PEOPLE

Tribute to Mathias

Senate colleagues and hundreds of former and current government officials paid tribute to retiring Sen. Charles McC. Mathias Jr. at a dinner in Baltimore. Mathias, 63, a Republican, has served in the Senate since 1969. He earlier spent eight years in the House of Representatives, following one term in the Maryland House of Delegates. Proceeds from the $150-a-person "Celebration of Statesmanship" dinner at the Baltimore Convention Center on Monday night will help endow a fund in Mathias' name at Johns Hopkins University's School of Advanced International Studies, organizers said.

Mathias, in an interview before the dinner, said he intended to give some lectures at Johns Hopkins and return to the practice of law after leaving the Senate. He said he also planned to "attack all those weeds which have been growing on the farm for the last quarter of a century."

Douglas the activist

Actor Kirk Douglas wrote to "Dear Abby" with a report of his experiences as an activist for the elderly and praising the columnist for publicizing "the hidden horror" of nursing home abuses. Douglas, 67, who has worked on behalf of the elderly since he did research for the TV movie "Amos," wrote in response to "Helpless," who said in a letter to columnist Abigail Van Buren that she couldn't send gifts to her mother in a nursing home out of fear they would be stolen.

"Helpless" said nursing home authorities claimed the thefts were beyond their control, and such incidents were standard. "This is a lie," wrote Douglas. "There is not a normal part of the aging process... Once you accept that as 'normal,' it is easier to accept bedsores, rapes and broken bones from beatings as 'normal.'"

Douglas said his activism has resulted in a flood of letters from the nursing home industry vilifying him, and more letters from people who claimed they were abused in nursing homes. "Amos," broadcast this past weekend, starred Douglas as an elderly man who rebels against abuse inside a nursing home.

Music as a metaphor

America and its music came about in much the same way — a blending of what the world had to offer, says Charles Strouse, composer of "Rags," a new Broadway-bound musical about immigrants. "Music is almost a metaphor" for immigrants assimilating different ways as their native backgrounds and cultures bumped against others in the New World, he said in a recent interview.

"American songs are played around the world (today). They're getting back what they gave us," said Strouse, who won Tony Awards for his music for "Bye Bye Birdie," "Applause" and "Annie." "Rags," which opened last month at the Shubert Theatre and goes to Broadway on Aug. 7, stars Teresa Stratas and Larry Kert.

Joseph Stela, who won a Tony for the book "Fiddler on the Roof," wrote the book. Lyrics are by Stephen Schwartz, who wrote music and lyrics for "Godspell" and "Pippin."

Peters is honored

Tony Award winner Bernadette Peters, star of the Broadway hit "Song and Dance," has been honored by New York City Mayor Ed Koch presented Peters Monday with the city's Certificate of Appreciation. A show at the presentation of the steps of City Hall featured performers doing numbers from Peters' shows. Peters, a New York native, told an audience of about 1,000, "New York has always been good to me, but today I feel it's opened up its arms to me."

STILL AT IT — At 90, George Burns has no problem attracting younger women. After a news conference Monday announcing his week-long engagement to appear at Caesars in Atlantic City, N.J., George managed to get a kiss and cigar from Debra Strassberg, a Caesars "goddess."

Across the nation

Heavy thunderstorms hit parts of the Midwest and South, while the Southeast faced more record-breaking heat.

A severe thunderstorm watch was posted early today for central and eastern South Dakota, where a cluster of strong storms was part of a stationary front.

Earlier, thunderstorms produced 64 mph winds at Chadron, Neb., while shortly after 1 a.m. EDT, hail fell at Moberly, S.D.

Heavy thunderstorms also hit northern Kentucky early today. Locally heavy rains dropped up to 2 inches of rain and produced flooding. Louisville recorded 2.21 inches of rain the six hours ending at 2 a.m. EDT today.

On Monday afternoon, a tornado near Clarksville, Ga., destroyed a chicken house and downed trees, while in southeastern Missouri, storms downed trees and damaged roofs in Bollinger and Cape Girardeau counties.

Cape Girardeau Police Capt. Howard Boyd, who said 14 minor injuries had been reported from the storm after it hit the Mississippi River town.

A storm system approaching the Pacific Northwest, meanwhile, prompted gale warnings along the northern California coast.

Elsewhere, scattered showers and thunderstorms, some heavy, were reported in the Tennessee Valley, Alabama and Mississippi. Showers and thundershowers also were occurring across the Rockies, southern Texas and parts of South Carolina and Georgia. Fair weather was reported from New England to Pennsylvania and across the southern Plains.

Early-morning temperatures were in the 50s from the northern Great Lakes and Pennsylvania through New England; in the 60s across parts of the desert Southwest; and in the 60s and 70s in much of the rest of the nation.

Mars Myths On this day in 1965, the Mariner IV spacecraft flew by Mars. In the early 1900s, Percival Lowell mapped a system of canals on the Red Planet, which he said was a bit chilly, about like the South of England. But in 1907, Alfred Russel Wallace, a co-discoverer of evolution by natural selection, proved that temperatures on Mars were mostly below freezing, and that every drop of water in any canal there would evaporate into the thin atmosphere within 100 miles of its source.

DO YOU KNOW — What planet's name is based on Percival Lowell's initials? MONDAY'S ANSWER — "Tip" O'Neill is the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Crestfield work rules scrutinized at hearing

By John F. Kirch Herald Reporter

HARTFORD — The National Labor Relations Board opened a hearing Monday into charges that the owners of the Crestfield-Fenwick nursing home unfairly fired one nurse's aide and disciplined another as a result of union activities.

An NLRB administrative law judge scheduled the hearing, which continued today, after a labor board investigation found merit in a complaint filed March 20 by the New England Health Care Employees Union, District 1199, which represents 92 nurse's aides and other service employees at the Vernon Street nursing home.

The complaint contends that the home's management improperly used a no-solicitation rule to fire aide Carol Chesky and discipline aide Suzanne Starling. Both were active on the union's behalf during a bitter 15-week strike that ended Feb. 5.

The union is seeking Chesky's reinstatement and other NLRB directives on how management can treat union activity by employees.

The nursing home's owners — Manchester attorneys Roland Castleman and Josiah Lessner and Vernon social worker Howard Dickstein — have claimed workers were informed of the no-solicitation rule during a meeting held on the first day the strikers returned from the picket line. Chesky was discharged because she broke the rule three times, the owners said, while Starling violated it once.

"At all times we were acting in good faith," Castleman, who is representing the owners at the hearing, told the judge. "Chesky and Starling were violating a valid no-solicitation rule."

STEPHEN FANNING, the attorney presenting the NLRB's case against the owners, said that the nursing home has had two separate no-solicitation rules over the last four years. The first, which was instituted in 1982, barred employees from selling anything in the work area, Fanning said. Using testimony by Chesky and Starling, Fanning showed how employees at the home sold Boy Scout cookies, candy bars and other things in almost any section of the nursing home without being punished under that rule.

"It was more akin to a market-place in old Baghdad than it was to a nursing home," Fanning said of the 156-bed facility, where District 1199 is still seeking its first three-year contract.

Then in February, after the workers' strike for union recognition had ended, the owners promulgated the second rule, which prohibited talk about the union in the work area, Fanning said. It was this rule that Chesky and Starling were disciplined under.

"For the first time in three years, this type of rule was enforced," Fanning said. Castleman denied that the two workers were disciplined because of their union activities. All workers were well aware of the rule about discussing the union in front of patients and on company time, he said.

ACCORDING TO CHESKY'S testimony, workers who had honored the picket line were called into an employees' meeting shortly after the strike ended Feb. 5. At that meeting, Alice Plante, a nursing director, informed workers of some changes, including the one in the no-solicitation rule.

Both Chesky and Starling said the rule was new and neither could remember hearing about it before. However, under cross examination by Castleman, Chesky said she didn't think to challenge the rule until after she had been disciplined under it.

Plante gave Chesky three warnings after she was caught talking to employees and patients on four different occasions, according to testimony at the hearing in the NLRB offices. Two of the incidents occurred on Feb. 5 — one before Chesky was told about the no-solicitation rule and one after. The third was Feb. 7 and the fourth was in early March.

STARLING, WHO SAID she had never heard about the rule, admitted to talking about the union while on duty. But she said she did so only after an old friend had questioned her about the strike.

Both aides said that all union conversations were short and were initiated by another people. Castleman asked Chesky why she continued to answer people's questions about the union even after she was warned not to. She said involved in continued talks about a contract. So far, both sides have reported little success.

OPINION

State isn't needed in bedrooms

State Sen. Richard B. Johnston, a Republican from Wethersfield, has a talent for seizing upon emotional issues and turning them into political battles of questionable merit.

It was Johnston who used the occasion of two brutal murders in Norwich to try to beef up the state's death penalty law and make it easier to impose. Although public sentiment and much of the Legislature was behind the move, the governor correctly refused to sign the measure into law because he said it would have allowed the execution of mentally retarded people and children.

Now Johnston is talking about trying to get a sodomy law that was repealed in 1969 restored. Bolstered by a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision upholding a Georgia law that makes sodomy illegal, Johnston said such a law could help stop the spread of AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases.

If the spread of disease is Johnston's main concern, he might as well push for a law prohibiting all forms of sexual activity.

While acknowledging that a sodomy law would be difficult to enforce, the senator offered a lame analogy to the state's seat belt law: While police generally won't stop cars specifically to issue tickets for non-compliance with the belt law, they will not hesitate to cite people stopped for other reasons who are not wearing seat belts.

Johnston's apparent willingness to embrace a law that would be used mostly to harass people is frightening. And the state's police officers belong on the streets, not in people's bedrooms.

If the people of Connecticut are well represented, cooler heads at the Capitol should prevail and the sodomy statute will continue to rest in peace.

WASHINGTON — Over the past decade, direct-mail fund-raising has become a central part of political life. It has been much more successful, however, for Republicans and conservative organizations than for Democrats and liberal groups. Now Democrats are vowing to reverse this imbalance.

One popular type of appeal is what in the trade is loosely called the "Satan is coming" letter. This approach has been directly borrowed from television evangelists, who, given their trade, are able to use Satan directly. Political fund-raisers don't have this built-in advantage. They have to invent their own deities.

For years Ted Kennedy has worked wonders for conservatives and Republicans. The mere mention that the senator from Massachusetts was about to do something, sponsor something or — horrors of horrors — run for something would bring in a torrent of funds from panicked conservatives. It has often been said that if Ted Kennedy did not exist, Richard Viguerie, the dean of conservative fund-raisers, would have invented him.

DEMOCRATS HAVE TRIED to copy this kind of fund-raising for years, but have been hard pressed to come up with appropriate deities. Ronald Reagan has been tried, but you can't raise much money against one of the most popular presidents in history. George Bush has been tried, but Democrats have found that it is very difficult to work up a great fear of George Bush. They have even tried issues, but have found that raising money to combat abstractions is a difficult proposition.

What the Democrats have needed is the Republican equivalent of a Ted Kennedy or Tip O'Neill or Jimmy Carter. For a while they had former Interior Secretary

Single blast could destroy all satellites

WASHINGTON — Pentagon officials have yet another nightmare, and it's a pipe dream: A nuclear explosion in space could cripple the multibillion-dollar commercial satellite network the military uses for its worldwide communications.

The nuclear explosion could be intentional — a test by some aspiring member of the "nuclear club" — or accidental, as the malfunction of a nuclear generator used to power a reconnaissance satellite. Or it could be a deliberate "accident" staged by the Soviets, who agreed with the United States in 1963 to stop above-ground nuclear testing after a number of satellites were damaged.

Details of the Pentagon's concern are spelled out in an internal Defense Communications Agency study completed three years ago. Our associate Donald Goldberg obtained a copy.

"THERE EXISTS TODAY A very real concern that the current generation of commercial satellites with their extensive use of solid state devices (ss) significantly more susceptible than the 'Early Bird,' the report states. The reference was to satellites launched in the late 1950s and early 1960s that used vacuum tubes. The newer, solid state equipment is believed to be much more vulnerable to the electromagnetic pulse emitted by a nuclear blast.

"Compounding this increased susceptibility," the report continues, "is an unstable global environment wherein a proliferation of Third World powers have, or are well on their way to having, the capability to test a nuclear device in space. These countries are not constrained by the current nuclear test ban agreements."

The report then warns bluntly: "Such a test, whether intended to do so or not, could deliver a decisive blow to our commercial satellite assets, severely or totally disrupting our national telecommunications system."

Any adversary with the necessary lift-off power could stage an apparent nuclear accident. "This threat pertains to any device tested in low Earth orbit by a Third World country or intentionally by the Soviet Union to test the survivability and endurance of our commercial satellite services," the report states. "An 'accidental' nuclear event might be associated with the disintegration of a radioisotopic thermoelectric generator used as a prime power source on an operational reconnaissance satellite."

Another threat would be a high-altitude explosion near the "geosynchronous" orbits used by most communications satellites. Traveling at the same speed as the Earth's rotation, the satellites appear to hover over one spot.

"Such an event could conceivably be called accidental and a singular event," the report states, adding ominously: "Its consequences would be devastating. ... Such an event would, could, possibly destroy the entire fleet (of satellites) if the event was positioned near the center of the commercial satellite orbital arc."

A Pentagon task force considered three approaches to the problem — and discarded them as either too expensive or ineffective: • Wait for the worst to happen and replace the damaged satellites. But replacement could cost $5 billion and would take five to 10 years. • Store spare satellites in orbit, ready to turn on. But these, too, would be vulnerable while waiting in the bulge. • Launch a fully protected military satellite system of three $100 million satellites. But they would be "neither affordable nor survivable."

The study's final recommendation was obvious, it vague: "Harden" future commercial satellites with built-in protection against nuclear effects. What this protection would consist of, and who would pay for it, are yet to be determined.

Mini-editorial
Poor Arturo Tolentino: After boldly declaring himself president of the Philippines and occupying the ritzy Manila Hotel, he meekly admitted he couldn't stay long because "it's quite an expensive hotel." Even if he did show up without luggage, a few thousand miles east a real president demonstrated the proper technique: Because the Santa Barbara Biltmore wouldn't give a discount, White House aides were moved to the Sheraton (even though it meant mingling with the press). Call it another Grenada if you will, but the Biltmore blinked — and the White House got its discount.

NAACP considers legal action in school dispute

By Susan Okula
The Associated Press

NEW HAVEN — Neighborhood opposition twice has blocked plans to move Lee High School's mostly minority student body to other city schools, and the local chapter of the NAACP said it is contemplating legal action as a result.

"There could be racial overtones, but we're not definite about it at this point," Hayward Hooks Jr., president of the New Haven chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said Monday.

Hooks said an NAACP attorney is reviewing an opinion by a city attorney that a plan to move the 500 Lee students to the Conte Arts Magnet School violates the Wooster Square Renewal Plan of 1983. The plan does not allow a high school in that area of the city, acting Corporation Counsel Brian Murphy said.

The city wanted to move the students so that Lee could be closed.

The move to Conte was approved by the city school board on July 7, but New Haven Mayor Blagie DiIieto withdrew his support three days later after some 200 residents of the Wooster Square area began a bitter protest.

THE RESIDENTS SAID they feared disruption of their urban, middle-class neighborhood if high school students began coming into the area. They also threatened legal action.

DiIieto said he and Superintendent of Schools John Dow did not want any legal confrontation "in the interest of good school-community relations." The mayor said he would recommend that the school board rescind its vote on the Lee move to Conte at its July 28 meeting.

If the board rescinds its vote, Hooks said the NAACP may challenge it in court.

The city first planned to move the Lee students to the Betsy Ross Middle School on Barnes Avenue. But that plan was discarded when about 100 residents of that neighborhood raised objections, saying they did not like the idea of the younger Betsy Ross students mixing with the high school pupils.

DILETTO AND DOW then announced the plan to move the Lee students to Wooster Square's Conte school, and move the Conte elementary pupils to the Betsy Ross school.

Hooks said he could understand the reasoning of the Barnes Avenue-area residents. But in the case of the Wooster Square residents, he said, "I think they overreacted and we are very suspicious about why they overreacted."

Hooks said he thought DiIieto changed his mind because he didn't want to lose the support of voters in the Wooster Square area. About 90 percent of the students who attend Lee are black or Puerto Rican. Lee Principal William J. Smith said very few minorities live in the Wooster Square area, Hooks said.

Alderman Luis DeLauro, who represents the Wooster Square neighborhood, vehemently denied that the area's opposition was based on racial prejudice.

"I made it clear this is not a racial issue," she said.

DeLauro complained that the city never consulted with the neighborhood before announcing the plan.

Two charges against Ross dismissed

NEW LONDON (AP) — A Superior Court judge on Monday threw out two capital felony charges against former insurance salesman Michael B. Ross, who still faces trial on two other capital felony murder counts.

Judge Seymour L. Hendel dismissed two of the four capital felony murder counts in the deaths of Robin Stavinsky, 19, of Lisbon, and Wendy Barabault, 17, of Lisbon.

Two weeks ago, Hendel denied defense motions to dismiss kidnap-murder charges against Ross and the Brunais and Shelley cases.

Hendel ruled Monday that Connecticut cannot prosecute Ross on charges of raping Brunais or on murder charges in the Brunais and Shelley deaths — in the course of a single transaction.

Hendel said he determined, after reading briefs from public defender M. Fred DeCaprio and New London State's Attorney C. Robert Satti that the essential elements of Brunais' sexual assault and the murder of the two occurred in Rhode Island. He said this was not the case in the kidnap-murder charge.

Satti said he will appeal Hendel's ruling. Hendel said the state Supreme Court will not meet again until October, which might further delay the trial.

Court upholds conviction of ex-podiatrist

HARTFORD — The state Supreme Court has rejected the appeal of a Stamford podiatrist convicted two years ago on charges he twice sexually assaulted a sedated female patient.

Dr. Lawrence Morowitz, who has been working as a waiter since his doctor's license was revoked by the state following the conviction, was to begin serving his four-year sentence as early as today. Bruce Hudock, an assistant state's attorney, said.

In an opinion written by Chief Justice Ellen Peters, the court rejected the defense's claim that the Superior Court improperly allowed testimony concerning a prior sexual offense to be used as evidence against Morowitz.

"It was a very difficult trial, so I am pleased about the results," Hudock said, adding he would try to make arrangements with defense attorney Raymond Rubens to get Morowitz into jail " pronto."

Morowitz, 42, was found guilty of sexual assaults in two separate instances in 1983, one in his

Stamford office and another in the patient's home. Both times, Morowitz was found to have injected the victim with a sedative, then fondled and raped her. He was found innocent on two other counts related to different incidents with the same woman.

Morowitz was arrested in 1980 when a 27-year-old woman accused him of fondling her while she was under sedation for surgery. The state Superior Court granted him accelerated rehabilitation, under which defendants can erase their records if they meet terms of probation.

"Evidence of prior misconduct can't be used to prove a case," Rubens said Monday.

The defense lawyer questioned the value of having a criminal record cleared through accelerated rehabilitation if the case could be brought back into evidence in a subsequent trial.

"The statute does not and cannot insulate him from the consequences of his prior actions," Peters wrote.

New Britain seeks smokeless force
NEW BRITAIN — Police and firefighters would be sworn to a no-smoking oath under a proposal from the city's Civil Service Commission aimed at curtailing claims under the state's heart and hypertension law.

If approved, New Britain would become the state's second municipality, after Glastonbury, to adopt such a policy.

New police and fire recruits could be dismissed if they violate a sworn oath that they do not smoke and will not smoke, on or off the job, under the restriction proposed by John R. Byrne, personnel director for New Britain's Civil Service Commission.

However, a lawyer for the city's police union said Monday that the union would file a complaint with the state Board of Labor Relations if a ban on smokers became a city policy.

Hospital seeks replacement workers
WATERBURY — Waterbury Hospital has begun advertising for replacements for nurses who went on strike seven weeks ago, shutting down all in-patient services except for the psychiatric unit.

Hospital spokesman Richard Bulat said Monday that plans are to reopen the hospital gradually.

About 550 registered and licensed practical nurses began their strike June 4, two days after 545 service and maintenance workers went on strike.

No new negotiations are scheduled between the hospital and nurses, who last met on June 23. Talks are scheduled to resume Wednesday between the hospital and the service and maintenance workers.

The advertisements for replacement nurses, seeking part-time and full-time registered nurses, have appeared in several Connecticut newspapers.

Police identify body found in river
WETHERSFIELD — Wethersfield police have identified the body of a man floating in the Connecticut River as Adrian J. Conlin of East Hartford.

Police said Monday that Conlin, 19, had been reported missing on Thursday. His body was found Saturday afternoon between Wethersfield and Glastonbury by pleasure boaters. Police reported he was fully clothed and wore roller skates.

Police said an autopsy determined Conlin drowned. They do not suspect foul play.

'Tree Army' veteran plans reunion
EASTFORD — Harold Mattern remembers planting pine seedlings at Natchaug State Forest half a century ago as though it were yesterday.

The 2-foot seedlings he helped plant in 1936 have now transformed an open field into a shady pine grove. When he looks at the 70-foot-tall pines, his emotions are difficult to hold.

Mattern is one of 2 million Americans who earned a living during the Depression working for the all-male Civilian Conservation Corps, a federally financed works project nicknamed "Roosevelt's Tree Army."

Now, a member of the Connecticut Department of Environmental Protection is organizing a reunion for the men who worked in the state's 20 CCC camps from 1933 to 1942.

Budget man sees record deficits

By Cliff Hoos The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's budget director, voicing concern over worsening projections of government red ink, says the fiscal 1987 spending plan Congress approved last month fails to meet a mandated $144 billion deficit target.

That means money bills passed by Congress may be vetoed even if they are within the limits of the budget blueprint for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, Budget Director James C. Miller III said Monday.

"The deficit situation, frankly, at this point, based on our latest information and calculations, looks worse, not better," Miller told an invited group of reporters.

In 1985, the government ran up a record deficit of $211.9 billion. The administration had been predicting that the deficit for fiscal 1986 would be $202.8 billion.

Adm. Richard Truly (left), head of the shuttle program, and NASA administrator James C. Fletcher hold a news conference in Washington Monday after releasing a report to President Reagan.

February nor the spending plan Congress approved in late June would meet the $144 billion deficit target for fiscal 1987 set by the Gramm-Rudman budget law.

Both spending plans projected deficits slightly below the target. "I'm $10 billion or more pessimistic," Miller said of the ability of either plan to meet the target.

Miller said neither the budget report on the economic situation early next month.

Nonetheless, Miller reiterated that the president opposes new taxes to cope with the problem, "so we've got to look at total spending as a way to get the deficit down."

Miller said neither the budget report nor the spending plan Congress approved in late June would meet the $144 billion deficit target for fiscal 1987 set by the Gramm-Rudman budget law.

Supporters of the Gramm-Rudman law have been discussing how to quickly repair the portion of the statute calling for the automatic, across-the-board spending cuts, but Miller also raised concerns about that.

The law originally designated the General Accounting Office, an arm of Congress, as the agency helping decide the size of the automatic cuts.

The justices said since the comptroller general, who heads the GAO, can be removed only by Congress, that officer would be in the unconstitutional position of dictating to the president.

Miller's comments added to the pressure on Congress in this election year to make good on the deficit-reduction law it enacted last year.

The Supreme Court last week struck down the provision of that law for automatic cuts if Congress and the White House fail to meet annual, declining deficit targets.

South Africans return to jobs, school

By Andrew Torchia The Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Scattered labor unrest and school boycotts, persisted today following the first mass black protests under a month-old state of emergency, but the large majority of students and workers were reported back at their classes and jobs.

The Labor Monitoring Group, an independent act-up body said significant labor unrest was reported today in the Port Elizabeth area. General Motors spokesman Mike Kileen said GM's plant in the Cape Province city was closed for the second day.

Kileen said some 2,000 blacks reported for work, but later asked to go home, apparently because they were worried about conditions in their residential townships, where student strikes were continuing.

Other Port Elizabeth employers said workers were trickling back to work as bus service gradually resumed.

Peter Mundell of the Department of Education and Training, the government agency for black education, said attendance among the country's 1.7 million black students appeared "almost identical" to the estimated 80 percent who went back to school when classes resumed Monday.

The overwhelming majority of pupils, particularly at the primary level, are back in the classrooms," Mundell said.

On Monday, in the first concerted mass actions since the emergency was proclaimed June 12, tens of thousands of black students boycotted school, and black trade unions proclaimed a "day of action" to protest the detention of more than 200 labor leaders among the estimated 3,500 people held without charge.

The main effects of the Monday protests, however, appeared to be in areas noted for anti-apartheid activity, and a participation election where was reported spotty.

Up to 70 percent of workers stayed off the job at Port Elizabeth, and in some cases, workers who went back to school when classes resumed Monday.

The vial mining industry reported few problems, however, and only scattered strikes were reported in most parts of the country.

In calling for the day of action, including sit-down strikes and other on-the-job protests, the 500-member Congress of South African Trade Unions said detention of labor leaders were causing havoc in industrial relations.

Employer groups have made the same complaint to President P.W. Botha's government, but also appealed to the unions to stop job actions that have plagued several industries since the emergency took effect.

Militants called the school boycott to protest emergency detentions and new security measures at black schools that allow authorities to turn away suspected troublemakers, with no right of appeal, and require students to produce new identity cards on demand.

Many high schools appeared nearly deserted Monday in Soweto, Alexandra, Tembisa and Vaal areas black townships — all around Johannesburg — but reporters on the scene said attendance was near normal at primary schools.

Rev share funds to pay for Herrick field lights

By John Mitchell
Herald Reporter

BOLTON — As much as $18,000 in federal revenue sharing funds will be used to pay for the extra cost of a park-lighting project, townsmen decided Monday.

About 15 voters who turned out for a town meeting at the Community Hall approved spending the money for the completion of the first phase of lighting for ballfields at Herrick Memorial Park.

"It's been a long time coming, this project," said First Selectman Douglas Cheney. "We do want to get this thing finished."

The town meeting was called after the lowest of three bids on the park project came in at $58,659. The price, quoted by Structural Contractors of Iowa, was $6,267 more than the amount allocated for the work.

The Board of Selectmen agreed more than two weeks ago to try to use revenue-sharing money to pay the cost of the project, which involves the installation of new floodlights at two ballfields. The board could instead have appealed to the Board of Finance, but the selectmen decided against that strategy because some members of the board had not approved additional funding for the project in the past.

The selectmen had once before gone to the townspeople in hopes of using the estimated $58,000 in revenue-sharing funds for land acquisitions, but voters rejected that idea.

Before the Monday night vote, members of the Public Building Commission, holding a regular meeting, agreed to back the plan. "I want to make the point that we are in favor of the project," said Ronald A. Heim, interim chairman of the PBC.

"These days, when you put a project out (to bid) and it only comes in five percent over, that's a good sign," said Michael Missari, the former chairman, who suggested the revenue sharing idea to the selectmen.

After the funding had been approved, the PBC voted to accept Structural's bid, subject to review and approval by Alexander Bayne, the engineering consultant for the project.

Cheney said the $18,000 figure includes a $5,800 electrical hookup charge, $1,000 for engineering, and a 10 percent contingency fee.

The second phase of the project will add 26 fixtures and two new poles to the back side of the fields, Cheney said. The estimated cost could range from $22,800 to $28,400. "We have no sure when we will start the phase-two portion," Cheney said.

Plans to renovate the ballfields have been in the work for three years. The original project was abandoned after it became too expensive, although revenue sharing money was appropriated. That plan called for the building of two additional fields. New plans to enlarge the existing field were rejected last year when the cost estimate rose to nearly twice the amount the town had allocated.

"Everyone who's here is glad," said Raymond Boyd, who maintains the park. "It's been a long time coming."

Second failure reported in Andover's bus dispute

ANDOVER — A second incident in which Nichols Bus Service of East Hampton could not transport an Andover student to summer school has prompted another complaint that the firm has violated its contractual contract with the Board of Education.

Linda Meadows of Hickory Hill Drive, whose 17-year-old son, Kevin, was supposed to be picked up Monday by a Nichols driver in a special high-top van, said the company violated the contract because it had to have another firm transport the boy. Meadows said Nichols does not have the high-top van, needed by her son because he is confined to a wheelchair, and was forced to use the EastConn, a special education program in Willimantic, provide the service.

Meadows's complaint follows one made Monday by Paul Jurav-aty, one of the leaders of a group of parents who want the town to continue using its own buses to transport students. Juravaty said Nichols' failure to pick up a Center Street boy last week also was a breach of contract.

In that incident, Nichols failed to pick up the youth because the firm's van was being repaired. Since then, the company has provided service to the boy.

The town is currently operating on an emergency spending plan, under which Nichols is paid. A date for a fourth town meeting on the 1986-87 budget has not been set.

At the third town meeting, residents voted to deny spending any money for the contract bus service. The town attorney has ruled that this motion was not valid, and parents have been considering legal action.

school board Chairwoman Beatrice Kowalski could not be reached for comment today.

The school board signed the $164,000 contract with Nichols over a week ago. The money for the service is included in a budget proposal for the current fiscal year home instead of in Jacksonville, Fla., with his mother. "The big concern here is that the child grow up with his family," said Pisch, adding that many of the boy's relatives live in the area.

The child's mother, Peggy Szurgot, has also asked the court to change the current visitation arrangements, which allow Gregory to stay with his father one week in the spring and two months in the summer. Szurgot's attorney, Christine Whitehead, said Monday the boy is currently with Pisch, who is the chief of maintenance with the Manchester Housing Authority, and is scheduled to return to Florida on Aug. 25.

Szurgot has asked for the change so that the boy can go back to Florida on Aug. 20 and attend school, Whitehead said. In order to make up the five days, Gregory would be allowed to visit his father five days earlier in June, she said.

Szurgot could not be reached for comment.

for two years and once included the identification of the boy by a national child-search agency after the father reported him missing. On June 17, the state Appellate Court denied requests by Pisch that a new trial be held. Pisch was asking that Szurgot be held in contempt for removing the child from the state and that he be given custody.

In an opinion written by Justice John J. Daly, the Appellate Court found that Tolland County Superior Court Judge Arthur L. Spada had acted properly in denying requests by Pisch to give him custody after Szurgot took the child with her to Kansas without telling Pisch.

Pisch claimed this violated the first custody arrangement, set up after the couple's divorce in 1982. However, Spada found that Szurgot had "no reasonable alternative but to leave Connecticut for her safety and that of the child's."

"The evidence clearly established a pattern of Pisch's failing to comply with court orders, public name-calling, harassment of Pisch at her place of employment and threats of violence," Spada found.

In the appellate decision, Daly said Pisch failed to provide evidence that the mother was in contempt. Daly noted that although the child was moved four times by Szurgot and Pisch was denied visitation, Spada had wide discretion in determining if the child was abused, something he did not find.

Whitehead said she had expected a decision in her client's favor, and was pleased by the ruling. However, she said she was surprised to learn the court's motion has been filed by Pisch.

"I'm afraid it (the case) will never be over," she said.

Police Roundup

Pipe find spurs charges

Manchester police arrested three people on warrants Monday in connection with the discovery of pipe bombs two weeks ago.

George J. Linnart Jr., 17, of Hebron, was charged with manufacture of bombs, risk of injury, and illegal possession of explosives. Two others, Jon L. Lovett, 17, of Marlborough, and James P. Kivney, 16, of Marlborough, were charged with illegal possession of explosives and risk of injury.

The charges stem from a July 7 vandalism incident at the state police barracks in Colchester, police said. A Manchester police officer who lives in Hebron was also a victim of vandalism, and after getting the license of the jeep the suspects were seen in, he called Manchester police to warn them.

According to police, the jeep was stopped around 10 p.m. on Adams Street in Manchester, overloaded with passengers.

Police said they found a baseball bat, a wooden stick, knives and beer, which were underneath a heavy coat in the jeep. When police examined the coat further, they found a pipe bomb in the pocket. Police said they found another pipe bomb in their cruiser after the youths from the jeep had been transported to police headquarters.

Police said the suspects told them that the pipe bombs had been made for the Fourth of July.

A fourth youth was found to have a knife in his pocket in the July 7 incident. His name was not released because he is under 16 years old, police said.

Each of the three arrested was released on a $1,000 re-surety bond, and appeared in court Monday. According to a spokesman at Manchester Superior Court, the cases were continued until July 18.

A bicyclist carrying a knife was arrested Saturday at the Manchester Parkade after almost causing an accident, police said.

Glenn A. Wilson, 25, of 482 W. Middle Turnpike, was charged with breach of peace and carrying a concealed weapon, according to police.

The charges stem from a complaint from a witness in a car at about 1 a.m. that an intoxicated man nearly ran into his vehicle as he was driving through the Parkade lot. Police said that the man on the bicycle was later identified as Wilson.

According to police, the driver followed the bicyclist and got out of the car to speak with him, but the bicyclist pulled a knife on him as he got closer. Police arrived at the scene after the man had ridden away, but while they were talking the complaint from the driver, the bicyclist pedaled by, refusing to stop on the officer's orders.

Police said that when he was chased and caught, Wilson had a chain wrapped around his right hand that he refused to remove when asked by the officer. The knife, with an 8-inch blade, was found in his boot, according to police.

Wilson was held on a $100 cash bond and faces a July 16 Manchester Superior Court appearance.

ately with each firm. Although the district — which provides fire protection and sewer service to most of northern Manchester — could have chosen to divide its coverage between a number of agents, Landers recommended selecting only one firm.

The choice was narrowed to Risley and Irish after Landers recommended against Volunteer Firemen's, whose bid totaled $37,925, because it offered to only cover fire operations.

Explaining that the risk associated with the sewer department is greater because of the threat of pollution and contamination, Landers said insurance companies would only be willing to carry the sewer department if they could also cover the more secure fire department.

Risley's bid totaled $59,971 — a figure that, like Irish's bid, did not include liability. It put the cost of vehicle coverage at $35,000.

Of the items that both Risley and Irish listed, Risley's bid was $1,380 lower. But the directors agreed with Landers that it was better to go with a larger company like The Hartford than with a number of different firms.

Coventry spending reduced

By Jacqueline Bennett
Herald Correspondent

What appeared to be another evening of budget stalemate among members of the Town Council took an about-face Monday as Democratic Councilman Patrick Flaherty made a move to cooperate with his Republican counterparts.

"We have to start somewhere. Phil's made a suggestion. I think it's a good one. Let's do it," Flaherty said in response to a comment by Republican Councilman Phillip Bouchard.

Bouchard had suggested using $22,000 of the $91,000 coming to Coventry in state revenue to partly cover the cost of a police cruiser and road sander in the proposed $9.3 million budget for fiscal 1986-87, which began July 1.

The council agreed.

From then on, the going was slow. But by the end of the 2½-hour meeting at the Town Office Building, the council had cut a total of $47,776 from the spending plan, some of it from the $2 million general government budget. In tax revenue, the cuts would represent about a third of a mill, reducing the expected tax hike to 2.3 mills.

Before the cuts, the budget proposal called for a tax increase of 2.6 mills. It was rejected by voters for the second time in a referendum last week. The vote sent the spending plan back to the council.

Monday night, cuts of about $21,000 were made in the streets and roads budget. The cuts would eliminate a road foreman, funding for other personnel training, advertising and other items.

"These are picky amounts," Town Council Chairwoman Joan Lewis, a Democrat, said of the line-by-line reductions.

The police and fire budgets were left intact.

Because most of the money coming from the state to the town is earmarked for specific uses, it appeared that any further cuts would have to come from the $6 million education budget.

During the meeting, Board of Education Chairwoman Judy Halverson told council members about the board's news conference Monday morning. "We felt the public should be aware of the serious impact of any further cuts," she said.

The proposed education budget had already been cut by $100,000.

Halverson said the school board agreed that if another $120,000 cut, the schools would have to lose four to ten teachers, four or more support staff members from music, physical education, special education, challenge and enrichment programs, the primary mental health program, and athletic equipment and supplies.

"I urge the council to consider the impact of this. My concern is not to damage school programs," Halverson said.

There will be a special Town Council meeting to continue budget deliberations at Coventry High School Wednesday evening. It will immediately follow a public hearing or begin at 8:00 p.m.

A classic picture of the Old West myth has a brave band of survivors drawing their wagons into a circle to face the future. On Sunday at the Bicentennial Band Shell at Manchester Community College, a brave band defied not Indian arrows, but the falling rain. Saturday was the original date of this fund-raiser for the Manchester Cardio-Pulmonary Resuscitation Project, which aims at reducing the cost of individual CPR courses. But on Saturday it poured, Sunday, the rain date, dawned damp but the brave band trooped down anyway, carrying umbrellas and sheets of plastic.

At 10 in the morning, and again at 2 in the afternoon, the rains came. Cooks hid beneath the shelter of tarps and garbage bags, or backed their station wagons up and huddled under raised hatch doors. But it let up long enough for the judging of the chili, cooked in booths ranged around the legendary circle. Ronald Kraatz, the town's director of health, presided over the judging in this event, which was sponsored by the EMS Council, WKHT Radio, and Manchester Memorial Hospital.

"Dr. Joel's Remedy Chili" won first place and the coveted gold-embroidered chili cook's apron. Dr. Joel was asked what his chili is a remedy for. "Anything but ails you," he replied. He is Dr. Joel Reich, head of the hospital's emergency department. "All we promise is the best chili you'll ever eat," was the motto of his cooking team. Andy Bojko and Sue Magaviva.

The group of hospital administrators introduced Sandy "Dead-Eye" Muller, who said that she created her own recipe after living in Texas for five years. Stirring the pot with her were George Roy, Dave Staselski, Peter Kuzmickas and Paul Stillman.

The crowd had a different idea. They voted for Bill Jackson's "Famous Missouri Chili," which won the judge's top award last year.

Taking The Cure Group to heal music's malaise

By Mary Campbell
The Associated Press

The Cure, who sold out a 10,000-seat hall in Los Angeles and 6,000-seat Radio City Music Hall in 1985, started this year's North American tour on July 6, Robert Smith, founder of the English group, says. "The idea of having a huge popular success, particularly in America, is hard for me. I don't see anyone else having a huge amount of success that I admire and like. I admire and like us."

The goal of global success was never considered when we started. I don't see why we should now think in those terms. I'm still basically entertaining myself with the Cure. We've sort of proven so far I like what we do, it's going to be liked by a certain number of people.

"It tends to increase with every record we release — on a manageable scale."

The Cure's first single, in 1978, was "Killing an Arab," the story taken from Camus' "The Outsider." It's on "Standing on a Beach," the group's 10th LP, its second on Elektra, which was No. 72 and climbing the best-selling chart of July 5. "Standing on a Beach" is a compilation of the Cure's singles.

The Cure's previous LP, "The Head on the Door," released last August, was still on the best-selling chart June 22, at No. 145.

"Standing on a Beach" (with a gun in his hand) is the first line of the song "Killing an Arab." The video that went with it, "Staring at the Sea," is the next line of the song.

Smith, who says his greatest pleasure is reading, read Camus' book in French. He studied English and French until he was 18 and says, "I was supposed to go on to university, decided I'd had enough of getting up in the morning and decided to try my hand at something else."

"I don't think I'd have enjoyed university anyway. It seems to have restricted people I'm friendly with at school. There's a kind of intellectual snobbery which is rarely a healthy thing to have. Only one person I know who went to university came out the other side actually knowing something."

Smith was unemployed for eight months, while writing songs, rehearsing the band and making and circulating a demo tape. "We lived 35 miles south of London. Several were interested in us but Chris Parry was the only person who came down to see us play. We've been with him ever since."

"All the creative decisions come from within the group. Chris carries out the instructions. Usually a group is obliged to do whatever the manager tells them. Chris finds it entertaining, dealing with idiots."

"The idea of enjoyment pervades everything we do. It's not easily discerned by people on the outside. Everything we do deals with childhood abandon. Nothing is ever worked out. That kind of professionalism is anathema to everything we stand for."

The name, the Cure, means they present an alternative to a malaise, Smith says. "The main motivating reason why the Cure was started and why I wanted to sing in the group and write songs is, I thought most everything I was confronted with on the radio and TV was drab. I still do. If I thought we had become redundant, I would write the whole thing off."

"What about fame and fortune? Smith says. "Fortune gives you a certain freedom. Fame has no attraction for me; it's the worst kind of imprisonment — like these four days of interviews."

"I've refused interviews. But I've seen if I continue to say no, particularly in America, Elektra Records may think I'm being obstructive. And if people aren't aware of the Cure's existence, they can hardly be expected to choose between us and something else."

"Interviews are a small price to pay for the rest of what I do. I lead a particularly charmed life. I'm answerable only to myself. I hate it when I start moaning."

R. Burton fans have TV treat

By Mary Campbell
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — American TV viewers this fall will get a chance to see the late Richard Burton in his last and longest major screen performance, the nine-hour movie "Wagner" about the 19th century German opera composer.

The movie is so long some movie theaters offer meal breaks. But only four one-hour segments will be shown on the Great Performances series on PBS. That series only has 13 hours slotted.

Director Tony Palmer says Burton, who died in 1984, told him during the filming. "If I've been in training for this part for 30 years."

Palmer also says Richard Burton and Richard Wagner were a lot alike.

"They were both outrageously charming and drank more and had more women than most men," Palmer says. "I think that's one reason Burton was attracted to 'Wagner.'"

"One of the reasons I think he gave such a good performance is, he was being given an opportunity to display what he was capable of," the director adds. "He was on the screen all the time with great actors and actresses — Vanessa Redgrave, Laurence Olivier, Ralph Richardson, John Gielgud. They were giving terrific performances."

The movie was shot the first seven months of 1982, on location at places like Bayreuth, King Ludwig's castles and Wagner's theater

Richard Burton stars as the 19th century opera composer in "Wagner," which will be shown on the Great Performances series on PBS this fall. It is the late actor's last role.

Palmer also has directed films about composers Handel, Puccini, Stravinsky, Britten and Walton.

"My final composer film, I hope, will be about Shostakovich, with Martin Sheen, for PBS. I can't go on spending the rest of my life with them."

"Wagner" has been shown in 52 countries on television and in movie theaters. Theaters in five American cities have shown it from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m., with two meal breaks.

Palmer says he intended for the movie to be five hours, but it ended up as nine, at a cost of $8 million.

The "Great Performances" series, supported by a grant from Exxon, didn't want to give "Wagner" nine of its 13 hours next season so it selected four hours to show.

"Somebody tried to make a two-hour film of it. It's so bad the producer has never allowed me to see it," Palmer says. "Then I took the nine hours and squashed it to five. I made a mess of it. It was like making a cathedral for dwarfs."

Creative solutions offered in the fight against junk mail

DEAR ABBY: For the benefit of "Too Much Mail," and others who want to know how to put a stop to being the recipient of unolicited mail, punch five or six holes (use a large pin) in the card to be returned. The computer will reject it.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

For years, my husband made contributions to a political party. After his death, I wrote "Deceased" on the card and returned it. Solicitations continued to come. A friend had the same experience and passed the above information on to me. It worked beautifully. The rejected card was obviously read, and my name removed from the files. Sign me.

VOICE OF EXPERIENCE IN VA.

DEAR ABBY: You told "Too Much Mail" that once her name is "in the computer" she's automatically solicited, in which case her only defense would be to ignore the solicitation. Not true! Here's how I handle junk mail: I just take those postpaid envelopes and return every thing including the envelope!

It's lots of fun, and it forces the sender to pay first-class extra postage to get their own junk returned!

A BUHRER
PORT CLINTON, OHIO

DEAR ABBY: I recently read the letter about the person receiving too much junk mail. Here is my solution to the problem at the sender's expense: Take the entire junk mail contents, including the outside envelope, tear it to shreds and mail back to the sender in their postpaid envelope. Leave your name and address label in one piece so they'll know who it's from. They don't like the mess, or paying the postage. It worked for me!

NANCY J. KELLEY
HOT SPRINGS, ARK.

DEAR ABBY: Please advise "Too Much Mail" to write "Returned - Return to Sender" on the envelope or package. The postal service will return it to "sender" and collect the postage due. She will be removed from the list. I've had my name removed from lists this way.

If there is a postage-guaranteed envelope, I seal the empty envelope, write my name on the back, and mail it.

If there is a postage-guaranteed envelope, I seal the empty envelope, write my name on the back, and mail it.

Astrodome new twist for All-Star Game

By Ben Wolker
The Associated Press

HOUSTON — The names are new, but the story is the same at the 1986 All-Star Game: American League sluggers against National League pitchers.

And tonight's meeting features a different twist — the Astrodome — the worst hitter's park in the big leagues.

"I had heard it was a tough place for home runs," Oakland's Jose Canseco, a rookie whose 23 homers lead the major leagues, said after batting practice Monday. "And I found out it was true."

Glenn Davis is the only NL player with 20 overall, the AL players have outperformed their counterparts 266-192.

Since then, the fences have been moved in. The distances down the lines are now 10 feet closer at 30 feet, and the rest of the perimeter has been pulled in about eight feet, to 400 in straightaway center field.

Even so, fewer home runs are hit in the Astrodome than any other major-league park, even with increased homer totals throughout the major this season.

"I don't know what it's been like before," said Hough of the Texas Rangers, a first-time All-Star.

Gooden threw two scoreless innings in his previous All-Star outing, while Valenzuela has not allowed a run in 4 2-3 innings through four games.

Fastballing Dwight Gooden of the New York Mets, working with six days rest, will start for the NL.

"I think he's the best pitcher in baseball," NL Manager Vito Marciano said.

Most players, however, react much like American League President Bobby Brown.

"I don't really have a theory," said Murphy, the two-time NL Most Valuable Player from Atlanta.

Herzog, the manager of the St. Louis Cardinals and the 1986 NL All-Star, has proposed the theory that the New York Yankees and their raucous ways are at the root of the AL's downside in the late 1980s and early '90s.

"I don't have a theory. I wish I did," Brown said. "And if he did? ... I do something about it."

HOUSTON — There are 25 first-year All-Stars in tonight's showdown between the National and American Leagues, and except for a professional wrestler, Dave Righetti would not have been a member of this impressive freshman class.

Joe felt that moving to the bullpen that year, I deserved it," Righetti said. "We were talking about the first base line before a game and he told me he was going to pick me. I couldn't believe it."

Gooden until tomorrow," Joyner said. "I want to have 24 hours to enjoy myself before I worry about batting against him."

Boston's Roger Clemens, leading the majors with 15 victories and topping the AL in ERA and strikeouts, will oppose Gooden. He will be pitching after going nine innings on Saturday.

Clemens, Higuera and Hough are three of the 15 first-time All-Stars for the AL. The NL has 10 players making their first appearance.

"I'm not going to go over any scouting reports or anything. I'm just going to throw."

It is a sellout, with more than 45,000 fans expected.

"I know how good the National League team is and what they can do — pitched against a lot of them when I was in that league," Hough said.

League and I've been wrong every year but one," AL Manager Dick Howser said. "So it's hard for me to predict what is going to happen. This is a good lineup."

Hiding behind the camera is Keith Hernandez of the Mets as he snaps some pictures at Monday's workout at the Astrodome. Hernandez is one of five Mets on the National League roster.

East Catholic graduates attracted notice at GHO

Two graduates of East Catholic High School and one of the Professional Golfers' Association rising young tour regulars attracted attention for Manchester at the 1986 Canon Sammy Davis Jr. Greater Hartford Open.

Earl Yost Sports Editor Emeritus

Dennis Turning and Mike Cooney are out of East Catholic.

Turning, who's he, one may want to ask, in connection with the GHO. Cooney and Paul Azinger, whose parents are Manchester natives, were both among the playing pros.

Windsor when he decided to give up caddying two years ago.

Turning is now 30 and a veteran of nearly 10 years as a caddy. He has seen the country as well as Europe caddying for Tom Kite and Andy Bean. He's also worked with John Cook on the tour before signing on with O'Grady last June before becoming a professional.

During his time away from the PGA tour, Turning came out of "retirement" last summer and worked with Cook at the GHO. Cook finished in 10th place and won $14,000, which meant a $1,400 bonus for Turning.

When O'Grady, the most controversial player on the tour in recent years, collected his winner's check of $126,000, no one was happier in the crowd than Turning.

O'Grady's course record 62 round was just not good enough to win without the playoff.

International stars shut out Nationals

Eight runs in the second inning and the one-hit pitching of Shane Wirtz powered the Manchester International League All-Stars to a 13-0 whipping of the Manchester National Stars in District Eight All-Star play Monday night at Leber Field.

The Americans scored twice in the second inning after falling behind 1-0. A two-run bases-loaded double by Dave Gilbert gave the locals the lead before Jon Windsor scored three times in the bottom of the third on a walk, double by Brian Murray and a homer by Gary Burnham.

Costly miss

When Azinger missed a three-foot putt on the 18th hole in round four of the GHO it — the check for $11,200 and instead of sole possession of third place he had to settle for a three-way tie for the spot with Scott Hoch and Mark O'Meara.

Dick Cobb. The latter, a three-sport standout in high school and college (Virginia State) is a member of the Manchester Sports Hall of Fame.

Concededly, he is extended by the family of Joe McCarthy. The latter co-chaired the annual Knights of Columbus Irish Sports Night for 25 years with Fran Mahony and for the last five years handled the job himself.

Ralph DeNicolo's 71 tied him for second best pro score in the Connecticut Section PGA golf play at the Wethersfield Country Club. He was teamed with Don Anderson, Paul Purcell and Bob Jones for a 66 gross score and a tie for third-place money. In PGA Pro-Am play at Manchester Country Club, DeNicolo and partners Tim Cooney, Paul Sartor and Steve Harmon tied for second place with a 68 as did the team of pro Tex Kane and amateurs Steve Matava, Willie Oleksinski and Doc McKee and pro Steve Garren and partners Stan Hlinski, Ward Holmes and Frank Kiernan.

Veteran Tom Prior gained the tie for third place in last Wednesday's Central Connecticut Association Championship staged at Manchester Country Club. Prior had a pair of 38 totals for a four-over-par 76.

Senior Division champ Willie Hlinski was third in Seniors A and George Becey topped the Class E list.

Harold Loughrey and Bernice Hagenow are part of Bill Brown's Red Garter Dixieland Band, which will play at the Manchester Bicentennial Band Shell Saturday at 7 p.m. The two are Manchester residents. The 11-member band will play a medley of Dixieland tunes.

Strike up the banjo

It was just that Starkey woman that did it," state Rep. Elsie B. Swenson, R-Manchester, said of Gertrude Starkey, whose complaint in May to State's Attorney John Bailey touched off the primary investigation.

"It was not any good, old-time Republicans" that initiated the probe, Swenson said. "I really don't understand why she did it. She's a stickler."

But Curtis Smith, who stepped down as GOP town chairman this spring, disagreed. While the arrests may have been "blown a little out of proportion," Smith said, it is important that election laws be followed.

"Democracy is a fragile thing," he said. "We can't afford to be sloppy about it."

The four were arrested in connection with a petition drive by supporters of gubernatorial candidate Gerald Labriola to force a delegate primary in May. Manchester's delegate slate to this month's GOP nominating convention, which was apportioned in March according to the results of a straw vote of town committee members, favors candidate Richard Borzuto.

Labriola supporters - led by Diana and Ferguson - circulated petitions to force the primary, and the alleged irregularities occurred while those signatures were being collected.

The charges made by police included claims that petition signatures were forged, that the forms were circulated by people other than the official circulators and that the signatures were falsely notarized.

Some Republicans charged that if similar improprieties had been uncovered in a Democratic primary effort, the case would not be pursued as far.

"I don't know why we have to put these good people through all this," Zinsser said.

However, Republican Registrar of Voters Mary Willhite said those that circulated the petitions should have known that what they are alleged to have done was illegal. She said the election law is misrepresentation by some circulators during the petition drive, which sought to begin merger proceedings, but was dismissed without being investigated, some Republicans said.

Blechman said he was satisfied that the complaint was fully investigated. He said the matter was looked into by Manchester police and the state's attorney's office before being dismissed by a Superior Court Judge.

"I certainly hope that there's equal treatment," said state Sen. Carl Zinsser, R-Manchester. While saying he did not have enough information to determine if the two parties are treated fairly, he said the Republican arrests have been pursued as far.

One instance cited by the Republicans occurred in 1979, when Eighth Utilities District activist Robert Blechman and another district supporter complained about a petition drive initiated by the Democratic-dominated, pro-consolidation group Committee For Our Manchester.

The complaint was filed about misrepresentation by some circulators during the petition drive, which sought to begin merger proceedings, but was dismissed without being investigated, some Republicans said.

U.S., Soviets agree to talks on test ban talks would be held in the framework of regular U.S.-Soviet arms control negotiations scheduled to resume Sept. 18 in Geneva.

The Soviet Union unilaterally halted nuclear weapons tests last August, but a moratorium, which has been extended several times - is due to expire Aug. 6. The United States has conducted several nuclear tests during the period.

Shervaridze, who is winding up an official visit to Britain, also retorted the Kremlin position that it is ready for a second summit with the United States, but only if such a meeting produces concrete results in arms control.

He refused to predict when a summit might be held.

LONDON - Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze said today the United States and Soviet Union have agreed to resume talks on a nuclear test ban that were broken off six years ago.

He told a news conference Moscow had "fundamentally an agreement from the United States to resume negotiations, to resume talks in Geneva on banning nuclear tests."

A U.S. official in London confirmed "we have agreed to resume talks without pre-conditions on a nuclear test ban treaty."

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the
