Thoughts

Paul's Prayer for Power

As His precious treasure we are led to see that it is not our worthiness but His redeeming grace and choice that underlies our expectations for power. Paul says in Ephesians 1:19: "...what is the exceeding greatness of His power to us-ward who believe." Paul is praying for something to "energize" us for Holy living. This is where the possibilities of our hopes become more than a dream but can be brought into reality. So much of our spiritual ineffectiveness, carnal defeats and fruitlessness is the failure of the spiritual eyes of our hearts to see and claim the spiritual power for victorious living.

In Romans 8:31: "What shall we then say to these things? If God be for us who can be against us?" The "If" that the writer emphasizes is not a question but an exclamation. God is for us, "He that spared not His own Son but delivered Him up for us all, how shall he not with Him also freely give us all things?" Paul is really saying that when life crowds us to the point of doubt and unbelievability that we need to simply bow our knees and look back to Calvary. Not only doubt but the tempter himself takes flight at the sight of the precious blood of our Lord Jesus Christ. Yet beyond His death and shed blood, it is the immeasurable power of His resurrection that enables us to live a new life in Him.

Our prayer is for "re-creative" power.

Gunmen free two hostages

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Moslem gunmen of the underground Revolutionary Justice Organization freed two of four French hostages late Friday on a darkened street near a waterfront hotel.

The two hostages, Phillip Rochel and George Hansen, walked toward the Hotel Beauvillage on the beach-front promenade in west Beirut after the gunmen dropped the two television newsmen off.

The release came at the end of a day of false starts and rumors that led at one time to a wild chase through the streets of Moleim West Beirut between French Embassy cars, a car of gunmen and journalists tailing behind.

The Revolutionary Justice Organization, a heretofore unknown underground group, announced early Friday the release would take place in 24 hours because it said France had changed its Middle East policies.

"We announce the release of two of the French hostages in the hope that France will take this opportunity to further correct its policies so that the rest of its hostages will also be released," the statement said.

Four members of the French television crew were abducted March 8 when returning from the rally of the Moslem Shiite fundamentalist Hezbollah movement in Beirut's southern suburbs.

The remaining hostages are Aurel Cornea, 54, and Jean-Louis Normandin, 34.

The Revolutionary Justice Organization told the An Nahar newspaper that it was releasing two of the four hostages because France had changed its policies in the Middle East.

The group said the decision was made after the intervention and mediation of Syrian President Hafez Assad, as well as the government of Algeria and officials from the pro-Iranian Hezbollah, or Party of God.

The morning began with a wild car chase between gunmen, French Embassy vehicles and journalists when a Lebanese newsmen said his saw "two Westerners" get out of a car filled with gunmen and enter the French Embassy in Moleim West Beirut. The car then drove toward Christian East Beirut.

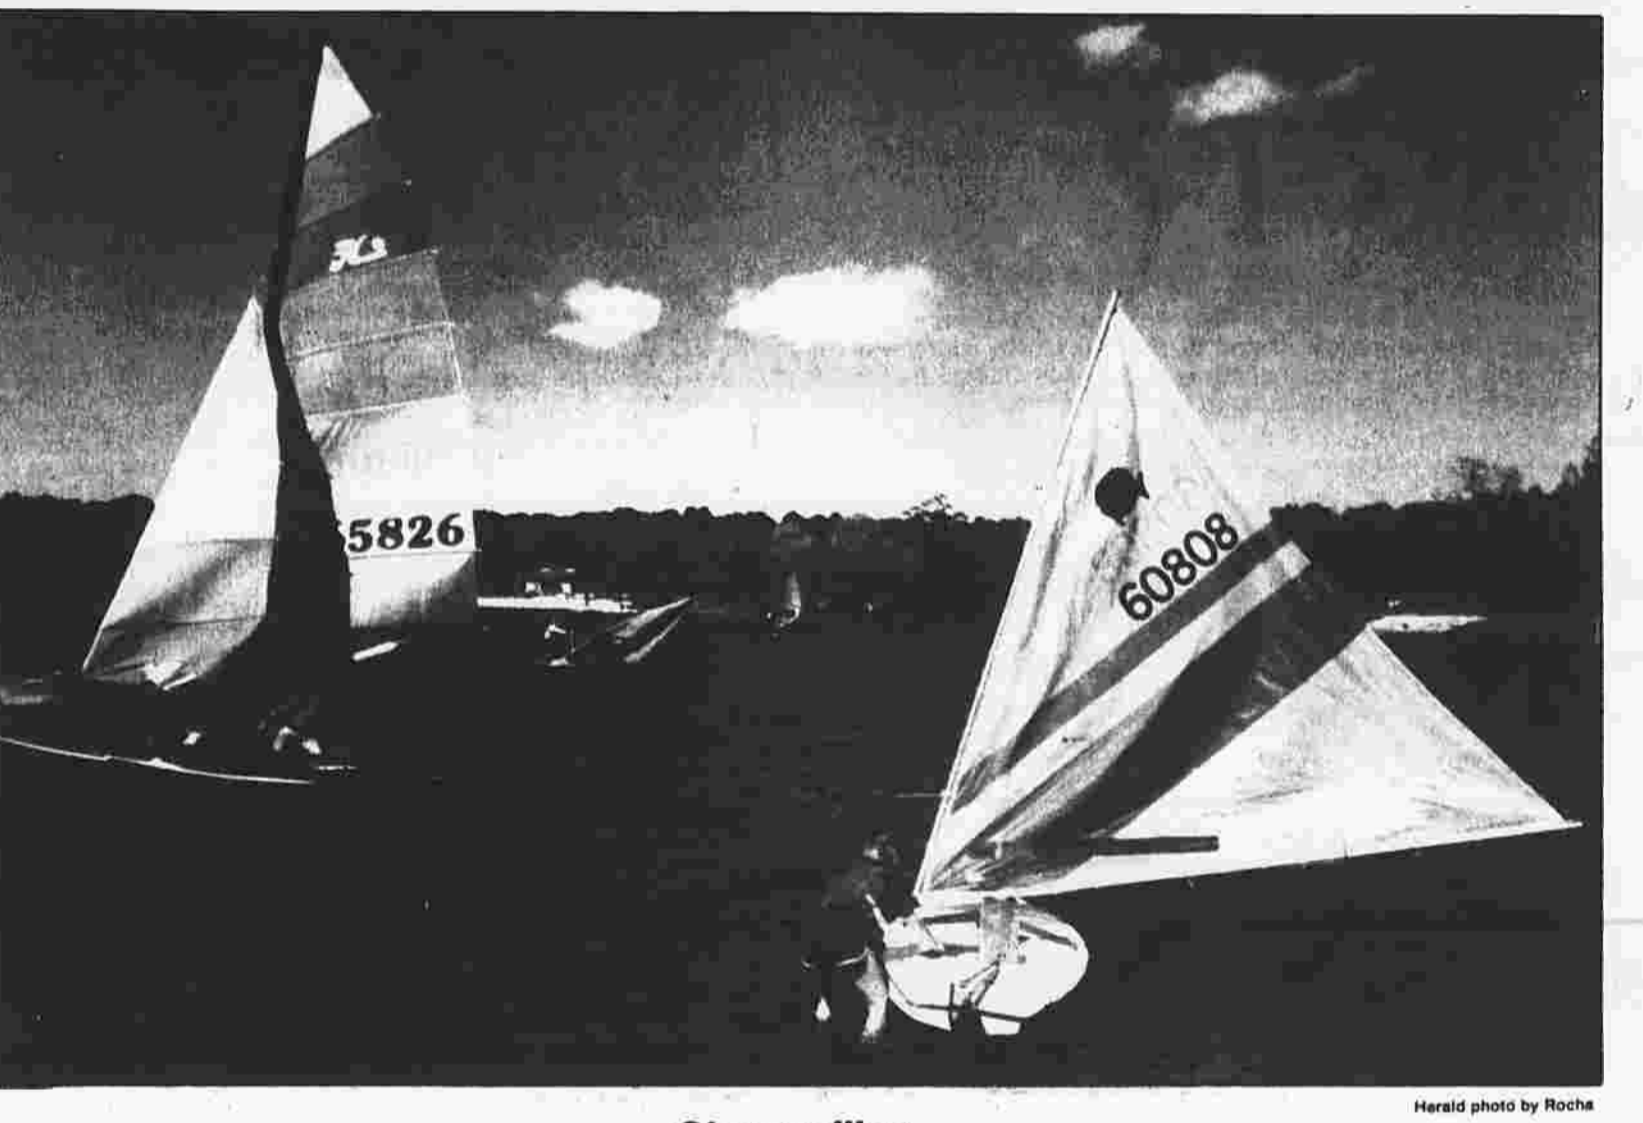

The reporter said a French Embassy car was part of a convoy of four vehicles in the chase.

"We first chased the gunmen and their cars for a while, then I saw two men with Western appearance get out from one car and enter a French Embassy vehicle," the Lebanese reporter said.

He later chased the French Embassy convoy which crossed the Green Line into Christian east Beirut.

The release took place a block away from the Moleim West Beirut waterfront Beauvillage hotel, the headquarters of Syrian army officers in Lebanon.

Seven Frenchmen remain held by various groups in Lebanon, including five Americans.

'A-OK' Reagan has more polyps removed

By Iro R. Allen
United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Reagan had two more small polyps removed from his intestine Friday, nearly a year after cancer surgery, but pronounced himself feeling "A-O-K."

Dr. T. Burton Smith, the White House physician, issued a statement one hour after the president left Bethesda Naval Hospital reporting that during a colonoscopy, "two very small polyps were discovered and removed" and would undergo laboratory testing with results available Saturday.

The president, who had almost 2 feet of his colon removed last July 13 after doctors found a polyp attached to the inner wall of his lower intestine, had three small growths removed in January.

Smith said the polyps removed Friday were 1 to 1.5 millimeters in size.

"The results of all other tests were normal, and the president is in good health," Smith said. He said Reagan would be re-examined in six months.

Smith said Reagan underwent blood tests, X-rays, CAT scans, an eye examination and a dermatological examination of his nose in addition to the colonoscopy, a procedure in which doctors visually examine the colon through a lighted tube.

Reagan had a malignant growth on his nose removed several weeks after the abdominal surgery last year and later had a benign patch taken from his face.

Dr. Dale Oller, who performed last year's surgery, headed Friday's examination team.

As he left Bethesda Naval Hospital five hours and one minute after he arrived the president was asked, "What did they find?" His wife, Nancy, shouted "Fine," and the president, his arm resting on his wife's, shouted reporters, "A-O-K."

Reagan, his wife, and their dog, Rex, flew from Bethesda Naval Hospital by helicopter to their camp David, Md., retreat in a thunderstorm.

Health-care union accepts contracts with Institute, state

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Striking psychiatric technicians at the Institute of Living Friday overwhelmingly accepted a new contract, ending a six-day strike at the large private psychiatric facility, union officials said.

Also Friday, state health care workers approved a three-year contract which offers wage increases, job security and corrects wage disparities, Bill Meyerson, spokesman for New England Health Care Employees Union, District 1199, said.

David Pickett, a District 1199 organizer, said the Institute of Living contract provides a 13 percent pay increase over the three years.

The contract also provides some improvements in holidays and other benefits, he said.

Workers will go back to their jobs at the large private psychiatric hospital Sunday morning, he said.

"People are feeling real good," he said.

With 90 percent of the vote for the state health care workers' contract counted Friday, 1,721 had voted for the contract and 388 against, Meyerson said.

"I think it's a very good contract," Meyerson said. "It will go a long way toward stabilizing staff at the state facilities and eliminates a very serious discrimination that has existed."

The contract offers the 7,500 state health care workers across-the-board wage increases of 5 percent in the first two years and 4 percent in the third year, Meyerson said.

The pay equity provisions are really the single most important thing about the contract," Meyerson said.

"It means that 8 percent of the membership will be upgraded" by 8 percent to 10 percent, Meyerson said.

The provision corrects the disparity between pay scales for female-dominated jobs and male-dominated jobs, he said.

Meanwhile, 12 hours of talks between Waterbury Hospital and the union for striking nurses ended about 3 a.m. Friday with the two sides submitting revised proposals and agreeing to meet again Monday, hospital officials said.

"The fact we exchanged proposals and there is another meeting, I take as a good sign," said hospital spokesman Richard Bulat.

Waterbury Hospital nearly closed down more than two weeks ago in preparation for a strike by about 500 nurses who are members of the Connecticut Health Care Union District 1199 and another 500 service and maintenance workers who belong to the New England Health Care Union District 1199.

The union of service and maintenance workers met Wednesday with hospital negotiators, who rejected the union's proposal for a three-year contract containing a 6 percent wage increase in the first year and a cost-of-living adjustment in the final two years.

A mass rally in Waterbury has been scheduled for Sunday, Meyerson said.

The service and maintenance workers at Waterbury Hospital, as well as the psychiatric technicians at the Institute of Living, currently earn an average of $8 per hour, Meyerson said.

Meanwhile no talks were scheduled in a contract dispute between Hartford's Mt. Sinai Hospital and its union of about 350 service and maintenance workers. But spokesmen for both sides said negotiations were expected to be held next week.

Chamber will lobby in court for Route 6

By George Lovno
Herald Reporter

The Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce will file a friend-of-the-court brief with U.S. District Court in New Haven in support of the proposed Route 6 expressway between Bolton Notch and Windham, the chairman of the chamber's executive board said Friday.

Chairman William R. Humford said the executive board decided earlier this week to become involved in the controversial matter and hopes to file the brief early next week.

Opponents of the $170 million, 11.8-mile highway have filed suit seeking to stop the state Department of Transportation from working on the project until an in-depth environmental study is done and other alternatives are considered. Opening arguments are scheduled to begin June 30.

A friend-of-the-court brief will allow the chamber to offer arguments in support of the project. The business group has maintained that the expressway is needed to provide more jobs and help the economies of Manchester and eastern Connecticut.

Humford said the chamber will also send a letter to the town of Manchester early next week urging it to file a similar brief in support of the highway.

Stephen Penny, the Democratic majority leader on the Manchester Board of Directors, said Friday he would support a resolution from the town backing the Route 6 project.

"This town has been sensitive to the need for interstate service," Penny said.

The Route 6 project, he said, "would benefit this community."

Under the DOT's plans, the highway would be called Route 6 and would connect Hartford with Windham. The project was part of an earlier plan first proposed in 1970s to construct the expressway all the way to Providence, R.I. Those plans were killed, however, after Rhode Island withdrew from the project because of environmental concerns.

Penny argued that the existing two-lane Route 6 has been "a deathtrap for years." He added that the completion of the four-lane highway would make travel between Willimantic and Manchester easier, encouraging more people to shop in town.

Town Manager Robert Weiss said Friday that once he receives the letter, he will forward it to the Board of Directors for consideration.

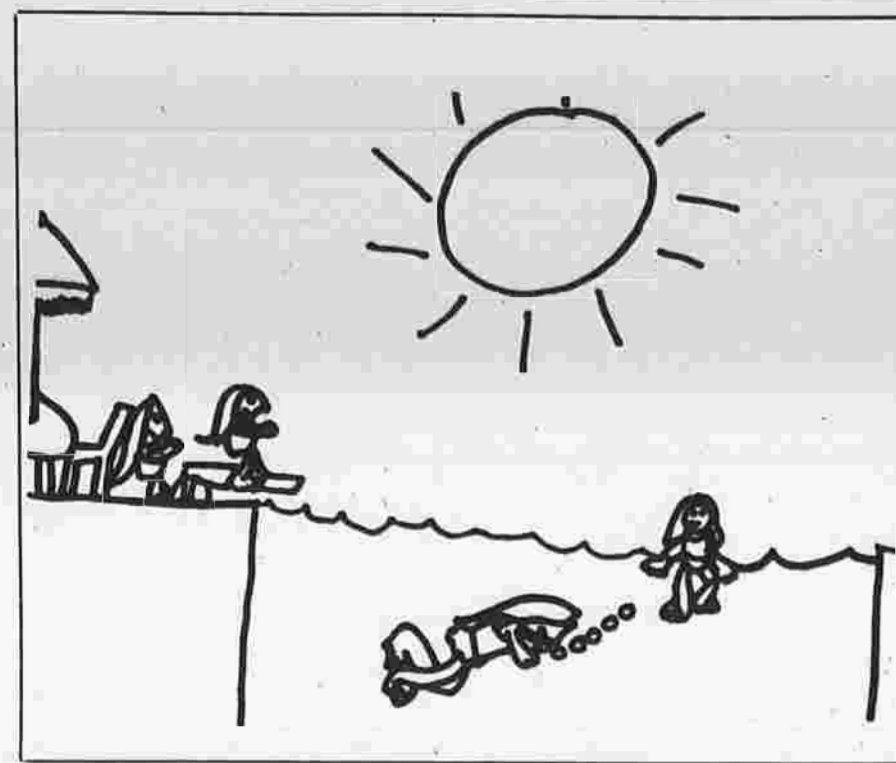

Most officials and business leaders in towns that would be affected by the highway have come out in support of the project. Many view the road as a way to bring more residents and businesses to their communities to provide more jobs and tax revenue.

Windham has asked to join the pending court case as a defendant in order to assure that certain issues important to it are considered during the trial.

Reunion advice

This weekend's 50th reunion at Central High School in Sioux City, Iowa, is attracting a lot of attention because the Class of 1936 includes twins Eppie and Po-Po, who later became known as Ann Landers and Dear Abby. Reporters from several newspapers have already made reservations, said

Charles Lindsay, the classmate in charge of organizing the reunion. CBS' "60 Minutes" wanted permission to film the event, but was turned down. The presence of the twins was born Pauline and Esther Friedman on July 4, 1918, in Sioux City, who later became known as Ann Landers and Dear Abby. Reporters from several newspapers have already made reservations, said Pauline began writing her "Dear Abby" column for a San Francisco newspaper the following year. The presence of the twins will not overshadow the reunion, Lindsay said. "This is not the twins' homecoming," he said. "This is the 50th reunion of the Class of 1936, and the twins are members."

Humanitarian journey

UCLA bone-marrow specialist Dr. Robert Gale, who led a team of doctors helping victims of the Chernobyl nuclear plant disaster, was awarded the Los Angeles Humanitarian Award from Mayor Tom Bradley. Joining Gale in a ceremony Thursday was Occidental Petroleum Corp. chairman Armand Hammer, who used his influence with the Soviet Union to get Soviet officials to accept Gale's help in performing bone-marrow transplants. Fatal bone-marrow destruction occurs when humans are exposed to high levels of radiation. "In accepting the mayor's award, I am really accepting it on behalf of the international community of physicians who aided the victims of the disaster," Gale said. "Although I was highly visible, physicians from more than 20 countries assisted in these efforts."

KING OF THE SHOW — The most elaborate, expensive and exciting new attraction at Universal Studios is displayed to the media Thursday. Hollywood's "biggest" star, King Coley, Bob Gurry, director of special effects, puts his head into the mouth of the $6.5-million giant, which weighs nearly 7 tons and stands three stories high. It is the most sophisticated computer-controlled figure-animated creature.

Space flotsam — When a new space center opens next month at Chicago's Museum of Science and Industry, visitors will find an unusual piece of space flotsam — a bottle of brandy. The bottle was among artifacts donated Thursday by James A. Lovell Jr., who flew two Gemini space missions and two Apollo missions. He also donated a flight suit and helmet among other objects. "They weren't doing much good to people in the country (while) in my study," said Lovell, 58.

Across the nation

Thunderstorms bearing hail and heavy rain swept through the Dakotas before moving through Minnesota and Nebraska, while showers also dotted the mid-Atlantic Coast.
South Dakota's Hand County was deluged with 4.5 inches of rain in 30 minutes, knocking down power lines with 55 mph gusts and washing out a bridge southwest of the town of Miller.
Thunderstorms also hit Florida and along the Gulf Coast.
A few thunderstorms were over the southern Plains, rain showers and a few thunderstorms were along the mid- and northern Atlantic Coast, and rain showers were widely scattered over the northern Rockies.
Temperatures were in the 80s and low 90s across much of the nation east of the Rockies, and below 80 from the north-central High Plains through northern Minnesota, the Great Lakes and upper Ohio Valley to the northern Atlantic Coast.
Temperatures were in the 60s over the upper Great Lakes region, and rain and clouds held early afternoon readings in the 50s and 60s across New England. Temperatures were in the 50s and 60s along the Pacific Coast, and in the 90s or above 100 in the desert Southwest.
Temperatures around the nation at 3 p.m. EDT ranged from 55 degrees at Meacham, Ore., to 103 degrees at Palm Springs, Calif.

Air quality report

HARTFORD — The state Department of Environmental Protection reported that the air quality was expected to go good on Friday and was expected to be good on Saturday.

Mark can stay

Neighbors who proposed ousting Mark Thatcher from a high-rise condominium in Dallas have been told that the son of British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is free to stay.
The building's board of directors on Thursday sent notices to all units saying that tenants have no legal right to seek Thatcher's departure.
Thatcher had to leave another Dallas apartment last month when its owners refused to add security measures for his protection. He was staying with a friend in a second high-rise when five tenants objected to his stay, saying they feared he could be the target of a terrorist attack because of British cooperation in the U.S. raid on Libya in April.

Legs still gorgeous

Cyd Charisse and her million-dollar legs were well-received Friday in their London stage debut in a revival of the English musical, "Charlie Girl."
"Time has not withered those gorgeous, long legs," Milton Shulman of The Standard wrote of Thursday night's opening at the Victoria Palace Theater.
Producer Harold Fielding insured his leading lady's legs for $1.5 million each for the run of the show, a reporting of a Cindarella legend. Charisse, 63, the high-kicking star of "Singin' in the Rain," "Brigadoon," and "Silk Stockings," plays the aristocratic Lady Hatter.

Honors in Rome

Actress Meryl Streep, producer Steven Spielberg, and Japanese director Akira Kurosawa were chosen Friday as winners of Italy's most prestigious film awards, the David di Donatello.
Streep was the best actress for "Out of Africa," which also received the award for the best film.

Manchester/Area Towns In Brief

Hospital, nurses OK pact
Manchester Memorial Hospital and the union that represents 250 registered nurses there announced Friday they have agreed to a new two-year contract that provides a 4 percent increase over each year.
"We were very pleased with the settlement and attitudes on both sides," said Gloria Thoresen, president of the Manchester Federation of Registered Nurses. Local 885 of the American Federation of Teachers-Federation of Nurses and Health Professionals.
Thoresen said the union overwhelmingly approved the contract after two months of bargaining that Thoresen said was without controversy except for a proposal by the hospital to have nurses pay more toward the cost of their medical insurance.
However, Thoresen said the hospital abandoned the proposal after the nurses' union unanimously two weeks ago to reject the plan.
"We were very strong ... and together we came to a good contract," she said.
"At a time when there is great turmoil at other hospitals throughout the state, the nursing bargaining unit at Manchester Memorial has been negotiating with the hospital for over two months in a very positive and professional manner," hospital President Warren L. Preisnik said in a news release.
The ratified pact provides for a total salary increase of 8 percent, with step increases for non-employees. Part-time employees were also given greater medical insurance coverage. Thoresen said.

Bolton opens park for season
BOLTON — Indian Notch Park will be fully staffed as of Monday. Tickets purchased at the gate will cost $3 per car on weekdays and $5 on weekends.
Season passes for residents, which cost $15, and non-residents, $30, can be purchased at the selection's office from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., Monday through Friday, and from 7 to 9 Monday evenings.

Dr. Sumner to retire July 1
Dr. Phillip E. Sumner, a longtime obstetrician and gynecologist at Manchester Memorial Hospital, has announced he will retire as of July 1.
After visiting the Lamaze clinic in Paris in 1967, Dr. Sumner became a strong advocate of prepared childbirth with husband participation.
In 1969, he helped establish one of the first in-hospital birthing rooms in America at Manchester Memorial Hospital, including a special Monticore nursing program. He was chairman of the obstetrics and gynecology department at the hospital from 1973 to 1978 and was national vice president of the American Lamaze Society for Psychoprophylaxis in Obstetrics in 1972-73.
He is the co-author of two books, "Birthing Rooms — Concept and Reality" and "Shared Childbirth."

Coventry students get honors
COVENTRY — Six Coventry High School students were to receive congratulatory letters from President Ronald Reagan, certificates from the state General Assembly and scholarships ranging from $100 to $150 from the Coventry Republican Town Committee, GOP Town Chairman Gregg Bateson said Friday.
The awards are given each year to leading CHS scholars, Bateson said. Honored this year were Andrea Rhodes, Jeffrey Dimmock, Mark Felice, Louise Chamberlain, Laura Jean Chase and Steven Patterson.

Taxes due in Eighth District
Eighth Utilities District taxes for the 1986 Grand List are due during the month of July, and can be paid during that month at the district firehouse at 32 Main St., weekdays from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Taxes can also be paid on July 31 from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. The district tax rate is 5.5 mills, and a taxpayer is financially responsible regardless of a receipt of a bill, according to district Tax Collector Ernest R. Machell.
Water flow test planned Monday
The town Water Department has scheduled a fire flow test Monday on Hebron Avenue in Glastonbury. The test will start at 10 a.m. and last approximately two hours, and could decrease the pressure or quality of water on Manchester Road, Shady Hill Lane, Hebron Avenue, Cricket Lane and Weir Street.

Free seminar set on pest control
A free public seminar on home pest control will be held in Manchester on Thursday from 7:15 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Rich and Gino Vatteroni, owners of Budget Pest Control on East Center Street, will hold the slide-show seminar, which will be followed by a question-and-answer session on rodents and insects. Hand-outs and free gifts will be available.
The seminar, in conjunction with National Pest Control Month, will be held at the Andrews Building, 63 E. Center St., at 7:30 p.m. For more information, call 649-9001.

Town will flush water mains
The town Water Department plans to flush its water mains between Monday and Thursday from 7:15 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the following locations: from Center Street north to Hilliard and Woodland street, from the East Hartford town line east to Broad Street, South Alton Street, Oxford Street and Main Street.
The flushing may cause discoloration and reduced pressure. If water is discolored, the department advises homeowners to not use their water until it clears. If water remains discolored for an extended period, call 647-3115.

Agency in Bolton almost a year
BOLTON — July 1 will mark the end of the first year that Voliting Nurse and Home Care of Manchester Inc. has served Bolton.
Besides the Care of the Sick Program, a concerted effort has been made for health promotion services, particularly for senior citizens, the agency reported.
At least once a month an educational program has been held for senior citizens. Topics have included information on specific diseases, as well as general information on aging, good health practices and nutrition as it applies to daily living.
An exercise program for seniors was conducted by Kim Wanager, staff physical therapist, and there have been numerous blood-pressure screenings.

Hospital, nurses OK pact

Manchester Memorial Hospital and the union that represents 250 registered nurses there announced Friday they have agreed to a new two-year contract that provides a 4 percent increase over each year.
"We were very pleased with the settlement and attitudes on both sides," said Gloria Thoresen, president of the Manchester Federation of Registered Nurses. Local 885 of the American Federation of Teachers-Federation of Nurses and Health Professionals.
Thoresen said the union overwhelmingly approved the contract after two months of bargaining that Thoresen said was without controversy except for a proposal by the hospital to have nurses pay more toward the cost of their medical insurance.
However, Thoresen said the hospital abandoned the proposal after the nurses' union unanimously two weeks ago to reject the plan.
"We were very strong ... and together we came to a good contract," she said.
"At a time when there is great turmoil at other hospitals throughout the state, the nursing bargaining unit at Manchester Memorial has been negotiating with the hospital for over two months in a very positive and professional manner," hospital President Warren L. Preisnik said in a news release.

Fusscas, undecided, defends record

Although Republican Jim Peter Fusscas of Marlborough said Friday he has not decided whether to seek a fourth term as state representative from the 55th Assembly District, he strongly denied charges from the Democratic candidate for the post that he has not been an effective legislator.
"Obviously he doesn't follow my politics," Fusscas said of Democrat David Cohen of Bolton. "A lot of people have called me and expressed their support for me. I know or have heard a lot of things that I can get bills through. I know the district," he said. "One of the most important parts of the job is helping constituents."
Last month Cohen, the former first selectman of Colchester,

Bennet students raise money to help family through ordeal

Members of the Inthavong family of Garden Street, who escaped war-torn Laos on a rauboard several years ago, are now facing another ordeal.
Three of the four children of Sayamone Inthavong were seriously injured in a May 18 automobile accident in East Windsor. The inflowing car was in a collision with an East Windsor police cruiser on Route 5, according to East Windsor police. Both cars were demolished.
Two of the Inthavong children are students at Bennet Junior High School and the third is a sophomore at Manchester High School.
The youngest, Scott, 14, was in a coma for 13 days and is still suffering from slight amnesia and a partial walking disability, according to family members. He was recently transferred from Hartford Hospital to Newington Children's Hospital, where he will stay for treatment for at least six weeks.
Scott's sisters, Teresa, 15, a ninth-grader at Bennet, and Christina, 16, are on crutches and recuperating at home. Teresa suffered a broken leg and hip in the accident, and Christina had a broken hip.
When Scott's eighth-grade classmate Krista Hanley and Christine McDougal learned of the accident, they decided they wanted to do something to help the family with the extensive hospital bills.
"We are really good friends. He's in all our classes," said Hanley. She and McDougal were selling cupcakes and cookies for a dime apiece in the halls of Bennet this week.
Sayamone Inthavong got a job at St. Francis Hospital Community Dental Center. "She is a single mother, so money is tight," Myette said.

Negotiations in 'delicate' stage as water company sales near Negotiations to sell Manchester's L & M Water Co. and the Elm Water Co. in Coventry have reached the "delicate" stage, but a deal may be agreed to next week, according to the attorney overseeing the transaction.

Hartford attorney David Hadden said Friday he is waiting for a response from the firm most likely to purchase the two water companies, and should receive an answer next week. He said he has been in contact with "a couple" of different parties interested in purchasing the utilities, but he has not named them.
However, he did confirm that one of the parties he has negotiated with is John Witzenzeller, a partner in the Aquapump staffed, owner of the Aqua Pump Co., who was appointed in 1983 by the state Department of Public Utility Control to run the two water systems just before the former owner died.
Witzenzeller could not be reached for comment, although he has said he is interested in purchasing the two utilities.
Hadden said he expected a deal to have been concluded by now, and is "disappointed and frustrated" an agreement has not been reached.
"I hoped to be a little further along," he said.
He said some complications have arisen in the negotiations, but added that he is optimistic he can "reconcile people and get on with things and get it done."

Democrats to hear candidates

Four candidates seeking endorsements by the Democratic party will speak at the meeting of the Manchester Democratic Town Committee Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the hearing room of Lincoln Center.
One of them is Al Rioux of Newington, who seeks to succeed Patrick Hogan as Hartford County sheriff. Hogan will retire at the end of his current term and is supporting another candidate, John Tarca, for the post.
Rioux reportedly has the backing of 20 of Manchester's 23 delegates who will help pick the sheriff nominee at a convention July 27.
One of his allies is Deputy Sheriff Raymond Cassano of Manchester, whom Hogan tried to fire last month. A court has issued an order restraining Hogan from firing Cassano's position.
Lanzano said he was fired for because he did not agree to support Tarca.
Another who will speak at the Wednesday meeting is William Ferris of Glastonbury, who is seeking the Democratic nomination to oppose state Sen. Carl Zisser, R-Manchester. Zisser is seeking his fourth term in the 4th Senatorial District.
Manchester Town Director Stephen Cassano had been opposing Ferris, Glastonbury Democratic town chairman, for the nomination, but he dropped out of the race and is backing Ferris.
The other two candidates who will address the Democratic Town Committee are Frank Borges of Hartford and Maurice Mosely of Waterbury, who are competing for the Democratic nomination for state treasurer.

remaining hurdles before the transaction is final "could almost be the forewings," he said. Those include approval by the DPUC and the West Hartford Probate Court, which is overseeing the settlement of the George Koppleman estate, the owner of the two water companies.
Koppleman died in the spring of 1983, and the two utilities have been in receivership since then. Hadden was appointed by the West Hartford Probate Court to oversee Koppleman's estate in February 1985.
The L & M Water Co. serves 106 customers in Manchester's Redwood Farms area. The Elm Water Co. has 187 customers in the Coventry Hills and Pilgrim Hills section of Coventry.

Gov. O'Neill used veto pen on right bill

In the wake of Gov. William O'Neill's veto of a bill that would have made it easier to impose the death penalty in Connecticut, proponents of capital punishment have accused the governor of falling victim to election-year pressure.

Sen. Richard B. Johnston, R-Wethersfield, co-chairman of the Judiciary Committee, where the bill originated, was incredulous that the governor could publicly support the death penalty yet veto a bill that would have restored the reality of capital punishment in the state.

"I just don't believe the governor had the guts to sign the bill in an election year," Johnston said.

In a year that has seen some particularly brutal murders, as well as cries by crime victims and the general public for stricter sentences for criminals, nothing could be further from the mark than Johnston's charge.

O'Neill was not showing signs of a politically induced disease of the spine when he vetoed the bill, but rather concern over serious flaws in it that could have permitted the execution of a child or mentally impaired person.

The measure, inspired by the murder of a Norwich woman and her 2-year-old daughter in 1984, would have allowed a jury to impose the death penalty if it found that aggravating factors surrounding a murder outweighed mitigating factors, presumably including a defendant's mental state and age.

Under current law, a jury must find that a murder was aggravated or committed in "an especially cruel, heinous and depraved manner" before it can impose the death penalty. It must also find that there were no mitigating factors.

The law makes the penalty appropriately tough to impose, and no one has been executed in Connecticut for more than 20 years.

But Johnston and others eager to see the state's electric chair warmed up again are neither satisfied with the existing law nor impressed with the flaws of the current bill, and are trying to muster the votes to override O'Neill's veto.

"I just have a lot more faith in our system than that," said Rep. William L. Wollenberg, R-Farmington, co-chairman of the Judiciary Committee, in response to O'Neill's reservations.

Unfortunately, the judicial system does not always produce justice, and the current death-penalty bill would pave the way for even more grievous wrongs.

If backers of capital punishment want a death-penalty law that works, they should go back to the drawing board instead of trying to force through a measure that most citizens would find morally unpalatable.

The death of a treaty

By Helen Thomas

WASHINGTON — "Mankind will never forgive us" if the superpowers do not put a cap on the nuclear arms race.

Those were the words of an ailing Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev after he and President Jimmy Carter signed the SALT II nuclear treaty in a glittering ceremony at an opulent palace in Vienna on June 18, 1979.

The treaty permitted some advances in nuclear weapons on both sides, required the superpowers to retire a certain number of weapons, and generally established a parity of their arsenals.

It represented an extension of a promise by the United States and the Soviet Union that holding down an explosion of nuclear weapons of warfare would serve the interests of both sides.

After the signing, conservatives on Capitol Hill, reinforced by the Reagan presidential candidacy, mounted a major campaign to defeat ratification of the treaty. Then the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan killed any hope of Senate approval of the treaty.

But when Reagan assumed office in 1981, he pledged not to undercut the unratified treaty and to stay within its limits as long as the Soviets did not undermine it.

In THE YEARS that passed the administration frequently called the Soviets' hand on the treaty and claimed the Kremlin had violated the accord by deploying what the United States viewed as a new missile, the S-25, and breaking other provisions by coding its testing.

Nevertheless, it appeared to be in the U.S. interests to abide by the treaty.

Last week, the president, faced with decisions on introducing new weaponry, made it quite clear that he had decided to renounce the treaty.

Up to that time, there had been various interpretations of a May 27 statement that the United States would not be willing to deal now.

Reagan could not bring himself to use a term of such finality in discussing his drastic decision to break out of the treaty. But when pressed by reporters, he said: "I think you can trust what Larry said."

The president confessed at his last news conference, "I was always hostile to that treaty because it did not reduce weapons."

He insisted that his action would not lead to an arms race. He believes instead that the Soviets will be more willing to deal now.

There are no doves in the administration. Reagan is marching to his own drummer these days. Arms control advocates on Capitol Hill are branded as "Soviet supporters" by Reagan aides.

His renunciation of the treaty will permit the United States to forge ahead now with plans to arm the 131st B-2 bomber with cruise missiles, and then more of the same.

The question is: Will Americans and the world feel safer from a nuclear conflict because there will be more B-2 bombers armed with cruise missiles in the U.S. arsenal?

Gen Edward Rowny, chief strategic arms adviser, said SALT II "is behind us." And deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said the treaty "is no longer in existence."

In effect, all of the above said in one way or another that the treaty is dead.

Reagan could not bring himself to use a term of such finality in discussing his drastic decision to break out of the treaty. But when pressed by reporters, he said: "I think you can trust what Larry said."

Dollars alone aren't enough to help Haiti

WASHINGTON — When Haiti's new ambassador, Pierre Sam, presents his credentials to President Reagan on Monday, he'll ask for $40 million in U.S. aid for his poverty-stricken country. And he has a special right to make the request. For his son's wife is a great-granddaughter of Jean Baptiste Dessalines, a Haitian officer who helped the American colonials throw off the British yoke 200 years ago.

Ambassador Sam's message will be, in essence: "We helped you in your hour of need. Please help us in ours."

The Haitian role in the American Revolution has been one of history's best-kept secrets. But it was real — and costly. Haitians were part of the 2,500 French forces that Comte d'Estaing landed below Savannah, Ga., on Sept. 12, 1779.

Joined by a small force under Polish Count Casimir Pulaski and 1,350 Continentals and militia, the French allied with the city. On Oct. 9, the allied troops stormed the British fortifications in the fiercest fight since Bunker Hill 4½ years earlier — but with opposite results. The attackers were successfully beaten off with heavy losses, including Pulaski and 518 Haitian casualties.

DESSALINES SURVIVED the battle and settled in the United States after the Revolution. A street in Chicago bears his name.

Haiti itself won independence from France in 1804. Now it is trying to recover from the cruel and corrupt dictatorship of the late Papa Doc Duvalier and his son, Baby Doc, who fled for his life early this year. Unfortunately, the portly dictator stripped his country before he went into luxurious exile. Ambassador Sam estimates that Duvalier left only $2 million in the Haitian treasury.

Foreign aid is essential — and must come quickly. Sam has said. With a per capita income of less than a dollar a day, Haiti's 6 million inhabitants can't do the job themselves. For example, Haiti's monthly gas bill is $5 million. Esso and Shell runs to about $5 million.

In ADDITION, the country's transition from dictatorship to democracy will involve the expense of elections set for September, and seed money is needed to revive the moribund economy. Sam estimates that a minimum of $40 million is needed in the immediate future.

A supplementary appropriation of $21.7 million for Haiti has been approved by both House and Senate — but with differences that will require negotiations in conference.

Sam, a large, sturdy man with a booming laugh, is a lawyer and has a degree in agriculture. He said his country's plight cannot be adequately measured in dollars — even millions of dollars. "I would like to invite you and any American to go to Haiti and see it for yourself," he told our reporter Jim Lynch.

Two former Democratic presidential candidates' wives, Abigail McCarthy and Jane Muskie, have co-authored a novel of Washington intrigue inspired by a still-unsolved Republican mystery of the Watergate era: What really happened to the late Martha Mitchell?

Both women knew the outspoken wife of Richard Nixon's attorney general, John N. Mitchell. She was manhandled by security guards and injected with drugs, allegedly so that she could be hospitalized and kept from blowing the whistle on various Watergate-related scandals. Blame for the incident was never pinned down, nor was it ever learned exactly what Martha knew.

"One Woman Out," which will be published in September, chronicles the predicament of the vice president's wife in the administration of the country's first woman president.

15-year-old girl killed by train

NORTH HAVEN — A 15-year-old Wallingford girl was killed when she was struck by an Amtrak train beneath a highway overpass where she was drinking beer with friends, police said Friday.

Police said they did not immediately know whether the girl, identified as Julie Sartori, fell or was pushed at 9:30 p.m. Thursday into the path of the two-car Amtrak train traveling from New York to Springfield.

Police said the spot where the highway passes over the railroad tracks is a favorite drinking place of teenagers.

Scout appeal goes to Supreme Court

HARTFORD — The appeal of a Milford grandmother fighting the Boy Scouts of America to become the country's first female scoutmaster has been transferred to the state Supreme Court, officials said Friday.

Attorney General Joseph I. Lieberman said the case of Catherine Pollard, 67, was sent on from the state Appellate Court.

Pollard has been waging a decade-long battle to force the Boy Scouts to officially assign her a troop. She had served unofficially as a scoutmaster in Milford between 1974 and 1976 when no male volunteers could be found.

A state agency backed Pollard, but the Boy Scouts filed suit in Superior Court, where a judge rejected claims Pollard had been discriminated against and upheld the Scouts position that young boys need male role models. The state filed an appeal earlier this month on Pollard's behalf.

U-turn leads to kidnapping charge

DANBURY — A state trooper alerted by a man's voice coming from the trunk of a car charged a hitchhiker Friday with kidnapping, robbery and assault for allegedly attacking a good Samaritan, police said.

Trooper Steven Korf noticed a car make an illegal U-turn on the Exit 2 ramp of Interstate 84 about 2 a.m. and stopped the vehicle.

When he approached, the trooper heard a voice coming from the trunk and rescued Jeffrey Hunihan, 41, of Waterbury, who had picked up the hitchhiker, police said. Hunihan was beaten and robbed of an undisclosed amount of cash before he was forced into the trunk of his own car and the hitchhiker drove off, police said.

Richard Parks, 18, of Waterbury was driving the car when the vehicle was stopped. He was charged with second-degree kidnapping, third-degree robbery and third-degree assault.

Deaths linked to hospital; bacteria found in rooms

By Susan Okuku
The Associated Press

NEW HAVEN — At least four patients at the Hospital of St. Raphael contracted Legionnaires' disease, and three of them have died, health authorities said Friday.

The deaths occurred in the last two months while a fourth patient remains in the hospital, said Dr. Norman Marieb, executive vice president and chief operating officer at the hospital.

Yearbook honors

HARTFORD — The secretary of the state Friday proposed laws that would bar campaigns from distributing absentee ballot applications and stop candidates or their staff from being present when absentee voters are cast.

Tashjian said they intend to monitor the patients closely for symptoms of the disease, which usually develop symptoms two to 10 days after exposure.

Previous patients who have been treated at the hospital for more than 10 days do not have to worry about contracting the disease, Marieb said. There is little chance that visitors or family members can catch it, he said.

Each month, St. Raphael's usually sends out more than 10 cases of Legionnaires' disease contracted outside of the hospital, Beeman said. But hospital officials became suspicious of a possible source of the disease when the building last week, he said.

Marieb said he had no idea how long the bacteria had been present in the hospital and how many patients treated in those rooms had been exposed to it. The rooms housed patients being treated for a variety of illnesses and included one room of an intensive care unit.

Marieb said the death rate from Legionnaires' disease takes its name from an outbreak at the Pennsylvania American Legion convention held at the Bellvue-Stratford Hotel in Philadelphia in July 1976. Thirty-four people died. The bacterium is believed to be responsible in food and water, such as air conditioning ducts, storage tanks and rivers. It can be treated with antibiotics.

It has pneumonia-like symptoms, including malaise, muscle aches, cough and chills and fever.

The proposal allowing certain government offices to be used only for absentee ballot applications would no longer be able to pass out applications, she said.

Tashjian said he has a problem approving the reform measures immediately since they do not call for administrative changes.

Marieb said the death rate from Legionnaires' disease takes its name from an outbreak at the Pennsylvania American Legion convention held at the Bellvue-Stratford Hotel in Philadelphia in July 1976. Thirty-four people died. The bacterium is believed to be responsible in food and water, such as air conditioning ducts, storage tanks and rivers. It can be treated with antibiotics.

It has pneumonia-like symptoms, including malaise, muscle aches, cough and chills and fever.

The proposal allowing certain government offices to be used only for absentee ballot applications would no longer be able to pass out applications, she said.

Tashjian said he has a problem approving the reform measures immediately since they do not call for administrative changes.

Belaga launches search for underticket

HARTFORD (UPI) — GOP gubernatorial candidate Julie Belaga announced Friday she has formed a search committee for her underticket, saying the move is designed to bypass last minute convention maneuvering.

Belaga, a state representative from Westport, said she would consider both qualified men and women for the underticket, state officials said Friday.

Belaga is seeking the Republican nomination for governor along with Gerald Labriola and Richard Bezutto.

Belaga dismissed statements made earlier this week by her committee that she would have a list of names by which to search for the most qualified individuals.

State challenges limit on religious holidays

HARTFORD (UPI) — Connecticut has filed a brief with the U.S. Supreme Court on behalf of a school teacher who challenged a limit of three days of religious observance for public employees.

Philbrook, who became a member of the Methodist Church of God in 1968, says his work requires him to miss about six school days for designated holy days each year.

He asked to take personal time for the three disputed days off or have the cost of the substitution teacher deducted from his wages for those days, Lieberman said.

Under union contract, the school board allowed employees to have three paid days a year for absence for observance of religious holidays.

The personal business days could be used for religious observance, the school board said.

Philbrook was allowed to take three days of paid leave and three days of unpaid leave a year to observe religious holidays.

After attempts to work out a deal with the board to get paid leave time failed, he began his legal challenge in 1973 when he filed a lawsuit with the Connecticut Commission on Human Rights and Opportunities.

King's sub returns to state berth

GROTON — The USS Kamehameha, a ballistic missile-firing submarine named after a Hawaiian king who conquered and unified the islands, was scheduled to return Saturday to the Naval Submarine Base.

The Navy said the nuclear-powered vessel commissioned in December 1985 will operate out of the Groton base before beginning a scheduled overhaul. The submarine last berthed at Groton in 1972.

The Kamehameha was built at the Mare Island Naval Shipyard and christened in January 1985 by the wife of Samuel Wilder King.

Samuel Wilder King was one of the first Hawaiians to graduate from the U.S. Naval Academy, and as governor of the territory of Hawaii he worked for statehood.

UTC contributes to statue restoration

HARTFORD — United Technologies Corp. will contribute $500,000 to the restoration of the Statue of Liberty and Ellis Island, the company said Friday.

The department has been calling wholesale and retail outlets and letting them know about the nationwide recall of the headache remedy because of possible tampering, Ward said.

The capsules have been linked to two cyanide poisoning deaths in Washington state, Ward said.

The same lot number linked to the two deaths has been found on Connecticut store shelves, but Ward said that does not surprise him.

Bottles bearing that lot number 5H102 have been found in many states, including 40 or 50 cases in Connecticut alone, Ward said.

"I can't imagine that we're isolated," Ward said.

Waldheim and the rest of the world

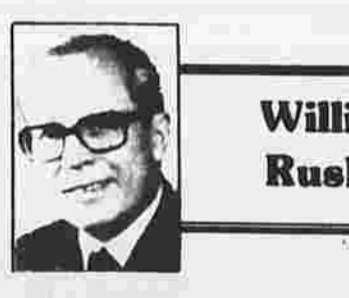

Austria's election of Kurt Waldheim as its prestigious though largely powerless president is a sharp reminder that much — perhaps most — of the rest of the world has a very different perspective on many matters than do the United States and Israel.

In the narrow issue of Waldheim's culpability in the matter of his military service, the returns are probably not yet all in.

At a minimum, he concealed the fact that he served as a staff officer of the German army in the Balkans, and it seems unlikely that in that capacity he was totally unaware (as he now claims) of the atrocities for which his commander was later executed.

Whether he participated in them is still an open question, but Israeli Justice Minister Yitzhak Mordechai stated just four days before the election that his government had been unable to turn up any firm evidence that Waldheim personally took part in atrocities.

SHOULD HIS RECORD, as established to date, have disqualified Waldheim for the Austrian presidency, and earlier from serving as secretary general of the United Nations? A great many former German officials, including some high commanders not personally guilty of atrocities, have subsequently served honorably in important political posts, but they have almost always undergone "de-Nazification" first. I.e., they have publicly acknowledged and repented their previous allegiance. Waldheim has never been de-Nazified and indeed claims to have been periously anti-Nazi and therefore in no need of shriving.

William Rusher

However, we come down on the question of Waldheim's moral qualifications to serve as president of Austria. Americans certainly need feel no special sympathy for this man. His allegiance, during his years as secretary general of the United Nations, was to the nations of the Third World, which together with the communist bloc dominated the organization and elected him. On more than one occasion — most notably during the Vietnam War — Waldheim openly clashed with U.S. policy to the gratification of his supporters.

BUT IT IS RIGHT HERE — in the matter of "world opinion" as reflected in the U.N. General Assembly — that an important point manifests itself. Time and again, on issues involving the Middle East, the United States and Israel find themselves almost totally isolated. Occasionally, Britain, or France, and one or two minor nations may join us, sometimes not even that. Even the recent report of the British government of its Achille Lauro hijackers, which reflects this widely held attitude, sounded strangely "out of sync" to the American ear. He went out of his way to speak sympathetically of the struggle of the Palestinian Arabs to recover their "homeland," even as he condemned the hijackers and demanded that severe penalties be imposed on them.

The point is that there is far more sympathy for the Palestinian cause in the rest of the world than there is, generally speaking, in the United States and Israel. And difficult as it may be for Americans to accept the idea, the rest of the world also looks at the whole subject of World War II rather differently than we do.

EVERYONE — OR AT LEAST most rational people everywhere — agrees that Hitler was a monster. But the peoples of the Third World, not having been directly involved in World War II, tend to regard it as essentially just another battle among the major powers for world domination. And the citizens of the former Axis nations, humanly, are not at all eager to condemn their fellow countrymen who served in Hitler's armies — at least, not unless they were clearly and personally guilty of atrocities.

We saw this last year in the Bitburg controversy. And it is the explanation of Austria's attitude toward Kurt Waldheim. The United States and Israel will do well to hear these different perspectives in mind in future controversies where they are relevant.

A talent for defense
By James Jacoby
Fred Karpin, who died recently, was a prominent bridge writer and teacher for more than 40 years. His beginnings were as a fine player, and an example of his talent for defense is shown by today's deal, played in an era when bridge bidding was simpler. At times good defense involves bulldog tenacity, keeping track of the opponents' cards, drawing inferences, and at the same time playing in tempo so that a declarer will not realize you have a difficult problem. Other times you may need to be aware of proper psychology, which you can combine with deceptive tactics to win the day. Fred Karpin was well versed in all these techniques.
Karpin was on lead against the confidently bid grand slam. It did not take a genius to figure out that declarer South was surely expecting to make that grand slam based on a long club suit as a source of tricks. Fred also knew that the club suit was not going to come in. Then what? No doubt declarer would turn to another source of tricks, perhaps the diamond suit. Karpin knew that the diamond finesse would succeed if South decided to take it. So why not take that option away on opening lead? Sutting his actions to his thoughts, he led the nine of diamonds. You and any other declarer would do the same thing: rise with the ace of diamonds and later gnash your teeth when the clubs do not split and you discover that the diamond king was on side all the time.
Old trees
The oldest living trees in the United States are reputed to be bristlecone pines, the majority of which grow on the arid crags of California's White Mountains. Some of the trees are estimated to be more than 4,600 years old.

Top-level KGB agent defects to U.S.

By Michael J. Sniffen
The Associated Press
WASHINGTON - A top-level Soviet spy in North Africa has defected and is now in the United States, telling U.S. officials about Soviet operations in Arab countries, intelligence community sources said Friday.

Stung last year by the unusual case of Vitaly Yurchenko, the KGB defector who returned to the Soviet Union after being "redacted," Yurchenko complained that the CIA was filling U.S. newspapers with stories about him, U.S. intelligence sources said these leaks upset him because he had hoped to keep his defector secret so that the family he left behind in the Soviet Union would not be subjected to reprisals.

Security measures toughened

By David Crory
The Associated Press
JOHANNESBURG, South Africa - The President's Council used its legislative power Friday to approve tough security laws whose delay in the two non-white chambers of Parliament led the government to decree a national state of emergency.

Robertson delegates mount bid

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) - About 200 followers of TV evangelist Pat Robertson are seeking delegate seats at the state Republican convention in an early show of organizational strength by the possible presidential candidate.

Bolton Democrats make no choices

By Mitch Mitchell
Herald Reporter
BOLTON - The Democratic Town Committee, after hearing a candidate for state treasurer speak Friday, agreed not to endorse anyone for the position or for the state Legislature.

Kemer, a Democrat from West Hartford, Kemler took office after Parker stepped down earlier this year.

Bertha Stringfellow

Bertha (Hogan) Stringfellow, 85, of Meriden, Miss., mother of Manchester baseball umpire Tommie L. Stringfellow, died Sunday at Rush's Hospital, Meriden, Miss. She was the widow of John N. Stringfellow.

Noting that Gov. William O'Neill is "our best opportunity to win," Mosley said that his experience is his best qualification. "Many of the programs and policies that are being implemented in my tenure," he said.

Nora Reznick

Nora Reznick, 75, of 153 Tudor Lane, died Friday at Manchester Memorial Hospital.

Mosley responded to questions raised by Borges about his attendance record in the General Assembly. He admitted to a 65 to 70 percent attendance rate, adding that he was present for all the important decisions.

Hall's 'Friends' are Tall Cedars

by Earl Yost Sports Editor Emeritus

Deviating from its past procedures of selecting an individual for the annual Friend of Sport Award, the Manchester Sports Hall of Fame committee has announced its 1986 winner will be Nutmeg Forest's Tall Cedars.

The local organization will be tapped for its interest and sponsorship in the annual Manchester Road Race on Thanksgiving morning. This year's race, which will mark the 50th anniversary of the popular and historic race, will also be the 36th in which the Tall Cedars have been involved.

Previously, since the Friend of Sport Award was introduced in 1984, the winners were Fred Nasiff and Bill Paganini. Nutmeg Forest first became involved in the Road Race in 1981, taking over sponsorship from the Army and Navy Club. The race has developed into one of the most prestigious in New England with more than 5,000 runners appearing at the starting line.

Tewellis tooling along at Atlanta

By David Moffitt United Press International

ATLANTA — Doug Tewell, compiling the best season of his 12-year career after considering "semi-retirement," posted an 8-under 64 Friday to take the second-round lead in the Atlanta Golf Classic.

Tewell, at 12-under 132, was one shot ahead of Scott Hoch, who shot a 68. Two strokes back were first-round co-leader Hal Sutton (68), Bob Tway (66) and Mark O'Meara (67).

Gary Koch completed the best score of the first two rounds — a 2-under 63 which he tied with the Koels. Coupled with his opening 72, Koch was tied for sixth place with Bill Bergin (66) and Willie Sutton (66) at 135.

Tewell, who has won more money ($1.6 million) than any other golfer in the past four years, was disappointed with his position because he thought he should have won. He has been set up as an easy target since he placed first in the 1977-78 Atlanta Country Club course as an easy mark Friday, carded eight birds and no bogeys, and noted he let three get away.

"Even when I tried to lag a putt, it went in," Tewell said. "The hole got in the way a few times today. It seemed my putter was really clicking."

Tway, winner two weeks ago in the Westchester Classic and a contender in last week's U.S. Open, got off to a sizzling start Friday — going birdie-eagle-birdie his first three holes.

"It was kind of funny about the second day," Tway said. "I started the day with a bunch of birdies. Then, through the middle of the round, I hit the greens, had some good opportunities to score, but just didn't drop them."

Tewell, who had gone six years without a victory before winning the Los Angeles Open four months ago, already has won $22,413 — $32,000 more in the first six months than his best previous full year, 1981 when he won the Heritage Classic and the Philadelphia Classic.

Before this year, Tewell had seriously considered curtailing his Tour play to devote more time to other business pursuits.

Wimbledon could become 'survival of strongest'

By Martin Loder United Press International

WIMBLEDON, England — Starting at the top with Ivan Lendl and Martina Navratilova, you can look for your favorite players at Wimbledon to be limping, sniffling or winning in pain.

More so than in most years, this 100th celebration of Wimbledon may evolve into a survival of the fittest, or at least of those players fortunate enough to benefit from the better medical advice.

Even before the two week ordeal begins Monday, many of the young tennis stars are bruised or ill and wishing they had just a little more time to recuperate.

Both women though, were suffering from the flu this past week, and while Evert Lloyd saw her temperature rise to 102 degrees, Navratilova was concerned that she'd be in a full two weeks and he has been seeded No. 1.

Navratilova said during a tournament at Eastbourne, "I'm on crutches, but I'm trying to maintain my strength, but I can't do anything else."

"Everyone has it, but I'm not sure it should hurt me. I'm off because this is the third time this year I had a cold, and I'm not usually sick."

Evert Lloyd worked intensely for the French, and came away with the supreme reward, a record five singles crown at Roland Garros. Although her training program has been interrupted by tennis court nursing an inflamed membrane on the palm of his right hand.

Lendl's task would seem to be easier since he has had a similar experience in the past, but he is not the only player to have a sore palm. In fact, Lendl has a sore palm in both hands.

Becker should be fit again when he begins defense of his title on Center Court Monday against Argentine Eduardo Bengocher, but he also recognizes that he no longer can slip through unnoticed.

"Going back to Wimbledon is not easy," he said. "Last year was my second time I played Wimbledon. No one knew me. I played matches and won them. No one knew my weapons."

"Now if someone plays me and beats me it's a very big win for them. Usually I like to play under pressure, so I'm looking forward to it."

In Becker's favor is his position in the opposite half of the draw from Lendl, meaning he won't have to worry about the top seeded player for the first round.

Lendl faces a solid opening round opponent in Leonardo Lavezzo, an 18-year-old Mexican ranked No. 68. With both Becker and fifth seed Stefan Edberg, an excellent grass court player, in the other half, Lendl's biggest threats in his quarter are No. 8 Anders Jarryd and No. 10 Tim Mayotte, winner of last week's Queen's tournament.

"I feel I've done everything I can in terms of my game for Wimbledon," Lendl said, implying that some things, such as his injury, were out of his control.

Batterymates Catcher Matt Midford and pitcher Jason Marsh of the Atlanta Braves.

Despite the efforts of Marsh, who excelled on the mound, Wolff/Zackun pulled out an 18-12 victory. Mark Anderson had six RBIs for the winners.

FISH volunteers keep the wheels turning for needy

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the Manchester Area Conference of Churches.

By Nancy Carr
MACC Director

FISH of Manchester is an interfaith group of men and women dedicated to providing a helping hand to neighbors with special needs. Organized locally in 1986, FISH volunteers soon discovered the tremendous need locally for transportation of handicapped and elderly, particularly to medical appointments. By 1977, these "good neighbors" were handling 17 calls daily. Since then, they have organized a very effective structure to coordinate a volunteer transportation effort. At the same time their efforts had attracted center public attention on the transportation crisis and by 1978, Phone-a-Ride bus service for Manchester elderly and handicapped was instituted. Drawing a deep (and relieved) breath, FISH volunteers settled into a supportive role. Now these "good neighbors" provide transportation for those who do not qualify for Phone-a-Ride services or for those who need an "escort." Young heads of the household, mothers on limited income without a car or available friend or family still find it difficult to get a sick youngster to the doctor or well-child clinic.

Because FISH volunteers are primarily interested in helping, they operate with few meetings and as little organizational structure as possible. A team of three coordinators keep the wheels (literally) turning through telephone and transportation volunteers (Jean Sheridan and Ruth Ruff in Glass) and preparing and mailing out the monthly duty rosters. (Pat Dow.) We would most warmly invite you to join hands with the FISH volunteers. At the present time there is a very real need for OODs (Officers of the Day). One or more days a month OOD volunteers take on the responsibility of calling Phone-a-Ride at noon and at 3:30 p.m. to set the referrals and from the Larsen team, Gunnar Larsen, Rita Jaworski, Bibiane Poudrier.

Phon-a-Ride services. OOD then arrange for a volunteer driver. Serving as officer of the day is a perfect volunteer assignment for shut-ins or for mothers who need to be home for naps and feeding of little ones but who can offer an hour or so once a month for phone coordination. FISH drivers can volunteer either to drive one day a month or to serve with the on-day-as-available team. The number of trips varies considerably. Pat tells me that some times you may have as many as three trips on your scheduled day to drive and may have none the next three months. Because of the current shortage of volunteers, some FISH good neighbors are doing double duty. Pat Dow, Ruth Ann Glass, Joan O'Loughlin and Mary Jaworski serve both as OODs and as drivers. The OOD team also includes Betty Barocco, Cindy Stroup, Ruth Flavel, Ann Carson, Dottie Carter, Erna Nash and Mrs. Gunnar Larsen. Drivers include the other half of the Larsen team, Gunnar Larsen, Rita Jaworski, Bibiane Poudrier.

Neutron beam fights tumors

DISPATCH ASSISTANT

WANTED

GOLDEN OAKS REALTY

AUTOMOTIVE SALES

The Church of Christ, Lydall and Vernon streets, is preparing for its 25th anniversary reunion. The celebration will take place on Sunday, June 29, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the church. A luncheon will be served at 12:30 p.m. The church is currently serving the Windsor Church of Christ. A dinner is planned at the Manchester Country Club for those who helped found the church. Guest speakers will include people who were children at the time of the church's founding. Master of Ceremonies for this evening will be Steve Holt, a former minister of the Windsor Church of Christ.

Why do educators stay in their field? For many, it's a combination of factors. Some are motivated by a desire to help children, while others are drawn to the intellectual challenge of the profession. Some are simply comfortable in their own skin, having spent years in the classroom. For many, the work is a calling, a chance to make a difference in the lives of young people. Some are simply passionate about their subject, and that passion is contagious.

Saunders was honored for his contributions to the field of education and his dedication to his students. He was a mentor to many and a role model for all who have the opportunity to work with him. His legacy lives on in the students he has inspired and the lives he has touched.

Neutron beam therapy is a non-invasive treatment for cancer. It uses a beam of neutrons to target and destroy tumor cells. This method is particularly effective for certain types of brain and spinal cord tumors. It is a promising new approach to cancer treatment, offering a less invasive and more targeted alternative to surgery and radiation therapy.

Dispatch Assistant: Growing irregular route common carrier, with 45-state operating authority seeks experienced drivers on a daily basis and specific knowledge of long-haul trucking and trucking industry. We offer an excellent employee benefits package and commensurate with experience. Martin Kelly Vanlight Transport Inc. 262 Toward Ave. Manchester, CT 06040. Equal Opportunity Employer.

The story behind the story

By Josie

Q. Please tell me whatever you can about Christopher Plummer. D.G., Dothan, Ala.

A. He's 56, was born in Toronto, the son of an Irish lawyer father and English-Canadian mother who divorced when he was a year old. His mother and her family in Montreal raised him, encouraging him in the appreciation of the arts — opera, poetry, theater. He studied piano as a boy and considered pursuing a career as a concert pianist, but abandoned it in favor of acting, which he first tried in high school.

After graduation, he worked in local repertory companies. Then, at the age of 19, he moved to New York and presented a letter of introduction to a family friend, Broadway producer Robert Whitehead. He got some work, and five years later, made his Broadway debut in a play called "The Starcross Story."

The next year he was on Broadway again in "The Dark Is Light Enough" when a young actress came backstage to congratulate him on his performance. She was Tammy Grimes and they were married the following year. They had a daughter, Amanda, now 28 and a renowned actress on her own, but were divorced in 1960. After the divorce, Plummer moved to England.

While in England, he married again, to British journalist Patricia Lewis, greatly expanded his theater work, particularly by spending two seasons with the Royal Shakespeare Company and starring in the critically lauded play "Royal Hunt of the Sun," and made his film debut in "The Fall of the Roman Empire." He also co-starred in the film that made him internationally famous: "The Sound of Music."

He followed that with "The Return of the Pink Panther," "Inside Daisy Clover," "Murder by Decree" (in which he portrayed Sherlock Holmes), "Eyewitness" and the recent "Lily in Love."

Onstage, his range has been impressive: "Macbeth," "Henry V," "Cyrano," Henry II in "Becket" and a recent triumph as Iago in "Othello." He's also done TV in recent years: "The Scarlet and the Black," "The Thorn Birds" and "Little Gloria: Happy at Last" among the productions.

Currently, he's making a movie called "The Boss's Wife" and plans to follow it with another called "I Love New York." He's also recently finished a miniseries called "Spearfield's Daughter." He lives in Connecticut with his third wife, Elaine.

Q. Please tell me where Betty Buckley was raised. What is she doing now? Dee Bradford, Stockton, Calif.

A. Betty Lynn Buckley grew up in Fort Worth, Texas, and attended Texas Christian University where she studied acting and singing — against her father's wishes but with her mother's encouragement. Upon graduation, she moved to New York and started acting professionally almost immediately, in the Broadway musicals "1776" and "Pippin."

A few seasons ago, she returned to Broadway in "Cats" and won a Tony for it. And Broadway is what she's doing now. She's starring in the musical "The Mystery of Edwin Drood." Her dog, Bridget, is in the show too.

Betty Buckley

Q. Whatever happened to Al Hirt, the trumpeter? Is he still performing? Elsie Shingler, Modesto, Calif.

A. According to his agent, he is. He'll be performing in Saratoga, Calif., in August; other dates should be scheduled after that.

Q. Please tell me how old Rutger Hauer is, if he's married, and what movies he's appeared in. K.B., Jermyn, Pa.

A. He's 42, and was married to his longtime girlfriend last November. His movies include "Soldier of Orange," "Nighthawks," "Chanel Solitaire," "The Wilby Conspiracy," "The Osterman Weekend," "Eureka," "A Breed Apart," "Blade Runner," "Inside the Third Reich," on TV, and the recent "The Hitcher." He's currently making a film called "Wanted: Dead or Alive" in which he, for a change, plays the good guy

Q. Could you tell me all about Andrew McCarthy — how old he is, where he's from, what movies he's made? Krista F. Brawn, Burt's Corner, N.B., Canada; Suzanne Adams, Clarks Summit, Pa.; J.C., Ontario, Calif.

A. He's 23, from Westfield, N.J., the third of four sons of a stock analyst and his wife. He was studying drama at New York University when he heard about a casting call for the movie "Class." He went, was called back eight times to read, and the day he was told that he'd gotten the role (of Rob Lowe's school friend who has an affair with Lowe's mother, played by Jacqueline Bisset) was the same day he was supposed to register for his junior year. Needless to say, he didn't.

He went into the film "Heaven Help Us" after "Class," followed by "St. Elmo's Fire" and the recent "Pretty in Pink." (In between he had a brief stint on Broadway in the play "The Boys of Winter," co-starring Matt Dillon.)

Right now, he's shooting a movie called "Mannequin," a romance between a store window dresser and the mannequin who comes to life only for him. It's due out next February.

Q. Could you please tell me about Jason Connery from "Robin Hood"? I think he's adorable. A.F., East Windsor, N.J.; Cathy, Fresno, Calif.

A. He's 23, the son of Sean Connery and Australian actress Diane Cilento (best known for her role in the movie "Tom Jones"). His parents split up when he was 10 and he lived with his mother before being sent to the strict Gordonstoun School in Scotland (Prince Charles's alma mater), where he started acting in school plays. He then took acting lessons but, ironically, it was his stepmother, Micheline, who encouraged him to go into the business.

He landed a small role in the American film "The Lords of Discipline" that was shot in England, then one in a French-English film, "Dream One." A part as an athlete in NBC's "The First Olympics" followed, as did an Australian film, "The Boy Who Had Everything," in which he co-starred with his mother.

He recently finished another somewhat erotic film called "The Venetian Woman" in which he plays a young man who becomes romantically involved with two women, one played by Italian sex symbol Laura Antonelli.

Q. My friends and I are having a disagreement as to Andy Griffith's age. Could you please give us his birthdate and also when his movie career started? Loren Jones, Walkerton, Ind.

A. He was born June 1, 1926 in Mount Airy, N.C. His movie career started in 1957 with "A Face in the Crowd." He then recreated on film his first starring role onstage in the movie of "No Time for Sergeants."

Mixed responses at class reunion

Uncertain woman reunites with class after 50 years

By Elise Bell

This is the time of year for reunions and, according to newspaper stories, they are so popular these days that successful businessmen have been set up just to run reunion parties.

My husband and I have never been big reunion people, but when he got an announcement that his high-school class was having its 50th reunion, he decided we should go.

I had not met my husband until after high school, and it was a strange feeling to see a glimpse of that part of his life in which I had not participated. Like many long-married couples, I had always had the feeling we had been together since we were born. Now I was learning about an unknown chapter in his life.

"This husband of yours never got anything less than an A!" "He was editor of the school magazine and in all the school plays." "He was a hot saxophone player in the band." "All the girls thought he was so cute with his curly red hair."

I looked at my husband with new eyes.

"How come you never told me these things?" I asked him. He shrugged. "Just modest."

But I knew he was pleased at his reception and the fact that most of his former classmates recognized him after 50 years, even before he put his name tag on.

"Your smile hasn't changed a bit!" they'd say. "I'd know that smile anywhere!"

Fifty is a formidable number of years, and it was with some apprehension that my husband greeted his old friends. Happily, he needn't have been apprehensive. The returning people were robust, energetic and attractive.

Of the 100 members of the class, 16 had died, most of them casualties of World War II. Of the 84 living, 64 had come back for this reunion, from all over the United States. It was an impressive number. Obviously it had been a close class, and a lot of feeling was still there.

In the small town in Pennsylvania where this reunion was being held, as in most towns 50 years ago, families stayed together and in one place, and the children went to school together for years. In many ways, this reunion was like stepping into a Norman Rockwell painting, into a wholesome, innocent atmosphere.

Then, after we had been seated for dinner at tables of 10, a new couple entered the room. The woman was dressed in a long formal satin evening dress and had a gardenia corsage on her right shoulder. Her hair was teased into a beehive hairdo and she looked ready for the senior prom. Accompanying her was a man in a suit that didn't fit him and in which he seemed uncomfortable — as if he hardly ever wore it. They sat down at our table. Nobody recognized them.

Before anyone could say anything, the woman spoke. She had a long, lugubrious face with sad eyes and her voice was equally melancholy.

"You probably don't remember me," she said. "You see, I never graduated. But I was a member of this class. My name is Betty Gordon Parks and this is my husband, Albert."

Albert looked even more uncomfortable. The woman kept on talking.

"What happened was that while I was in high school, diphtheria and scarlet fever swept through our family of six children. I was out of school the whole year. Then when I came back the next year, my mother got sick, and when I had a job offer, I had to take it."

She paused. "Things were tough then. There was a depression. We were very poor."

"Sometimes," she said, "a job is more important than a diploma."

At this point an announcement was made that a class picture of members only was to be taken in the next room. As people started to leave, Betty remained seated.

"I don't think I should be in the picture," she said. "After all, I never graduated."

"But you were invited to this reunion," I told her. "You're considered a member of the class."

"Well, if you think it's OK," said Betty hesitantly.

She stood up, straightened her corsage and, picking up the hem of her long gown, walked away.

"She'll give the picture some glamour," I said to her husband. He looked pleased. "She likes to get dressed up," he said.

"We live on a farm and there's not much chance."

The picture-taking seemed to perk Betty up. She not only joined in the conversation at the table but even left to mingle a little. When it was time to leave, we saw her talking to someone near the door. As we walked by, we could hear her saying, "You probably don't remember me. I never graduated. You see, what happened was...

A few days ago we received our copy of the class picture. There was Betty in the front row, with her gardenia corsage and satin dress in the midst of her classmates.

I thought of her framing that picture and hanging it proudly on the wall in her farmhouse. Looking at it, you would never know she had never graduated. ■

Crispino talks on the telephone shortly before his nightly sports newscast. "If you're not going to be an individual, you shouldn't be doing it," he says.

Story by John Mitchell

'You're on, Mike'

For Crispino, sports and TV mix easily

In a dark editing bay on the ground floor of WVIT-TV in West Hartford, sports director Mike Crispino creates electronic magic. As the tape squeals through an editing machine and two consoles, Crispino and a video editor piece together a three-and-a-half-minute feature on auto racing. The segment will be part of the station's "Thirty Reasons to Watch Channel 30" promotion.

"There's so much dynamite material here," Crispino says to the editor, as he leans back in his chair.

Lights flash, the counter turns, and a mechanic's tool chest glows in freeze frame on the consoles. Crispino will fit a tiny fraction of the shot into the finished montage, but isn't sure how much. Again the image appears, then is reversed and cued once more, until Crispino is certain he's using the exact amount.

"That's good," he says, satisfied with the length.

Moments later, he makes his way down the long hallway to his office, already late in preparing Greater Hartford for its daily sports fix.

"I've always been interested in sports," Crispino, 33, says. "But not the broadcast aspect of it."

But when he was a kid growing up in Manchester, he used to make phony broadcasts in his room with a tape recorder, recalls his father, Sam Crispino.

Crispino's deep love for sports showed itself at East Catholic High School, where he strived to be number one on the field instead of in the ratings, excelling in almost every athletic endeavor.

Trinity College coach Stan Ogronnik, his former basketball instructor at East Catholic High School, calls Crispino "an all-around person, good in the classroom, a good athlete, probably in everything he played."

Jim Penders, East Catholic's baseball coach, remembers Crispino as a very intelligent player, though not the best hitter.

He says he'll never forget one offbeat play by Crispino that occurred in 1970.

"He won a quarter final state tournament on a swing that hit the knob of the bat," Penders says. The ball dribbled down the third base line, and Crispino had the good sense to run to first on what the defense assumed was a foul, says Penders. The winning run scored on the fluke hit.

Penders also remembers Crispino as a self-assured kid with a big mouth. "He always had a good gift of gab."

Crispino had originally planned to go to law school, and get a degree in criminal justice. "At the time, I wanted to work with young people," he says.

While at C.W. Post, a branch of Long Island University, he did some radio work. He enjoyed the experience enough to get a master's degree in broadcasting and library science at Simmons College.

The next few years were a blur of call letters at various small radio stations, including WRCQ in Farmington and what was then Manchester's WINF.

In 1978 Crispino helped produce a music show for Connecticut Public Television. The job made him realize that he could get paid for anchoring. "I said, 'Jeez, I can articulate some of my ideas and people listen.'"

A brief stint as a morning cut-in man at ESPN's Bristol headquarters led to temporary fill-in duties in 1982 at WVIT, where he had tried to get a full-time job twice. He advanced in the ranks, and today, with news anchor Joanne Nesti and weatherman Brad Field, forms the nucleus of an award-winning station in a market rated 23rd overall in the nation.

At his cubicle in the newsroom of WVIT, pictures and cut-outs from newspapers plaster the wall. Most of them are about the Hartford Whalers. "I became a fan this year, when they started winning," he confesses.

Amid the sports clutter is a black-and-white glossy of Paul Newman, pulling a bottle of his salad dressing out of a hat. A black sticker on Crispino's desk reads, "When in doubt, mumble."

This is where Crispino oversees his staff of two and a couple of interns who help out when needed.

He usually starts his day around 3:30 p.m., gathering information, watching the wires, and putting together the 4 minutes or so he's allotted for his broadcast.

Crispino admits that the brevity of his broadcasts is a hassle.

"It's frustrating mostly," he says. "Everything you do has to be directly to the point." His method?

"I read a hell of a lot, and I talk to everybody."

With his relaxed on-camera manner, Crispino comes across more like that good-natured know-it-all down at the bar than a TV newscaster. He says he wasn't always so relaxed.

"You couldn't tell what my personality was to begin with," he says.

Crispino has improved by watching himself on tape. What the audience sees, Crispino says, is not who he is.

"It's acting in a sense. You're looking for ways to get your point across."

That's just one of Crispino's theories on what makes a good sportscaster.

"Sports is very opinionated. To me, you've got to have an opinion," he says. "You also want to tickle their imagination, tickle their sense of curiosity. I try to give them insight."

Those methods have won him a decent share of regular followers who like to call him to correct errors. "People love to see you make mistakes," he says. "I try and forget them."

Crispino says one of the advantages of being a public figure is that it enables him to get more information from people on the street. It's one of the few pluses.

He doesn't relish being recognized wherever he goes. "It's a nuisance, but it comes with the territory," he says.

Weatherman Field joined the station around the same time as Crispino. He said that Crispino helps the Channel 30 team work better as a result of their close alliance.

"We're all kind of rookies," Field says. "This is our first big job."

Crispino's rival, Dave Smith, sportscaster at Hartford's WFSB, admits that Crispino has learned plenty.

"He does a good job," Smith says. "I hope they allow him to continue to grow."

In an effort to improve, Crispino is trying to do more reporting, a skill he says he needs to work on.

"That's the way you keep in touch with what's going on," he says.

He'd eventually like to do play-by-play broadcasting for live-sports events, and has managed to do some basketball commentary at local colleges.

But Crispino isn't ruling anything out. "In this business, you never know what's in your future," he says. "You've got to be ready."

The commercial break will end in 10 seconds. There's no need to call quiet on the set this particular Friday. Young technicians scoot across the cement floor, making adjustments with mikes and head phones. Crispino jokes with the crew as he edits copy.

The bachelor sportscaster will become sports player this weekend, enjoying some tennis and golf while spending time with his parents and brother in Manchester.

"Mike, you've got about three minutes," the floor manager reminds him, and with a pointed finger, signals that he is live and on the air.

"Big weekend of sports on Channel 30," Crispino begins. His booming voice carries across the electronic airwaves. And like magic, he's already there in his family's living room, a self-proclaimed sports nut who doesn't need that tape recorder any more to make his point.

Crispino edits a late-night baseball game from recently-installed equipment at WVIT.

'Roommate' situation is embarrassing

High school student sleeps in the same room as his mom

By Dr. June Reinisch

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I'm worried about a friend. He is in high school and lives with his mother. There is only one bedroom, and when a friend asked where he slept, he said he slept with his mother and acted embarrassed. Now we've (all his friends) gotten worried about this. Could this sleeping arrangement jeopardize his future psychological development?

DEAR READER: There's no way to answer your question without knowing how the young man and his mother feel about the situation and how they manage to maintain their privacy. His embarrassment could result from the fact that they cannot afford larger quarters, and not from concern about intimate behavior with his mother.

There is very little research on the effects of shared parent-child sleeping quarters in contemporary U.S. culture. The general psychiatric rule was that permitting children to share a parent's bed would lead to psychological problems. However, one study found that among families who could afford separate rooms for the children, nearly 70 percent of the children studied were permitted into their parent's bed if they were ill, frightened or needed attention of some sort. Very few stayed the entire night, however, or stayed in the parent's bed every night.

Therefore, the question of parents and children sleeping together should be discussed in terms of the adult's motives and the attitudes of all the family members. For example, if a single mother demanded that an adolescent son sleep with her because she felt lonely, the behavior might indeed have a negative effect on her son's psychosexual development.

On the other hand, there are no data indicating whether abnormal development would occur if the sleeping arrangements were dictated by financial necessity, adequate provisions for privacy were maintained and no sexual interaction was involved. You have raised a fascinating question in terms of how cultures differ in what they regard as good and bad for children. Americans might be more likely to emphasize the potentially sexual aspects of parent-child sleeping arrangements, while some other cultures view sleeping together as a positive, nurturing aspect of family life.

A study of the sleeping arrangements of Japanese families, for example, showed that even when extra rooms were available, everyone often slept in the same room. You could let your friend know that he's welcome to tell you about any personal problems he may have. Unless he raises the issue or is having problems at school or in making and keeping friends, there would be no reason to ask him directly about his household arrangements.

DEAR DR. REINISCH: At what age are young women capable of getting pregnant? If a girl menstruates at age 12, can she get pregnant?

DEAR READER: Although many young women are not fully fertile in the first few years of menstruation (because they are not releasing eggs regularly), some are highly fertile quite early in life. The youngest mother on record is aged 5 years, 6 months, who delivered a 6½-pound baby boy by Cesarean section. This Peruvian girl had begun menstruating at age 3 and is considered to be one of the more famous examples of precocious puberty in females. There are also cases of young women becoming pregnant

The Kinsey Report

Swinging sex
DEAR DR. REINISCH: I am a 34-year-old divorced career woman who is also a single parent. Recently I've begun to think a great deal about exploring sexual options, such as bisexuality and group sex. I have even gone so far as to talk to a person who is a member of a swingers' group.

I have several concerns, however. What types of people participate in such groups? How can I be sure I'm protected against venereal disease? How can I be sure my anonymity is protected? Could my interest in swinging be a sign that I am afraid of commitment and intimacy?

DEAR READER: The little research that has been done on swingers or group sex consists of small samples, so it's impossible to generalize about who is involved in these activities and why. Estimates are that around 2 percent of the U.S. adult population has tried swinging or group sex at least once, and perhaps one-half of 1 percent has engaged in this behavior on a regular basis.

Definitions of this behavior vary: Some researchers restrict the definition of "swinging" to mate-swapping by married couples, while others include unmarried individuals. Groups apparently evolve their own rules as to who will be included and the types of sexual activity permitted. Any person who violates group rules is excluded from future gatherings, since information about parties is usually passed by word-of-mouth invitations.

You're right to be concerned about sexually transmitted diseases. These studies reported a low incidence of gonorrhea, but more frequently reported problems were crab lice and various vaginal and urinary infections. However, these reports are from data collected before herpes, and certainly AIDS, were at their current levels in the U.S. population. Research on the psychological aspects of swingers is also limited, with some reporting that swinging was seen as just another sexual activity and was "in addition to" a committed relationship. Some members of a group given a standard psychological test had "normal" scores, while others scored high on variables often associated with a need for psychological counseling. It's difficult to meet new people and make informed decisions about possible sexual contact. You might want to consult a psychotherapist to help you sort out your feelings about risk-taking and to assess whether you need help with intimacy feelings, problems some researchers have described for some "swingers."

When safe?
DEAR DR. REINISCH: For six years, my husband and I always used condoms for birth control, except during my periods, when we used nothing. It worked fine. We've just planned for and had a beautiful baby girl, but we are not ready for another yet.

Now my sister tells me that you are most fertile during your period. I've quit having sex without condoms then, too, and my husband is frustrated with this. When is the safest time? Can I get pregnant during my period or not?

DEAR READER: Theoretically, the "safest" time for unprotected intercourse is during menstrual flow, but this is not foolproof. There are a few documented cases in which pregnancy has occurred at this time, presumably because an egg was released and was available for fertilization. In the vast majority of cycles, however, the egg is released about halfway between the first days of sequential menstrual flows, so a woman usually is most fertile about midway between her periods and least fertile during menstrual flow. Other forms of contraception — such as the contraceptive

" You have raised a fascinating question in terms of how cultures differ in what they regard as good and bad for children. Americans might be more likely to emphasize the potentially sexual aspects of parent-child sleeping arrangements, while some other cultures view sleeping together as a positive, nurturing aspect of family life. "

Clitoris's role
DEAR DR. REINISCH: I was wondering about my clitoris. Is it only for sex or does it have some other purpose?

DEAR READER: The sole purpose of a female clitoris is to receive and focus sexual stimulation. This may seem odd until you recall that the genitals of both males and females look exactly alike until about seven weeks after conception. At that point, a male fetus begins to produce testosterone, which stimulates growth of a penis, scrotum and the prostate gland. Without the testosterone, a female fetus continues its normal course of development and produces a clitoris, vulva and vagina. The female clitoris and the glans (tip) of the male penis are essentially the same structure.

'Legal Eagles' surprises

By Bob Thomas

Just when you thought that sophistication had vanished from the silver screen, along comes "Legal Eagles" to gladden the heart and charge the intellect.

It surprisingly comes from Ivan Reitman, the filmmaker who proved with "National Lampoon's Animal House" (as producer) and "Ghostbusters" (as producer-director) that excess can bring success.

"Legal Eagles" presents another side of Ivan Reitman, who also directed "Meatballs" and "Stripes." He has produced and directed a film that some critics may call old-fashioned, in that it has a sprawling cast, well-crafted script, sharp dialogue and a happy ending.

Naturally, Reitman can't escape his past, and he provides explosions, fires and car chases. But all seem applicable to the plot.

The script by Jim Cash and Jack Epps Jr. (from the story

Bob Thomas reviews movies for The Associated Press.

Cinema Review

they wrote with Reitman) evokes memories of the 1940 classic, "Adam's Rib." Debra Winger plays the Katharine Hepburn role as the attorney dedicated to defending her clients against heavy odds. Robert Redford subs for Spencer Tracy as the accomplished prosecutor who opposes her. Daryl Hannah takes over for Judy Holliday as the ditzy beauty accused of murder.

The difference in "Legal Eagles," though, is that Redford and Winger are not married, and they end up on the same side of the case.

The movie opens in the 1960s, when a famed New York artist dies in the fire of his studio. His small daughter is rescued, but his valuable paintings were presumably destroyed.

In today's New York, the grown-up daughter (Hannah) is arrested and charged with the murder of one of her father's associates, who happens to have been her lover. Winger agrees to defend her, though the case seems hopeless. Redford is the prosecutor — until he is photographed in bed with Hannah.

Winger and Redford are the best combination since — well, Hepburn and Tracy. The chemistry is terrific. The sequence in which each battles insomnia in their separate apartments is marvelous, and fans will adore Redford trying to imitate Gene Kelly's "Singin' in the Rain."

Darryl Hannah is not only gorgeous but provides a feyness that adds to the mystery. Brian Dennehy again provides a powerful presence, and Terence Stamp and John McMartin are fine menaces. Roscoe Lee Browne plays the judge with bemused dignity. Manhattan never looked lovelier than through Laszlo Kovacs' lens.

"Legal Eagles," a Universal Picture, is rated PG for language and excitement. Running time: 114 minutes. ■

Film capsules

Absolute Beginners (PG-13) — Eddie O'Connell, Patsy Kensit, David Bowie, Anita Morris. (Musical Fantasy) Music video master Julien Temple overstuffs this 94-minute video with style, sass and sensuality. This stunning story of coming of age in London in 1958 substitutes imagery for narration. The film's major flaw — mixing serious messages with pretty fluff — ultimately destroys it. Neither Bowie nor Morris unleash their talents, but most of the music is irresistible, especially Kensit warbling "Having It All." Grade: C-minus.

Blue City (R) — Judd Nelson, Ally Sheedy, Paul Winfield. (Action) Any resemblance between this amateur shoot-'em-up and the Ross Macdonald hard-boiler on which it is based is coincidental. The plot disappears in the Florida sun, and the dialogue is riddled with profanity. Only Winfield has any notion how to act. Sheedy, who gets worse with each outing, is at her most affected. The disastrously miscast Nelson can't decide if his character is a justice-seeker or a wise guy. The few good moments are stolen from "Miami Vice," and we can't give credit for plagiarism. Grade: C-minus.

Jo Jo Dancer, Your Life Is Calling (R) — Richard Pryor, Debbie Allen, Paula Kelly, Scooby Mitchell. (Drama) Several years ago, Pryor almost died while free-basing cocaine; this is his cinematic catharsis. Pryor's "true confession" is styled after Bob Fosse's "All That Jazz." Flashbacks occur after drug-riddled comedian Jo Jo (Pryor) has an out-of-body experience. But Jo Jo's drug problem is never explained satisfactorily, and the film, which Pryor also co-wrote, produced and directed, is a dull ego trip. The film does, however, give ample opportunity for the cast to spout more obscenities than have ever been heard on the big screen. Grade: D.

Letter to Brezhnev (R) — Alexandra Pigg, Margi Clarke, Alfred Molina, Peter Firth. (New Wave Comedy) The Liverpool cinema is alive and well in this original story of two girls in search of excitement and romance. They spend the night with two Russian sailors, but Elaine (Pigg) falls in love and determines to join her beau in Russia. No one can dissuade her, but the question remains: Can life in the Soviet Union compare to the freedom of down-and-out Kirby? This film of innocence and passion suffers only from a few overwritten scenes. The performances are marvelous and Pigg is a true beauty. Grade: B-minus.

Pollergast II: The Other Side (PG-13) — Craig T. Nelson, JoBeth Williams, Heather O'Rourke, Zeldia Rubinstein. (Horror) Those pesky ghosts have returned to haunt the Freeling family, but this appearance is hardly terrifying. Without Steven Spielberg's eerie edge, this is an insipid film masquerading as a thriller. The scary scenes are silly and repulsive — watch out then a worm winks at Nelson — and the plot defies explanation. The tongue-in-cheek humor, however, is well-paced, and Nelson gives a great performance. But Julian Beck steals the film with an Oscar-caliber performance — unfortunately, his last. Grade: C.

Short Circuit (PG) — Steve Guttenberg, Ally Sheedy, Fisher Stevens. (Comedy) What sounds like absurdist comedy — a robot built as the ultimate nuclear weapon is on the lam — is actually an uplifting anti-war film that is one of this year's best. Guttenberg is Dr. Newton Crosby, tireless creator of Number Five, a mechanical soldier that looks like a walking car crash but has a heart bigger than GM. Sheedy fills the film with bounce and good-natured realism as Five's first friend. Even when the message is relentless, the film never loses appeal. "Short Circuit" is everything "E.T." should have been. Grade: A.

Top Gun (PG) — Tom Cruise, Kelly McGillis, Anthony Edwards, Val Kilmer. (Action) Imagine a cross between "Iron Eagle" and "An Officer and a Gentleman," and you have a good notion what "Top Gun" is all about. "Top Gun" is technically more proficient than the other two flicks but doesn't pack their emotional punch. The aerial dog fights are spectacular; the script is reasonably intelligent, and the acting is uniformly good. But it's not easy to get worked up over an "enemy" (presumably the Soviet Union) that is never mentioned by name. Grade: B.

Pearcy's pose isn't shocking

By Ethlie Ann Vere

Madonna may not have pulled any punches when she posed (long before the fact, admittedly) for nude photos that wound up in Penthouse magazine.

But Ratt vocalist Stephen Pearcy turned modest when asked to smile and strip for a July layout in Playgirl magazine.

"I don't believe in over-exposure," laughs Pearcy, who says that his beefcake pics are "not going to shock any one's parents."

Hard rockers Ratt, who went platinum again with their latest LP, "Invasion of Your Privacy," have a reputation for being crazed party rodents both on the road and back home in Los Angeles.

Pearcy's unusually restrained behavior may indicate that a reassessment is in the offing. "I don't believe in doing things in bad taste," he insists. "I respect our audiences."

Ethlie Ann Vere tunes in to rock for Newspaper Enterprise Association.

Video Beat

The band is currently working up tunes for a new album, and expect to begin recording in July. The disc could be released as soon as October.

It was a history-making day in the USSR when a collection of Russian rock stars performed a charity concert for victims of the Chernobyl nuclear reactor meltdown.

Although local concert promoters had hoped for the participation of Western acts — both Sting and Elton John were considered — the show ended up relying on home-grown talent.

About $125,000 was raised through ticket sales ($5 a head), which seems minuscule compared to mega-events like Live-Aid. Yet the sum is remarkable considering that the Soviets, (1) frown on rock music, and (2) believe that the state is the only charity you need.

Two new categories have been added to the Grammy Awards for next year: Best New Age Recording and Best Contemporary Folk Recording.

Discontinued have been the categories for Best Vocal Arrangement and Best New Classical Artist.

You can start calling them Dr. Simon and Garfunkel.

Singer-songwriter Paul Simon received an honorary degree in music from Berklee College in Boston. Also receiving the Doctor of Music certificate was keyboardist Herbie Hancock.

"Frank's Wild Years" started out as a song by Tom Waits. Now, it's a play by Tom Waits — and starring Tom Waits, to boot.

The Steppenwolf Theatre Company in Chicago — which boasts an advisory panel including Dustin Hoffman, Warren Beatty, Meryl Streep and Ellen Burstyn — will present the new work as the final offering of its current season. ■

Music makers: space age rock group

LONDON (AP) — Love And Rockets is into music, the new British rock trio insists, not space travel. They do admit, though, that their name is an attempt to portray how their music fits into today's world.

"It's the idea of love in the nuclear age," said bass player Daniel Ash, 27. Guitarrist David J., 29, who dropped his surname, Haskins, said: "It's a sign of the times."

With David J.'s brother, drummer Kevin Haskins, 25, the three became the nucleus of the successful Bauhaus rock group. But they changed their musical style and are not interested in building Love And Rockets on Bauhaus' fame.

"We want this group to stand up on its own," David J. said in an interview. "Bauhaus started from the bottom and we don't mind doing it again."

Love And Rockets talked about its music and goals before leaving London for a tour of the United States that started May 30 in Santa Cruz, Calif. The band is still based in Northampton, the northern England town where all three grew up. Ash met the Haskins brothers while in art school and they teamed up with singer Pete Murphy to form Bauhaus in 1979.

After four albums and several Top 40 singles, the group split in 1983. Ash and Kevin Haskins formed Tones on Tail, and David J. formed Jazz Butcher and the Jaywalkers. When those projects folded, they decided to reunite. ■

Wise eyes in a boy's face

By Bob Thomas

LOS ANGELES — Among the pack of young actors who now dominate the film world, none has better credentials than Matthew Broderick.

He was, after all, star of two Neil Simon hits on Broadway, "Brighton Beach Memoirs" and "Biloxi Blues." In television he appeared in the South African drama by Athol Fugard.

"Master Harold... and the Boys." In films he has enjoyed box-office success with the suspenseful "WarGames."

This summer Broderick stars in the latest John Hughes paean to those lazy, crazy high school days, "Ferris Bueller's Day Off."

Broderick, quiet, thoughtful with sad, wise eyes in a boy's face, plays a brilliantly devious high schooler who fakes illness to ditch school and romp through Chicago with a few pals — Alan Ruck and Mia Sara. In the film's major scene, Broderick leaps on a parade float and blasts a rock number to the cheers of thousands.

"I was very scared," the actor admitted in an interview in his Sunset Strip hotel suite. "Fortunately, the sequence was carefully choreographed beforehand."

"It was shot on two Saturdays in the heart of downtown

Chicago. The first day was during a real parade, and John got some very long shots. Then radio stations carried announcements inviting people to take part in 'a John Hughes movie.' The word got around fast, and 10,000 people showed up.

"For the final shot, I turned around and saw a river of people. I put my hands up at the end of the number and heard this huge roar. ... I can understand how rock stars feel. That kind of reaction feeds you."

At 24, Broderick's youthful face allows him to play a high schooler, but he vows that it's the last time.

"In 'Project X,' which I just finished, I played a 23-year-old," he added. "I like playing adults, and I don't want to return to high school. But then, I've said before."

Broderick came naturally to acting. His father was the late James Broderick, a stage and film actor best known for the TV series, "Family." His mother, Patricia Broderick, is an artist who also wrote and directed plays.

His first big role was in the hit "Torch Song Trilogy," in which Neil Simon cast him. The playwright spotted him. The playwright cast him as Marsha Mason's son in "Max Dugan Returns," and then in the two semi-autobiographical plays.

Broderick has also managed to work in two Horton Foote films, "1918" and "On Valentine's Day," as well as the fantasy, "Ladyhawke."

Is there anything in his life except work?

"Sure is," he grinned. "I've been trying to make time for myself, and I've finally succeeded. This is the first time in five or six years that I haven't had a script waiting for me. I just want to wander for a while — not far. It'll probably be within a five-block radius of my apartment in Manhattan." ■

Tennis turnout

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Rene Enriquez, one of the stars of TV's "Hill Street Blues," has invited Hollywood's tennis-playing stars to Mazatlan, Mexico, to compete in a tournament to help the city's orphanages.
Scheduled for July 13-15, the tournament will include some of Enriquez' TV co-stars — Dan Trivanti, Bruce Weitz, Betty Thomas, Ed Marinaro and Dennis Franz. Also scheduled to play are Donna Mills, Laura Dern, Reni Santoni, Robert Waldon, Jason Bateman, Lindsey Bloom and Deborah Raffin.
Enriquez, who has a second home in Mazatlan, said proceeds from the event will go to help the victims of last year's earthquake in Mexico.

Danza departure

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Tony Danza, star of the TV series "Who's The Boss?," takes a break from the show to star in "Doing Life," an NBC movie based on the true story of a convict who becomes the country's first jailhouse lawyer. Danza will portray Jerry Rosenberg, a small-time Brooklyn hoodlum involved in a robbery in which two policemen are killed. Rosenberg is convicted and sentenced to death. Law school correspondence courses help Rosenberg get his sentence commuted to life imprisonment. Danza, a former professional boxer who gained fame in the old "Taxi" TV series, has appeared in such movies as "Going Ape" and "Hollywood Knights."

Make your own beauty products

Easy, inexpensive recipes make you look and feel your best

By Kathleen G. Aho

The current trend in beauty, as in cuisine, fitness and lifestyle, is toward a more healthful, natural approach. Several major cosmetic and body-care product companies have taken a good look at that trend and have responded with lines of herbal beauty products. There are now cleansers, masks, shampoos, hair rinses and bath items in a variety of botanical choices and with bewildering lists of ingredients.

But why buy them when you can make them yourself easily and inexpensively and be sure of what they contain? You can, like I do, create your own botanical beautifiers at home. I became interested in homemade herbal beauty products a few years ago when I was looking for quality, natural beautifiers at a low cost. After a little research and a lot of experimentation, I created several easy, healthful recipes that really work.

Homemade products like these have been used for generations by women around the world. Their wholesome ingredients will help you look and feel your best.

VERBENA CORNMEAL CLEANSER
2 cups ground cornmeal
1 teaspoon dried lemon verbena
3 tablespoons warm water

Mix the water and the verbena together in a bowl. Let the herbs soak for two minutes. Add the cornmeal to the water and mix well.

Apply the cleanser to your face with small circular movements. Remove with a rinse of warm water.

APRICOT AND LEMON FACE MASK (for normal or combination skin)
1 or 2 fresh apricots
1 teaspoon lemon juice

Mix both ingredients and crush together until pulpy. Apply the mask in a thin layer to face and throat, carefully avoiding eyes. Let the mask harden for 5-10 minutes. Wash mask off with warm water.

SESAME CAMOMILE FACE MASK (for dry complexions)
2 tablespoons light

sesame oil
1 teaspoon crushed dried camomile flowers

Combine the oil and camomile in a small bowl. Mix thoroughly. Apply the mask to face and neck, avoiding eyes. Allow the mask to rest for 5 minutes. Wash well with warm water.

CUCUMBER FACE MASK (for normal to oily complexions)
2 tablespoons mashed fresh cucumber
1 fresh egg white

Blend ingredients together well. Apply to face and throat, avoiding eyes. Let the mask harden for 10 minutes. Remove with warm water.

ROSEMARY SHAMPOO (for brunettes and redheads)
2 teaspoons dried rosemary
1 cup boiling water
12-15 ounces mild baby shampoo

Pour 1 cup boiling water over the rosemary in a bowl. Let steep overnight. Strain out the herbs and pour the liquid back into the bowl. Mix the herb water with the baby shampoo. Rebottle and label.

CAMOMILE SHAMPOO (especially for blondes)
2 teaspoons dried camomile flowers
1 teaspoon dried calendula blossoms (optional)
1 cup boiling water
12-15 ounces mild baby shampoo

Pour the boiling water over the herbs in a bowl. Let steep overnight. Strain out the herbs and pour the liquid back into the bowl. Combine the herb water with the shampoo and mix well. Rebottle and label.

SAGE HAIR RINSE (especially for brunettes)
1 tablespoon dried sage (or, for blondes, substitute dried camomile)
2 cups boiling water

Simmer the herb in the water until a "tea" forms. Let the liquid cool to tepid. Strain out the herb. Retain the water and use as a last rinse after shampooing with an herbal shampoo.

HERBAL BATH SALTS
2 cups Epsom salts

Make a bag with the cheesecloth, fill with the dried

You can make face masks, shampoos and herbal bath salts at low cost with natural ingredients.

flowers or herbs and tie the top closed. Place bag and the water in a pot. Cover with a lid and boil for 5 minutes. Turn off the heat and let the blossoms steep for 15 minutes longer. Remove the herb bag. Pour the fragrant water into a full tub of bath water.

STIMULATING HERBAL BATH
1 cup dried herbs or flowers (mint, rosemary, thyme, parsley, orange peel, or marigold blossoms)
cheesecloth bag
2-3 cups water

Fill the cheesecloth bag. Close it tightly with a tie. Prepare an herbal "tea" by boiling it in the water, covered, for 5 minutes. Remove from heat and let the mixture steep for 10-15 minutes. Remove the herb bag and pour the "tea" into a full tub of water.

RELAXING HERBAL BATH
1 cup dried herbs or flowers (rose petals, lavender, sage, lemon balm or camomile)

cheesecloth bag
2-3 cups water

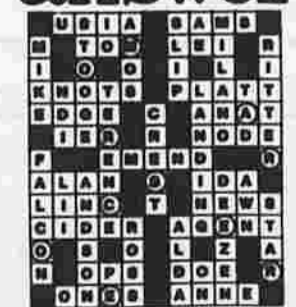

Fill the bag with herbs or flowers. Tie it tightly closed. Boil the bag in the water for 5 minutes, covered. Let the bag steep for 10 minutes off the heat. Remove the herb bag. Pour the fragrant liquid into a tubful of warm water.

FLORAL AFTER-BATH POWDER
4 tablespoons crushed dried blossoms (lavender, lilac, rose, violet or camomile)
4 tablespoons sifted cornstarch

Pulverize the crushed flowers in a food processor, blender or with a mortar and pestle to a fine powder. Mix the floral powder well with the cornstarch. Store the powder in an airtight container. Apply to the body with clean dry puff.

Travel cheap

Discover options between jet setting and camping

By Phyllis Zauner

"There are three wants that can never be satisfied," wrote Ralph Waldo Emerson in 1853.

"that of the rich, who wants something more, that of the sick, who wants something different, and that of the traveler, who says, 'Anywhere but here.'"

The problem, Mr. Emerson, is that there is never enough money to satisfy the traveler's addiction. The spirit is willing, but the wallet is weak.

The true travelholic, of course, will find a way. The best need not be the most expensive. The ultimate aim is to stretch your dollar power. You need not always pay scalpers' prices for charm, top-grade comfort and gourmet-level food.

Overlook for the moment the fact that your cash assets are frankly somewhat less than unlimited. Consider alternatives. To save on travel costs, you may have to give up some low-down bargains. Consider, for example, a $109 week on Spain's Costa del Sol for lodgings and all meals, living in an "apartotel" complete with kitchen, swimming pool, garden, bar and a mini-supermarket. That comes in a $999 package that covers round-trip flight from New York to London and on to Malaga, Spain. Extra weeks in Spain (why not stay at these prices?) are $109. The kicker is that it's all over at mid-April.

Here, then, are some tips for traveling that will put you in a category somewhere between the jet set and the backpack bunch.

The off-season junket. How about this? For $16 a night, you and a companion can live it up in Reno in a first-class hotel, tuck away a free glass of wine and savor a $3.95 New York steak dinner. If you'd like to really splurge, stay at the posh MGM Grand Hotel; for $55 a night they'll throw in their world-famous stage production, "Hello, Hollywood, Hello."

Spur-of-the-moment fun. Nothing is more perishable than an unsold airplane seat or an empty cabin or a cruise ship. As a result, a number of travel organizations (clubs for the most part) are selling discount travel to persons who can take off on short notice, say three days to a couple of weeks. While offering savings from 15 to 50 percent, they rescue tour operators by filling leftover space on jets, tours and cruises. Discount Travel International (7563 Haverford Ave., Philadelphia, Pa. 19151) is the Big Daddy of the bye-bye line, with departures from gateway cities throughout the U.S. Their motto: "When you travel with us, the only one traveling for less is the pilot." For a $40 membership fee, members get a kit containing travel information, and a toll-free hot line for up-to-the-minute travel bargains. In Chicago, Stand-Buys Ltd. (Box 10291, Chicago Ill. 60610) gives members a hotline number to "the greatest bargain of their lives." The $45 membership also entitles them to one free night in a hotel when they pay for the first night, plus savings on car rentals and luggage.

At Worldwide Discount Travel (1674 Meridian Ave., Miami Beach, Fla. 33139) the $35 membership fee covers the whole family. Worldwide works on an electronic mailing system, guaranteeing delivery of the latest travel bulletin within 48 hours.

Tax-deductible research expeditions. The island of Antigua, discovered by Columbus, is a tropical paradise in the Caribbean, much favored by tourists. It has crystal-clear waters, coral reefs, cooling trade winds, a rum distillery and English-speaking islanders. How would you feel about paying $1,050 for 10 days there, excavating by day for 3,700-year-old artifacts and living by night in a beach-edge room at the beautiful Hotel Jolly, savoring the cuisine of the hotel dining room? Would it affect your thinking if the $1,050 and your air fare were tax-deductible? Thousands of people are combining vacation pleasure with volunteering to work for scientific research expeditions such as Earthwatch (Box 127, Belmont, Mass. 02178), Have Mule Will Travel (787 S. Grade Road, Alpine, Calif. 92001) and University of California Research Expeditions (UC Berkeley, Calif. 94720). Conditions on some expeditions are primitive (living in tents to study the deer of Cedros Island, $700); others are considerably more civilized (living in a hotel on a beautiful remote beach on the Sea of Cortez, Mexico, while studying the habits of the giant manta ray. But all add a new dimension to the meaning of the word "travel." Earthwatch reports that 80 percent of its recruits are adults, the rest are students between 16 and 23. Learning vacations. Study tours bring back all the pleasures (but little of the anguish) of being in school again. Accommodations may be in homes, hotels or college dorms, and costs are considerably less than commercial tours. There are many to choose from. One of the best-known is Elderhostel, a novel concept allowing those over 60 to travel in the U.S. and abroad while attending classes on an amazing variety of subjects, at a cost of $180 a week for room, board (in the college cafeteria) and tuition. It's so absorbing and exciting that some people just keep traveling from one campus to another all summer. In Europe, Elderhostel classes may be held in a German Castle, a British college dating back to Roman times or a Jerusalem University overlooking the Dead Sea. A three-week spring session in Britain, including air fair from Minneapolis: $1,391. (Elderhostel, 80 Boylston St., Suite 400, Boston, Mass. 02116) Another organization, The National Registration Center for Study Abroad (823 N. Second St., Milwaukee, Wis. 53203), offers an excellent four-week Spanish language course in Costa Rica that costs $175 a week, including room and board with a family and tuition. Teachers are among the most avid learning travelers, but these specialized vacations also attract many singles because from the outset there is a common bond among trip members. A handy book, "The Learning Traveler: Vacation Study Abroad," lists nearly 1,000 programs offered by U.S. and foreign schools ($15.95, Institute of International Education, 312 Sutter St., San Francisco, Calif. 94108).

Our magnificent national parks. Some of the world's grandest scenery unfolds in our national parks, and yet such a vacation can be one of the least expensive. You don't have to be a camper to make this a wallet-winner — in fact, it may be cheaper not to camp if you don't already own the equipment.

The beauty part is that all this magnificence is free — you can walk in it, picnic in it, swim in it, bike in it, revel in it. It's all part of America's 80-million-acre treasure chest. For a list of parks and the regional offices that administer them, write to National Park Service, Dept. of Public Inquiries, 1013 Interior Building, Washington, D.C. 20240.

Bike touring. Whether you have a weekend or several weeks, a few dollars or several hundred, there's no doubt bicycling is a wonderful way to experience the environment. Sitting atop your two-wheeler, you can feel the rain, hear birds call, smell spring flowers, see roadside wildlife and chat with townspeople. When night falls, you park your bike at small-town country inns (where living is a lot cheaper than in cities) and recuperate with hot showers and tasty dinners.

Take Indiana, for example, where Parke County offers maps of bike routes through its covered-bridge area, mapped out in five-mile, 18-mile and 32-mile segments. Bikers can see 36 covered bridges, a restored turn-of-the-century town, old coal mining towns, chapels, old mills and the Little Raccoon Valley — all at a leisurely 15 mph. Free. (Parke County, Box 165, Rockville, Ind. 47872)

The possibilities are as wide as the U.S. itself. You can meander through cherry orchards and maple forests in Michigan, explore lightly traveled back roads in New Hampshire. With a little cash outlay, you can tour Vermont's farmlands on self-guided trips, spending nights in the area's historic inns. (Contract Churchill House Inn, RFD #3, Route 73E, Brandon, Vt. 05733)

The strike-it-rich vacation. For the vacationer, gold panning can add up to an exciting, economical, unique adventure in a land of clear streams and smogless skies, with maybe enough gold when it's over to finance the trip.

This is the year for it! While at least a dozen states have sizable gold deposits, in California this year gold fever is rampant. The torrential floods of winter have moved gravel that hasn't been dislodged in centuries, and geologists say that more gold is exposed now than at any time since the '49 Gold Rush.

Nuggets are showing up in pan after pan in hot spots like Jamestown and Auburn. (For information on gold and accommodations, contact Tuolumne Chamber of Commerce, Box 277, Sonoma, Calif. 95370 for Auburn.)

But whether or not the argonauts fill their pokes, they're finding fun combing hillsides in search of relics, exploring colorful towns built over a honeycomb of mine tunnels and slaking their thirst in 100-year-old saloons.

An excellent guide to the area is "California Gold" ($4.50, Zanel Publications, Box 11316, Tahoe Paradise, Calif. 95708).

College dorms. Many American and Canadian colleges welcome the opportunity to rent out vacant dorm rooms and see some income during the summer months when registration is light. Cost is about $10 per person per night for a twin-bedded room (linen furnished).

It's not the Hilton, but if your idea of a vacation is seeing the country, not luxuriating in a hotel room, it could be the ticket for you. To find out if the colleges in towns you'd like to visit do this, write directly to the college business office. Or get a copy of "Mort's Campus Guide" ($5 postage-paid, CMG Publishing Co., Box 630, Princeton, N.J. 08540). It lists 180 such campuses in 44 states and Canada.

Home away from home. How does this scenario grab you? You're in Rapperswil, Switzerland, on the shores of Lake Zurich, enjoying the view of a castle on a nearby hillside from the window of your six-bedroom, lake-view chalet. Expensive? No, there's no money involved. But you do have to allow the owners of this elegant chalet to use your home in the States while you're using theirs.

House swapping is not new. But it has become a way of life for some travelers who like the idea of having a base other than a hotel when they travel.

Lodgings are free. Cars are often included in the trade. Restaurant costs can be trimmed by eating "at home." So the out-of-pocket savings from home-switching can be substantial.

There are a number of home-finding services (Vacation Exchange Club is one of the best-known); they're listed in a book by Cindy Gum, "Your Place and Mine" ($5.95, Gum Publications, 15195 El Camino Grande, Suite 100, Saratoga, Calif. 95070). ■

"To have to tell a child, 'No, there isn't enough,' can be a painful necessity for parents. Many of us would like to be able to give our children all they need and much of what they want as well."

Going without When there isn't enough

By Fred Rogers
with Barry Head

"Can I have another helping?" "No, there isn't enough food." "Can I have a toy like Jimmy's?" "No, there isn't enough money." "Can I have a room of my own?" "No, there isn't enough space."

To have to tell a child, "No, there isn't enough," can be a painful necessity for parents. Many of us would like to be able to give our children all they need and much of what they want as well.

But then, of course, we find we can't, and that can lead to feelings of failure and guilt and wonderings if we are a worthy parent at all. Those can be hard feelings to live with, no matter how we tell ourselves that our having to say "no" to our children is part of their real world — and ours.

A friend of ours remembers his 4-year-old son sobbing uncontrollably over something that had gone wrong. His father tried to console him, but with little success. Suddenly the boy wiped his eyes and said, "It just doesn't seem fair! But then I guess the world isn't fair, is it, Dad?" His father reassured him that he sometimes felt that way, too, but that the world didn't always seem that way.

Truly deprived children soon become aware of their deprivation, but how they feel about it is quite another matter. They may feel sad — or hopeful — or, like one 5-year-old in a family day-care center, clearly fearful.

This little girl came from a home where there was seldom enough to eat, and on her first day at the center the mid-morning snack was a plate of buttered toast squares. She was given the plateful first, and when the woman in charge asked her to take a square and pass the rest along, the girl burst out crying and hung on to the plate with both hands. For once in her life she had enough... and yet she was to be deprived again!

Children's attitudes toward not having enough (as toward almost everything) emerge from the attitudes of their first and closest caregivers. If those caregivers are bitter and resentful, a child may come to see the world and the people in it as hostile. If they blame the child for their deprivation — "You're just one more mouth to feed!" — that child may grow with guilt and a sense of being a burden to everyone.

On the other hand, if these caregivers can, through the emotional, spiritual and physical nourishment of others, begin to understand their own worth, they will be able to pass on to their children a sense of well-being (that good things are possible even when times are hard). It takes a certain amount of hope in order to be able to believe that life is worth the effort of living. ■

Concerned about mercury in fish?

If you eat fish every day, it's best to vary the menu

By Sonja Heinze

My husband is trying to maintain his weight and finds eating fish, rather than meat, a help. Recently he has been concerned about mercury. Does all fish or just swordfish contain mercury? Is it safe to eat fish for dinner every day? He has been doing this for eight months. A reader in Torrington, Conn.

Robert Price, seafood technology specialist with the University of California at Davis, advises us that although mercury may be found in all kinds of fish and other foods, swordfish and tuna are the only commercially popular fish that have shown a mercury content exceeding one part per million (ppm). One ppm is the maximum safe limit for mercury in fish.

"For many years," says Price, "man has eaten tuna and swordfish with concentrations of mercury higher than the established limit without signs of any harmful effect. Most experts agree that the one ppm level for fish has a considerable margin of safety built into it. It is heartening to recognize that there have been no reported cases of mercury poisoning in the U.S. from eating fish."

A person who eats fish every day should vary the types of fish eaten since some may be contaminated with certain pollutants. Ocean fish, as opposed to freshwater fish, generally have less of a pollution problem. Additionally, certain chemicals such as PCB's, DDT and dioxin tend to accumulate in the tissues of fatty fish. Mackerel is a fatty fish and should be consumed, therefore, only about once a month.

GROUND ROUND DARK RED ON INSIDE
I've been buying A&P meat for a long time and would like to know what causes ground round to turn dark red on the inside but on the outside it stays real red. The butcher is giving me a song and dance. George Tierney, Southfield, Mich.

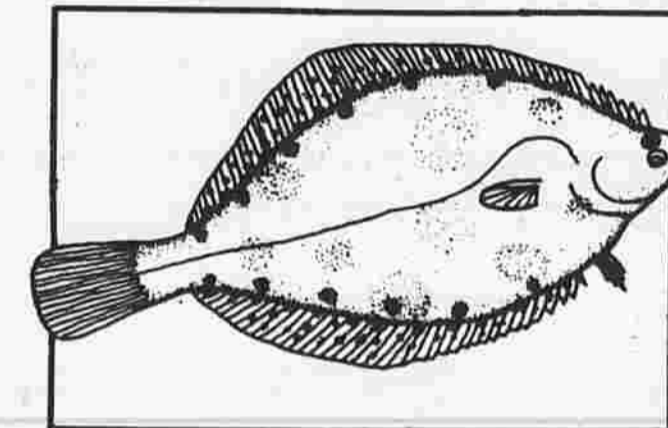

The Department of Agriculture explains that this situation is caused by nothing more than oxygen. When meat is exposed to air, the natural pigment of the meat, which is called oxymyoglobin, combines with the oxygen in the air to produce the red color. The red color is called "bloom." The interior of the meat does not have the red color due to the lack of oxygen to cause the "bloom" to appear.

EYELASHES IN HOT DOGS
What ingredients are in all hot dogs? A neighbor told me lately that eyelashes are put in them. I was shocked. J.A. Haller, Ormond Beach, Fla.

Hot dogs have been rumored to contain everything from cowhide to earthworms, but eyelashes is a new one on me. Perhaps an errant lash from a worker's eyes drifted into a mixture at some factory, eventually turning up on somebody's plate. Mistakes do happen.

The ingredients of hot dogs vary with the brand. Read the label. Most hot dogs contain meat, water, salt, sugar, spices and additives such as artificial coloring, sodium erythorbate or ascorbate, sodium acid pyrophosphate, sodium nitrate and sodium nitrite.

The meat may be all beef or a beef and pork mixture, and may or may not include heart meat or muscle from tongue, diaphragm or esophagus. If lips, snouts and ears are used, the label should say "with by-products," or something similar. Dry milk or soy flour may also be added to "beef up" the mixture.

Dr. Michael Jacobson, of the Center for Science in the Public Interest, visited one large Virginia packing house and observed that "the meat that went into hot dogs (and bologna) consisted of fat trimmed from hams and chops; the only red meat was bits that were accidentally attached to large pieces of fat. After the ingredients were pulverized and emulsified, the mixture of fat, water, protein (from dry milk or soy flour) and additives had the color of bread dough and the consistency of mud."

"The emulsion was then packed into a casing, which was coated with a brilliant red artificial coloring, and cooked. The light tan mixture darkened during the cooking due to the heat and to the action of sodium nitrate and nitrite."

Doesn't sound too appetizing, but at least there weren't any eyelashes in the mixture.

READER FEEDBACK:
CANNED TUNA

E. Ann Vermillion, Davenport, Iowa: "I read your column in which a reader complained about the quality of Chicken of the Sea tuna, and how even the labels look cheaper. I, too, noticed a taste difference in this tuna and found an older can to compare labels."

"The tuna was previously packed in seasoned broth and oil and is now packed in pure vegetable oil. Unless they get enough complaints and return to using the seasoned broth and oil, I will not purchase it again."

A number of readers wrote complaining about the declining quality of canned tuna, one reader even suggesting that perhaps fish other than tuna were in the cans, which is highly unlikely.

Since there are so many different brands of tuna now on the market, packed in various solutions including water, vegetable oils, olive oils and/or hydrolyzed protein, which is a flavor enhancer, and also tuna which is salt-free or low sodium (the absence of which definitely affects the taste), by "fishing" around a consumer is bound to find a tuna to his or her liking. Albacore, the most expensive because it's the scarcest, is the white meat tuna with the least fishy taste. The tan tunas, usually either from yellowfin or skipjack, have a more profound taste. ■

Bananas

Thanks to Chiquita, this yellow fruit has a king-sized fan club

By Ted Larsen

The yellow fruit has been around for centuries, some say at least 30 in India and Asia. They did not appear in the West until around 1500 when introduced to the Canary Islands. The name is a corruption of West African with a few Portuguese and Spanish touches thrown in for good measure. The banana industry can thank a monk, Friar Tomas de Berlanga, for introducing the fruit to the Caribbean. He planted the first trees in what is now Haiti and the Dominican Republic in 1516.

Even though bananas had spread across most of the West Indies, the first samples did not appear in the U.S. until 1804, when Captain John Chester brought a few bunches of the curious fruit to New York City from Cuba.

Americans gave bananas a tremendous yawn, ignoring them for another 25 years. In 1830 the first major banana shipment came to the Big Apple, but a truly American ingredient had yet to enter the picture.

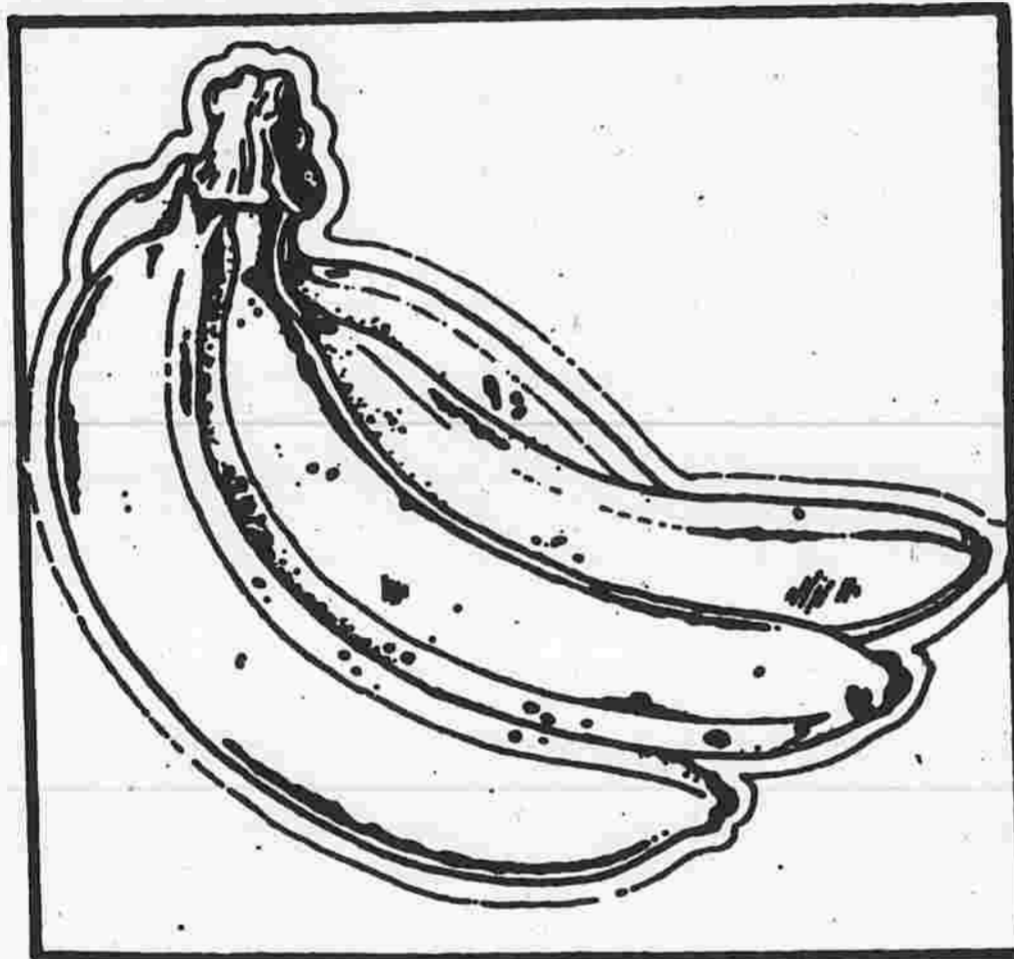

The missing link was promotion; the 1876 Philadelphia Centennial Exposition changed that. Two Boston fruit importers, Lorenzo Baker and Andrew Pearson, used a booth at the Exposition to offer foil-wrapped bananas for a then-costly dime. They sold like hotcakes. Their United Fruit Company became a national institution which never forgot the power of advertising. In the 1940s the company got help from a new friend, Chiquita.

The cartoon dancer with a Spanish accent became one of the most successful food advertising campaigns ever, helping make bananas the most popular fruit in the U.S., to the tune of 80 million bunches a year. Our paternal interests in Central America followed.

Considering their sweetness, bananas are a nutritional bargain, 127 calories for the average fruit. However, it's in mineral content that bananas make their major mark. They are a prime source of potassium, often recommended by doctors, and an excellent way of getting magnesium.

This simple dish has a touch of North African influence. It's a hearty salad that will win rave reviews at your "casbah."

BANANA DATE SALAD
2 large bananas, sliced
8 dates, pitted and chopped

1 medium Granny Smith apple, peeled, cored and sliced
1/2 cup walnuts, chopped
1/2 cup heavy cream
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon ground cloves
1 head Boston lettuce

Wash lettuce and separate leaves. Arrange on salad plates. Mix together the first four ingredients. In another bowl, combine cream with the vanilla, cinnamon and cloves. Stir well. Pour over the fruit mixture and combine thoroughly. Place fruit and dressing on reserved lettuce leaves. Top with additional chopped nuts, if desired.
Serves 4.

HINTS
Pears or peaches can substituted for the apples. Try this recipe with almonds, pecans or macadamia nuts, rather than the walnuts.

To substantially reduce the calories, substitute the cream with 1/2 cup yogurt combined, in a blender or food processor, with 2 tablespoons of cottage cheese.

Much of the world enjoys cooked bananas (or their relative, plantain) as a vegetable. It's a tasty habit Americans should cultivate.

FRIED BANANAS
4 medium bananas
2 tablespoons unsalted butter
salt and pepper
1/2 teaspoon cumin

Peel the bananas and cut them in half lengthwise. Slice these sections in half crosswise. Melt butter in saute pan until hot but not browned. Cook the bananas until they are browned on both sides. Season with salt, pepper and cumin, and serve.
Serves 4.

HINTS
Bananas should be ripe but not soft or mushy. For an Oriental variation, sprinkle cooked bananas with a bit of garlic powder (not salt) and soy sauce.
Cooked bananas are excellent served with roast pork or chicken.

Bananas and macadamia nuts are both products of Hawaii, so they make a natural combination. Your family will say "alohoa" to this moist creation.

BANANA MACADAMIA BREAD
1/2 cup unsalted butter
1/4 cup sugar
2 large eggs
3 large bananas
1/4 cup macadamia nuts, chopped
2 cups buttermilk
baking mix
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon baking soda

With an electric mixer, cream together butter and sugar until fluffy. Add the eggs and beat well. Mash the bananas with a fork (not the mixer) and add to the butter/sugar by hand mixing. Add nuts in the same way. Sift together all of the dry ingredients and fold them into the butter/sugar mixture by hand. The result may be lumpy, but that's OK.

Grease a 9-inch loaf pan well and spoon in the batter. Bake for 1 hour or until a tester comes out clean. Remove from oven and allow to stand for 15 minutes before taking from pan. Cool on a wire rack.

HINTS
Any of your favorite nuts can be substituted for macadamias. For an extremely moist cake, add 1/2 cup yogurt and an extra 1/4 teaspoon baking soda. For an especially rich banana liqueur, ■

Bidwell Tavern

By Sondra Astor Stave

The Bidwell Tavern is the best-known restaurant in Coventry. Located on Route 31 in the village area, it was restored and expanded in the 1970s and achieves a colonial look without seeming artificial or studied.

On a recent visit, the menu incorporated a bit of everything that is currently fashionable in culinary circles — a little Italian, a little Mexican, some broiled items, a salad bar. The result was uneven: What was good was very, very good; other choices were... less felicitous.

Appetizers proved to be among the lesser notes. An order of nachos consisted of a generous pile of very salty tortilla chips topped with pale melted cheese, with two small cups of pepper sauce on the side. An order of chili was thin. The few pieces of meat were tasty and made one hunger for more. Additional solids and less liquid could have rendered this a more pleasurable meal starter.

The salad bar was one of the options that worked best. Included with the higher priced dinner plates and available for a $1.50 surcharge with the others, it offered a bowl of fresh greens, several pickled bean salads, tomatoes, onions, mushrooms and peppers, both green and pickled. Not to be missed was the potato salad, which I think is among the best to be found anywhere.

The croutons were also particularly tasty and there was a choice of appealing dressings. Pumpernickel and French-style breads were at the side as well as a huge block of good Cheddar cheese.

Three steaks were on the menu. We tried the T-bone and found it exemplary. Cooked perfectly to rare, it had a smoky taste and a slightly charred edge which was totally delightful.

The meat provided just the right amount of resistance in the mouth and I was impressed to discover that it cut equally well with a steak knife, or a tool with a duller blade. The accompanying french fries were likewise top of the line. Cut fairly thick, they were crispy outside, mealy within.

Another star of the open broiler was the hamburger, a humongous oval of first-rat-ground beef. Served on a seeded roll, this was perfectly prepared. Augmented by the salad bar, it is a full meal for even the hungriest.

Italian dishes seemed to fare less well. It is not that anything was bad; the dishes just lacked any spark to make them special. Lasagna was layers of seasoned ricotta between properly cooked broad noodles in a pedestrian tomato sauce. There was an absence of sausage or other meat; an absence of mozzarella cheese — an absence of excitement.

Eggplant parmigiana, sampled on a previous visit, was heavy on the breading. Since the eggplant slices were extremely thin, the predominating taste was of batter and not of vegetable. Manicotti was also on the menu but not tried.

Chicken cordon bleu was prepared as a cousin to chicken Kiev. The breast was rolled around thin slices of ham and cheese, coated lightly with breadcrumbs and fried to a greaseless crisp. It arrived as a neat looking cone and was accompanied by the excellent french fried potatoes that also complimented the steak.

Unfortunately, the chicken looked better than it did. There was a slight sense of dryness and even with the ham and cheese, it lacked flavor.

The three desserts we tried followed the acceptable but not exciting tone of the non-broiled main dishes. Apple pie, served warm on request, had a decent crust but a filling that tasted excessively of cinnamon, even to one who is extremely fond of that spice.

Carrot cake was pleasing to some but seemed bland to me. The texture, however, was not to be faulted.

Perhaps the best was the cheesecake, which was offered with a fruit topping. It was properly creamy if not quite as fresh tasting as similar cakes elsewhere.

Entrees ranged from $5 to $13. Deli sandwiches, as well as other items that can serve as appetizers or light meals, were priced lower.

If you order from the Bidwell's strengths, you can enjoy an excellent meal. Judging by the superlative hamburger and excellent steak, it would seem that anything coming from the broiler would be most enjoyable. The salad bar is first rate and highly recommended. And, as another alternative for dessert, that same salad bar has excellent applesauce as well. ■
