along with other scientists from the University of Alabama, Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington, the National Cancer Institute and the University of Miami.

Cases linked to heterosexual contact are expected to increase from 7 percent to 9 percent of new cases by 1991, but the major risk groups — homosexual men and intravenous drug abusers — will not change, the scientists said.

Thoughts

Ministers do pastoral counseling. That is different from therapy that psychologists do, because while psychologists are to remain for the most part, objective, though caring, ministers, priests or rabbis are to be with and for people, often at a deep level.

One thing that I have noticed over the years, however, is that people tend more and more in these days to "psychologize" religion. There are rows of books that take something that has been a part of human nature for all our recorded history, and act as if it had just been invented by the self-help writer.

Lack of statements spells trouble

Investors' Guide

William A. Doyle

QUESTION: In August 1984, I was duped into putting $2,150 into what I was led to believe was a high-interest savings account. As it turned out, I had invested in shares of a "capital appreciation" mutual fund. I have received only one statement, dated Oct. 3, 1984.

the value of your shares had to rise 9.3 percent for you to get even. Given the fund's lackluster performance, you probably reached the break-even point in 1985.

ANSWER: The value of an investment in the mutual fund you named in your letter declined a bit during the latter part of 1984, rose 16.7 percent in 1985 and is up about 11 percent so far this year. Its investment performance has not been as good as most other mutual funds.

Are you certain you have received only one statement? If so, there is something very wrong. You should have received a statement confirming your purchase. You should receive statements when that fund declares dividends and capital gains distributions, whether you take those payments by check or reinvest them to pay additional shares.

OSHA orders tougher asbestos limits
By Mott Yancy / The Associated Press
WASHINGTON — The Occupational Safety and Health Administration is ordering a tenfold reduction in the amount of asbestos that 2 million workers can be exposed to on the job, according to government officials.

OSHA officials have estimated that 1 million construction workers risk cancer-causing exposure to asbestos, primarily in renovating and demolishing buildings where the material was used for insulation. For example, the EPA has begun a program to rip asbestos out of thousands of schools around the country.

If, indeed, these things have never arrived, you should contact the brokerage firm or sales organization through which you made the purchase. And write or telephone the mutual fund to learn the current status of your investments. You'll find the address and phone numbers of mutual funds in manuals at big public libraries.

QUESTION: In June 1985, I signed a "letter of intention" to purchase $50,000 worth of shares in a mutual fund. I made five $10,000 payments, the final one on Oct. 17. I was entitled to 4,075 shares, but I have received certificates for only 3,843 shares.

ANSWER: Sure. The vast majority of mutual fund investors never take possession of certificates for their shares. The shares are held by each fund's custodian bank.

Clouded session closes

Tax bill passes; ruling is sought

HARTFORD (UPI) - Republican lawmakers wound up a special legislative session on tax relief for the elderly Friday, but Gov. William A. O'Neill said he will ask the courts to determine if the House members showed up Friday to pass the bill 76-0 and send it to the Senate, where it passed 21-0.

O'Neill, however, announced a short time after the session ended that he will ask the state attorney general's office to go to court Monday seeking a ruling on whether the session was legally called.

The Democratic governor stressed that he supports the bill, but is concerned that the Legislature's Republican majority may have convened the special session in violation of the state constitution.

"We will have a resolution as to whether this action was or was not constitutional," O'Neill said, adding that he will ask for a court ruling as soon as possible.

O'Neill said he will try to get the case to the state Supreme Court as soon as possible and hopes for a final ruling by his next decision whether to sign the bill.

O'Neill had strongly hinted earlier this week that he might veto the bill because of concerns over the constitutionality of the special session.

"All of us are for tax relief for the elderly," the governor said, adding that he believes the Republican lawmakers "made a mistake" in the way they called the special session.

Except for one member to watch over the proceedings in each chamber, minority Democrats boycotted the special session.
