New tax worker mulled

By George Lavng, Herald Reporter

The town is considering hiring a part-time employee to investigate and collect more than $378,000 in taxes that have been owed to the town between 1976 and the last tax year. Assistant Town Manager Steven Werbner said this morning.

The move was recommended by town Director Stephen Cassano, who called the unpaid money "absurd."

"A lot of it's only three to four bucks, but its the principle of the thing," Cassano said.

The uncollected money is part of a suspense list the Board of Directors approved Tuesday. The list includes $130,179 owed in personal property taxes and $248,699 in motor vehicle taxes.

The suspense list was adopted in order to remove the money from the town's listed assets. The move followed the recommendation of Collector of Revenue Joan M. Troy, who said it was unlikely the money will be recovered.

While the decision does not mean the tax money is abated, Troy said her office does not have enough staff to investigate all the accounts. She said her office will concentrate on trying to collect money owed since 1982.

But Cassano said that by hiring an additional employee, efforts could be made to collect all of the money. He said he recommended to Town Manager Robert Weiss that a salaried part-time position be created that would allow the person hired to earn a commission on each account collected.

Cassano said the job should continue for the summer, and could be held by a college student or retired person. He said it might be worthwhile to hire two people for the task.

In order to help the collection efforts, the new position could be given the power to serve warrants on those people who ignore demand notices for the money, Cassano said.

Werbner said Cassano's suggestion "seems like a good idea." He said he would probably prefer to hire a retired person and continue the collection efforts on a month-by-month basis, depending on how successful it is.

"We don't want to spend $2,000 to collect $1,000," Werbner said.

He said his office is investigating the proposal and should reach a decision by early next week. Werbner said if the town decides to go ahead with the idea, it might not have to be approved by the Board of Directors if there is enough money left in part-time funds to cover the expense.

Lawyers say sheriff system works

By George Lavng, Herald Reporter

Charges that the sheriff system in Connecticut is inefficient, corrupt and too political surfaced last month when Deputy Sheriff Raymond Lanzano of Manchester was told he would lose his job.

Lanzano, 59, claimed he was being let go by retiring Hartford County High Sheriff Patrick Hogan because he supported a candidate for the high sheriff's position that Hogan opposed. While Hogan denied the allegation and said the decision was based on personal reasons, Lanzano has taken his case to federal court and has won a temporary restraining order preventing Hogan from replacing him.

As the Lanzano controversy was making local headlines, charges that Fairfield County deputy sheriffs were being forced to contribute to high sheriff's reelection campaign in their county also made news.

Despite the many criticisms that have arisen, an informal survey of Manchester-area attorneys found that most are satisfied with the county sheriff system, even though they feel there may be some problems with it.

"I think we have some difficulties that are obviously grossly unfair to some sheriffs," said Manchester attorney Malcolm Barlow, a former assistant town attorney now in private practice. "However, I don't know if we should throw away the whole system."

Barlow, who called the Lanzano dismissal "offensive," said problems over the appointment of deputy sheriffs might be solvable within the sheriff's office itself. "What we have now works. If it isn't broke, don't fix it," he said.

But Manchester lawyer Evelyn G. Frolich, who is with the Gryk-Frolich law firm on East Center Street, said supervision is needed. While the system has generally worked for her, she said it should be given some oversight — possibly the creation of a review board.

She said she was particularly "dismayed" when she heard Lanzano was not going to be reappointed. Frolich said her office relied on Lanzano to deliver court papers and serve notices.

"We found him to be one of the best and (most) efficient sheriffs in the state," Frolich said. She added that the sheriff system is "a little bit too political," and Hogan's reasons for dismissing Lanzano were "less than candid."

The sheriff's office is independent of state and local governments, and the high sheriff has wide authority to hire and dismiss deputy sheriffs. Generally, the appointments go to people with the same political affiliation as the high sheriff.

However, attorneys interviewed by the Herald said they were opposed to providing more state control over the sheriff's office as a way of lessening the political nature of the positions.

Vernon lawyer Jose Ramirez, who lives in Bolton said state control would subject the sheriff's office to bureaucratic restraints found in other state departments. These include limiting working hours to weekdays, problems with unions that may be created to represent the sheriffs and the hiring of additional administrators, which could bog down the delivery of papers.

Another proposal to reform the system would give individuals permits to act as sheriffs and do away with a central office. The administering of permits, which would be similar to vendor's permits, would be controlled by the state.

However, attorneys interviewed said such a system could lead to unfair arrangements between attorneys and some sheriffs that would deprive other sheriffs of their livelihoods.

Currently attorneys usually work with sheriffs in their area they have found to be reliable. If there is difficulty in finding a sheriff, the sheriff's office is asked to locate one.

Attorney Steven D. Zuboff, of the Beck & Eldergill firm in Manchester, said most attorneys do not have difficulties in obtaining the services of a sheriff. "They find a particular sheriff, and just stay with him forever and become relatively happy with the system," he said.

Senators see 100-0 vote to reform taxes

By Joseph Mlanowany, United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Reagan got euphoric predictions today on his tax reform bill from Senate leaders of both parties who predicted it could pass 100-0.

The Senate took up the bill Wednesday with little overall opposition to the popular measure, although 30 to 40 suggested amendments could modify the radical nature of the sweeping reforms.

Reagan invited the entire Senate — more than 70 showed up — for breakfast to push for tax reform and the Saudi arms package that apparently hung by a single vote.

"I believe we're on a roll. Tax reform has a long long history and this is a sort of capstone," said Republican leader Robert Dole.

The bill will be debated further starting next Monday with a vote likely by the end of next week, Dole said.

"I'll be very much surprised if it doesn't pass the Senate by 100-0," said Sen. Robert Byrd, the Democratic leader.

"I think it's fair to say as Senator Byrd said, there might be 100 votes for the tax bill," Dole said.

Byrd of West Virginia, however, was talking about a final vote, and would not predict the outcome of the most controversial amendment expected — one that would restore the $2,000 maximum tax deduction for those who have Individual Retirement Accounts.

Senate Finance Committee Chairman Robert Packwood, R-Ore., said, "The question is not, 'Is an IRA amendment popular?' The question is 'as opposed to what?'" Packwood is striving to keep the bill "revenue neutral" by demanding senators come up with new taxes to replace any revenue lost by restoring tax breaks.

Trying to forestall colleagues from offering any amendments, Packwood said none had been filed with the Senate clerk as of Wednesday night and that he had seen no lobbyists in the Senate reception room.

"With the possible exception of the closeness on the IRA, the special interests realize they're not going to win in the Senate, and they will save whatever ammunition they have for conference (with House tax writers), and they're not even going to make an attempt in the Senate."

Long-time former Chairman Russell Long, D-La., said he would support Packwood on "keeping all essential items" intact, "even if he's wrong."

Byrd said he told Reagan the president was the first Republican chief executive in his memory to support tax reform, and Reagan, in a display of bipartisanship, honored Long, who is retiring this year for his 38 years of service.

Reagan gave Long a green T-shirt bearing the senator's favorite aphorism: "Don't Tax You, Don't Tax Me, Tax That Fella Behind the Tree."

In several hours of opening debate, backers of the radical tax reforms argued that the bill would finally bring fairness to a set of tax laws riddled with confusion and inequities.

"There will be no more stories of General Electric paying no taxes, or General Dynamics paying no taxes," Packwood boasted as debate began Wednesday.

Other committee members agreed, with Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., saying the bill would "drive a stake into the heart of tax sheltering activities," and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, noting, "there is no longer going to be a free ride on Uncle Sam."

"This is an historic day for Americans," added Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., an original architect of tax reform.

But despite the praise, many supporters said they would ignore the wishes of Packwood and GOP leader Robert Dole, and would try to change parts of the proposal.

Essentially, the measure would curtail a host of popular tax breaks in order to lower tax rates.

O'Neill says he'll veto death bill

HARTFORD (AP) — Gov. William A. O'Neill said today he would veto a bill designed to make it easier to get the death penalty in murder cases.

"I've agonized over this particular bill for weeks now," O'Neill said. "Our present statute is not working."

"The bill that has been passed makes drastic changes that I'm not sure the people of Connecticut need or want. It now would allow the execution of those who are mentally retarded and those who are children," said O'Neill, who had earlier indicated he was leaning toward a veto.

He said he would ask the General Assembly to hold a public hearing in the expected special legislative session on the budget surplus later this month.

Current law requires a jury to find that the murder was "aggravated" or committed in "an especially cruel, heinous and depraved manner." The jury must also conclude that there were no mitigating factors in the case, such as the defendant's mental condition.

The bill passed this year would allow the death penalty to be imposed if the jury concluded that the aggravating factors outweighed any mitigating factors.

Benefits won't end

QUESTION: My three children have been getting Social Security survivors' benefits since my wife's death...

ANSWER: Your remarriage will have no effect on your children's benefits...

QUESTION: I understand you can get Medicare after you've been getting Social Security disability benefits for 2 years...

ANSWER: No. Only the period in which you were entitled to and for which you received benefits can count as part of the 24-month requirement for Medicare.

QUESTION: If the VA says I'm disabled does that mean that Social Security will too?

ANSWER: No. A person who meets the Veterans Administration's definition of disability does not necessarily qualify for Social Security disability benefits...

QUESTION: I happen to believe that my aunt, who is severely disabled would qualify for SSI payments...

ANSWER: That decision is made by the chairman's State disability determination service...

Democrats offer welfare reforms

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Democrats have proposed a major expansion of federal job training aid for welfare recipients, saying states such as Massachusetts have shown the poor can break out of the dependency trap if given enough help. A host of big Democratic names, including Sens. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., introduced legislation Wednesday that represents their party's alternative to "welfare," where recipients work at public service jobs to earn their checks. Rep. Sander Levin, D-Mich., the prime architect of the bill along with Moynihan, said the main federal welfare program, Aid to Families with Dependent Children, has failed in that it does relatively little to help the nation's 11 million welfare recipients find private sector jobs. "This bill is a mandate that job training and opportunity become the top priority of the federal government," he said. "Welfare recipients will receive not only a check, but a chance to work."

The bill is modeled on programs created in Massachusetts, Connecticut, Michigan and about 20 other states that focus on helping the hard-to-employ poor — such as welfare mothers — get the skills needed to find a private sector job. Sen. John Chafee, R-Mass., said Massachusetts' highly publicized Employment and Training Choices program had helped place 24,000 welfare recipients in jobs since its inception in 1983 and would save $107 million in welfare expenditures in 1986. "This is a proven entity," Kerry said of the bill. "It's worked in state after state. Levin acknowledged estimates that the bill would require an additional $945 million in federal spending over five years, but said that would be outweighed by long-term savings in welfare, food stamps and Medicaid payments. Moynihan said the bill illustrated the abiding faith most Democrats have in federal social programs, in stark contrast to President Reagan's assertions that such programs only perpetuate dependency and should be curtailed. "We refuse to accept the demise of social policy," said Moynihan, whose recent book, "Family and Nation," summarized his 25-year study of poverty in America. "We think there is a role for active social policy. The argument that we have social problems because we try to do something about them is not very persuasive."

The bill represents the Democratic alternative to "welfare," the concept endorsed by Reagan under which recipients work at public service jobs in exchange for a check. Democrats have criticized welfare as make-work jobs that don't help recipients gain skills needed to achieve economic independence. The bill would:

- Require states to provide most welfare recipients with personalized job counseling and referral to a work or training activity.
- Provide child care and transportation services to recipients who need them.
- Increase the federal burden for financing job training and education. While states and federal government now split costs, the federal share would rise to 70 percent.

Lobbying costs reach $49 million

WASHINGTON — The cost of lobbying Congress reached $49 million in 1985, with the emotional issue of gun control and the continuing struggle over textile import accounting for some of the biggest spending. The price of persuasion last year was 16.4 percent higher than the $42 million of the capitol Hill lobbyists reported spending in 1984 and some 13 percent higher than the $43.3 million reported for 1983. The $49 million amounted to an average $91,625 for each member of Congress and easily exceeded the $32.6 million U.S. taxpayers put up to pay the salaries of the 535 senators and representatives.

Shakeup continues at NASA

Cape Canaveral Fla. (AP) — The retirement of William R. Lucas as director of the NASA facility that supervises shuttle rockets continues the shakeup of top NASA officials, and agency leaders predict more changes after the Challenger commission reports on Monday. Lucas, 64, announced Wednesday he will retire July 3 as director of the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala. He has headed Marshall since 1974 and had served three years as deputy director. Since the Challenger explosion Jan. 28 that killed seven astronauts, NASA has gained a new administrator, director of the shuttle program, director of the Johnson Space Center in Houston, and has summoned the former manager of the Apollo moon program to conduct an internal review of its management structure. The presidential commission on Monday will blame the accident on defects in one of the two solid-fuel booster rockets that were propelling Challenger. Under Lucas' leadership, Marshall engineers supervised Morton Thiokol's development of the booster rockets. Several Marshall managers told the commission they disagreed with Morton Thiokol engineers who opposed the Challenger launch because cold weather might impair O-rings designed to keep hot gas from escaping through booster joints. Several of those Marshall officials have been reassigned and one has retired. There also have been personnel changes at Thiokol among officials who overruled their own engineers. There will be more changes throughout the National Aeronautics and Space Administration after the commission's report is released. NASA general manager Philip Culbertson predicted, "There will be people who will change jobs as a result of what has happened; we've got to get our management strengthened right at the top." Culbertson told a recent conference on the future of the space program. The new administrator, James C. Fletcher, also said he anticipated more personnel shifts after the report is issued. The commission is expected to recommend that NASA headquarters in Washington assume tighter control over its field centers. In recent years, the agency has granted greater autonomy to Marshall, Johnson and the Kennedy Space Center in Florida. One of the first to leave was James M. Bergs, who had been on leave as administrator since December when he was indicted on federal charges that he helped defraud the government when he worked for General Dynamics. He resigned after the shuttle explosion, saying the agency needed strong leadership. William R. Graham, on the job just 10 days as deputy administrator, became acting administrator and held the post until Fletcher, who headed NASA from 1971 to 1977, took over in May. On Tuesday, President Reagan named Graham his chief science adviser, leaving NASA's No. 2 job open. After the explosion, shuttle program director Jesse Moore was shifted three months ahead of schedule to run the Johnson center. Richard Truly, a former shuttle pilot who was director of the Navy Space Command, replaced Moore.

"YOUR VOICE IN MANCHESTER"

Pollard case unravels spy network

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Information Jonathan Pollard gave the United States in hopes of lighter prison sentences for him and his wife has widely expanded U.S. knowledge of a far-flung espionage network involving at least four Israelis who spied for the Jewish state, officials said. Although a federal grand jury indictment returned Wednesday named at least four Israelis as co-conspirators in the ring including an Israeli intelligence officer and an air force colonel — they were not officially charged. The governments said however, they could be indicted later for their roles in the network, which allegedly operated in the United States, Europe and the Middle East for more than a year. Several other unnamed Israelis also were cited in the indictment as participants including "an Israeli diplomat assigned to the Israeli Embassy in Washington." Israel immediately denied any spy ring was authorized by the Israeli government with a spokesman in Jerusalem saying, "This (spy case) actually was a deviation from a clearcut policy of the government of Israel." The unit mentioned in this affair was dismantled. Appearing in U.S. District Court Wednesday Pollard pleaded guilty to conspiring to deliver classified military information to an Israeli, waiving the right to a sensational trial that would have further strained already tenuous U.S.-Israeli relations. With the espionage charge Pollard faces a maximum penalty of life in prison and a $250,000 fine. As part of a plea agreement, the government dropped several other charges against the former Navy intelligence analyst and will not ask for a specific sentence or life in prison. But prosecutors reserved the right to request a "substantial sentence." Pollard's wife, Anne Henderson-Pollard, 25, charged as her husband's accomplice, pleaded guilty to two counts of "conspiracy to receive embezzled government property" and possession of national defense documents. She faces up to 10 years in prison and a $500,000 fine on the charges. Henderson-Pollard, who worked as a consultant to a New York public relations firm, was using secret U.S. documents on China, supplied by her husband, to help her win the embassy as a client. Her plea agreement provided that prosecutors would not ask for consecutive sentences on the two counts. The four Israelis named in the indictment were Rafi Eitan, an Israeli intelligence officer; Col. Avien "Avi" Sella, an official of the Israeli air force; Joseph Yaeger, a science attaché at the Israeli consulate in New York and Irit Erb, a female secretary at the Israeli Embassy in Washington. U.S. Attorney Joseph diGenova declined to say whether any of the Israelis would be indicted. Sources said the indictment proved that the spying incident, dismissed by the Israelis as a far beyond the Pollards, dating back as early as June 1984 and netting the couple more than $45,000. One of those was a Pennsylvania man who opened a letter addressed to his wife. He claimed she didn't have a student loan and furthermore the government had her name wrong. He later found out that indeed his wife had a delinquent loan worth several thousand dollars and she had an earlier marriage as well, accounting for the different name. IRS takes bite out of debtors' refunds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The long arm of the federal government finally caught up with 248,000 people who had defaulted on government debts, when the Internal Revenue Service swiped their tax refund checks this year. The first year of a pilot program to crack down on defaulters netted $135 million toward delinquent government debts, mostly student loans. The debtors were predictably angry about losing their refunds. More than 50,000 people wrote or telephoned about the so-called offsets. "Some people called in and said, 'How dare you do this. This is an American, unconstitutional,'" White House Budget Director James C. Miller said Wednesday. But overall, he said, "There has been general acquiescence... that they owed it and it was time to pay." The average offset was $544, but some of the 248,000 paid dearly. "The largest offset was $9,600 from a Washington, D.C., doctor. He made one $150 payment on his student loan and never made another. His loan balance was $9,800; his tax refund was to be $9,800. "We took his entire refund," said Richard Hastings, the Education Department's director of debt collections. "One outraged defaulter was expecting a tax refund of $2,613. He got $406; the government took the rest to settle an unpaid student loan. Philippine rebels will discuss cease-fire MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino said today that rebels have assigned an accused communist leader, who escaped from prison last year to negotiate a cease-fire to the Philippines' 12-year guerrilla war. Aquino, who gave only sketchy details, said top communist leaders had notified her that their representative will be former journalist Satur Ocampo, who in May 1985 escaped after spending nine years in jail. The announcement came one week after the communist umbrella National Democratic Front released a statement saying it had named a cease-fire negotiator. Aquino said she will appoint a government negotiator within 48 hours but declined to release more details. "I'd like to be extra careful. I don't want anything to upset or derail this effort of the government," she said. "The mere fact that they named one of their negotiators is good enough for me." Italy debates recognition of PLO

ROME — Foreign Minister Giulio Andreotti said no state that "encourages or supports terrorism" can have normal relations with Italy and the Chamber of Deputies, in a surprise vote, urged the government to recognize the Palestine Liberation Organization. Andreotti opened aspects of Italian foreign policy in a speech that spilled a daylong debate Wednesday in the Chamber, Italy's lower house of Parliament. At the end of the debate, deputies approved — over the opposition of Prime Minister Bettino Craxi's ruling coalition — a motion demanding that the government recognize the PLO as "sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people."

Moscow recalls arms negotiator

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union said Geneva arms talks and a superpower summit could be imperiled if the United States scraps the SALT 2 treaty. Moscow recalled its chief arms negotiator from Switzerland to discuss the situation. Marshal Sergei Akromeyev, the chief of general staff of the Soviet armed forces, told a news conference Wednesday the Soviet Union could place more war heads on its missile fleet in retaliation for U.S. violations of the 1979 Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty. The Reagan administration has accused the Soviets of a number of pact violations and last week announced that nuclear-armed cruise missiles would be deployed extensively aboard B-52 bombers late this year unless the Soviet Union made major policy changes. The deployment would violate limits imposed under SALT 2. Deputy Soviet Foreign Minister Alexander Besmertnykh said U.S. plans to scrap the treaty were "devoid of logic."

Pelton jury ponders spy charges

BALTIMORE — A federal judge instructed jurors deliberating espionage charges against former National Security Agency employee Ronald Pelton to consider whether he was deceived, tricked or threatened into confessing to FBI agents. The jury began deliberating the case at 4:30 p.m. EDT Tuesday and retired at 10:55 p.m. without reaching a verdict. U.S. District Judge Herbert Murray told the panel to resume its work today. The jury of seven men and five women heard seven days of testimony and final arguments in which prosecutors charged Pelton tried to finance his retirement from the super-secret NSA by peddling U.S. secrets to the Soviet Union for $35,000. "He would still be doing it if he hadn't been caught," Assistant U.S. Attorney John Douglas said.

Black looters kill black officer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Black looters killed a black police officer and wounded another with shotgun fire when a patrol surprised raiders at a liquor store outside Johannesburg, police said today. A spokesman said officers retaliated by exploding a hand grenade inside the damaged store in the black section of Soweto, but the gunmen escaped. Government opponents predicted a violent response to a government decree banning 10th anniversary commemorations of bloody anti-government protests in Soweto on June 16, 1976.

Amal forces besiege refugees

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Shiite Amal militiamen, winners in bloody street fighting against rival Sunni Moslem gunmen, besieged three refugee camps and battled Palestinian gunmen. Police sources said Amal forces, taking advantage of their crushing victory over the Sunnis, regrouped Wednesday around the Bunk Al Barajneh, Sabra and Shatila Palestinian refugee camps. At least 81 people have been killed and 421 have been wounded since fighting began around the three camps 12 days ago. Hundreds of refugees hid in small, ill-equipped shelters while the fighting raged with heavy machine guns, jeep-mounted recoilless cannons and anti-tank rockets. Occasionally, tanks were fired shells at guerrilla positions.

Hondurans prepare for war games

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras — U.S. and Honduran troops readied today for more than three weeks of military maneuvers in a jungle region near the Nicaraguan border where U.S.-backed Contra rebels operate. U.S. soldiers from Fort Lewis, Wash., will parachute to several areas in the remote region of Gracias a Dios province, kicking off the exercises before dawn, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said.

How the Manchester Herald helps protect your investment in Manchester!

If you live in Manchester then the Herald's the newspaper for you because it's the only one that's geared expressly to the needs of this community. Advice

Man's frequent transfers leave wife feeling fed up

DEAR ABBY: My situation is not uncommon. My husband works for a large national company that moves employees regularly. The last move was exceptionally difficult, and I don't want to move again for seven years, when our youngest child will graduate from high school.

I'm tired of my children feeling like they don't belong. So often, as soon as we make some really good friends, we have to move. My husband says if we have to move, we will. If I try to discuss it, we get into an argument, which always ends with "I'm only doing it for you and the kids."

Ambitious men are rarely home on moving day, or when the kids get sick, or the cat gets lost.

Abby, must men accept every transfer they are offered?

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to you concerning a dispute between my mother and me. First of all, I am 17 years old and have a good-paying job. I have a Camaro, which I'm paying for myself. I also pay my own insurance, which is $400 a year.

Here's the problem: I have wanted a four-wheel drive truck for a long time, but my mom says trucks are for boys and I am a girl. I don't agree with mom at all. I think as long as I am paying for my own car, I should be able to drive whatever I want. Do you agree with me or my mom? I hope you print this, Abby. It may not get me a truck, but it will settle the argument.

WANTS A FOUR-WHEEL DRIVE TRUCK: If you are sufficiently mature to buy a car and support it, you should be able to drive a car of your choice. Four-wheel drives are not for guys only.

DEAR ABBY: You're not going to believe this, but here goes: My dentist has halitosis. He's a fine dentist and a nice guy, but how can I tell him?

CHICKEN

DEAR CHICKEN: In plain English, tell him with kindness, compassion and concern — and quickly.

DEAR TIRE: No. Some have been known to pass up promotions rather than move their families. And in two-paycheck households, some men move because their wives' jobs require it.

Not all children react badly to moving. Some have grown with the challenge of making new friends — witness "Army brats." Every family must decide what is best for all the members and then make the decision accordingly.

DEAR ABBY: I was on birth control pills from 1970 to 1977, then we moved to another state and a different doctor prescribed them for me from 1978 until 1986. Neither one mentioned any interaction with antibiotics.

Medicine is in pretty bad shape if vital information such as what you pointed out is transmitted to the public by an advice columnist in the newspaper instead of by the community.

Perhaps your column should be moved to the front page.

SALLY W. IN LEXINGTON, KY.

DEAR SALLY: I was absolutely flabbergasted at the number of letters I received from women thinking me for that information. And if an editor wants to put this letter on the front page, it's all right with me.

Hormones won't stop hair

DEAR DR. GOTT: If hormone shots were taken at an early age, would they help stop the development of baldness in elderly women?

Dr. Gott
Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: No. Excess facial hair tends to develop in older women because increasing levels of female hormone permit hair growth to occur. All women manufacture small quantities of male hormone in their bodies. Before menopause, this hormone is counterbalanced by large amounts of female hormone. After menopause, however, the ratio of the two hormones is altered, so the effects of male hormone become more noticeable.

Hormone therapy after menopause might help, but premature hormone treatment will be ineffective.

DEAR DR. GOTT: After a complete hysterectomy, does a woman need hormones? Some of my friends' doctors say no, but mine says yes.

DEAR READER: The term "complete" hysterectomy usually means that the ovaries have been removed along with the uterus. However, this is not always the case; some gynecologists will take out one ovary and leave the other. Therefore, both your doctor and your friends' doctors actually may be in agreement.

Ordinarily, a premenopausal woman who has had a complete hysterectomy (ovaries and all) will require hormone replacement. Postmenopausal women usually don't need this replacement after surgery.

If, at any age, a woman has a hysterectomy for cancer of the reproductive tract, she is not a candidate for hormone replacement because the hormones may augment the growth of remaining tumor cells.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am 67 and my husband can't perform sexually any more. However, I've still got a desire for sex and wonder if the Premarin cream I use vaginally has something to do with this.

DEAR READER: Your continuing desire for sex is normal and not unusual. Men and women may continue to experience sex urges well into their 80s. Of course, the problem for some men is in the performance area. Premarin cream may prevent the dryness and tissue thinning that occurs in postmenopausal women.

Many couples who share your predicament have found that non-intercourse methods of sexual expression are quite satisfactory.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 34-year-old daughter has been diagnosed as having narcolepsy. What is the treatment and prognosis for someone with this disease?

DEAR READER: Narcolepsy, a hereditary disorder characterized by inappropriate drowsiness and sleep attacks, is now thought to be due to a defect in the hypothalamus, the rapid eye-movement generator in the brain — in everyday English, the part of the brain that controls sleep.

Although the condition is chronic and can be occasionally disabling, treatment with amphetamine medication or antidepressants is usually effective. In addition, self-help support groups can be valuable resources for narcolepsy patients. The prognosis is good.

Put chunky salt in freezer

DEAR POLLY: I had stored a bag of pickling salt. When I opened it, it was hard and all in one chunk. I put it in an extra bag and pounded on it with a hammer. I still have several hard chunks. Is there an easier way?

Pointers
Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY: Wear cotton gloves while bathing a baby. The baby will be less slippery and the gloves double as a wash cloth.

Keep a calendar in the bathroom and place a sticker or star on every day the children remember to brush their teeth. You can also tell them that the tooth fairy pays more for teeth without cavities or fillings.

DEAR POLLY: I find a bar of soap will last longer when I line my soap dish with a wash cloth. This absorbs any dripping, the wash cloth adds a decorative touch, and best of all I cut down on the cost of soap. Then I can use the wash cloth with the soap it absorbed at bath time.

BLANCHE

DEAR R.M.: First, put the hardened salt (in a closed bag or container) in the freezer for a couple of hours. This may cause it to loosen (works for sugar, might work for salt, too). If you've still got lumps, an easy way to grind them out is in a blender, food processor or meat grinder.

If you're going to use the salt to make brine for pickling or canning, you can leave it in chunks. Measuring may be a little tricky, but the salt will dissolve in the water when you make the brine.

After-school reading centers help to meet remedial needs

In a pleasant, colorful storefront after-school classroom called The Reading Game in San Francisco, a second-grader is punching the keys of an audio-visual machine programmed to improve reading skills.

At an identically furnished center in Massachusetts Long Island, a teenager for whom reading is also a struggle is concentrating on increasing numbers as finding numbers under the tutelage of one of the center's teachers.

Sylvia Porter

"In fact, currently 20 percent of American students are reading a year below grade level," says educator Dr. Kenneth Martyn, founder of the American Learning Corp., which operates the Reading Game centers. American Learning Corp. pioneered this burgeoning field in 1970 with 11 centers in California, was acquired by Encyclopaedia Britannica Inc. in June 1985, and now has 85 company-owned centers in eight states.

"The Sylvan Learning Corp. was founded in 1979 by reading specialist Reading Game Tutor, and now has some 284 centers throughout the United States, virtually all of them franchise operations.

How should you choose from among the centers that may be available in your community?

Fees charged are a top point, and may range from $17 to $30 an hour, depending on the chain and the location of its center. At an average cost of $25 an hour, this may mean that the two one-hour weekly sessions recommended would cost you at least $200 a month.

Check the credentials of the teachers to see that they are indeed certified and degree and, preferably, trained in reading instruction with successful classroom experience.

Tour the center and observe the instruction before enrollment. Teaching should be on an individual basis or in groups no larger than three.

- Examine the materials used to instruct and test students and note if they are updated periodically — say, every six months.
- Ask about the school's methods for assessing student progress and satisfy yourself that the students are not just being "taught to the test." Reading progress should show itself in the classroom and in student attitude — the true criteria of reading achievement.
- Find out if the school will keep you informed of student progress on a regular basis — say, after every eight hours of instruction.
- If your child has any special needs, find out if the center has the resource to meet those needs.
- Speak to other parents and teachers who are familiar with the centers.
- Beware of any "fix-it-fast" promises and achievement guarantees. This is in violation of the International Reading Association's Code of Ethics, which states "Reading clinics...should refrain from guaranteeing favorable outcomes."
- "There is nothing magical about our method," says Dr. Stanley Frank, chairman of the American Learning Corp. "We're only doing all the things schools could do if they had enough money, skilled manpower and time."

Gerber has option on land

Gerber Scientific Inc. of South Windsor has an option to buy about 32 acres near the Manchester-East Hartford border. It is owned by Angelo S. Leone, Frederick W. Leone Jr. and Roxie E. Leone. The option agreement was reached May 19.

Gerber had been considering a 10-acre site at the Union Pond Industrial Park, but scrapped plans to build a plant there last September. The company said at the time that the site was too small.

Gerber Scientific Inc. consists of four subsidiaries — Gerber Scientific Products Inc., Gerber Garment Technology, Gerber Scientific Instruments Inc. and Gerber Systems Technology. They are all based in South Windsor.

The companies manufacture high-technology products.

Pratt engine passes tests on 767

SEATTLE — The Pratt and Whitney Division of United Technologies Corp. has announced its new PW4000 turbofan jet aircraft engine has completed two successful test flights on a Boeing 767 test aircraft.

The PW4000 is now in the final stages of testing by the East Hartford, Conn. firm for Federal Aviation Administration certification. It is scheduled to enter commercial service in July 1987 on an Airbus Industrie A310-300 aircraft operated by Pan American World Airways.

The two successful test flights on the Boeing 767 were part of an anticipated eight-flight test program.

The PW4000 engine is designed to power current and new versions of wide-body aircraft, such as the Airbus A310 and A320, Boeing 747 and 767, and McDonnell Douglas' proposed MD-11.

Pan Am became the launch customer for the PW4000 when it selected the engine to power 12 extended-range A310-300s.

Northwest Orient also has ordered 48 PW4000s for its new fleet of Boeing 747-400 aircraft, which will be the longest range commercial airplane in the world.

Stock market declines slightly

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined slightly today amid continuing uncertainty about the outlook for interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 4.97 to 1,858.32 in the first hour of trading.

Losing held a narrow lead over gainers in the early rally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Today, open-market interest rates were mixed — steady to down slightly in the short-term Treasury bill market but higher on long-term government bonds.

Among actively traded blue chips, Sears Roebuck rose 3/4 to 47 1/2, Eastman Kodak 1/4 to 61 1/4, and American Telephone & Telegraph 1/8 to 24 1/4. However, McDonald's dropped 1/4 to 10 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks slipped 27 to 139.93. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .39 at 279.61.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones Industrial average dropped 7.14 to 1,863.29.

Dollar falls at opening in Europe

LONDON — The dollar tumbled across Europe at the opening of foreign exchanges today and the price of gold was little changed.

The dollar opened in Frankfurt at 2.2480 marks against 2.2726 at the close of trading Wednesday and in Zurich the dollar opened at 1.8618 Swiss francs versus 1.8548.

In London, the dollar began the day at $1.4895 to the pound against $1.4835. In Paris the dollar opened at 7.1625 francs against 6.2315, in Brussels at 46.20 Belgian francs against 46.65 and in Milan at 1,542.50 lire against 1,554.50.

In Tokyo trading the dollar also lost ground closing at 170.75 yen against 171.50.

The dollar rose to $1.3945 Canadian Wednesday from $1.3930 Tuesday.

Gold opened in London at $341.55 per ounce against $341 and in Zurich it was unchanged at $341.50.

Interest remarks send stock prices down

By Rick Gladstone
The Associated Press

Fear of higher interest rates has hurt stock and bond markets, as conservative gasoline supplies have caused oil prices to drop, and the ineffectiveness of a rebate campaign has depressed domestic car sales.

Stock and bond prices declined Wednesday and short-term interest rates rose, largely because of remarks by Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker that indicated the era of cheap credit may be over.

Volcker, widely known for his conservative monetary policies, attended a private conference of international bankers in Boston. Although his remarks to them were not disclosed, reports circulated that he expressed opposition to lower interest rates because of fears it could incite inflation.

Some long-term Treasury issues fell by more than 10¢ for every $1,000 face value, and interest rates on short-term notes increased. Bond prices and interest rates moved inversely.

On Wall Street, which often follows the behavior of the bond market, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks fell 7.14 points to 1,858.32, erasing most of his previous day's gains.

Much of the reason for rallies in stocks and bonds over the past several months has been the perception that the economy remains lethargic and must be stimulated with lower interest rates, which encourages borrowing for industrial expansion, construction and consumer goods.

Lower interest rates make stocks and bonds more attractive.

In the petroleum markets Wednesday, the price for July delivery of West Texas intermediate, the main U.S. crude, fell 77 cents per 42-gallon barrel to $13.10 at the New York Mercantile Exchange, a decline analysts attributed to excessive gasoline supplies.

Many oil industry analysts have predicted that American demand for gasoline would surge this summer, primarily because of the sharp drop in prices since late last year. But figures released by the American Petroleum Institute Tuesday show supplies heavily outran demand in late May, historically the start of the heavy summer driving season.

In other economic news Wednesday, the seven major U.S. auto-makers said domestic car sales declined late last month to 10.9 percent below the level of a year earlier. At the same time, imports rose to 5.8 percent above a year earlier.

As researchers go private, medical advances could slow

BOSTON (UPI) — Cuts in government grants have forced scientists into profit-motivated private research, a switch that could curtail medical advances behind corporate secrecy, a doctor warned today.

"As more of our research scientists move into the private sector, important advances in knowledge and methods that could benefit investigators may not be revealed for fear of competition and loss of capital gain," Dr. Lee Wetzler of Rockefeller University Hospital said.

In a letter to the New England Journal of Medicine, Wetzler said advances with "important scientific and clinical implications" will eventually be hidden from the scientific community if the profit motive is substituted for the basic philosophy that medical research is for the benefit of humanity.

Wetzler said one example was the recent discovery of the AIDS virus, which destroys the body's immune system.

He expressed concern when two researchers did not disclose manufacturing information about the AIDS-related feline leukemia virus vaccine because it was considered a trade secret.

"What was nice was that in the past, developments were discussed at meetings and read in newspapers. Ideas were thrown around and discussed," said Wetzler.

He acknowledged that private industry warrants some protection from competitors, but said the implications of such protection must be thoroughly examined.

"The bottom line is you can run into trouble (in secret research)," he said. "There is no peer review. We need to be aware of what is happening."

A major cause for the migration to private research stems from a cut in grants for federal programs, he said, especially for pioneering studies by unknown scientists.

"Younger researchers are not getting money," said Wetzler.

Much medical research money comes from private foundations, corporations or the government through the National Institutes of Health.

Wetzler said industry, especially pharmaceutical companies, often researchers freedom from worry about future funding. "Companies treat you nice," he said. "They give you money and you don't have to worry about grants."

Interferon cleared for sale

WASHINGTON — After years of disappointment and frustration, interferon has been cleared for sale in the United States, and two of the government's top doctors heralded the action as a major milestone in cancer treatment.

"This is the day that interferon finally comes of age in a practical application for treating cancer," said Dr. Martin Ross of the federal Office of Medical Applications Research, a branch of the National Institutes of Health.

Ross and Dr. Robert Leibentil co-authored a study published in the New England Journal of Medicine which warned antitrust implications could arise in the assessment of new medical technology, treatment procedures or drugs.

Antitrust liability is possible

BOSTON — Organizations that evaluate medical technology for insurance classification or potential consumer use should be careful to avoid violating antitrust regulations, government doctors said today.

Assessment activities can have important economic implications if they drastically affect the market for a new medical device or the incomes of members of a particular medical specialty, said Dr. Martin Ross of the federal Office of Medical Applications Research, a branch of the National Institutes of Health.

Ross and Dr. Robert Leibentil co-authored a study published in the New England Journal of Medicine which warned antitrust implications could arise in the assessment of new medical technology, treatment procedures or drugs.

Toxic foods can be harmful

BOSTON — Despite the tale of the toad-kissing princess who got a prince, doctors warned today that kissing or touching some species of toxic toads can cause seizures.

In a letter to the New England Journal of Medicine, two Arizona doctors said a healthy 5-year-old boy nearly died after putting a highly toxic Colorado River toad in his mouth.

That species of toad is the most toxic toad in North America, doctors said. Toads come in many species and often are not poisonous.

Report: Focus on the basics

BOSTON — Debate over whether profit or non-profit hospitals are more desirable must not overshadow the nation's basic focus on quality medical care and education, researchers said today.

A study by the Institute of Medicine at the National Academy of Sciences found that hospital ownership is "surrogate" to basic underlying public concerns.

The report, published in The New England Journal of Medicine, said the nation's health-care focus should be on "the condition of the uninsured, the quality of care, the excellence of education and research" — rather than on the most desirable form of hospital ownership.

"Our major conclusion is, 'What should be the orientation of public policy?' said Bradford H. Gray, co-author of the study along with Walter J. McNerney. "We did not find a compelling reason for public policy to favor profit or not-for-profit hospitals."

Enzyme reduces death risk

BOSTON — An intravenous dose of a clot-dissolving enzyme within six hours of a heart attack appears to reduce the risk of early death, an international research team reported today.

The substance, called streptokinase, is used to open blood vessels clogged by a clot and renew the flow of oxygen-carrying blood to heart tissue. The researchers compared the results of a group of heart attack victims treated with streptokinase with those given a dummy drug.

"Mortality tended to be lower in the streptokinase group, more so in patients treated within three hours after the onset of symptoms," the Intravenous Streptokinase and Myocardial Infarction study group reported.

Self-employed can set up IRAs

QUESTION: I am 30 years old and retired. As I sold the bar and grill I owned and operated, I used the money from that sale to buy a couple of apartments. I took back a mortgage on the bar and grill and receive payments monthly. And I collect rents from the apartments.

But I have no "earned income" salary and such. I'm told that, because I am not "actively employed," I can't put money into an individual retirement account or any other retirement plan.

I'll need income after 1988, when the 1987 and 1988 mortgage payments stop. Isn't there any way I can put tax-sheltered money away for my old age?

ANSWER: Sure, there is. You can set up your own version of a self-employed IRA — known as a Keogh plan — which you can incorporate, but that gets more complicated.

As the operator of a self-employed business, you can put 25 percent of your net profits into a

Investors' Guide
William A. Doyle

Keogh retirement plan each year. You won't have to pay income tax on that money or the money it earns until you make withdrawals from the Keogh plan, which you won't be required to do until after you pass age 70½.

As a self-employed person, you'll also be able to tuck away $2,000 this year into an IRA. That, in addition to your Keogh plan contribution.

If the Senate Finance Committee's version of the tax "reform" bill becomes law, you won't be able to put money into an IRA for 1987 and later years. One part of that bill would prevent people who are in other retirement plans — including Keoghs — from contributing to IRAs.

Any good accountant can show you how to arrange your account by self-employed business. Do it and set up your tax-sheltered retirement nest egg.

QUESTION: As a member of the board of directors of a small bank in another state, I receive $2,500 a year director's fees. In order to attend board meetings, I either fly or drive to the bank.

I thought I could take my travel expenses as a deduction on my income tax return and contribute $2,250 to a spousal IRA for me and my wife.

The accountant who does my tax return says I am self-employed and am entitled to take the travel expense deduction but I am not allowed to make the $2,250 IRA contribution. Is he right?

ANSWER: Your accountant is correct about director's fees being self-employed income and that you can take a tax deduction for the travel expenses incurred to earn that self-employed income.

However, self-employed income permits you to make IRA contributions — at least through 1986. We'll have to assume your annual travel expenses are at least $250. If the $2,500 director's fees are your only earned income, you're not allowed to put your net self-employed income — $2,500, minus expenses — into the spousal IRA. If you have other earned income, you can contribute $2,250 to the spousal IRA.

Also, you can put 25 percent of your annual after-expense self-employed income into a Keogh retirement plan.

QUESTION: My wife and I set up Keogh retirement plans six years ago, when we were self-employed. We have sold our business and I have taken a job with a company that has a profit-sharing plan.

What is the status of our Keogh plans, now that neither of us is self-employed? It is conceivable that either my wife or I might develop some other self-employed income before we retire.

ANSWER: You can either leave your Keogh plans intact or roll them over into individual retirement accounts. Either way, your money will remain tax-sheltered.

Because you might have additional self-employed income in the years ahead, keeping the Keogh plans as they are makes sense, so you will be able to add 25 percent of that net income to your Keogh. If you transfer your Keogh plan funds to rollover IRAs, you will have to open new Keoghs when you want to shelter future self-employed income from income tax.

FCC clears way for GE-RCA deal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Communications Commission cleared the way today for General Electric Co. to acquire RCA Corp. and its subsidiaries, including the NBC network.

In allowing the transfer of RCA, the commission rejected four petitions to block the $6.28 billion deal.

Ian Glasser of the FCC's Media Bureau said none of the petitions raised any new facts and to grant them would not be in the public interest.

The FCC's action removes the final obstacle for the merger that the Justice Department has already approved in an administrative certification. It is scheduled to enter commercial service in July 1987 on an Airbus Industrie A310-300 aircraft operated by Pan American World Airways.

The two successful test flights on the Boeing 767 were part of an anticipated eight-flight test program.

The PW4000 engine is designed to power current and new versions of wide-body aircraft, such as the Airbus A310 and A320, Boeing 747 and 767, and McDonnell Douglas' proposed MD-11.

Pan Am became the launch customer for the PW4000 when it selected the engine to power 12 extended-range A310-300s.

Northwest Orient also has ordered 48 PW4000s for its new fleet of Boeing 747-400 aircraft, which will be the longest range commercial airplane in the world.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 4.97 to 1,858.32 in the first hour of trading.

Losing held a narrow lead over gainers in the early rally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Today, open-market interest rates were mixed — steady to down slightly in the short-term Treasury bill market but higher on long-term government bonds.

Among actively traded blue chips, Sears Roebuck rose 3/4 to 47 1/2, Eastman Kodak 1/4 to 61 1/4, and American Telephone & Telegraph 1/8 to 24 1/4. However, McDonald's dropped 1/4 to 10 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks slipped 27 to 139.93. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .39 at 279.61.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones Industrial average dropped 7.14 to 1,863.29.
